As Rama's 'baana varsha' necessitated the huge mace fell down and dashed down into fragmented smithereens, he stated: ' Raakshaadhama! Is this all your bravado with which you have now displayed! You imagined that this 'gadaa' of yours should destroy your enemy but that itself is bringing you your death. You longed that killing me should assuage of the remnant followers of yours and their cryings but that was not to be! nīcasya kṣudraśīlasya mithyāvṛttasya rakṣasaḥ, prāṇān apahariṣyāmi garutmān amṛtaṁ yathā/ adya te bhinnakaṇṭhasya phenabudbudabhūṣitam, vidāritasya madbāṇair mahī pāsyati śoṇitam/ You neecha-kshudra swabhava-midhyaachaari rakshasa or the lowly- evil minded- ignoramous devil! Now I shall puncture your body, slit your throat, and let the earth lap up your hot blood. May your body parts get sullied with mud, your shoulders be separated from your body and in such sordid state, let earth embrace you for ever! Let the 'rakshasa kula kalanka' or the blemishful generation of rakshasaas be put to permanent sleep so that dandakaaranya should be a refugee point of the remnant rakshasaas.

Rakshasa! Now that my arrows are destroying your residential facility of the remnant rakshasaas, the Muni ganaas should now onward be free to move about fearlessly; on the other hand the rakshasaas who moved about all over the dandakaaranya with full and unfettered freedom should now on move about sheepishly! Oh, cruel nishaachara! Your mind, thoughts and heart had been replete with crooked and mean bubbles of effervescence . Brahmanaas and Munis had so far been performing offerings of ‘havishaanna’ to Agni stealthily out of fear of attacks by rakshasaas.’ As Rama heckled Khara rakshasa most critically thus: ‘ Aho! Truly Rama, you are arrogant now and are covering fear out of bravado! You have lost the spirit of discretion and are blabbering what to say and what not to! Persons who lose their mental balance speak what to say and what not to with prudence and maturity’ Then Khara Rakshasa looked around and found in the vicinity a dried up maha vriksha, pulled it out by the might of his teeth and threw it most desperately and forcefully and shouted: ‘Look! You should die!’ Rama with tremendous presence of mind dodged but had perspiration all over his body but in return out of rage shot thousand arrows in a straight row and the Maha Rakshasa Khara fell down as his blood gushed out in floods-like manner, even as jumped out of the streams. Even so Khara was not killed yet and hence Rama took up a fire ball like arrow which made a thunderous sound as was shot straight at Khara’s chest as his body fell on earth! No sooner that he fell down than the Deva -Chaanura ganas were rejoiced, sounded drums, rained flowers from the high skies and exclaimed: Aho bata mahatkarma Ramasya viditaatmanah, aho veeryamahodaardhyam vishnoriva hi drisyayete/ Aah! Rama who is aware of what has to be done, has done to perfection being the most astonishing act like Maha Vishnu himself with confidence and valor undreamt of! Subsequently Agastya and other distinguished Maha Munis got collected and praised Rama: ‘Dasharatha nandana! Now henceforth we are free and fearless to carry on our ‘nitya anushtaanaas’ on peace and concentration. Later on Shri Rama was venerated by Lakshmana while Vaideharaja nandine Devi Sita embraced Rama with joyful tears in her eyes. .

Akampana carried the heavy and extremely sad news of the mighty Khara Rakshasa having been killed by Rama and some how he himself escaped death himself. Dashamukha Ravana got furious at the sad end of Maha Veera Khara and shouted: Who is this Rama who dared to kill Khara! Even Indra, Yama, Kubera and even Vishnu could not withstand my power and glory! I am the Kaala to Kaala and am capable of jolting mrityu on its face and even Agni could be subdued by me if I were to be enraged. I could change the direction of Vayu and control Surya and turn Agni into ashes if annoyed! As Ravana was enraged like this, Akampana was stilled and afraid of stating any further. Then Ravana cooked down somewhat and showed ‘abhaya hasta’ and say further. Then Akampana then most politely submitted: ‘Rakshasa Raja! King Dasharatha’s elder son Rama had been staying in Panchavati. He is of the build of a lion, with broad shoulders, tall and of semi blueish colour looking smart and courageous; he had just a few days ago killed fourteen thousand rakshasa veeraas and even the Maha Parakrami Khara. As he repeated this statement once again, Ravana hissed like a huge serpent and breathed heavily with subdued rage and exclaimed: tell me had Rama come along with Indra and Devas! The reply was: ‘Lankeshwara! This Rama was acclaimed as the world’s superior most dhanur vidya praveena and is used to utilise all types of celestial archery and a battle expert who is a lone fighter. He has a younger brother named Lakshmana who too had been an equal and brave warrior too. Together they are a huge menace at this Janathaana the dandakranya and devastate the rakshasaas mercilessly like agni and vaayu. The Rakshasaas are no longer have a free movement and Rama alone hounds and kills rakshasaas in all directions: Yena yena cha gacchhanti raakshasaa bhayakarshitaah, tena tena sma pashyanti Ramamevaa - gratah sthitam, ithyam vinaashitam tena janasthaanam tadvagha! Mahaasura! Even as the rakshasaas seek to move about, at that very spot, these humans are ready to snipe! And this manner the janasthaana has become a free target to the rakshasaas!’ Then Ravanaasura asserted: ‘I will visit that place straight away.’ Then Akampana politely replied: Rakshasa Raja! may I now explain to you the ‘Purushardhaas’ to you a little further: Once Rama gets angry, he becomes uncontrollable and would keep on showering arrows as though he could reverse the flows of a rushing river and could place the stardom rid of the sky. He could lift up earth from deep seas! By his singular effort, he might devastate lokas and rebuild them too! Dashagreeva! Just as a contant sinner could not adminster the swarga loka, the totality of the world of raakshasa jagat could not defeat the singular Rama in the art of archery. na tam vadhyamaham manye sarvairdevaasurairapi, ayam tasya vadhopaayastanmaikamanaah shrunu/ bharyaa tasyotthamaa loke sitaa naama sumathyamaa, shyaama sama vibhaktaangee stree ratnam ratna bhushitaa/ In my careful and considered view Ravana prabho, even a combination of Devatas and Rakshasaas together too might not bring Rama to control, but I have a neat plan which you must become aware of! Shri Ramas’s wife who is a symbol of beauty and grace which is well adorned by famed jewellery is an extraordinary jewel herself! Deva kanyaas, Gandharva kanyas or even Naga kanyas would not be able to compete her personality and charm, let alone manushya strees! Tasyaapahara bharyaaam tvam tam pramathya mahaa vane, Seetayaa rahito Ramo na chaiva hi bhavishyati/ In this huge dandakaaranya, we should trap Rama somehow and cleverly steal away Sita so that his life should be made miserable to such an extent of ending up his very life! As Akampana advised Ravana thus, the latter readily appreciated this masterly plan. Then he agreed to reach Rama’s panchavati next morning itself. Then he rode by his chariot driven by donkeys and left the place as he then looked like the shine of full moon driving through blue louds. Then he straight away reached the abode of Mareecha who welcomed with bakshya bhojyas. He then addressed Mareecha that Rama exterminated Khara Dushanaas heading a massive army and that he should like to avenge that deed; he stated further that he would like to seek Mareecha’s assistance by stealthily take away Rama’s wife named Devi Sita. But Mareecha was none too ready for this extremely hazardous plan as he did have the exeperience and placing his life at stake and reacted sharply at its face value and asked Ravana as to who gave such a perilous suggestion as Rama was invincible and the plan ought to be suicidal indeed!

[Reference: Essence of Vaalmiki Baala Khanda is recalled about Maricha Subahu rakshasa brothers- Sarga Thirty: Brahmarshi Vishvamitra s approached by Rama Lakshmanas to explain them vividly as to how and when the Rakshasaas were in the habit of destroying the yagñi karyas of the tapasvees in the ashrama. Then the ashramavaasi rishis near Vishvamitra replied that Maharshi Vishvamitra had already assumed ‘mouna vrata’ for six days, and thus Rama Lakshmanas would need to be extremely vigilant for six nights long and safeguard from the attacks of the ‘nishaacharaas’. Accordingly Rama Lakshmanas being alert ‘dhanurdharaas’ had been vigilant standing just by the side of the Maharshi. As ‘agni jvalaas’ came up initiated by ‘Upaadhyaya’ or of the role of Brahma- ‘Purohita’ of the role of Upadrashtaa, the flames went up too high as a forewarning indicators of the enrtty of the rakshasaas. Then Vishvamitra along with the Ritvijas initiated the ‘aahananeeyaagni’ Mantravac ca yathānyāyam yajño ’sau sampravartate, ākāśe ca mahān śabdaḥ prādūr āsīd bhayānakah/ āvārya gaganam megho yathā prāvṛṣi nirgataḥ, tathā māyām vikurvāṇau rākṣasāv abhyadhāvātām/ mārīcaś ca subāhuś ca tayoṛ anucarās tathā, āgamyā bhīmasanikāśā rudhiraughān avāśṛjan/ As the resonance of the mantras recited in a pitch increased, there came up the high sounds on the sky with reverberations and dark clouds reflected the massive figures of rakshasaas named Maareecha and Subaahu and initiated pourings of blood from the high skies, even as groups of other rakshasaas started yelling and joined the task of pouring blood. Rama then addressed Lakshmana and stated that the rakshasaas had now arrived and both the Kumaras pitched up their arrows reciting the relevant mantras of ‘Maanavaastra’. The arrow from Shri Rama was shot at and pierced Maricha’s chest and the latter was farflung by hundred yojanas into the depths of the Sea. Smilingly, Rama told Lakshmana that this Mantra of ‘Manavasatra’ had only helped to faint and farflung Maricha but now let ‘agneyastra’ be released so that the other mighty Subaahu be killed for good! So saying as Subahu was killed, the rest of the rakshasas fled away for good never ever to return. This was how Raghunandana Shri Rama got rid of all the rakshasa elements of evil energies wantonly spoiling the dharmic duties of yagjna karyas by Munis for a very long time. The grateful indwellers of the Ashram praised Rama Lakshmanas under the supreme leadership of Brahmarshi Vishvamitra himself.]

Thus Mareecha had already had the taste of Rama banaa the hard hitting manner!! So Maricha exclaimed to Ravana: Lankeshwara! Who was indeed who advised you to surreptitiously take away Devi Sita from Rama! Was he an adviser in the garb of a friend truly! Ravana! Ragavendra Rama is like and elephant like warrior very mature and steady and not an upstart and an ill conceived advice is like an ignorand who his one’s own head like a hard srick for no reason or provocation! Shri Rama is a massive lion among human beings, and make no mistake as the risk involved is is frightening and inevitable! Loleshwara! As the risk involved is crystal clear I should earnestly make an appeal to you is disastrous and suicidal! Ravana kept cool at Mareecha’s advice and returned!

When he fought with Lord Vishnu himself, he carried the signage of the 'sudarshana chakra prahara' or the remnant patch of the wheel sign attack! As Devas attacked in the past with their divya astras, he looked to have created havoc in the oceans with his resistant defensive and offensive strikes. Ravana was so mighty to severe and throw away mountain tops to high skies! The very roots of the eternal tree of dharma were thrown asunder and the purity of 'para stree' was never spared! He had the history of wrecking and smashing up yagna karyas; let and the background of attacking Bhogavati Pura in Patala and humiliating Vasuki Naaga Raja and forcibly brought his dear and outstandingly charming wife home! kailāsam parvatam gatvā vijitya naravāhanam, vimānam puṣpakam tasya kāmagam vai jahāra yaḥ/ Maha Ravana'sura attacked Kubera and subdued him and freely spoiled the latter's proverbial Chaitra Radha garden at his sweet will! Having forcibly entered the Ravana Rakshasa Maha Sabha, Shurpanakha started yelling: Rakshasa Raja! You are totally irresponsible being ignorant of current affairs of what had been going in the contemporary Society! That King who depends on 'guptacharaas' or only the Guptacharis or the Intelligence alone without first hand knowledge and hardly becomes unaware by his vision and foresight losses control of his kingship. As the King distances from the praja, then he is akin to an elephant drawn deep and drowned into heaps of mud. Twam tu baala swabhaavascha buddhiheenascha rakshasa, jnaatavyam tatra jaaneeshe katham Raja bhabishyasi/ Rakshasa! Your attitude is like of a boy and immature! In this kind of a mindset, how indeed you could me like an emperor! Raksha shreshtha! You are not realising that the doom days are not far and hardships are round the corner, unless you take corrective steps at once. nānutiṣṭhati kāryāṇi

Having totally influenced Ravanaasura's mind set and fired up passion for Devi Sita, the badly hurt Surpanakha on a revenge mode of her facial disfiguring left Ravana who initiated an action plan of 'Sitaaharana' straightaway and asked his charioteer to get his chariot ready in a secret manner. The chariot run by donkeys as looking like a 'pishacha' was seated by Ravana. As the chariot proceeded towards the ocean shores, Ravana was with fully glittering ten heads and golden kireetaas studded with nine gems and with twenty hands sporting golden 'kavachas' or shields looking like a huge mountain with ten 'shikharaas'. Paraakrami Ravana then reached the seashores and was surrounded with thousands of huge trees; some where were coconut trees, or kadali phala- saala- taala-tamaala and so on. He witnessed on the way a number of Maharshis- serpents-vultures- gandharvas- and kinnaras. Siddha-chaarana-vaanaprasthaas; groups of Munis- Baalakhilya mahatmas- and those munis who merely absorb

Surya Kiranas too were witnessed all along the oceanshores. Besides the playful divyaaas like apsarasaaas were in hilarious groups too. Deva-Danava samuhas too were collected in distinct classes. As the ever jumping up waves were rising and subsiding in constant rhythm, groups of cranes, swans, krouchas were regaling themselves against the background of a blue horizon glittering like vaidurya manis! By this akaasha yatra, Ravana the younger of Kubera sighted a number of vimanas of gadharvas and apsarasaaas singing away and dancing too. As Ravana proceeded further on the high sky, there was a ‘maha garuda’ who helped to sight a ‘maha vriksha’ named Subhadravata. taṁ tu gatvā param̐ pāram̐ samudrasya nadīpateḥ, dadarśāśramam̐ ekānte punye ramye vanāntare/ tatra kṣṇājīnadharam̐ jaṭāvalkaladhāriṇam, dadarśa niyatāhāram̐ mārīcam̐ nāma rākṣasam̐/ sa rāvaṇaḥ samāgamya vidhivat tena rakṣasā, tataḥ paścād idam̐ vākyam̐ abravīd vākyakovidāḥ/ On the other side of the Maha Samudra, the Maha Garuda sighted a lonely ashram. Inside that ashram was a Rakshasa wearing ‘mriga charmas’ consuming extremely limited intake of ‘ahaara’. Ravana finally succeeded landed at the ashram and met Mareecha. The latter had formally invited Ravanaasura as the latter proceeded with his conversation.

Maareecha! I am presently in a dire situation and need your assistance badly. In the janasthaana in dandakaaranya, my brother Khara and his senapati Dushana had been staying in comfort and so did my sister Shrupanakha. Mahabaahu the nara maamsa bhaksha Trishira and thousands like him too lived in quietude often troubling dharmachaari munis. Besides them were as many as fourteen thousand shura-veera rakshasaas too were enjoying teasing and killing the dharmachaari munis freely having a happy rejoicings. Then arrived Rama and the several rakshasaas got disturbed and started encounters against him. No doubt Khara and other rakshasaas too were experts in dhanur vidya and they put up ready resistance. Some fourteen thousand and odd maha rakshasaas attacked Rama but the latter who was a super expert in dhanur vidya and killed them all. Then Dushana the senapati of Khara and subsequently Trishira were decimated too by Rama owing to his specialisation of dhanur vidya. Finally Khara had a one to one battle and killed Khara too and thus turned dandakaranya free from Rakshas. This Rama was banished to dandakaranya as his father King Dashatatha was unhappy and angry with him and despatched along with his wife too. aśīlaḥ karkaśas tīkṣṇo mūrkhō lubdhō 'jitendriyaḥ, tyaktadharmas tv adharmātmā bhūtānām ahite rataḥ/ yena vairaṁ vināraṇye sattvam āśritya kevalam, karṇanāsāpahāreṇa bhaginī me virūpitā/ tasya bhāryāṁ janasthānāt sītāṁ surasutopamām, ānayaīṣyāmi vikramya sahāyas tatra me bhava/ This Rama is cruel, used to arrows only, arrogant, idiotic, narrowminded, dharma tyaagi, and resorts to violence without any provocation. He instructed his brother to deface my sister dear Shurpanakha and cut off her nose and both the ears without any justification. Now I want to abduct his wife and torment him mentally for ever. And, Mareecha! I seek your assistance in this act of our vengeance against that cruel Rama to bring him to senses! Mahabali Mareecha! I am indeed capable of even facing Devas in any kind of attacks as you are nodoubt aware, but this is a rather sensitive issue and hence my request to you personally! When both of them chase the Maya Mriga, then I would enter the ashram and abduct Sita as Rahu would make Chandra disappear! tataḥ paścāt sukhaṁ rāme bhāryāharaṇakarśite, visrabdhaṁ prahariṣyāmi kṛtārthenāntarātmanā/ tasya rāmakathāṁ śrutvā mārīcasya mahātmanaḥ, śuṣkaṁ samabhavad vaktraṁ paritrasto babhūva ca/ There after, Rama would get submeged in irreparable damage to Rama's psyche and lose his balance of mind, resulting in physical strength and internal fortitude and he could be comfortably killed by just one stroke of my sword! As this plan as detailed by Ravana , Mareecha's face and lips got dried up and was shaken to his roots with fear as the plan on its very face seemed impractical and suicidal for himself. sa rāvaṇam trastaviṣaṇṇacetā; mahāvane rāmaparākrama -jñāḥ, kṛtāñjalis tattvam uvāca vākyam; hitam ca tasmai hitam ātmanaś ca/ In this kind of Maha Vana to run around under the nose of Rama Lakshmanas and tempt Devi Sita is literally inviting death and already he was about to faint and nearly facing death. After all, the inborn intelligence and bravery of Rama was already tasted by Mareecha and it was fortuitous that the Rakshasa was nearly dead as Rama killed his brother Subahu and he himself was thrown farflung by Rama's vayavyaasta!

You are ignorant of the depth and mental strength of Shri Rama; in terms of bravery he excels Indra and Varuna. Do you not realise that the safety of the entirety of Rakshasaas would be your objective and aspiration; but would you not realise that you would take such a step to destroy the race of rakshasaas by annoying Rama! Ravanaśura! Once in my erstwhile life, I got puffed up with self pride, arrogance, adventurism and carefree attitude, moving around the earth and high skies as then I was of the physical strength of thousands of elephants. My body was of the hue of blue clouds, wearing bright and big golden earrings, massive headgear, consuming only the fresh meat of Rishis as the unique terror of Dandakaranya. Maharshi Vishvamitra was mortally afraid of me and approached King Dasharatha and informed that a Maha Rakshasa named Maareecha and do kindly allow the youthful Shri Rama to accompany me to provide safety to my Yajna kaarya. Then King Dasharatha replied that Rama was hardly of the age of fifteen years and if approved, that he himself would come with his vast and never defeated army force backed up. ity evaṁ uktvā sa munis tam ādāya nṛpātmajam, jagāma paramaprīto viśvāmitraḥ svam āśramam/ tam tadā daṇḍakāraṇye yajñam uddiśya dīkṣitam, babhūvāvasthito rāmaś citraṁ visphārayan dhanuḥ/ Vishvamitra then replied: That particular Rakshasa is destined to die only in the hands of Sri Rama only. Maharshi stated further: Maha Raja Dasharatha! Indeed you do possess the valour even to help Devatas against countless Rakshasaas and annihilate them. You also the back up of huge sena no doubt. But even as a mere lad, Rama is the singular hero who could devastate Mareecha and am keen and bent on him accompanying him. So affirming, Rama as accompanied by Lakshmana took them away to his ashram. tam tadā daṇḍakāraṇye yajñam uddiśya dīkṣitam, babhūvāvasthito rāmaś citraṁ visphārayan dhanuḥ/ In that manner, Ravana! Rama Lakshmanas accompanied Vishvamitra and entrusted them yajna deeksha even as Rama resounded his dhanush and stood firm awaiting the rakshasaas. Mareecha continued his narration further: As I entered the yajna shaala with careless arrogance even as my golden earlobes were flickering with flashes of brightness, I saw Rama with toy like dhanush baanas and I was amused to witness a couple of lads practising the dhanur vidya! No sooner that I found them, that they lifted their dhanush baanaas and I was some how experienced some kind of jitters! Then I reconciled and emboldened myself that these were mere lads of at the threshold of youthfulness. tena muktas tato bāṇaḥ śitāḥ śatrunibarhaṇaḥ, tenāhaṁ tāditaḥ kṣiptaḥ samudre śatayojane/ rāmasya śaravegena nirasto bhrāntacetanaḥ, pātito 'haṁ tadā tena gambhīre sāgarāmbhasi, prāpya saṁjñāṁ cirāt tāta laṅkāṁ prati gataḥ purīm/ Even then as Rama released one arrow, I was thrown away some hundred yojanaas away and forcefully swept off my feet right into the deep ocean all though was not dead but saved of life. Then I realised that the force of wind was such as I had thrown across and was benumbed out of shock and fatigue. Why to you like to hasten the 'vidhvamsa' and devastation of the famed Lankapuri the happy haven of Rakshasaas! In case you long to enjoy the feminine charm and bonds of affection of close friends and relatives for ever, leave and ignore the negative psyche and uphold the pride and pratishtha- developmet and progress, contentment and fulfillment of living of the kingdom but never ever sow the seeds of destruction and devastation! Nivāryamāṇaḥ suhṛdā mayā bhṛśaṁ; prasahya sītāṁ yadi dharṣayiṣyasi, gamiṣyasi kṣīṇabalaḥ sabāndhavo; yamakṣayaṁ rāmaśarāṭṭajīvitaḥ/ King Lankeshwara! Maareecha continued his death like encounter with Shri Rama and further described its aftermath too. Having assumed the form of a deer, he entered Dandakaaranya as a meat eater and moved about freely and comfortably. He feigned in that form and surreptitiously used to kill and eat the flesh of Munis and drink up their fresh blood. Mareecha asserted that in that manner he happened to move about in the neighbourhood of Ramaashrarama and saw Sri Rama- Devi Sita- and Lakshmana in the forms of tapasvis. He went near Lakshmana and subsequently Rama Sitas too but could not identify them properly as they were dressed up like Munis. [Vishleshanaas as per Essence of Valmiki Bala Ramayana vide Sargas Twenty Nine and Seventy respectively on Bali Chakravarti and Nahusha respectively:

Bali Chakravarti:

Having been trained in all these disciplines, Vamana Deva had one fine morning left for the Yagna Shaala of Bali Chakravarti as the latter was executing a Sacred Yagna while carrying his mat, danda /stick, chhatra / umbrella and kamandulu / water vessel. Danava Guru Shukracharya was aware that Vishnu Deva in the form of Vamana Murti was arriving at the Yagna and briefed Bali Chakravarti to be extremely careful as Vishnu was a sauve and highly talented person to put words in the mouths of the opponents. The Guru reminded Chakravarti that the latter denied the age-old practice of rights to yagna's shares to Devataas and that Vamana Murti might as well ask for the revival of the practice but those shares were now enjoying by Danava Chiefs. Bali replied to Danava Guru that in case Vishnu in the incarnation of Vamana Murti came and requested for any thing then how could a King say 'no' to it! Bali told the Danava Guru: Brahmanaachaarya! How could I deny any body requesting me for a favour! And if that Supreme Deva asked me for a charity, then what else would be the alternative! While Parameswara received the fruits of Vrataas, Upavaasaas, and so on from one and all, and if that Parameswara himself asked a boon from me, could there be a greater fortune to me! When even an ordinary person approached me for a favour, then too that could not be denied by a King; then when Narayana himself asked for it, could such an opportunity presented itself, this chance could never indeed be missed. Even if there are difficulties in executing a charity, the value of charity would get multiplied and 'Veera purushaas' would never deter from performing the deed) Having said the above, Bali asked Shukraachaarya:

YatagjnaatwaaMunisreshtha!Daanavighna karenamey, Naiva Bhavyam Jagannaatheey Govidey samupastitheey! (By understanding the above, Munisreshtha! Please do not create 'Daana Vighnaas' or hurdles in the execution of the Charity!). As Vamana Deva arrived at the Yagna shaala, Bali welcomed him, offered 'Arghya', 'Aasana', Puja and offered him limitless gold, jewellery, elephants, horses, cows, women, clothes, bunches of villages or townships or whatever would be his wish! Vamana Deva replied smilingly: Mamagnisharanaarthaaya dehi Rajan Padatrayam, Suvarnagraamaratnaadi tadarthibhyah pradeeyataam/ (Raja! Please provide to me three feet of land to enable me to set up an Agni- Shaala). Bali said that after all three feet would be nothing as he could ask for a lakh of feet which could be given away, but Vamana Deva replied that he was indeed satisfied with that much of Bhumi and if the King were to offer more he might as well provide to the other needy! Bali Chakravarti readily agreed not understanding the implication and as the deed of Daana was being executed and Vamana Deva extended his hand to the King and expanded his Vamana Rupa gradually immediately:Instantly, Vamana Murti displayed his Virat Swarupa: Chandra and Surya were his two Eyes,Shy was his head, Prithvi his feet, Pishachaas were his foot-fingers, Gruhyakaas were his hand fingers, Vishwa Deva Ganaas were in his jaanus /knees,Sadhyas were his janghaas, Yakshaas were his nails, Apsarsaas were his palm lines, Nakshatras were his Eye sight, Surya kiranans were his hairs, Stars were his body hairs, Maharshiganaas were in the hair roots, Vidishas were his hands, Dishas were his ears, Ashwini Kumars were his faculty of hearing, Vayu was his nose, Chandra Deva was his joking faculty, Dharma Deva was his thinking capacity, Satya was his voice and Saraswati was his tongue, Deva Mata Aditi was his neck, Vidya was his valiyaas or long poles; Pushas were his eye brows, Swarga dwar was his anus, Vaishvanara his face, Prajapati his vrushanaas, Param Brahma was his heart, Kashyapa Muni was his Pumstwa,Vasu Devata was his back, Marutganaas were his Sandhis, Rudra was his Vakshasthala, Mahaarnavaa was his Dhairya, Gangharvas were in his stomach; Lakshmi, Medha, Dhruti, Kaanti and all Vidyaas were in his 'Kati Pradesha'; the luster and radiance in the total Universe as also the Tapo teja or the power of meditation was the reflection of the magnificence of Natayana; Vedas and Scriptures and the huge Yagnaas and the Sacred Deeds of the Virtuous like Maharshis and Brahmanas were all inside in his 'kukshi' or belly. On viewing the Paramatma's 'Virat Swarupa', the so called 'Mahaasuraas' referred to earlier in ignorance by Chakravarti Bali before Prahlada's curse to him got burnt off like flies before a gigantic out break of Fire! Having thus occupied the Universe in totality including the sub-terrain Sapta Paatalaas, Vamana Deva stated that since Bali took the water in his hand and donated the THREE FEET of Land, and blessed him to be the King of the Sapta Paatalaas and granted him long life till the end of Manvantara of the on-going Vaisawata Manu. He also blessed Bali that all the 'Homa Phalas' at the time of Shraddhas to be performed even by Brahmanas, besides incomplete and defective Vratas, Agni Kaaryaas without ghee, and Kusha grass roots as also the daanas without detachment would belong to Bali and his followers.

Nahusha who was also in the lineage of Pururava had the distinction of performing ninety nine Ashwamedha Yagnas and was nearly qualified to become Indra who should have executed hundred Yagnas. Meanwhile there was a temporary vacancy of Indratwa since Indra fled away since he killed Vritrasura with the help of the Vajrayudha made out of Sage Dadhichis's backbone; Vritrasura who was a Brahmana by birth and Brahma Hatya Sin chased Indra. Brahma thus appointed Nahusha as temporary Indra. Nahusha who was originally a King of Great Virtue became arrogant and power-mongering as he became Indra and claimed all the privileges belonging to Indra like Vajrayudha, Iravata the Elephant and even Indra's wife Sachi Devi. Nahusha insisted that Sachi Devi be his keep! Sachi Devi was non-plussed at this proposal. As advised by Deva Guru Brihaspati, she asked Nahusha to come to her residence but he should do so just as Indra was in the habit of arriving at her residence by a Palki (Palanquin) which actually was carried by Maharshis. Nahusha was excited to reach her Palace quickly and having got into the palanquin commanded Agastya Muni to reach him to Sachi Devi's Place at once; he said 'Sarpa Sarpa' meaning 'Quick, Quick' and in the process gave a kick to the Muni to go fast. Agastya purposively misunderstood the word and converted the arrogant Nahusha as an Ajagara (Python) and dropped the latter to the depths of Bhuloka into thick forests. As a repentant Nahusha begged of clemency, the Maharshi granted a reprieve that the 'Shaapa Vimochana' would be possible only when Pandavas reached the forest for twelve long years before their 'Ajnaata Vasa' or Unknown Destiny having lost a bet in the 'Maya Juda' or wilful game of chess. As Draupadi desired to secure a Sugandhika Flower Bheema got into a pond and the Ajagara caught him and agreed to release him only if he gave correct replies to the Serpent's queries. Yudhishtara had to arrive and release Bhima and Nahusha alike. Meanwhile Brihaspati and Agastya found that Indra was hiding in a lotus stem in Mana Sarovara Lake and brought him back and prayed to Brahma who exonerated Nahusha from the Brahma Hatya Sin on the ground that Vitra was no doubt a Brahmana but committed sins of killing several virtuous and innocents]

As Ravanaasura did not heed the caution note of Mareecha like a patient would not even intake the prescribed medicine, the latter shouted on Mareecha: Useless Mareecha born of a low class! I have suffered enough of your useless lecture. After all this Rama is a human and I do not have to stoop down to fight with him and my decision to abduct his woman is final and unalterable. He is such a stupid to follow the decision of woman named Kaikeyi - his step mother, could discard his kingship, own mother, friends and associates is wandering in dandakaranya, kills Khara and his co- rakshasaas; I am now bent on abducting his wife and bring him to senses from his arrogance and superior feelings and thus make his life miserable. Mareecha! My decision is so intense that even Indraadi Devas and even co-rakshasaas would not be altered! Whether my decision is correct or improper is not to be discussed now but as to how to execute and get facilitated is what is expected of you but not your futile lecture! A Minister is normally expected to politely describe the ways and means to plan out and execute the Royal Decree but certainly not to question the very decision of the King. While addressing a King with authority, the adviser would need to be reasonable, submissive, and in a manner of giving conviction with folded hands with utmost respectfulness, but not be arrogant, careless and argumentative. A raja craves for and is hungry of praises and even the conversation of a Subject needs to be initiated with his or her pronouncement of submission. Nishaachara! The ever bright King is a celestial representation of Agni-Indra-Soma-Yama and Varuna and thus signifies five ‘gumas’ or characteristics-Pratapa-Parakrama-Soumya bhava - danda- and prasannata or Courage-Bravery-Cool minded maturity- hardness of enforcement-and pleasantness. Therefore a King is worthy of worship. Mareecha! You are forgetting the feature of your dutifulness and are obsessed with your own subjective interpretation of dharma and nyaaya disregard of desha-kaala-paristhis! Mareecha! I am your ‘abyaagata atitthi’ and you are only obsessed with your own ideas leaving no scope for mental adjustment and objective understanding. Mayotttamapi chataavat twaam pratyamitavikramam, amsmistu sa bhavaan kritye sayaayyam kartumarhasi/Amita paraakrami Maareecha! I have merely suggested that in this plan of mine, you should assist me. As Ravana reacted against the pleadings and advises of Mareecha in the visit of the King seeking Mareecha's assistance, the desperate Mareecha displayed his rebellion. Maareecha shouted at Ravana: Maha Rakshasa Ravana! Which hopeless Rakshasa has advised you this disastrous plan which ought to lead to the doom of yourself, your sons, kingdom and ministers. That worst enemy of yours under the garb of wellwisher is very obviously unhappy and jealous of your supremacy seeks to the verge of death and collapse of your being! Rakshasa raaja! That worst enemy of yours like a wolf in the garb of a Lion aims at a hit of your death! The duty of a well meaning Mantri to a Raja is required to stop the travel of a chariot up the crumbling hill of disaster! It is that Minister and Adviser whose responsibility is to stop and reverse the way of a King in the name of the Purusharthaas of Dharma-Artha- Kama- Yashas! Ravana! Like a royal indiscretion, a small drop of fire leads to devastation to the praja in full swing. Ever victorious Rakshasa Raja! Dharma is the seed of 'Yashas' or virtue begets fame and popularity; under all possible circumstances a popular king needs to be saved from the traps of public disgust and no-confidence. Indeed therefore the public confidence is to be proactive but never to be anti public. A noble Adviser is like an efficient saarathi or charioteer who on the battle field proves to be a true friend-philosopher and guide. Surely a dull and inactive saarathi if ignorant of the ups and downs of the battle ground might land the charioteer to the sure downfall and similarly in the experience of life. Ravana! In an atmosphere of antipathy, it should be the public opinion that safeguards a critical crisis but an owl or a vily fox takes you to disaster and tragedy. Even a casual indiscretion leads to a frightening consequence as is my personal experience but in your case the risk of a battle is far-reaching as the entire army might be wiped off! By following your directive of assuming a fake deer form and tempting Rama to chase me, is most assuredly my chase of 'mrityu' and secure salvation of death by his hands, especially a 'veera swarga'. Rakshasa Raja! Darshanaadeva Ramasya hatam maamvadhaaraya, aatmaanam cha hatam viddhi hatvaa Sitaam sabandhavam/ It is most certain that by attracting my 'mayaa harina swarupa' Rama should kill me after a little chase, but you ought to realise that your comfortable existence should get rattled along with your entire vamsha and sena too as there would be Lankapuri nor its followers and population! nivāryamāṇas tu mayā hitaiṣiṇā; na mṛṣyase vākyam idaṁ niśācara, paretakalpā hi gatāyuṣo narā; hitaṁ na grhṇanti suhr̥dbhir īritam/ Nishaachara Lankeshwara! I am your sincere devotee and hence seeking to forestall the prospective disaster, but those who are in the spell of 'mrityu' and their life span is closing nearby would not be able to resist death; indeed; the truism is assertive: Vinaasha kaale vipareeta buddhi!

Having cursed Ravana's to his heart's contentment, Mareecha then got readied to leave for dandakaranya and felt that once Shri Rama sights him in the maya mriga swarupa then his life's closure should be almost certain. None indeed could ever survive the 'yama danda', as soon as he would approach Devi Sditha in the Maya Mriga Swarupa. Bhagavan! What could I do any way as I have a death trap both sides! As Mareecha was thus reconciled to certain death either way, then Ravana hugged him and affirmed that thus onward Mareecha had come to his real form as a rakshasa but not as an ever doubting and timid human. Then Ravana initiated his travel to dandakaranya by his fierce donkey driven golden chariot studded with the glitter of mani-maanikyas by the speed of winds as per the sky line . Addressing Mareecha, Ravana stressed: Pralobhaitvaa vaideheem atheshtham gantumarhasi, taam shunye prasabham sitaamaanaishyaami maithileem/ Maareecha! Your siglemost duty now should be tempt Sita with your maayaa mriga swarupa and as soon as dust appears on the sky, I should be forcibly abduct Sita! On their way to dandakaaranya by their Pishaca like donkey chariot, they witnessed thick forests, gardens, mountains, number less rivers, raashtras, cities and villages before sighting dandakaaranya. Then Ravana took his hands in Maraacha's hands with false affection and confirmed that the Ramaashrama was visible from the skies and that they had indeed arrived. sa rāvaṇavacaḥ śrutvā mārīco rākṣasas tadā, mṛgo bhūtvāśramadvāri rāmasya vicacāra ha/ maṇipravarasṛṅgāgrah sitāsitamukhākṛtiḥ, rakta padmopalāmukha indranīlotpalaśravāḥ/ kim cid abhyunnata grīva indranīlanibhodarah, madhūkanibhapārśvas ca kañjakiñjalkasam̐nibhaḥ/ As soon as Ravana's voice was heard, instantly Mareecha turned into the form of Maya Mriga and appeared at the doors of the Rama ashrama. It's upper horns glittered Indraneela Mani, face like red lotus colour, forehead white and black spots, ear lobes like blue lotuses, a fairly heightened neck, the stomach inclined like indraneela mani, side view is of white colour and the overall body is of kesara varna. Rakshasa Mareecha had thus become like a twinkling Star attraction of that segment of dandakaaranya. pralobhanārtham vaidehyā nānādhātuvicitritam, vicaran gacchate samyak śādvalāni samantataḥ/ Merely to tempt Devi Sita, the multi coloured 'harini' appeared now here and now there running about and eating leaves and flowers by slow movement and rapid runnings suddenly as being playful and enticing. vikṛdāmś ca punar bhūmau punar eva niṣīdati, āśramadvāram āgamyā mṛgayūthāni gacchati/ The 'vichitra mriga' jumps suddenly, plays everywhere and moves in all directions and suddenly distinguishes itself in a crowd of fellow deer!

Even as Lakshmana doubted about the Maya Mriga, Sita was bent to secure it alive or dead and Rama had to yield to her intense wish proceeded with the chase, while entrusting responsibility to Lakshmana. chase.

Devi Sita was literally mesmerised on staring at the Maya Mriga and asked Rama to go get it along with Lakshmana. Lakshmana had at once expressed his doubt whether Mareecha Rakshasa had arrived in that fake form. He said that the great sinner was used to assume such forms and kill kings and princes ruthlessly. Rama! He is an expert in assuming such attractive forms and create illusions. Raghunandana! In the entire creation this type of form would be unimaginable. Surely Mareecha seeks to entice Sita. Then Sita became obsessed with the sight and repeated her request to fetch it and make me happy to play and enjoy with it. Indeed this animal is unusually strange and unbelievable with strange colour combinations. Its swarupa is unique, its physical features are unimaginable and the callous manner in which it moves about is strange and free. yadi grahaṇam abhyeti jīvaṁ eva mṛgas tava, āścaryabhūtaṁ bhavati vismayam janayiṣyati/ samāptavanavāsānām rājyasthānām ca naḥ punaḥ, antaḥpuravibhūṣārthaṁ mṛga eṣa bhaviṣyati/ If only this deer is in my possession, this should be worthy of popular exhibit of my pleasure and pride. As and when this 'aranya vana vaasa' gets concluded and we return back to ayodhya, this should be a befitting gift to Bharata, my mothers in law and even the ayodhya public. Even whenever we spend our freetime together seated on dry grass leisurely, we could play with this animal and cockle our hearts.' As Rama too was enthused and impressed with the strange and singularly animal, Rama stated: paśya lakṣmaṇa vaidehyāḥ sprhām mṛgagatām imām, rūpaśreṣṭhatayā hy eṣa mṛgo 'dya na bhaviṣyati/ na vane nandanoddeṣe na caitrarathasamśraye, kutaḥ prthivyām saumitre yo 'sya kaś cit samo mṛgaḥ/ Lakshmana! Look at this readily enticing creature and no wonder, Sita is entirely hecked up with passion by this most fascinating animal which is truly amazing. Sumitra nandana! This type of an animal is perhaps unseen even in Deva Raja Indra's Nandanavana nor in Kubera's Chaitrarathavana but has descended to Bhooika! Look at this radiance like 'agni shikhaas' or flashes of flames. Its face is like the brightness of Indra Neela Mani, its lower part of tummy is like a conchshell and white like pearl Tell me as to whose mind would not get allured to it! Lakshmana the lasting royal hobby is to play with deers by shooting arrows in style and fun and eventually kill them for its skins as a playful hobby. Lakshmana! yadi vāyam tathā yan mām bhaved vadasi lakṣmaṇa, māyaiśā rākṣasasyeti kartavyo 'sya vadho mayā/ etena hi nṛśamsena mārīcenākṛtātmanā, vane vicaratā pūrvam himsitā munipuṁgavāḥ/ As you have suspected that Rakshasa Maareecha had indeed appeared here in this unusual form, I ought to kill him for good, as he used to torment and kill several princes and kings, besides innumerable Munis in deep tapasya ruthlessly. purastād iha vātāpiḥ paribhūya tapasvinaḥ, udarastho dvijān hanti svagarbho 'svatarīm iva/ sa kadā cic cirāl loka āsasāda mahāmunim, agastyam tejasā yuktam bhakṣyas tasya babhūva ha/ samutthāne ca tad rūpam kartukāmaṁ samikṣya tam, utmayitvā tu bhagavān vātāpim idam abravīt/ tvayāviganya vātāpe paribhūtāś ca tejasā, jīvaloke dvijaśreṣṭhās tasmād asi jarām gataḥ/ It is in this dandakaaranya, if you recall, there was a cruel Rakshasa named Vaataapi Refer Stanza 11 above about Maharshi Agastya He was in the habit of tapasvi mahatmas by killing them in Pitru shraddhas. Once Vaataapi approached Maharshi Agastya in shraaddha kaala. At the conclusion of the shraaddha, Vataapi was in the habit of displaying his rakshasa swarupa and sought to call up his rakshasa associate Ilvala who knew the Mrita Sanjeevani Mantra; they would assume the forms of Brahmanas and seek the passers by to tempt them to a feast of goat-meat, and after consuming the meal ask Vatapi to come out and Vatapi would come out piercing through the tummy of the stranger and the brothers would enjoy his meat. But Agastya Muni was too clever to bless the good food saying ‘Vatapi! Jeerno bhava’ and Vatapi was fully digested even before Ilvala was able to recite the Mrita Sanjeevani Mantra! Thus Lakshmana! Just as Vataapi was misdirected by Maharshi and taught a gruesome lesson to Vataapi Rakshasa, I should myself run and chase the Maya Mriga and return, preferably by not killing it. You should safeguard the ashram and most importantly Devi Sita too. Happily, we are also under the over all purview of the ever vigilant Grudhra raja Jataayu to safeguard us too if any negative development is foreseen as a precaution.

Shri Rama then armed with his powerful dhanush and the arrows on hand moved swiftly like of the speed of wind chasing the Golden Deer Maareecha. He located the Maya Mriga on the run, as the latter sought to hide himself but flashed up with a speedy run frequently looking behind to gauge mutual distance. The animal had the mysterious ability to jump, mislead, run fast, disappear and reappear while on the run. In its suicidal runs of hide and seek, the Rakshasa was running amok in frenzy and took Rama away quite a distance from the ashram into a crowd of fellow deer. The animal while noticing Rama’s face frustrated and exasperated, Rama grew angry, pulled out an arrow which readily displayed the radiance of Surya and released a ‘shatru samhaara baana’, while drawing up the dhanush up and straight an released the intended target. Shareeram mriga rupaya vinirbhadya sharottamaḥ, Mareechasyiva hridaam vibhedaa-shani sannibhah/ Maha tejasvi Rama then tore off Mareecha’s huge body to pieces and his heart turned to pieces.

With that attack, rakshasa Maareecha’s fell down and he made a reverberating sound of pain on the earth. Mriyamaanastu Maareecho jahou taam kritrimaam tanum, smritvaa tad vachanam raksho dadadhyou kena tu Lakshmanam, iha prasthaapayet Sitaa taam shunye Ravano haret/ As Maaricha was dying down, his artificial body of an attractive deer fell off and was reminded of Ravana’s instruction tried to memorise so that Sita should ask Lakshmana to run from the ashram and Ravana could approach the ashram. Then he prepared himself to imitate the tone of Shri Rama and shouted: hā sīte lakṣmaṇety evam ākruśya tu mahāsvaram, mamāra rākṣasaḥ so 'yaṁ śrutvā sītā katham bhavet/ lakṣmaṇas ca mahābāhuḥ kām avasthām gamiṣyati, iti saṁcintya dharmātmā rāmo hṛṣṭatanūruhaḥ/ Shri Rama was then worried as Maareecha shouted as 'haa Site, haa Lakshmana!' then how should Sita react and what should be the consequence on Lakshmana and his further reaction and action! Wondering like this, he sought to hurry back to his ashram.

As the ‘aarta naada’ or the desperate shouts of Shri Rama got resonated across, Devi Sita was shocked and asked Lakshmana to hurry up for rescue and cried out that she was literally lifeless. ‘Lakshmana!’ , she broke out, ‘your brother is in desperation, and you ought to run for rescue. Lakshmana was not disturbed yet. She repeated again: Lakshmana! Your brother is in extreme anxiety and he must have been hurt badly; you seem to be callous and are behaving like an enemy but not a sincere brother; I guess that you wish to display your callousness and authority! Is this proper for you to keep unperturbed at this stage! You seem to wish for his downfall and your true form appears to be on open display! This must be the reason that you are standing still here with neither your help nor even a movement.’ So saying sternly and agitated, Devi Sita got frantic and agitated. Then Lakshmana replied with coolness: Videha nandini: Do very kindly trust me with confidence that your glorious husband is most certainly invincible even by Nagas, Asuras, Gandharvas, Deva Danava Raakshasaas. Devi! There is none greater than Devatas, Human beings, Gandharvas, Pakshis, Rakshasaas, pischachas, Kinnaras, much less animals and ghora danavas and on any battle field, Rama is on par with Indra Deva; you should never say any word in surpassing Shri Rama. Moreover, I should never leave you alone. No king worth his name could even subdue Rama by his valour on battle field in three lokas; please get never agitated and have confidence and trust on Rama. As Lakshmana had bid farewell to Devi Sita, she had burst out saying that without Shri Rama she should jump in to the forceful flows of River Godavari or nip her throat with force or jump down from mountain tops or consume poison but never ever suffer 'para purusha sprarsha' or the mere touch of another male excepting Shri Rama and greeted Lakshmana, while Lakshmana too touched her feet as both had gazed at each other for some time and left for Rama.

As Sita spoke to Lakshmana hurtingly and was forced to leave on hearing the false desperations imitating Rama, Ravana'sura appeared on the garb of a Sanyasi with clean robes, and an umbrella in hands. Just as at dusk time when neither Surya nor Chandra were not prominent, Sita came out to respond the entry at the door of the ashram as Devi Rohini peeped out at the sight of Mangala or Shani planets when Chandra disappeared. As Sita came out, it looked that the movement of wind got stopped and she like the ever Godavari river got momentarily stilled and the gushing flow of waves was stilled for a while. rāmasya tv antaram prepsur daśagrīvas tadantare, upataste ca vaidehīm bhikṣurūpeṇa rāvaṇaḥ/ abhavyo bhavyarūpeṇa bhartāram anuśocatīm, abhyavartata vaidehīm citrām iva śanaīścaraḥ/ Being saturated by vengence against Rama, Dasamukha arrived at the door of Sita's door step just as Shanaischara saw Devi Chitra and was stilled at Sita's visage. It was then Sita was terribly agitated at the welfare of Rama. Ravana continued to stare at Sita as though the sight Purnachandra in a state of shock. As though Ravana was pained in this heart by the arrows of Manmatha, he admired and felt that Sita was strikingly beautiful with perfect set of sparkling teeth and like a full moon facecut. Triloka sundari Sita was like a lotus seated Lakshmi Devi and Ravana could not resist but describe : Devi! who are you! In this frighteningly horrid 'dandakaranya', who are you, what for you are here lonely! Then Devi Sita replied: Brahmanottama! I shall explain to you, but do please let me offer to you the normal duty by way of 'atithi satkaara' first with flowers and fruits and 'paadya paaneedyas' foremost.

With the single evil motive of forcibly taking away Devi Sita, Ravana on the guise of a Sanyasi asked about her antecedents and giving due consideration to a sanyasi, Sita having initially hesitated initially with an apprehension of being cursed with a 'shaapa' replied that her name was Sita, her father was King Janaka, and the dear wife of Shri Rama the valiant. After twelve years of lovable and conjugal life in King Dashratha's house, she lived happily and by the thirteenth year there was a proposal to make Rama the Yuvaraja and initiate celebrations, but there was a twist of destiny and the youngest beloved wife of the King named Devi Kaikeyi influenced and pressurised the King and demanded that my husband Rama should leave for vana vasa for fourteen years and Rama's younger brother Bhatata be made the Yuvaraja; Kaikeyi threatened to kill herself otherwise and therefore the father in law had to yield, especially since in the past at the time of Deva Danava battle the King was accompanied by Kaikeyi saved the father in law's life and was bestowed two boons; these were availed of by Kaikeyi on the eve of the Rama's coronation joys of the public! As a gesture of Pitru vaakya paripaanaana, Shri Rama had atonce agreed to move to forest with valkala vastra dharana as the dress code. dadyān na pratigṛhṇīyāt satyabrūyān na cānṛtam, etad brāhmaṇa rāmasya vrataṁ dhruvam anuttamam/ tasya bhrātā tu vaimātro lakṣmaṇo nāma vīryavān, rāmasya puruṣavyāghraḥ sahāyaḥ samare 'rihā/ sa bhrātā lakṣmaṇo nāma dharmacārī dṛḍhavrataḥ, anvagacchad dhanuṣpāṇiḥ pravrajantaṁ mayā saha/ Shri Rama is always in the habit of giving away but never receives; his is satya vaadi ever speaks the truth and undeterred by the principles of truthfulness always. Along with him is accompanied by his own brother Lakshmana and both the brothers are truthful and valiant too. I am too accompanying them. You may rest for a while and they ought to be returning soon as they have gone to collect fruits and roots and as such you may like to rest for a while.

Brahmanottama! Then the Maayavi Ravana in the form of Brahmanottama asserted in very pungent tone suddenly: Sitey! I am that Rakshasa Raja Ravana who is dreaded by Devas - Asuras- and of course human beings as well. Ananya Sundari! I am totally impressed by your outstanding beauty and physical grace draped in an alluring dress and I should never ever would approach another female excepting you and you alone. I have had collected in my haraem numberless females from everywhere but you are par excellence! You should now me my Prime Queen of my celebrity and rejoice the sweet fruits and juices of life. I shall provide you joy rides in glorius gardens of the universe and by your slave! Devi Sita raised her voice and talked harsh as never before: mahāgirim ivākampyaṁ mahendrasaḍṣaṁ patim, mahodadhim ivākṣobhyaṁ ahaṁ rāmam anuvratā/ mahābāhuṁ mahoraskam siṁhavikrāntagāminam, nṛsiṁham siṁhasaṁkāśam ahaṁ rāmam anuvratā/ Ravana! You better be aware that you could hold never touch even a fringe of me as the globe of Surya as that would burn and become suicidal for you. Misfortunate Rakshasa! How dare you to attempt and abduct me and tempt me as you are certainly inviting death with mercilessness! You wish to dare and touch me then a running 'mriga' gets tempted seeing a bright golden tree, would dash right in to the mouth of a hungry lion! You would like to pull out the teeth of a huge serpent, or uproot and lift up Mandara mountain or firm up a boulder around your neck and swim and cross the maha samudra! You seek to take Surya and Chandra into your hands! Yo Raamasya priyaam bhaaryaam pradharṣayitum icchasi/ He how ever wish to do 'balaatkara' to Shri Rama's darling wife could ever be born on the face of the earth! If ever you try to do so out of ego, then I should look at flames and jump with clothes tied up thereinto! Are you not aware of a domesticated and a wild, ferocious deep forest lion which is the wide gap of you and Dasharathanandana Shri Rama! The comparison is obvious between molten gold and brass, water saturated in chandana and earthen mud and Shri Rama and the perilous yourself! There is an obvious difference between Garuda Deva and a low flying kite! So asserting the enraged Sita with a body quiver, shouted at Ravana.

As Devi Sita shouted on Ravanaasura as described, Ravana was provoked to the core and screamed in response! ‘Sundari! I am the first cousin of Kubera, the ten headed Ravana. All the Beings in creation are dreaded by me with trembling shudder including Devata, Gandharva, Pishacha, Pakshi, and Nagas and that was how challenged Kubera too and defeated him on a one-to-one battle and thus he ran away under the refuge of Kailasa mountain. Kubera was flying by the air borne vimana but now it is my possession now and use it freely and take to bhu-bhramana for fun as a pastime! Mithileshwari! Whenever I am incensed with anger, Indra and the follower Devatas seek to hide themselves with my shivering face. As and when I take to ‘bhu bhramana’, even the tree leaves stop their movement, let alone the trees and plants and the waves of rivers get stilled with my fear too! On the other side of the ocean here, is Lanka which is comparable with Amaravati the capital of Devatas. Lankapuri the magnificent capital city has four popular ‘dwaaraas’ and is a planned and constructed city Ravana Sena. Its halls are gigantic and the doors and windows are made of vaidurya manis. The well planned streets of Lankapuri are flooded with elephants, camels, horses, and chariots, while the populace is ever bristling with activities, sky raised noises and earthly sounds of musical instruments of ever fine music. The halls of Lankapuri are well planned and executed to perfection with public amenities. tatra tvam vasatī sīte rājaputri mayā saha, na sramiṣyasi nārīṇām mānuṣīṇām manasvini/ bhuñjānā mānuṣān bhogān divyāms ca varavarṇini, na smariṣyasi rāmasya mānuṣasya gatāyuṣaḥ/ Rajakumari Sitey, If only you live with me floating in luxuries, then in no time you should forget Rama the mere human being whose life span is closing up soon any way! King Dasharatha the clever manipulator had placed his second son Bharata on the throne and sent away the eldest son Rama to the forest like, and the non existent, dim-witted, thick headed Rama is practising tapasya under the spell of ‘Pitru vaakya paripaanaana’! Devi! I am the King of Rakshasaas and as ravished by your beauty and grace, have arrived volantly at your door step; protect me from the flowery arrows of Manmadha; and do please come into my embrace at once.’ That was how, Ravanaasura begged of Devi Sita as the latter shouted in red anger as follows: ‘Arre Ravana! Bhagavan Kubera is worthy of veneration even by Devas, let alone the human beings. You name him and shamelessly call him as his brother and resort to downright detestable and heinous activities! Ravana! It is most certain that a characterless, selfish, cruel, and wicked Rakshasa King like you is ripe for a disaster in the very near future. In the annals of history, it might have been possible that Indra kidnapped Shachi Devi and wedded but a Ravana could never happen in the reverse again as Ravana is drawing his doom in a matter of weeks and days!'

[Vishleshana on Shachi Devi and Indra:

Shachi Devi was the daughter of the Asura King Pouloma who was no doubt religious but of negative abhichara mantras under the tutelage of Shukraacharya. Prajapati Visvakarma, the famed Architect of Devas, had a son named Trisira or the three headed Brahmana boy who used to practise ascetism with one head, drink wine with another and look around in all directions with the third. Being an ardent student of Vedas, he was always engaged in severe Tapasya, especially 'Panchagni Sadhana' hanging upside down a tree branch exposed to Summer Sun, winter cold and heavy rainy season without food conquering worldly desires. Being highly suspicious of the intentions of Trisira who might pose problem his own throne, Indra despatched Apsarasas to disturb Trisira's rigorous meditation but to no avail. Indra thus killed him even when he was in meditation, even as he knew that killing a pious Brahmana in meditation was the highest possible sin. Furious with Indra's dreadful deed, Visvakarma performed an inexorable Sacrifice by 'Abhichara' process (taking revenge) reciting Atharva Veda Mantras, created a mountain like and ferocious boy with the sole objective of killing Indra. The huge boy was named Vritra or who could save his father as Vrinjina. Visvakarma equipped him with all kinds of war tactics and divine armoury including a swift and sturdy Chariot, a 'Sudarshan' like Disc, and a 'Trisula' like spear. As Vritra grew, Indra was getting nervous and approached Deva Guru to prevent any risk from the Demon. Brihaspati warned Indra that he should better be prepared for a Big Battle as the forebodings were not conducive, as after all Indra had committed a heinous crime of killing a Brahmana out of pride and fear. Vritrasura was the abled commander in chief and desired to marry Shachi Devi, but Shachi did not reciprocate as she felt that he was a servant of her father. As insulted Vritraasura decided to take revenge by marrying her. Meanwhile Indra begged of Maha Muni Dadheechi to spare his backbone and with the skills of Vishvakarma made Vajrayudha the thunderbolt with which Vritrasura was killed and as an act of vengeance married Shachi Devi whom Vritraasura was madly in love with. Under such circumstances, Shachi Devi readily consented to marry as Indra's 'Patta Mahishi' or the Prime Queen. But smitten by the sin of 'brahmana hatya', Indra hid himself in a lotus stem in a pond at Manasasarovara and the title of Indratva was rewarded by King Nahusha. Nahusha claimed Shachi Devi too. Assited by Vishvakarma as prompted by Devi Bhagavati, Shachi Devi helped recover Indra from the lotus stem and Indra got reappointed by Brahma Deva since the brahma hatya dosha was negated due to long penance in the lotus stem. Nahusha got punished due to his audacity of claiming Shachi Devi and became a brahma rakshasa till the times of Maha Bharata in dwapara yuga.]

As Devi Sita screamed in high pitch, Ravana'sura expanded his original form and shouted : ‘ You have now become mad and that is why you are not realising my gallantry and guts. If I expand my physique and stand up sky high, my powerful arms could lift up the earth, drink up the waters of oceans, and in a duel could destroy mrityu too! You mad woman! I could hurt and pierce through the globe of Surya with my arrows and bring it down to earth. You foolish and crazy woman! Look at me and my burning looks with fury and fire as the universal belief is that the seething anger of Ravana is beyond comprehension.’ Having shouted likewise, Ravana assumed the form of his natural swarupa like Kaala Deva as his eyes were fuming with ten heads and as many fiery eyes and with twenty hands and gripped palms raised high and threatening Sita! He screamed at her: triṣu lokeṣu vikhyātām yadi bhartāram icchasi, mām āśraya varārohe tavāhaṁ sadṛśaḥ patiḥ/ mām bhajasva cirāya tvam ahaṁ ślāghyas tava priyaḥ, naiva cāhaṁ kva cid bhadre kariṣye tava vipriyam, tyajyatām mānuṣo bhāvo mayi bhāvaḥ praṇīyatām/ Even if you explore and search trilokas, you would not find a more deserving husband than me; do believe me that I should keep you on a high pedestal and never hurt you with affectionate obedience. I am aware that among human beings, your passion for Rama is extraordinary but now that you have encounterd me, you might as well forget and ignore him and his flimsy memories! Stupid and dim witted woman! Rama was thrown out of a throne, and his aspirations to become a king were dashed down; his life span as a human being is limited and precarious; how foolish are you not to discount these facts of existence. Do point out one single reason to keep faith in him as he is in the clutch of a woman who tossed him to a frightful dandakaranya infested with cruelty and mercilessness! Devi Rohini. As this scene was witnessed, the ‘vana devatas’ got jolted and dispersed with fright. Then Ravana commanded the golden chariot of donkeys, even while shouting at Devi Sita and kept her slim body on his strong laps and speeded away on the sky. As this rapid occurrence happened in split minutes, Devi Sita raised the top of her voice and screamed ‘ hey Rama’. She made desperate efforts to loosen the grip of Ravana’s powerful arms like a ‘naagini’ to slither but to vain. hā lakṣmaṇa mahābāho gurucittaprasādaka, hriyamāṇām na jānīṣe rakṣasā kāmarūpiṇā/ jīvitam sukham arthāms ca dharmahetoḥ parityajan, hriyamāṇām adharmaṇa mām rāghava na paśyasi/ She kept on shouting: ‘ haa maha bahu Lakshmana! As Devi Sita was crying and shouted at Jatayu from the donkey chariot of Ravana'sura, the great bird was actually resting in sleep. As Jatayu of a mountain top like height of its body with sharp beak opened his eyes and addressed Ravana with composure : Dashamukha Ravana! I am the gruhra raja Jatayu as dedicated to dharma and nyaaya. Brother, please do not perform that act of abduction of Devi Sita the pativrata of Shri Rama. Dasharatha nandana Rama is a unique personality of fame and follows virtue and justice and what you are seeking to perform is most inappropriate. Could there be King like you stoop to this kind of a detestable and disgusting act! Mahabali Ravana! Kings of your standing and fame are least expected of you. Buddhimaan! Kings are expected to uphold the honour and dignity of women, but what is now visible is quite contrary! Some one else's wife is stated as a sister or mother and the path to the contrary is a slippery leading to the proverbial narakas for award of retribution of natural justice. Pulastha kula nandana! Please refrain from this act of passion and over indulgence. rājā dharmas ca kāmāś ca dravyāṇām cottamo nidhiḥ, dharmah śubham vā pāpam vā rājamūlam pravartate/ pāpasvabhāvaś capalaḥ katham tvam rakṣasām vara, aiśvaryaṁ abhisamprāpto vimānam iva duṣkṛtī/ A king is expected to be a repositor and enforcer of Dharma, Sadaachaara and contrarily of sinful mindedness. How could you be an exception. Tell me if you seek revenge against what Surpanakha did and Khara and his followers had deserved, is this act of timidity justified in Rama's absence; what is expected is to fight with Rama but not to kidnap his wife! Is this not shameful for a King of your stature! Ravana! Do leave Devi Sita from this stage lest Rama gets provoked and uproot your existence and along with it the name and fame of your vamsha too. Ravana! you seem to have been robed in clothes full of poison of snakes and tied up your neck with chains of Mrityu and yet do not realise as to what you are heading to! Any person of senses should lift up only that much of heavy weight to his capacity and likewise consume only that much of food intake as per his maximum, lest he would lose balance or end up in ruinous indigestion. yat kṛtvā na bhaved dharmo na kīrtir na yaśo bhuvi, śarīrasya bhavet khedaḥ kas tat karma samācare/ That specific task which seems reasonable and worthy of virtue and praiseworthy be resorted to but acts of unjust violence be avoided at any cost. Ravana! If still you continue with your arrogance and stupidity, then I should have no option but to face me to attack and then you should the ruinous path of your destruction. Even in in case, you might survive in our mutual attack, let it be realise that most certainly, Ramachandra who had only recently decimated Khara Dushanas would destroy you, your entire heros behind you and the 'vamsha naashana' to re establish and vindicate 'dharma and nyaya.' As of now unfortunately, the heros of invincibility are away as per your evil plan as of now, but dharma shall be vindicated eventually.

Ravana was incensed with the 'dharma pravachanas' of Jatayu and chased the Giant Bird in the encounter. Both of them attacked each other, like the enormous speed of the rushing winds. It appeared that in this frightful battle, they seemed that each of them were tossing at each other the illustrious Maalvayaan Parvatas. Then Ravana rushed arrows from his dhanush by way of 'bhayankara mantrika astraas' such as Naaleeka-Naaraacha-and Vikeerna. While releasing the celestial arrows, Ravana's ten furious faces were distorted and ferocious akin to Kaala danda Yama Raja. Having survived the attacks of the 'mantrika baanaas', Maha Bali Grudhra Raaja attacked Ravana's 'dasha mukhas' with its powerful and sharp nails like frightful swords and 'trishulaas' as the asura's facial blood was like never ending streams. Then Maha Parakrami Ravana drew his dhanush straight and high aimed at the huge sized mountain like Jatayu with his fearfully raised shoulders and the twenty energetic hands had rained the mantrik arrows in continuous flows. The strong and firm feet of the Great Bird were pieced like minced feet which disbaled it to fly here and there freely and the continous release of the arrows released by the Asura kept on smashing the wings, the beak and its huge mouth while the strong wings disallowed its movement let alone the speed. Ravana's steel kavacha the body shield of solid steel was bright like red fire. But in response Jatayu hit Ravana's dhanush. Then the valiant Ravana riding the donkey chariot sought to attack the disabled grudhra raaja but the latter lifted the sarathi up in the ferocious winds and killed him by its fearful beak to pieces of flesh. Later on he lifted the chariot up by its beak and smashed the wheels and the axes. sa bhagnadhanvā viratho hatāśvo hatasārathiḥ, aṅkenādāya vaidehīm papāta bhuvi rāvaṇaḥ/ In this way, Ravana too was disabled with his dhanush broken, saradhi killed and horses done to death, then he had to finally jumped out of the broken chariot with Devi Sita safe on his lap. The onlooker Being on the earth kept on shouting 'saadhu saadhu' at that picturesque scene of the encounter. Having taken Devi Sita on his lap, Ravana found himself disabled too yet, the dauntless Dashagreeva lifted his sword out of its sheath jumped at the Giant Bird. With all its latent body strength, the wing less Jatayu jumped high and shouted: vajrasamsparsābāṇasya bhāryām rāmasya rāvaṇa, alpabuddhe harasy enām vadhāya khalu rakṣasām/samitrabandhuḥ sāmātyaḥ sabalaḥ saparicchadaḥ, viṣapānam pibasy etat pipāsita ivodakam/ 'Manda buddhi Ravana! Kakutstha kula bhushana Shri Rama and his most able and everfaithful brother Lakshmana are peerless warriors and would they ever spare you but with devastation for your disgraceful act! You are a coward and fearful; the world would reject you as a thief. Even your brother Khara fought a valiant battle and fell attaining veera sarga. But you are a mere ill famed common and mean trickster! paretakāle puruṣo yat karma pratipadyate, vināśāyātmano 'dharmyam pratipanno 'si karma tat/ pāpānubandho vai yasya karmaṇaḥ ko nu tat pumān, kurvīta lokādhipatiḥ svayambhūr bhagavān api/ At the vinaasha kaala, a person resorts to ill justified ways and means and you are only reiterating that age old truism. As the disaster at one's threshold, the inevitable temptation draws one attractively and that is indeed the truism of life and fate!' Having screamed at Ravana likewise, Parakrami Jatayu flew on to the body of Ravana with hitting speed and with its sharp beak grilled the asuras body like an 'ankusha' on an elephant head. Its beak, wings and nails are the huge bird's 'aayudhaas' or the peerless weapons. Then Ravana with enormous pain and irritation hit the bird. In retaliation, Jatayu sought to sever his mighty hands even as Devi Sita was relieved temporarily but the hands sprouted and reappeared repetitively. Thereafter, Ravana having lifted his sword once again and severed Jatayu's wings as the illustrious grudhra crumbled down dying, while the latter and Devi Sita exchanged their glances; she with gratitude and he with his feeling of failed valour and strong conviction that finally truth should triumph. And Ravana pulled Devi Sita back on to his lap as the latter resumed her lamentations with no defence in sight.

Devi lamented with extraordinary grief stating that human beings do receive danger signals by way of bad omens, dreams and strange voices of birds; such signals are not only for dangers but auspicious auguries too. Then she in her interior thoughts as a soliloquy, she addressed Shri Rama: ‘Kakutstha kula bhushana! I did notice the premonitions of inauspicious nature that deers and birds were running hither and thither in opposite directions but those were ignored. I felt some relief when I sighted and screamed Pakshi Raja but most unfortunately it was lying dead having done a valiant fight. Hey Rama! Hey Lakshmana! Save me wherever you are! Hey, high trees, flowers and creepers, save me from this tense and dense condition.’ As Sita was continuously uttering within herself ‘Rama Rama’, darkness commenced engulfing by the fall of the day. Then the disgusting Rakshasa pulled her by her long and soft hairs, while it appeared that Brahma felt now that her fate was to be in action! Maharshi then anticipated that the last days of Ravana commenced ticking by slowly and so does his fate getting sealed gradually. The hapless Sita kept on uttering Ha Rama, Ha Rama repetitively; in sudden outbursts she was crying away incessantly. She was then ornamented with molten gold and wearing a yellow saree and it was in that body form Ravana was carrying her by his vimana. As she was seated on the lap of Ravana, it seemed that her innocent visage as reflective of the yellowish Sun Set overcovered by the copperish cloud groupings. All of a sudden, she broke out like of cloud bursts. Deep within her heart, she addressed Shri Rama: ‘Purusha Simha! Bharata must be by now performing tapasya, as he discarded kingship, self pride, comforts of life, and surely he ought to attain swarga sukhas post life. He is ideal a son of King Dasharatha as against the most vicious mother Kaikeyi is. It s her role that has an impact on me. Thinking of your brother Lakshmana, I do yearn for some golden days in future; but Lakshmana! When would those auspicious days might arrive! When indeed would it be possible as Rama Lakshmanas could join me in Godavari snaansa and tarpanas. Would not such snaanaas be like Parameshvara and Devi Parvati in the company of Nandeeshwara!’ So immersed in her musings, Devi Sita pursued her deep thoughts during her journey seated on Ravana’s lap while riding the chariot of donkeys!

As Ravana was forcibly abducting Devi Sita and flying off to Lanka by his donkey chariot, she felt disgusted and humiliated. While crying away she reddened her eyes with agony, partly appealing and mostly criticising caustically she addressed the haughty and mighty Asura as follows: ‘ villainonous Rashasa! Are you not ashamed of yourself when you are kidnapping me as I was alone and helpless when my heroic husband was away. Dushtatma! You are a miserable timid being. Undoubtedly you schemed to despatch the Maya Mriga Rakshasa to tempt me and distanced my dear husband away. You are the blackmost blemish of your vamasha and the darkest spot of history of the past and the present age. Why are you running away with timidity and fear of the public! Like a sky bound bird gets frightened with earthly forest fires, you could never taste the deadly arrows of my husband and his brother. sādhu kṛtvātmanaḥ pathyam sādhu mām muñca rāvaṇa, matpradharṣaṇaruṣṭo hi bhrātrā saha patir mama, vidhāsyati vināśāya tvaṁ mām yadi na muñcasi/ yena tvaṁ vyavasāyena balān mām hartum icchasi, vyavasāyah sa te nīca bhaviṣyati nirarthakah/ Ravana! Neecha rakshasa! The manipulation and planning that your evil mind had devised to kidnap me would not only be a miserable failure and a wasted effort! Do note that if do not release me now, I would not live even to witness your certain death! Nishachara! I shall therefore soon wait and witness the joyous scene of your tragic death at the earliest. Ravana! Most certainly you are soon going to witness the sight of Golden Trees and the bloodful flows of Vaitarani as the entry points of asipatra forests replete with gold like trees and flowers! Nirdaya nishaachara! You are executing a maha paataka against the celestial figure of Shri Rama and surely your serving up yourself the thickest slow poison and would not survive for long! Indeed you are fastening and tightening yourself the 'Kaala Pasha' voluntarily with neither brain nor brawn!.' Thus Devi Sita counted as among the Maha Pativratas broke down crying with 'karunaa swara' and with shaken tone.

As Devi Sita was feeling desperate and helpless, the donkey chariot reached the top of a mountain and she found that there were five monkeys seated there in. She thought over a while and started discarding her jewellery and silk robes apparently to draw the attention of the onlookers on the earth and possibly Rama Lakshmanas. Ravana was confused at her intentions and actions while the female monkeys started crying. Meanwhile the chariot crossed pampaa sarovara and dashed down at Lanka, even while Devi Sita was crying away distressed frantically. Nishachara Ravana was thrilled having arrived at Lanka as he placed Sita down from his strong grip on his lap as though a of a poisonous serpent. He felt relieved as if a well streached arrow by crossing forests, rivers, and mountains had finally reached his destination. Actually, while crossing the 'varunalaya samudra' nearing Lanka, he felt some itters that there might be hurdles there like huge fishes or 'maha naagas' springing up and out from the mid sea. Then the Charana Devatas on the high skies appeared to have exclaimed: ' now, the quizz of Ravana's life time has commenced the possibility in reverse path and the final solution has arrived in the form of Devi Sita!'.

[Note: One version of Ramayana describes that Sita Devi entered Lankapuri was the Maya Sita as the original was hiding in 'Agni Jvaalaas', who reappeared after Shri Rama's agni pareeksha of the original Devi Sita]

Devi Sita stared at the road network, entry-exit gates, and so on of Lankapuri. Then she was ushered into the 'antahpura' the interiors of females. Then Dashagreeva Ravana commanded ten anaakaari female 'pishaachas' to guard her but with strict warning to speak or perform any questionable misbehavior with Devi Sita then their death would be certain. On exiting the 'antahpura' Ravana was then pondering over as to what should be his next step. Then he came across eight 'Nara maamsa aahaari Maha Rakshasaas' greeted Ravana and having praised his outstanding abilities of his brawn and brain pointed out the erstwhile residing place of the renowned Khara Rakshasa, the brother of King Ravana. The Maha Rakshasaas stated regretfully: Bahu sainyam maha veeryam janasthaane niveshitam, sadushana kharam yuddhe nihataṃ Raamaaayakaih/ One of the Maha Rakshasaas explained to Ravana that he had reserved that nearby residence of maha parakrami Khara and his senapati Dushana but unfortunately one human warrior named Rama killed them and his vast 'sena'. The Maha Rakshasa then declared to King Ravana: tataḥ krodho mamāpūrvo dhairyasyopari vardhate, vairam ca sumahaj jātaṃ rāmaṃ prati sudāruṇam/ niryātayitum icchāmi tac ca vairam ahaṃ ripoḥ, na hi lapsyāmy ahaṃ nidrām ahatvā saṃyuge ripum/ It is that vengeance and mighty anger with which I have therefore decided that Rama should be my arch enemy to be killed! Unless and until Rama gets killed, my consciousness could be cooled down. Like a pauper and beggar should ever aspire to be a highly rich and prosperous person, my sole objective and motto of life would be to mercilessly kill Rama who killed giants like Khara Dushanas! As the Maha

Rakshasaas and their leader expressed their resolve, they were excitedly thrilled to realise that Ravana had already launched the initial step of ‘Sitaapaharana’!

Having been puffed up and complemented by eight naramaamsa bhaksha Maha Rakshaas, Ravana entered the luxurious ‘antahpura’ or the Queen Palace. Devi Sita at that time was surrounded by the rakshasis as appointed by Ravana and was crying away in fits and starts like a sinking yet floating boat in the sea by the force of fierce and strong winds. She was then like a ‘harini’ or a female deer surrounded by hunting dogs at that time. Then he ushered her, albeit compulsively to tour around the ‘rani vaasa’ akin to his ‘puja griha’ the worship place. The pillars in the raani vaasa were made of e ivory, pure gold, silver, and precious stones viz. diamonds, pearls, sapphires, corals, rubies, gomedha and vaidurya. In the ‘antahpura’ are the low sounds of dundhibhis, and Ravana then showed a strange pedestal led by stairs. He made her seat on a cushioned comfort on which Devi Sita did rather awkwardly on its edge with nervousness. Having shown the niceties and luxuries of the antahpura, Ravana addressed Devi Sita as follows: ‘ Site! Under my authority, there are crores of rakshasas get their livelihood including the old and the children. Under my personal service I have a thousand fierce rakshasa attendants. Vishala lochane! My entire kingdom rests at your tender feet; yad idam rājyatantram me tvayi sarvam pratiṣṭhitam, jīvitam ca viśālākṣi tvam me prāṇair garīyasī/I am obsessed with your personality and am devoted to you with my ‘praana’ the vital energy. Sita Devi! I have a harem of countless sundaris or paragons of beauty and grace at the nod of my head. Priye! Do consent to become my life partner. I am a tortured Soul awaiting your hidden smile and be compassionate to me. You may like to realise that this kingdom under my control is of hundred yojanas and even Devas headed by Indra would not dare to defy me, leave alone yaksha-gandharvas and renowned Maharshis. rājyabhraṣṭena dīnena tāpasena gatāyusā, kim kariṣyasi rāmeṇa mānuṣeṇālpatejasā/ bhajasva sīte mām eva bhartāham sadṛśas tava, yauvanam hy adhravam bhīru ramaśveha mayā saha/ Rama is a ‘rajya bhrashta’ banished to eke out life in forests; he is miserable, tapasvi, a walking human, and in all an aimless vagabond. Of what avail is he anyway! You do accept me as I am a fitting and appropriate husband for you. Please leave this ill deserved concern for that dejected and ever depressed human being. Enjoy your youthful life with this strong hero. I could forestall and tie up strongest winds into bundles. I could hold devouring flames in my fist. You could never spot in Tri Lokas a better choice of a husband like me! You could reign over this entire ‘saamrajya’ and I should be at your service always. Your bad days of forest life and the enormity of tribulations should be terminated forthwith, once you give your nod of head. Mithileshwari! As you remain with me as your life’s partner you would enjoy your food, ornaments and luxuries of living. Do you realise that the Sun glow like pushpaka vimana belonged to my brother Kubera the seat of wealth which was forcefully seized by me and that would be at your disposal. Varaaroḥa sumukhi! Your face is like a placid lotus flower which should never be spoilt with incessant cryings. As Ravana was talking away rubbish, Devi Sita got further agitated and while the intensity of her mental suffering got furthered, she veiled her face and intensified her interior thoughts about the stage of Rama’s mental condition of his separation from her. Imaah shunyaa mayaa vaachah shushyamaanena bhaashitaah, na chaapi Ravanah kaanchin murthaa streem pranameti ha/ Ravana further continued emphatically to Sita that she should not please conclude that what all he was patiently explaining was not out of lust for her but no understand that a personality of the stature of his would never kneel down at her feet! Evam uktvā daśagrīvo maithilīm janakātmajām, kṛtāntavaśam āpanno mameyam iti manyate/ Ravana thus felt satisfied that Devi Sita had indeed got converted in her mental frame gradually!

While Ravana felt that Devi Sita got somewhat reconciled to marry her, the latter twisted her lips and firmly and even fearlessly replied. ' King Dasharatha was like a firm bridge on the ocean flows of Dharma and known for his 'Satya Pratigina' or a solid vow of Truthfulness. Now his able son Shri Rama is a worshipworthy Devata of a grand physical stature and mental resolve. Born in the illustrious family lineage of Ikshvaaku, Rama with his high and powerful shoulders he is a purusha simha or a man-lion and together with his follower brother Lakshmana ought to undoubtedly uproot you, your saamraajya and the generation. If you think that you have successfully kidnapped me, then you too should receive the same fate as your brother Khara. You had mentioned of your strength and backing of the cruelmost Raakshasa Veeras but once they encounter Shri Rama, their poison would be drenched out like Maha Garuda facing hissing cobras. Like the forceful waves of Ganga flush out your body ornaments, Rama 'dhanush baanaas' would turn your physical parts to pieces. Ravana! You might brag that neither asuras nor devataas could face your valor, but rest assured that Rama's arrows would destroy you certainly as your enmity with Rama should seal your fate as the rest of your life should get terminated soon like of yagjna pashu tied to a pole awaiting sacrifice. Rakshasa! Even if Rama were to twist his angry looks on you then like Bhagavan Shankara ashed down Manmatha's body, you too have similar fate. yaś candram nabhaso bhūmau pātayen nāśayeta vā, sāgaram śoṣayed vāpi sa sītāṃ mocayed iha/ gatāyus tvam gataśrīko gatasattvo gatendriyaḥ, laṅkā vaidhavyasaṃyuktā tvatkṛtena bhaviṣyati/ Rest assured that Bhagavan Rama once arrives here to relieve Sita from shackles, even if chandra falls down to earth or oceans get dried up, I should be relieved and the kingdom of Lanka should be widowed. Your sinfulness now to separate me from Rama would soon end up in your sleepless nights. Remember that I have lived so far in peace and contentment in dandakaranya safely with the confidence in the courage of my husband and brother in law. They ought to arrive here soon and make a fitting assessment of your valour, mental agility and fate to dig up deep in your skin with sharp arrows. yadā vināśo bhūtānāṃ dṛśyate kālacoditaḥ, tadā kārye pramādyanti narāḥ kālavaśaṃ gatāḥ/ As and when the kaala chakra revolves and points out one's 'vinaasha' the tragic end, then each and every Being in Creation gets hooked to a crashing iron nail to slow down and to a crash. Despicable Nishachara! Kaaala the Mrityu prompted your inner ego to kidnap me and lead you to a screeching halt to terminate you and your empire Do you not realise that on a Yagjna Vedika, which the dwijas by means of mantras purify the shrut-shruva- yajna patras etc. and a chandala is prohibited to drag his feet and impurify the area; like wise I am the purified dharma patni of Shri Rama wedded strongly to the principles of 'paativratya' and chandala like you could even touch me. Be it made clear, 'neecha rakshasa', even this body of mine impurified by your touch could as well be destroyed and sacrificed in flames; but could never ever be surrendered to you!' As Devi Sita responded haughtily and screamingly, Ravana had rather softly: śṛṇu maithili madvākyam māsān dvādaśa bhāmini, kālenānena nābhyeṣi yadi mām cāruhāsini, tatas tvām prātarāśārtham sūdāś chetsyanti leśāśah/ ' Oh, haasya bhamini! Mithileshwari! Your humorous action does impress your way of dodging me. But mind you, I am granting you adequate notice period of twelve months and in case to do still me weakened your psyche, then I should take you to the royal kitchen and mince your body to pieces!' Then Ravana shouted yelling to the surroundig rakshasis: śīghram evam hi rākṣasyo vikṛtā ghoradarśanāḥ, darpam asyā vineṣyantu māmśaṣṇitabhojanāḥ/ You ferocious blood sucking flesh swallowing Maha Rakshasis! You better bring down the ego and arrogance of this woman soon! Then having moved forward by a few steps, returned and shouted: ' You better take her away and shift to 'Ashoka vaatika'. Then Devi Sita got unnerved with fright and misery, fell down to earth crawling and crying remembering Rama Lakshmanas out of desperation and extreme depression, even as the ferocious Rakshasis forcibly dragged her to Ashoka vaatika.

Having killed Rakasha Maareecha who appeared like a Maya Mriga, Shri Rama wished to return back to Panchavati his ashram. Then a loud sneeze was heard behind perhaps by an owl and Rama felt that it was a bad omen. He was terribly worried that perhaps left Devi Sita alone as he heard the thunderous reverberation of his own false ‘artanaada’ made by Mareecha stating ‘ haa Lakshmana, haa Sita I am killed’.[Bad omens are loud sneezes, recall back from journeys, facing dry grass, cowdung, lunatic, chandala, a widow, ashes, bones, fall of umbrella on one’s head and such as per Agni Purana].Rama got worried whether Lakshmana and Devi Sita heard the false ‘artanaadaas’ by Maareecha in the form of the strange Maya Mriga as enamoured by Sita. I resolve to enter the ashram only in case Vaidehi Sita were alive and if her demise is confirmed, then I need not have to survive. Tell me dear brother, is she alive or not! Most certainly she ought be crying away for me in case she were alive. The most obnoxious rakshasa Maareecha yelled 'Oh Lakshmana, oh Sita' and obviously she was rattled and pressurised you to leave her. Sarvathā tu kritam kaṣṭam Sitaamumutsrujataa vane, pratikartum nrushamsaanaam rakshasaam dattamantaram/ In any case, your leaving Sita alone had caused the impact and the cruel rakshasaas must have mercilessly killed Sita undoubtedly. Shatru naashana Lakshmana, now I am drowned in a sea at this testing time! Indeed, in this hopeless situation what is it that I could do! Having thus stated Rama Lakshmana entered with a ray of hope but Devi Sita was not present therein. Both the brothers were bewildered and lost their consciousness for some time!

On way to the panchavati ashram itself, Rama Lakshmanas were reviewing the previous happenings. Rama asked Lakshmana cryingly: Lakshmana! Are you sure that when you left for me, Sita was alone, but why did you leave her alone! Even as you must have been leaving Sita alone, I started experiencing bad omens and started realising the forewarnings. My left eye flaps were trembling and the left shoulder too. As you might have been leaving Sita alone, my heart beat was faltering . Then Lakshmana said: brother! I was not ready to leave on my own, but Devi Sita pressurised me with all types of very harsh and cruel words, and with extreme patience I maintained silence but certain acute and very upsetting words of hers had literally forced me to leave most reluctantly. The false and desperate shoutings of Mareecha were no doubt recognised by me and explained to Sita but she was too desperate as she was trembling with fear and inexplicable anxiety and begged of me to leave the spot. Even so I made my earnest appeal to her and clarified: na tat paśyāmy ahaṁ rakṣo yad asya bhayam āvahet, nirvṛtā bhava nāsty etat kenāpy evam udāhṛtaṁ/ vigarhitam ca nīcam ca katham āryo 'bhīdhāsyati, trāhīti vacanaṁ sīte yas trāyet tridaśān api/ 'Devi! In my entire life time and experience, I had never faced any Rakshasa whom Rama could have got jitters about with fear and timidity. Kindly be peaceful and totally reject the falsity and apprehension of Rama encountering a risk of his life. This voice of desperation was most certainly not that of Rama and could a personality of his stature who could save Devas from most critical and dangerous crises ever get down to the meanest level of repeatedly shouting for help so timidly!' 'Rama! I had even explained Devi Sita further: Rakshaseneritam vaakyam traasaat traahēti Shobhane, na bhavyathaa kaaryaam kunaaree jana sevita/ Shobhane! That Rakshasa out of sheer fright of your arrows and distress of facing death should have yelled and this should not be a cause of concern for a famed lady of your stature and thus ignore the shout as dismissed. Rama! I pacified Devi Sita further: Alam viplavataam gantum swasthya bhava nitrutsukaa, na chaasti trishu loleshu pumaan yo Raghavam rane/ Jaatovaa jaayamaanol vaa samyuge yah paraajayet, ajeyo Raghavo yuddhe Devaih Shakra purogamaih/ I appealed to Devi Sita not to get flustered but keep her cool and self controlled without agitation and assured her that in triloka no personality of his stature and bravery was ever born yet who could encounter Raghu Rama; even Lord Indra and any other devas would accede to that reality. Even so, Shri Rama! Devi Sita took to extreme accusations against me: bhāvo mayi tavātyarthaṁ pāpa eva niveśitaḥ, vinaṣṭe bhrātari prāpte na ca tvam mām avāpsyasi/ saṁketād bharatena tvam rāmaṁ samanugacchasi, kṛśantaṁ hi yathātyarthaṁ nainam abhyavapadyase/ ripuḥ pracchannacārī tvam madartham anugacchasi, rāghavasyāntaraprepsus tathainaṁ nābhipadyase/ 'Lakshmana! It appears that in your interior feelings, you appear to have retained sinful and evil designs on me! You seem to be planning that at the death of your brother, you have a nasty feeling to secure me! But that should never be. Out of your jealousy for Bharata, you are pretentious and keep following Shri Rama. Rama is crying hard for your help, screaming by your own name which you are deaf all about. You are a secretive enemy of your brother. That is why you seem to await an opportunity of Rama's critical time and thus avoiding to help him at the apt situation like this'. 'Dearest brother! As Vaidehakumari insinuated me thus, I was accused of my feigned sincerity and opportunism, I was hurt to the core, my looks were reddened and lips were quivering and in that critical stage of sub consciousness , I was forced to leave the ashram'. But Rama's reaction was still not convincing; he told Lakshmana: na hi te parituṣyāmi tyaktvā yad yāsi maithilīm, kṛddhāyāḥ parusaṁ śrutvā striyā yat tvam ihāgataḥ/ sarvathā tv apanītaṁ te sītayā yat pracoditaḥ, krodhasya vaśam āgamyā nākaroh śāsanam mama/ Lakshmana! You became a victim of an angry and extremely agitated woman and over crossed my strict instruction which has proved to be an avoidable disaster now and am amazed at your indiscretion which is truly unpardonable and never expected of you. śarāhatenaiva tadārtayā girā; svaram mamālambya sudūrasaṁśravam, udāhṛtaṁ tad vacanaṁ sudāruṇam; tvam āgato yena vihāya maithilīm/ As my arrows decimated the Rakshasa, and his false shouts and screams imitating my voice were heard, you left Sita alone despite my strict instructions!

As Sri Rama left the ashram in vacuum without Devi Sita, his left eyes flapped violently, and he came out tottering and the huge question looming large on his mental screen was whether Sita was safe. He entered the ashram the trepidation and he was blank with confused silence. He started moving about haltingly now and with great speed of anxiety then with hands in restless shake. Again he looked up suddenly searching the nooks and corners. But the quiet Parnashala looked blank and soundless except the echos of his own voice. Just outside, he made a systematic search of each tree and surrounding bushes which were unclean and dusty and dilapidated. The 'mṛga charmas' and heaps of kushagraas pieces added to the confusion and stage of helter skelter dirt and disorder. hṛtā mṛtā vā naṣṭā vā bhakṣitā vā bhaviṣyati, nilīnāpy aṭha vā bhīrur aṭha vā vanam āśritā/ Rama exclaimed: Hai! Sita appears to have been kidnapped! Trust not that she was not subjected to Mrityu! Or lost her way! Or a rakshasa had eaten her away! Or gone to fetch a flower or a fruit or out of thirst left near a water body or a river. yatnān mṛgayamāṇas tu nāsaśāda vane priyām, śokarakteḥkṣaṇaḥ śokād unmatta iva lakṣyate/ vṛkṣād vṛkṣam pradhāvan sa girīmś cāpi nadīn nadīm, babhūva vilapan rāmaḥ śokapaṅkārṇavaplutaḥ/Shri Rama - chandra with the strength of his all our efforts started then a systematic search in the forest gardens all around. Anxiously running around the groups of trees and bushes, mountains, rivers and their banks, Rama took to monologues: ‘ hey Kadamba! My beloved Sita is fond of your flowers; has she arrived here! have you seen her! She has soft skin, wears yellow colour sarees and is appropriately scented! Bilva! My darling’s breasts are soft yet firm; have you seen her! Arjuna tree! Devi Sita adores the intoxicating odour of your flowers; by chance have you seen her passing by. Kukubha! You are an illustrious vriksha raaja! That Devi Sita of my darling wife is like a female bee collecting honey from flower to flower; have you noticed! Alas! none of you trees, or fruits or flowers is responding about my Sita’s whereabouts! Tilaka vriksha, Sita is a ever fond of you as her ‘vishala phaala’ the broad forehead of hers is ever adorned.’ Like wise the trees of jaamun-mango and such other trees of the forest nearby were searched again and again as the most illustrious Shri Rama the ever invincible and unique example of human incarnation of dharama and nyaya. The highly disturbed Rama who turned semi crazy had then crossed animals like elephants, tigers and deers as also vanya pakshis like parrots, cranes, crows and sky high garudas besides water borne swans all of which attracted the attraction and admiration of Devi Sita during her prolonged association of her forest life. Further, Rama in fits of imaginations broke down as a semi lunatic started chasing shadows of Devi Sita: tiṣṭha tiṣṭha varārohe na te ’sti karuṇā mayi, nātyartham hāsyāśīlāsi kimartham mām upekṣase/ pītakaūseyakenāsi sūcitā varavarṇini, dhāvanty api mayā dṛṣṭā tiṣṭha yady asti sauhṛdam/ ‘Varaarooha Devi Sita! Please wait, wait! Don’t you show me mercy. Your nature is certainly not to tease and tempt me as you are a mature female; then why are you running away from me! Sundari! I have certainly identified you wearing a fascinating yellow silk dress. As you are surely affectionate for me, I would not see you properly’. Then the half deranged Shri Rama stated: hā priye kva gatā bhadre hā sīteti punaḥ punaḥ, ity evaṁ vilapan rāmaḥ paridhāvan vanād vanam/ kva cid udbhramate vegāt kva cid vibhramate balāt, kva cin matta ivābhāti kāntān veṣaṇatatparaḥ/ sa vanāni nadīḥ śailān giriprasravaṇāni ca, kānanāni ca vegena bhramaty aparisaṁsthitaḥ/ Ha priye! [Vishleshana on Vamana Deva and Bali Charavarti for ready reference vide Essence of Valmiki Baala Ramayana:

As Vamana Deva arrived at the Yagna shaala, Bali welcomed him, offered ‘Arghya’, ‘Aasana’, Puja and offered him limitless gold, jewellery, elephants, horses, cows, women, clothes, bunches of villages or townships or whatever would be his wish! Vamana Deva replied smilingly: Mamagnisharanaarthaaya dehi Rajan Padatrayam, Suvarnagraamaratnaadi tadarthibhyah pradeeyataam/ (Raja! Please provide to me three feet of land to enable me to set up an Agni- Shaala). Bali said that after all three feet would be nothing as he could ask for a lakh of feet which could be given away, but Vamana Deva replied that he was indeed satisfied with that much of Bhumi and if the King were to offer more he might as well provide to the other needy! Bali Chakravarti readily agreed not understanding the implication and as the deed of Daana was being executed and Vamana Deva extended his hand to the King and expanded his Vamana Rupa gradually. Instantly, Vamana Murti displayed his Virat Swarupa: Chandra and Surya were his two Eyes, Shy was his head, Prithvi his feet, Pishachaas were his foot-fingers, Gruhyakaas were his hand fingers, Vishwa Deva Ganaas were in his jaanus /knees, Sadhyas were his janghaas, Yakshaas were his nails, Apsarsaas were his palm lines, Nakshatras were his Eye sight, Surya kiranās were his hairs, Stars were his body hairs, Maharshiganaas were in the hair roots, Vidishas were his hands, Dishas were his ears, Ashwini Kumars were his faculty of hearing, Vayu was his nose, Chandra Deva was his joking faculty, Dharma Deva was his thinking capacity, Satya was his voice and Saraswati was his tongue, Deva Mata Aditi was his neck, Vidya was his valiyaas or long poles; Pushas were his eye brows, Swarga dwar was his anus, Vaishvanara his face, Prajapati his vrushanaas, Param Brahma was his heart, Kashyapa Muni was his Pumstwa, Vasu Devata was his back, Marutganaas were his Sandhis, Rudra was his Vakshasthala, Mahaarnavaa was his Dhairya, Gangharvas were in his stomach; Lakshmi, Medha, Dhruvi, Kaanti and all Vidyaas were in his ‘Kati Pradesha’; the luster and radiance in the total Universe as also the Tapo teja or the power of meditation was the reflection of the magnificence of Natayana; Vedas and Scriptures and the huge Yagnaas and the Sacred Deeds of the Virtuous like Maharshis and Brahmanas were all inside in his ‘kukshi’ or belly. On viewing the Paramatma’s ‘Virat Swarupa’, the so called ‘Mahaasuraas’ referred to earlier in ignorance by Chakravarti Bali before Prahlada’s curse to him got burnt off like flies before a gigantic out break of Fire! Having thus occupied the Universe in totality including the sub-terrain Sapta Paatalaas, Vamana Deva stated that since Bali took the water in his hand and donated the THREE FEET of Land, and blessed him to be the King of the Sapta Paatalaas and granted him long life till the end of Manvantara of the on-going Vaisavata Manu.]

Stanza 27 continued: As Veera Lakshmana affirmed quoting Vamana Deva’s example for seeking three feet of earth and enveloping trilokas, provided extraordinary confidence to even search the universe but accomplish Devi Sita where ever she might be. But at the moment, Shri Rama was in a totally depressed crisis. sa vihvalitasarvāṅgo gatabuddhir vicetanaḥ, viṣasādāturo dīno niḥśvasyāśītām āyatam/ bahuśaḥ sa tu niḥśvasya rāmo rājīvalocanaḥ, hā priyeti vicukrośa bahuśo bāṣpagadgadaḥ/ Rama’s state of present condition was dimmed gradually, his awareness was blank, physical movement was stilled, was breathing heavily and heated up with sped and was truly sunk in the deep waters of ocean like distress.

Then Shri Rama even as he was deeply anguished by Devi Sita's absence instructed to make an intensive and thorough search for her on the banks of the Sacred River itself. Then Lakshmana having searched the river banks even by shouting her name in high pitch, returned blank. He was disheartened but he himself visited the place himself. He then addressed Lakshmana: ‘even mother Godavari had not responded and what should I inform King Janaka as to what had happened to his dear daughter! Truly, I am forlorn. Having lost my kingship, I have been already distressed while eking my existence by eating leaves and fruits some how, and now I have lost my dearest wife too. Now, I should perhaps only one alternative to make a thorough of the banks of Mandakini, the ashram surroundings and the Prasravana Mountain and hopefully I might get a clue of her whereabouts! Yete mahamrigaa veera maameekshante punah punah, vaktukaama iha hi me eengitaanyupalakshaye/ Veera Lakshmana! That mayaavi rakshasa in the form of a deer was flapping its shining eyes; perhaps from its looks might give us a clue.! Uvaacha lakshmano dheemaam jyeshtam bhraataramaavratat,kka sitena tvayaa prushthaa yatheme saha sotyithaah/ Darshayanti kshitim chaiva dakshinaam cha dishaam mrigaah,saadhu gacchhaavahe deva dishametaam cha nairruteem, yadi tasyaagamah kaschidaaryaa vaa saath laksyate/ Buddhimaan Lakshmana then shouted excitedly to Arya Shri Rama: As we are concerned about the whereabouts of Devi Sita, I suspect that she might have turned towards the south east direction and as such we must concentrate our searchings in that direction to provide a clue. Most possibly, having arrived here she was most probably, She might have been engrossed looking in that direction only! Then Rama stared in that particular direction. evam sambhāṣamāṇau tāv anyonyaṁ bhrātārāv ubhau, vasuṁdharāyām patitaṁ puṣpamārgam apaśyatām/ tām puṣpavṛṣṭim patitām dṛṣṭvā rāmo mahītale, uvāca lakṣmaṇaṁ vīro duḥkḥito duḥkḥitaṁ vacaḥ/ abhijānāmi puṣpāṇi tānīmāmiha lakṣmaṇa, apinaddhāni vaidehyā mayā dattāni kānane/ As both the brothers were intently examining at that area they saw at a specific spot and wondered there were a few flowers fallen; they examined the fallen flowers as a group as though showered. Rama was excited and addressed Lakshmana at once: Lakshmana! I can recognise these flowers as certainly of Sita’s head hairs. I must realise that Surya, Vayu and the famed mother Prithvi have kept these flowers in tact and semi fresh Then he complemented the Prasravana Parvata and said with excitement: Parvata Raja! how indeed you helped me to identify these flowers safe and in a lot to give me a leading clue to reach my darling Sita finally! But in a fit of feigned consternation, Rama said that he ought to discover Devi Sita, lest the Parvata Raja shikharas should be destroyed till Devi Sita’s exact location is known to him. Then Lakshmana too was excited and shouted: Parvata Raja! I am too prepared to let the Parvata shikharas harmed till they confess about her location! Apparently both Rama Lakshmanas having secured a definite clue of Sita were truly excited. dadarśa bhūmau niṣkrāntaṁ rākṣasasya padaṁ mahat/ Then they discovered the huge foot prints of a Rakshasa. Further the chain of Rama Lakshmana’s guess thoughts was as follows: Trastaayaa raama kaanchinyaah pradhaavantyaa itastatah, raakshaseaanusrutpaayaa vaodeheescha padaani tu/ The rakshasaa having realised Ravana’s interest might have run away hither and thither, and Devi Sita’s footprints too were recognisable. sa sameekshya pari -kraantaṁ Sitaayaa raakshasasya cha, bhagnam dhanuscha toonee cha vikeernam bahudhaa ratham, sabhramaanta hridayo Raamah shashamsa bhraataram priyam/ Sita and Rakshasaa’s footprints, broken down dhanush and the arrow container remains and the chariot were the definite clues that the cruel Ravana must have kidnapped Devi Sita. Then there was a further proof of the kidnap. paśya lakṣmaṇa vaidehyāḥ śīrṇāḥ kanakabindavaḥ, bhūṣaṇānām hi saumitre mālyāni vividhāni ca/ Lakshmana! See the further proof of the kidnap: Devi Sita’s golden jewellery is visible thrown here and there on earth but smeared with blood. Then there was a twist in the probability of the guesswork: Rama addressed Lakshmana! My feeling is that a rakshasas who could change their forms might have sliced off Devi Sita’s body and distributed and devoured and in the process might have fought among them selves. And there could be seen a huge and well jewelled dhanush too is visible on the ground but whose such dhanush could that be! This dhanush appears to be of some devatas fallen down. Further, there is also a glittering ‘kavacha’, a ‘dhvaja’ of a ‘ratha’ too! Most interestingly Lakshmana! kāñcanaśchadāś ceme piśācavadanāḥ kharāḥ, bhīmarūpā mahākāyāḥ kasya vā nihatā raṇe/ dīptapāvakasamkāśo dyutimān samaradhvajah, apavidhaś ca bhagnaś ca kasya sāmgrāmiko rathaḥ/ Look at this! This fearful and disgusting dead body of a huge donkey like a pishacha which too was wearing a body kavacha made of bright gold is lying dead to pieces! Whose chariot driven by donkeys that could be! Lakshmana look at this: sharvaras or arrow resters had fallen off with possibly the dead body of rakshasa looking like a charioteer! hṛtā mṛtā vā sītā hi bhakṣitā vā tapasvinī, na dharmas trāyate sītām hriyamāṇām mahāvane/ bhakṣitāyām hi vaidehyām hṛtāyām api lakṣmaṇa, ke hi loke priyam kartum śaktāḥ saumya mameśvarāḥ/ Soumya! most certainly a Rakshasa king appears to have either killed or kidnapped tapasvini Vaidehi and in this dandakaranya the protection of her and much less of dharma could be vindicated ever! Who indeed that kind of a mighty rakshasa king who could have eaten or mercilessly taken away my darling Sita! kartāram api lokānām śūram karuṇavedinam, ajñānād avamanyeran sarvabhūtāni lakṣmaṇa/ Lashmana! The common public on earth gets disbelieving even Maheshwara famed for ‘Tripuraasura Vijaya’ keeps silent at times even being the unique emblem of virtue and natural justice!

Vishleshana on Tripuraasura Vijaya from i) Linga Purana-ii) Ganesha Purana

i) Linga Purana:

As Devas and Vishnu visioned ‘Trishulapaani Shankar’ relaxing with Devi Parvati and Mahatma Nandi, they saw that ‘Bhuta bhavishya Swami’ whose eyes were red like ‘Agni kundas’ and physique was shimmering with thousand Suns with a pleasant countenance ornamented with a Bala Purna Chandra. Having pleased Parama Shiva, Devas explained the gravity and seriousness of the crisis created by the Tripura Daityas who not only unseated and tormented Devas and Celestial Entities but were also sending shock-waves all over the Universe, humiliating Sages, frightening women and children, making mass-scale carnage and blood bath of humanity and uprooting Dharma and age-old Values and Principles. Parameshwara infused confidence into the demoralised Devas and asked them to construct an exceptional chariot with unique specifications: Prithvi as the Ratha / Chariot, Meru and Mandara Mountains as axles, Surya and Chandra as Chakras made of gold and silver respectively, the Four Vedas of Ruk-Yajur-Sama and Atharva acted as the horses; Shukra, Brihaspati, Budha, Mangal, and Shanaischara seated on the Ratha ready to charge; the famous serpents viz. Takshaka, Karkotaka, Dhanajaya and Padmadwaya acted as the strings which were tied to the horses; most poisonous snakes like Surasa, Devashuni, Sarama, Kadru, Vinata, Shuchi, Trusha, and Bubhuksha were used as arrows; Mrutyu, Brahmahatya, Gohatya, Balahatya and Prajaabhaya were loaded on the Chariot so that they get activated as maces; Omkara and Vashatkara were the symbols on the Ratha; Sinivali, Kuhu, Raaka and Anumati - the ‘Adhishtana’/ in charge Deities of Chaturdashi, Amavasya, Suddha Purnima, Pratipadika Purnima respectively were used as auxiliary strings to the horses; the dhanush made of six ‘ritus’/ seasons which is safeguarded by Devi Ambika herself never to be broken; the specific arrow with which to kill the Tripurasura was strengthened by Vishnu, Soma and Agni and its head propelled by Agni and Chandra by its rear and Vishnu Maya smeared all over; and the extreme poison of Nagaraja Vasuki was loaded to ensure stability and speed of the arrow; Vayu was made in charge of the high velocity of the Chariot and finally Brahma was the Charioteer and Sesha Naag was made in charge of the personal security of Brahma as also of the Chariot. Yama Raja with his buffalo, Kubera on his serpent, Indra on Iravata, Ganeswara by his Mushika Vahana, Karikeya on his Peacock, Nandeshwara with his Shula running behind and sides of the Ratha were in full preparedness. Maharshis Bhṛigu, Bharadwaja, Vasishtha, Goutama, Kratu, Pulastya, Pulaha, Marichi, Atri, Angira, Parashara, and Agastya were there too at the kick-start of the Battle to recite Veda Vachanas and Shiv Stutis. The Pramatha ganas were ready to charge as the army against the opponents- all swarmed around the Rath. Meanwhile, Sage Narada reached the Tripuras and tried his best to mend his ways, give back Indrapuri to Devas and avoid the worst ever battle in which the indestructible Tripuras would be destroyed along with the Three Demons as Maha Deva himself was approaching these Places with full preparation. Instead of talking peace, the Demons alerted their vast armies, and prepared for turning their defensive positions to that of an offence. On the instruction of Shankara Deva, Indra took his enormous army and attacked Tripura. As the Deva Sena made a highly offensive assault in full force, what with the revenge and frustration experienced by them for long as they were out of power as also owing to the excellent backing of Maheshwara, they seized the best part of Tripuras. While quite a few Danavas sought to escape for their lives through the exit gates of Tripuras, Pramatha ganas calculated that the enemies would try to sneak out at those points and butchered thousands of Danavas. The remaining Danavas inside the Trinagaris were utterly confused by contradictory shouts that Taraka died or Shiva was defeated. In that melee, a strong contingent of Danavas quickly regrouped their men and material to make offensive attacks under the leadership of Vidyunmali and Maya. Ganeswara divided Tripuras in three regions as Nandeswara was attacking Vidyunmali, while he was in position against Maya. Meanwhile, Vidyunmali threw a 'Parigha' on Nandi who was hurt and the enraged three 'Parshadaganas' named Ghantaakarna, Shankukarna and Mahakaal retaliated; they assumed the Forms of Ganeswara and assailed Vidyunmali by making the roars of lions. Even while the Parswaganas were about to leap on Vidyunmali, the hurt Nandikeswara hurled a Rudra Shakti on the demon who fell down like a mountain. There was utter silence among Danavas who were stunned and retreated. But, the highly cunning and crafty Mayasura chased the Ganas of Ganeswara to divert attention of his own men from the fallen Vidyunmali to the Ganesha ganas. Mayasura created rains of Agni, crocodiles, snakes, huge mountains, lions, tigers, trees, black deers, eight-legged 'Sharabhas' / a species of oversized deer, torrential rain and powerful sand storms. As Taraka came into the battle field, Devas too appeared in full force, including Yamaraja, Varuna, Bhaskara, Kartikeya heading a Deva Sena of a Crore, with Indra, Shanaishchara, Chandra, and Rudras. The 'Maayavi' Mayasura created several Wells full of herbal juices for invigoration and Danavas were in high spirits as their body strength increased manifold. But Keshava took the form of 'Vrishabha' and drank up the juice along with Devas and dried up the wells and Devas occupied the Tripuras finally. Mayasura and other Daityas were forced to hide in the Sea. That was the decisive moment when there was an all-out battle on the seashores. Shankara divided the 'Tridevamaya' arrow into three parts and released it at the Pushya Yoga time when Tripuras were destroyed in one go. Devas then went ecstatic and the huge shouts of Victory to Maha Deva resounded across the Sky from where Gandharvas and Kinnaras sang hymns of praises, Apsaras danced and Maharshis recited Vedas and Shiva Stotras. Brahma praised Parama Shiva in a chorus.

ii) Ganesha Purana:

Tripurasura performs severe tapasya to Brahma Deva who directed to invoke Ganesha- The pleased Ganesha and grants ability to control three lokas, Brahma-Vishnu- Shiva Lokas too. Brahma directed Tripurasura to construct a Ganesha Temple by installing a Ganesha Pratima made of Kashmiri stones. The Asura then built Ganeshapura in the state of Assam in Bharata Desha and picked up popularity as Tripura sthaana. The Asura then invoked Ganesha with Veda Mantras, as the Lord was pleased with the unprecedented devotion of Tripurasura and granted the boon of Trailokyaadhipaty as also the control of Brahma Loka- Vaikuntha and even of Kailasa! Having instantly occupied Bhuloka with no resistance, imprisoned all the Tapasvis, spread hatred for Svaahaakara-Svadahaakara- Vashtkaara, Vedaadhyayana and Sadaachaara; he appointed Bhimakanya Daitya as the Governor in Bhu loka. He brought Pataladi Seven Lokas of Atala-Vitala-Sutala-Rasaatala-Talaatala-Mahatala and Patala too, bodily enjoyed Naga kanyas ; he appointed Vajradanta daitya as the Governor for local administration. Then he attacked Svarga loka and subdued Indra. Tripurasura then proceeded to Brahma Loka and even before his awareness, Brahma hid himself inside the lotus stalk that emerged from the Vishnu naabhi and having imprisoned Tapasvis. Vaikuntha was the next target where Vishnu Deva who was conveniently absent there. Tripurasura then appointed Chanda and Prachanda- his manasa putras as his chiefs in Brahma and Vishnu Lokas respectively. He proceeded to Kailasa Mountain and by the his own 'baahu bala' or the strength of his own hands shook the mountain and made it mobile! Devi Parvati embraced Lord Shiva out of awe and wonder. Shiva confronted the asura and asked as to what would he like to do. The Asura asked Shiva to donate the Kailasa Mountain so that he would be free for riding the mountain'; Maha Deva smiled and thought that after all the Asura was short lived and agreed and as such moved out of the Mountain along with Pramadh Ganas, Devi Parvati and the Temple there atop too. Then Maha Ganesha assumed the form of a Dvija named Kalaadhara and complimented Tripurasura for his magnificent accomplishments of life which never heard of in the past-present or future! The Asura enquired of the Vidvan as what was his specialisation since he called himself a vidvan. Kaladhara replied: Pareshaam sampadam drushtvaa kim syaattama Suradvisha, vinaayaatte prasannoham kalayaa te dadaami vai/ Kaancham raajatham loham Tripuram shara samdhitam, rama tatra sthirayo Daitya chirakaalam yathaa sukham/ Abhedayam devagandharvairmaanushairuragairapi, kalpitaarthapradam tattai kaamagam kaamadam shubham/ Asura! Of what avail could be the wealth of Lokas and their temporary commandership. I am offering you three permanent Tri Puras made of gold-silver and steel. This should bestow permanent Lordship to the three puras for lasting sukha prapti for your total content-ment. These Three Puras are indestructible by Deva-Gandharva-Manushyas and as such your life as also that of your followers ought to be a lasting sailing on the flows of bliss! So asserting and handing over the three arrows with which to attack even Parama Shiva while utilising three arrows! Tripurasura was fully submerged in Ganesha Maya thus! Then Tripurasura then gave return gifts to Kaladhara viz. ten villages, cows, high value vastras, and jewellery. As Kaladhara left for his ashram, Tripurasara still felt that the gifts given to the Brahmana notwithstanding, a more precious gift ought to be given to him for the Tripuras made of gold-silver-metal with which to attack even Paramashiva. He declared to the Brahmana: Shankaram kinkaram manye na cha devataah, aanayitvaa pradasyaami taam Murtim dvijapungava/ Brahmanaagra! I am of the strong faith and belief that Shankara is the singular Parama Deva unparalleled. And I shall soon gift you such a Chintamani Ganesha Murti which Shiva himself had been venerating! As Brahmana Kaladhara, as Ganesha himself in the form of left the fortress of Tripurasura, the Asura sent his ‘chaturangani’ soldiers by walk-horsebacks-elephants and warring -fit chariots to bring the idol of Chintamani Ganesha from Kailasa. There followed a severe battle of the Asura sena with Pramatha ganas of Shiva sena. As the asurasena was unable to resist the defence of Shiva ganas, Tripuraasura himself reached and challenged Shiva himself. Even as the soldiers of Tripura were shattered, the asura utilised vaarunastra and Shiva retaliated by using vaayavyastra; in further retaliation the asura made the prayoga of agneyastra while Shiva utilised parjanyastra but as a result of the preceeding agneyastras emerged a sky high vikruta svarupa purusha and Shiva sena fled away out of fright for life. Meanwhile Devi Parvati who was closely following the proceedings of the battle got worried and left for the solace of her father Himavanta. Kartikeya who accompanied Shiva to the battle front as well as Shiva himself were worried about the safety of Devi Parvati and thus concluded the battle. Meanwhile instead of chasing Shiva sena got wise and decided to somehow steal the Idol of Chintamani Ganesha from the Temple and retreated.

A brooding Parama Shiva looked back at the just concluded high drama and the resultant loss of Chintamani Ganesha idol which was worshipped by the self, Brahmarshi Narada appeared on the scene and Shiva gave a review of the just concluded events. Narada warmed up Maha Deva by revealing the magnificence of the former: Maha Deva! You are Sarvgjna, Sarva Vidya Swaami, Sarveshvara, Sarvakarta, Sarvamukha swarupi, Sarvaharta, Sarva niyanta, Sarva samardha, Shadaishvarya sampanna [viz. Yuddha praveenata, Sarva netra, Trupti, Adyantarahita, Aluptashakti, Swatantrata, and Ananta Shakti are the Shadaishvaryas as given in Shiva and Kurma Puranas]. Yet, You had not performed Ganesha Puja formally and hence this present defeat with Tripurasura! If only you disallow the free movement of Tripuraasura among the three cities of TRI PURA by using a single arrow unified into one single arrow, Mahishasura’s extermination would be possible and you should win the battle hands down! As advised as per Narada, Maheshwara meditated Ganesha for hundred years and the latter responded with his darshan with Pancha Mukhas representing Pancha Bhutas of Bhumi-Water-Agni-Air-and Sky as also Pancha Tanmatras of Rasa-Rupa- Gandha- Sparsha-Shabdas, Pancha Jnaanendriyas and Pancha Karmendriyas besides the creation of Gandharva-Yaksha-Pitara-Manushya-Devarshi- Deva Gana- Brahma-Indra-Rudra- Vasu-Sadhya and Charaachara Jeevas, besides Trigunas of Satvika-Rajasika-Taamasika gunas and Srishtithi- Sthiti-Samhaara-Tirodhaanas of Kaala maana! Maha Ganesha was pleased and bestowed the Maha Mantra ‘GA’ to Shiva ; He assured that with this Maha Mantra, Shiva should be able to destroy the Tripuraasura!]

As Shri Rama was extremely agitated with the disappearance of his beloved Devi Sita and as was being realised that even Gods were not reacting positively to help him in his vexatious searchings to trace her whereabouts he got exhausted physically and exasperated psychologically, he resolved to devastate the delinquent Rakshasaas and as also the non -proactive and non cooperative involvement of celestials like Deva-Gandharvas. He picked up his dhanush aimed at ever irrevocable arrows ready to act like Kalpaantakaala Rudra Deva to burn off the universe. The most frightened Lakshmana like bhakta Prahlada at the appearance of Bhagavan Narasimha made all out endeavors to cool down Shri Rama. He said: Arya! [Ref Essence of Valmiki Ayodhya Ramayana-Sarga Twelve: Yayati, the son of Nahusha and his wife Viraja, was a famed Emperor who defeated all the Kings of the World and married Devayani the daughter of Asura Guru Shukracharya, besides Sharmishtha the daughter of Vishvaparya, a Rakshasa King. Indra was pleased to gift Yayati a Divine Chariot with seven powerful horses with which he traversed the world and divided his Empire into seven divisions to distribute it among five of his sons. A Maharshi gave a boon that if any of his sons could agree to exchange their youth to his old age then he could secure a fresh lease of youth. His eldest son Yadu from Devayani refused and so did others excepting Sharmishtha's son Puru who readily agreed. Yayati took over Puru's youth and enabled him travel around to unravel earthly pleasures for long. But finally returned discovering that the ephemeral joys of the world were endless like Agni in a Homa kunda assuming larger and larger proportions as long as ghee is served and no human would be satisfied with food, gold, ornaments or women. By so realising, he returned his youth to Puru and took to Vanaprastha or retirement. That was how he slipped down from the experiences of swarga but descended down into the company of 'Saadhu Pungavas' or of Groups of Virtue and Enlightenment!]

Maharṣayo vasiṣṭhas tu yaḥ pitur naḥ purohitaḥ, ahnā putraśataṁ jajñe tathaivāsyā punar hatam/ Rama! Did not our dear late father's Kula Purohita Maharshi Vasishtha had lost his hundred sons in the hands of Brahmarshi Vishvamitra!

[Ref Essence of Valmiki Bala Ramayana Sargas Fifty Nine and Sixty as follows:

Shatananda Maharshi addressing Rama Lakshmanas continued that Vishvamitra took pity on the King Trishanku in the form of chandala and gave an assurance that he should most certainly reach swarga with his mortal body. Then he instructed his disciples to collect and arrange for the required material for yajna kaarya. He further asked them to invite co-brahmanas to join the yajna including Vasishtha kumaras who heckled Trishanku and cursed him to become a chandala. Vishvamitra shishyaas likewise invited all, but Vasishtha Sishyaas were reported to have stated angrily as follows: kṣatriyo yājako yasya caṇḍālasya viśeṣataḥ, katham sadasi bhoktāro havis tasya surarṣayaḥ/ brāhmaṇā vā mahātmāno bhuktvā caṇḍālabhojanam, katham svargaṁ gamiṣyanti viśvāmitreṇa pālitaḥ/ 'A Chandala desires to perform the yajna and a Kshatriya would be the Aacharya. In such yajna, how could pure brahmanas consume the 'havishaanna'! Be that as it may, how indeed a kshatriya turned chandala be despatched to swarga by another kshatriya turned brahmana, that too with the chandaala's mortal body!' Having heard this insinuating remarks of Vasishtha Kumaras, Vishvamitra fumed like fire and declared: yad dūṣayanty aduṣṭam mām tapa ugraṁ samāsthitam, bhasmībhūtā durātmāno bhaviṣyanti na saṁśayaḥ/ I am right now in severe tapasya and am expected to be peaceful without anger and such mental aberrations; yet I am constrained to say that whosoever evil minded invitees to my yagna talked disparagingly about me and the yajna being proposed be surely be converted as heaps of human ash sooner or later; further in their following births, they should be born as chandalas and roam around begging with frightening forms. Having stated thus Vishvamitra could state nothing more and kept quiet!

Shatananda Muni continued his narration to Rama Lakshmanas about the subdued anger against Vasishtha Kumaras and addressed on his introductory speech to the Sages who arrived in response to his yagnya karya with the express objective of despatching Ikshvaku Raja Trishanku to swarga with the latter's mortal body. Then the Munis at the conference grouped together that Maharshi Vishvamitra was a known and learned Sage but a highly volatile and angry person and hence what ever he directed by dutifully executed without doubts and hesitations. Thereafter the yagna commenced and Vishvamitra was the ‘Atharvyu’ the principal initiator-conductor of the yajna. As the ‘havishaanna’ was offered to respective Devatas, none of the Devas turned up to accept. Then the fuming Vishvamitra yelled in great anger: paśya me tapaso vīryam svārjitasya nareśvara, eṣa tvām svaśarīreṇa nayāmi svargam ojaśā/ duṣprāpaṁ svaśarīreṇa divaṁ gaccha narādhipa, svārjitaṁ kiṁ cid apy asti mayā hi tapasaḥ phalam, rājāṁs tvam tejasā tasya saśarīro divaṁ vraja/ Nareshvara Trishanku! Now you must vision the mighty outcome of my life long tapasya and now get ready to leave for swarga with your mortal body! Then Shatananda exclaimed to Rama Lakshmanas that King Trishanku had actually reached swarga with his mortal body! devalokagataṁ dṛṣtvā triśaṅkuṁ pākaśāsanāḥ, saha sarvaiḥ suragaṇair idaṁ vacanam abravīt/ triśaṅko gaccha bhūyas tvam nāsi svargakṣtālayaḥ, guruśāpahato mūḍha pata bhūmim avākṣirāḥ/ evam ukto mahendreṇa triśaṅkur apatat punaḥ, vikrośamānas trāhīti viśvāmitraṁ tapodhanam/ tac chrutvā vacanaṁ tasya krośamānasya kauśikaḥ, roṣam āhārayat tīvraṁ tiṣṭha tiṣṭheti cābravīt/ As Trishanku had literally reached swarga, he visioned Mahendra seated along with various Devatas. Indra got shocked and furious shouting that there would never ever be a place in swarga and kicked him down. Trishanku yelled ‘traahi traahi’ in utter desperation while rapidly slipping down the thick clouds. Vishvamitra shouted at Trishanku with hysterics and commanded him to stay pur right there. The Vishvamitra looked up at the Rishimandala on the high skies and materialised Sapta Rishis and brand new nakshatras and declared angrily: Anyamindram karishyaami loko vaayasyaadanindrakah, daivataanyami sa krodhaat srashtam samupachakrame/ I will rather create another Indra or a new swarga loka without Indra! So saying with assertion Vishvamitra manifested fresh devataas! As the Maha Muni so decided: down on earth, samasta deva-asura-rishi groups made an appeal politely: ayam rājā mahābhāga guruśāpapakṣataḥ, saśarīro divaṁ yātum nārhaty eva tapodhana/ Maharshi Vishvamitra! King Trishanku was cursed by Guru Putras to assume ‘chandalatva’ and as such not qualified to attain swarga as a mortal. Vishvamitra retalliated to say that his statements and decisions should not be falsified ever! Therefore: Maha Raja Trishanku should hereafter enjoy the pleasures of swarga loka for ever; I have already manifested fresh nakshatra mandali for ever till pralaya; like wise the totality of divine material elsewhere too would exist in tact. May this parallel arrangement be in position without disturbance.!’ The Munis collected at the Vishvamitra Yajna was greatly surprised at the unforgettable happenings and truly admired the outstanding ability in creating a new swarga itself on the mid skies!

Duhkeshvanudvignamanaah sukhesu vigataspruhah, veetaraaga bhaya krodhah sthitadheer-muniruchyate/ Getting terribly agitated while facing insurmountable impediments and getting extremely overjoyed by very joyous experiences is the negation of an equanimous mind and the ability to neutralise the emotions. One’s capacity to neutralise the inner emotions of pleasures and pains alike is the State of ‘Sthitapaginantva’! Sorrows and joys are the consequences of discontent and of success. The vicious circle of discontentment leads to disappointment which itches on the fear of failure. This creates irritability, fear, anguish, anger, and back to dissatisfaction of life. Sadhakas realise that without Shiva’s approval even an ant or insect would not do harm. And ‘Shivaagjna’ is on account of one’s own doings of the previous births and of the ongoing one, besides the estimated future foretellings too. The Karma Sutra explains: Avashyamanubhoktavyam sthitam karma shubhamashubham/ or our own ‘karma phala’ or the sweetness or sourness of the fruit is reciprocated. That firm belief of hope or disappointment as the case that may be, is the ‘Atma Swarupa’ which certainly not is the body but the Self Consciousness of the concerned body which is clean and transparent and indestructible and eternal. Dhaayato Vishayaan Pumsah sangasteshoopajaayate, sangaatsanjaayate kaamah kaamaat krodhobhi jaayate, sangaatsanjaayate kaamah kaamaat krodhobhijaayate/ Krodhaadbhavati sammohah sammohat smriti vibhramah, smriti bhramshaah buddhi naashah buddhi naashaat pranashyati/ Every human being is subject to desires; if the desires are not fulfilled, there would be disappointment and eventual frustration; the resultant grief develops anguish and instability of mind ; this further shapes up as anger coupled with wrong judgment and discretion which results in further failures! Such is the impact of the proverbial ‘arishad vargas’ or the six enemies of human beings viz. Kaama krodha lobha moha mada matsaras or excessive desires, anger, selfishness and avarice, infatuation, ego and jealousy. Raaga dvesha niyuktaistu vishaanindriyaisharan, aatmavashyarvidheyaatmaa prasaadamadhigacchati/ Prasaade sarva dukkhaanaam haani rasyopajaayate, prasanna chetasohyaashu buddhih parya patishthate/ If one is able to control desires and dislikes, then there can be regulation of mind and least disturbance of peace. As Shri Rama reacted to the highly provocative concluding remarks by brother Lakshmana took up by his powerful forearms his ‘dhanush baanas’ with anger and anguish alike and proceeded to the out skirt surroundings of his ashram resuming their search of Devi Sita once again towards the mountain top not too far. Encountering broken boulders and frightening caves the ‘parvata shikharaas’, Rama Lakshmanas made a systematic search for traces of Devi Sita as dead or alive. dadarśa patitaṁ bhūmau kṣatajārdraṁ jaṭāyuṣam, taṁ dṛṣṭvā giriśṛṅgābhaṁ rāmo lakṣmaṇam abravīt, anena sītā vaidehī bhakṣitā nātra saṁśayaḥ/ gr̥dhrarūpam idaṁ vyaktaṁ rakṣo bhramati kānanam, bhakṣayitvā viśālākṣmī āste sītāṁ yathāsukham, enaṁ vadhiṣye dīptāgrair ghorair bāṇair ajihmagaiḥ/ Then in the nearby distance a huge Pakshi was lying hurt with streams of blood oozing out and fell almost dead. Lakshmana then suspected a huge rakshasa was lying there having eaten off Devi Sita’s flesh and blood. Rama with ready ferocity shouted at Lakshmana that he should kill the rakshasa at once and instantly raised his ‘dhanur baanaas’. On their stepping forward, they heard the pitiable and extremely low voice of Jatayu: yāṁ oṣadhim ivāyuṣmann anveṣasi mahāvane, sā devī mama ca prāṇā rāvaṇenobhayaṁ hṛtam/ tvayā virahitā devī lakṣmaṇena ca rāghava, hriyamāṇā mayā dṛṣṭā rāvaṇena balīyasā/ sītāṁ abhyavapan no 'haṁ rāvaṇas ca raṇe mayā, vidhvaṁsitarathacchatraḥ pātito dharaṇītale/ ‘Aayushmaan! What ever you both are keenly searching the most precious ‘oushadhi’ or the herbal medicine Devi Sita was being forcibly abducted by Mahaasura Ravana and instantly I recognised her and ran after his ‘vimana’ and attacked his chariot at once. I succeeded in destroying his chariot, its ‘dhwaja’ and hurt the charioteer mercilessly too. In fact, the charioteer attacked my wings but I had cut off his head rolling down. Yet Ravana flew in air holding Devi Sita in his tight grip of his arms and sliced of my both wings and ran away on high skies.’ On hearing this sordid narration of Jatayu while breathing last, Rama put down his ‘dhanur banas’ and so did Lakshmana. But Rama fell down on his knees and cried away: rājyād bhramśo vane vāsaḥ sītā naṣṭā hato dvijaḥ, īdṛśīyaṁ mamālakṣmīr nirdahed api pāvakam/ saṁpūrṇam api ced adya pratareyaṁ mahodadhim, so 'pi nūnaṁ mamālakṣmyā viśuṣyet saritāṁ patiḥ/ nāsty abhāgyataro loke matto 'smin sacarācare, yeneyaṁ mahatī prāptā mayā vyasanavāgurā/ Lakshmana! I am shorn of kingdom, thrown off to forests, and Devi Sita has now learnt as has been forcibly abducted and even the kindest Pakshi Raja Jataayu is dead! What kind of the series of my misfortunes are faced by me as burnt off in devouring flames! If I seek to swim in a maha samudra, then that huge ocean too should get dried up as a cemetery! In this ‘charaachara jajjat’, could there be a worse and most unfortunate human like me sinking away deeply and rapidly! ayaṁ piṭṛvayasyo me gr̥dhrarājo jarānviṭaḥ, śete vinihato bhūmau mama bhāgyaviparyayāt/ Even this gigantic Grudhraa Raja the dearest friend of my father is now lying dead due entirely my personal misfortune'. So crying away, Shri Rama knelt down and fell on ground heartbroken.

May I be of any help in creating an ashram for you or to protect Devi Sita in the absence of you and Lakshmana!’ So saying Jatayu offered any kind of service to Ramas wholeheartedly’. [Ref the previous Sarga Fourteen] Rama further stated: mamāyaṁ nūnam artheṣu yatamāno vihaṅgamaḥ, rākṣasena hataḥ saṁkhye prāṇāms tyajati dustyajān/ Brother Lakshmana! This Maha Garuda Pakshi has certainly risked its life as of his own responsibility on my behalf. Its breathing is halting and is precariously critical. Then Rama addressed Jatayu: If only you could even whisper to me, what is Sita’s condition and why did he decide to forcibly kidnap her! What was the cruel form of the Rakshasa and where is his place of residence! Please reply! Then Jatayu replied in almost inaudible and low voice: sā hṛtā rākṣasendrena rāvaṇena vihāyasā, māyām āsthāya vipulām vātadurdinasamkulām/ pariśrāntasya me tāta pakṣau chittvā niśācaraḥ, sītām ādāya vaidehīm prayāto dakṣiṇā mukhaḥ/ Raghu nandana: Duratma Rakshasa Raja Ravana assumed the ‘maya’ - mesmerism-and created a sweep of sand-dune and escaped with Devi Sita even as he was in a state of frenzy. I resisted his effort relentlessly fighting and forcibly taken her away towards the southern direction. Raghu Nandana! My vital energies are closing to tick any further and my eye’s vision is blurring. But Rama! na ca tvayā vyathā kāryā janakasya sutām prati, vaidehyā raṁsyase kṣiprām hatvā taṁ rākṣasaṁ raṇe/ asaṁmūḍhasya gṛdhrasya rāmaṁ pratyānubhāṣataḥ, āsyāt susrāva rudhiram mriyamāṇasya sāmīṣam/ putro viśravasah sāksād bhrātā vaiśravaṇasya ca, ity uktvā durlabhān prāṇān mumoca patageśvaraḥ/ never worry about the welfare of Janka nandini Devi Sita. Then Rama addressed Lakshmana! This ever grateful Pakjshi Raja appears to have lived in this dandakaranya for several years now despite the pressure of Rakshasaas and had his glorious death. paśya lakṣmaṇa gṛdhro ’yam upakārī hataś ca me, sītām abhyavapano vai rāvaṇena balīyasā/ gṛdhrarājyaṁ parityajya pītṛpaitāmahaṁ mahat, mama hetor ayaṁ prāṇān mumoca patageśvaraḥ/ Dear brother! Do trust me that my gratitued for Jatayu is comparable to my love for King Dasharatha. Sumitra nandana! Please fetch me dried tree roots and keeping a fire pot on my head I shall perform dahana samskara to the body of this glorious Gruddhra Raja! Having stated tearfully, Rama addressed the body of Jatayu: yā gatir yajñāśīlānām āhitāgneś ca yā gatiḥ, aparāvartinām yā ca yā ca bhūmipradāyinām/ mayā tvaṁ samanujñāto gaccha lokān anuttamān, gṛdhrarāja mahāsattva saṁskṛtaś ca mayā vraja/ Maha balashaali Grudhra Raja! Mahatma Jatayu by this daaha samskaara to attain the well deserved sadgati praapti.’

[Vishleshana on Dahana samskara for human beings is vividly explained vide Sarga Seventy Six of Essence of Valmiki Ayodhya Ramayana: ‘You the Pretaatma’ as enclosed with the ‘kavacha’ or the shield of Agni Deva who is merely turning only your body parts to ashes but not your true self which indeed is everlasting. Hence Agni is merely clearing the mess of your body! Agni Deva! you may consume the deadbody along with his heart, pancha koshas or Five Sheaths of the body called Annamaya (Physical Energy), Praanamaya (Vital Energy), Manomaya (Mental Faculty), Vigyanamaya (Buddhi or Sharpness of Discrimination) and Ananda maya (Bliss) only but thereafter kindly despatch the ‘Jeevatma’ - Inner Being- safely to the Loka of His forefathers the Pitru Loka. Agni Deva, when you render the jeevatma

fully rid of the memories of the erstwhile life, then That becomes rendered fit with a fresh form subject to the will of Devas. Preta swarupa! Let your vision see Surya Deva, your breath to Vayu Deva! As per your destiny and the fund of your 'sukrita phala', you may reach swarga, or back to earth or waters. In case you are destined to return as vegetation, then you shall do precisely the same swarupa once again. - Rig Veda 10-16.-3. Referring to the stanza : Suryam chakshurgacchatu vaatamaatmaa, dyocha gaccha prithiveem cha dharmanaa, apo vaa gaccha yaditram te hitam, oushadheeshu pratrim tishthaa shareerereh/ as explained , Chhandogya Upanishad 5.10.6 explains: Abhram bhutwaa megho bhavati megho bhutwaa pravarshati taiha veehiyavaa oshadhivanaspatyah tila-maasha iti jaayant, ato vai khalu durnispra pataram, yo yohyannam atti yo retaah sinchati, tad bhuya eva bhavati/ (In the further travel of the Soul from white clouds to thick black clouds to rains, the same is born as paddy, barley, herbs, sesmum, black pulses and so on. Now, the release of the concerned paddy or pulse is also destined as per the time of its release from the shell to kernel; similarly the cycle of food intake from an insect to a bird or to a reptile to an animal or human being is destined likewise). The next stanzas 6.1.22 -23: Ajobhaaga stapasa tam tapasva-- and Ayam vai tvamsmaadabhi/ are as addressed to Jaataveda: 'Agni Deva! having burnt off the body totally, may the physical aspects of the human being been burnt off totally, may the subtle body as the Jeevatma be carried to the wide world of the Devas of virtue]

There after the dahana samskaara, the Rama brothers had faithfully covered dried leave heaps and having dug up earth deep placed the body remains and provided a neat covering paved the area. There after, they had sincerely performed pinda daana by reciting the appropriate mantras besides executed jalaanjali tarpanas in favour of the peaceful soul. There after Rama Lakshmanas stepped forward for 'Sitaanveshana' in all earnestness.

Speedily seeking to cross then specific part of the thick inaccessible jungle, named as ‘kounchaaranya’, still brooding the irreparable loss of Devi Sita from the cruel clutches of Ravanaśura, they came across a dark and unentereble deep cave full of pitch darkness and winessed a strange and readily frightening species of creation. .Bhayadaam alpasatvaanaam bheebhatsaam roudradarshanaam, lambodareem trrkshna damshttraam karaaleem purushatvacham/Bhakyanteem mrigaan bheemaan vikataam muktamoordhajaam, avaiksataam tu tou tatra bhraatarou Rama Lakshmanou/ That bizzare and wierd specimen of creation with fiery looks and terrifying roars was of huge and protruded belly and thick body hides . But the Rakshasa’s hand reach was enormous nearing very long distances of miles. This Rakshasa was known as Kabandha as his stomach was shaped like an enormous pot. The Rakshasa approached Rama Lakshmanas and blocked their way. *sa mahābāhur atyartham prasārya vipulau bhujau, jagrāha sahitāv eva rāghavau pīḍayan balāt/ khaḍginau dṛḍhadhanvānau tigmatejau mahābhujau, bhrātarau vivaśam prāptau kṛṣyamāṇau mahābalau/*At that time, the Maha Baahu Rakshasa had stopped the movement of Rama Lakshmanas by extending his enormous hand reach and encircled them drawing them towards his gigantic pot like belly by vigorous force and strength. Both Rama Lakshmanas were nodoubt were equipped with long, strong and mighty swords on their strong arms. Maha bali Lakshmana was however appeared to have somewhy slipped his grip of the sword and shouted Rama for help desperately/ Uvaachah vishannah san raghavam Raghavaanujah, pasyamaam vivasham veera raakshasaya vashamgatam/Mayaikena tu niriyuktah parimucchyasva raghava, maam hi bhutabalim datvaa palaayasva yathaasukham/ Rama's young brother Lakshmana got really concerned then that he was slipping his grip away under the control of the rakshasa. Raghunandana! Do please help me from the strong and tight grip of the rakshasa ; lest I might be a casualty and sacrifice to this bhuta rakshasa. Then Shri Rama had Lakshmana cooled down and assured that due to small and momentary slip of Lakshmana's brave and heavy grip could never witness a defeat for a great veera like him! Then Kabandha them both heckled both thunderously: 'you foolish 'manavas'! Who are you both! I am fortunate to spot both of you standing like great heros with 'dhanush baanaas' and playfull swords! Worry not, I would relish you both of you! I am extremely hungry too.' As Kabandha said so, Shri Rama addressed Lakshmana: 'we have passed through the hardest lives so far and faced several upheavals and now the absence of Devi Sita has capped up all these crises of existence; are you noticing that 'kaala chakra' has been constantly hounding us with the upheavals and visissitudes. Now it is becoming more and more impossible to resist the flow of misfortunes.' Having thus yielded to the pull of 'kaala maana', Rama Lashmanas by them selves straightened and pulled up their grit and inner selves once again with extraordinary willpower!

By the enormous force of their sheer grit and decisiveness and of mutual consultations, Rama Lakshmanas severed both the mighty shoulders of Kabandha

Having noticed that both Rama Lakshmanas were miserably caught in his long and strong hands, Rakshasa Kabandha tauntingly heckled the brothers: 'Kshatriya shiromani Rajakumaras! As I am hungry you are awaiting my green signal to die now for me! Come near to my mouth as you have been finally despatched by Gods and your intelligence has failed! Kabandha Rakshasa were suddenly severed, he shouted at high pitch as though there were sudden cloud bursts reverberating the ‘dasha dishaas’ or ten directions of the universe. Then as the Rakshasa fell down to earth, even he was bleeding excessively and suffering excruciating pain, he enquired of Rama Lakshmanas: ‘Maha Veeraas! who are you both! Then Lakshmana introduced Shri Rama as the great son of King Dasharatha and that that he was his faithful younger brother. Mother and the dearest queen Devi Kaikeyi stalled Shri Rama’s rajyabhishaka and as per our father’s directive, he had been undergoing forest life and his wife Devi Sita too accompanied her husband. Unfortunately a Maha Asura had succeeded in abducting Devi Sita a maha pativrata. Now you Rakshasa! Who are you! How is it that your stomach is hanging above your face and thighs! Despite the pain of his severed shoulders, the Rakshasa was reminded of Indra’s curse and replied: Purusha simhaas! My shoulders were my unusual hindrances and fortunately they have just fallen to dust! Nara shreshtha Shri Rama! I should now describe as to how had I my vikrita swarupa or the strange body formation had occurred!

Kabandha narrates his ‘atma katha’ the autobiography to Rama Lakshmanas stating that in the distant past he was a Maha Rakshasa of notoriety terrifying Maharshis. As the Rakshasa assumed a huge and intolerable form, sought to terrify a Rishi named Sthulashira, the Rishi was angry and cursed him to assume that hideous form for ever: tenāham uktaḥ prekṣyaivam ghoraśāpābhidhāyinā, etad eva nṛśaṁsam te rūpam astu vigarhitam/ sa mayā yācitāḥ kruddhaḥ śāpasyānto bhaved iti, abhiśāpakṛtasyeti tenedaṁ bhāṣitaṁ vacaḥ/ yadā chittvā bhujau rāmas tvām dahed vijane vane, tadā tvām prāpsyase rūpam svam eva vipulaṁ śubham/ ‘Rakshasa! You continue this very nasty swarupa for ever till you die. Then Kabandha was afraid of the consequent form and requested for relief and then the Rishi forevisioned to say that only when Rama Lakshmanas the epic heros should get caught by you and then finally slice off both of your shoulders, then you would attain ‘mukti’. As Kabandha since became the vikrita swarupa as a result of the Maha Munis’s ‘shaapa’, the Rakshasa was mellowed down and undertook severest possible tapasya to Brahma Deva. In turn, Brahma was pleased and granted the Rakshasa’s wish for longevity. indrakopād idam rūpam prāptam evam raṇājire/ aham hi tapasogreṇa pitāmaham atoṣayam, dīrgham āyuh sa me prādāt tato mām vibhramo ’spr̥ṣat dīrgham āyur mayā prāptam kim me śakraḥ kariṣyati, ity evam buddhim āsthāya raṇe śakram adharṣayam/ Then Kabandha having secured Brahma Deva’s blessing for longevity, his demonic instinct was puffed up and attacked Lord Devendra himself. Tasya baahu pramukttena vajrena Shataparnaa, savuthnee cha shiraschaiva shareere sampaveshitam/ Devendra then threw away his peerless ‘vajraayudha’ and as a result, Maha Rakshasa Kabandha’s lower body portion got upside down! anāhāraḥ katham śakto bhagnasakthiśiromukhaḥ, vajreṇābhihataḥ kālām sudīrgham api jīvītum/ evam uktas tu me śakro bāhū yojanam āyatau, prādād āsyam ca me kuḥṣau tīkṣṇadamṣtram akalpayat/ Then I asked Indra: Deva Raja! Having thus narrated his ‘atma katha’, Kabandha then requested Rama Lakshmanas’s to help him with ‘daaha samskaara’ as he was dying of his torture of broken shoulders. He further assured to help him with significant clues in their further missions of life. Then Shri Rama informed Kabandha: rāvaṇena hṛtā sītā mama bhāryā yaśasvinī, niṣkrāntasya janasthānāt saha bhrātrā yathāsukham/ nāmamātram tu jānāmi na rūpam tasya rakṣasaḥ, nivāsam vā prabhāvam vā vayam tasya na vidmahe/ śokārtānām anāthānām evam viparidhāvatām, kāruṇyam sadṛśam kartum upakāre ca vartatām/ Kabandha! Where does he live is not yet known to me. But Devi Sita must be harassed by that maha rakshasa. If you could provide some clues about him, we should be thankful to you. Sandhi denotes the Principle of Truce, Tolerance and Coexistence. Vigraha refers to conflict of similar forces leading to balance of power. Yaana suggests travel or movement of forces for attack-aasana or tishtha the waiting period-dwidhidha of bheda bhaava or break up of friendship by similar forces of the enemies and finally 'samashraya' or the celebrations of victory of togetherness.

[Brief Vishleshana of Vaali-Sugrivas: Vaali had the distinction of defeating Ravanaasura besides the latter’s son Meghanaada. Devi Tara married Vaali. The background was that the father of Vaali Sugrivas was Vriksha Raja who once bathed in a nearby pond and was surprised himself to have a female form. At the same time, Indra and Surya Deva got infatuated with her and Vaali was born of Indra and Sugriva of Surya. Vaali made rigorous tapasya to Brahma and secured the boon of invincibility. Assuring thus about the search of Devi Sita by approaching Maha Vanara Sugriva and his outstanding Vaanara sena the great Monkey Brigade, the celestial voice of the departed Kabandha directed Rama Lakshmanas to proceed westward and follow the pleasing sight of flowery trees and huge sturdy trees of Jambu or rose apple, Panasa or Jack fruit, Mango, Kadali or Plantain, Tamala, Banyan, Plaksha, Rakta chandana or Rosewood, Neem, Fig, Saal, Banyan, Coconut, Deodhar, Chinar, Sandalwood, Teak, Bael and Ashvattha. While crossing the famed trees, they might enjoy the juicy fruits of the trees as well. Thus enjoying the grand Prakriti soundarya and its bountiful nature, Rama Lakshmanas crossed one forest to another reached Pampa's illustrious banks called Pushkarini. Pampa sarovara is situated to the east of the Matanga hill and to the west of the Rishyamukha hill and serves as a perennial source of water as the rain waters falling on these hills flow down to the sarovara. The water thus collected is free from gravel slippery slime and duck weeds. Thus, the water is crystal clear, sparkling, limpid, cool and delightful scented with lotus fragrance. The environs of the sarovara abound in forests is rich in flora and fauna includes Swans, Ducks, Kraunches, Ospreys and such other water birds. Fishes of rare variety like Vakratunda, Rohita Nalameena are found in plenty in the sarovara. Rama Lakshmanas! When you seek to catch the multi-coloured fishes, especially in the early evenings, the Sarovara gets profoundly fabulous of sweet smells of joy, coolness, healthy, and heart filling. Nara shreshthaas! The musical sounds of monkey group screeches get so pronounced as those of constant drubbings of ear drums. sāyāhne vicaran rāma viṭapi mālyadhārīṇaḥ, śītodakam ca pampāyām dṛṣtvā śokaṃ vihāsyasi/ sumanobhiḥ citāms tatra tilakān naktamālakān, utpalāni ca phullāni pañkajāni ca rāghava/ Shri Rama! In such glorious evenings when you pass by the banks of Pushkarini and its truly hearty walks, you should forget the remote heart beatings of Devi Sita viyoga even for a while. It is a local belief of pronouncement that the disciples of Matanga Maharshi tend to surrender to silence and peaceful tranquility of the natural surroundings. As the Matanga shishyaas collect flowers and fruits, then they get tired out and the sweating drops of their bodies seem to instantly turn as fresh and sweet smell flowers by the miracle of the Maharshi. Having crossed such spell binding occurrences in the forth arriving Matanga ashram, one could also witness there ahead the Punya Murti Tapasvini Shabari the embodiment of 'dharmaanushthaana'. Rama! Maha Saadhvi Shabari ought to be ever anxious for your darshana bhagya for a number of years now! Raghu nandana! He had blessed us after his death provided us a celestial vision and provided us the guidelines of how to search for Devi Sita his dear wife be secured again from the grip of Ravanaasura. Then the celestial vision further directed us to visit Shabari Ashram in the way. Danoh sakaashaat tatvena prabhaavam te mahatmanaam, kshutam pratyaksham icchhaami sandrushtam yadi manyase/ ‘Tapodhani Shabari! From the Celestial Kabandha himself, We decided to meet you definitely.’ Then Shabari replied: ‘Maha tejasvi Shri Rama! Do see and feel this fantastic and picturesque landscape popularly called ‘Matanga Vana’ where my ‘gurujanaas’ or groups of preceptors reside who are Paramatmachinta paraayanans who had purified themselves as Gayatri Upasakas to the core and are readied for ahutis. Shabari further described the most sacred ‘Vedi’ - raised platform named ‘Pratyakshthali’ where aged Maharshis do still Devataas with their own shaky and shivering hands. Do you notice the tejas or brilliance of this Vedi that spreads all over where the tapasvis who are physically weak yet by mere ‘smarana’ they could recall sapta samudras whose waters only are consumed and survived by them; even now, Rama Lakshmanas! You could taste their waters available on the vedi! Having waited for you for very very long, as you have been sensitised by me in detail about myself, my guru janas, this magnificent Matanga Vana and its natural splendour, my illustrious gurus and also about my own pitiable physical weakness, now may I seek your permission to leave and perform my ‘praana tyaga’. teṣāṃ icchāmy ahaṃ gantum samīpaṃ bhāvitātmanām, munīnām āśraṃmo yeṣāṃ ahaṃ ca paricāriṇī/ dharmiṣṭhaṃ tu vacaḥ śrutvā rāghavaḥ sahalakṣmaṇaḥ, anujānāmi gacchati prahṣṭavadano 'bravīt/ Indeed, have been the ‘charana daasi’ of these illustrious Maharshis, and with them as my evidence and gratitude, may I be allowed to collapse for far enticing paralokas welcomong me.’ As Shabari spoke likewise, Rama Lakshmanas were stilled motionless and whispered: How thrilling this!!

Tanu vaacha tato vaachah Shabareem shamshitavrataam, architoham tvayaa bhadreygacchha kaamam yathaa sukham/ 'Bhadre! You have given me unushal and memorable hospitality. Now, be blessed to reach higher lokaas for ever at once'!

Vishleshana on Shabari:

Shabari was a tribal girl curious to know what 'dharma' was all about and approached Matanga Maharshi at the foothills of Rishyamukha mountain; the Rishi accepted her as his student and ever since lived in his ashram teaching her in his service. As years passed by she became old walking with a stick and plucking berry fruits from the gardens of the ashram; meanwhile Matanga Muni achieved 'Maha Samaadhi' in 'padmaasana' posture, while assuring her to await the arrival of Shri Rama Lakshmanas. As the latter finally did arrive, she brought basketful of berry fruits and after biting and tasting the fruits only offered them to Rama and Lakshmana declaring to the world that sincere 'bhakti' would be the 'moksha maarga'; and thus the 'Shabari Ramayana' emphasizing Bhakti for Bliss. Rama gave the discourse to Shabari about the nine folded bhakti viz. 'Satsang' or affinity with followers of Truthful Virtue - 'Shravana' or hearing all about Dharma- 'Guru Seva' or Service and Following of a Guide- 'Japa' or constant repetition of the Sacred Name of Paramatma- 'Bhajana' or chorus singing in praise of the Lord as an expression in the public and selfless service to the society- and finally 'bhakti' or intense devotion without expectation recalling Bhagavad Gita's : Karmanyevaadhikaraste maa phaleshu kadaachana, maa karma heturbhuh maate sangostva karmani/ One has only the liberty to 'do' but never demand the return fruits about which one has no control. Yet never abstain from the performance surely expected of the person. you. 'Karma Phala' is as per the decision of the Almighty. What ever is decided as per destiny shall doubtless be awarded to the person concerned. Never hesitate to accept by way of self desire or by the misleading advice of the public. The very feeling of disappointment creates suspicion and self repudiation. This tends to lead to frustration which is the anti-thesis of contentment and thus further leads to a string of inabilities for further successes! That situation is tantamount to 'jadatva' or total lack of initiative!]

Rama expressed to Lakshmana that it led to purity of mind and it redoubled vigor and decisiveness in the mission of 'Sita-anveshana'! Nara-shreshtha! With such resolved mind, let us proceed to reach Rishyamooka Mountain and meet Sugreeva the Surya-amsha putra and his illustrious comrades. nityam vālibhayāt trastaś caturbhiḥ saha vānaraiḥ, abhitvare ca taṁ draṣṭuṁ sugrīvaṁ vānararṣabham, tadadhīnaṁ hi me saumya sītāyāḥ parimārgaṇam/ 'Merely out of fear of Vaali, Sugriva had thus been keeping himself along with four mighty hero assistance. There after, as Rama Lakshmana moved farther and sighted ranges of trees, birds and flowers with renewed and anticipation of discovering Devi Sita approached Pampa Sarovara. They bathed in the clear waters of Matanga Sarasa Kunda of the sarovara. Then both of them attained peace and sharp concentration. sa tām dṛṣṭvā tataḥ pampām rāmaḥ saumitriṇā saha, vilalāpa ca tejasvī kāmād daśarathātmajaḥ/ The outstanding scenic splendour of Pampa and its environs replete with heart rending atmosphere of quiet, provoked the feelings of Devi Sita's absence more intensely than ever inside Rama's inner consciousness. He then declared: sugrīvaṁ abhigaccha tvaṁ vānarendraṁ nararṣabha, ity uvāca punar vākyam lakṣmaṇam satyavikramam/ At that time, Satya paraakrami Shri Rama asserted: Nara Shreshtha Lakshmana! ESSENCE OF VALMIKI KISHKINDHA RAMAYANA

Translated and interpreted by V.D.N.Rao, Chennai

Preface

Every human being in 'Brahma Srishti' is selfish in gradations, being subject to desire- the resultant anger if unfulfilled, jealousy of others, avarice, and hatred. The sense of objectivity, patience, capacity of sufference, and bravery to fight are often honoured in breach than on observance. Passage of 'kaala maana' from the days of Harischandra to Shri Rama to Krishna to the even the present Kali Yuga tends to gradually distort the human psyche in phases from bad to worse. Almighty being the 'Antaratma' is but a mute spectator. As Rama then, yet being subject to human impulses, had the ability to fight them against the representation of 'Adharma' and 'Anyaya', as the bench mark of the then human. In similar conditions, other species in the next gradation were 'Vanaras' about whom is Kishkindha Ramayana all about, so ably picturised by the then contemporary Maharshi Valmiki still resurrected by the 'Taala Grandhaas'.

Vaanaras then were the alter ego of the species of Naraas. They had the representation of similar psyche as Manavas, of 'chanchala buddhi'. Yet the best of their gradation too generated Mahatmas, Buddhiman, Parakramis, and Dharma Sheelas. Vaali had sought to inherit the qualities of Indra having attained Brahmas boon of invincibility. Sugriva of Surya's qualities was an exceeding brain power and mastery in planning and ability to motivate others. Veera Anjaneya was unique in modesty, yet of brain- brawn- bravery besides dedication and devototion. Even as a youth, Angada had the grahana-dhaarana shakti, desha kaala jnaana, and the sense of gratitude. Being a female Vaanara, Tara Devi had the extraordinary capability to convince others, be it Vaali her husband preventing him not to venture a repeated challenge of Sugriva suspecting Shri Rama's friendship with Sugriva, or as Lakshmana who arrived at Kishkindha in fury as Rama Karya of Sitanveshana was delayed despite the rainy season was long over. Jambavan the Riksha Raja who since the times of 'Vaamanavataara' was such a symbol of bravery and dedication with the background of having made thousand 'parikramas' to the sky protruding magnitude of Vamana Deva! Like wise were the Vaanara Veeras like Shatabali, Sushena, Ahni Putra Neela, Suhotra, Gaja, Gavaksha, Mainda, Gandhamaadana and so on , each of them were the symbols of Virtue, Valour and above all of Commitment and dedication to Shri Rama the Yuga Purusha!

The Action Place of this Script was the concentration of Vaanara Veeras around Kishkindha, between Anjanaadri Parvata and Rishyamooka Parvata [near Hampi] being an unforgettable chapter of 'Rama-Aayana'. That was the place where Hanuman met Rama Lahshmanas as behested by Sugriva to make sure that they were not the spies of his brother Vaali, lifted them by his shoulders up to Rishyamooka and checked their antecedents.

Fortified by the blessings of HH Vijayendra Saraswati of Kanchi, I have been able to script the Essence of Valmiki Ramayana in four parts so far of Baala-Ayodhya-Aranya- and now the Kishkindha. Indeed, the ability and inspiration is His own as I happen to be the squirrel for the construction of Setu Bandhana with earnestness. Indeed, it is the trust that He has been reposing in us which inspires and encourages.

Introduction

Restrospective: Essences of Baala- Ayodhya-Aranya Valmiki Ramayana

Sarga One: On reaching Pampa Sarovara Rama was excited at its natural grandeur especially Sita's absence, Lakashmana solaces- as they approached Rishyamooka, Vanaras and Sugriva. [Vishleshana on Pampa Sarovara recalled from Sarga 71 of Valmiki Ramayana's Aranya Khanda]

Sarga Two: As Sugriva and follower vaanaraas were still wondering, Hanuman felt convinced and confident and directed Shri Rama Lakshmanas to approach their head Sugriva the fugitive King of Vaanaras.

Sarga Three: Hanuman reached Rama Lakshmanas in a Tapasvi form, complemented Rama Lakshmanas by their appearance as Hanuman was pleased;

[1. Vishleshana on Anjaneya on his origin and illustrative stutis- a ready repeat reference vide Essence of Valmiki Bala Ramayana 2. Vedaangas

Sarga Four: Lakshmana briefed Hanuman about their purpose of 'Sitaanveshana' and seeking Sugriva's close friendship and active assistance- Hanuman's assurance for unswerving and dutiful cooperation

Sarga Five: Firm establishment of Agni Saakshi Friendship of Shri Rama and Sugriva and Shri Rama vows to kill Vaali to pave the way to Sugriva for unopposed Kingship of Vaanara Rajya

Sarga Six: As Sugriva showed golden ornaments secured by his followers as Devi Sita threw away down from Ravana's donkey's chariot vimana, Rama readily recognised, cried away and got intensified up with anguish

Sarga Seven: As Shri Rama expressed his anguish and anger too, Sugriva seeks to assuage Rama's inner feelings and assures 'karya siddhi' finally; reciprocatively Rama assures Sugriva to regain his kingdom and wife too!

[1. Brief Vishleshana on Tri Gunas 2. 'Arishad Vargas' vide Bhagavad Gita and Kathopanishad:]

Sarga Eight: Shri Rama assures help in killing Vaali and enquires of Sugriva about the details of their mutual enmity

Sarga Nine: Sugriva then provides an account of the root causes of his antagonism with his elder brother

Sarga Ten: As Sugriva recounted as to how Vaali displayed his vengeance against him

Sarga Eleven: Sugriva describes Vaali's invincibility, his extermination of Daitya Dundhubhi, throwing off his dead body off to Matanaga Muni, curse of barring entry of Rishyamooka- Rama's test of throwing off Dundubhi's skeleton- [Vishleshana on Namuci-Mahendra duel]

Sarga Twelve: Shri Rama's feat of destroying Seven Taala Trees in a row- Sugriva's challenge to Vaali but gets beaten as Sugriva runs to Rishyamooka- Sugriva vilaapa- Rama explains the problem of Vaali Sugriva identity.

[Vishleshana on the identity of Ashvini Kumars from Surya Purana]

Sarga Thirteen: Much unlike Sugriva got thrashed by Vaali last time, the party of Rama-Sugriva party proceeded again, enjoyed Prakriti Soundarya back to Kishkindha and secures blessings from Sapta Janaashrama Muni.

[Vishleshana on Tri Agnis: a) Varaha b) Brahmanda Puranas.

Sarga Fourteen: Fully backed by Shri Rama's confident assurances of victory, Sugriva challenged Vaali for a repeat encounter of 'dwandva yuddha' amid thunderous shoutings

Sarga Fifteen: Enraged by the repetitive challenges echoing the ‘Rani Vaasa’, Vaali got ready for the battle but Tara Devi entreated Vaali for a truce of mutual peace, friendship with Rama and ‘yuva rajatva’ to Sugriva

Sarga Sixteen: Ignoring away Devi Tara’s earnest appeals for amity with Sugrivas-Ramas, haughty Vaali resorts to battle with Sugriva, gets grievously hurt by Rama baana and succumbs to earth

Sarga Seventeen: Falling before death, Vaali heavily criticizes Rama for his stealthiness, undeserved glory, falsity, and sheer selfishness colliding with Sugriva only to recover Devi Sita, which he too could have with bravery!

[Vishleshana on Bhagavan Hayagriva and Madhu Kaitabhas vide Devi Bhagavata Purana]

Sarga Eighteen:Shri Rama, having let Vaali steam off his anguish from his deadly fall, replies point by point and fully justifying action in releasing his frightful arrow, yet with sympathy [Vishleshana on Chakravarti Mandhata from Maha Bhagavata Purana]

Sargas Nineteen and Twenty: Vaali calls Devi Tara and Angada Kumara near to his death bed cryingly and Devi Tara’s ‘vilaapa’.

Sarga Twenty One: Hanuman seeks to assuage Devi Tara’s extreme distress while the latter declared her intention of ‘ Sati Saha Gamana’

Sarga Twenty Two: Vaali terminates his life after conveying his death bed wishes about Sugriva and Angada.

Sarga Twenty Three: With Tara’s the unbearable distress, Vaali laid down his life finally

Sarga Twenty Four:Realising anguish of Tara Devi, Sugriva reacts severely and requests Shri Rama to allow him to die while Tara too requests so- Rama seeks to assuage them ; [Vishleshana on Indra’s killing Vritrasura vide Devi Bhagavata amd Maha Bhagavata Puranas]

Sarga Twenty Five: Rama Lakshmanas pacify Sugriva, Tara, and Angada- Vaali’s ‘dahana samskara/ jalaanjali’ by Angada - Vishleshana samskara for human beings as explained vide Sarga 76 of Essence of Valmiki Ayodhya Ramayana]

Sarga Twenty Six:Hanuman requests Rama Lakshmanas to witness Rajyaabhishakas of Sugriya and Angada, Rama assents and blesses but not by entering Kishkindha.

Sarga Twenty Seven: Rama Lakshmana’s dialogues at their of Prasravana Giri Cave [Vishleshana on Tungabhadra]

Sarga Twenty Eight: Shri Rama describes to Lakshmana about the features of Varsha Ritu [Vishleshana on Shat Ritus or Six Seasons from Taittiriya Arankaya]

Sarga Twenty Nine: Hanuman prevails on Sugriva to initiate action for Sitaanveshana even before Rama’s reminder and instruct Neela Vaanara to assemble the Vanara soldiers to group together.

Sarga Thirty: Sharad Ritu Varnana- Shri Rama instructs Lakshmana to reach King Sugriva

Sarga Thirty One:Lashmana proceeds to Sugriva’s Rajya Bhavana at Kishkindha with anger yet restrained by Rama’s convincing, meets Aangada who in turn seeks Sugriva to some how pacify.

Sarga Thirty Two: Hanuman sincerely advises Sugriva to withstand Lakshmana’s anger besides consolidate action towards ‘Sitaanveshana’

Sarga Thirty Three: Even admiring Kishkindha’s beauty, Lakshmana seeks to enter Sugriva’s Inner Chamber by resounding his dhanush and the frightened Sugriva advises Tara’s help to cool him down convincingly even before his appearance.

Sargas Thirty Four and Thirty Five: Sugriva faces the wrath of Lakshmana and Tara continues to soothen Lakshmana by her tactical talks

Vishleshanaa : 1. on Prayaschittas (Atonements): sourced from Parashara Smriti and Manu Smriti and
2. Visleshana on Chandra Deva's inseparability of Devi Rohini vide Varaha Purana

Sarga Thirty Six: Thus Tara managed the anger of Lakshmana convincingly and praised of Rama and his stature vis-à-vis that of Sugriva- Sugriva expresses of Rama's magnificence and his mere supplementary assistance.

Sarga Thirty Seven: Sugriva instructs consolidating Vanara Sena and proceeds to Kishkindha and inform compliance to him

Sarga Thirty Eight: Lakshmana returns to Rama as accompanied by Sugriva as he was despatched to ascertain as to why Sugriva did not action for Sitanveshana yet!

Sarga Thirty Nine: As Shri Rama had sincerely thanked the efforts in mobilising an ocean like Vanara Sena to fight his battle against Ravana'sura, the grateful Sugriva returns back for further action [Vishleshana on Anuhlada- Shachi Devi-and Indra]

Sarga Forty: Now that the full backing of Vanara Sena along with enthused dedication of 'Swami Karya', Rama instructed Sugriva to take off the efforts of 'Sitaanveshana' in the eastern direction [Vishleshana on Sapta Dweepas from Brahma Purana] [Ready Ref. Vishleshana repeated in brief about Vaamana Deva and Balichakravarti vide Essence of Valmiki Ramayana as released by the website of kamakoti .org/books]

Sarga Forty One: Sugriva as totally absorbed in the singular task of 'Sitanveshana' and having already despatched one force of Vanaraas to 'purva disha' now forwards another batch to 'dakshina disha'

Sarga Forty Two: Sugriva who despatched another strong contingent of Vanara Warriors to the southern direction, now commissions a batch to the Western Side along with Sushena explaining probable areas for 'Sitanveshana'

Sarga Forty Three: Sugriva explains the significance of the northern direction for Sitanveshana under the leadership of Shatabali of several 'vaanara veeraas' [Vishleshana on Manasa Sarovara]

Sarga Forty Four: As Sugriva despatches the Vanara Sena to the Southern direction under the command of Yuva Raja Angada, Shri Rama gives his ring to Hanuman to possibly show to Sita Devi to recognise and trust him.

Sarga Forty Five: While despatching the four directional Vaanara Sena, the text of Sugriva's encouraging remarks were as follows:
[Vishleshana on Agastya Maharshi and the reason for being ever residing in the Southern Bharata]

Sarga Forty Six: King Sugriva explains to Shri Rama of his own escapades of 'Bhu Bhramana' and hence his vast knowledge and memories of destinations, parvatas, oceans, rives and the geographical detailings!

Sargas Forty Seven and Forty Eight: Vaanara Senaas that Sugriva organised to the north-west-and eastern sectors for 'Sitanveshana' had returned disappointed with negative results; but from the southern sector were awaited still

Sargas Forty Nine and Fifty: Angada seeks to revive the fallen hopes of 'Sitanveshana' of the dakshina vaanara sena, but soon after the tired hungry sena sights a celestial tree-sarovara-and bhavana of a Tapasvini whom Hanuman contacts

Sargas Fifty One and Fifty Two: As Hanuman enquires of the ‘vridha tapasvini’, she displays her ‘bhavan’, asks about Vanara Sena and their purpose, invites them for bhojan, reveals her identity, and facilitates them towards the Sea shores

Sargas Fifty Three and Fifty Four: As the prescribed time limit for return to Sugriva was over, Angada and other Vaanara Veeras got ready for ‘praana tyaga’ but clever Hanuman adopted ‘bheda -neeti’ or of divided opinion saving them all!

Sarga Fifty Five: Angada- having asserted of Sugriva’s dubious nature and selfishness while the task of ‘Sitaanveshana’ was due to Lakshmana’s anger- thus gets readied for ‘praayopavesha’ along with his fellow vaanaras

Sarga Fifty Six: Gridhra Raja Sampati arrives and frightens Vanaras initially but on hearing about the noble deed of ‘Sitaanveshana’ makes friends - Sampati then hears of Ravana’s killing of Jatayu, his younger brother.

[Vishleshana on Sampati the elder brother of Jatayu vide Sarga 14 of Essence of Valmiki Araanya Ramayana for ready reference]

Sarga Fifty Seven: Angada places the badly hurt body of Sampati from the mountain top and describes the details of Jatayu as killed by Ravanaasura- Rama Sugriva friendship- Vaali’s death- and his ‘aamarana upavaasa’ ‘

[Brief Vishleshana on Riksha Raja the father of Vaali-Sugrivas]

Sarga Fifty Eight: Sampati informs the Vanara Veeras as to how his wings were burnt, confirms Ravana-Sita’s place details-and performs jalanjali to his brother Jatayu since known from Vanaras of his passing away.

Sarga Fifty Nine: Sampati conveys to the Vanara Sena Yoddhas of what his son Supaarshvya informed of Devi Sita and Ravana at Lanka

Sarga Sixty and Sixty One: Sampati’s interaction with his preceptor ‘Nishakara Rishi’ and explains as to how the wings of both his and his brother Jatayu’s wings were burnt in a competition with Surya in the latter’s triloka parikrama!

[Vishleshana on Surya Deva’s bhu -pradakshina: Sources Vishnu Purana and Matsya Purana]

Sarga Sixty Two: Nishakara Muni readily sympathises and wishes recovery to Sampati but instructs him to contribute in the context of Shri Rama Vijaya Karya all his life

Sarga Sixty Three: Sampati eventually recovers fresh wings and enthuses Vanara Veeras to proceed to the farther South and step forward to Lanka

Sarga Sixty Four: With great excitement and drive, especially fired up by Sampati, the vast vaanara sena pushed forward to the Sea bed; then Angada asked the select Yoddhas to express their individual abilities to cross the Sea

Sarga Sixty Five: As Angada asked select Vanara yoddhas of their ability to cross and return, individual responses were heard- then Jambavan recommends Veera Hanuman for this impossible and daring act.

Vishleshana of Vamana’s Virat Swarupa from Vaamana Purana

Sarga Sixty Six: Jambavan along with Angada approaches Anjaneya, recalls the background of the latter’s birth and past glories, glorifying him up with extraordinary capabilities, while preparing him to cross the Maha Samudra

Sarga Sixty Seven: As Hanuman was enthused and readied to cross the Maha Sagara, he dashed forward to Mahendra Parvata and climbed it with ease

ESSENCE OF VALMIKI KISHKINDHA RAMAYANA

Introduction:

Brahmarshi Narada taught Brahmana Vidyaarthi Pracheta the ‘two golden principles of not preaching what he himself would not practise and take to the name and thought of Rama till his death’. The boy learnt the Mantra ‘Mara’ or to Kill- kill ‘ahamkara’, ‘shadvarga shatrus’ of excessive desires, anger, selfishness and avarice, infatuation, ego and jealousy. Constant repetition of ‘Mara’ turned as ‘Rama’ gradually developed ‘valmikaas’ or anthills till his ‘atma saakshaatkaara’ or Self Realisation and eventually came to be reputed as Valmiki Maharshi. Once when he was bathing in the clear waters of Ganges he sighted two doves while mating but were shot to death by a hunter and the Maharshi cried :maa nishaada pratishthaa tvamagamah shasshvatih samaah, yat krouncha mithunaa -dekam avadheeh kaama mohitam/ Nishaada! There could never be rest for long years till eternity, for you killed the mating birds unsuspectingly! This is the ‘prerepana’ or the inspiration of the illustrious scripting of Valmiki Ramayana! Maharshi Valmiki asked Brahmarshi Narada: Konyasmin saampratam loke gunavaan kascha veeryavaan, dharmagjnascha kritagjnascha veeryavaan, dharmagjnascha kritagjnascha Satyavaakyo dhridhavitatah’ as to who indeed was the Guna- Veerya-Dharmagjina- Kritagjina- Satya Vaadi- Dhridha Sankalpa or of the superior traited- brave- virtuous-ever grateful - truthful and decisive on Earth during the Treta Yuga! Ramayana is relevant now as much as in the past -present and for ever as narrated in Six Khandas or sugar cane stems viz. Baala Khanda-Ayodhya Khanda- Aranya Khanda-Kishkinda Khanda-Sundara Khanda-Yuddha Khanda. Baala Khanda comprises seventy seven Sargas- Ayodhya Khanda one hundred nineteen Sargas-Aranya Khanda has seventy three Sargas-Kishkinda Khanda has sixty seven Sargas-Sundara Khanda comprises of sixty eight Sargas- Yuddha Khanda has one twenty eight Sargas. Additionally Uttara Khanda has one hundred eleven Sargas. The current presentation is relevant to Kishkinda Khanda- the fourth Piece of the Sugar Cane.

Restrospective :

Baala Khanda

The overview of Ramayana by Maharshi in his trance- Valmiki Ramayana of 24000 stanzas was sung by Lava- Kusha kumars of ‘Shri Rama -Devi Sita’ at a Conference of Muni Mandali before Shri Rama- From the Vaivaswa Manvantara to the Ikshvaku Vamsha at Ayodhya till King Dasharatha to Shri Rama- King Dasharatha-Vasishta- Ministers plan to perform Ashvamedha Yagna and despatch Sumantra the Charioteer request to request Maharshi Rishyashringa- Historic Arrival of Rishyashringa heralding the season to rains- There after Vasishtas gave to the King ‘yagjna diksha’- removed evil influences - made arrangements of the yagjna like architecture, construction and maintenance; groups of jyotishadi vedangas; workforce; nata- naatya -nartaka groups,cooking, culinary,construction of colonies, conference Halls etc.Ashvamedha Yagna executed gloriously- Putra Kaamekshi Yagjna- Celestials preparing for arrival of Maha Purusha-Devas and Indra approached Vishnu to desrtoy Ravasnasura as Vishnu said only in human form Rama, Dasharatha’s son could to so. At the Yagjna, a Maha Purusha emerged from the flames and handed over a ‘payasa patra’ to Dasharatha to distribute to his three queens as instructed.As Rama-Lakshmana-Bharata-Shatrugnas were born thus, Indra and Devas manifested ‘Vaanaaras’ including Hanuman with Ashta Siddhis. Dasharatha distributes ‘payasa’ to queens Koushalya-Sumitra- Kaikeyi -Samskararas to Ramaadi Kumaras; Arrival of Brahmarshi Vishvamitra at Ayodhya to King Dasharatha. Vasishta assured Dasharatha about Shri Rama’s safety in safeguarding the Vishvamitra Yagjna as the satisfied King allowed Rama Lakshmanas and teach Bala-Atibala. The trio reached Angamuni Ashram-Sarayu-Ganga confluence at Malada- Kurusha Villages where Indra hi d-the reason was that Indra killed brahmana Vritraasura.-They enter ‘Tataka Vana’-Rama Lakshmanas encounter Tataka and Vishvamitra prevails on stree hatya-Vishvamitra teaches most of archery mantras to Rama Lakshmanas-Vishvamitra takes Rama brothers to the ‘Vamana Ashrama ’-Yagjnas spoilt in other ashramas by Maricha Subahus punished by Rama-‘Ashramavashis’ conveyed about Janaka’s

Yagjna and Shiva Dhanush- Vishvamitra seeks take heros to Siddhashrama by difficult terrain and explains about adjacent Kusha Desha, King Kushanabha, Apsara daughters and Vayu Deva-By boat from Shonabhadra to Ganges, Vishvamitra explains about flows of Ganges - birth of Skanda- King Sagara's tapasya for sons- queen Sumati begets 60,000 strong sons while Keshini just only Asamanjasa. Sagara planned Ashvamesha yagna, Indra stole the Sacrificial horse- Sumati's strong sons searched bhuloka-and patalas with pomp and noise-Kapila Muni curses the sons in patala to become stones-Asamanjasa goes in search and conveys the result to Sagara who dies- King Asamanjasa gaveup hopes and so does his son Amshuman and the latter's son Dilip. But Bhagiradha takes up the thread and prays to Ganga from skies at Gokarna Tirtha. Bhagiradha standing by foot fingers, invoked Maha Deva-Crossing Ganga, Rama approaching Vaishali asked about Deva Danavas-Having failed to secure Amrit, Diti- daitya mother-seeks to destroy Indra- Diti fell asleep unconsciously, Indra entered her Garbha with his 'Vajraayudha', saw the fully grown up boy inside ,cajoled him saying 'don't cry, don't cry' and sliced the child into seven parts and further to forty nine sub-parts-Vishvamitra stated that they were at that very place where above instances had occurred when there was an Ikshvaku Kings Kakutsa- Sumati and then proceed to Mithila the kingdom of Janaka Raja! Sumati showed the way to Gautama Ashram en route Mithila.- Entering King Janaka's Yagnyashaala, Vishvamitra introduces Rama Lalshmanas and their acts of glory so far to King Janaka and his Purohita 'Shataananda'-Having congratulated Rama Lakshmanas, Shatananda makes a detailed coverage on the lifestory of Vishvamitra who as a Kshatriya King through tapsyas became a Brahmarshi! King Vishvamitra sighted Shabali Kamadhenu and demands it but was refused; in a battle Shabala smashed the army but the latter took to severe tapasya. Brahma blesses Vishvamitra be the status of Maharshi-Trishanku desires to reach swarga being mortal and Vishvamitra creates a mid- sky swarga with his tapo bala; -Ambarisha performs Yagjna at Pushkara but as sacrifice animal was stolen, a 'nara pashu boy' was arranged - Vishvamitra took pity but to no avail; got entangled instead by co-Munis.-Vishvamitra disturbed by 'Menaka' at Pushkara, then shifted to heights of himalayas when 'Rambha' disturbed too-Ultimately even as Indra ever stole his food, Maharshi stopped his breathing but kept on his tapsya on Brahma, and the latter conferred the title of 'Brahmarshi'! Vishvamitra conveys Rama's desire to show Shiva Dhanush and Janaka gives the background of the Dhanush; King Nimi was gifted Shiva Dhanush at his son Devarata's wedding; Devi Sita as 'Ayonija' as Janaka tills bhuyagjna.-Rama lifted up the Shiva Dhanush as if it were a toy, straightened it with great ease, held the middle part, and as though of a child play broke into two pieces. That breaking resulted in earthshaking like reverberations. King Janaka said:Once wedded to Shri Rama, my daughter ought to be proud to his life partner and bring in glory to Janaka vamsha! Brahmarshi said: tathaastu!- King Janaka sent a messenger to King Dasharatha to state: Shri Rama in the midst of all of us had managed the control and breaking of the age old Shiva Dhanush and as per my repeated announcements would like to propose my daughter Devi Sita to Shri Rama in a wedding ceremony and therefore request you to attend the same along with your queens and the entire retinue. Besides Rama and Devi Sita, may we also propose the wedding of Lakshmana with my younger daughter Urmila too- Dasharadha was pleased and addressed Vasishtha and Ministers to leave next morning -Accompanied by Gurus, wives and intimate and other relatives and friends, King Dasharatha was happy and blissful and instructed Sumantra to let the royal treasurer carry surplus funds of cash, jewellery, nine gems ahead and for their safety there ought to be fool proof defence arrangements. A four day procession with needed halts on way moved on with plentiful food and drinks. On their arrival at the outskirts of the Kingdom, King Janaka made elaborate reception with music, song, dance and ecstatic welcome showers of flowers-In an open Janaka Sabha, Vasishtha narrated the glory of Ikshvaku Vamsha: Brahma Deva the Swayambhu manifested Marichi, from the latter was born Kashyapa whose son was Vivisvaan as the latter gave birth to Vaivasvata Manu. Manu was the foremost Prajapati and from Manu was born Ikshvaku the first King of Ayodhya. Then were highlighted: Pruthu-Mandhata-Sagara- Bhagiradha- Ambareesha-Nahusha-Yayati-Naabhaga- Aja- and Dasharatha- King Janaka explained about his vamsha from renowned King Nimi ,whose son named Mithi being the ever first Janaka as the 'vamsha' known as of Janakas. Then he introduced Kushadhvaaja his younger brother desirous of getting his two daughters to Bharata and Shatrughna and declared Mandaveeka and Shrutakeerti as their respective wives. respectively.- Public Declarations were made in the presence of Kings, Maharshis, and the public and hectic preparations were made; The vivahika vedika was got ready befitting the status and magnificence of two great Kings. Then Janaka welcomed the brides and bridegrooms.-- After the festivities concluded, guests were showered with precious gifts, the groom's party moved back on the return journey but a terrible sand storm was faced. Parashu Rama arrived shouting 'Rama Rama' with terrible anger as the Shiva Dhanush was broken. Dasharatha tried to pacify but with anger, handed over Vishnu Dhanush and challenging Rama to break it if at all possible. An angry Rama not only lifted the dhanush as though Vishnu did against Madhukaitabha daityas but stated that with that very dhanush he could as well demolish Parashu Rama too! An utterly humiliated Parashu Rama was then instructed to return to Mahendra Mountain for ever!- As the return procession finally reached the city of Ayodhya, it was ready with dhvaja-patakas, welcome sounds of drums and music, dances and decorations. Dasharatha along with his sons and new daughters-in-law along with the Queens made an auspicious entry. Later, Raja Kumaras shared royal responsibilities. Rama and Sita became famed as Vishnu and Lakshmi.

Ayodhya Khand

Considering Shri Rama's eligibility for Ayodhya's Yuvarajatra, King Dasharatha convenes a darbar meeting -King Dasharatha secures public approval for Rama's Yuvarajatra-Dasharatha discusses the details of Rama's Rajyabhisheka with Vasishtha and asks Rama to attend the Rajya Sabha- Rama seeks his mother Devi Kousalya's blessings and endears Lakshmana-Dasharatha and Vasishtha ask Rama and Sita to observe fasting before the celebrations of Yuvarajatra- Ayodhya public's joy and pre-celebrations- Villainous Manthara gets upset on Rama's Yuvarajatra and reaches Kaikeyi and provokes and poisons Kaikeyi's mindset suggesting Rama's Vana Vaasa and Bharata's elevation as Yuvaraja- Fully poisoned by Manthara, Kaikeyi enters 'Kopa griha'- the symbolic Anger Chamber-King Dasharatha seeks to pacify her beloved queen Kaikeyi-Kaikeyi seeks to remind of Dasharatha's promise of granting her of two boons at a battle as she saved him, demands Rama's 'vana vaasa'/ Bharata's Rajyabhisheka- Dasharatha's remorse at Kaikeyi's undue demands even having admitted the boons and pleads with Kaikeyi not to insist but in vain - Dasharatha's intense cryings and persistent pleadings with Kaikeyi but she argued in the name of dharma citing the tradition of truthfulness of Ikshvaku ancestors- Kaikeyi's stubbornness to relent - Vashishta Maharshi's intervention fails and Charioteer Sumantra asked for Rama's arrival at the King's Palace-Sumantra arrives at Rama's palace while Rama and Lakshmana on the way to King's Palace enjoying public's joy at Rama's elevation-Excellent preparations in the city for the celebrations by the following day- Rama witnessing heart broken Dasharatha and Kaikeyi's rude intervention demanding Rama's Vana Vaasa for fourteen years in prescribed dress code and of Bharat's Kingship-Rama agrees to her terms and proceeds to Kousalya to break the news - Kousalya's sudden and of tragic news leads to agony and standstill senselessness as Rama seeks to pacify-Lakshmana gets agitated at the turn of the events and so did Kousalya but Rama assuages their badly hurt as Rama explains that 'pitru vaakya paripaalana' ought to be his life's motto and dharma.Rama asked Lakshmana to remove all the preparatory materials like the vessels etc. meant for his Rajyabhisheka since that would be unwanted then-Reacting to remove the material for Rajyabhisheka, Lakshmana argued whether the decision was correct, but Rama once again reiterated as irrevocable - Devi Kousalya, reacting sharply about Rama's decisiveness to undergo vana vaasa resolves to follow him, and Rama invoked the argument of her preserving Pativrata and should not desert her husband-With great difficulty, Rama finally convinces Kousalya to let him leave for 'vana vaasa'and she relented finally.- As Rama left Kousalya with mutual anguish, the Public too was unaware of the tragic development, much less Devi Sita who was horrified-Devi pleads her accompanying Rama for the forest life -Rama dissuades Sita to accompany him for Vana Vaasa-Sita invokes her 'Paativrata Dharma' and insists- Devi Sita sobs heavily and Rama had to finally concede-Lakshmana too insists on accompanying Rama- latter agrees; Rama desires of offering charities- Sita Rama's charity to Vasishtha Kumara Sujyagjna and wife, brahmanas, brahmacharis, servants- Sita Rama Lakshmanas visit Kaikeyi's palace to meet Dasharatha as Nagara vaasis weep away -Sita Rama Lakshmanas approach Dasharatha with queens before vana vaasa; the latter swoons and recovers and embraces them and swoons again-Sumantra criticizes Kaikeyi as the latter justifies-Dasharatha instructs treasure to be sent along with Sumantra for initial phase of vana vaasa; Rama

Lakshmans dressed up in valkals as Vishtha rejects Sita wearing that dress- Dasharatha too rejects Sita wearing Valkava vastras even as Kaikeyi was unhappy, but Rama approves--Dasaratha breaks into cryings, Sunantra arrives with the chariot, Sita receives 'pati seva upadesha' from Kousalya, Rama Sita Lakshmanas bid farewell to all - Sita Rama Lakshmanas perform pradakshinas to Dasharatha and the mothers, Sita Rama Lakshmanas alight the chariot and the crowds get terribly agitated -As the unruly crowd was interrupting the Chariot several times, the citizens were crying away aloud shattering the skies, especially the women folk-King Dasharatha cries and swoons for Rama, distances from Kaikeyi's palace and shifts to Kousalya's-Maha Rani Kousalya's agony asDevi Sumitra assuages Kousalya's tormented psyche-Rama appeals to the Ayodhya public not to hurt Dasaratha or Bharata- the elders of the public insist on following Rama upto Tamasa river banks- Rama Sita Lakshmana's over night stay at Tamasa banks- they leave earliest unnoticed- public felt bad-Ayodhya elders and women got disturbed inability to see off Rama to the deeper forests crossing Tamasa- Ayodhya woman folk cry away Rama Sita Lakshmanas for further 'vana vaasa'- Public of Kosala Janapada throng at the Chariot carrying Ramas who also cross Veda shruti-Gomati-Skandika rivers- Ramas arrive at Shringavera pura on the banks of Ganga- stay overnight and Nishada Raja Guha welcomes them-Lakshmana - As Pampa Pushkarini's picturesque scenery which gladdened Devi Sita in her most unfortunate absence, Shri Rama was disheartened with sorrow. Having however suppressed his inner feelings, he addressed Lakshmana admiring the sparkling water flows, their smooth hittings of the waves at the banks, the tall and sturdy tree wealth on the banks like the mountain tops as surrounded and in all the salubrious climate there around. mām tu śokābhisaṁtaptam ādhayaḥ pīḍayanti vai, bhāratasya ca duḥkkena vaidehyā haraṇena ca/ Shokaartasyaapi me Pampaa shobhate chitra kaananaa, vyavakeernaam bahuvividhiāḥ pushpaiḥ sheetodakaashivaa/ At this moment, despite the happy and invigorating ambience, my inner conscience is deeply hurt by Bharata's cryings and Sita's separation. But the pull of the aromatic vibration is so overwhelming here and now as Pushkarini is submerged with lotuses, flowers of hues and scented airs, and above all the mild sweeps of soft winds; indeed my intense desire of Sita's sharing with me this Chaitra Month's Vasanta Ritu's pleasantness and softness. With varieties of flowers, the trees and plants appear to dance to the musical swings of the windy flows. ayaṁ vasantaḥ saumitre nānāvihagaṇāditaḥ, sītayā viprahīṇasya śokasaṁdīpano mama/ mām hi śokasaṁākrāntam saṁtāpayati manmathaḥ, hṛṣṭaḥ pravadamānaś ca saṁāhvayati kokilaḥ/ eṣa dātyūhako hṛṣṭo ramye mām vananirjhare, praṇadan manmathāviṣṭam śocayīṣyati lakṣmaṇa/ Sumitra nandana! As the groups of birds hover around the skies with varied musical notes of cacophony typical of the Spring season, the usherings of Vasanta get intensified and trouble my psyche as Kaama Deva Manmatha torments me further more with Sita- Viyoga. Lakshmana! As Sita used to imitate the Koel's musical notes with bubbling joys the pangs of separation get intensified by minutes and my sadness gets kindled more and more. It appears that the fall out effect of this vasanta season appears to burn me to ashes; the ashoka tree flowers of redness appear to me as spots of flames seeking to tear my heart into pieces. Naahi taam, sukshma pakshmaak - sheem sukesheem mridubhaashineem, apasyato me Soumitra jeevitestita prayojanam/ Sumitra nandana! In case, Devi Sita with her pretty face and soft hairs with her soft voice and readily attractive and slender figure is not present with me as of then, of what avail is of my existence! Nishpaapa Lakshmana! As the Vasanta Ritu is now in full sweep, and the cuckoo's musical notes are in swing, the presence of Sita should have been celestial but that is not to be. Mild flows of breeze, trees bearing sprouting flowers of freshness and fragrance, the ever teasing screams of cuckoo sounds, the openings of lotuses, and the ever spreading of aromas all around, are the typical of the Season of Vasanta, whose presense bestows intimacy of lovers but curses their separations. My heated up concern now is whether I could ever sight Sita, as I could see and touch the tree and flowers and fruits before me! As Videhanandini Sita is not visionable, my sorrow too gets doubled up and ever more intensified. paśya lakṣṇama nṛtyantam mayūram upanṛtyati, śikhinī manmathārtaiṣā bhartāram girisānuṣu/ mayūrasya vane nūnam rakṣasā na hṛtā priyā, mama tv ayaṁ vinā vāsaḥ puṣpamāse sduḥsahaḥ/ Lakshmana! Look at those peacocks dancing away on hill tops with gay abandon in groups with their mates together as though they are tormented by desire as though proposed by Manmatha the God of Love. Obviously on these lovely banks of Pampa Sarovara, no rakshasa appears not to have forcefully robbed of a female peacock. paśya lakṣmaṇa puṣpāṇi niṣphalāni bhavanti me, puṣpabhārasamṛddhānām vanānām śīśirātyaye/ Lakshmana! Of which avail for me of this Vasanta Season as these gardens are flooded with flowers of unimaginable colours and fragrances, as my dearest Sita is missing here. Of which use of the groups of musical birds with wings of variety of colour splashes! Wherever Devi Sita should be there at present, there again the same vasanta season ought to be flourishing and what should be in her mind just now! As she too be in utter loneliness what should be on her mental screen just now! Surely enough, she ought to be crying away as she were under the rough custody of rakshasis, quite irrespective of the usherings of the Seasons of Nature! On the contrary, would it be even possible that recalling her golden days and the ongoing happenings around her, with the arrival of the incoming vasanta season and the golden experiences that she had in the previous vasantaas, she might not conclude her very life! Dhridham hi hridaye buddhirmama samparivartate, naalam vartayintu Sita saadhvee madviraham gataa/ My strong feeling and concern should be that Saadhvi Sita might not be able to retain her mental poise for long due to her separation from me! In fact Videha Kumari's heart felt love and attachment is anchored and set most firm and steady for me. Like wise my feelings are equally steadfast, reciprocative and reflective too. tām vinātha vihaṁgo 'sau pakṣī prañaditas tadā vāyasaḥ pādapagataḥ prahṛṣṭam abhinardati/ eṣa vai tatra vaidehyā vihagaḥ pratihārakaḥ, pakṣī mām tu viśālākṣyāḥ samīpam upaneṣyati/ Lakshmana! I recall now that during my erstwhile days of dandakaranya living happily and with contentment together with Devi Sita, groups of crows were squatting on the nearby tree branches and crowing away relentlessly foreboding our separation. But now, there are forebodings to the contrary apparently indicating that the days of misfortune are drawing nearby. Lakshmana! In any case, despite these fortuitous forebodings, the fact remains that the 'viraha vedana' or my pangs of separation are getting intensified more and more by days and even hours. Then Shri Rama fondly recalled the intense likings of Devi Sita more specifically the wide range of chirruping birds, the variety of trees, the cool flows of breeze, the transparency of Pampa's water flows, and the glory of lotuses! Referring to lotuses, Shri Rama was reminded again of Devi Sita as her face was like of 'prafulla kamala dalaas' and the main reason of his very existence and living! Rama heaved a sigh of sorrow and exclaimed: 'aho! How human desire blurs one's inner consciousness and once not fulfilled then it would lead to frustration; my situation too is similar in the absence of Sita! What all materials that Sita was dear and fond of turn out to appeal to me and the others would not be. padmakesarasamsṛṣṭo vṛkṣāntaraviniḥṣṛtaḥ, niḥśvāsa iva sītāyā vāti vāyur manoharaḥ/ Lakshmana! Would not the eye flaps and the soft hair linings resemble a lotus flower in full bloom; that is precisely why I am yearning to Devi Sita! As the soft winds flowing from a lotus pond passed from there around are just like Sita's 'nishvaasaas' or exhalations of her soft breathing. Having thus become replete with his inner feelings of 'Sita viyoga' Shri Rama was submerged in his feelings of the 'Prakriti Soundarya'. Sumitra nandana! Are you noticing the gorgeous view of the southern side of the mountain peaks. Mixed up with the sweep of winds from the southern side of Pampa sarovara, are the blowings of winds emerging from the 'dhaatus' or the mineral deposits inbuilt into the slabs of the mountainous slopes and the shikharas too. The tree lines of Pampa Sarovara banks awashed constantly and the sweet odours emanating from Malati-Mallika-Padma-Karaveera flowers create a celestial atmosphere. The creepers like ketaki-sinduvaara-vaasanti are full of flowers. Chirabilva-madhukascha-vakula-champakatilaka-naaga kesara flowers add up to the magnificence. The fruits as provided by trees like Angkola-Kuranta-Choornaka-Paaribhadra- Choota-Paatali-kovidaara-arjuna are galore! Further the fruits borne of Ketaka-Uddaalaka- Shireesha-Sheesham-Dhava- Shaalmala-Palaasha-Naktamaala-chandana-syandana-hintaala-tilaka-Naaga kesara add to the 'prakrita soundarya'.

 'Enjoying the grand Prakriti soundarya and its bountiful nature, Rama Lakshmanas crossed one forest to another reached Pampa's illustrious banks called Pushkarini. Pampa sarovara is situated to the east of the Matanga hill and to the west of the Rishyamukha hill and serves as a perennial source of water as the rain

waters falling on these hills flow down to the sarovara. The water thus collected is free from gravel slippery slime and duck weeds. Thus, the water is crystal clear, sparkling, limpid, cool and delightful scented with lotus fragrance. The environs of the sarovara abound in forests is rich in flora and fauna includes Swans, Ducks, Kraunches, Ospreys and such other water birds. Fishes of rare variety like Vakratunda, Rohita Nalameena are found in plenty in the sarovara. Rama Lakshmanas! When you seek to catch the multi-coloured fishes, especially in the early evenings, the Sarovara gets profoundly fabulous of sweet smells of joy, coolness, healthy, and heart filling. Nara shreshthaas! The musical sounds of monkey group screeches get so pronounced as those of constant drubbings of ear drums. sāyāhne vicaran rāma viṭapī mālyadhārīṇaḥ, śītodakam ca pampāyām dṛṣtvā śokam vihāsyasi/ sumanobhiś citāms tatra tilakān naktamālakān, utpalāni ca phullāni paṅkajāni ca rāghava/ Shri Rama! In such glorious evenings when you pass by the banks of Pushkarini and its truly hearty walks, you should forget the remote heart beatings of Devi Sita viyoga even for a while. It is a local belief of pronouncement that the disciples of Matanga Maharshi tend to surrender to silence and peaceful tranquility of the natural surroundings. As the Matanga shishyaas collect flowers and fruits, then they get tired out and the sweating drops of their bodies seem to instantly turn as fresh and sweet smell flowers by the miracle of the Maharshi. Having crossed such spell binding occurrences in the forth arriving Matanga ashram, one could also witness there ahead the Punya Murti Tapasvini Shabari the embodiment of ‘dharmaanushthaana’. Rama! Maha Saadhvi Shabari ought to be ever anxious for your darshana bhagya for a number of years now! Raghu nandana! Once you pass by ahead the Matanga Vana and Shabari ashram, then you would reach the foothills of Rishyamooka parvata: ṛṣyamūkas tu pampāyāḥ purastāt puspitadrumaḥ, suduḥkḥārohaṇo nāma śīśunāgābhirakṣitaḥ, udāro brahmaṇā caiva pūrvakāle vinirmitaḥ/ The eastern side of Pampaa sarovara is situated the Rishyamooka Parvata foothills which around greenery of huge trees and plants forming a picturesque scene stated to have emerged by Lord Brahma’s generosity!]

If only, Saadhvi Sita were able to see and experience and if ever I could ever live together and experience this glory, I should neither reach Ayodhya nor even attain swarga loka together. If only again, these green pastures and their grandeur facilitate us to live us for long, and together happily, we should never aspire of celestial pleasures and experiences. Thus having become obsessed with the prakriti soundarya and the most restless intensity of Sita viyoga, Shi Rama exclaimed to Lakshana: Imagine if ever the exemplary Dharma swarupa King Janaka were to ask me being seated in his open court with ministers, advisers, and panditas of enormous learning as to how nice his daughter had been, then what should I reply! Lakshmana! As King Dasharatha who asked me only to proceed for ‘vana vaasa’ might or might not appreciate Devi Sita to follow me, but as she had done so, the understandably it would be my responsibility entirely and if only he were to ask me for Devi Sita’s welfare, what should I reply! Likewise, Devi Kousaslya might ask for her and the could I sidetrack! Lakshmana! Therefore get back to Ayodhya, meet Bharata and make a public announcement that Devi Sita had been kidnapped and that Rama was feeling helpless.’ So saying, as Rama broke down, Lakshmana replied: ‘Purushottama Shri Rama! Please do collect your scattered feelings now. It does not ever behove a person of your stature like you! ‘Sita viyoga’ should not rattle the most exemplary human being ever likewise. Ya di gacchhati paataalam tatodyadhikameva vaa, sarvathaa Ravanastaataa na bhavishyati Ragha/ Dear Raghu nandana! Even if Ravana were to be pulled up or there underneath, he ought to be dragged up to decimation. As Rama got himself pulled up, he recalled his slipping self confidence and his nerves got toughened and bolstered driven by action instead of a wavery mind and body. Then Rama Lakshmanas proceeded with invigorated resolve and fortified confidence. As they approached the outskirts of Rishyamooka Parvata, Sugriva was freely roaming about and spotted two handsome, tall and sturdy humans with 'dhanur baanas' in hermit dresses. He wondered whether these humans were despatched by his enemies. Other 'vanaras' in the vicinity also wondered as to who these humans could be, partly fearfully and partly curiously. Sugriva wondered that the vicinities of Matanga Maha Muni were not entereable by his enemy brother or his men and thus kept wondering as to who these impressive humans could be!

Sarga Two

As Sugriva and follower vaanaraas were still wondering, Hanuman felt convinced and confident and directed Shri Rama Lakshmanas to appoach their head Sugriva the fugitive King of Vaanaras.

Even from a distance as Rama Lakshmanas were entering the approach points of the Rishyamooka parvata, Sugriva was rather apprehensive and thus could not remain steady in movement and mind. Sugriva was essentially a Dharmatma with deep knowledge of Raja Dharma or Kingship duties. He was however suspicious and hence asked his ministers: Surely appears that Vaali his opponent brother King of Vanaras had despatched these two enemies to us with their queer dress yet with 'dhanur baanaas'. As an ample precaution, Vaali's trusted vanaras surrounded by some distance in batches and were ready with strong branches of the huge trees uprooted by their hands around. Slowly and steadily, Rama Lakshmanas reached atop the Parvata. As main vanaras encircled Sugriva, Rama Lakshmanas saluted Sugriva with folded hands from a distance. On noticing that Rama Lakshmanas too were looking apprehensive, Hanuman representing Sugriva initiated his conversation as being an expert conversationalist, even from distance. 'Gentlemen! May be you seem to be wary of the fear of Vaali and thus seem to be afraid. This is the well known mount named Malaya and you need not to have any concern about him as he was cursed by Mahatma Matanga Muni and as such he could never enter here. This mount is under the command of this Sugriva our King. You may have been wondering as to why these vanara soldiers had been following you in groups; after all, you are aware that instinctively we the vanaras are mischievous. buddhi vijñāna saṁpanna ṅgitaiḥ sarvaṁ ācara, na hy abuddhiṁ gato rājā sarvabhūtāni śāsti hi/ Appearing as you do, you seem that you are of buddhi and vijñana or maturity of thinking and knowledge, and you could understand that we vanaras by nature are likewise. Are you not aware that a king's mind and thoughts are as per the instinctive feelings of the follower beings and then only he could administer ably!' Sugriva having been truly appreciative manner of Hanuman's convincing flow of thoughts and words to Rama Lakshmanas, accosted Hanuman interveningly and said: 'Hanuman! Don't you realise that these two gentlemen appear as tall, sturdy, high shouldered and alert armed with 'dhanush baanaas' and sword like Deva Kumaras! Naturally, one could get suspiciously remarkable and hence we should be discreet enough to ensure whether they were Vaali's spies. Sugriva further addressed Hanuman: arayaś ca manuṣyeṇa vijñeyāś channacāriṇaḥ, viśvastānām aviśvastāś chidreṣu praharanti hi/ kṛtyeṣu vālī medhāvī rājāno bahudarśanāḥ, bhavanti parahantāras te jñeyāḥ prākṛtair naraiḥ/ One should be able to distinguish the genuine or fake; 'Vishvaasa' or the word called faith and trust ought to lead from instinct although the latter might fail sometimes and hence the need for discretion. Vaali in these deeds is an expert; Kings tend to realise make-belief acts very well and that is how they are able to crack up enemies. That is how persons like Vaali resort to devious means like spying or the art of espionage. Kapi shreshtha Hanuman! That is why you should meet the strangers casually and extract details of them and then conclude the background information about the strangers with deftness. Do seek to learn their intentions and aspirations, by creating feelings of innocence and confidence. Vaanara shiromani Hanuma! Do keep staring at me with inexperience and learn as much about the strangers; what indeed could be the reason of approaching us; do they sound genuine and are they asking any favor from us!' As Vanara King Sugriva briefed in detail likewise, Pavan Kumara Hanuman reached Rama Lakshmanas once again.

Having been suitably convinced by King Sugriva's statements as to how to assess the true nature of strangers, proceeded down the hill but assumed the form of a bhikshu or a sanyasi and greeted Rama Lakshmanas. He initiated the conversation by stating that the stranger Rama Lakshmanas : 'Veera Purushas! Both of you appear to be 'satya paraakramis' and Rajarshis as of Devatas-like tapasvis observing severe some vrata. Your physical brilliance is indeed readily arresting but why have you come to these forests and now to this picturesque Pampa Sarovara! You seem to be very courageous and enterprising with high shoulders as of royalties. Please introduce your selves properly. Your glances are like of lions as of strength and courage moving slowly yet perfectly like a royal elephant. In fact, your presence in this Rishyamooka parvata areas and into these dense forest surroundings is not possible really unless intentional or accidental. In any case, you both have truly brought brightness to the Rishyamooka. Both of you veera purushas! interestingly enough both of you are adorned with 'jataajuta' on your heads; both of you are alike; Maha Veeras! Have you descended from Deva Loka as you do certainly look distinguished like Surya Deva and Chandra Deva together on to earth on your own free volition having taken human forms. Your broad shoulders are similar to those of lions, being broad, strong and well rounded up. I feel that you have surely appeared here ensure peace and auspiciousness to this mother earth as repleted with samudras, parvataas like Vindhya and Meru and the forests and their inhabitant species like human beings, animals and birds. Sirs! You are carrying sharp and potent arrows and 'tuneera' which look attractive but devastating with your mantra shakti. Your long and short swords are nodoubt sparkling but ought be sharp and forceful. Veeraas! I have been describing details of your physical appearances and characteristics for long with admiration for long, but are you not divulging about who you are and what is the real purpose of your arrival to this difficult teraain of the mountain reaches rather suddenly! This area is under the control of our leader named Sugriva the 'sreashtha vaanara' and a 'dharmatma' and a 'maha veera'. His elder brother named Vaali- a 'maha parakrami' discarded him, threw him from his house and as such he has been literally hiding from Vaali and moving about aimlessly eversince away in this very mountain area as protected by Matanga Muni's curse to Vaali and is thus safe for us. Sugriva , our leader who, despatched me to asceratin your identification. My name is Hanuman and I am also too of Vanara vamsha! Dharmatma Sugriva extends his welcome to you; you may consider me as his 'mantri'. I am the vanara putra of Vayu Deva.

Vishleshana on Anjaneya on his origin and illustrative stutis- a ready repeat reference vide Essence of Valmiki Bala Ramayana released by www. kamakoti.org-books section:

Kesari the son of Gautami Rishi and Kesari's wife Anjana secured a grand son named Hanuman with the 'Amsa' (facet) of Parama Shiva and Vayu Deva too was responsible in the birth of the boy. Mistaking Surya Deva for a red-coloured fruit, the boy was tempted to fly skywad tried to hold Surya Deva, as Indra threw his Vajra on Hanuman's body and Ravana tried to hold Hanuman's tail but Hanuman never left his firm hold of Surya Deva. Ravan kept on fighting for a year in vain and tried to wriggle out of Hanuman's powerful clasp. Meanwhile Rishi Vishrava arrived at the spot and eulogised Hanuman to release Ravana the terror of the Universe. There after Hanuman resided for long time at Pampapura on the banks of PampaRiver as a strong fixture and was thus acclaimed as 'Sthanu'. Also since Ravana who had dictated the World and controlled Devas was humiliated by Anjaneya, his name and fame spread as Hanuman: Nighnanta cha Suraan mukhyan Ravanam Lokaraavanam, Nihanti Mushthirbhayah sa Hanumaaniti vishrutah. (Ravana who was in the habit of badly hurting Devas and related Demi-Gods and killing Vishnu- Bhaktas without mercy had thus been restrained badly and received a jolt by Hanuman; the 'Mushtighatas' or 'Hanus' (beatings of closed hand grasps) damaged Ravana was the reason why Hanuman was named as such. Lord Brahma informed Hanuman that during the twenty eighth Tretayuga's first Part of Vaivaswa Manvantara, Bhagavan Vishnu would take the Incarnation of Shri Rama and that he would achieve Rama's unreserved devotion to Hanuman and destroy the clan of Ravana, his cruel brothers and sinful sons. (Bhavishya Purana)

Being the son of my father Vayu Deva, I could assume to what ever form that I would wish for. Right now I have arrived here in the form of a mendicant’ As Hanuman concluded his prashamasha and with the invitation as from the fugitive King Sugriva, Shri Rama was pleased addressed Lakshmana: ‘Sumitra nandana! This minister of maha manasvi Sugriva had been sent to invite us. Named Hunuman, he appears to have assessed us closely and capable of objective assessment and worthy of sweet reciprocation. I am getting convinced that a capable personality who might not have studied and experienced the nuances of Rig Veda Shiksha, Yajur Vedaabhyasa, and Sama Veda Vidvat could be capable of rendering such conversational finesse. Surely he should have mastered Vedangas of Siksha, Vyakarana, Kalpa Grandha, Nirukta, Chhandas, and Jyotisha and also expertise in ‘swadhyaaya’ or self study!

Vishleshana on Vedangas: Siksha is essentially about Sangeeta or Music the Swara Shastra viz. Sapta Swaras, Gramas or scale or gamut in music, Murchanas or intonations/modulations, ten Gunas, Padas (letters); Kalpa grantha comprises kalpas of Nakshatra or Chandra-Nakshatra movement; Veda for attaining Purushardhas viz. Dharma-Artha- Kaama-Moksha; Samhita about Tatwa Darshi, Mantras Chhandas etc; Angirasa Kalpa about abhichara vidhi vidhana like procedures of magic, charms, benevolent or malevolent karma kaanda and finally Shanti Kalpa, Mantras, Procedures, to ward off dangers, and usher in good tidings from Celestial, Terrestrial, extra terrestrial sources. Griha Kalpa too is significant like Homa Prakriyas, Mudras, Mangala Snaanaas, Abhishekas, Pujas for Deva-Devis and Nava Grahas etc. Vyakarana Shastra is about grammar, vibhaktis or cases, vachanas, naama - sarvanaamas, Pratyaya, Samaasa, Karakas. Nirukta is derived and rhetoric or artificial interpretation seeking to bring out the hidden meaning of Vedas; viz. ‘nir’ connoting the comprehensive sense that is sought to be conveyed and ‘ukta’ states that which is revealed more than what is concealed. Chhandas Shastra is stated as the feet of Vedas, being ‘Vaidik’ and ‘Lokik’; Gayatri-Brihati-Ushnik-Jagati-Trishthup-Anushtup -Pankti being the Chhandas Vidhi and the various combinations of ‘Ganas’ varied basically with ‘ya-maa-taa-raa-ja-baa-na-sa-la-ga’ and poetry made there of in three letter combinations; the ruling deities of the Ganas are: Ya gana (Water), Ma gana (Prithvi), Ta gana (Sky), Ra gana (Agni/ fire), Ja gana (Surya), Bha gana (Chandra), Na gana (Ayu or Life/health) and Sa gana (Vaayu). Jyotisha Shastra is all about Siddantha Ganita, Jaataka/ hora, and Samhita. The means of Jyotisha are Panchanga Sadhana by way of Thithi-Vaara-Nakshatra-Karana-Yoga; Grahana Sadhana of Solar/ Lunar Eclipses, besides Dik-Sadhana. Most certainly what ever he has stated is purely grammatical as he ought to have practised by way of ‘swadhyaaya’, since his conversationistic style is impeccable while neither an impure word nor an uncouth expression had slipped up ever. While conversing, his face, eyes, hands or any other body parts and gestures are quite tuned up to his clean, clear, well balanced expressions. Hanuman has expressed his opinions candidly with no breaks of expressions, wordings, sentences, and ramblings of thoughts. His voice is hearty, medium, direct and straightforward. Anayaa chitrayaa vaachaa trishaanavyanjanatrayaa, kasya naaraadhyate chittamdyataaserarerapi/ How could indeed be not delighted as someone expresses most convincingly with his unique voice as the party being addressed could have no choice but to follow with spontaneity'. So telling brother Lakshmana, Shri Rama replied to Hanuman: Viditaa nou gunaa vidvan Sugrivasya mahatmanah, tameva chaavaam maargaavah Sugrivam plavageshwaram/ Yathaa braveeshi Hanuman Sugriva vachanaadiha, tat tathaa hi karishyaavo vachanaat tama sattama/ 'Vidvan Hanuman! We have by now well appreciated the outstanding qualities of Sugriva. We both have actually arrived here seeking to locate and looking for him. Saadhu shiromana Hanuman! We appreciate your kind offer to take us and firm up friendship with him.' Hanuman was pleased by Shri Rama's eagerness to follow him to approach Sugriva.

On hearing Shri Rama's encouraging words, Hanuman realised that Shri Rama ought to be having some extremely significant expectation from Sugriva and felt happy, considering that Sugriva too would be happy in the context of Vaali's sworn enmity with him. Hanuman pondered that Sugriva's chances of his 'rajya prapti' could be brighter. Then Hanuman commented while proceeding up the mount, 'Pampa sarovara banks are no doubt attractive but the forests are risky with ferocious animals but still you both have dared to visit this place. Then Lakshmana started replying with the tacit approval of Rama: 'Vidvan! There is famed Kingdom of Ayodhya which was popular for the Kingship of Dasharatha of Ikshvaku vamsha as he was a renowned warrior and symbol of ideal administration of the four classes of Brahmana-Kshatriya-Vaishya-and the Lower Varnas as per the golden principles of Dharma and Nyaya. Indeed on the face of earth, King Dasharatha was famed for his unique qualities of universal popularity in

While we were searching upside down the nooks and corners of the dandakaranya for any trace of Devi Sita, we happened to encounter a daitya named Danu or Kabandha whom we punished by slashing his shoulders. While dying he regretted his misdemeanor, appreciated the great injustice of ‘Sitaapaharana’ to Rama and me and after his death his Atma enabled us to vision and guided us to reach this Rishyamooka mount and meet the fugitive King Sugriva. Shri Rama accompanied by his younger brother have arrived here and their bravery and battle skills are stated to be extraordinary. They belong to the glorious Ikshvaku Vamsha being the sons of the famed King Dasharatha under whose instructions the Raja Kumaras have taken to forest life now. King Dasharatha had the unique distinction of performing Rajasuya and Ashvamedha Yagjnas having given away dakshinas and charities. Rama had to taken to forest life since the King gave boons to his youngest queen Devi Kaikeyi and in lieu thereof the latter desired Rama's vana vaasa. In obedience Rama had been truly following the instruction by way of 'pitru vakya paripalana dharma'. Along with Rama his wife Devi Sita too accompanied and so did Lakshmana on their own volitions. Mahatma Shri Rama on the path treaded my Munis of Damayita-Daana-Daya or Control-Charity-Compassion the three seeds of virtue had been observing by the letter and spirit. But most unfortunately, Mahasura Ravana abducted Pativrata Devi Sita forcibly in the absence of Rama Lakshmanas. Now, the latter have arrived here seeking your refuge and help bhavatā sakhyakāmau tau bhrātarau rāmalakṣmaṇau, pratigṛhyārcayasvemau pūjanīyatamāṁ ubhau/ As these two brothers of Rama Lakshmanas seek your close affinity and assistance, please to welcome them and extend close camaraderie as these heros are highly worthy of veneration. Then Sugriva addressed the respectable brothers with reverence and admiration: tan mamaivaiśa satkāro lābhaś caivottamaḥ prabho, yat tvam icchasi sauhārdaṁ vānareṇa mayā saha/ rocate yadi vā sakhyam bāhur eṣa prasāritaḥ, grhyatām pāṇinā pāṇir maryādā vadhyatām dhruvā/ Bhagavan! I am a mere Vanara but you are a 'Nara' that too a Mahatma. As you thus condescend to me and patronize, I should consider it as my fortune and that ought to lead to the fulfillment of my fortune. I have unique pleasure and satisfaction to reciprocate the trust that you have rested on me and extend my firm hands on to yours. Shri Rama felt delighted at this highly fruitful union of close affinity. They both embraced each others and shook hands closely and vigorously. Then Hanuman resumed the form of a 'Sadhu Mahatma' as he approached Rama Lakshmanas earlier, collected dried up tree branches and lit up fire : dīpyamānam tato vahnim puṣpair abhyarcya satkṛtam, tayo madhye tu supṛīto nidadhe susamāhitaḥ/ tato 'gnim dīpyamānam tau cakratuś ca pradakṣiṇam, sugrīvo rāghavaś caiva vayasvatvam upāgatau/ Then having duly worshipped 'agni deva' with concentration and as evidenced by the presence of 'agni- jvaalaas', Shri Rama Sugrivas performed 'pradakshinas' and firmed up mutual friendship bonds. Then the embraced each other tightly each other and said: Tvam vayasosi hridyo me hyokam dukkham sukham cha nou, Sugrivo Raghamam vaakyamityu vaacha prahrishthavat/ Then Shri Rama asserted to Sugriva : 'You are now henceforth my dear friend, philosopher and guide. And we should share our joys and problems together'. Then Hanuman broke up chandana tree branches and made Rama Sugrivas eat comfortably; the Sugriva recalled reminiscently to Shri Rama: 'Shri Rama! I was banished from my house and have been wandering aimlessly. My wife too had been snatched away from me. My brother Vaali had threatened to kill me: Vaalino me mahabhaga bhayaartasyaabhayam kuru, kartumarhasi Kaakutsstha bhayam me na bhaved yathaa/ Maha bhaga! Please protect me from the terror of Vaali and you should devise such a plan to destroy him.' As Sugriva stated with folded hands thus, Rama smiled and replied: Maha Kapi Sugriva! I am sure that help surely gets reciprocated as your dear wife should soon be recovered and surely and soon Vaali would be killed. Sugriva! The might of my arrows which is surfeit with the radiance of Surya Deva is never emptied. Duraachari Vaali should soon succumb to my poisonous serpent like arrows as he should have to fall to dust.' Sugriva replied with disbelief: Tava prasaadena nrisimha veera, priyaam cha rajyam cha samaapruyaamaham, tathaa kuru tvam naradeva vairinam yathaa na simhyaat sa punarmayaagrajam/

‘Purusha Simha! I should unhesitatingly prostrate before you as my wife and kingdom were to be regained.’ As he stated likewise, Sugriva shed hot tears in disbelief yet with elevated hopes and assurances.

I would not be able to recognise either her ‘bhūja keertis’ or shoulder jewellery or her ear rings but most certainly her ‘nupuras’ of foot jewellery since he would daily greet her feet in the early mornings!’ Then Shri Rama addressed Sugriva! As Shri Rama expressed his anguish and anger too, Sugriva seeks to assuage Rama’s inner feelings and assures ‘karya siddhi’ finally; reciprocatively Rama assures Sugriva to regain his kingdom and wife too!

As Shri Rama got agitated emotionally, Sugriva too was reacted and started crying sentimentally and with a low and hoarse tone stated: Prabho! [Brief vishleshana on Tri Gunas:

Sattva is described as the fountain of Goodness and happiness in a pure form. Its colour is stated to be white standing for purity, integrity, happiness, contentment, forgiveness and faith. The Rajas Guna is stated to be red in colour and is featured as false pride, deceit, avarice, hatred and selfishness. The Tamo Guna standing for black colour is stated to feature ignorance, lack of resources, anger, fear and quarrelsomeness. There is no set identity of the Gunas but are intermingled and rapidly changeable. A person who is Good basically might spurt out into anger and pride and change over in the same breath to fear. But surely the resultant impact would be disastrous.]

As a human being takes to constant crying, he tends to succumb to fear, which leads further to negation of 'duhkha nivarana upaya' or the ways and means of assuaging sorrow, and in turn 'adhairya' or lack of courage. Those human beings who are shaken up the fear are often sunk in with their boats drawn down the flows of one's own tears! eṣo 'ñjalir mayā baddhaḥ prañayāt tvāṁ prasādaye, pauruṣaṁ śraya śokasya nāntaraṁ dātum arhasi/ ye śokam anuvartante na teṣāṁ vidyate sukham, tejaś ca kṣīyate teṣāṁ na tvāṁ śocitum arhasi/ My folded hand request to you Shri Rama! Kindly never resort to crying as that dims down the capacity to think, plan and resolve to execute. Shoka leads to suspicion and the consequent timidity. Hence you ought to discard 'shoka' and weakens resolve.

[Refer to Vishleshana on 'Arishad Vargas' vide Bhagavad Gita and Kathopanishad:

Bhagavad Gita states: Duhkeshvanudvignamānaḥ sukhesu vigataspruḥaḥ, veetaraaga bhaya krodhaḥ sthitadheer- muniruchyate/ Getting terribly agitated while facing insurmountable impediments and getting extremely overjoyed by very joyous experiences is the negation of an equanimous mind and the ability to neutralise the emotions. One's capacity to neutralise the inner emotions of pleasures and pains alike is the State of 'Sthitapaginantva'! Sorrows and joys are the consequences of discontent and of success. The vicious circle of discontentment leads to disappointment which itches on the fear of failure. This creates irritability, fear, anguish, anger, and back to dissatisfaction of life. Sadhakas realise that without Shiva's approval even an ant or insect would not do harm. And 'Shivaagjna' is on account of one's own doings of the previous births and of the ongoing one, besides the estimated future foretellings too. The Karma Sutra explains: Avashyamanubhoktavyam sthitam karma shubhamashubham/ or our own 'karma phala' or the sweetness or sourness of the fruit is reciprocated. That firm belief of hope or disappointment as the case that may be, is the 'Atma Swarupa' which certainly not is the body but the Self Consciousness of the concerned body which is clean and transparent and indestructible and eternal. Dhaayato Vishayaan Pumsah sangasteshoopajaayate, sangaatsanjaayate kaamah kaamaat krodhobhi jaayate, sangaatsanjaayate kaamah kaamaat krodhobhijaayate/ Krodhaadbhavati sammohah sammohat smriti vibhramah, smriti bhramashaah buddhi naashah buddhi naashaat pranashyati/ Every human being is subject to desires; if the desires are not fulfilled, there would be disappointment and eventual frustration; the resultant grief develops anguish and instability of mind; this further shapes up as anger coupled with wrong judgment and discretion which results in further failures! Such is the impact of the proverbial ‘arishad Vargas’ or the six enemies of human beings viz. Kaama krodha lobha moha mada matsaras or excessive desires, anger, selfishness and avarice, infatuation, ego and jealousy. Raaga dvesha niyuktaistu vishaanindriyaischaran, aatmavashyaravidheyaatmaa prasaadamadhigacchati/ Prasaade sarva duhkhaanaam haani rasyopajaayate, prasanna chetasohyaashu buddhih parya patishthate/ If one is able to control desires and dislikes, then there can be regulation of mind and least disturbance of peace. Kathopanishad vide I.iii.3-4 states: Aatmaanam rathinam vidhuh, shareeram rathameva tu, buddhim tu saarathim viddhi, manah pragrahamevacha/ Indriyaani hayaanaahu vishaayamsteshu gocharam, ateendriya mano yuktam bhokteetyaahur maneeshinaam/ This Individual Self is denoted as the Master of the Chariot, body is the chariot, charioteer is the ‘buddhi’ or the Intellect / Mind the bridle. The Pancha Indriyas are the horses viz. the Pancha Karmendriyas ie. the eyes-ears- mouth-nose-reproductive cum excretory organs and Pancha Jnenendriyas of seeing-hearing-eating- breathing and the concerned of the last afore said. Besides, material objects are the roads as countless. Those who understand these details are called the Self and the latter has the body adjuncts and the mind)] Prasaade sarva duhkhaanaam haanirasyopajaayate prasanna chetasohyaashu buddhih paryapatishthate/ Peace of Mind could be routinised even as one goes on a fee spree of fulfilling desires of life yet within one’s mental control. But once ‘chitta shuddhi’ or the purity of conscience is tarnished and ‘indriya nigraha’ or control of senses is lost then the mental bridle gets tilted off.]

Stanza 14 onward: hitam vayasya bhāvena brūhi nopadiśāmi te, vayasyatām pūjayan me na tvam śocitum arhasi/ Sugriva continued addressing Shri Rama to fortify himself and not to keep on crying: ‘I am providing this advice to you as my dear friend not as a lecture; please do not misunderstand me. Dear Rama, do not cry’. In response, Rama tried to assume normalcy and replied to Sugriva: ‘As a good friend, this kind of timely assuaging my unbearable sorrow is indeed expected from you. Now, I am getting back to normalcy. Further, you may tell me if you desire any kind of assistance from me, do indicate to me unhesitatingly to me and I assure you its fulfillment like seeds of good crops should flourish in the rainy season. mayā ca yad idam vākyaṁ abhimānāt samīritam, tat tvayā hariśārdūla tattvam ity upadhāryatām/ anṛtaṁ noktapūrvam me na ca vakṣye kadā cana, etat te pratijānāmi satyenaiva śapāmi te/ Vanara sreshtha! In the context of your own difficulty in reference to your elder brother Vaali, you may explain to me in detail and I assure you that the needful should be assuredly due to your hearts’ contentment. Neither ever in the past nor now, I have had never ever given false promises in my life and even right now I should make a ‘pratigjna’ and swear by my truthfulness.’ As Shri Rama affirmed likewise, Sugriva was delighted and felt assured that soon his dreams should turn true to reality!

Then Sugriva explained that he and his elder brother Vaali were the sons of Riksharaja who was quite popular those days. 'After the demise of the father, the ministers appointed me as the King. In due course, I gained popularity of the traditional kingdom and treated the citizens with affection and devotion. Even before my Kingship there was a cruel and gigantic danava by name 'Mayavi' and his sons were named 'Maya' and 'Dundubhi'. Vaali my elder brother had a problem on account of a female. One mid night time, when the citizens of the kingdom were fast asleep, Mayavi danava shouted for Vaali and challenged him for an encounter. Vali was asleep but having got awoken by the thunderous shouts of challenge to Vaali, he rushed out despite my prostrations. On seeing the dreadful and huge sized asura, I was frightened and tried to run away but the danava sighted me; in the chase Vaali too joined me. In that chase, midnight moon shine guided us towards a huge cave as we halted down. The Daanava too chased upto and right into the cave. Then Vaali shouted on me as an order to me: iha tvam tiṣṭha sugrīva biladvāri samāhitaḥ, yāvad atra praviśyāhaṁ nihanmi samare ripuṁ/ mayā tv etad vacaḥ śrutvā yācitaḥ sa paramtapa, śāpayitvā ca mām padbhyāṁ praviveśa bilaṁ tadā/ tasya praviṣṭasya bilaṁ sāgrah saṁvatsaro gataḥ, sthitasya ca mama dvāri sa kālo vyatyavartata/ Sugriva! Till such time that the enemy gets killed by me do wait for me standing. I prostrated him not to enter the cave alone but let me accompany him. He outright rejected the plea and rushed in reiterating his command. As Vaali thus entered, Sugriva waited for a full one year. ahaṁ tu naṣṭaṁ taṁ jñātvā snehād āgatasambhramaḥ, bhrātaraṁ na hi paśyāmi pāpaśaṅki ca me manaḥ/ atha dīrghasya kālasya bilāt tasmād viniḥśṛtam, sapheṇaṁ rudhiraṁ raktam ahaṁ dṛṣtvā suduḥkṛhitaḥ/ nardatām asurāṇām ca dhvanir me śrotram āgataḥ, nirastasya ca saṁgrāme krośato niḥsvano guroḥ/ As there was no sign of either Vaali or the Danava, I felt that the brother lost his way inside the huge and yawning cave and felt agitated about his whereabouts. Then after a very long lapse of days and nights, I witnessed flows of blood outside the cave and got disconcerted and disturbed. Even then there were gigantic shouts possibly of the colossal danava. No doubt Vaali too was capable of shrieks likewise but might not be of this kind of thunderous echo. ahaṁ tv avagato buddhyā cihnais tair bhrātaraṁ hatam, pidhāya ca biladvāraṁ śilayā girimātrayā, śokārtaś codakaṁ kṛtvā kiṣkindhām āgataḥ sakhe/ gūhamānasya me tattvaṁ yatnato mantribhiḥ śrutam/ Thus as there were no signs of Vaali's victory thus, I firmed up that my dear and highly reputed, intrepid hero brother was gone for ever. Then I closed the entry of the deep cave with a massive rock and performed 'jajaanjali tarpanas' and broke the most unfortunate tragedy faced by the kingdom of Kishkindha. In the absence of Vaali the ministers declared me as the King. But, after a lapse of years, brother Vaali re-surfaced; he imprisoned the ministers. As I prostrated before Vaali, he bursted and screamed at me with vengeance.

Even as he begged of his sincerest apologies of Sugriva, Vaali did not relent but recoiled with venomous reactions. Sugriva begged at Vali's feet: 'Anaatha nandana! I am so fortunate and proud that you had returned with glory and success. Now, you're my unique support and refuge. Kindly do me the honour of accepting this luminous 'chhatra' as the symbol of your acceptance of your Kingship. Vaanara Raaja! Having been drowned in suspenseful waiting for a year waiting at the door step of the 'Maha Guha' with trepidation and anguish, I witnessed streams of raw blood flowing out from the cave and my heart had literally broken down as I was truly benumbed in my body parts and deep within my mind and heart. Then I had shut down with a huge mountain rock and having offered my sincere jalaanjali and tarpanas most earnestly and returned back to the kingdom with a broken heart. Vishadaattivah maam drushtvaa pouromantribhirava cha, abhishikto na kaameena tanme kshantu tvamarhasi/ Tvameva Raja maanaarhah sadaa chaaham yayhaa puraa, raaja bhava niyogoyam mama tvadvirahaat kritah/ As I returned alone broken hearted, the citizens and ministers hastened my rajyabhishaka but had not willingly conceded the status. Do please excuse me for my indiscretion as indeed you are the rightful King and as ever I am your 'sevaka'. 'Be it announced to Mantris, pura vaasis and the entirety of the kingdom that Maha Raja Vaali is our glorious King. mā ca roṣam kṛthāḥ saumya mayi śatrunibarhaṇa, yāce tvām śirasā rājan mayā baddho 'yam añjaliḥ/ balād asmi samāgamya mantribhiḥ puravāsibhiḥ, rājabhāve niyukto 'ham sūnyadeśajigīṣayā/Soumya! Shatru sudana! Kindly do not get angry with me. Raja! I pray to you with my head down and folded hands. The Ministers and citizens had coerced me to be the king so that our shatru kings should not attack a headless kingdom.' As Sugriva entreated in all possible means, Vaali shouted thunderously with fuming rage at Sugriva: 'I hate you'. There after he hissed like a badly hurt cobra and spread venom all over at Sugriva. Then he hauled up the ministers and shouted at them: You ought to have had some thinking ability to realise that the Mayaavi Danava screamed at me to battle with anger; I had therefore to exit the Raja Bhavan and the evilminded brother of mine followed me surreptitiously. The Danava having noticed both the brothers chasing me reached the cave mouth. Then I asked Sugriva to wait at the mouth of the cave itself, explaining to him that unless I kill the danava which only I could be able to execute and await the killing of the Daanava. It took me to discover the maayaavi daanava a full long year. Then finally I located the maayaavi with his massive body and instantly attacked him to death. From his face and chest, there were flows of red blood into the slopes of the curvy cave gushing out. With extraordinary contentment and self pride I sought to get out of the suffocating depths of the cave but found that the entrance was closed by a mountain boulder.

vikrośamānasya tu me sugrīveti punaḥ punaḥ, yadā prativaco nāsti tato 'haṁ bhṛśaduḥkhiṭaḥ/ pādaprahārais tu mayā bahuśas tad vidāritam, tato 'haṁ tena niśkramya yathā punar upāgataḥ/ tatrānenāsmi samruddho rājyaṁ mārgayatātmanaḥ, sugrīveṇa nṛśaṁsena viśmṛtya bhrātr̥sauhr̥dam/ I had desperately shouted for Sugriva and kept on doing so for days and months. Finally I made all out efforts to break down the boulder after several weeks and months. Having been totally exhausted and drained out had since returned back to the kingdom! This wretched and crafty Sugriva having totally discarded 'bhraatru bhaava' had become evil minded with the sole ambition of usurping the kingship presuming that it should be just impossible for me to break the mountain boulder for ever!'. As Vaali made his own conclusions against him, despite my bent down feet and supplications, Sugriva addressed Shri Rama: 'Raghu nandana! Vaali turned me out mercilessly and what was far more wicked, he had forcibly usurped my dear wife Tara Devi. Eversince then I have been a fugitive with the severe fright of Vaali what with loss of kingdom and the dear wife on the Rishyamooka; do kindly appreciate my condition of fear of death any time or at any other place! You are the emblem of kindness.' Shri Rama replied: yāvat taṁ na hi paśyeyāṁ tava bhāryāpahāriṇam, tāvat sa jīvet pāpātmā vālī cāritradūśakaḥ/ ātmānumānāt paśyāmi magnāṁ tvāṁ śokasāgare, tvāṁ ahaṁ tārayiṣyāmi kāmāṁ prāpsyasi puṣkalam/ My dear friend! As long as I do not encounter that wretched Vaanara who had the audacity and shamelessness of snatching away your dear wife, the very concept of 'sadaachaara' would not be retrieved. I promise you by my honour and self respect that you should very soon within a numbered days regain your beloved wife and kingdom. Sugriva got extremely contented and divulged certain significant facts concerning his brother Vaali subsequently.

Samudra Deva said that he would not be capable of the duel, but Giri Raja Himalaya should be a possible challenger. Then Dundubhi the maha mayavi assumed the form of a white cloud and encountered Himavan. The latter politely replied that he was merely a mountain to let tapasvis who meditate or ever engaged in yajna karyas and not worthy of countering the Mahaasura Dundubhi. [Vishleshana on Namuci-Mahendra duel: Asura Namuchi, brother of Mayaasura, was a muscular and physically sturdy daitya. However he failed his challenge against Indra and hid himself in a ray of Surya Deva. But Indra who was in search of the Asura realised the latter’s hiding place. The vengeful Indra encountered Namuchi but assuagingly and peacemakingly conveyed to Namuchi: "O Namuchi, let us be friends from now. I shall not kill you, provided you stay anywhere that is wet or dry; nor in the night or in the day!. Assured by this truce, Namuchi emerged from his hiding place. But Indra seized an opportunity and cut off Namuchi's head, using the foam of water as his weapon, when it as dusk time of the day. The dying Namuchi cursed Indra while dying that this sin despite the promise of conditionl and veiled truce and friendship should condemn you everlastingly for this treachery!]

Then followed a fierce one-to-one battle. Then Indra tulya paraakrami Vaali and Dundubhi were both subjected to fist fights, hits of boulders, huge trees, and so on for good time, and Dundubha’s forceful offensive fight got gradually dwindled while Indra Kumara Vaali’s stamina got consolidated and enhanced. As both of them performed desperate fight unto death, Vaali lifted up the gigantic body of Dundubhi and hit it forcefully down to earth and crushed the body hard as it got slipped. As the body was hit hard, there were flows of hot blood and finally Dundubhi got dropped dead. taṁ tolayitvā bāhubhyām gatasattvaṁ acetanam, cikṣepa vegavān vālī vegenaikena yojanam/tasya vegapravidhhasya vaktrāt kṣatajabindavaḥ, prapetur mārutotkṣiptā mataṅgasyāśramaṁ prati/ As Dundubhis life was over, then Vaali raised the dead body and threw it off forcefully by a distance of a yojana. Look at these seven strong and huge Saala Vrikshas with sturdy branches; Vaali with his prowess and finesse of throwing arrows had shaken the trees and made the branches freed from their leaves!’ As Sugriva has thus vividly described the unusual valor and skillful release of arrows by Vaali and expressed great admiration for his elder brother, Lashmana intervened smilingly and asked Sugriva: By which type of task that you might get convinced that Rama could terminate Vaali! Then Sugriva replied: as Vaali had in the past tied the seven Saala Vrikshas were tied one by one, now in case Shri Rama could uproot one by one, then I should be able to be convinced that Rama could kill Vaali. Hatasya mahashyaasthi paadenaikena Lakshmana!, udyamya prakshipeschaapi tarass dve dhanushate/ Further more if Rama could make the massive skeleton of Dundubhi be lifted head to feet with a single arrow and have the skeleton thrown off by two hundred yojanas away then, I should be convinced of Rama’s skills. Having heard what Sugriva expressed to Lashmana then Rama kept thinking about the action plan. Sugriva reiterated: Vali is a maha veera and possesses unusual excellence of arrows who was never defeated in life nor failed of my expectations. This had been how I had taken refuge of the Rishyamooka parvata. Vaanara Raja Vaali is invincible. This Hanuman and other ministers of mine too are wary of Vaali’s confirmed superiority. tasya tadvacanam śrutvā sugrīvasya mahātmanah, rāghavo dundubheḥ kāyaṁ pādānguṣṭhena līlayā, tolaitvā mahābāhuś cikṣepa daśayojanam/ As Sugriva was wondering whether Shri Rama could ever to the great feat of throwing the dead body of Dundubhi like Vaali did, Rama too made it stand by his ‘anguti’ and threw off by skeleton by ten yojanas away by a single arrow! Even so Sugriva was perhaps not really impressed as the skeleton of without flesh and blood and was dried up long long away. Then Sugriva reiterated : Sa eva samshastaata tava tasya cha yadulam, Saalam ekam vinirbhadya bhaved vyaktirbalaa balai/ Mahanu - bhava! My lurking doubt still remains about excellence of Rama as compared to Maha Veera Vaali. Let us now pass through the test of ‘Sapta Saala Vriksha Vicchedana’ also.

But they resembled each other so perfectly like Ashvini Kumars, typical prototypes of handsomeness with horse faces and the famed physicians of Devatas, born to Surya Deva and his wife Sanjana.

[Vishleshana on the identity of Ashvini Kumars from Surya Purana:

Vishwakarma the Shilpi's daughter was Sangina whose celestial name is Raagini also called Surenu in dyuloka. Sangina's shadow is Chhaaya also called Nikshubha. Sangina is not only pretty but a Pativrata too; she gave birth to Manu and Yama. But she was unable to approach the ever fiery form of Surya and after retaining her shadow left to her father Vishvakarma's home to stay there for very thousand and odd years, despite the father advising her to return to her husband's home as soon as possible. As the father pressurised her, she left for Utrara Kuru pradesha in the form of a horse. Chhaya Devi and Surya Deva gave birth to two sons named Shritashrava and Shrutakarma, besides a daughter named Tapati. Shritashrava's son was Saavarni Manu and Shanaishwara was the son of Shritakarma. Just as Sangjna Devi was too affectionate with her children, Chhaya Devi was not so. Chhaya had normal relation with Sangjna's elder son Manu, but had difference of opinion with Yama. As Chhaya bothered Yama too much, then the latter desired to lift her physically and held her upside down and in the process touched her feet. Chhaya then gave a 'shaap' or curse that Yama's feet be twisted and disfigured. In this physical altercation, Surya appeared and said that every 'shaap' could be negated but not that of a mother and suggested that the only way could be to the flesh of Yama's feet be kept on 'krimis' or vicious worms so that the flesh of the feet be eaten and got disappeared and the fleshless feet be retained. This way- out would save Yama's feet and Chhaya Devi's curse be carried out too. Soon after this shaap incident, Vishvakarma the father of Sangjna approached Surya Deva and informed him that his daughter Sangjna was in the form of a horse in Shaaka dwipa, and made Surya to assume the form of a male horse at where Sangjna was grazing. Then Surya in the form of a male horse approached Sangjna in the form of a female horse and tried to mate. Sangjna struggled in the act of mating as she was of the feeling that Surya was a 'para purusha'; in the process of the struggle Surya's virility entered Sangjna's nose and she gave birth to two sons viz. Ashvini Kumars the celestial physicians, named Naasatya and Dasnna. After Surya Deva revealed his identity, then the two horses mated again and Revant was born with similar radiance like that of the father.]

Meanwhile Vaali pulled down Sugriva's feet to the ground with a severe hand blow and even without looking around for Rama's arrow ran for life towards the Rishyamoka mountain which surely was unapproachable to Vaali and way. Vaali did chase Sugriva but soon retreated as was reminded of the Matanga Muni shaapa. Meanwhile Rama Lakshmanas returned to the badly hurt Sugriva who even while gasping his breath addressed Shri Rama: āhvayasveti mām uktvā darśayitvā ca vikramam, vairiṇā ghātayitvā ca kim idānīm tvayā kṛtam/ tām eva velām vaktavyam tvayā rāghava tattvataḥ, vālināṃ na nihanmīti tato nāham ito vraje/ Raghunandana! I was totally confused to identify as to who was Sugriva and Vaali. Hence I could simply not release this life smashing arrow of instant poison. Veera Vaanara Raja! If only out of sheer ignorance or by accident or hastiness then I would never be known for mature thinking and mental stability. Once having committed to the gift of 'abhaya' or refuge, negation or denial of such 'pratigjna' ought to attract a 'paataka' and more over the effort of my fortune to regain Devi Sita is at your disposal. Rama Lakshmanas once again proceeded to Kishkindha puri accompanying Sugriva and his followers from Rishyamooka mount. Rama carried his powerful golden dhanush and the arrows in the ‘tureena’. While Rama Lakshmanas in the lead along with Sugriva, Hanuman-Nala-Neela and other followers, they all witnessed the fabulous Nature with trees, flowers, birds, water flows, mountains, caves. The sarovaraas with vaidurya like transparency were replete with sparkling white lotuses floating. The variety of birds ranges from Kaarandava-Saarasa-Hamsa-Vanjula- Jalamriga-chakravaakas flying low on the cool water surfaces. Jungle wild elephants freshly bathed on the water lines with white tusks and teeth were looking like ranges of low black hills. Rama enquired of vaanara raja to enthuse his spirits cool as to what was the name of this part of the way to Kishkindha the Sugriva replied that he might not know the precise name but happened to the tha ashram of ‘Sapta Jana’ where seven munis of lokal popularity. These Munis performed tapasya with head down and feet up straight for decades and reached heaven subsequently, with their bodies too as ‘sa-shareeraas’! It is for that very reason the lical belief had been that asuras and even devas would avoid this place exclusively to Prakritai Maata or Mother Nature! Raghu nandana! Here one could hear the jingle sounds of dancing dames, and sonorous singings in the nights along with symphony of musical sounds. One could surely smell the ‘sugandhas’ even now with heart elevating freshness. Indeed this place is known for the Tri vidha agnis of Garhapatya-Aahavaneeya-Dakshinaagni invoking Heaven-Cloud- Earth as the flames fly like doves on the sky.

Varaha Purana : Creation of Agni Deva, his several names and implication of worship: When Maha Vishnu created ‘Panchabhutas’ or Five Elements) and Loka Pitamah Brahma and commanded the latter to initiate creation, Brahma could not do so and he was extremely confused and hence angry and the rage created thousands of flames called Agni who became extremely thirsty. When Agni asked Brahma as to how his thirst could be quenched, Brahma showed three types of satisfying it viz. sharing the ‘Dakshinas’ received by Devas and hence Agni was known as ‘Dakshinagni’; the second way of Agni’s thirst was by carrying the Havans (Homas and Yajnas) performed in the Trilokas (Three Worlds) in favour of various Deities as their ‘Vahan’, thus becoming Agni popular as ‘Havyavahan’; the third way is that since Agni is present in each ‘Griha’ or household, he is known as ‘Garhapatyagni’. Brahma further named Agni as ‘Vaisvanara’ as the latter provides the means of bestowing ‘Sadgati’ (Salvation) to the virtuous beings performing havans and other good deeds. Agni is ‘Jataveda’ or protector of both Known and Unknown material; ‘Naaraa Prashamsa’-‘Naar’ or people, especially ‘Dwijas’ or twice born Brahmanas, Kshatriyas and Vysyas do ‘Prashamsa’ or praise; Known as ‘Dravinoda’ as Agni provides money power. The other popular names accorded by Brahma to Agni are ‘Tanunpath’ (Agni protects Sharir/Asharir), ‘Prapurna’ (full of everything) and many other names. Agni desired to Brahma to designate a day of each Month so that all concerned would perform worship to Him. Since this was a unique request made by any Deity for the first time, Brahma confirmed Pratipada as a day of significance for Agni. Brahma blessed Agni that Pratipada be popularised among all the Lokas and worship to Agni by way of fasting (Upavas) or at the most by taking milk would qualify a devotee to acquire prosperity and Tejas (radiance) during the current birth and to secure Kingship in the next birth and certainly please the Pitru Loka.

Brahmanda Purana describes : There are three types of Agni viz. Devata related, Bhoutikaagni and Water generated Earth-related Agni called Vidyut Sambhava or Born out of Lightning or Abyoni; as the night is over the Unknown Brahma desired to visualise water and Earth in the darkness and assumed the form of a tiny ‘Khadyota’ (glow-worm) and viewed Agni for illumination and named it as ‘Parthivaagni’ or Terrestrial Fire and divided into three forms viz. ‘Vaidutaagni’, ‘Jatharaagni’ and ‘Souraagni’.

Vaidyutaagni is not assuaged due to rains nor human bellies but only due to friction of wood. Jatharaagni has no illumination and is not visible. Souraagni gets terminated by the Sun Set and enters Agni and gets revived at Sun Rise. Illumination and Heat promote and increase each other. Alike in the Northern and Southern hemispheres, when Sun rises the night enters water and water gradually gains heat and radiation ; at the time of Sun Set the day enters waters and thus the latter gains transparency next morning. Thus in this order the Earth’s hemispheres the Sun Rise and Sun Set or the day and night respectively enter water. Surya Deva absorbs water through his rays and hence called ‘Shuchi’ or of purity. This is related to Earth-related Agni and hence called Shuchi; the latter means Agni with thousand rays which absorb water from various sources like oceans, rivers, wells and all water-bodies. The rays of Agni create both cold water and hot water as also four hundred peculiar forms; those rays which could produce heavy rains are called chandana, Sadhya, Kutana, Akutana and Amrita. Besides these rays, there are three hundred other rays which produce snow. The Snow-fall creating rays are known as Drisyaas, Meghaas, Yaamyas, Hradinyaas (resounding ones) and they have limited illumination and such rays are called Chandras. Those rays which create heat are white in colour numbering three hundred are called Shuklas, Kuhakaas, and Vishvabhuts. Surya Deva distributes these rays to human beings as well as Pitru Devas equitably and satisfy them. Surya helps utilise these rays to Human beings by way of herbs and vegetation, to Pitras by way of Swadhaa-Homas and to Devatas by way of Amrita. In the Vasanta or Spring and Greeshma or Summer seasons, Surya blazes three hundred rays of Agni to heat up the World while he showers in Sharat Kaala or rainy season by four hundred Agni-Kiranas ; in Hemanta or early winter and Sishira or late winter Seasons three hundred rays are utilised.]

success in their daring tasks ahead and the Munis smiled and blessed with ‘tathaastu’. Then dharmatma Shri Rama, Lakshmana, Sugriva and the followers made firm and confident steps forward to Kishkindha.

The party of Rama-Sugrivas thus having reached Kishkindha as fortified by the blessings of Sapta Munis had hidden behind the bushes and trees, Sugriva looked around and made a mammoth shout like ‘megha garjana’ challenging Vaali to come out for a ‘dwandva yuddha’. At that time, Sugriva’s physical radiance was like that of the ‘ushah kaala Surya’ with fresh radiance. Having shouted by swirling the gauntlet thus, Sugriva explained the intricate nine golden gates of the Kishkindha puri spreading the shackles of Maya the make belief all over among the vanaraas inside. He stated: ‘Maha Veera Rama! Once again I am reiterating your oath to destroy Vaali my nightmare at the earliest. kṛtābhijñāna cihnās tvam anayā gajasāhvayā, viparīta ivākāśe sūryo nakṣatra mālayā/ Mahanubhava! As you have pulled out a branch full of Gaja pushpas, Veera Lakshmana made a memorable garland around my neck. Even if the nakshatra maala around the neck of Surya Deva, may the splendour of the flower garland around my neck be fesh indeed.’ Then Rama said assuringly: Sugriva! Your long standing terror and hostility of Vaali ought to disappear on the battle field here with just one shot of my arrow. You should only point out at Vaali in the course of your one to one battle, then he should be thrown off dead into the dust and the proof of the miserable death shoul be indicated by the arrow back to my ‘tuneera’. anṛtaṁ noktapūrvam me vīra kṛcchre ’pi tiṣṭhatā, dharmalobhaparīteṇa na ca vakṣye katham cana/ saphalāṁ ca kariṣyāmi pratijñāṁ jahi sambhramam, prasūtaṁ kalamāṁ kṣetre varṣeṇeva śatakratuḥ/ tadāhvāna - nimittaṁ tvaṁ vālino hemamālīnaḥ, sugrīva kuru taṁ śabdaṁ niṣpated yena vānaraḥ/ Despite my having to encounter innumerable challenges life, I had never uttered a lie in my life nor taken a single step of ‘adharma’. My ‘pratigjna’ ought to be fulfilled. That is precisely why, Sugriva! Expunge away all the traces of timidity and fear from even your remote inner thoughts. As Shri Rama reiterated repeatedly, the pingala varna Sugriva repeated his simha garjana challenging Vaali again and again. Bewidered by the repeated shouts of challenge, the ‘kulaanganaas’ of Vaali’s ‘antahpura’ got flustered and ran away hither and thither.

As ‘maha veera’ Vaali heard in highly haughty challenges for dwandva yuddha repeatedly, he fumed with unusual rage, while his golden type physique turned red. His teeth started grinding, looks were blood red and having stood up with frenzy by pounding earth was ready to jump out. At that time, Vaali’s wife got frightened, touched his hands and shoulders and tried to somewhat cool down his hot temper. She said softly: ‘Maha Veera Purusha: kindly listen to me. Please control your fury which is like the rushing waters of a ‘Maha Nadi’. Think of the example of fresh and soothing flower garland of adorning the neck of a dear husband in the night gets discarded by the next morning, please discard your haughty temper. Vaanara Veera! please settle down for your battle tomorrow morning but not right now. It is well known the world over about your unparalleled bravery and grit. Right now it must be avoided when your temper is high even if the opponent challenges to day again for a second time. Only the other day he did so and as you nearly smashed his head as he ran for life to Matanaga Vana timidly. Vaanara Sugriva by nature is schemy and crafty and unless he truly trusts a strong source of help he would not raise his head and voice again and again. I have heard from Kumara Angada that one day he heard from ‘Gupacharas’ or spies as follows: From Ayodhya, two valiant heros whom named Rama Lakshmanas of Ikashvaaku vamsha have arrived in these parts and they are impossible to defeat. It is further learnt: Sugriva priya kaaryartham praapto tatra duraasadou, sa te bhraatrihi vikhyaataḥ sahaayo rana karmaani/ Raamah parabalamaardraa yugaantaagnirivotthitaḥ, nivaasa vrikshah saadhmaapannaam paraa gatih/ These heros have endeared Sugriva and have approached him as they are standing by your brother and they are reputed as ‘pralayaagni samaanaas’ yet helpful to the needy even at the cost of their own lives.

They are the ‘arta purusha ashrayas, yashasvis, vigjnaana sampannaas, and pitru agjnaa paripaalakas’. It appears that Rama is surfiet with excellent origin, nature, and the ‘uttama dhaatu bhandaar’ or repository of the proactive body ingredients.

On listening the prolonged requests of Devi Tara to make peace and yuvarajatva to brother Sugriva, King Vaali replied: Varaanane! To this angry and provocative brother who keeps challenging me for a duel again and again had still not the suitable punishment as he is used to challenge then, run back with mortal fear and floats back again and again has neither any sense of shame nor bravery excepting repeatedly shouting challenges annoyingly. Now, I would like to teach him a bitter lesson once for all. In my case in my entire lifetime I had never been defeated nor even exhibited my back. Sugriva wishes to some how subdue me and how could I ever not respond to his challenges although these are purposeless. Even having heard about Shri Rama and his calibre, I guess that he is a 'Dharma Jnaata' then how could he be sinful in a 'dharma yuddha'! Now, you better go back along with all these females and do you not follow me asking me to return. You have expressed your views out of your devotion and loyalty to me. Get back, do not be anxious and discouraging. In the battle field, I should stand steadfast and fulfill the desire of getting thrashed once again. In the course of the 'dwandva yuddha', I should fulfill his desire of a repeated thrash by my hurling of trees and 'mushti ghaataas' or fast fist kicks before he should run back fast, but not kill him. Even so, Tara! Even being fully aware that he would not bear my assaults, Duratma Sugriva seeks to get your sympathy and soft corner from your heart. śāpitāsi mama prāṇair nivartasva jayena ca, ahaṁ jītvā nivartiṣye tam alaṁ bhrātaraṁ raṇe/ Now for the last time, my on my honor of my life, I am finally instructing you to return and I should return with success of my victory for me.' As thus Vali instructed Tara Devi, she embraced him in hushed up tone, performed a 'parikrama' cryingly and said good bye. As Tara and her followers returned to 'raani vaasa', Vaali breathed heavily and made an exit from the city. Then he looked all around and saw Sugriva with his loin cloth tightenend up waiting for him. Vaali straight away ran ahead to Sugriva. śliṣṭamuṣṭim samudyamya samrabdhataṁ āgataḥ, sugrīvo 'pi samuddiṣya vāliṁ hemamālinam/ tam vālī krodhatāmrākṣaḥ sugrīvaṁ raṇapaṇḍitam, āpatantaṁ mahāvegāṁ idaṁ vacanam abravīt/ eṣa muṣṭir mayā baddho gāḍhaḥ sunihitāṅgulih, mayā vegavimuktas te prāṇān ādāya yāsyati/ Sugriva too jumped forward running and so did Vaali who noticed a prominent flower garland tied around Sugriva's neck. Vaali shouted at Sugriva and asserted that his powerful fist stretching all the nerves of his hands and shoulders ought to give you such a thud that once fallen on your head creates a reverberating sound of a drum. As announced by Vaali, the thud shook up entire system of the nerves of Sugriva's head as he vomitted gushes of blood. Then Sugriva uprooted a huge Saala vriksha and threw it with speed and unusual vigour as Indra Deva hit his vajrayudha on a gigantic mountain. tau bhīmalavikrāntau suparṇasamavegināu, pravṛddhau ghoravapuṣau candrasūryāv ivāmbare/ vālinā bhagnadarpas tu sugrīvo mandavikramaḥ, vāliṁ prati sāmraṣo darśayām āsa Rāghavam/ Then the 'paraakrama and bala' or bravery and strength was frightening to withstand as the encounter of two 'maha garudaas' with their strength of mutual hits. As Sugriva's strength and forbearance started gradually dwindling he looked for Raghava. tato dhanuṣi samdhāya śaram āśviṣopamam, rāghaveṇa mahābāṇo vālivakṣasi pātitaḥ/ vegaṇābhīhato vālī nipapāta mahūtale, athokṣitaḥ śoṇitayavistravaiḥ; supuṣpitāśoka ivāniloddhataḥ, vicetano vāsavasūnur āhave; prabhramṣitendradhvajavat kṣitīm gataḥ/ Then Rama having realised that the precise time had struck, raised his dhanush, fixed it up with his fully poisoned arrow and released it with extraordinary speed and force as though Yama Raja threw off Kaala chakra. No sooner than Rama released the arrow than the maha tejasvi parakrami Vaanara Raja Vaali fell straight to earth. Indra Kumara Vaali from his body had to let streams of his blood on earth just as an 'ashoka maha vriksha' with sweeps of speedy winds fell down and as Indra dhvaja fell right down to earth from the sky.

Falling before death, Vaali heavily criticizes Rama for his stealthiness, undeserved glory, falsity, and sheer selfishness colliding with Sugriva only to recover Devi Sita, which he too could have with bravery!

As Mahabali Vaali had thus fallen down to earth severley with broken limbs like a huge tree got broken down, like Mahendra Dhwaja fell down too. Yet his vital energy, body shine and bravery were in tact. The sparkling golden garland studded with invaluable gems which Lord Indra himself gifted to him too was in place. His garland, body and the arrow which hit the 'marma sthala or ' the vital spot' were the targets and in place. One would be reminded of King Yayati who traversed all over the earth, enjoyed all celestial pleasures of food, gold, ornaments and women as his son exchanged his youth in favour of Yayati, as Shukracharya gave the boon, finally fell down from Swarga at the pralaya kaala. [Refer Sarga Six of the Essence of Valmiki Ayodhya Ramayana] As Vaali fell down to earth, Rama Lakshmanas approached him nearby. On seeing them, Vaali addressed Rama: 'Raghu nandana! You are the famed eldest son of King Dasharatha and seeing and meeting you would be a pleasure. I have not come here to face you in a battle but to another person. Then why have you hit me to fall almost dead on earth! What is the great glory by your such deed. The definition of a battle is between two ‘shatrus’ and one gets the victory and another a defeat or death. The world wide fame that Rama is described about is that Ramachandra is of a memorable family, ‘a satvaguna sampanna, tejasvi, karunaa svabhava, praja hita kaari, dayalu, samyochita karya karta, sadaachaara jnaata and of dridha pratigina’. He is also reputed as of ‘indriya nigraha and is surfiest with dama-shama-kshama-dharma dhriti, and aparaadha dandaka.’ As you are thus expected of such outstanding features, my wife Tara Devi had rightly disallowed me to battle with Sugriva as you are with him. Till such time that I had not seen you and met, I have had the dilemma whether I was alright to battle with Sugriva owing to his nearness to Rama. But now the doubt was cleared crystal clear now as I have fallen down in this condition due to your arrow strike, which is just unbelievable! na tvām vinihatātmānam dharmadhvajam adhārmikam, jāne pāpasamācāram tṛṇaiḥ kūpam ivāvṛtam/ satām veśadharam pāpam pracchannam iva pāvakam, nāham tvām abhijānāni dharmacchadmābhisamvṛtam/ viṣaye vā pure vā te yadā nāpakaromy aham, na ca tvām pratijāne ’ham kasmāt tvām haṁsy akilbiṣam/ Now I have become fully aware that my common sense has fully failed me. So far I have been convinced that you are a ‘dharma dhvaja’ but never expected that you are essentially an ‘adharma dhvaja’. Your ways and means of thought and action are replete with wickedness and sinfulness. You are in the face cut and dressing manner of a ‘sadhu mahatma’. Neither I had attacked or even created any kind of trouble in your kingdom nor I had ever even met you till now, and picked up enmity against you, then why have you punished me to near death! I am a vaanara who eats fruits and roots moving about of the wilderness of forests. With no fault of mine why have you sought to kill me and seek to rave about! Rama! You are a respectable son of a King. By assuming the dress of tapasvis, you do advertise your self in the name of Dharma and Nyaaya, the virtue and justice! kaḥ kṣatriyakule jātaḥ śrutavān naṣṭasamśayah, dharmalinga praticchannaḥ krūraṁ karma samācareṭ/ rāma rājakule jāto dharmavān iti viśrutaḥ, abhavyo bhavyarūpeṇa kimarthaṁ paridhāvasi/ sāma dānam kṣamā dharmāḥ satyaṁ dhṛtiparākramaḥ, pārthivānāṁ guṇā rājan daṇḍaś cāpy apakāriṣu/ Who then would you think that a kshatriya conversant with the tenets of dharma and dressed accordingly too could dare to be cruel to such a showy man! I should have encountered the 'duraatma' Ravana and having tied his heads around a rope and brought her at your feet for what ever you should have decided about his surrender. Just as Bhagavan Hayagriva would have punished Madhu-Kaitabha Rakshasaas for their stealing 'shvetaashvatari shrutis', I should have handed over Devi Sita to you, even if I were to reach 'paataala'! But indeed, as I should now have to reach 'veera swarga' and Sugriva would no doubt be the king understandably, but the naked truth remains as a blot for ever that I get killed by 'adharma' as the posterity should realise'. Having declared like wise, Maha Veera Vaali could not bear the pain of the thrust of the arrow that drilled his intestines, and hence was not able to shout at Rama any further.

[Vishleshana on Bhagavan Hayagriva and Madhu Kaitabhas vide Devi Bhagavata Purana:

Devi Bhagavati blesses Vishnu as Hayagreeva: As Indra and Demi-Gods were performing a Sacrifice in the presence of Brahma and Mahesa, they had all desired Maha Vishnu to preside over the Function and called on Him. But, Lord Vishnu was in 'Yoga Nidra' or the Sleep of Deep Meditation and nobody would dare wake Him. More over, interruptions of somebody's speech, the love of a couple, or waking up a person's deep sleep are sins equivalent to 'Brahma hatya' or killing of a Brahmana. The Lord was seated in a 'Padmasana' posture squatting with His legs folded and resting His chin on the top of His Bow with an Arrow fully drawn. As the Sacrifice was to be concluded, Lord Siva advised Lord Brahma to create a White Ant, 'Vamri' and directed it to bite the arrow gently which should wake up the Lord to consciousness and thus make the request. The Vamri sensed the delicate situation and requested Brahma to grant it a return boon for the great risk being undertaken in disturbing the Yoga Nidra of no less a personality than Maha Vishnu Himself! Lords Brahma and Siva gave a boon to the Vamri that what ever trickles from the Sacrificial Offerings of Ghee in the Homa Kunda (Fire Pit) would spill out could be collected as its share. As commanded by Brahma, the insect bit the fore-end of the arrow and the tight string gave way at once and the entire Universe reverberated with horrifying sound as the earth quaked, mountains were shaken, Oceans rose high, Sun lost way and Devas got traumatised. Maha Vishnu's Head was severed with His Crown and there was no trace as to where it fell! Along with Devas, Brahma and Siva cried like human beings as there was a 'Pralaya'-like situation(Universal Dissolution). Then Deva Guru Brihaspati consoled Indra, Brahma and Siva and emboldened them to countenance the grim situation, as such eventualities did happen in the past. The only recourse that Lords Siva and Brahma, accompanied by Indra and Demi-Gods, had in one voice made an intense appeal to Maha Devi Bhagavati, the Eternal Cause of Causes, the very Original Energy, the Life Force of entire Creation, the Bindu and Pranava, the Sourcing Fountain of knowledge and above all the Embodiment of Charity and Forgiveness. Pleased by the most sincere prayers of Brahma and Siva downward, 'Nirguna' Maha Devi hinted that there ought to be a cause for the tragedy. In the company of Maha Lakshmi, once Maha Vishnu laughed by thinking of something. Lakshmi Devi failed to understand the possible reason as to why Vishnu was so much amused about. Was it a spot on Her face or was it due to another woman in His desire? Then as Vishnu did not clarify, Lakshmi assumed 'Tamasic Guna' and gave a curse to Him saying that His head should fall off. Thus happened the resultant tragedy despite Her sincere repentance. While this tragedy took place, there was a coincidental incident that a tough Davana of extraordinary cruelty, named Hayagriva or the Demon with the neck of a horse, resorted to severe 'Tapas' (Meditation) to Maha Bhagavati for thousands of years by following a strict regime of Sacrifice and unflinching devotion. Maha Devi appeared before the Rakshasa and granted him a boon that no Power in the Universe could cause death to him, except by an Extraordinary Energy in the form similar to his own viz.

Hayagriva form alone could destroy him. Brahma and Siva hastened with the solution to the present gravest tragedy and instructed Devata's own Architect, Visvakarma to do the needful. The Architect killed a horse at once and fixed its neck to Vishnu's severed head and thus emerged Hayagriva.

Vishnu destroys Madhu Kaitabha brothers: When Maha Vishnu was in Yoga Nidra in a comfortable posture of lying on the bed of Ananta Naga, two Demon brothers named Madhu and Kaitabha were born from the wax of Maha Vishnu's ears. Their birth was a mystery and unknown as felt by the brothers themselves whose physical forms grew fast and strong day by day, even as they were playing in the ocean surroundings, killing various kinds of aquatic species for food or play and finally stealing Vedas. Coming of age in course of time, the Demon brothers with huge bodies and proportionate common sense too, realised that there must have been a Massive Force which alone could have given birth to them. From the air, they heard a sound 'Vagbija' the Seed Mantra (Seed 'Bija' and 'Vak' the Speech of Goddess Sarasvati). To start with fun, but later on with maturity, they kept on practising the sound for years together, little realising the impact of the Mantra's repetition. In fact, they became so obsessed with the Mantra that they neither had food nor sleep, but with full concentration and utmost sincerity. 'The Parasakti's Voice emerged from the Skies that the Danava brothers would be invincible in the entire Universe provided they were united and fight two-some. Blessed by Maha Devi, the two brothers became swollen with pride and eventually attacked Lord Brahma Himself. On realising that they were unconquerable, Brahma who was seated on the lotus- head sprouting from Maha Vishnu's navel, tried the age-old four means. He tried to use 'Sama (Counselling) 'Dana' (Gifting or bribing), 'Bheda' (put one against another) and finally 'Danda' (Punish), but neither of these media appeared feasible; he ran away to Vaikuntha for protection but Maha Vishnu was in Yoga Nidra. Brahma had thus prayed to Yoga Nidra Devi to prompt Maha Vishnu to wake up. It was actually Maha Maya's discretion which mattered as Vishnu Himself could not regain consciousness on His own. The concentrate of 'Tamo Guna' - Maha Maya - was earnestly prayed to by Brahma, as this was a prestige issue for him and the entire domain of Gods! Maha Maya left Vishnu free and He was fully woken up to face the challenge of the hour, viz. to either manipulate or massacre the brothers, Madhu and Kaitabha. Lord Vishnu invited the brothers to fight with Himself. The fight continued for five thousand years but without a tangible result. As the Demons were clashing one after another and Lord Vishnu was in duel singly, the latter asked the brothers to give a break as it was against Justice that they took alternate positions while He was alone. During the break, Vishnu prayed to Maha Shakti and complained that the fight was unfair and that they were also given by Her the boon of voluntary death or 'Svacchanda Maranam'. Maha Shakti realised the lacuna in the duel and advised Vishnu to give boons to the brothers so that a way out would automatically open up. Meanwhile, Maha Shakti agreed to be present at the fight in physical form and disturb the concentration of the Demon brothers by casting Her fake amorous looks. This encouraged Vishnu to convey the Demons that their duel with Him was of great quality and thus He was ready to give boons to them. They got into the trap as they boasted that they were prepared to give boons to Him instead of the other way around. Vishnu grabbed the opportunity and said that He be given the boon of their death by killing each other! The brothers gave an excuse that the boon could be given only provided there was no water or wetness in the Ocean. Vishnu expanded his thighs manifold so that there could be adequate space for the killings. The Demons expanded their bodies too and thus the thighs of Vishnu and the body sizes of the brothers kept on increasing horizontally and vertically proportionately. Finally, the illusion created by Vishnu proved stronger and the brothers had to yield to their own killings. Thus Maha Shakti who assumed human physique and paved the way to the killings of the Danava brothers without breaking the Rules of 'Dharma Yuddha', partly by trickery and partly by Maya or Illusion.]

As the fallen hero Vaali severely criticised Shri Rama for having hit his deadly arrow without facing him while Vaali was immersed in hitting blows to Sugriva on their one- to-one duel, Shri Rama replied to Vaali: Vaanara! It is not only you with the awareness of the common knowledge of dharma-artha-and kaama paths of ‘dharma shastra’ that you have been raving about childishly and blaming me! You are only exhibiting the typical trait of ‘chapalata’ or physical and mental wavering and unsteadiness typical of immature kids as common to your race. Without knowing the nuances of dharma as learnt from ‘acharyas’ with oriental vedic knowledge, you seem to have heard and picked up a few expressions of dharma without understanding their correct application and perspective and seeking to criticise me. Are you truly aware of the acclaim of Ikshvaaku Vamsha on the entire earth comprising mountains, forests, rivers and various species of human beings, pashu pakshis, and water based beings. Dharmatma King named Bharata of yore who administered the Prithvi was the true Satyavaadi, with the perspective of the tatva jnaana of dharma-artha-kaamas which he imbibed from ancient Rishis and Veda Panditas. It is such a King from whom the lineage of Kings who absorbed the precepts of morality, discipline, truthfulness, and the Kingship duties as per the desha-kaala-tatvaas. That was why the Kings of the yore were moving about freely around the prithvi having adapted themselves of the basics. All the Kings on Prithvi being the followers of the ancient most Bharata do and should most certainly follow lest they certainly attract retribution. *tvaṁ tu samkṣiṣṭadharmā ca karmaṇā ca vigarhitah, kāmāntrapradhānaś ca na sthito

You have always breached the tenets of Dharma and resorted to acts that pained the concept and that was how you had to incur the wrath of Satpurusha Mahatmas (like Maatanga Muni). Dharmatva prescribes that the elder brother, father, and Guru are of the status of a father himself. Likewise, the younger brother, son, and the loyal disciple is also a acet of dharma. Vaanara! Dharma of the ancestry is too deep and minute and to understand is too difficult , much less to follow. *sūkṣmaḥ paramadurjñeyah satām dharmah plavaṅgama, hṛdisthaḥ sarvabhūtānām

How indeed could you understand the fine distinction and the shade of dharma and nyaya! But if the King concerned ignored the transparent sinfulness, then the King himself would have to suffer that very quantum and quality of the person concerned! Duratma Vaali! You had sinned limitlessly transgressing all norms of decency. In the remote past tense Chakravarti Mandhata, one Shramana too was given a 'maha paapa' and as per Scriptures he gave a retributory punishment but was not sure that the 'danda' might or might not have been adequate and hence made a 'prayaschitta' or advance exoneration of the sin committed by Shramana so that the latter's great sin and the punishment given were equitable or not!

[Vishleshana on Chakravarti Mandhata from Maha Bhagavata Purana:

Tracing the origin of Ikshvaku, the eldest son of Vaivasvata Manu, in the lineage to King Puranjaya (Kakustha) who fought a war between Demons and Demi-Gods on behalf of Indra on the condition that Indra would take the form of a bull. Puranjaya rode on the hump of the Great Bull and hence Puranjaya's title was 'Kakustha' (hump of the Bull) as also Indravahana or the vehicle of Indra. In the family lineage of Puranjaya was born King Yuvanashva, who performed Indra Yagna to beget a child. During the Sacrifice days one night the King felt thirsty and entered the Fire Spot area and drank the Sacred Water meant to bless his wife a child. As the Brahmanas found the water pot empty, they were aghast that the King drank the Water and eventually, he got a child from his abdomen. The boy cried for milk and that was not possible from the father; Indra put his index finger in the child's mouth and thus saved him. The Boy was Mandhata, who became eventually an undisputed Emperor of the World comprising seven islands- 'from where Sun rose to where it set'. He was a terror to Rakshasas. [He was stated to have discovered Lake Manasarovar near Mount Kailash as he was reputed to have made penance at the banks of the Lake under the mountain range was named after him. It was believed that there was a Serpent Mansion where Mandhata prayed and from a tree dropped fruits making big noises like 'Jam' and the area was known as 'Jambudweep']. Mandhata's wife Chatrarathi alias Bindumati was a pious lady who begot two sons, Purukutsa and Muchikunda and fifty daughters. Sage Saubhari an old person who lived twelve years under water in penance was tempted to marry as he found fishes having sex and procreating children. He hesitantly asked Mandhata to let him marry any of his daughters. Mandhata was reluctant as Saubhari was diseased and old, but could not disagree as the Sage might get furious; he told the Sage that his family custom was that all the daughters must marry the same person and that even one of them should not refuse the Sage. The Sage with his mystical powers transformed himself into a handsome youth and thus all the daughters agreed to marry him. The Sage made mansions for each of the girls. But, in course of time, Sage Saurabha realised that because of the fish in water, his entire Spiritual life was destroyed and although late in his life reverted back to a more introspective life eventually and intensified his devotion to Lord Vishnu.]

Stanza 35 continued: tad alam paritāpena dharmataḥ parikalpitaḥ, vadho vānaraśārdūla na vayan svavaśe sthitāḥ/ Vanara shreshtha! That is why I, as a kshatriya, have made you my target of hunting whether the mriga is a vegetarian or not. Kingship bestows the authority of safeguarding dharma, life of their Subjects as per the established regulations for sure. Therefore do not teach me the do's and don'ts of kshatriya dharma.!' As Shri Rama thus replied especially pointing out Vaali's incest by forcing to bed of his own sister in law, besides a Khatriya's birth right to hunt 'vanya mrigas', Vaali had in his inner thoughts felt that his shouting and bursting criticism of Shri Rama on the basis of the principles of sanaatana dharma was wasteful and boomranged back actually. Vaali had to concede: yad ayuktaṁ mayā pūrvam pramādād vākyam apriyam, tatrāpi khalu me doṣaṁ kartuṁ nārhasi rāghava/ tvaṁ hi dṛṣṭārthatattvajñāḥ prajānām ca hite rataḥ, kāryakāraṇasiddhau te prasannā buddhir avyayā/ mām apy avagataṁ dharmād vyatīkrāntapuraskṛtam, dharmasamhitayā vācā dharmajña paripālaya/ Nara shreshtha! What ever you have replied to my blabberings on the so called principles of dharma are convincing and putting me to shame. What ever a person of your indescribably high stature has stated is the essence of paramaārtha tatwa and your inner vision is truly transparent, fearless and decisive. Dharmagjna! I am the worst of the Beings of 'dharma bhrashtavyata' and the lowest of those richly deserving of punishment of death.' Having said thus, Vaali like an elephant sunk deep into the depths of mud, broke down to tears and slowly stated in very low tone: I am not worried so much about myself, Devi Tara, freinds and followers but the most innocent and 'sadguna sampanna suputra' Kumara Angada. sa mamādarśanād dīno bālyāt prabhṛti lālitaḥ, taṭāka iva pītāmbur upaśoṣaṁ gamiṣyati/sugrīve cāṅgade caiva vidhatsva matim uttamām, tvaṁ hi śāstā ca goptā ca kāryākāryavidhau sthitaḥ/ yā te narapate vṛttir bharate lakṣmaṇe ca yā, sugrīve cāṅgade rājāṁs tām cintayitum arhasi/ Even from his childhood, I had never heeded about Angada and truly neglected about him or his whatabouts and now I am like a dried up water pond. Shri Rama! Andgada is a much neglected and ignorant boy with no training expected of a father or a guru due to my arrogant niglignce. I wish that Sugriva would look afer him with care and goodwill as he would to Lakshmana, besides advise him well as to what to do and what not. Now as for the hapless Tara my dear wife, well wisher, advisor and a close friend, I hope and request to treat her well and make proper arrangement for her wellbeing. Indeed it was Tara that advised me again and again never to fight with Sugriva, and much less with Rama. Further: tvayā hy anugrhitena śakyaṁ rājyam upāsitum, tvadvaśe vartamānena tava cittānuvartinā/ Rama! Sugriva would now be able to administer the Vanara Kingdom ably and truthfully under your outstanding stewardship. Now my earnest wish too has since been that I should be killed by your hands and that was how never heeded to Tara's entreaties.' Then Shri Rama replied: 'Vaanara shreshtha Vaali! Please do not get concerned about these terminak problems like Angada, Devi Tara, and the rest of administrative issues as we should take ample care and the needful. daṇḍye yaḥ pātayed daṇḍam daṇḍyo yaś cāpi daṇḍyate, kāryakāraṇasiddhārthā ubhau tau nāvasīdataḥ/ tad bhavān daṇḍasaṁyogād asmād vigatakalmaṣaḥ, gataḥ svām prakṛtiṁ dharmyām dharmadrṣṭena vartmanā/ Vaali! As the due punishment is accorded, the person punished feels and argees that the punishment was justified, then the issues of the person punished, the one who punishes and the justification of the punishment do all get resolved and the one punished need not be tearfull thereafter. Now, please get rid of your heart the feelings of 'shoka-moha-bhaya' as daivika vidhana needed to be noted with resolve and peacefulness.

As Tara Devi came to know that her dear husband Vaali was hurt by Rama's arrow and fell down to earth as his body parts were severely damaged by the fall of heavy stones, was distressed and ran towards the spot. As she was running in a great rush and anxiety, the public got panic and started running away. Even as Vaali's intimate followers were about to do so, she shouted at them : 'you cowards! When King Vaali was going anywhere, you used to proudly go ahead of him but now at a time of the crisis, you are running away out of fright now, leaving your leader now in distress'. One of the frightened vanara soldiers of

Vaali then addressed her: ‘Devi! get back soon and save your son Angada. Rama has now assumed the form of Yama Raja and since Sugriva and his followers are on the prowl you must save Angada Kumara first and further the nagara vasis too. Then she replied to the agitated soldiers and the ‘Kishkindha purajana’ who quickly got collected at the crisis: putreṇa mama kiṃ kāryaṃ kiṃ rāḥyena kiṃ ātmanā, kapisimhe mahābhāge tasmin bhartari naśyati/ pādāmūlaṃ gamiṣyāmi tasyaivāhaṃ mahātmanaḥ, yo ’sau rāmaprayuktena śareṇa vinipātitaḥ/ Vanaras! Even as Maha Raja Vaali is in this grave condition, and as he indeed is my ‘pati deva’, I should first and foremost run to see him and his condition before the safety of my son, the kingdom and that of the public. I should now run to see him and his condition as my utmost priority.’ So saying Devi Tara approached Vaali by pounding her heart and head crying away and running. kṣeptāraṃ parvatendrāṇāṃ vajrāṇāṃ iva vāsavam, mahāvātasamāviṣṭaṃ mahāmeghaugha-niḥsvanam/ śakratulyaparākṛāntaṃ vṛṣṭveoparataṃ ghanam, nardantaṃ nardatāṃ bhīmaṃ śūraṃ śūreṇa pātitaṃ/ śārdūlenāmiṣasyārthe mṛgarājaṃ yathā hatam, arcitaṃ sarvalokasya sapatākam savedikam/ She wailed in high tone : Ha! Mahabala Vaali made a valiant dwandhva yuddha with Sugriva by uprooting mountains and hurling with cloud burst like garjanas even like Lord Indra Himself, but was hurt and fallen to dust by another Veera Shri Rama. Just as two lions of Vaali Sugrivas fought for the flesh of kingdoms, another third party of a more valiant warrior had solved the dispute by supporting Sugriva. Rama hid himself behind a huge tree near a temple’s broad platform like a ‘vedi’ and surreptitiously released a ‘mantrika baana’, aiming at my dear husband Vaali as he tripped down hurt to dust. On proceeding further, I had seen Rama with Lakshmanas and Sugriva too. samīkṣya vyathitā bhūmau sambhṛāntā nipapāta ha, supteva punar utthāya āryaputreti krośatī/ ruroda sā patiṃ dṛṣṭvā saṃditaṃ mṛtyudāmabhiḥ, tām avekṣya tu sugrīvaḥ krośantīm kuraṇīm iva/ viṣādam agamat kaṣṭaṃ dṛṣṭvā cāṅgadam āgatam/ Then having crossed them all, I find my dear husband and cried out loudly: ‘ha Arya Putra! as he fell as though he was lying though he was ensnarled into the ‘mṛityu paasha’. Then she approached her dear husband crying away as their son Angada too while Sugriva too joined.: Kumara! Now you have looked at the pitiable state of your dear father; now, what will happen as you are placed in the hands of your insane Sugriva uncle. Then she addressed Sugriva: ‘Your fond wish is now fulfilled; your elder brother whom you had always considered as your sworn enemy is now as good as dead. Do enjoy kingship and also Ruma.’ As Devi Tara’s extreme distress was cried out in this way, the groups of Vanara wives held Angada’s hands and started weeping. A little later, Devi Tara cried out hysterically and having kept her head down to Vaali’s body and declared that she decides to practise ‘aamarana niraahaara deeksha!’

As a Tara or Star fell down from the Sky to earth, Devi Tara too felt dazed at her dearest husband's unexpected crash to earth, Hanuman gradually explained about the sudden situation as Vaali too crashed by Shri Rama's invincible arrow hit. He started saying: Devi! This heart rending situation occurs to every Being on earth as an inevitable consequence of one's own 'karma phala' which determines the joys and sorrows of existence. On reaching a planet other than the earth, peace would prevail whereafter another journey would restart. You are yourself susceptible or vulnerable, then why do you show your sympathy for others. You are heart broken now, but what indeed might occur to others and to you yourself too. You should be happy that you are blessed with Angada as your worthy son. You must therefore look after him well and put him firmly on the path of morality as that is the essence of nobility. Devi! you are well qualified and mature minded and you are surely aware of the nature's laws that what is born would perish too. And that is why the Scriptures keep exhorting that the balance should never tilt to the negative side if not preferably to the positive side. Births and deaths are indeterminate. But he who is born ought to die. Excessive crying and getting swept off back to the past would be futile although the memories get freshened right now but the process of reconciliation gets speeded up by time cycle. yasmin harisahasrāṇi prayutāny arbudāni ca, vartayanti kṛtāṁśāni so 'yaṁ diṣṭāntam āgataḥ/ yad ayaṁ nyāyadr̥ṣṭārthaḥ sāmādanakṣamāparaḥ, gato dharmajitāṁ bhūmiṁ nainam śocitum arhasi/ As you are well aware that hundreds, thousands, and lakhs of Vaanaras were born and perished, and so has the life time of Maha Veera Vaali's too gets terminated. The Neeti Shastra teaches us that 'Sadhana' or the ability to gain success is governed by the essential tenets of 'Saama- Daana-and Kshama' or Earnest exhortation- offering attractions- and still in case of attempts and failures then the golden forbearance. As we still exist in a society of virtue and morality, if a Being ceases to exist from the life of dharma, then we should be contented with reconciliation than anguish and helplessness. Sati Saadhvi Devi! You continue to be venerated as the Supreme Head of the Vaanara Community, who ever be the Figure Head. Bhamini, both Angada and Sugriva are concerned about you and welfare. They should be the Present and Future Kings of Vaanaras. Now: saṁtatiś ca yathādr̥ṣṭā kṛtyaṁ yac cāpi sāmpratam, rājñas tat kriyatām sarvam eṣa kālasya niścayah/ The 'takshana kartavyas' or our immediate duties are to perform the antyeshti samskara to the dying Vanara Chakravarti Vaali and Kumara Angada's 'Raja pattaabhisheka'. As Hanuman had concluded like wise, Devi Tara stood up and declared that of the two 'takshana kartavyas', my embracing the body of mutual death and Angada's ayaabhisheka, my assured preference is the former. na cāham harirājasya prabhavāmy āṅgadasya vā, piṭṛvyastasya sugrīvaḥ sarvakāryeṣv anantaraḥ/ na hy eṣā buddhir āstheyā hanūmann āṅgadam prati, piṭā hi bandhuḥ putrasya na mātā harisattama/ I am neither the Maha Swamini of the Vaanaras nor Angada the next King. Tara the Sushena Putri is fully conversant of the nuances and gradations of Dharma. As such, her forebodings always come true. Most essentially Sugriva: what ever is the task entrusted to you by Ramachandra is of utmost priority as any dilly-dallying that duty should be suicidal. Finally, Sugriva! This divinely blessed garland of gold be worn by you ever as that is of 'Lakshmi Nivaasa' and as soon as I am lost its divinity too gets vanished.' As Vaali addressed Sugriva, the latter started crying genuinely. Vaali addressed Angada and explained: ' Try to act as per the situations and exigencies of times; as difficulties are faced, do act with descretion as per the ever rolling joys and difficulties neither with excessive elations nor extreme frustrations. Do develop the attitude of tolerance and follow the instructions of Sugriva. ity uktvātha vivṛttākṣaḥ śarasāṁpīḍito bhṛṣam, vivṛtair daśanair bhīmair babhūvotkrāntajīvitāḥ/ hate tu vīre plavagādhipe tadā; plavaṁgamās tatra na śarma lebhire, vanecarāḥ simhayute mahāvane; yathā hi gāvo nihate gavām patau/ Having uttered thes words in whispering tone, Maha Bali Vaali collapsed as the line of teeth drooped down his jaws with roving eye balls and the sacred bird called 'antaratma' flew off for ever leaving his mortal remains to earth. As Vaali left, the Vanara kingdom had become 'Shree Heena' or shorn of its glory, since the Vaanara Shreshtha had been ever dynamic and dazzlingly active who only performed memorable acts that had instatly brought in name and fame. As this terrible tragedy had befallen to the Vaanara Kingdom suddenly and unexpectedly, the possible comparison was of a lion of fury and glory disappeared for ever.

As Maha Vaanara Veera Vaali peacefully passed away, Devi Tara had a heart burst and addressed the body: ‘Vaanara Raja! Why had you not given heed to my sincere and hand folded request not to rush to the battle! Indeed, this earth was far more attractive than me and have had to embrace her finally! Your daring desperation despite my warning of Shri Rama’s active involvement with the proceedings had expectedly and inevitably led to this lack of timely discretion. It is surprising that my appeal of the ever invincible Shri Rama’s presence never entered in your inner thoughts. Prana Naatha! The chiefs of the Bears community and of Vaanaras at your constant service are bewildered by the lack of your prudential and timely judgment. Why are you now sleeping for ever to the desperations of Angada who was your own heart and soul! This ‘veera shayya’ or the famed bed of fallen heroes in the past had been reserved by you always but now has now turned out you own resting place, alas! Decidedly indeed, the Kings of the yore were decisively selective of their Kanyas to Raja Kumaras to ensure that the latter Kamaras should make sure that their life partners would never get widowed. But Veera! you have failed me on that very count miserably. I have always been proud of being the undisputed Queen but now that flagship pride has now fallen into the depths of Shoka Samudra! Decidedly indeed, my heart is made of strong steel and that is how I am still alive despite the most untimely tragedy befallen on my Master’s cruel end. patihīnā tu yā nārī kāmam bhavatu putriṇī, dhanadhānyaiḥ supūrnāpi vidhavety ucyate budhaiḥ/ A woman in the absence of her husband, even if with a son or with ‘dhana dhanya samriddhi’ is defined still as a widow! Vaanara shreshtha! Your entire body is full of sand and filth with ozing blood and that is why am not readily able to embrace you with both of my hands and shoulders. Actually the poisonous arrow that ripped your chest obstructs my eagerness to embrace you. In this memorable saga of Maha Bali Vaali's fall as a result of Shri Rama's single arrow of poison, Sugriva is the uncontested winner. As Vaali's body with a numberless punctures as pulled by himself by his powerful hands from his stomach, streams of blood flowed as if copperish streams flowed from mountain top like body of his.' Then Tara Devi addressed son Angada: Dear son! Are you seeing this most unfortunate and frightening scene of your father King due to his sinful defiance of the norms of virtue and thus he reached yama loka! Bend and touch his feet.' Then Angada got up and mumbled: sire! I am Angada your son for whom you were worried about!' Tara looked at the corpse and said: aham putrasahāyā tvām upāse gatacetanam, simhena nihataṁ sadyo gauḥ savatseva govṛṣam/ 'I am at your service now like a cow with a calf sitting before a 'vrishabha' as killed by a lion!' Sarga Twenty Four

Realising anguish of Tara Devi, Sugriva reacts severely and requests Shri Rama to allow him to die while Tara requests Rama to please kill her too! Rama seeks to assuage their disturbed conditions

As Tara Devi was truly sunk in distress, Sugriva too was in deep sorrow and approached Shri Rama and stated: Narendra! You had indeed fulfilled your 'pratigjna' and acted accordingly; as a consequence, you bestowed 'to me.'rajya laabha'. But there is an open and eruptive criticism against me, my character, selfishness and evil nature. As Raja Vaali passes away, his queen is truly agitated, giving vent to accusations and expressions about my villany and of Angada's fate in future. Due to these obvious reasons, I have lost interest in my future Kingship. Raghu naadha! My brother tortured me for a long part of my life and that was why I approached you to destroy him which you did. But, as a consequence of this act with the killing of Vaali, there has been an uproar and irreparable agony; as for me too, I do feel distressed as he is my respectable elder brother. Most probably, this pain in the hearts of all concerned would be everlasting. Shreyodya manya mama shailamkhye tasmin hivaasaschiramrushyamooke, yathaa vartayatah svakrityaa nemam nihatya tridivasya laabhah/ Na tvaa jidhaamsaami chareti yanmaamayam Mahatmaa vachonurupamidam vachah karma cha menurupam/ Indeed, as per my 'vaanara buddhi' as also my family background I do wish to live on the Rishyamooka mount and surroundings, but certainly not have my elder brother killed out of vengeance and enjoy consequent kingship. As this has indeed happened so most unfortunately due to my own making, I am ashamed of myself now. Kingship or even heavenly pleasures should not be consequential. I recall with grief now that Buddhimaan Mahatma Vaali once reprimanded and even shouted at me: 'Get lost; I do not kill you, even if I can now!' But Rama! I am ashamed now of myself that my vengeful nature provoked me to beg you for killing him such a basically affectionate elder brother! Raghu nandana! Bhraataa katham naama mahaa gunasya bhraatru vadham Raama virochayet, Raajyasa dukkhasya cha veera saaram vichintayan kaamapuraskrutopi/ Could there be another worse example of selfishness to have an elder brother killed due to the meanest plan to have him killed mercilessly for the sake of kingship! Indeed, Vaali never had the meanmindedness of killing me as he did have the consideration of his own status, dignity and morality. But it is my own mean mindedness and deliberate evil mindedness that I approached you to have him killed outright. I recall that Vaali when once in the course of a mutual fight, I was hurt by mutual hurling of tree branches the he had shouted at me merely saying : Get lost, never dare to attack me' and left. He had truly displayed his essential nature, 'aarya bhaava, and dharma raksha' but I was motivated with kama-krodha-lobha-matsaraas and the typical 'chapala vaanara pravritti' or the monkey mindedness. Achintaneeyam parivarjaneeya maneepeaneeyam svanveksaneeyam, praptosmi paapmaanamidam vayasya bhraatruvadhaat tvaashtavadhaadivendrah/ Mitra Rama! I am totally responsible for the killing of my elder brother, which is not only unworthy but in fact sinful, ill justified and avoidable. This would smack of the example of Vritrasura being destroyed by Indra which attracted the sin of 'braahmana hatya'.

Indeed, Indras's sin of 'brahma hatya' permeated the entire earth, water, trees and woman was freely distributed but who could possibly absorb my sinfulness!

[Brief Vishleshana on Indras killing Vritrasura based on Devi Bhagavata and Maha Bhagavata Puranas:

Prajapati Visvakarma, the famed Architect of Devas, had a son named Trisira or the three headed Brahmana boy who used to practise ascetism with one head, drink wine with another and look around in all directions with the third. Being an ardent student of Vedas, he was always engaged in severe Tapasya, especially 'Panchagni Sadhana' hanging upside down a tree branch exposed to Summer Sun, winter cold and heavy rainy season without food conquering worldly desires. Being highly suspicious of the intentions of Trisira who might pose problem his own throne, Indra despatched Apsarasas to disturb Trisira's rigorous meditation but to no avail. Indra thus killed him even when he was in meditation, even as he knew that killing a pious Brahmana in meditation was the highest possible sin. Furious with Indra's dreadful deed, Visvakarma performed an inexorable Sacrifice by 'Abhichara' process (taking revenge) reciting Atharva Veda Mantras, created a mountain like and ferocious boy with the sole objective of killing Indra. The huge boy was named Vritra or who could save his father as Vrinjina. Visvakarma equipped him with all kinds of war tactics and divine armoury including a swift and sturdy Chariot, a 'Sudarshan' like Disc, and a 'Trisula' like spear. As Vritra grew, Indra was getting nervous and approached Deva Guru to prevent any risk from the Demon. Brihaspati warned Indra that he should better be prepared for a Big Battle as the forebodings were not conducive. He advised that he along with Devas might request Dadhichi Maha Muni to spare his backbone which meant the Muni's sacrificing his life to serve a deva karya; Dadhichi obliged and Devata's architect Vishvakarma made a thunderbolt like 'vajraayudha' with the help of which Vritrasura was killed]

Nareshwara Rama! As I have committed an unpardonable sin, the 'sadaachara sadgunas' get decimated and more so the innocent Angada got shaken up brutally and far worse hit should be his dear mother Devi Taara. Adhyaangado veeravaro na jeevejjeeveta mataa parapaalanaartham, vinaa tu putram na paritaatadeenaa saa naiva jeevediti nishchitam me/ Even if Angada were possibly alive, his mother should be alive too to look after him; otherwise, her desperation appears certain. Soham pravekshyaamyati deeptamaagnim bhraatraa cha putrena cha sakhyamicchhan, ime visheshyanti hripraveeraah Sitaam niveshe parivartamaanaah/ Krustram tu te setyati karyametan nyanyapyateete manujendra putra kulassyahantaaramajeevanaarham Raamaanujaaneehi kritaagasam maam/ Thus, I resolve to enter agni for the sake of my brother and his son, while the totality of Vaanara sena should assist you to recover Devi Sita. Having resolved likewise by Sugriva with repentance while his eyes overflowed with bursting tears, Shri Rama glanced Sugriva and Devi Tara alike; the latter was busy embracing the dead body of Vaali again and again. As though in response to Sugriva's remorseful 'paschaattaapa', Devi Tara stood up leaving her repeated embrace of the dead body, approached Shri Rama and said; 'Rahu nandana! You are truly immune from the frontiers of desha-kaala-vastus and it is impossible to assess your true image of the self. You are jitendriya and the human representation of virtue and justice. Even as you are the personification of 'kshama' or endurance, I find that your looks are somewhat reddened with haziness. Being ornamented with your 'dhanur baanaas', your 'paraakrama' is unparalleled. My sincere prayer to you is that you should please lift up your dhanush and release that very arrow with which you had hit my dear husband on me too so that I would reach him soon. Indeed Vaali's atma would not be contented without my company. 'Amala kamaladalalochana Rama!' Kindly note that in my confident view, Vaali's Soul would not be contented without my company as I am the rightful 'saha dharmachaarini' and thus he should ignore even 'apsarasaas' in the veera swarga without me. You may not have the concern of committing the 'stree hatya maha pataka' as I am myself praying to you to release his atma along with that of mine. And that should be free from the sinfulness on this account. Shastraprayogaad vividhaaschavedaanya swarupaah purushasya daaraah, daara pradaanaadvi na daanamayant pradrushyate jnaanavataam hi loke/ As per shastras, 'Yajna yaagaadi dharma karmas' are prescribed to the Karta along with his rightful wife as Shritis stress the fact of 'ardha naareeshvaratya'. It may be that killing other 'strees' is defined as stree hatya dosha', but thus Vedopanishads never distinguished Hence you should me immune from this 'dosha'. On the other hand, the view point of jnaana purushas in the universe, ‘stree daana’ is stated among ‘maha daanaas’! Therefore Veerashiromani Shri Rama! You should thus be appreciated and approved by your killing me to appease the Atma of Vali by killing me.! Rama! I am an ‘anaadha’ being seperated from Vaali’.’ As Tara invokes principles of dharma, Rama explains: Tam chaiva sarvam sukha duhkha yogam lokobraveet ten kritam Vidhaatraa, trayopi lokaa vihitam vidhaanam naatikramante vashagaa hi tasya/ Preetim paraam praapyasi taam tathaiva, putraschate praapsyati youvaraaajyam, Dhaatraa vidhaanam vihitam tathaiva na shura patnyah paridevayanti/ Vidhaata prescribes sukha duhkhaas in the universe as this is assured by common public too. None of the Trilokas could ever infringe this fact of their existence as that Supeme Force is all abiding. Devi! you should regain your erstwhile supremacy as your son should be the yuvaraja now.’ As Rama asserted thus, the agitated Tara Devi cooled down pacified and so did Sugriva too!

Along with Lakshmana, Sri Rama alleviated the feelings of Sugriva-Tara -Angadas and made them realise the futility of dirges any further but take up the kartavya of ‘dahana samskara’ as prescribed. They reminded them to assume the duty as soon as possible. They said that ‘niyati’ or timeliness was indeed the reason for action. The world is regulated by the limits of timeliness and that is overriding the mind and consciousness. Kaalamaana has no relevance to friendship or enmity, jaati-mata bhedas and even the karana swarupa of Almighty is disabled to transgress its limitations. Dhanardha kaama mokshas too are to be abided by it. Vaanara Raja Vaali after his death had since taken the ‘shuddha atma swarupa’ which is the fall out of the Principles of Battle of Saama -Daana- Bheda- Dandaas as provided in the Neeti Shastra. Mahatma Vaali who by his fortune became the hero and of kingship but by the twist of destiny had fallen and attained veera swarga. Now to lament over this happening, any amount of further heard breaking is unworthy of ‘kartavya’ or dutifulness. Having so exhorted, Lakshmana addressed in the presence of Shri Rama: kuru tvam asya sugrīva pretakāryam anantaram, tārāṅgadābhyām sahito vāline dahanam prati/ samājñāpaya kāṣṭhāni śuṣkāṇi ca bahūni ca, candanāni ca divyāni vālisamskāraḥ kārāṇāt/ kuru tvam asya sugrīva pretakāryam anantaram, tārāṅgadābhyām sahito vāline dahanam prati/ samājñāpaya kāṣṭhāni śuṣkāṇi ca bahūni ca, candanāni ca divyāni vālisamskāraḥ kārāṇāt/ Sugriva! Now you bring Andada and Tara for the dahana samskara and the related preta karyas. Direct your intimate followers to apply chandana to the body; let Angada’s courage be applied, cease to cry and be ready for the ‘kartavya’; he should wear a flower garland, appropriate deeksha ‘vastras’ and fetch ghee, oil, suajandha dravyas and related materials and carry them by himself. Tara! you may please arrange a ‘paalki’ by which you should be accompanied by your ‘sakhis’ and present your self with attractive dress and ‘aabhushanaas’ as at this time you should look your best for the occasion. The paalki be carried by strong male vanaras upto the ‘smashana’. As Lakshmana directed thus, Tara hurried to a cave named ‘Kishkindha’ with her companions to get ready and side by side strong vanaras fetched a palki too with well decorated flower. Then Rama signalled that the body be carried suitably to the smashana along with Angada ahead followed by Sugriva and let the preta karya be initiated. Along with the body and the paalki, the full strength of Vaanara Veeraas and their women cried out by pounding their chests shouting ‘haa veera, haa veera. By the side of the flows of River Tungabhadra down the mountain was arranged the place for the ‘preta samskara’. Amidst the ‘ha ha karas’ by Tara, Angada, Sugriva, and the Mantris, and the Vaanara Sena, the dahana samskara was concluded by Angada who along with his uncle Sugriva, while the exhausted Tara Devi fell unconscious and was able to recover only at the time of Jalanjali. tatas te sahitās tatra aṅgadaṁ sthāpya cāgrataḥ, sugrīvātārāsahitāḥ siṣicur vāline jalam/ sugrīveṇaiva dīnena dīno bhūtvā mahābalaḥ, samānaśokaḥ kākutsthaḥ pretakāryāṇy akārayat/ Then with Angada ahead, Devi Tara and other relevant Vanaras conducted jala tarpanas too and thus Rama Lakshmanas guided them all step by step.

‘You the Pretaatma’ as enclosed with the ‘kavacha’ or the shield of Agni Deva who is merely turning only your body parts to ashes but not your true self which indeed is everlasting. Hence Agni is merely clearing the mess of your body! Agni Deva! you may consume the deadbody along with his heart, pancha koshas or Five Sheaths of the body called Annamaya (Physical Energy), Praanamaya (Vital Energy), Manomaya (Mental Faculty), Vigyanamaya (Buddhi or Sharpness of Discrimination) and Ananda maya (Bliss) only but thereafter kindly despatch the ‘Jeevatma’- Inner Being- safely to the Loka of His forefathers the Pitru Loka. Agni Deva, when you render the jeevatma fully rid of the memories of the erstwhile life, then That becomes rendered fit with a fresh form subject to the will of Devas. Preta swarupa! Pradhana Vaanara Veeras headed by Hanuman approached Shri Rama just as Maharshi ganaas to Brahma Deva, as Hanuman submitted to Rama that by the latter's courtesy, Sugriva had since accomplished the Vanara Samrajya and to personally grace the celebration of the Rajyabhisheka of Sugriva. But may Sugriva be blessed to receive the honours in the ample space of the cave as nominated and let the rajyabhisheka be celebrated as per the prescribed procedure. Then Rama further stated that as Kumara Angada was mature enough with 'sadaachaara and paraakramaa' too, he be made the Yuva Raja and his yuvarajyaabhisheka too be celebrated simultaneously'. He then addressed Sugriva: 'My dear friend Sugriva, your knowledge and experience of life is uncommon. Kumara Angada is certainly deserving the status of becoming the Yuva raja, especially as he is the son of your elder brother.' Sri Rama continued to address Sugriva! Now the season of 'Varshas' has arrived and for four more months there cannot be any activity. Shravana Maasa varshas have since begun. Therefore you may stay back in your beautiful Kishkindha pura itself and relax. Along with Lakshmana I shall stay in the mountain caves which are breezy and comfortable.' As Rama Lakshmanas bid good bye to Sugriva and the followers, the Rajyaabhisheka Celebrations got in progress. Even earlier, the arrangements of the celebrations were well initiated: gold laced white silk umbrellas, plethora of fragrant flowers, white silk robes for males and females, sweet odours all over, akshatas, golden jewellery, plentiful honey, ghee, vyaghra charma seatings, high value footwear, were in place and sixteen vaanara sundaris approached Sugriva. As bhakshya-bhojya- lehya- chosha- paaneeyas were offered plentifully to the visitors, Brahmanas initiated the mantra puraka havisyannas were offered to homaagni jwaalaas ad Sugriva's rajyabhisheka was celebrated, as followed by Angada's yuva rajyabhisheka too. Then Vanara Swami Sugriva accompanied by Angada approached Rama Lakshmanas with the homa-and abhisheka prasadaas and prostrated seeking their blessings and retired back/

As the celebrations of Rajyabhishakas concluded, Rama Lakshmanas reached a mountain cave of the Prastravana mountain cave surrounded by several animals like shardulas, langurs, and so on with strange sounds. Their essential objective and motivation was to seek and secure Devi Sita but for the onset of the rainy season. Miunwhile, they need to experience the beauty of the surroundings, the cool breeze, the variety of trees round like sinduvaara-shireesha-kadamba-arjuna especially on the approaches to the river Tungabhadra.

[Vishleshana on Tungabhadra:

The Tungabhadra River is formed by the confluence of two rivers named Tunga and Bhadra on the slopes of Western Ghats. As the demon Hiranyaaksha sought to sink Bhumi down to Patala, the entire Universe came to stand still when 'Dishas' (Directions), 'Grahas' (Planets), and Celestial Beings got stuck excepting Tri-Murthis, Bhu Devi and Brahma appealed to Bhagavan Vishnu to uplift Her as She was sinking under deep Ocean and to save the Universe. In reply to the 'Stutis' by Bhu Devi, Maha Vishnu assured that as a result of Her Bhakti (devotion) He would lift Her up along with mountains, forests, Samudra, Rivers, Seven Dwipas and all the rest; He assumed a colossal manifestation of six thousand yojanas of height, three thousand yojanas of width and one thousand yojanas of Varaha Swarupa; He liberated Prithvi by His left 'damshtra' (Jaw) along with the totality of mountains, forests, Sapta Dwipas and their contents including Oceans and Rivers all in tact!' The legend further states that Varaha Swami afer killing the demon took rest by sitting on the present day Varaha Parvata peak. When He sat on that Peak, his sweat over flowed from his scalp and flowed and became Tunga River and that which flowed from his right side became Bhadra River. After emerging from the source the Bhadra river flows through Kudremukh mountain region and Tunga River flows through Sringeri near Shimoga, till they join at Koodli, at an elevation of about 15 km from there. There is a popular saying 'Tunga Paana, Ganga Snana', or drink Tunga River water, which is tasty and sweet and take bath in Ganges River, which is holy. There are many religous places all along the rivers: primarily the temples of Saiva Cult on the banks of the Bhadra and all the cults on the banks of the Tunga. Sringeri, Sarada Petham established by the Adi Shankaracharya is the most famous one on the left bank of the Tunga, about 50 km. downstream of its origin. Mantralayam's Raghavendra Swamy Muth is at Alanmpur in Kurnool District of Andhra Pradesh.]

Stanzas 17 onward: Rama asks Lakshmana! Look at the natural beauty on the banks of Tungabhadra with a wonderful wealth of chandana-tilaka-saala-tamaala- atimuktika-padmaka-sarala- ashokas. Further, the variety of trees encompasses timida-vakula-ketaka-himtaala-tinisha- neepa- sthalaventa and so on as the river banks present a gorgeous view of a 'shringaara yuvati' adorned with a variety of jewellery. Then there are lotuses, variety of chirruping groups of birds. Lakshmana! Have you not heard the musical notes of mridangas, vaanara geetaas, and other musical notes from kishkindha which is not far from here! Surely, Sugriva and followers are immersed in celebrations of dance and music. Despite the excitement around with glorious views and celebrations, Rama was unable to sleep peacefully. As Rama was shedding tears with the memories of Deevi Sita and lost in memories, Lakshmana said: Reaspected brother! Of which avail your tears these, as Veera Purushas tend to dilute their strong resolves for action. On the face of earth, even Devas consider you as an ideal purusha, dharmatma, and hero. na hy avyavasitaḥ śatruṁ rākṣasaṁ taṁ viśeṣataḥ, samarthas tvaṁ raṇe hantuṁ vikramair jihmakāriṇaṁ/ samunmūlaya śokaṁ tvaṁ vyavasāyaṁ sthiraṁ kuru, tataḥ saparivāraṁ taṁ nirmūlaṁ kuru rākṣasaṁ/ prthivīm api kākutsṭha sasāgara vanācalām, parivartayituṁ śaktaḥ kim aṅga puna rāvaṇaṁ/ If you get overcome and overwhelmed by this kind of grief like an ordinary human being, what meaning and definition would it be for idealism and strong conviction! Raghu nandana! Do uproot this very root of grief and get ready for action with resolve. Indeed you can uplift prithvi and if need, you could create universal havoc. How easy and a child play for you to lift up and destroy Ravana and his parivar! śaratkālaṁ pratīkṣe 'ham iyaṁ prāvṛḍ upasthitā, tataḥ sarāṣṭraṁ sagaṇaṁ rākṣasaṁ taṁ nihaṇmy ahaṁ/ This is varshaa kaala and let us await for the 'sharad ritu' and then devastate the very memory of Ravana for ever!' Then Rama replied: Lakshmana! You have truly advised me as an adviser, friend, wellwisher and above all as a truthful 'Maha Veera'. Now see! I would get rid of the habit of crying. I should now seek to await Sharad Kaala and enthruse Sugriva to mobilise his forces and till then be patient and keep company of the mountain top lions to witness how they tend to pounce on animals!

Shri Rama having been fortified by Lakshmana's boost up to his morale and kindled the fire of anger on Ravana's extraordinary skills of battle and never failing bravery and moral courage, initiated the stop gap time of 'varsha ritu season' and its excellence. He addresses Lakshmana as follows: 'Sumitra nandana! This varsha kaala ushers mountainous black clouds on the aakaasha mandali. This illustrious woman of youth called 'aakaasha' attracts the juices like deep waters of Samudras with the assistance of the powerful Surya Kiranas and through the 'kaartika' and onward nine months provides juices like rains before the birth of a child called 'samvatsara'! At thus time, the megha rupi sky decorates Surya Deva with garlands of giri mallika and arjuna pushpas like lightnings! Soft winds in the form of our breathings are then comparable to a 'megha rupi' or of the form of lustful woman being the sky approaches the Samudra Deva then! Devi Prithvi literally roasted up with the cruel and ruthless Surya Deva all through the Greeshma Ritu would then heave a sigh of relief thanks to her sister Aakasha now as being a pregnant woman releases children in the form of rains. meghakṛṣṇājina dharā dhārā yajñopavitinaḥ, mārutāpūritaguḥāḥ prādhūtā iva parvatāḥ/ kaśābhīr iva haimībhīr vidyudbhīr iva tādītam, antaḥstanitanirghoṣam savedanam ivāmbaram/ nīlameghāśritā vidyut sphurantī pratibhāti me, sphurantī rāvaṇasyāñke vaidehīva tapasvinī/ As the rainy season in progress, the 'megha rupi' black clouds resemble 'mriga charma' of a brahmachaari and the varsha dhaaraas or the pourings of torrential rains resemble his 'yagjopaveeta' as they practice 'vedaadhyayana' with the rush of winds filled in by the cave like heart of his during the 'adhyana'. Further, the lightnings on the sky appear like goldlike flies as of they are like the 'aarta naadaas' from the sky mother emanated from the 'megha garjanas'. The lightnings originating from the blue clouds are perhaps like the heavens of Devi Sita's heart at the intolerable and irritating dialogues of Ravana's as he approaches him with marriage proposals.! As the thick clouds get collected on the sky, all the entities like 'graha-nakshatra-chandramas' would disappear, even as the distinction of east-west-south-north directions disappear too; perhaps this situation is quite helpful to lovers in their embraces. kva cit prakāśam kva cid aprakāśam; nabhaḥ prakīrṇāmbudharam vibhāti, kva cit kva cit parvatasamīrudham; rūpaṁ yathā śāntamahārṇavasya/ Lakshmana! The entire sky is replete with clouds all over and due to that reason the sky is not visible, nor any out burst of the sky even. This is like when the ocean with the big sounds of waves get quiet even as the garland of mountains around the ocean seems to be hidden from the view of humas and other Beings! At this time, the rivers flowing down the mountains are running fast with fresh arrival rains. The waters thus rushing down are a mixture of fresh and earlier flows like of distinct colours. The mountain waters are now surfiest with freash 'dhaatus' or mineral, even as peacocks are excited with the heralding of fresh arrival of the monsoon season. Lakshmana! Have you noticed that by mid day, the forests like fresh, especially with the abundance of green grass all around like the 'nutana nrityotsava' or a novel dance gets initiated. Do you notice the long line of goats seek to catch up the 'aakaasha garjanaas' far up by climbing the mountain peaks and are waiting restfully! Even the minute sized 'indragopaas' or the sparkling grass hoppers are dancing away with gay abandon with parrot like colours. vahanti varṣanti nadanti bhānti; dhyāyanti nṛtyanti samāśvasanti, nadyo ghanā mattagajā vanāntāḥ; priyāvinīhāḥ śikhinaḥ plavaṅgāḥ/ praharṣitāḥ ketakapūṣpagandham; āghrāya hṛṣṭā vananirjhareṣu, prapāta śabdākulitā gajendrāḥ; sārdaṁ mayūraiḥ samadā nadanti/ As the rivers are flowing in full swings, the clouds are pouring thick yet fresh rains, the ‘Mattebhā yukta’ elephants are roaming free and fast, the forest areas are in glory with greenery, the lovers are fulfilling their lust while the singletons are crazy for companionship, the peacocks are shrieking repeatedly, the Vanaras are elated with excitement! Madavarshi Gaja Rajaas are screaming loud with reverberations by lifting their trunks repeatedly as groups of peacocks flapping their colourful wings wide are dancing in symphony. Kvachit prageetaa iva shatpadoudhah, kvachit pramatta iva vaaranendrair - vibhaantyanekaashriyano vanaantaah/ Sometimes, bhramaraas or groups of honey sucking bees are singing, some where peacocks are dancing and somewhere else huge elephants seem to get intoxicated and move hither and thither and thus the mother Nature assumes varied impulses! mattā gajendrā muditā gavendrā; vaneṣu viśrāntatārā mṛgendrāḥ, ramyā nagendrā nibhṛtā nagendrāḥ; prakrīḍito vāridharaiḥ surendrah/ vṛttā yātrā narendrāṇām senā pratinivartate, vairāṇi caiva mārgās ca salilena samīkṛtāḥ/ māsi prauṣṭhapade brahma brāhmaṇāṇām vivakṣatām, ayam adhyāyasamayaḥ sāmāgāṇām upasthitah/ As ‘Gajendra’ or the Elephant King gets intoxicated by constant pourings of rains, ‘Gavendra’ or the Vrishaba Raja is full of happiness, ‘Mrigendra’ or the King of Lions shows off its valour, ‘Nagendra’ the King of mountains looks revelled, but ‘Narendras’ or Kings of humans are queit in the rainy season! The Yuddha Yatras of Kings are halted for good, the ‘sena’ is resting and that is the pronounced impact of the rainy season. Our situation is just in this very manner. Koshala desha Raja Bharata had stalled his preparatory activities for a battle by four months and collected the weapons and related yuddha saamagri till Ashadha Purnima. imāḥ sphītaguṇā varṣāḥ sugrīvaḥ sukhām āsnute, vijitāriḥ sadāraś ca rājye mahati ca sthitaḥ/ ahaṁ tu hṛtadāraś ca rājyāc ca mahataś cyutaḥ, nadīkūlam iva klinnam avasīdāmi lakṣmaṇa/ śokaś ca mama vistūrṇo varṣās ca bhṛṣadurgamāḥ, rāvaṇaś ca mahāñ śatrur apāraṁ pratibhāti me/ This rainy season indeed has multifaceted features. At this very time Sugriva had defeated his opponent, got comfortably installed as King and now enjoying his life with his wife. But, alas, Lakshmana! I had lost my kingship, and my wife had been kidnapped and as such landed in neck deep waters of undesirable tormentations. My sorrow is getting intolerable day by day and now this unfortunate coincidence of the rainy season. Mean while my worst possible enemy is getting more and more intolerable. It is one thing that this is just not the time for a battle run and by far the worse is that the reach to Lanka is unimaginably difficult by having to cross the ocean. More so, Sugriva has had insurmountable hardships life long and nly the other day is breathing peacefully just now. On the other hand, my expectations are exceedingly limitless as the solution is a challenge even to celestials. Even so, Lakshmana! I am truly shackled with utmost patience only due to the utmost helpful, truthful and transparent nature of Sugriva and this waiting with my mouth shut and hands tied up’ . As Shri Rama thus poured his heart out likewise, Lakshmana expressed his self confidence that Sugriva would and should do the needful and meanwhile the end of varsha kaala and the heralding of Sharad kaala ought to be awaited with utmost patience and self restraint!

[Vishleshana on Shat Ritus or Six Seasons from Taittiriya Arankaya

Ritus or Seasons approximately coincide with Chaitra-Vaishakha or end March to the last weeks of May when festivals like Ugadi, Shri Rama Navami, and Vaishakhi are celebrated. Greeshma Ritu or Summer during April-July during Jyeshtha-Ashadha when festivals like Ratha Yatra and Guru Purnima are observed and Dakshinayana or the Solar downtrend commences. Varsha Ritu or monsoon coincides with Shravana-Bhadrapadas or the last portions of July-September when Mangala Gauri and Vara Lakshmi Vratas, Raksha Bandhan, Krishna Ashtami, Ganesh Chaturthi and Onam are celebrated. Sharad Ritu or Autumn Season coinciding with Ashvin-Kartika months extending portions of September to November being mild weather the famed Sharannava Ratris and Depaavali are celebrated. Hemanta Ritu or pre-winter Season coinciding with Margaseersha and the last days of November-January, the festivals of Vasanta Panchami, Shiva Ratri and Holi are observed; and finally Shishira Ritu or winter coinciding with Maagha-Phalguna months during the last quarter of January to March is the time of Vasanta Panchami, Shiva Ratri and Holi. The Chandra maana procedure varies in the sense that the cycle of Seasons starts from the first day of Chaitra commencing from Ugadi.

[The following chart provides the details: Ritu/ Season- Lunar Month -Months - Weather

Vasanta or Spring during Chaitra -Vaishakha or Feb 18- April 20 with temperature of 20-30 C
 Greeshma or Summer of Jyeshtha- Ashadha April 21-June 21 with temperature of 30-50 C
 Varsha or Monsoon of Shravana-Bhadrapada or June 22-Aug 23 with hot-humid- rains Sharat or Autumn of Ashvijuja-Kartika or Aug 24- Oct 23 mild temperature.
 Hemanta or Pre-winter coinciding with Margashira-Pushya- Oct 24- Dec 21 with pleasant- cold weather
 Shishira or winter during Maagha-Phalgun - Dec 22-Feb 17 Moderate Cold;10C+/- Vasanta Season is dominated by Vasu Devatas instructed by Savitu as at the beginning of the Samvatsara and heralding colours, dresses, flowers and freshness all around and with plentiful water and Nature. The Spring season beckons relatives and friends to home with good food and gifts. In Greeshma the summer season scorches earth with heat asking for light dresses in white as Rudra and his gana devats dominate and prepares earth for Parjanya and rains ushering diseases like cold, jaundice and so on. Yet, this is when crops are abundant and fruits in variety are aplenty. All the same rains the future of food supplies for the year hence calls for ploughing, planning and hard work. Sharat provides clean eyes and good vision even as divine artisans with the grace of Ribhu Devatas initiate planning, innovations, creations and caliber, aspirations and contented living. Sharat season heralds good eating, wearing god dresses and enjoyments. Marut Devas then follow creating mixed blessings; on one hand they create harsh and mighty winds seeking destruction and damages and on the other hard realities of life with obstructions in efforts yet unusual and unexpected fruits of hard work alike work never performed.
 Variety is the spice of Life in the Sharat Season! Hemant calls for vigilance, either initiating a struggle ahead or a caution and forewarning for preparedness and thus of introspection. Shishira Ritu arrives with lightnings, rains, smugness of Nature around besides that of individuals too. The blessing of ample rains could also calls for uncertainties. As Agni Deva calls for plentiful waters to heighten living conditions of Beings, uncertainties too prevail as natural calamities thus creating a touch-and-go situation. The Mighty
 Marut Devas are worshipped for overcoming impediments and create opportunities for happiness]

Pavankumara Hanuman was an erudite scholar of established principles of Dharma Jnaana as also of convincing capability objectively. Having noticed that the skies were clear and the rainy season had retreated, he realised that he had long enough marital contentment in the company of his wife Ruma, besides Tara too. Like Devendra who often indulged in playfulness with Gandharva kanyas and Apsarasaas, Sugriva too spent long enough varasha kaala in fulfillment, having entrusted royal duties to his ministers, especially since the kingdom had no issues of external attacks or internal revolutions. Thus Hanuman approached King Sugriva, conversed with him about the niceties of life and initiated: King Sugriva! Now you are happy to secure the Kingship and name being able to preserve and even enhance the traditional prosperity of the kingdom. yo hi mitreṣu kālajñāḥ satatam sādhu vartate, tasya rājyaṃ ca kīrtiś ca pratāpaś cābhivardhate/ yasya kośaś ca daṇḍaś ca mitrāṇy ātmā ca bhūmipa, samavetāni sarvāṇi sa rājyaṃ mahad aśnute/ tad bhavān vṛttasaṃpannaḥ sthitaḥ pathi niratyaye, mitrārtham abhinūtārtham yathāvat kartum arhati/ When the thought as to when 'pratyupakaara' or return help has to be fulfilled then one's reputation, credibility, and good name would be ensured. Raja! if only a king's treasury, army, goodwill and friendship, besides one's own good health are in tact, then the fulfillment of kingship gets stabilised. Happily you are a repository of 'sadaachaara' and of traditional values; as you had taken the vow of friendship, it is now time to repay it. You are aware that procrastination in repayment would necessarily leads to disasters. kriyatām rāghavasyaitad vaidehyāḥ parimārgaṇam, tad idaṃ vīra kāryam te kālātūtam ariṃdama/ na ca kalam atūtam te nivedayati kālavit, tvaramāṇo 'pi san prājñas tava rājan vaśānugaḥ/ Bhagavan Shri Rama is our outstanding friend; it is high time that the most essential task of 'Devi Sitaanveshana' be initiated straightaway; Shri Rama is fully aware of the need for timely action which is to be necessarily initiated by you only. na hi tāvad bhavet kālo vyatītaś codanād r̥te, coditasya hi kāryasya bhavet kālavyatikramaḥ/ akartur api kāryasya bhavān kartā harīśvara, kiṃ punaḥ pratikartus te rājyena ca dhanena ca/ Even well before Shri Rama would need to remind you, the 'kartavya' be initiated, lest there might not be a feeling of tardiness. Swami Sugriva! You are the over all master of Vanaraas and Bears; please therefore call for a quick assembly of them all. Undoubtedly indeed, Shri Rama's intrepidity is well known as he has had the record of controlling asuras, maha naagaas and even Devas. But a task of this nature might be useful of supplementary backup, especially since you had taken a 'pratigjna' to assist. Shri Rama had successfully subdued and destroyed your sworn enemy Vaali and facilitated your unchallenged kingship, is this not time now to secure Sita Devi from bhutala or swarga! King Sugriva! You have the unchallenged status of commanding crores of Vanaraas but you have only give your green signal to them. Towards this, You have only to instruct Maha Veera Neela to arrange for the grouping together of the unique 'Vanara Sena and their Senapatis.' Then King Sugriva instructed to the maha seva of vanaraas: tripañcarātrād ūrdhvaṃ yaḥ prāpnuyān neha vānaraḥ, tasya prāñāntiko daṇḍo nātra kāryā vicāraṇā./ harīś ca vṛddhān upayātu sāṅgado; bhavān mamājñām adhikṛtya niścītām/ Those Vanaras who do not assemble under the leadership of Angada would be punished for sure'. So saying King Sugriva returned to his 'Mahal'.

As Sugriva instructed the Vanara Seva thus, Shri Rama realised that the Varsha season had finally concluded by looking at the clear sky and got troubled by Sita Viyoga. He got concerned whether Sugriva had revived the thoughts of ‘Sitaanveshana’, Ravana Vadha and so on. Seated as he was on mountain top alone, he kept on experiencing his Sita viyoga and recalled his memories of such clear skies along with her. He recalled his experiences of how Sita used to mimic koels, recall the sounds of ‘kalahamsas’ and her imitations, the sounds of rivers and water flows, the scenes of lotus ponds, her musical and resonant voice tones, and the desire provocations of Sharad nights, the moon shine and the touch and feel of soft winds and so on. His memories about Sita, the long separation of her, their togetherness of admiring views of parvata shrenis, the titillating sensations of her intimate company had literally drowned in his recalls of sweet memories. As Rama was drowned deep in his memories about Sita, Lakshmana saw Rama having lost in his thought syndrome. He said: ‘kim ārya kāmasya vaśamgatena; kim ātmapurūṣya -parābhavena, ayam sadā samhṛīyate samādhiḥ; kim atra yogena nivartitena/ Arya Rama! Of which avail in day dreaming with memories, instead of fortifying your will power and sharpening the action plans. This type of shameful brooding blunts away the capacity of resolution. Brother! Let us resolve to fortify our concentration but never fritter it away by loose thoughts and irrelevant recall of do-nothing thoughts.’ Rama then addressed: Kumara Lakshmana! What you have suggested is not only relevant for the present, but delightful for the future; yet one’s emotions do keep pulling back which is a human tendency. Most certainly, all our efforts should to be aimed at the singular task ahead us all yet the action plan does fortify by the intensity of emotions as only that person who happens to be the affected party! ‘Kumara! The cause and effect reasoning reminds of the chatur vishya purusharthas of desire and effort!’ Having stated this, Rama felt retrospective again about the magnificent times that he ever had in the company of Sita. Then describing the welcome change that Varsha season was over and the hopes and anticipations of Sharad Ritu are getting sprouted again as the initial rays of Surya Deva herald new aspirations, new actions, and new end results. Shri Rama who was literally got frustrated with the damage done to his plans of action all through the varsha Ritu, now welcomes the usherings of Sharad Ritu bestowing the splendid opportunity for effective and practical action plan and breaks into the praising the heralding of the Sharad! Sumitra nandana! The thousand eyed Indra Deva having fully saturated the wishes of Prithvi with plentiful waters and excellent crops is happily contented now. The reverberating ‘megha garjanas’ hovering all over the mountains, trees, cities and villages had since saturated with rains and are now quietened, Now the clouds of thick black colours and since changed their colors blueish with dragging white patches and are quietened. Now the gardens are replete with fresh and scented flowers. The heavy sounds of clouds, elephants and dancing peacocks are far and few between. With the ushering of the Sharad Season, the shine of the sky glitters with cleanliness during day time by Surya and in the nights by Moon and Stars. Now among the features of Sharad Ritu, Devi Lakshmi in the form of prosperity and wealth, and the Ushakaala Surya at the day break impacting the bright openings of lotuses are prominent in Pakriti. The winds have come to imbibe the sweetness of the plethora of fragrant smells and the scenic beauty. Now the chakravaaka birds revelling with kaama kreeda seek to pick up the top ‘paraaga’ layers of lotus flowers and enjoy mating swans as if they imitate what they would wish at lakes like Manasaovara! As earth is gradually getting dried up getting rid of slush and mud, now indeed is the approach of Kings to clash and declare battles. This also provides a view of vrishabhas jumping around and forward groups of cows for mating. So do the herds of male elephants seek to slowly and steadily jump forward to groups of she elephants in forests. Lakshmana: iyam sā prathamā yātrā pāṛthivānām nṛpātmaja, na ca paśyāmi sugrīvam udyogam vā tathāvidham/ catvāro vārṣikā māsā gatā varṣaśatopamāḥ, mama śokābhīptasya saumya sītām apaśyataḥ/ Priyaa viheene duḥkhārte hṛtarājye vivāsite, kṛpām na kurute rājā sugrīvo mayi lakṣmaṇa/ To all types of Kings, Vijaya Yatra is a part of their very existence. But neither Sugriva has presented himself nor there are any such indications. On my part, I am highly agitated for Devi Sita who followed me dutifully and walked into that dandakaranya as if it were a flower garden; four dragging months of Varasha Kala are as tortuous as of hundred years. Lakshmana! I am the most unfortunate of humans deserted from my beloved, had lost kingship, pushed out from my country and even in this tragic state Sugriva is yet to display his kindness. anātho hṛtarājyo ’yam rāvaṇena ca dharṣitaḥ, dīno dūragrahaḥ kāmī mām caiva śaraṇam gataḥ/ ity etaiḥ kāraṇaiḥ saumya

Lakshmana! My considered instruction to you is to reach Kishkindha and convey to that King now floating in ‘kaama kreedaas’ as follows: arthinām upapannānām pūrvaṁ cāpy upakāriṇām, āśāṁ saṁśrutyā yo hanti sa loke puruṣādhamah/ śubhaṁ vā yadi vā pāpam yo hi vākyam udīritam, satyena parigrhṇāti sa vīraḥ puruṣottamah/ kṛtārthā hy akṛtārthānām mitrāṇām na bhavanti ye, tān mṛtān api kravyādaḥ kṛtaghnān nopabhuñjate/ He who declared vociferously and made a pratigjna of friendship by ‘Agni Saakshi’, having betrayed once his desires had been fulfilled, is termed as a ‘neecha purusha’ or fallen human. Contrarily, he who would truthfully abide by the sacred precincts of dharma and nyaaya, notwithstanding insurmountable hurdles is distinguished as an ‘uttama purusha’. Further, he whose selfishness is fulfilled with successful and happy ends keeps hesitates and tends to falter the promises declared is called a ‘Kritaghna’ of ingratitude and thus not worthy of flesh eating dogs too to even bite! Lakshmana Kumara! Sugriva concinced me that soon after the Varsha Kala, he would commence the promised task of ‘Sitanveshana’ but neither there are signs to that effect nor even an indicative word has been conveyed so far. ucyatām gaccha sugrīvas tvayā vatsa mahābala, mama roṣasya yadrūpaṁ brūyās cainam idaṁ vacaḥ/ na ca saṁkucitaḥ panthā yena vālī hato gataḥ, samaye tiṣṭha sugrīvamā vālīpatham anvagāḥ/ eka eva raṇe vālī śareṇa nihato mayā., tvām tu satyād atikrāntam haniṣyāmi sabāndhavam/ Mahabali Lakshmana! Do move from here atonce and address him on my behalf like wise. You are the representation of my anger and convey the same as from me and assert : ‘Sugriva! Vaali had been killed and your path had been well laid there eversince. Now, may you not follow the same route and destination! Vaali died alone with one single arrow of mine. But if you waver from your truthful promise, you would too follow the same route along with your ‘bandhu baandhavaas’! Lakshmana! You should also convey as from my assertion: ‘ Vaarara Raja! If only you were to keep up your word of honour even now, other wise you would most certainly meet Vaali in yama loka!

As Shri Rama instructed Lakshmana to go and convey Rama's frustration and anger that Sugriva had not taken any positive move in the context of Sugriva's firm resolution for 'Sitaanveshana', despite the long rainy season was over and the Sharad Ritu had since arrived, Lakshmana replied: 'Arya! Sugriva had truly displayed his meanness and the chanchala buddhi as of a 'vaanara' and after all his firm promises would need to be taken with a pinch of salt. No doubt, Sugriva did take an oath under Agni Saakshi. Sugriva's resolutions are hidden away under his passion for fresh kingship, the excuse of the rainy season and of course his penchant for 'bhoga laalasatva'. Even so his characterlessness is obvious and his irresponsibility is unpardonable, detestable and truly punishable. I am amazed at his nonchalance despite long resolutions and assuring convictions. I am too in heavy rage and the more I think of this utter negligence and casual attitude the stonger I feel that he is disgusting.' So uttering in a high tone and displaying his characteristic temper, Lakshmana sought to leave in disgust and uncontrollable fury with his dhanush baanaas on hand. Then Shri Rama stated: 'Sumitra nandana! In your great fury and agitation, you are not to get readied and resort to 'mitra vadha'! Even justified anger might lead to introspective thoughtfulness. Lakshmana! Be well within the precincts of self control and do not hurt Sugriva physically and maintain the erstwhile friendship with him. You may convey to merely convey: 'you had agreed to initiate action now for 'Sitaanveshana', but why have you done so yet!' Then Lakshmana approached Sugriva's mansion with lifted up dhanush with anger! No doubt, Lakshmana was discreet enough with maturity of Brihaspati, the Deva Guru, despite the fact of his frustration at Sugriva's failure to initiate action to search for Devi Sita. On his way to Sugriva, he felled Saala-Taala-Ashvakarna trees and threw them away out of irritation. He then located Sugriva's Raja Bhavan in the interiors of Kishkindha as the vanara soldiers identified Lakshman who then appeared agitated and was looking like Kaala-Mrityu-Pralayaagni. The vanara guards outside Sugriva's antahpura sent a message to the King who was at that very time was romancing Tara Devi but Sugriva tended to ignore. Some of the maha veera bodyguards stopped Lakshmana. sugrīvasya pramādaṁ ca pūrvajam cārtam ātmavān, buddhvā

It was at that very time, Angada reached the spot and approached Lakshmana with fear and sadness. Lakshmana then was somewhat cooled down and said: dear son Angada! Now inform Sugriva that Shri Rama's younger brother is waiting standing outside. Then Angada politely asked him to please be seated and then entered Sugriva's antahpura and found Sugriva was resting in sleep. Some how having been awoken and finding Angada too nearby, Sugriva heard Angada's statement: 'Raja Sugriva! As you are aware, Rama Lakshmana brothers are the swarupas of satya and dharma, triloka vijayas and your 'raajya daataas'. Now Lakshmana is standing at your door step with anger. Please urgently attend to him with your queens and followers and seek to assuage his anger and hurt feelings and give him a patient hearing and convince him that you should soon prove your satya pratigjna and initiate action rightaway.

As Angada of his Mantri Mandali conveyed that Lakshmana was waiting for him with anger, King Sugriva stood up shaken from his bed and addressed the Mantris. He stated defensively: Na me durvyāhratam kinchinnaapi me duranishthitam, Lakshmano Raghava bhraataa kruddhah kimati chintaye/ asuhydbhir mamāmitrair nityam antaradarśibhiḥ, mama doṣān asaṁbhūtān śrāvito rāghavānujaḥ/ atra tāvad yathābuddhi sarvair eva yathāvidhi, bhavadbhir niścayas tasya vijñeyo nipuṇaṁ śanaiḥ/ I have never uttered one unjustified word nor taken such action. As Sugriva stated frankly admitting his indebtedness to Shri Rama personally, Hanuman said: sarvathā naitad āścaryam yat tvaṁ harigaṇeśvara, na vismarasi susnigdham upakāraṁ śubham/ Raghaveṇa tu sūreṇa bhayam utsrjya dūrataḥ, tvatpriyārtham hato vālī śakratulyaparākramaḥ/ sarvathā praṇayāt kruddho rāghavo nātra saṁśayaḥ, bhrātaram sa prahitavāṁ lakṣmaṇam lakṣmivardhanam/ Kapi Raja Sugriva! Hanuman said firmly: 'This is clear that we have erred on the wrong side and hence Lakshman had arrived in great anger and anguish. ārtasya hṛtadārasya paruṣam puruṣāntarāt, vacanam marṣaṇīyam te rāghavasya mahātmanaḥ/ kṛtāparādhasya hi te nānyat paśyāmy aham kṣamam, antareṇāñjalim baddhvā lakṣmaṇasya prasādanāt/ niyuktair mantribhir vācyo avaśyam pāṛthivo hitam, ata eva bhayam tyaktvā bravīmy avadhṛtaṁ vacaḥ/ Mahatma Shri Rama's dear wife was kidnapped and had so far been suffering and hence asked angry Lakshmana to convey his feelings yet controlled. That is why we need to keep quiet without reactions, even if provoked; more so since we have erred and we have failed in discharging our responsibility. Indeed, for the sake of our kingdom and its welfare we need to keep restrained even when Lakshmana might steam off his rage. Otherwise, if Bhagavan Rama gets angered, then he would show a situation of his attack even against Devaasura Gandharvas and trilokaas! na sa kṣamaḥ kopayitum yaḥ prasādyā punar bhavet, pūrvopakāram smaratā kṛtajñena viśeṣataḥ/ tasya mūrdhnā praṇamya tvam saputrah sasuhṛjjanah, rājams tiṣṭha svasamaye bhartur bhāryeva tadvaśe/ Hence, our responsibility now is to bear Lakshmana's anger with folded hands and knees; more so we ought to be humble in view of gratitude and reiterate Sugriva's pratigjna to straightaway initiate quick action towards the responsibility of 'Sitaanveshana' at once!

Welcomed and accompanied by Angada, Lakshmana was welcomed into the King's Bhavan like Kishkindha Cave. As he was entering, huge sized Vanara Soldiers greeted him with reverence. The Mahal was full of sweet odours of chanadana-agaradi sugandhas, cool water springs, beautifully carved ivory pillars, well dressed vanara kanyas with flower garlands, well decotated residential chambers of Angada, Hanuman, Mainda, Dvidid, Gavaya, Gaja, Sharabha, Vidyunmaali, Sampaati, Suryaaksha, Veerabahu, Subahu, Nala, Kumuda, Sushena, Taara, Jaambavaan, Deerghamukha, Neela, Supatala, and Sunetra. Then Sugriva Bhavan was like Indra sadana the entry of which was difficult to enter as was guarded tightly. Inside the bhavan, there were cushioned chairs and bed rests, well decorated hand rests made of silver and gold designs. There was soft music of instruments such as veena as being lilted by well dressed and youthful females of charm, proud and conscious of their figures and face cuts. As dancing girls advanced with the tilting nupuras of their soft and swift feet welcoming Lakshmana, he felt rather shy and bent down his broad head and neck. Then had suddenly realised the very purpose of his visit: Roshavega prakupitah shrutwaa chaabharanasivanam, chakaara jyaasvanam veeo dishah shabdena puurayan/ Then Lakshmana being full of 'rosha and aaveshaas' stood up firm and straight and did his 'dhanush tamkaara' or the frightening sound which got reverberated all over the directions. On hearing the reverberation, Sugriva realised that Lakshmana had indeed arrived there. Out of sheer fear in his mind and heart, Sugriva consulted Tara as to why and for which reason, Lakshmana has appeared in fury. Please move forward ahead of me and face him first and seek to soften him. I am sure on seeing you first, please welcome him with smiles and sweet conversation. Then I could face him. As she entered, Lakshmana put his chin down and his anger got rather diluted. Then, she addressed Lakshmana: 'Raja Kumara! Why are you annoyed and angry! Who is not following your instructions! Why indeed is provoking you to have you angered !Then Lakshmana replied: 'This husband of yours being sunk deep in 'vishaya bhogaas' and seems to have the principles of 'dharma and nyaya'; why are you not realising this! Sugriva seeks to preserve his kingship as we are drowned on the depths of sorrow and tormentations. He is not the least bothered about this. Vaanara Raja Sugriva was given a waiting period of good four months before he could think of us, if at all. He is too busy with his own 'kaama kreedaas and maddya paanaas'. Nahi dhatmaartha siddhyardham paanamevam prashasyate, paanaadarthascha kaamascha dharmascha pariheeyate/ Dharma lopo mahaamstaavat krite hyaapratikurvatah, artha lopuscha mitrasya naashe gunavato mahaan/ Devi! Those Purushaas who aim at the fulfillment of Dharaartha Siddhi would indeed not resort to 'madya paana' ever, since the purushathaas are drowned in it. In case of close friendships, when help is expected of them, the ties of friendship could be snapped away as troubles are to be faced by both the parties to mutual peril. Mitram hyaarthagunashreshtham satya dharma paraayanam, tadaddvayam tu parityakam na tu dhame vyavasthitam/ Tadevam prastute kaarye kaaryamasmaabhi - ruttaram, tat kaaryam karya tatvagjne tvamudaahartumarhasi/ Friends are essentially of two types: one type of friendship is merely to get one's own selfish purposes; another kind is rooted to the principles of Satya and Dharma or Truthfulness and Virtuousness or blamelessness. In such a situation and context, what ought to be the action plan therehence! Then what should be the kartavya or the responsibility, do tell me, as Tara Devi! you indeed are a tatva jnaani!!' Tara then replied: Na kopa kaalah kshitipalaputra! Na chaapi kopah svajane vidhyeyah/ tadathakaamasya tasya pramaadapyaharsi veerasodhum/ Veera Raja Kumara! This is not the appropriate time for anger and anguish. Sugriva is determined to fulfill the 'karya siddhi'. In case there is a mistake, kindly do pardon us! Udyogastu chiraagjnaptah Sugrivena narottama,kaamasyaapi vidheyena tavaarthapratisaadhane/ Nara shreshtha Lakshmana! Even if Sugriva is drowned with wine and women, he had already initiated steps for forward action and is awaiting for final instructions! Devi Tara further said: 'Maha baaho! As perhaps, you might have perhaps felt that it might not be proper for you to enter the inner most chamber of Sugriva as he was surrounded by women around, but please do step in as Sugriva is actually waiting for you!' As Lakshmana peeped in and entered there, he saw him and stood up waiting and expecting MahaVeera Lakshmana!

As Lakshmana forced his entry into Sugriva's 'antahpura' with anger, the latter got frightened with his body parts benumbed. Indeed his elder brother was agitated due to Sugriva's indifference. Sugriva jumped up suddenly as if a 'dhwaja' got broken and fallen down to earth. And so did his surrounded females including Ruma Devi, who too were frightened. Sugriva bent his head down with folded hands with reverence. Then Lakshmana shouted at Sugriva: 'Vaanara Raja! You are complemented usually as a Dhairyavaan-Kuleena-Dayalu-Jitendriya- and Satyavaadi Raja. But how is it that you are proving to be liar and cruel having made a truthless 'Pratigjna'! Do you know the adage and sinfulness that by swearing before a horse, the person concerned becomes an 'Ashvaanruta' and is doomed by that pratigjna! Like wise when a person duly performs 'Go Daana' and soon enough commits a Go hatya! Similarly a Pratigjna before a 'dharmatma' person and yet kills that very person, he is called

He who fulfills his immediate requirement and would not care to perform return help is rightly named as a ‘Kritaghna’ deserving the punishment of killing him. Kapi Raja! Lord Brahma having observed such a Kritaghna made the following shloka: Even sinners who commit Gohatya, drinkning of intoxicants, stealing and vrata bhanga might undergo ‘prayaschitta’ or atonement, but there could be no remission for ‘kritaghna’ or ungratefulness! Vaanara! You are an Anaarya-Kritaghna-and Midyaavaadi, since out of your selfishness, you are not doing reciprocation of any kind and have not consolidated steps for Sitanveshana as yet! Your Patigñas are hollow and have truly proved the adage of a Serpent and a Frog and your true form of deception has been shown to Shri Rama. There fore, Sugriva! Even now, wake up from your ‘vishaya vaancchhas’ or else take to the path of Vaali!

Vishleshana on Prayaschittas (Atonements): Sourced from Parashara Smriti and Manu Smriti

Prayaschitta for ‘Sura paana: Dwija if drunk by mistake or due to uncertain mental balance be served boiling hot liquor so that he is probably recall his bad experience be reminded of his guilt again and again. Alternatively, he is punished by drinking boiling hot cow’s urine, or water or ghee or cow dung almost till he is tongue is burnt literally. Or else, the possible atonement of consuming hard liquor, one might eat only a day and rice’oil cakes for the night for a year and wear cow hair clothes carrying a flag of anti-liquor all along. Suraapaana is such as the waste of grains which is abhorable since that is the food and drink of yaksha, raakshasa, pishachas; indeed brahmanas especially ought to avoid suraapaana as being the virtuous eaters of ‘havish’ or the remains of the offerings of food on completion of vedic homa karyas. Even once a brahmana consumes a hard liquor gets barred from brahmanatwa and gets outcast to the meanest low class. Stealing: Gold of brahmanas once complained and the stealer confesses, striking the culprit hard with a club then the thief gets purified and the brahmana victim retains his austerity. Infact, the victim brahmana might gift the gold and retreat to perform brahma tathya pataka vrata and that indeed be the perfect manner by which the thief himself would get ashamed. Guru bharya talpagaami: This is one of the ‘Pancha mahaapaatakas’ that deserves the praayaschitta only by self confession and embracing the prototype of a woman of redhot iron and literally dying or alternatively cut off his own male organ and try to walk towards ‘nairuti’ or south west till he perhaps falls dead. Go hatya: If a cow is killed, the ‘praayaschitta’ would be to shave off his head and consume the drink of yavas or barley grains and hide himself from the public in a cowshed wearing the hides of the dead cow for a month. During that period of atonement he should bathe in the cow urine and eat only the havishya bhojana only for three weeks in the month; in the following two months, he should follow cows with composure and drink the water mixed with the dust raised by the cowherd and at the day eat saltless ‘havishaana’ and sit up in veeraasanam position all through the night as the cows sleep off comfortably. In case, a sick and frightened cow of sacredness expecting or actually attacked by tigers or wild animals and fallen helpless in a ditch or mud, then no honest attempt be spared by some how tide over the rescue. In varying conditions of weather of heat, rain, cold and speedy winds, a good human being should make allout and determined endeavors even at the risk of one’s existence; if a grazing cow- incidentally this is the only being in the Lord’s srishti which inhales as also exhales oxygen- while its calf is enjoying milk from its udder, be it in the fields or one’s own cow-yard, any attacker either by a criminal or an animal, cows ought to be rescued first and then the calf. Anena vidhinaa yastu goghno gaamanu -gachhati, sa gohatyaakritam paapam tribhirmaasairvyapohati/ Any person suffering from the sin of ‘go hatya’ if he rescues a dying cow would indeed be relieved of this atrocious degradation of morality within three months of such rescue. Once one’s prayaschitta is concluded then the person concerned is to observe charity to a well learnt Brahmana of ten cows and a bull, or alternatively surrender what ever property that he has!]

Tara Devi while seeking to lessen the anger of Lakshmana stated: ‘ Kumara Lakshmana! It should not become of speaking about Sugriva in this manner. He is the King of Vanaras and moreso would not be appropriate from a friend like you. Veera! Kapi Raja is neither ingratitude, dull, cruel and untruthful nor a knave. Undoubtedly Shri Rama had helped him in a battle which was not possible otherwise and Kapiraja would not be able to ignore that act of Rama’s grace. Indeed it was due to Rama’s courtesy that Sugriva accorded his Kingship, fame and repossession of Devi Ruma. In the past, Sugriva had all types of misfortunes and extreme sufference but since his attachment to Ruma and her retrieval now had indeed got made him excited, like Brahmarshi Vishvamitra’s passion to Apsarasa Menaka. Indeed, Vishvamitra as a King from Kshatriya Vamsha having been bent on accomplishing Kama Dhenu from Vasishtha but having failed in his keen endeavour was frustrated and took to long tapasya, but was seduced by Apsarasa Menaka instead.[Refer Essence of Valmiki Bala Ramayana- Sarga]. Sugriva was thus excited in his recovery of Ruma and spent good time with her thanks to the arrival of the rainy season when battles were impossible then and ‘Sitaanveshana’ had to be stalled. Lakshmana! It is stated that Maha Muni Vishvamitra due to his passion for Menaka considered ten long years as if it were just one day; such was the example of Brahmarshi Vishvamitra, let alone Sugriva! Kumara Lakshmana! dehadharmaṁ gatasyāśya pariśrāntasya lakṣmaṇa, avitṛptasya kāmeṣu rāmaḥ kṣantum ihārhati// The natural instincts of all the Beings in the Creation are food, sleep and the joy of procreation. Sugriva having been frustrated for the best part of his lifetime had since eaten well, slept well and enjoyed his marital bliss. Had not a Mahatma of the stature of Shri Rama is missing the company of Devi Sita even during this very short time! Thus the kind hearted Shri Rama should bear this delay for a few days or weeks. Purusha Vara Lakshmana! Being a ‘Satyaguna sampanna’ of your status should ignore this short delay but not get jittery, alarmed and agitated, much less shout loud all about. I seek your pardon for this short time lapse, if any. I am very certain and confident that Sugriva is such as to ignore all his interests in the kingdom, Ruma, or me or Angada- dhana dhaanyaas and popularity just for the of Rama and his wish to recover Devi Sita ; surely you aware of the inseperability of Chandra and Rohini!

Visleshana on Chandra Deva’s inseperability of Devi Rohini vide Varaha Purana

Daksha's curse to Moon and reappearance: As Prajapati Daksha married off all his twenty seven daughters to Soma, the latter was ignoring all the daughters, excepting Devi Rohini. The 27 daughters married to Chandra are Kṛttika, Rohinī, Mrigasheersha, Aardra, Punarvasu, Purbabhadrapada, Pushya, Aslesha, Magha, Svaati, Chitra, Purvaphalguni, Hasta, Dhanishtha, Vishaakha, Anuraadha, Jyeshtha, Moola, Purvaashaadha, Uttaraashaadha, Shravana, Uttaraphalguni, Shatabhisha, Uttarbhadrapada, Revati, Ashwini, Bharani. These 27 wives of Chandra are 27 Nakshatras (the constellations) which are on the moon's orbit. The rest of them complained to their father Daksha who reprimanded Soma to behave but Soma ignored the repeated warnings of Daksha. Out of exasperation, Daksha cursed Soma to gradually decline and finally disappear. In the absence of Soma, there were far reaching adverse effects in the Universe. Devas including Vanaspati felt Soma's absence and so did human beings, trees, animals and worst of all medicinal plants, herbs and so on. The Sky was dark and the Stars too lost the shine. Chandra prayed to Lord Shiva for long at Prabhasa Tirtha and since Daksha's curse was irreversible a compromise was made that during Krishna paksha Chandra would wane and wax during Shukla Paksha. However, this formula proved defective as Chandra was sinking in the Ocean causing natural sufferings by way of non availability of herbs and so on and at the request of Devas to Shiva again, Chandra left only with one of the 'Kala', the Lord gracefully wore the Crescent Moon on His 'jataajuta mastaka' for good, enabling Chandra to wane and wax every month ever since! As Devas approached Vishnu, He advised the solution of Churning the Ocean by both Devas and Danavas and latter too agreed to the proposal for the lure of securing 'Amrit'. In the process of churning, Moon was given birth again. This had brought great relief to Devas, human beings whose 'Ekadasha Indriyas' (Eleven Body parts), 'Pancha Bhutas' (Five Elements), Solah Kshetra Devatas, Trees and Medicines. Even Rudra's head was without Soma and so did water. Lord Brahma blessed Pournima thithi and selected the day for worship to Chandra Deva when fast is viewed propitious along with token amount of money and material as charity. That specific day 'Yava' Bhojan (Barley food) or barley made material is considered to be blessed a person with Gyan (Knowledge), radiance, health, prosperity, foodgrains and salvation.]

It is stated that there are thirty six hundred rakshasa veeras exist in Lanka under the rule of Lanka with a population of hundred thousand crores. The Maha Mayavi Rakshasaas could change their figures as they please and are stated as cruel, hard to be killed and brave warriors under the unique Kingship Ravana who kidnapped Devi Sita who is known as the terror of Devas, let alone the brainy humans. Lakshmana! you are aware that possible and close assistance of Vanara strength is essential and was sought for and hence the cooperation of Sugriva. Be that as it may, blaming and shouting at Sugriva notwithstanding the mutual relations for small adjustment of a few days of time loss is truly undiplomatic. Vaali was well aware of Ravana Sena's number, quality and bravery; he used to confide these facts in me. This was how Sugriva is seeking to mobilise the full strength of Vanaras, knowing well that several of them would perish. He is inculcating among them of the unique spirit of loyalty, Swami Bhakti and the blind belief of Shri Rama's unique personality of dharma-thyaga-nyaya and celestial features. A time limit has already been fixed even well earlier by Sugriva and by today it self maha bali vanaras [refer Sarga 29] are getting rallied up; some hundreds of crores each of reech- langurs or long tailed, black faced, huge sized Asian Monkeys and big sized Vanaras had since rallied up already. Therefore Lakshmana! Leave anger and initiate action!

Thus Tara managed the anger of Lakshmana convincingly and praised of Rama and his stature vis-à-vis that of Sugriva- Sugriva expresses of Rama's magnificence and his mere supplementary assistance

As thus Tara thus convinced Lakshmana of the gigantic preparatory efforts of the Vaanara Sena, Sugriva who approached him and had re-emphasised his gratitude to Shri Rama and of his grand stature and his all out efforts to assist him in a miniscule manner. He recalled Shri Rama's unimaginable caliber of 'Sapta Taala Vriksha Chedana' by his single arrow and blew off mountains, shook off earth having pierced through it down to paatala as the arrow thus returned within minutes back to his quiver! Indeed of which avail is the help of Vaanaraas even as race that Lord Brahma created! Veera Lakshmana! I can only follow Rama's footsteps well behind him to merely extend moral support to him at the most, as perhaps of a relieving factor of tension typical of human nature of the essential celestial incarnation of what Shri Rama is! Lakshmana! The 'dhanurvisphotana shabda' or the reverberating sound of his straightened bow string would shake off earth with the mountains tilted and oceans shaken, then of which avail of my assistance and crores of my intrepid - yet ever submissive army! yadi kiṁ cid atikrāntaṁ viśvāsāt prañayena vā, preṣyasya kṣamitavyaṁ me na kaś cin nāparādhyati/ Nara shreshtha: If I have committed any laxity and relaxation in my efforts, I seek your sympathy and camaraderie out of your indulgence as in own's own efforts of devotion such shortcomings do occur to the subordinates but ignored sympathetically.' As King Sugriva explained thus, Lakshmana replied: 'Sugriva! I do understand appreciate your heart is clean and feelings are genuine. I am totally convinced of your transparency of clean feelings of heart, and of your firm attitude to enthuse your soldiers to sacrifice but never show their backs with come what may resolve. Perhaps, apart from my elder brother, you excel as a vidvan and of firm resolution. Then Sugriva instructed Hanuman to despatch efficient Vaanaras in thousands and lakhs and repeatedly spread the message of the Vaanara King to all the Vanaraas living at the tops and sides of Five famed Parvatas of Mahendra-Himavan-Vindhya-Kailasa-Mandarachala, besides of Meru, the Surya Bhramana related Udayaachala-Asthaalaya, as also the Padmaachala Vanaashrita bhayankara Vanaras, Anjanaa Parvata vaasis etc. to assemble at Kishkindha within ten days failing which they would be subjected to death penalty. Hanuman was indeed capable of organising the spread of this unique directive as he was renowned for his mercurial and none too possible action for him. As a result, there were three crores of most sturdy giant sized Vanara Pramukhas who were commandeered by the grit of the celestial Vaayu-Suta Anjaneya. They arrived from Kailasa, Himalaya, Vindhyaachala and many other mountain shikharaas. Thus: vanebhyo gahvarebhyaś ca saridbhyaś ca mahājavāḥ, āgacchad vānarī senā pibantīva divākaram/ ye tu tvarayitum yātā vānarāḥ sarvavānarān, te vīrā himavac chailaṁ dadṛśus taṁ mahādrumam/ Vanaraas of countless forests, mountain caves, river banks and all other conceivable origins were whipped by the Vaayu Putra Veera Hanuman. As yet another batch of Hanuman followers were despatched to Himalayas, they seemed to have witnessed that very Maha Vriksha which was reputed as Bhagavan Shankara having performed a glorious Yajna in the presence of all the Devatas. annaviṣyandajātāni mūlāni ca phalāni ca, amṛtasvādukalpāni dadṛśus tatra vānarāḥ/ tad anna saṁbhavaṁ divyaṁ phalaṁ mūlaṁ manoharam, yaḥ kaś cit sakṛd āśnāti māsaṁ bhavati tarpitaḥ/ tāni mūlāni divyāni phalāni ca phalāśanāḥ, auṣadhāni ca divyāni jagrhur hariyūthapāḥ/ On those Himalayas, all the homa dravyas were available, besides trees with sweet and tasty fruits and roots which were sighted at once, and the Vanaras while moving to Kishkindha had carried plentiful stock useful for a month plus of consumption.. On the arrival of the crores of Vanaraas of varied descriptions and origins reported to Sugriva and said: sarve parigatāḥ śailāḥ samudrās ca vanāni ca, pṛthivyām vānarāḥ sarve śāsanād upayānti te/ Maha Raja! we have all arrived from various Parvatas, Nadis, and Forests awaiting your further instructions. Sugriva had no doubt complemented Hanuman for the arrival of far flung regions especially from Himalayas along with ample food supply for themselves and a multitude of fellow Vanaras from elsewhere too!

Those who do not repay the services with gratitude are certainly punishment worthy as an appropriate retribution. Shatrusudana! Here are thousands of the most courageous and gutsy Vaanara yodhaas as the frontline warriors, besides crores of the entire Vaanaras from all over the mountain tops, river banks, thick jungles and water flows. Pleased with Sugriva's sincere efforts and the vast collection of Vanara Sena that he had organised, Rama embraced Sugriva and told him: 'dear friend! While Surya Deva scorches earth and its inhabitants during the day time, Chandra Deva brightens it soothingly in the nights; indeed this is not surprising since this is the normal phenomenon of Nature. That is why your return service to me is natural too. Dear friend! Backed up by your assistance, I should now succeed in the battle and uproot Ravana and his fellow rakshasaas. jahārātmavināśāya vaidehīm rākṣasādhamāḥ, vañcayitvā tu paulomīm anuhlādo yathā śacīm/ nacirāt taṁ haniṣyāmi rāvaṇaṁ niśitaiḥ śaraiḥ, paulomyāḥ pitaraṁ dṛptaṁ śatakratur ivārihā/ Rakshasaadhama Ravana ought to be mercilessly killed as he sought to cheat Sita and abducted her just as Anuhlaada - having convinced Shachi Devi's own father Puloma - abducted Shachi Devi the rightful wife of Indra but the latter killed Anuhlaada ruthlessly. Not only that, Indra killed Devi Shachi's father Rakshasa Puloma too.

[Vishleshana on Anuhlada- Shachi Devi-and Indra:]

Shachi Devi the daughter of Danava Puloma was fond of Indra Deva even before their wedding, but Puloma liked another Danava youth named Anuhlaada. With the secret consent and permission of Puloma, Anuhlaada forcibly abducted Shachi Devi. Indra attacked and killed him brutally and married Shachi Devi. In further revenge Indra killed his father in law Danava Puloma too, thereafter.

Incidentally there is another Vishleshana on Shachi Devi and Indra vide Sarga Forty Eight of the Essence Of Valmiki Baala Ramayana in an another context of Vritrasura Vadha my Indra with the help of Dadhichi's backbone turned into Vajrayudha, but Indra was punished for 'brahma hatya pataka', as Indra got dethroned by Nahusha as new Indra, who claimed Shachi Devi and was finally recovered as hidden in a lotus stem at Manasarovara]

As Shri Rama was thus addressing Sugriva, the huge mass of Vanara Sena of arbudaas got flooded as originated from river beds, mountain tops, jungles, surrounding oceans with sky reverberation sounds and simha naadaas. Some were of Sun like redness and some of Chandra like pale yellowish colour, while those from Himalayas were of ice like whiteness. At that time on the mass of Vanara sena, were the prominent 'Shatabali Naayaka Veera' headed koti sahasra -ten arab- strong Vaanaras. Then figured Devi 'Tara's Maha bali father' was prominent heading 'sahasra koti' Vanara Yoddhhaas. Father of Ruma Devi and the son in law of Sugriva was there too. Then Veera Hanuman's father, 'Kesari' heading several thousand followers was noted also. The King of Golaangula race of Languras, 'Gavaksha' was prominent heading ten 'arab', Vaanara veeraas. Maha Parakrami 'Panasa' heading three crore Maha Vanaras too was too visible like a flash. Yudhapati 'Gavaya' of the splendour of Meru Parvata brought parvataakaara bhayankara Vaanaraas of five crores was significant too. Then 'Mainda and Dvividha' Maha Vanaras who were the twins of the 'amsha' Ashvini Kumaras contributed then each of arbudas of Vanaras. Balavan veera 'Gaja' contributed three crores of Vanaras. Reecha Raja 'Jaambavan' headed ten crores of bears of gigantic size was prominently spotted. 'Ruman' or Ruknanvaan led an arbuda vanara, while 'Gandhamadana' headed a 'padmaful sized' vaanaras. 'Angada Kumara; the yuva raja in his personal capacity contributed two 'padma' like Vanara sena. 'Taarak' nama Maha vanara fetched five crores of vanara yoddhas. 'Indrabhanu' named yuuthapati who was a vidvan too brought in behind him even crores of vaanaras. 'Ramya nayaka' of pratah kaala Surya headed eleven thousand and hundred vanara sena behind him. 'Durmukha Maha Vanara' brought two crores of vaanara fighters. 'Veera Hanuman' who made all out efforts to mobilise the vanara yoddhas from all over the 'dishas' from mountains, river beds, forests and water flows commanded in his personal capacity presented Shri Rama a mass of vanaraas of ten arabs of death desperate warriors and so did 'Nala' too of the same number. 'Deergha Mukha' with thunderous garjana presented himself right before Sugriva as the leader of ten crore select Vanaraas of jumping enthusiasm. Like wise, 'Sharabha', 'Kumuda', 'Ramha', and 'Vahni' who like asuras could change their swarupas as they please filled in earth like space from mountain peaks but their count defied numbering. sugrīvas tvarito rāme sarvāms tām vānaraṣabhān, nivedayitvā dharmajñāḥ sthitaḥ prāñjalir abravīt/ yathā sukhaṁ parvatānirjhareṣu; vaneṣu sarveṣu ca vānarendrāḥ, niveśayitvā vidhivad balāni; balaṁ balajñāḥ pratipattum iṣṭe/ Thus dharma jnaata Sugriva intimated to Rama Lakshmanas of the details of the 'Monkey Brigade' and of some prominent Vanara Leaders along with the details of the numbers of the vanara- languras of varied origin, belonging and places all collected with his gigantic efforts unheard, indescribable and unimaginable in the past or even future.

Sugriva having thus detailed the details of ‘mahaparaa krami vaanara yoddhas’ who actually presented themselves, Rama as Lakshmana too was present instructed Sugriva as follows: Vanara shiromani! The search for Devi Sita and the residence of Ravana'sura be initiated at all the surroundings of Ganga-Sarayu-Kaishiki-Kalinda Yamuna- Sarasvati-Sindhu-Shonabhadra , besides the kingdoms of Brahma maala, Videha, Maalava, Kashi, Kosala, Magadha and their cities and villages. Besides the dashantara dwipas like yava, suvarna,adi dweepas; as also sapta dwipas of Sapta Dwipas (Jambu, Plaksha, Salmaali, Kusha, Krouncha, Shaka and Pushkala) be searched thoroughly. Then among the Sapta Samudras (Lavana or Salt, Ikshurasa or Sugarcane juice, Sura or Wine, Ghrita or Classified Butter, Dahi or Curd, Ksheera or Milk and Suswada or Sweet Water) be searched;

Vishleshana on Sapta Dweepas from Brahma Purana

The entire Bhuloka (Earth) was divided into seven major Territories viz. Jambu, Plaksha, Shyalma, Kusha, Krouncha, Shaka and Pushkala surrounded by Sapta Samudras (Seven Seas) viz. Lavana (Salt), Ikshurasa (Sugar cane juice), Sura (wine), Ghrita (Classified Butter or Ghee), Dadhi (Curd), Dugdha (Milk) and Swadu Jala (Sweet Water). Prithvi is stated to have a lotus-like shape, each one of the angles situated with Sapta Parvatas (Seven Main Mountains) with Himavan, Hemakuta and Nishadha in South; Nila, Sweta and Shringvan in North, in the Center is Meru with a height of eighty four thousand yojanas, sixteen thousand yojanas of depth, thirty two thousand yojanas of circumference. Bharata Varsha, Kimpurasha and Hari Varshas are to the south of Meru; Ramyaka Varsha is in North; Bhadrasha in East; and Ketumala in West. In Jambu Dwipa, there is Bharata Varsha above the Sea and below the Himalaya called Bharati with a width of nine thousand yojanas; this is known as ‘Karma bhumi’ where Swarga and Moksha are accessible to those who are desirous and deserving. There are seven major Kula Parvatas / mountains in Bharat viz. Mahendra, Malaya, Sahya, Shaktiman, Ruksha, Vindhya and Pariyatra. It is in this Bharata from where attainment of Swarga becomes possible not only for human beings but even Pashu-Pakshis (animals and birds) with; ‘Sakaama Sadhana’ or Endeavors while in the materialistic world one could reach Swarga, whereas Nishkama Sadhana could even secure Moksha (Salvation). But negative results might be accrued in performing sins and would attract Narakas besides getting sucked into the whirlpool of births and deaths. There is no other place in one’s life excepting in Bharata Varsha or the Karma Bhumi where such a possibility ever exists. Spread over an area of thousand yojanas long from North to South, this hallowed land is divided into Nine Regions viz. Indra dwipa, Kasetutana also known as ‘Upto Setu’, Tamravarna, Gabhastimaan, Nagadwipa, Soumya dwipa, Gandharwa dwipa, Varunadwipa and the Sea-surrounded ninth dwipa. To the east-ward of Bharata is the abode of Kiratas while the west-ward is of Yavanaas; inhabitants of the Central Region are Brahmana, Kshatriya, Vaishyas and Sudras whose professions are Yagnas, Yuddha, Vanijya and Seva (Sacrifices, Battles, Commerce and Trade and Service) respectively. In this Bharata, are of residents of Kuru, Panchala, Madhya desha, Purvadesha, Kamarupa (Assam), Pundrya, Kalinga (Orissa), Magadha, Dakshina Pradesh, Aparanta, Sourashtra (Kathiyavad), Sudra, Abhira, Arbuda (Abu), Maru (Marvada), Malva, Pariyatra, Souveera, Sindhu, Shalva, Madra, Ambashtha, and Parasika. The Yugas of Satya, Treta, Dwapara and Kali are applicable only to Bharata Varsha and nowhere else. While Bharata is the Karma Bhumi practising Yagnas and Daanaas, compared to all other Countries in Jambu Dwipa are Bhoga / luxury-oriented. Bharata Varsha is the best of all the Places in Jambu Dwipa as the former is the Karma Bhumi compared to all other Deshas which are primarily pleasure-loving. It would be only after lakhs of births that one could secure a human life after storing considerable Punya; in fact, Devas sing hymns saying that those who take birth as human beings are blessed since they are born as Manavaas who had great opportunity to qualify to attain Swarga and Moksha by following a religious and disciplined life and by following Nishkaama Dharma or without strings of ‘Plalapeksha’ or fruits of returns. Plaksha Dwipa is double the size of Jambu Dwipa’s one lakh yojanas under the Chief called Mehatidikh who had seven sons and the Kingship was surrounded by Seven major Mountains and Seven Rivers with the traits typical of Treta Yuga. Its inhabitants pray to Bhagavan Vishnu in the form of Chandra Deva. Compared to the salty taste of Sea water between Jambudwipa and Plaksha Dwipa, the taste was of Ikshu in the of intermediate region of Plaksha and Shalmala whose Chief was Vapushman and the latter's size was double that of Plaksha. Here again there are seven mountains with mines of jewels / precious stones and seven Rivers and in this Dwipa Lord Vishnu is prayed in the form of Vayu Deva. Like in Plaksha Dwipa, the inhabitants of Salmala too, Varnashrama is followed and the colours of persons in these Varnas are Kapila, Aruna, Peeta and Krishna are for Brahmanas, Kshatriyas, Vaisyas and Sudras respectively. Sura Samudra earmarks the inter-region of Salmala and Kusha Dwipa whose size was double that of Salmala and Kusha's King is Jyotishman and the inhabitants are human beings practicing Varanashrama as also Daityas, Danavas, Devatas, Gandharvas, Yakshas, Kinnaras and a great mix of Brahma's creation. They all pray to the Multi Faced Janradana. Ghrita Samudra (Classified Butter) partitions the Kusha and Krouncha Dwpas; the size of the Krouncha is double that of Kusha. Rituman is the King of Krouncha where again Varnashrama is observed and the counter-part Varnas are Pushkala, Pushkara, Dhanya and Khyata corresponding to Brahmanas etc. Rudra Swarupa Janardana is the Deity revered in this Dwipa. Between Krauncha and Shaka Dwpas is the Dadhimandoda Samudra and the King of Shaka is Mahatma Bhavya, again with Seven Mountains and Seven Major Rivers as also seven Princes, where Siddhas and Gandharvas inhabit. Maga, Mahadha, Manasa and Mandaga are the corresponding Chaturvarnas. All the inhabitants of this Dwipa pray to Surya Swarupi Vishnu. From Shaka to Pushkara, the intermediate Samudra is of Ksheera and Pushkara which is double of Shaka is size is headed by Stravana and since it is a huge Dwipa, the King divided it to Mahavira Varsha and Dhataki varsha and the sons of the King awarded the two in their names after the two parts under his over-all control. These territories are mainly inhabited by human beings who have longevity of ten thousand years, devoid of illnesses and worries and of jealousies, fears, egos and crookedness; these humans as superior as Devas and Daityas and they are all devoid of Varnashrama as all the inhabitants are of equal status. The dividing line of Pushkara is surrounded by sweet water atop of which is Lokaloka Parvata, beyond which is stated to be of complete darkness; in fact, the Border of Pushkara of ten thousand yojanas, there were neither species nor life].

As you cross Kshaara sagara, then you would find 'susvaadu jaja samudra' where Brahmarshi Ourvi due whose exreme rage, badavaa mukha agni was created. And, ordinary pranis cried and then a huge mountain came into place with saala-taala tamala virkshas with sweet fruits.tatra pūrvam padam kṛtvā purā viṣṇus trivikrame, dvitīyam śikharam meroś cakāra puruṣottamaḥ/ It was from that Udayagiri peak named 'Soumanasa' that Bhagavan Vishnu in his 'Vaamaraavataara' rested his very first stepped foot of the three feet place for his tapasya and his lifted foot on the shikhara of Meru parvata from where he lifted his second step to occupy the leg to the upper lokas and could not place the third foot except on Bali Chakravarti's head and pusher further down to pataalaadi lokaas! From 'Udayaachala's behind, having continued 'Sitanveshanam, vaanara yoddhaas migh to proceed to the east in their prescribed task of 'Sitaanveshana'.

Ready Ref. Vishleshana repeated in brief about Vaamana Deva and Balichakravarti vide Essence of Valmiki Ramayana as released by the website of [kamakoti .org/books

As Vamana Deva arrived at the Yagna shaala, Bali welcomed him, offered 'Arghya', 'Aasana', Puja and offered him limitless gold, jewellery, elephants, horses, cows, women, clothes, bunches of villages or townships or whatever would be his wish! Vamana Deva replied smilingly: Mamagnisharanaarthaaya dehi Rajan Padatrayam, Suvarnagraamaratnaadi tadarthibhyah pradeeyataam/ (Raja! Please provide to me three feet of land to enable me to set up an Agni- Shaala). Bali said that after all three feet would be nothing as he could ask for a lakh of feet which could be given away, but Vamana Deva replied that he was indeed satisfied with that much of Bhumi and if the King were to offer more he might as well provide to the other needy! Bali Chakravarti readily agreed not understanding the implication and as the deed of Daana was being executed and Vamana Deva extended his hand to the King and expanded his Vamana Rupa gradually immediately: Instantly, Vamana Murti displayed his Virat Swarupa: Chandra and Surya were his two Eyes, Shy was his head, Prithvi his feet, Pishachaas were his foot-fingers, Gruhyakaas were his hand fingers, Vishwa Deva Ganaas were in his jaanus /knees, Sadhyas were his janghaas, Yakshaas were his nails, Apsarsaas were his palm lines, Nakshatras were his Eye sight, Surya kiranās were his hairs, Stars were his body hairs, Maharshiganaas were in the hair roots, Vidishas were his hands, Dishāas were his ears, Ashwini Kumars were his faculty of hearing, Vayu was his nose, Chandra Deva was his joking faculty, Dharma Deva was his thinking capacity, Satya was his voice and Saraswati was his tongue, Deva Mata Aditi was his neck, Vidya was his valiyaas or long poles; Pushas were his eye brows, Swarga dwar was his anus, Vaishvanara his face, Prajapati his vrushanaas, Param Brahma was his heart, Kashyapa Muni was his Pumstwa, Vasu Devata was his back, Marutganaas were his Sandhis, Rudra was his Vakshasthala, Mahaarnavaa was his Dhairya, Gangharvas were in his stomach; Lakshmi, Medha, Dhruti, Kaanti and all Vidyaas were in his ‘Kati Pradesha’; the luster and radiance in the total Universe as also the Tapo teja or the power of meditation was the reflection of the magnificence of Natayana; Vedas and Scriptures and the huge Yagnaas and the Sacred Deeds of the Virtuous like Maharshis and Brahmanas were all inside in his ‘kukshi’ or belly. On viewing the Paramatma’s ‘Virat Swarupa’, the so called ‘Mahaasuraas’ referred to earlier in ignorance by Chakravarti Bali before Prahlada’s curse to him got burnt off like flies before a gigantic out break of Fire! Having thus occupied the Universe in totality including the sub-terrain Sapta Paatalaas, Vamana Deva stated that since Bali took the water in his hand and donated the THREE FEET of Land, and blessed him to be the King of the Sapta Paatalaas and granted him long life till the end of Manvantara of the on-going Vaisawata Manu. He also blessed Bali that all the ‘Homa Phalas’ at the time of Shraddhas to be performed even by Brahmanas, besides incomplete and defective Vratas, Agni Kaaryaas without ghee, and Kusha grass roots as also the daanas without detachment would belong to Bali and his followers].

Having despatched one part of Vanara sena to the eastern side of Bharata desha then Sugriva instructed another significant segment of vanara veeras to the southern side having duly explained them of the relevant information. These Maha Veeras included Agni putra Neela, Vayu Putra Hanuman, Brahma putra Jambavaan, Suhotra, Sharaari, Sharagulma, Gaja, Gavaaksha, Gavaya, Sushena the father of Tara Devi, Vrishabha, Maında, Dvııda, Suushena the close associate of Sugriva, Gandhamaadana, the two sons of Hutaashna the Fire consumer viz. Ulkamukha and Ananda all under the directives of Yuva Raja Angada. Sugriva addressed the Maha Veeras! You may like to keep shifting your positions alternatively and visit Vindhya Parvata, the river beds of Narmada dominated by serpents, the fertile yielding agricultural lands of Godavari, Maha Nadi, Krishna, besides the nagaras like Mekhala, Ukala, Dasharna, Abravanti, Avantipura and so on. Then you may also distribute your duties of places like Vidarbha, Rishtika, Mahishaka desha, Vanga or Matyta Desha, Kalinga, Kaushika, and the related mountains-rivers-caves; you may also distribute duties to Godavari related places, Andhra, Kalinga, Punda, Chela, Pandya and Kerala deshaas too. Then the many 'dhaatu samriddha' Adhomukha or 'Malaya' parvata caves be properly searched for Devi Sita's whereabouts. Then pavitra Kaveri River be too visited as known for Apsaras bathing on their 'ghaats.' Do make sure that the party would visit Agastraashrama too situated of Malaya Parvata Shikhara. Having secured the Maharshi's consentful blessings, the Maha Nadi 'Taamraparna' be bathed in and crossed. Deepastasya pāre śatayojanam āyataḥ, agamyo mānuṣair dīptas taṁ mārgadhvaṁ samantataḥ, tatra sarvātmanā sītā mārgitavyā viśeṣataḥ/ sa hi deśas tu vadhyasya rāvaṇasya durātmanaḥ, rākṣasādhipater vāsaḥ sahasrākṣasa madyuteḥ/ dakṣiṇasya samudrasya madhye tasya tu rākṣasī, aṅgāraketi vikhyātā chāyām ākṣipyā bhojinī/ Vanara Mitras! On crossing the Maha Samudra, there is an Island with an area of an estimated hundred yojanas which is unreachable to human or other species like Vanaras but some how penetrate into that area even singly;

that is the place of control by the mighty Ravana asura as all our suspicions are strong the Devi Sita might be there itself, even when the maha sena ought not to take chances as possibly she might be quite elsewhere. Be it alerted however, that some where in the mid ocean is protected by a Maha Rakshasi named Angaraka who protects outsiders to go anywhere near the Ravana Rajya. It is that very Rakshasi who is notorious to vision the shade of any body seeking to approach Lanka could drag and kill even by the suspect's body shadow, drags and kills. As the Lanka dwipa too is a suspected place required for 'Sitaanveshana', that place should be searched thoroughly even in all the nooks and corners. In fact there is 'Pushpitaka' named parvata where Siddha-Charanas and its peak is revered by them; there are two peaks on the mountain top as when is golden and another silveren; the Siddha Charanas worship Surya at the golden peak in the day times and Chandra at the silveren peak in the nights. Indeed, kritagnans or the ungrateful and nastikas would not be able to visualise the mountain peaks. Vanaras! You must bend down your heads and with firm resolve, you should seek to see where Devi Sita might have been kept in that city if at all. There is another parvata by name 'Vidyuta'. That mountain is blessed with ample supply of sweet and delicious fruits aplenty. Also there is yet another mountain named 'Kunjara' where there is the ashram of Maharshi Agastya being a third resident place for him where there is a reputed ratna palace. It on that very mountain there is a Sarpa nivaasa nagari called Bhogavati protecting Maharshis in deep tapasya by 'Sarpas'. In fact Sarpa Raja 'Vaasuki' of Kurmavataara fame helped 'amrita mathana'! Yet another parvata named 'Rishabha' where treasures Nava Ratnas are aplenty such as Gosheershaka-Padmaka-Harishyamas but is essentially surfiert with channana vrikshas or sandalwood trees! It is that Parvata shikhara which is protected by Gandharvas named 'Rohitas'. These are five gandharvas named Shalush, Graamani-Shiksha-Shuka and Babhru. At the end of Bharata desha, there were Mahatmas with the ready authority to swarga nivasa, but and there -beyond, the belief was that the fearful 'pitru loka' would exist and farther beyond the Yama loka and the narakas. Hence the search by way of 'Sitaanveshana' might be terminated as far as the search was concerned.' Then Sugriva concluded to those Vanara Patriots: yas tu māsān nivṛtto 'gre dṛṣṭā sīteti vakṣyati, mattulyavibhavo bhogaiḥ sukhaṁ sa vihariṣyati/tataḥ priyataro nāsti mama prāṇād viśeṣataḥ, kṛtāparādho bahuśo mama bandhur bhaviṣyati/ I am giving a month's time for 'Sitanveshana' and give me the fantastic information that Devi Sita has been spotted at that place; whosoever could declare that intimation that Devi Sita was found at that spot then that glorious person should be entitled to 'bhoga bhagaagyas' everthereafter!

Having despatched a contingent of Vanara Sena including Nala, Hanuman and Jambavan in the southern direction, he then commissioned another that included Devi Tara's father and Sushena his own son in law, as the latter was of megha varna and maha parakrami. Besides, Marichi Maharshi's sons Archishmaan and Archirmalya of the fame and bravery of Indra himself. He addressed the contingent to Sourashtra, Baahveeka, Chandrachitta and Kukshi deshas. These areas are full of cold and ever flowing rivers and excellent crops, besides insurmountable mountain range. The Pashchima Deshas are along side the Western Ocean with rebellious pull and deep sweep known for Timi named giant sized fish locatable even from short distances. The long western mountain range, although disconnected at places on the coastline is worthy of 'Sitaanveshana'; and so are the crowdsful of cities and townships of Muravipattan or Morvi, Avanti, Jatapura, Adlepaapuri and so on besides the forests therearound. 'Somagiri' was another mountain with sky high shikharaas. Do note Vanaras! Some of the 'shikharas' of Somagiri of some twenty four crores of Gandharvas are stated to reside and better to avoid those areas for 'Sitanveshana'. Another illustrious mountain range named 'Paritraata' and there besides is the 'Vajra naama Parvata' well known with the color of Vaidurya Manis. Then there is 'Chakravan Parvata' famed as the 'Sahasraara chakra giri’ replete with deep and dark caves which Vishvakatma constructed. Further on was ‘Varaha Parvata’ with golden ‘shikharas’. Just adjacent was situated the golden city ‘Pragjoshika Nagar’ where the ill famed Narakasura ruled. In the same line of mountains was ‘Medhagiri’ where Indra used to rest on earth amid gardens of golden trees with fantastic range of scented flowers and celestial fruits; as these mountains are in any way unreachable, they could be omitted for Sitanveshana. Similarly Meru mountain too unreachable. etāvad vānaraiḥ śakyam gantum vānarapuṅgavāḥ, abhāskaram amaryādam na jānīmas tataḥ param/ adhigamya tu vaidehīm nilayam rāvaṇasya ca, astam parvatam āsādyā pūrṇe māse nivartata/ ūrdhvaṁ māsān na vastavyam vasan vadhyo bhaven mama, sahaiva śūro yuṣmābhiḥ śvaśuro me gamiṣyati/ Vanara shiromanis! Having commissioned Vanarashreshthas to the western and southern directions already, Sugriva felt that it should be necessary to the northern side too and asked his son in law Shatabali. He explained as to how he was greatly indebted by him to Shri Rama as the latter did the greatest help to him personally for accomplishing him the kingdom and swore him to possibly help Rama to help recover Devi Sita from the clutches of Ravanaasura and as the very initial step to locate her whereabouts. It was in this context, the efforts for 'Sitanveshana' in the northern direction be initiated. Sugriva further explained Shatabali and followers that in the northern direction were the kingdoms of Mlecchha, Pulinda, Shurasena, Prasthala, Kuru, Madra, Kamboja, Yavana, Shaka Deshas. Beyond those kingdoms would be the vast Himalaya ranges all to be searched by Vanara Pramukhyas. Later on, Padmaka water flows, deodara forests, the Somashrama as venerated by Gandharvas, Kaala named Partvata and the various caves, Devasakha mountain full of birds and considerable 'vriksha sampada' be searched too. That area beyond a vast plain lands would follow for about hundred yojanas where rivers-mountains, big trees and jeeva jantus would not be visible as that would be a barren land. On further pursuing the vast area, would be sighted the shveta varna 'kailasa parvata'! Vishvakarma is stated to have constructed a fabulous swarna bhavana for Lord Kubera's vacation stay. viśālā nalinī yatra prabhūtakamalotpalā, hamsakāraṇḍavākīrṇā apsarogaṇasevitā/ tatra vaiśravaṇo rājā sarvabhūta namaskṛtaḥ, dhanado ramate śrīmān guhyakaiḥ saha yakṣarāt/ tasya candranikaśeṣu parvateṣu guhāsu ca, rāvaṇaḥ saha vaidehyā mārgitavyas tatas tataḥ/ Then one could reach on the kailasa parvata the renowned 'Manasarovara,' in which lotuses are available aplenty and water birds like swans and 'karandas' too and apsaras are stated to bathe in that sarovara. That is stated to the Celestial Lake where Apsarasas perform their 'jala kreedas'.

[Vishleshana on Manasa Sarovara]

Janmoushadhi tapomantra yoga siddharetaraih, Jushtam kinnaragandharvair – apsarobhi vritam sadaa/(Only blessed persons who are Siddhas and Tapodhanas, Parama Yogis, besides Kinnara, Gandharva, Apsaras and such Celestial Beings could have their abodes at Manasarovara). Hari Vamsha which is a component of Skanda Purana makes a detailed reference to this outstanding Maha Tirtha and an unparalleled Siddha Kshetra) Manasarovar waters are crystal clear of bluish tinge and the Lake is of the shape of an egg stated to have spread over some 15 km. This is one of the Fifty One Shakti Peethas where the right wrist bracelets of Devi Sati's 'jeerna sharir' fell as Lord Vishnu's Sudarsham Chakra sliced off the body parts at the Daksha Yagna so that Maha Deva's fury would otherwise have continued at the sight of the body. The Devi at this Shakti Peetha is known as Gayatri and Maha Bhairava is called Sarvanand. In this heavenly Lake, thousands of swans fly along and across, some of crystal white colour stated to be 'Raja Hamsas' or Royal White Compexion and the rest of off-white colour. It is believed that at times, natural pearls too are available in the sweet and none too chilled cold waters of the Celestial Lake with plenty of multi-coloured stones and prism like pebbles. There is not much of greenery on the banks and in fact not many trees and flowers up the Mount. Mount Kailas is about 12 km up the Mansarovara. Even while approaching the Kailash Dham, one can have its darshan from a distance but the Dham becomes clearer from Kungarivingari Shikhar or top of Jouhar Marg if the clouds are not obstructing the view. The people of Tibet are full of devotion to the Dham and swear to complete Parikrama of the 20 km.circumference by 'sashtangas' or prostrations and heartfelt 'namaskaras' all the way. Like Lord Shri Rama at Saketa at the Ayodhya Dham, Goloka's Vajra dhaam of Bhagavan Shri Krishna as described in great detail in Brahma Purana as also Maha Deva delineated vividly in Shiva Purana and Skanda Purana, Parama Shiva's abode is Kailasa Dham on the unique Kailasa Mount; indeed this view among the Himalaya Shikharas is stated to be unusually distinct and unparalleled! The description of Kailasa Mount is akin to that of the Virat Shiva Linga just as the center of a Lotus with sixteen petals all around as the 'Shikhar Madhya Shringa' or the raised horn of the Mount being the centre of literally counted as fourteen Shringas. In fact the central Shringa commands spontaneous awe, vibration and arresting attentiveness subdued by ecstasy and fullness of fulfillment. As 'abhishakas' or holy baths on the 'Linga Mastaka' are led into Gauri kunda. This Maha Linga Swarupa Maha Deva is of Black Stone and its sides are all covered with layers of iced milk. This mountain alone stands out as black but all the surrounding mountains are raw brownish. Kailasa Parikrama of 20 km. is possible within three days but perhaps reaching Kailasha Shikhar of the height of 19000 ft from Sea level is worthy of endeavour by dare devil- mountaineers!]

krauñcam tu girim āsādyā bilam tasya sudurgamam, apramattaiḥ praveṣṭavyam duṣpraveṣam hi tat smṛtam/ vasanti hi mahātmānas tatra sūryasamaprabhāḥ, devair apy arcitāḥ samyag devarūpā maharṣayaḥ/ krauñcasya tu guhāś cānyāḥ sānūni śikharāṇi ca, nirdarāś ca nitambāś ca vicetavyās tatas tataḥ/ Shatabali! Then you should search the caves on the krouncha mountain while its caves are perhaps none too easy to do so. In these caves Maharshi Mahatmas are dedicated to deep tasya. In these deep caves, there are shikharas, water flows with complete peacefulness and therefore the search for Devi Sita as might have been retained by Ravana'sura would need to be silent and highly discreet. Crossing the shikharas, ghats, and branch parvatas of the krouncha parvata, the Mainaka Parvata is visible where kinnara devatas abound. Crossing that are the ashrams of Siddha-Vaikhanasa-Balakhilya Tapasvis. The vanara sena chief might enquire of the whereabouts of Devi Sita very politely. There should be a Vaikhanasa Sarovara with golden lotuses and swans of 'aruna surya' colour. Crossing the sarovara would be visible the Shailada River beyond which would be the Kuru Desha and hundreds of water flows with ranges of coloured lotuses, and abundance of variegated vrikshas. In these waterflows, it is stated that the celestial women of the origins of Gandharva, Kinnara, Siddha, Naga, Vidyadharas keep enjoying bathings and kaama-kreedas. Beyond those waterflows is Somagiri stated to be difficult to even Devatas of the earlier descriptions to be crossed. etāvad vānaraiḥ śakyam gantum vānapuṅgavāḥ, abhāskaram amaryādam na jānīmas tataḥ param/ sarvam etad vicetavyam yan mayā parikīrtitam, yad anyad api noktam ca tatrāpi kriyatām matiḥ/ Shreshtha Vanaras! Now, in the northern direction, you could and should search for Devi Sita and there beyond, it might neither be plausible nor necessary to search for Devi Sita as Ravana'sura too would not have been possible to do hide her in search celestial places; but might have , if at all, hidden in mountain caves or thick forests or so. As you are all going to carry the responsibility of Shri Rama Karya nirvahana with sincerity and high devotion .

As Sugriva despatches the Vanara Sena to the Southern direction under the command of Yuva Raja Angada, Shri Rama gives his ring to Hanuman to possibly show to Sita Devi to recognise and trust him

Sugriva no doubt had despatched 'Vanara Shreshthas' for the sacred and singular mission of 'Sitanveshana' in the eastern-southern-western- and north directions but had reposed enormous confidence in Veera Anjaneya and that he should usher in 'Rama Karya Siddhi' successfully. Sugriva had hence called Hanuman and said: 'Kapi shreshtha! I do realise that you are blessed with free movement all over Prithvi-Anrariksha-Aakaasha-Deva Lokas- Jalaas too. You possess the total know how of Asura-Gandharva-Naaga-Manushya-Devatas-Samudras-and Parvatas too. gatir vegaś ca tejaś ca lāḡhavam ca mahākape, pitus te sadṛśam vīra mārutasya mahaujaśaḥ/ tejaś vāpi te bhūtam samam bhuvi na vidyate, tad yathā labhyate sītā tattvam evopapādaya/ tvayyeva hanumann asti balaḡ buddhiḥ parākramaḥ, deśakālānuvṛttaś ca nayaś ca nayapaṇḡita/ Veeraanjaneya! You are a pandita of Neeti Shastra or the Principles of Morality and more significantly the efficient practitioner too as you are the symbol of bala-buddhi-paraakrama-ability of appication of desha-kaala- paristhiti of the principles.'

As Sugriva thus reposed singular confidence and faith in Anjaneya, Shri Rama too rested belief in Anjaneya. Rama had thus felt assured of Hanuman's ability and instinctively felt that he should be able to sight and contact Devi Sita some how in all probability. Rama in his heart of hearts developed confidence in Hanuman and felt happy at such extraordinary occurrence of a chance. dadau tasya tataḥ prītaḥ svaḡmāḡkopaśobhitam, aḡgulīyam abhijñānaḡ rāḡaputryāḥ paraḡtapah/ anena tvāḡ hariśreṣṭha cihḡnena janakātmajā, matsakāśād anuprāḡptam anudvignānupaśyati/ vyavasāyaś ca te vīra sattvayuktaś ca vikramaḥ, sugrīvasya ca saḡmdeśaḥ siddhiḡ kathayatīva me/ Then Shri Rama the 'shatru vinaasha kaari' handed over to Hanuman of Rama's own golden ring himself so that as and when Hanuman would hopefully meet Devi Sita, she should believe and repose trust and confidence in Anjaneya. While so handing over the ring, Shri Rama stated: ‘ Kapi shreshtha! Once you hand over this ring of mine, Devi Sita would truly trust that you are me representative only and look at you with attention. Veeranjanya! Devi Sita would then truly understand the messages from Rama Lakshmanas and Sugriva! Vaanara shreshthaa Hanuman! Your industriousness, courage and Sugriva’s assurance should never fail me.’ As Rama reposed confidence in him, Anganeya kept the golden ring of Rama on his head and gaving greeted Rama’s feet with veneration and left. While Hanuman was leaving, Rama said again: : ‘ Atyanta balashaali Kapi Shreshtha! I have reposed my confidence and full trust in you. Do endeavour your very best to see and secure Sita at the very earliest. Now the best of luck to us all.

While addressing the Vanara veeras, Sugriva had in his mindset the truly hard feelings of Shri Rama out of his desperation despite being a ‘sthitha pragjna’ or of self restraint and that was how to appealed to them all. Shri Rama along with Lakshmana were desperately waiting for the one month’s time limit. The north bound Vaanara Veeras headed by Shatabali had pushed ahead atonce. The south bound search under the supreme command of Pavana Putra Shri Anjaneya, along with Angada hurried up instantly to the Agastya Maharshi sevita dakshina disha, as the Maharshi out of decisiveness rescued Maha Meru Parvata around which Surya Deva ever circumambulated due to the arrogance of Vindhya Mountain seeking to overgrow Maha Meru and thus having commanded Vindhya to bend down forever continued to reside in the Southern direction for good!

[Vishleshana on Agastya Maharshi and the reason for being ever residing in the Southern Bharata:

The mischievous Brahmarshi Narada provoked Vindhya Mountain creating misunderstanding against Meru Parvata around which Surya Deva circumambulates and the insignificance of its existence and encouraged Vindhya to keep growing exceeding Meru’s height. As Vindhya kept higher and higher, there were obvious limitations of Meru facing its circumambulations around Surya Deva causing the days and nights in the two parts of the universe. Lord Indra approached Agasthya Maharshi the Preceptor of Vindhya Mountain and complained. Agastya smiled and asked his wife Lopamudra and his sons Bhringi and Achyuta to pack up as they would shift their residence southward. But since his desciple Meru blocked the passage, Agastya asked Meru to bend making way for their passage and ever since neither Meru could grow up and up, nor Agastya could cross beyond Vindhya to maintain the natural balance and the free movement of Meru around Surya as usual.]

Stanza 7 continued: paścimām tu diśam ghorām suṣeṇaḥ plavageśvaraḥ, pratasthe hariśārdūlo bhr̥śam varuṇapālītām/ tataḥ sarvā diśo rājā codayitvā yathā tatham, kapisenā patīn mukhyān mumoda sukhitaḥ sukhām/ Then Vanara shreshtha Sushena moved fast vigorously towards the western side of Bharata which was guarded by Varuna Deva. Having thus despatched the Maha Vaanara Sena in all the directions, Sugriva was happy to have duly performed his duty satisfactorily and awaited the results of ‘Sitanveshana’. Consequently vide stanzas 10 to 16, Maha Bali Vanaras and Yudhapati’s as inspired by Sugriva the King of Vararas pushed forward to their destined directions shouting loud and high, running fast, and in full enthusiasm, excitement and ecstasy shouting shy high with the single slogan viz. ‘ we should most certainly bring back Devi Sita to Deva Shri Rama and devastate Ravana uprooting him and his roots for ever. You all the onlookers of these ‘simha garjanaas’ of th public: do keep waiting for our successful return. We would pull up maha vrikshas, break mountians to pieces, shake up the earth, dislocate ocean waves, jump up by yojanas of distances with assured promises. The natural order of earth,mountains, deep forests and pataalaas too should surely be dislocated!’

King Sugriva explains to Shri Rama of his own escapades of ‘Bhu Bhramana’ and hence his vast knowledge and memories of destinations, parvatas, oceans, rives and the geographical detailings!

Shri Rama was rather perplexed as to how Sugriva had attained the knowledge and memory of the geographical, historical and pouranik visheshas. Then Sugriva replied: As Vaali chased Dundubhi along with his danava putra Mayavi and finally entered a parvata kandara, Vaali entered the huge cave mouth asking me to wait outside but a long one year was over. Meanwhile the cave was flooded with blood and there were shouts of Mayavi but not of Vaali. He felt fully convinced that Vaali died shouting agonised cryings genuinely, especially since Vaalis’s blood was gushing out. Then genuinely enough I desired to return to Kishkindha but while doing so lifted and rolled a huge boulder as block to make sure that he could not get out forever and harass the vanaras, their next king after Vaali. But Vali returned home and hounded me out of the kingdom with the resolve of killing me mercilessly. Although I was ready to honour him with his kingship due to him anyway, he was under the deep misunderstanding that I had purposely closed the cave with a huge boulder and convinced his ministers and the public that Vaali was dead. That was how, he chased me towards death: tato 'ham vālinā tena sānubandhaḥ pradhāvitaḥ, nadīś ca vividhāḥ paśyan vanāni nagarāṇi ca/ ādarśatalasamkāsā tato vai pṛthivī mayā, alātacakrapratimā dṛṣṭā goṣṭhāvat tadā/ tataḥ pūrvam aham gatvā dakṣiṇām aham āśritaḥ, diśam ca paścimām bhūyo gato 'smi bhayaśaṅkitaḥ, uttarām tu diśam yāntam hanumān mām athābravīt/ As Vali kept on chasing me, I had no recourse but to run ahead of him; that was how I covered crossing rivers, cities, mountains, caves and so on and was forced to perform 'bhu pradakshina' as it were covering the east, north, west and deep south till the maha sagaras on the west, east and south while upto himalayas. Then prithvi seemed to look like a circular 'chakra'. Towards the eastern direction I visioned the spectacular 'vriksha sampada', range of mountains and fantastic and endless caves, 'sarovaras' and ranges of birds, Udayachala, Ksheera sagara where Aprasas were stated to have bathed, even as Vaali was still on my run. Then as Vaali chased me still, I took to the southern direction, down to the vindhya range when chandanaadi maha vrikshas were seen but as Vaali was still on the chase I took to the west and reached up to the 'Astachala' where Sun set occurs. Himavantam cha Merumcha tathottaram, yadaa na vinde sharanam Vaalinaa samabhiduyataḥ, tato maam buddhi sampanno Hanuman vakyamabraveet/ Even after reaching Himalayas, Meru and the northern precincts there was no relief from Vaali's hunting and then parama buddhimaan Hanuman stated: 'Rajan! You need not have tired yourself with this 'bhu bhramana' to save yourself by the chase of Vaali; you could have merely entered Matanga Muni Ashram! All the same Shri Rama's curiosity of how Sugriva had this extraordinary awareness of what all would be available in the four distant directions of Bharata!

The Maha Vaanara Senas commissioned by King Sugriva for the singular purpose of Sitaanveshana' visited in high spirits of enthusiasm and excitement and made aal out searches of sarovaras, open lands, nagaras, river beds, and unenterable places, mountains, caves and during the nights were collected together in split up smaller groups exchanging their experiences and results. This kind of intensive search very extensively was concluded. Maha Bali 'Vinata' along with his ministers concluded the visit to the 'eastern' parts well within the time limit of one month with diasappointment. 'Shatabali' too after an arduous tour of full month of the 'northern side' concluded reported back to King Sugriva with none too productive, despite an exacting outing. Some of the Veera Vaanaras from his behalf clashed with groups of 'asuras' and taught fitting lessons to the asuras. 'Sushena' after his search of the 'paschima disha', too reached Sugriva with a nil report. The consolidated reportage of Vinata-Shatabali-and Sushena pinned hopes on Hanuman from the southern side stating: udārasattvābhijano mahātmā; sa maithilīm drakṣyati vānarendraḥ, diśam tu yām eva gatā tu sītā; tām āsthito vāyusuto hanūmān/ Vanara Raja Sugriva! Vayu Putra Hanuman is parama Shaktimaan who could in all probability ascertain and even confirm the presence of Devi Sita in the southern segment of 'Sitanveshana' in all probability.

Hanuman along with Angada had taken to the southern side of 'Sitanveshana'. That contingent of the 'Vanara Sena' had intially crossed 'Vindya chala', its deep and dingy caves, jungles, parvata shikaras, rivers, durama sthaanas or unenterable places, sarovaras, massive trees, and so on with no trace of Devi Sita. In fact the party of 'maha markata veeraas' could not even secure neither adequate water resources nor even human beings! The trees did not yield proper fruits; the rivers were almost dried up. The vanya mrigas too were few and far between. It appeared that those human beings who were still existing were old and helpless. te praviśya tu taṁ bhīmaṁ latāgulmasamāvṛtam, dadṛśuḥ krūrakarmāṇam asuraṁ suranirbhayam/ taṁ dṛṣtvā vanarā ghoram sthitam śailam ivāparam, gādham parihitāḥ sarve dṛṣtvā taṁ parvatopamam/ so 'pi tān vānarān sarvān naṣṭāḥ sthety abravīd balī, abhyadhāvata saṁkruddho muṣṭim udyamya saṁhitam/ taṁ āpatantaṁ sahasā vāliputro 'ṅgadas tadā, rāvaṇo 'yam iti jñātvā talenābhijaghāna ha/ While such was the pitiable state of the 'vindhya chala pradeshas', Hanuman and a few other Vaanara Veeraas sighted some ruthless and frightening Asuras were sighted by them. Infact after Valis's repeated encounters with the 'mayavi asuras' several of the asuras perished and the rest took asylum in the thousands of the deep mountain caves. 'Angada' was infact excited that an Asura's head was that of Ravana'sura himself and gave severe thrashing, shouting excitedly : ' Arre! To day now you are being killed'! As Vaali Putra shouted like that, the Asura's body looked like that of a fountain of blood and the co-vaanaras shrieked in a manner that the sound of deep mountain cave reverberated. But that indeed was a mistaken identity. Thus the contingent of Vaanara sena got collected outside the mountain caves and under the shade of a huge tree and sat with fallen spirits broodingly. There after, they resumed their activities in right earnest, thereafter.

Sargas Forty Nine and Fifty

Angada seeks to revive the fallen hopes of ‘Sitanveshana’ of the dakshina vaanara sena, but soon after the tired hungry sena sights a celestial tree-sarovara-and bhavana of a Tapasvini whom Hanuman contacts

Inspired by Angada, the Vanara sena resolved to forge into forests, mountains, rivers, thick jungles, ditches, caves with renewed vigour even while realising that the time limit of Sitanveshana was nearly over and knowing that King Sugriva was strict about it. viḥāya tandrīm śokaḥ ca nidrām caiva samutthitām, vicinudhvaḥ yathā sītām paśyāmo janakātmajām/ anirvedaḥ ca dākṣyaḥ ca manasaś cāparājayam, kāryasiddhikarāṇy āhus tasmād etad bravīmy aham/ adyāpīdam vanaḥ durgam vicinvantu vanaukasaḥ, khedaḥ tyaktvā punaḥ sarvaḥ vanam etad vicīyatām/ ‘We should decide hereby that we discard fatigue, sleep, and incapability and charge with the task straightaway. avaśyaḥ kriyamāṇasya dṛśyate karmaṇaḥ phalam, alaḥ nirvedaḥ āgamyā na hi no malinaḥ kṣamam/ sugrīvaḥ krodhano rājā tīkṣṇadaṇḍaś ca vānarāḥ, bhetavyaḥ tasya satataḥ rāmasya ca mahātmanaḥ/ hitārtham etad uktaḥ vaḥ kriyatām yadi rocate, ucyatām vā kṣamaḥ yaṇ naḥ sarveṣāḥ eva vānarāḥ/ As a deed of resolve is performed the fruit is assured but if one gets frustrated and unresolved then the assurance is bound to be indecisive. Sugriva is strict enough about the time limit of one month but our apprehension gets dissolved because of Swami Karya of Sitanveshana. It is therefore your own choice as what you wish to do- either return as per the King’s prescribed time limit or proceed further. Vanara veeras! your further decisiveness is governed by your own decision’. As Yuva Raja Angada stated thus, Vaanara Veras advanced ahead by crossing parvatas, kandas, shilas, nirjana vanaas, parvatiya jalapaatas. They then entered Lodhra vana and Saroarna vana for the search. Having been too tired thereafter, most of the sena rested for a while, even as Hanuman, Angada and such exemplary veeras continued their searches further.

Hanuman and Angada further inspired his followers to break into the further interiors. The stalwart and muscular heroes of the sena included Gaja-Gavaaksha-Gavaya-Sharabha-Gandhamaadana-Mainda-Dvivida-Hanuman-Jambavan-Yuva Raja Angada- and Vana vaasi Tara proceeded on and on and located a huge cave which was wide open as similar ones were either closed or unenterable. This cave was known as Riksha bila under the control of a Daanava. The Vanara soldiers by then got thirsty badly and hoped that there could perhaps be the availability of natural water. Hanuman then suggested to enter the huge cave some how and find there would perhaps by water resources therein since water birds like hamsa-krouncha-saarasaa were fluttering. Some of the Vanara shreshthas had instantly jumped inside even it was pitch dark. tatas taṁ deśam āgamya saumyam vitimiram vanam, dadṛśuḥ kāñcanān vṛkṣān dīptavaiśvānaraprabhān/ sālāms tālāms ca puṁnāgān kakubhān vañjulān dhavān, campakān nāgavṛkṣāms ca karṇikārāms ca puṣpitān/ Most surprisingly, they had suddenly visioned the Vrikshas on their own started glittering like Agni samaana gold. All the trees of Saala-Taala-Tamaal-Nagakesara-Ashoka-Dhava-Champa-Naga vriksha-Karnikara and so on were dazzling with flowers. Surprising variety of ‘pushpa gucchhas’ were radiant like kireetaas or headgears. As the surrounding trees were shimmering, a Sarovara was spotted replete with golden lotuses; there within was situated a vaidurya mani Vedita or a Platform.

The Vanara veeras were taken aback with shocking glare as though were in a wonder world. tatra tatra vicīnavanto bile tatra mahāprabhāḥ, dadṛśur vānarāḥ sūrāḥ striyam kāṁ cid adūrataḥ/ tāṁ dṛṣṭvā bhṛṣasaṁtrastāś cīrakṣṇājīnāmbarām, tāpasīm niyatāhārām jvalantīm iva tejasā/ tato hanūmān girisaṁnikāśaḥ; kṛtāñjalis tāṁ abhivādya vṛddhām, papraccha kā tvaṁ bhavanam bilam ca; ratnāni cemāni vadasva kasya/ Within that Vichitra Bila, the Vanaras then sighted a stree of marvel dressed in ‘valkala’ and black mriga charma. As Vannara veeras were totally lost in their imagination and vision, Hanuman approached and asked her: ‘Devi! Who are you! In this cave of golden brightness, whose is this Ratna Bhavana and what indeed are your doing here!

As Anjaneya enquired of the 'vridhdha tapasvini' wearing 'mriga charma' and the glittering bhavan inside the mountain cave, he explained to her that all the Vanaras who entered the cave as they were tired and were desperate with thirst for water, she addressed the vanaras: in case you are desperate with thirst and hunger, she would expect them to identify themselves first. Then Pavana Kumara Hanuman explained: 'Devi! Shri Rama the glorious son of the well known King Dasharatha of Ayodhya had arrived in 'dandakaranya' along with his dharma patni Devi Sita as also his younger brother Lakshmana. But, as they were in an 'ashram' there, the ill famed Ravana'sura had forcibly kidnapped Devi Sita when she was all alone. Then the King of Vanaras named Sugriva, a very close friend of Shri Rama and stationed in Kishkindha had despatched enormous Vanara Yoddhas in different directions of Bharata and here we are searching for her as to where Ravana'sura had retained her. We in the contingent of Vanaras on the southern direction headed by Angada the Yuva Raja had been in search for her as to where the Asura had deposited her all over the cities, townships, river beds, mountains and caves and here we are too as exhausted, thirsty and hungry for water and food of fruits and roots. During our exhausted search, we have perchance seen this glittering cave palace. Do very kindly tell us as to who you are!' Then the elderly Tapasvini replied: Vanara shreshtha! You should have known about the Maya visharada Mayaasura. The Mayasura was originally named Vishvakatma who made this Bhavan possible. He performed deep tapasya for several years addressed to Lord Brahma and the latter directed Davana Guru Shukraacharya to teach Mayasura the whole knowledge of 'Shilpa Kala' the great art of construction. Having lived here for number of years here in this palace of the mountain cave happily, he came into close contact with an Apsarasa named Hema. Having sensed the amorous contact between her and Mayasura, Lord Indra hit the asura with his vajrayudha made him run for ever and gifted this palace to the Apsarasa Hema. duhitā merusāvarṇer ahaṁ tasyāḥ svayam prabhā, idaṁ rakṣāmi bhavanam hemāyā vānarottama/ mama priyasakhī hemā nṛtagitaviśārādā, tayā dattavarā cāsmi rakṣāmi bhavanottamam/ I am the daughter of Meru Saavarni named Svayamprabha looking due care of this palace in the absence of the Aprarasa Hema who has been my dear mate in nritya-geeta kalaas or the arts of dance and music. But you should provide to me more detailed information about your selves later only after my hosting you with excellent food and drinks'.

Sarga Fifty Two continues:

After hosting sumptuous food and drinks followed by some rest, Vridhdha Tapasvini Svayamprabha heard the following from Hanuman: 'Devi! As I had already explained, King Sugriva had instucted us to search for Devi Sita a 'maha saadhvi pativrata' in these parts of southern direction which are famed as serviced by Maharshi Agastya and provided safety by Yama Raja himself. rāvaṇam sahitāḥ sarve rākṣasam kāmārūpiṇam, sītayā saha vaidehyā mārgadhvam iti coditāḥ/ vicitrya tu vāyam sarve samagrām dakṣiṇām diśam, bubhuṁkṣitāḥ pariśrāntā vṛkṣamūlam upāśritāḥ/ vivarṇavadanāḥ sarve sarve dhyānaparāyaṇāḥ, nādhigacchāmahe pāram magnās cintāmahārṇave/ As per the directive of our King, we could take to any form like a human, animal or bird but some how ascertain Ravana'sura's place of residence and whether he had hidden there or elsewhere. In this southern direction, we had been searching for any possible indication and only the southern most tip beyond the Great Sea would still need to be searched. As were exhausted especially due to thirst and hunger, we waited under tree shades, then found the cave, saw birds hovering around, realised that there might be water resources and hence entered the cave in search of water any where.’ Thus having described to the Tapavini, Hanuman further stated: *śaraṇam tvām prapannāḥ smaḥ sarve vai dharmacārīṇi, yaḥ kṛtaḥ samayo 'smākaṁ sugrīveṇa mahātmanā sa tu kālo vyatikrānto bile ca parivartatām/ sā tvam asmād bilād ghorād uttārayitum arhasi/ tasmāt sugrīvavacanād atikrāntān gatāyusaḥ, trātum arhasi naḥ sarvān sugrīvabhayaśaṅkitān/ mahac ca kāryam asmābhiḥ kartavyam dharmacārīṇi, tac cāpi na kṛtam kāryam asmābhir iha vāsibhiḥ/ Devi! As the prescribed time limit for return to Sugriva was over, Angada and other Vaanara Veeras got ready for 'praana tyaga' but clever Hanuman adopted 'bheda neeti' or of divided opinion saving them all!

As the Vanara Sena had suddenly faced the Maha Sagara and the frightening sounds of the high rising waves by merely closing their eyes, they were stunned at the make-believe maya of the Mayasura. But were at the same time realised that the one month outside limit for 'Sitaanveshana' was crossed most unfortunately and they should be ready for 'praana tyaga'! Indeed, the Sharad Ritu was over and Shishira Ritu had well set in and even Vasanta Ritu might not be too far! Yuva Raja Angada then addressed the Vanara veeraas: Bhavantah pratyaya praaptaa neeti maarga vishaaradaah, hiteshbibhirataa bhartrini-srishtaah sarvakarmasu/ You are reposed with the ‘Raja Vishvaasa’ or the abiding of the King’s decisiveness and are replete with ‘swami bhakti’. None indeed could charge you with infringement of ‘Raajaagna’ and hence were selected for this devotional duty. Most unfortunately, the duty entrusted to us within the prescribed time could not be succeeded. As such we are faced with no option left. King Sugriva is decisive in his instructions. tikṣṇaḥ prakṛtyā sugrīvaḥ svāmibhāve vyavasthitaḥ, na kṣamiṣyati naḥ sarvān aparādhakṛto gatān/ apravṛtau ca sītāyāḥ pāpam eva kariṣyati, tasmāt kṣamam ihādyāiva prāyopaviśanam hi naḥ/ tyaktvā putrāṁś ca dārāṁś ca dhanāni ca gṛhāṇi ca, yāvan na ghātayed rājā sarvān pratigatān itaḥ, vadhenaḥpratirūpeṇa śreyān mṛtyur ihaiva naḥ/ By his very nature he is too hard to be softened and perhaps that is why kingship demands obedience. Once we approach him we should be punished by our death any way. More particularly so since the matter involved is serious as that of ‘Sitaanveshana’. That is why we should all be prepared for ‘aamarana deekshopavaasa’ or fasting till death, and totally ignore the individual feelings of attachments of wife- progeny- wellbeing- and all attractions of family life . Dhruvam no himsate Raajaa pratigataanitah, vadhenaapratirupena shreyaan mṛityurihaiva na! When we return late that too without any success, King Sugriva should most certainly kill us; instead would it not be commit suicide peacefully ourselves!’ As Angada stated likewise, the co vanaras had generally agreed to what he said but ruled out the option of returning back to the King Sugriva. A strong opinion expressed by Taara and a few others was to get back to the ‘Maayaavi Guha’ enjoying fresh and variety of fruits and roots! Angada then reiterated that in any case they should immediately leave that seashore lest we be targetted for life.

Sarga Fifty Four continues:

Hanuman then realised in his heart of hearts that there might not be any distractive endeavor in the foremost and compelling quest for ‘Sitanveshana’ as the feeling of frustration, self-defeat and suicidal tendency had come about among the Vaanara Veeras instead of their drive, courage and heroism! Instead of stating firmly likewise, Veera Hanuman resorted to a diversionary diplomacy and planted a kind of ‘bheda bhava’. buddhyā hy aṣṭāṅgayā yuktaṁ caturbalasamanvitam, caturdaśaguṇam mene hanumān vālinaḥ sutam/ āpūryamāṇam śaśvac ca tejobalaparākramaiḥ, śaśinaṁ śuklapakṣādaḥ vardhamānam iva śrīyā/ Hanuman surely realises that Vaali Kumara Angada is gifted with eight angled sharp buddhi of the desire for hearing , actual patience for hearing, seeking to absorb what all is heard, after absorbing the ability to retain, pondering over what has been heard, seeking to experiment on what is heard, realising the pluses and minuses of what has been heard and finally the ‘tatwa jnaana’. Angada is also aware of the Kingship’s fundamental practices of ‘Chaturoopaayaas’ or the four means of Karya siddhi viz. Saama- Daana-Bheda-Danda vis-à-vis the ‘shatrus’ or the opponents. Further, Angada is blessed with Chaturdasha Gunas or Fourteen features viz. desha kaala jnaana- dridhata or full preparedness-sahana shakti or extreme patience- jnaana prapti or accomplishment of complete awareness of the pros and cons- chaturata or mental absorption and application- ‘utsaaha’ or energetic drive- mantra gopyata- carrying takes-bravery- assessment of enemy’s strong and weaknesses- kritagnata or the sense of gratitude- sharanaagata vaatsaya or sense of encouragement the seekers of refuge- equanimity and steadfastness. At the same time, Angada surely shares Sugriva’s tenacity for Karya Siddhi. It is against the mental make up of Angada, Hanuman addresses Angada: ‘ Taraanandana Yuva Raja Angada! The world knows of the extraordinary prowess of your father Maha Bali Vaali. nityam asthiracittā hi kapayo haripuṅgava, nājñāpyam viśahiṣyanti putradārān vinā tvayā/ tvām naite hy anuyuñjeyuḥ pratyakṣam pravādāmi te, yathāyam jāmbavān nīlaḥ suhotraś ca mahākapiḥ/ na hy aham ta ime sarve sāmādānādibhir guṇaiḥ, daṇḍena na tvayā śakyāḥ sugrīvād apakarṣitum/ But Vanara shiromani! It is well known that Vaanaraas are of ‘chanchala svabhava’ or of truly wavering mindedness by nature irrespective of sex or age. But, they hold you in high esteem and your nod of head is followed with no questions asked. I would now like to emphasize that nobody like maha vanara veeras like Jambavan, Neela or Suhotra would defy Sugriva. Similarly I am also a true follower of him. Further, King Sugriva being an outstanding king is fully conversant of the Purushardhas of Saama- Daanaadi upayas and the capability of applying them to different situations even of ‘danda’ or punishment and its gradations ranging from chastisement and of course even death. I am sure that an intellectual king of his stature would not straightaway impose death penalty against a lapse of a month’s non return by the Vanara Veeraas within a stipulated one month’s period for the hardest task of ‘Sitanveshana’, especially entrusted to select heroes worthy of trust and sincerity! It is indeed quite possible that persons lacking strength and bravery would not dare face in an encounter with a strong person. But a hero of might against a weakling would never need resort to unwanted and undesirable rapprochement! This being so we were faced such a situation that we had to literally hide ourselves in a motherlike figure’s raksha in the mountain cave. May be a person of Lakshmana’s caliber might break into that cave with a single arrow. dharmakāmaḥ pitṛvyas te prītikāmo dṛḍhavrataḥ, śuciḥ satyapratijñāś ca nā tvām jātu jighāṃsati/ priyakāmaś ca te mātus tadarthaṁ cāsyā jīvitam, tasyāpatyam ca nāsty anyat tasmād aṅgada gamyatām/ Your own uncle King Sugriva is a dharma raja ever valueing your goodwill, a dridhavrata and satya pratigjna and could never ever harm you and your followers. Angada! Sugriva admires your mother and you have no other son ever present too excepting you. So let us get to further action with no further delays or interruptions further!

As Anjaneya extols King Sugriva, Yuva Raja Angada was emphatic on the negative features of Sugriva and addresses Anjaneya as follows: ‘Kapi shreshtha! I am not convinced of the qualities of Sugriva as you have stressed; he is neither stable in his behaviour, nor pure in his mind set, much less of his soft nature and open heartedness. Even as his elder brother Vaali was alive, he had illicit affairs with his sister in law who was stated as of his mother’s status. What kind of dharma does he know of! He was so cruel as to close the huge mountain cave when his elder brother Vaali was waging a heroic struggle with the danava and quietly slipped away to secure his Kingship; which kind of dharma that you are ascribing to him! He swore friendship to the unparalleled Maha Yashasvi Bhagavan Shri Rama and after accomplishing his own kingship, had quietly forgotten about the aspect of gratitudinal promise till Lakshmana’s violent reminder! Sugriva never had the qualms of Dharma but a shake up for ‘Devi Sitaanveshana’. Basically, Sugriva is a confirmed sinner, ungrateful, conveniently forgetful and of wavering and mean mentality. This is unbelievable despite of his respectable family background. Again, whether Vaali’s son (Angada himself) were a ‘gunavaan’ or a ‘gunaheen’, he ought to have been the King himself; but indeed, how could ever a sworn enemy brother’s son be a king! As I was always away from him, it is only now that I am coming aware of Sugriva’s true nature. But since I am having to serve under his command, I have become an ‘aparaadhi’ too. More over, my sense of mental strength is dwindling too. Indeed I am an ‘anaatha’ and what could be the purpose of my life even after I return back to kishkindha any way! After all, Sugriva is intolerant, cruel and self centered! He might snipe at me any time and show to the public that I was schemy or wicked. bandhanāc cāvasādān me śreyah prāyopaveśanam, anujānīta mām sarve gṛhān gacchantu vānarāḥ/ ahaṁ vaḥ pratijānāmi na gamiṣyāmy ahaṁ purīm, ihaiva prāyam āsiṣye śreyo maraṇam eva me/ Instead of living dangerously and ever shackled, I strongly feel that right now I must take to fasting preperatory to ‘praana tyaga’! But I would never wish to return to Kishkindha but end my life. Veera Hanumaan! Kindly let other Vanara brothers leave me in peace. Further, please do convey to the King and my Queen Mother of best my wishes besides Queen Ruma too. My mother Tara be pacified with my sacrifice of life; indeed I am beholden to her for my upbringing and safety. Do kindly save her as she ought never to follow my unfortunate precedence. ’. So saying, Angada firmed up his decision as his fellow vavara comrades started crying away loudly while being seated on the shores of the Maha Sagara, realling a series of tragic thoughts and memories: Raamasya vana vaasam cha kshayam Dashrathasya cha, Janasthaanan vadham chaiva vadham chaiva Jataayushah/ Haranam chaiva Vadehyaa Vaalinascha vadham thathaa, Raama kopam cha vadataam hareenaam bhayamaagatam/ Thus the Vaanara Veeraas had flashbacks of indelible and frightening memories of Shri Rama’s Vana Vaasa, King Dasharatha’s mrityu, Janasthaana experiences of rakshasaas, Devi Sitaapaharana, Jataayu marana, Vaali Vadha, and ‘Rama krodha charcha’! The earth shaking sky high sounds of the sea waves right before them had further added to the flash back thoughts on the hapless Vanara soldiers to the sensed up atmosphere of the grim situation .

As Angada and followers moved up from the seashore up to a nearby mountain top, there flew down Grudhra Raja Sampaati the brother of Jatayu. Both the famed brothers were known for might and bravery, especially since their valour was utilised for the fulfillment of ‘Puruahardhas’ of persons of Dharma.

[Vishleshana on Sampaati the elder brother of Jatayu vide Sarga 14 of Essence of Valmiki Araanya Ramayana for ready reference:

Kashyapa Prajapati had eight wives and these were Aditi-Diti-Danu-Kaalka-Taamra-Krodhavasha-Manu-and Anala. Aditi gave birth to Twelve Adityas-Twelve Vasus-Eleven Rudras and Two Ashvini Kumars, besides thirty three Devatas. Diti gave birth to Daityas and the controlled aranyas-samudras and the entire Earth! Danu gave birth to Ashvagreeva while Kaalka Devi to two sons viz. Naraka and Kaalaka. Devi Tamra gave birth to five kanyas viz. Krounchi-Bhaasi-Shyeni- Dhritaraashtri and Shuki. Of these, Krounchi gave birth to owls- Bhaasi gave birth to Bhaasi birds-Shyeni to bat birds- and Dhritaraashtra to hamsas and kala hamsas or swans. Chakravaakamscha Bhadram te vijagjne saapi Bhaamini, Shukee nataam vigagjne tu Nataayaam Vinataa sutaa/ Shri Rama! Bhamini Dhritaraashta also yielded chakravaka birds while Tamara’s youngest daughter Shukee was born kanya named Nataa and the latter was born Devi Vinata. Then Devi Krodhavasha gave birth to ten kanyas viz. Mrigi-Mrigamanda-Hari-Bhadramada-Maatangi-Shardooli-Shweta-Surabhi-Surasa and Kadruka. Shri Rama!Mrigi’s progeny are Mrigas and Mrigamanda’s generation were Riksha-Srumara and Chamara. Bhadrada gave birth to Iravati and the latter son was the famed Iraavata Gaja Raja. Then Hari’s santaana were Hari the Lion- Tapasvi- and Golaangula or Langoor. Further Krodhavasha’s daughter was Shardulini and the latter’s son was Vyaghra. Maatangi’s progeny was Matanga or elephant while Shveta gave birth to Diggaja. Krodhavasha’s daughter Surabhi gave birth to daughters Rohini and Gandharvi. Rohini gave birth to cows and Gandharvini to horses. Surasa’s children are Nagaas while Kadru’s were Pannagaas. Now Manu yet another wife of Kashyapa were chaturvarna maanavaas of Brahmana-

Kshatriya-Vaishya and the Lower class. mukhato brāhmaṇā jātā urasaḥ kṣatriyās tathā, ūrubhyām jajñire vaiśyāḥ padbhyām sūdrā iti śrutiḥ/ From the face were born brahmanas- the heart the kshatriyas- both the thighs the vaishyas and from the thighs the lower class. Anala gave birth to trees- Taamra putri viz Shukhi and the latter's grand daughter was Vinata and Kadru was Surasa's sister. Kadru produced thousand types of 'naagaas' and Vinata created two famed sons Garuda and Aruna. tasmā jāto 'ham aruṇāt sāmṣātis ca māṃgrajāḥ, jaṭāyur iti mām viddhi śyenīputram ariṇdama/ so 'ham vāsasahāyas te bhaviṣyāmi yadīcchasi, sītām ca tāta rakṣiṣye tvayi yāte salakṣmaṇe/ jaṭāyuṣaṃ tu pratipūjya rāghavo; mudā pariṣvajya ca saṃnato 'bhavat; pitur hi śūsṛāva sakṣitvam ātmavāñ; jaṭāyuṣā saṃkathitaṃ punaḥ punaḥ/ Raghuveera! Stanzas 3-5: kandarād abhiniṣkramya sa vindhyasya mahāgireḥ, upaviṣṭān harīn dṛṣṭvā hr̥ṣṭātmā giram abravīt/ vidhiḥ kila naraṃ loke vidhānenānuvartate, yathāyaṃ vihito bhakṣyaś cirān mahyam upāgataḥ/ paramparāṇāṃ bhakṣiṣye vānarāṇāṃ mṛtaṃ mṛtaṃ, uvācaivaṃ vacaḥ pakṣī tān nirīkṣya plavaṅgamān/ Emerging from the huge caves of Maha Giri Vindhya, Garuda Raja Sampati sighted a good many Vanaras of Sugriva Sena brooding, and felt excited that after a long time he saw numberless Vanaras for his bhojan! Even as the Vanaras are killed by himself then so many monkeys would be his food.!' Then Angada addressed Hanuman lightheartedly: Look sir! It appears Lord Yama has been despatched to solve our problem of instant deaths of us the vanaras. rāmasya na kṛtaṃ kāryaṃ rājño na ca vacaḥ kṛtaṃ, harīṇāṃ iyam ajñātā vipattiḥ sahasāgatā/ vaidehyāḥ priyakāmena kṛtaṃ karma jaṭāyuṣā, gr̥dhrarājena yat tatra śrutaṃ vas tad aśeṣataḥ/ We the Vaanaras have obviously not obeyed the Rama Karya and also declined to fulfill the King's directive as we have had to face the difficulties on the way. Also it appears that keeping in view the disaster faced by Devi Sita, Grudhra Raja Jatayu intervened and sacrificed his life in a duel against Ravana, as we all know. Human beings of virtue likewise do help others in the hour of need. Now instead of suicides, let us sacrifice our lives for a noble cause of Sitanveshana instead. After all, had not Jatayu sacrificed his life defending Devi Sita!' The statements thus delivered by Angada had not only suddenly transformed the mind sets of Vaanaras with the resolve of ongoing Sitanveshana despite Sugriva's so called fear and directive of their returning back to kishkindha within a month, but also impacted Sampati that his younger brother Jatayu was no more. Sampati got shocked and fell down in a deep ditch on earth writhing in pain more in body than mentally, by the statement of a Vanara. He stated cryingly and got weakened: ko 'yaṃ girā ghoṣayati prāṇaiḥ priyatarasya me, jaṭāyuṣo vadhaṃ bhrātuh kampayann iva me manaḥ/ katham āsīj janasthāne yuddhaṃ rākṣasagr̥dhrayoḥ, nāmadheyam idaṃ bhrātus cirasyādyā mayā śrutaṃ/ yavīyaso guṇajñāsya ślāghanīyasya vikramaiḥ tad iccheyam ahaṃ śrotuṃ vināśaṃ vānararṣabhāḥ/ Who indeed has just said about my dear younger brother Jataayu having been killed as this news shakes me to the core! How had this happened as I am hearing this deadly information as for long I have not heard about him. As Grudhra Raja Sampati's tone got thinned down and squeaky, the Vanaras got frightened as though he would eat them off. Angada had made formal introduction of himself; he stated that his grandfather was named and his sons were Vaali and Sugriva both of them being Maha Veeras .

[Brief Vishleshana Riksha Raja the father of Vaali-Sugrivas: The background was that the father of Vaali Sugrivas was Riksha Raja who once bathed in a nearby pond and was surprised himself to have a female form. At the same time, Indra and Surya Deva got infatuated with her and Vaali was born of Indra and Sugriva of Surya. Vaali made rigorous tapasya to Brahma and secured the boon of invincibility. Sugriva being very scared of Vaali made sure in course of his friendship with Rama that Vaali did of piercing through a tree from far distance in one shot but Rama broke seven such trees in a row.]

Even till recently, there was a 'Maha rathi' named King Dasharatha of Ikshvaku Vamsha and his eldest son named Shri Rama who having obeyed his father's directive had gone to D andakaranya along with his wife Devi Sita and brother Lakshmana. At the 'janasthaana' there, Ravana abducted Devi Sita. It was at that time Gridhraraja Jatayu on noticing 'Sitaapaharana' attacked Ravana and smashed his chariot and made fierce battle but Ravana killed the valiant Jatayu. Rama Lakshmanas having noticed Jatayu lying had performed the 'dahana samskara' as the latter attained the 'uttama gati'. Then Shri Rama entered into lasting bonds of friendship and having killed Vaali made Sugriva possible to take over kingship and subsequently despatched contingents of Vaanara Yoddhas to different directions and that Maha Veeras of Vaanaras like Hanuman and Jambavan were despatched deep into the southern side in search of Devi Sita in this manner. As we were searching various places like forests, river beds, mountain caves, we tumbled into a huge and unending cave and lost our way for long long days and over a month and landed at a surprisingly glittering Mayasura Mansion; but meanwhile the time limit that our King Sugriva was well long past. Therefore most of us in the Vanara Sena decided to resort to the self imposed 'nirahaara deeksha' till we would die. That precisely was the time when we encountered you first and realised about your glorious family background , and this is our stage of misery, desperation and before this vacillation.' Thus concluded Angada to Gridhra Raja Sampati almost dying due to a fatal fall into a deep ditch from a mountain top.

As Angada concluded with helplessness, Sampaati even as he was badly hurt after being retrieved from the mountain ditch with the support of Vanaras addressed them as follows: ‘ Jatayu was my younger brother as killed by duratma Ravanaasura. As my wings were burnt, unfortunately I am totally disabled to take revenge Ravana and even after learning of this horrible news from you now. In the remote past, we brothers we had the self-pride of winning Indra who got puffed up when he killed Vritrasura and tried to fly high but the mid day Surya but as Jatayu out of over enthusiasm went too near to Surya and got his strong wings burnt and I tried to procect him by covering his burnt wings and my wings too got scorched and fell down on the vindhya mountains eversince’ . jaṭāyuṣo yadi bhrātā śrutaṁ te gaditaṁ mayā, ākhyāhi yadi jānāsi nilayaṁ tasya rakṣasaḥ/ adīrghadarśinaṁ tam vā rāvaṇaṁ rākṣasādhipam, antike yadi vā dūre yadi jānāsi śaṁsa naḥ/ Then the excited and intelligent Angada asked Sampaati that in case Sampaati was the elder brother of Jataayu, then do kindly and possibly tell us the place of Ravanaasura.

Jataayu replied: ‘Vanaras! My wings are burnt and am almost dying while still anxious to help the ‘Rama karya’. I do have the knowledge of Varuna loka, the place where Vamanaavataara Vishnu kept his first step up the ‘urthva lokas’ and where ‘Amrita Mathana’ took place and despite my dying state, I am dedicated to Rama: taruṇī rūpasampannā sarvābharanabhūṣitā, hriyamāṇā mayā dṛṣṭā rāvaṇena durātmanā/ krośantī rāma rāmeti lakṣmaṇeti ca bhāminī, bhūṣaṇāny apavidhyantī gātrāṇi ca vidhunvatī/ sūryaprabheva śailāgre tasyāḥ kauśeyam uttamam, asite rākṣase bhāti yathā vā taḍidambude/ One day, I saw Ravanaasura kidnapping a young and pretty woman as she was crying away on the sky: ‘Ha Rama, ha Lakshmana’ as she was looking shocked and shivering throwing away her silk upper garments and ornaments down as they shone bright against the black coloured Rakshasa. That was indeed Ravanaasura the son of Maharshi Vishravaaka, and the real brother of Kubera himself. From here within a reach of hundred and odd distance of ‘koshas’, there is an island where Vishvakarma constructed a fantastic city named ‘Lankaapuri’ with queer and high entrance gates and with golden buildings inside which glittering ‘verandaas’! It is in that city of Ravana, Devi Sita was seated wearing pure silk robes, crying away in the midst of rakshasis. The island of Lanka is under surveillance and safe from all the four sides and is away of some hundred yojanas from the sea. Vanara Veeras you would have to truly show your valour and brains too to be able to cross the sea. Surely you should be able to reach and see for yourself by using your skills of miniaturising or magnifying your body forms. But, meanwhile, please help me to carry me upto the Sea so that I could perform jalaanjali to my dear brother Jatayu.’ As Sampati provided detailed information of Lankaapuri confirming Devi Sita’s presence right there; notwithstanding the extensive searches for all the other directions, the Southbound Vanara Yoddhas were thrilled at the most significant news of her being there and as rightly advised them by Sampati to explore ways and means to enter the impregnable Lankaapuri. Meanwhile, the Vanara sena helped to carry Sampati’s dying body to the seashore enabling him to let him to perform the jalaanjali.

As the dakshina Vanara Sena was truly relieved of the suspense involved in Sitanveshana all along, the mighty Jambavanta the chief of Bears having lifted Sampaati over his shoulders being truly thrilled at the great news of Devi Sita's whereabouts now, asked Sampati: 'Pakshi Raja! Where precisely is Devi Sita! Who had seen her actually. Then Sampaati replied parting with further and more concrete proof: ' This insurmountable has a largespan of hundreds of yojanas. Then I flew away from that position and faced the high sky bound Siddha- Charana Maha Purushas who gave me way on the sky as I heard as if addressing me: diṣṭyā jīvasi tāteti abruvan mām maharṣayaḥ, katham cit sakalatro 'sau gatas te svasty asaṁśayam/ evam uktas tato 'ham taiḥ siddhaiḥ paramaśobhanaiḥ, sa ca me rāvaṇo rājā rakṣasām prateditaḥ/ 'Thank goodness, Devi Sita is alive as she escaped your attention!' The Rakshasa is flying away south bound. Father! I was delayed due to this interesting but unfortunate incident'. As Grudhra Raja Sampaati had completed his ‘jalanjali’ to the dead Soul of his younger brother Jatayu, all the Vanara Yoddhaas encircled the dying Sampaati especially the latter provided the most essential details of Devi Sita and her ‘nivasa sthaana’ right under the control of Ravanaasura. Then even as Sampaati was gasping for his breath, he explained as to how he was aware of Devi Sita in the remote past. He addressed Angada the Yuva Raja of Vaanaras: ‘As I fell down from the heights of the high skies ‘en-route’ to Vindhya parvata’s heights, since my huge wings were totally burnt by the fiery rays of Surya, I fell totally unconscious and could not recognise any body or anything. Then gradually I realised of mountains, seas, rivers, sarovaras, forests, and of beings and humans. As also realised that on the mountains there were huge caves and so on. Gradually I realised there were human and other species like Kites and other birds besides animals too. Among the humans, I became aware of Mahatmas, Maharshis and erudite scholars like ‘Chandra naamadhara Muni’ a top ‘tapasvi’ and ‘jnaani’. A few times even with extreme pain I used to crawl upto that very ashram of the Mahatma. In the precincts of the ashram, I desired to see him back. The Rishi was pleased to see me back too but realised that my wings were burnt. He said: ‘Sampate! Are you not the elder brother of Jatayu who could assume the form of any Being. He used to touch my feet in a human form! And you too could assume any form. What happened to you now and your most powerful wings!’

Sampati then explained to the Nishaakara Muni : ‘Bhagavan Maharshi! Owing to my present position of extreme pain as my wings got burnt am unable to explain properly but in breif it was like this: ‘ Both me and brother Jatayu became arrogant and highly conceited with your flying speed and might. We took a vow before the Munis atop Mount Kailasha as to who between us could follow Surya Bhagavan earlier in the course of his parikrama of the universe!

Vishnu Purana: Surya Deva’s chariot occupies an area of nine thousand yojanas and twice is the area of its ‘Ishaa Danda’ or the area between the ‘Juuva’ or Yugaartha and the ‘Ratha’. The chariot is drawn by Seven Chhandas or Horses viz. Gayatri, Brihati, Ushnik, Jagati, Trisṭhup, Anusṭhup and Pankti. Actually, Suryodaya and Suryastaya are mere concepts since he is constant and stable; counting from the East of Manasottara Mountain, the Kaala- Chakras on Eastward to Indra, Southward to Yamaloka, west ward to Varuna loka and northward to Chandraloka and the Head quarters of Indra, Yama, Varuna and Chandra respectively are Vasvokasaara, Samyamani, Sukhaa and Vibhavari. In other words, along with Jyotish Chakra, Bhagavan Bhanu is seen rushing Southward. By mid day, he is fully visible at Indraloka followed by the other lokas prescribed viz. Yama-Varuna and Chandra and by the next morning again repeats its course. Udayaastamaney chaiva Sarvakaalam tu Sammukhey, Vidishaasu twashyashasu tathaa Brahman dishaasucha/ Yairyatra drushyatey Bhaaswaansa teshaamudayah smrutah, Tirobhavam chayatraiti tatraivaastamanam Raveyh/ (Sunrise and Sunset thus occur at the same position, since persons at the various Dishas-Vidishaas or Directions-Sub Directions witness the constant Surya Deva as they move and vision morning- mid day-evening-night and again morning and so on in the reverse movement!). Hence Sun Rise and Sunset are regulated to East and West; actually the manner in which Sun shines in the East, he also shines in the reverse; he is stated to stay put at Brahma Sabha and in the process of revolution of Kala Chakra, Dishas and Vidishas get lit or get dark and the lighten portion of the Universe become the day and the darkened areas get the night positions. Kudaala chakra paryanto bhramannesha Divaakarah, Karostahastathaa raatrim vimunmodineem Dwija/ (Hey Dwija! Just as a potter rotates a wheel, Sun and Earth witness parts of day and nights). From the time of Chakra’s start of the revolution from the lowest point of the wheel towards the North is called Uttarayana and Surya is stated to be visible in Makara Raashi, followed by Kumbha Raashi and further on to Meena Raashi. As the three Raashis are over, the duration of day and night become equivalent or in other words, Sun passes through Bhu-Madhya Rekha. Thereafter, the duration of day time starts increasing and that of nights dwindling. Subsequently, Mesha, Vrisha and Mithuna Raashis pass over; at the end of Mithuna Raashi as Karka Raashi is entered into then Surya’s direction changes from North to the Southern Direction and that phase is called Dakshinaayana. Just as a person tends to speed up descent from the top to the bottom, the speed of Kala Chakra gets picked up by the velocity of Vayu /wind and thus the duration of time quickens; during Dakshinaayana, the day time is stated to take thirteen and half revolutions of Nakshtras around Surya which is normally performed within twelve Muhurtas(thirty muhurthas make a day-night); but during the night time, the speed slows down and takes eighteen Muhurthas. During Uttarayana, Surya's speed quickens in the nights and slows down during the days and vice versa. Another conclusion is that during the Sandhya timings viz. Vyushti / Prabhat of day -breaks and Usha or night falls, the Vyashti time is of Brahma Swarupa Omkara and Gayatri and who ever worships Gayatri at that time with 'jala' would destroy the Rakshasaas; if they further recite the Mantra viz. Suryo Jyotih as the first Aahuti of Agnihotra they would be awakening and enlightening Surya Deva; thereafter: Omkaaro Bhagavan Vishnustridhaamaa vachasaam patih, Tadyucchaaranatastey tu yaanti Raakshasaah/ Vaishavomshah Parah Suryo yontarjyotirasaplavam, Abhidhaayaka Omkaarastasya tatprerakah parah/ Tena SampreritamJyotiromkaaranaatha deeptimat, Dahatya sasha Rakshaamsi Mandehaa-khyaanyadhaani vai/ Tasmaannollinghanam Kaaryam Sandhyopaasana karmanah, Sa hanti Suryam Sandhyaayaa nopaastim kurtutey tu yah/(The mere recitation of Omkaara Vishwam-Tejo Prajna Rupam-Tridhama Yuktam-Vishnum-Vedaadhipatim would destroy Raakshasaas. The Inner Radiance of Nirvikara Vishnu is Surya: Omkara is his Vaachaka and is the instant prompter of terminating Rakshasaas. Prompted by the Omkara, that Jyoti called Vishnu gets into full action in blistering Mandeacalled Rakshasaas; that is the reason why the Sandhyopaasana Karma should never ever be neglected!) Sishumara Chakra / Jyotisha Chakra: On the Sky, one could find a dolphin like formation of a Starry Design at the tail of which is Dhruva, who rotates on its own axis and also induces the rotation around Chandra, Surya, other Planets as also Nakshatras as well; in fact, all the Planets and Stars get hooked to Dhruva by the force of Vayu.Sishumara is the hinge of Sarveshwara Narayana tied on to Dhruva and further clutched to Surya.Sishumara is coiled with its head down, Ashvini Kumars at its feet,; Varuna and Aryama are at thighs,Mitra at the anus; Agni, Mahendra, Kashyapa and Dhruva at its tail; on the top of the tail is Prajapati, Sapta Rishis at the hip position; body skin pores with Nakshatras; Upper chin as Agasti, lower chin as Yama; Mars as its mouth; genitals Saturn, Guru as neck back; Surya as chest; Moon as mind; Venus as navel; heart as Narayana Himself; life air as Mercury and so on. Rahu and Ketu the Sub-Heavenn Planets are right under Surya Deva. Surya attracts water from various sources for eight months in a year and facilitates rains for four months a year and rains enable crops of food and fodder for all the Beings. Surya also enables the upkeep of Chandra and the latter in turn produces 'Abhra'by interacting with Vayu further creating Dhooma (Steam) produced by Agni and Sky leading to Meghas or clouds. As per the Time schedule prescribed by Vidhaa, 'Abhra Jala' as preserved in the clouds is released pure water with the help of Vayu onto Bhumi. Surya Deva attracts water from four main sources viz.Rivers, Samudra, various water-bodies from Bhumi, and Pranis. The Akasha Ganga attracted by Surya Deva would straight away release the water by way of rains from clouds without the process of transformation to 'Abhras' afore-mentioned. Needless to say that the water by way of rains as per the above process, is like Amrit or the Principal and Unparalleled source of Life for the production of food grains, Aoushadhis, Yagnas, and worships besides and countless various deeds. Thus, Aharabhutah Savitru Dhruvo Muni varottthama! Dhruvasya Shishimaarosow sopi Narayanatmakah/ (The main Adhara of Surya is Dhruva and Dhruva is dependent on Narayana and Narayana is settled in Sishumaara!)

Matsya Purana: Surya-Chandra Gati Varnana: (Some interesting facts) : Both Surya and Chandra cover daily the Seven Dwipas(Jambu, Plaksha, Salmaali, Kusha, Krouncha, Shaka and Pushkala); Sapta Samudras (Lavana or Salt, Ikshurasa or Sugarcane juice, Sura or Wine, Ghruta or Classified Butter, Dahi or Curd, Ksheera or Milk and Suswada or Sweet Water); and Sapta Parvatas (Sumru , Kailas, Malaya, Himalaya, Udyachala, Agastyachala, Suvela and Gandhamadana). Normally Surya Deva covers trilokas each day. Surya Mandala as defined by Veda Vyaasa is nine thousand yojanas and the total circumference is stated to be 27000 yojanas.Prithvi's mandala is stated to be fifty crore yojanas. One half of this is spread north to Meru Parvata and by half of Meru Parvata on four sides one crore yojanas is stated to be spread over. Half of Prithvi is stated to spread nine lakh fifty thousand yojanas. Now the four sided spread of all the four directions is stated as three crore yojanas. This is what the sapta dwipaas and sapta samudras which occupies the spread of earth. The surrounding area of Prithvi known as 'brahma mandala' is thrice larger than that of Prithvi. Thus the area of Prithvi plus works out to eleven crore and thirty three lakh yojanas! Now the account of earth and the 'antariksha'. The area of the Sky as contained by that of nakshatraas is what Prithvi is occupied. In other words, what ever is the area of Prithvi is that of 'antariksha'. Now the Jyotirgana Prachaara: and Meru Parvata: To the east of Meru Parvata, atop the Manasarovara mountain, there exists Vasvaikasaara named Mahendra Nagara made of gold. Again to the south of Meru Parvata's back side, there is Manasapurvata and the Samyamani Pura where Lord Yama the illustrious son of Surya Deva resides. To the west of Meru parvata, on the west of Manasapurvata atop Sukha Purawhere Varuna Deva resides. To the north of Meru Parvata atop the Mahendra parvata, Vibhavari Pura where Chandra Deva resides. Behind the Manasotara on the four sides, the Ashta Dik Loka Paalakas are placed to protect Dharma and in the dakshinaayana period, Surya Deva oversees the activities of the Ashta Palakas during his period. Now, about the dakshinayana the travel of Surya; in the jyotishchakra in his pradakshina, He reaches Amaravati the capital of Indra Deva by the midday on earth; that would be when it coincides with Yama Raja's rising time, in Chandra's mid night time and so on. As Surya performs pradakshina or self-circumambulation, he also does the same to nakshatras too do likewise. Precisely at the 'udaya' and 'astama' timings he does exactly the same year in and year out. At the Sun Rise he gradually increases his radiance till the afternoon and gradually reduces his tejas till the dusk time. In this way, Surya Deva performs pradakshina or circumbulation of self and so do the nakshatra mandali too. These all travel southward and at the rise and setting timings are defined as also at the poorvaahna and aparaahna or pre noon and afternoon they pass through two each of Deva puris and at the noon time, one Devapuri. Thus Surya from the rise gains momentum of radiance till afternoon and gradually lessens the severity of the kiranas thereafter till Sun set. Surya has the constant awareness of he 'udaya' and 'astamaya' at the east and west directions; while radiating the eastern side, spreading the heat and illumination on the sidewise north and south and decreasing the severity till disappearance. Meru Parvata is stated to be situated in the north of the highest of all the mountains; Lokaaloka is situated in the southern direction and since Prithvi's shadows are spread over, those Beings situated on the other side of the hemisphere are unable to Surya in the nights. Thus Surya Deva with a lakh of kiranas reaches the mid portion of 'Pushkaradwipa' by that time, despite his speed of one 'muhurta' or two ghadis at the rate of one thirty lakh and fifty thousand yojanas plus! Thus Surya Deva as he traverses southward for six months turns to uttarayana or northbound. At the time of Dakshinaayana, Surya would have reached the travel to the mid portion of Pushkara dwipa. This dwipa is as thrice as distant from Mru to Manasarovara! Now the distance on the southern course or Dakshinayana is of nine crore fifty lakh yojanas. After the dakshinayana, Surya reaches the Vishuva sthaana or the 'khagoleeya vishuvadvritta bindu' at the north of Ksheera sagara. Vishvan mandala parinama is three cores twenty one lakh yojanas. As Surya's course gets north bound or uttarayana entering 'shravana nakshatra', then his course would be towards gomoda dwipa in between the south and north parts and in between are located jaradrava - Iravata to the north and Vaishvanara to the south. Towards north is named Naaga veedhi and to the south is the Ajaveedhi. The nakshatras of Purvaashadha-Uttaraashadha-Mula are known as 'ajvithis' and abhijit, shravana and swaati are naagavithis. Ashvini, Bharani and Krittika are also naagavithis and so also Rohini-Ardra and Mrigashira. Pushya, Shlesha and Punarvasu are called Iravati veethi. Purvaphalguni, Uttara phalguni and Magha are arshabhi veedhi. Purvabhadra, Uttatabhadra and Revati are of Goveedhi, while Shravana, Dhanishtha and Shatabhisha are of jagadveethi. Chitra and Swati are again of ajaveedhi, Jyeshtha, Vishaka and Anuraadha are of Mriga veedhi again. During Uttarayana samaya, the speed of Surya is slower and the nights are of longer duration and vice versa. Shishumaara Chakra: On the 'akaasha mandala' or the sky line, in between the space of fourteen nakshatras, there is the shishumaaraka chakra inside which is the son of King Uttanapaada viz. the eternal Dhruva. This Dhruva Nakshatra moves around in a circular manner and along with the concerned Grahas as also Surya and Chandra. Nakshatra Ganas too move around in circular fashion behind the Dhruva Nakshatra. As Dhruva is controlled by 'Jyotirgana' and 'Vayurgana', he is free to take his 'manasika sankalpa' for performing his 'bhramana' or self-pradakshina. However, he is influenced by various considerations such as jyotirgana bheda, yoga, kaala nischaya, asta, udaya, utpaaa, Uttaraayana-Dakshinaayana gamana, vishuvat rekhaapara sthiti, graha varnana and such considerations enable Dhruva's decision. Now, those clouds which afford life to Beings are called 'Jeemuta Meghas'; such jeemutas are normally impacted by 'vayus' which are distanced by a yojana or two; the resultant interaction of the jeemutas and the vayus create 'maha vrishti' or the substantial rains. It is stated that in the days of yore, quite a few huge mountains used to fly from place to place with their wings carrying dark clouds repete with clouded waters so that Beings starved of rains on earth were satisfied with the rains at those places. But the advantage of carrying water was far outweighed by the havoc created on earth due to the flying mountains and as such Lord Indra cut off the wings. Consequently the mutilated wings of the mountains create havocs of excessive rains with thunders and pralaya situations consequently causing floods and innumerable water flows of speed and noise! Indeed Vayu is the life energy. Entire 'Brahmanda' came into place as the 'Aja' or the Self Manifested Brahma came out bursting out from the 'anda kapaala' or egg shell with the interaction of fierce wind and clouds. Brahma was also 'Jalajaataasana' or seated by the water base. Among the base material besides Vayu and Jala - naamaka- parjanya- meghas Brahma created further Iravata-Vaamana-Anjana and four Diggjas. Elephants, mountains, clouds and serpents are of the same 'kula' or likeness of upbringing and likewise of water, clouds, rains; just as to enable the growth of foodgrains one calls tushara or snow in hemanta ritu or winter. In any case it is undisputed that Surya is the cause of 'vrishti' or rains. In this world, rains, Sun shine, ice, days and nights, sandhya kalaas, Shubha and Ashubhakaryas are basically regulated by Dhruva. Dhruva regulates water which is received by Surya. It is due to water that wind or praana vayu that Sthaavara Jngamas or the mobile and immobile exist due to. Thus there is a chain reaction in which Prakriti's mobiliy is sustained.]

Stanzas 5-6 onward of Sarga Sixty One : apyaavaam yugapat prāptāv apaśyāva mahītale, rathacakrapramāṇāni nagarāṇi prthak prthak/ kva cid vāditraghoṣāms ca brahmaghoṣāms ca śuśruva, gāyantīs cāṅganā bahvīḥ paśyāvo raktavāsasah/ tūrṇam utpatya cākāśam ādityapatham āsthitau, āvām ālokayāvas tad vanam śādvalasamsthitam/ Having decided that both Sampati and Jatayu the Maha Gridhraas followed Surya Deva in his Tri Loka Pradakshna. On the earth, they reached various regions of earth including nagaras, mountains, rivers, oceans and so on just following the Surya Deva's chariot. From the 'Urthva Lokas' above bhumi, the brothers were able to hear the sonorous musical sounds and the jingling sounds of Deva Kanyas and their singings too. Both the brothers of Sampati and Jatayu had clearly visioned the scenes too from a distance. Then both of them raced up with Surya and tracked up along with him nearly closing him from a distance. upalair iva samchannā drśyate bhūḥ śiloccayaiḥ, āpagābhiś ca samvītā sūtrair iva vasumdhara/ himavāms caiva vindhyaś ca meruś ca sumahān nagaḥ, bhūtale samprakāśante nāgā iva jalāśaye/ tīvrasvedaś ca khedaś ca bhayaṁ cāsīt tadāvayoh, samāviśata mohaś ca mohān mūrchā ca dāruṇā/ Due to the view from far above earth, the latter looked as though some rocks were hiding waterflows but those were actually high mountains and oceans or huge rivers like needles through threads. On the surface of the earth, gigantic mountains like Meru, Himalayas, Vindhya and so on were like elephants up from the sky. As the view from far above was rather weird and creepy, the two brothers took to sweating. Also they were tired with fear, and got swooned too. na dig vijñāyate yāmyā nāgenyā na ca vāruṇī, yugānte niyato loko hato dagdha ivāgninā/ yatnena mahatā bhūyo raviḥ samavalokitah, tulyaḥ prthvīpramāṇena bhāskaraḥ pratibhāti nau/ In that condition, we never had the ability to distinguish the southern or northern directions, nor of the east or the west. As we found ourselves directionless, we went too near to the red and blistering globe of Surya Deva as our wings caught fire. jaṭāyur mām anāprcchya nīpāpāta mahīm tataḥ, tam drṣtvā tūrṇam ākāśād ātmānam muktavān aham/ pakṣibhyām ca mayā gupto jaṭāyur na pradahyata, pramādāt tatra nirdagdhaḥ patan vāyupathād aham/ āsanke tam nipatitam janasthāne jaṭāyuṣam, aham tu patito vindhye dagdhapakṣo jaṭīkṛtaḥ/ Jatayu was falling down quicker as his grip was not enough and thus I tried to protect him by my wings and thus the impact of heat was double in my case. All the same the fall was unimaginally steep as both fell down the the enormous reverberations of the thud sound. By way of the sense of the flow of wind, it appeared that Jatayu fell down at the 'Janasthaana' but I fell down on the Vindiyachala's shikhara', so explained to Nishaakara Muni.

Nishakara Muni readily sympathises and wishes recovery to Sampata but instructs him to contribute in the context of Shri Rama Vijaya Karya all his life

Having heard what all his ‘bhakta’ reported earlier about how his wings were burnt off and that he fell down on the heights of Vindhya Mountain, he readily expressed his earnest sympathy and assured that surely his wings should grow back. pakṣau ca te prapakṣau ca punar anyau bhaviṣyataḥ, cakṣuṣī caiva prāṇās ca vikramas ca balaṁ ca te/ purāṇe sumahat kāryam bhaviṣyam hi mayā śrutam, dṛṣṭam me tapasā caiva śrutvā ca viditam mama/ Sampaate! Do not get too alarmed. By the passage of time, your wings should gradually grow; like wise, your vision would be recovered and your lost physical vigour and bravery too. I had read in Puranas that several magnificent and amazing developments are round the corner and would occur soon enough. One needs to achieve that distant vision by tapasya and sincere introspection. The foretellings were that there would be a famed King Dasharatha in the Ikshvaaku Vamsha who would be blessed by a Maha Tejasvi Putra named Shri Rama. The futuristic vision also confirmed that Rama the Satya Parakrama would visit deep forests along with his dharnacharini named Devi Sita along with Rama’s brother Lakshmana. The forevision further states that in the janasthaana King Ravanaasura would abduct Devi Sita who would prove her ‘paativratya’ by discarding bhakshya bhojyaadis and would always be immersed in the devotional thoughts of Shri Rama only always. She would refuse the ‘Rakshasaanna’ but the ‘Indra Pasaada’ only, while keeping the top portion as naivedya to Rama keeping it on earth and would consume only the lower portion for herself. Sampaate! eṣyanty anveṣakās tasyā rāmadūtāḥ plavaṅgamāḥ, ākhyeyā rāmamahīṣī tvayā tebhya vihaṅgama/ sarvathā tu na gantavyam īdṛśaḥ kva gamiṣyasi, deśakālau pratīkṣasva pakṣau tvaṁ pratipatsyase/ The vanara sena which had already been despatched should certainly succeed in their efforts but direct them suitably and try your best to show them the way. Do most certainly wait here only by giving them proper clues, even as if your wings might grow eventually. tvayāpi khalu tat kāryam tayoś ca nṛpaputrayoḥ/ brāhmaṇānām surāṇām ca munīnām vāsavaśya ca/ icchāmy aham api draṣṭum bhrātaru rāmalakṣmaṇau, necche ciraṁ dhārayitum prāṇāṁś tyakṣye kalevaram/ There after as Rama Lakshmanas arrive too here, you must extend whatever assistance might be called for. Indeed, I would desire to have my darshan of those Maha Purushas but I might have to perform my ‘praana tyaga’ even before their arrival here’ Thus the Maha Muni advised his devotee.

As Maharshi Nishaakara instructed Sampati intensively to keep serving ShriRama Karya as a singulat duty of Sampati's life and very existence, the latter slowly walked out from the Maharshi's cave and slowly crawled up to the top of the Vindhya Parvata. With the passage of time, the Maharshii passed away and there eversince, Sampaati had been waiting . He told the Vaanara shreshthas further that he wished to sacrifice his life since his living proved to be a drag eversince, but the Maharshis words were ringing in his years to wait till the arrival of the Vanara sena on 'Shri Rama Karya'. Time and again Sampaati had been chiding his son as and when he used to fetch food for him as why he had not punished 'duraatma' Ravanaasura and save Devi Sita some how. Like wise he was sharing his thoughts to the vaanara shreshthas who assembled around him. Meanwhile, Sampaati realised that his burnt off wings were slowly regenerating. He was excited to address the Vaanara veeras: niśākarasya maharṣeḥ prabhāvād amitātmanaḥ, ādityaraśminir -dagdhau pakṣau me punar utthitau/ yauvane vartamānasya mamāsīd yaḥ parākramaḥ, tam evādyāvagacchāmi balaṁ pauraṣam eva ca/ sarvathā kriyatām yatnaḥ sītām adhigamiṣyatha, pakṣalābho mamāyam vaḥ siddhipratyaya kārakaḥ/ 'Kapi varaas! Thanks indeed by the blessings of Maharshi Nishaakara, my wings which were totally burnt off during my escapade with Surya Deva, have come come back sprouting. Now I should now onward be able to experience and enjoy my purusharthaas of 'Dharmaartha Kaamaas'! Vaanara veeras! All of you now should now put in your very best to take up the challenging endeavour to attain Devi Sita mother's darshan as soon as possible. This success is indeed round the corner, just as my wings are sprouting back.' Unable to suppress his greatest desire to fly any longer, Sampaati flew off in excitement as all the vaanara veeras clapped in response with the strong determination to initiate and propel the action on hand.

With great excitement and drive, especially fired up by Sampaati, the vast vaanara sena pushed forward to the Sea bed; then Angada asked the select Yoddhas to express their individual abilities to cross the Sea.

Yuva Raja Angada then asked the Maha Vaanara Veeras by turn and named them as Gaja-Gavaaksha-Gavaya-Sharabha-Gandhamaadana- Mainda- Dvidida - Sushena-and Jambavan. The replies were as follows: Maha Vanara Gaja said that he could jump off by ten yojanas- Gavaksha could cover twenty yojanas-Sharabha confirmed thirty yojanas-Rishabha assured forty yojanas-Gandhamaadana would cover fifty yojanas comfortably- Mainda quoted sixty with enthusiasm- Dvipada by seventy yojanas- and Sushena the dare devil upto eighty yojanas. Then Jambavan stated that in his youthful days and years he no doubt could have crossed the distance from hear to the other shore, but now his present ability would now be restricted to some ninety yojanas but might not be more. Jambavan further confirmed: tāmś ca sarvān hariśreṣṭhāṁ jāmbavān punar abravīt, na khalv etāvad evāsīd gamane me parākramaḥ/ mayā mahābalaiś caiva yajñe viṣṇuḥ sanātanaḥ, pradakṣiṇīkṛtaḥ pūrvam kramamāṇas trivikramaḥ/ In the years of yore when Bhagavan Vishnu assumed the incarnation of Vaamana Deva, as Danava Bali Chakravarti bestowed mere three feet of land to Vaamana, then the latter measured mere two feet as earth and urthva lokas and for the third foot was of the nether lokas with Bali down under too. That was the time, Jambavaan recalled he was able to perform full parikrama to the Virat swarupa!

Vishleshana of Vamana's Virat Swarupa from Vaamana Purana:

Vamana Murti displayed his Virat Swarupa: Chandra and Surya were his two Eyes, Shy was his head, Prithvi his feet, Pishachaas were his foot-fingers, Gruhyakaas were his hand fingers, Vishwa Deva

Ganaas were in his jaanus /knees, Sadhyas were his janghaas, Yakshaas were his nails, Apsarsaas were his palm lines, Nakshatras were his Eye sight, Surya kiranas were his hairs, Stars were his body hairs, Maharshiganaas were in the hair roots, Vidishas were his hands, Dishas were his ears, Ashwini Kumars were his faculty of hearing, Vayu was his nose, Chandra Deva was his joking faculty, Dharma Deva was his thinking capacity, Satya was his voice and Saraswati was his tongue, Deva Mata Aditi was his neck, Vidya was his valiyaas or long poles; Pushas were his eye brows, Swarga dwar was his anus, Vaishvanara his face, Prajapati his vrushanaas, Param Brahma was his heart, Kashyapa Muni was his Pumstwa, Vasu Devata was his back, Marutganaas were his Sandhis, Rudra was his Vakshasthala, Mahaarnavaa was his Dhairya, Gangharvas were in his stomach; Lakshmi, Medha, Dhruti, Kaanti and all Vidyaas were in his ‘Kati Pradesha’; the luster and radiance in the total Universe as also the Tapo teja or the power of meditation was the reflection of the magnificence of Natayana; Vedas and Scriptures and the huge Yagnaas and the Sacred Deeds of the Virtuous like Maharshis and Brahmanas were all inside in his ‘kukshi’ or belly. On viewing the Paramatma’s ‘Virat Swarupa’, the so called ‘Mahaasuraas’ referred to earlier in ignorance by Chakravarti Bali before Prahlada’s curse to him got burnt off like flies before a gigantic outbreak of Fire! Having thus occupied the Universe in totality including the sub-terrain Sapta Paatalaas, Vamana Deva stated that since Bali took the water in his hand and donated the THREE FEET of Land, and blessed him to be the King of the Sapta Paatalaas and granted him long life till the end of Manvantara of the on-going Vaisawata Manu.]

Stanza 19 onward continues: aham etad gamiṣyāmi yojanānām śataṁ mahat, nivartane tu me śaktiḥ syān na veti na niścitam/ Then buddhimaan Angada while addressing Jambavan with great respect for his age, valour and enormous ‘panditya’ said : ‘ I should no doubt be able to cover hundred yojanas of the Maha Sagara from here to Lanka dwipa, but do not have the confidence of possible return!’ Then Jambavan replied to Angada: ‘Yuva Raja! Next only to King Sugriva; it should not be proper for you to be sent for this current mission anyway. None of us could ever ask you to undertake this task as per protocol. You are the commander but not the commanded. Kapi Raja! You are our guru and the guru putra; it should be impertinent for us to whom who instructs but never to be instructed! Then Angada out of desperation replied: yadi nāhaṁ gamiṣyāmi nānyo vānarapuṅgavaḥ, punaḥ khalv idam asmābhiḥ kāryaṁ prāyopaveśanam/ na hy akṛtvā haripateḥ saṁdeśaṁ tasya dhīmataḥ, tatrāpi gatvā prānānām paśyāmi parirakṣaṇam/ sa hi prasāde cātyarthaṁ kope ca harir īśvaraḥ, atītya tasya saṁdeśaṁ vināśo gamane bhavet/ In case neither I should take the initiative nor any body else could then surely we would return to our peril. Then the following outcome would be obvious. Then what indeed be the possible way out!’ The the most experienced Jambavan threw up a way out to Angada: asya te vīra kāryasya na kiṁ cit parihīyate, eṣa saṁcodayāmy enaṁ yaḥ kāryaṁ sādhaiṣyati/ tataḥ pratītaṁ plavatāṁ variṣṭhaṁ; ekāntaṁ āśrītya sukhopaviṣṭaṁ, saṁcodayāṁ āsa haripravīro; haripravīraṁ hanumantaṁ eva/ Veera Angada! In this ‘maha karya’ of yours, there would not be even a single slip! Now I am going to commend such a true Maha Medhaavi and Vira shiromani who truly and assuredly competent and accomplished’. Having displayed confidence, Jambavan asked Angada to accompany to the one and only Anjaneya who was in the form of a small sized Vaanara in a remote corner far from the maddening vanara crowd!

Your origin and of birth are indescribable: Pujikasthala was indeed a famed Aparsa was cursed to be born as 'Kapini' or Vanara Stree famed as Anjana who was wedded to Kesari. As the Kapini had the ability to assume any form as she pleased and during the rainy season was seated on a mountain top dressed in silks, with priceless ornaments and decorated with sweet odoured flowers. On seeing the entire scene, Vayu Deva was terribly concerned and thus the Prabhanjana Deva Vaayu stopped his movement in trilokas and then the Ashta Dikpalakas tried their best but finally Brahma Deva had to pacify Vayu Deva blessing Anjaneya would be immune from ‘astra shastras’! vajrasya ca nipātena virujam tvām samīkṣya ca, sahasranetraḥ prītātmā dadau te varam uttamam/ svacchandataś ca maraṇam te bhūyād iti vai prabho, sa tvām kesariṇaḥ putraḥ kṣetrajō bhīmaṁ vikramaḥ/ mārutasya aurasaḥ putras tejasā cāpi tatsamaḥ, tvam hi vāyusuto vatsa plavane cāpi tatsamaḥ/ Anjaneya! Even ‘vajra prahara’ by Indra Deva would be futile on your body and Mrityu is in your control’. Finally, Maha Jaambavaan asserted: tad vijṛmbhasva vikrāntaḥ plavatām uttamo hy asi, tvadvīryam draṣṭukāmeyam sarvā vānaravāhīni/ uttiṣṭha hariṣārdūla laṅghayasva mahārṇavam, parā hi sarvabhūtānām hanuman yā gatis tava/ viṣāṇṇā harayaḥ sarve hanuman kim upekṣase, vikramasva mahāvego viṣṇus trīṇ vikramān iva/ Parakrami Mahaanjaneya! Now is the time that you have to proclaim to the trilokas to heighen your stature as the Vanara Sena is longing to witness what you really indeed are. Kindly get up and cross this Maha Sagara in one jump as that indeed is a sure step for Loka Kalyana. All the Vaanara Veeras are right now are on the verge of collapse. As Maha Vishnu as Vamana Deva measured the Universe with three steps, please put forth three steps ahead to sure success!

Of which avail is, after all, pulling and uprooting the Kingdom Ravana’s Lanka!’ As Veera Hanuman assured thumping success from his tour of Lanka and back, the huge mass of Vaanaras paid sky high tributes, clappings, and victory shoutings of feverish rejoicings. Then commenced ‘Swasti Vachanaas’ and high tributes to the hero stating: ṛṣīṇām ca prasādena kapivṛddhamatena ca, gurūṇām ca prasādena plavasva tvaṁ mahārṇavam/ sthāsyāmaś caikapādena yāvadāgamanam tava, tvadgatāni ca sarveṣām jīvitāni vanaukasām/ ‘Maha Vanara Anjaneya! We would all await your successful travel and very fruitful return; do trust us that your success would provide us all a fresh lease of our lives.’ Hanuman replied: As I would now jump and cross the Samudra, be assured that in the universe none could ever imitate. My initial jump would be to the top of Mahendra Parvata which is replete with trees bearing juicy and sweet fruits.’ Thus, the Maha Kapesvara reached, selected a few luscious fruits, enjoyed them relaxingly and remembered of Lanka forthwith for the subsequent jump forward.

Undoubtedly Hanuman, is the key to Sundara Khanda Valmiki Ramayana. Totally dedicated to the ‘Rama Karya’ of ‘Sitanveshana’, He assumed gigantic body frame, crossed the ‘Maha Sagara’ of a distance of hundred yojanas as being literally air borne, gets welcomed on way by Mainaka Mountain- the very few that Indra spared with flying caliber with the assistance of Vayu Deva ; encounters Daksha Kumari Maha Sarpi Surasa about to devour him, quickly assuming a miniature finger ring form , ready for her devouring as she too realising the auspicious Rama Karya of Sitaanveshana blesses on exit from her body; kills Rakshasi Simhika the ‘Lankapuri Dwaara Palika’ by enhancing his height manifold; and enjoying the aerial view of Lankapuri, finally entered Ravana’s kingdom, each time by appropriately maximising or miniaturising his body with daring self-confidence. Veera Vayu Putra- born of Vayu- Anjana by mere body ‘sparsha’- then entered Ravana’s ‘anthapura’- viz. the Pushpaka Vimana seized from Kubera Dikpalaka who was Ravana’s first cousin; saw for himself the amazing scene of countless wives of gandharva-naaga-yaksha-daitya-rakshasa kanyas of rare beauty and grace, including the Prime Queen Mandodari Pativrata, being immersed with wine-dance-and music in Ravana’s company in his large bed. Yet Devi Sita was not visible there. Further continuing his extensive and intensive ‘Sitaanveshana’, finally located her amid detestable looking- raw flesh eating- cruel Rakshasis, as she wore dusted, crumpled ‘eka vastra’ crying away incessantly and desperately in ‘Pramadaavana’ under ‘Ashoka Maha Vriksha. Ravana entered with his wives, endeared Devi Sita first, but on hearing her ‘parusha vakyaas’, got furious and granted a two month reprieve before her sliced body would reach the royal kitchen. There after, Anjaneya having convinced Devi Sita by crooning Shri Rama’s heritage, bravery and glory gradually, handed over Rama’s finger ring, convinced that Shri Rama Lakshmana Sugrivas were eveready to arrive with Vanara Veeras and relieve her grief. Then he initiated a spree of killings of Rakshasa Veeras as instructed by Ravana, pretended that he was bound by Indrajjits’ brahmastra, faced Ravana in his Sabha who was infuriated by his warnings, but on Vibhishana’s advice, allowed his tail to be put to flames, when he burnt off Lankapuri to destruction, returned to Kishkindha , handed over Devi Sita’s choodamani explaining Devi Sita’s status and got initiated action to attack Ravana and followers. .

Recalling Kanchimuth’s HH Vijayendra Saraswati’s kind instruction to me last year to translate Valmiki Ramayana in its Essence form, the ‘Baala- Ayodhya- Aranya-Kishkindha- and now the Sundara Khandas’ have since been attempted so far. Our entire family is beholden to the glorious lineage of the Excellencies, especially Maha Swami, and now the present ‘Baala Vaaru’ who has been driving me to action for attempting translations of Ashtaadasha Puranas, Ashtaadasha Upanishads, Dharma Sindhu, Brahma Sutras, Paraashara Smriti, Manu Smriti, Soundarya Lahari, Bhagavad Gita, Sahasra Naamas, Sahasra Lingarchana Vidhana and various scripts on Ganesha-Gayatri-Lakshmi-Vaakdevi- Bhaskara-Chandra-Pancha Maha Bhutas- Parmaardha Saara of Kashmiri Shaivism and so on for over decade and half. Our earnest prostrations to Him seeking His continued blessings.

Preface-

Retrospective: Bala Khanda-Ayodhya Khanda-Aranya Khanda-Kishkindha Khanda

Sarga One: Veera Hanuman leaps off the Ocean towards Ravana's Lanka, gets welcomed on way by Mainaka, encounters Surasa and subdues, kills Simhika, and enjoys the aerial view of Lanka [Vishleshanas 1) on Anjaneya's self confidence to cross the Maha Sagara, his decisiveness as expressed by himself vide Sarga 67 of Kishkindha Ramayana 2) Vishleshana on Sagara Chakravarti: as sourced from Maha Bhagavata Purana]

Sarga Two: Description of Lankapuri's beauty, thoughts about the size in which he should enter the interiors of the city and on the description Chandrodaya. [[Vishleshanas on a) Bilwa Swarga of Maga Nagas b) Kubera

Sargas Three and Four: As Hanuman sought to enter, Rakshasi Nishachari is encountered, he subdues her seriously; she recalls Brahma's warning that once a Vanara gives a hit to her, then Lanka gets its doom and lets him in! Then Hanuman enters Ravana's 'antahpura' comprising many palaces but gets disappointed.

Sarga Five: Hanuman then enters the 'antahpura' or the interior palaces of Ramanasura systematically but gets disappointed with no sign and indication of Devi Sita

Sarga Six: Hanuman then extended the scope of search for Devi Sita in Ravana's own palace, besides at the houses of his follower Rakshasas

Sargas Seven and Eight: Description of Ravana Bhavana viz. Pushpaka Vimana- Hanuman witnesses the inside out of the Pushpaka Vimana - indeed it was surfeit with Sundara Kanyas [Vishleshana on Maha Lakshmi Swarupas]

Sarga Nine: In the process of 'Devi Sitaanveshana' in the Pushpaka Vimana in Ravana's residence, Hanuman witnessed countless 'strees' of youthful charm being playful inside; why had Ravana forcefully abducted Sita, despite his reputation of never forcing a woman but willingly married! [Vishleshanas a) on Maharshi Vasishtha and Kama Dhenu Shabala- b) Panchendriyas]

Sarga Ten: In the process of searching for Devi Sita, Hanuman was confused by seeing Devi Mandodari to Devi Sita! [Vishleshana on Devi Mandodari]

Sarga Eleven: Hanuman on seeing Mandori, took time self assure about Devi Sita, continued the search even while self introspecting of his own honesty in the atmosphere of food-dance and lust; yet dismissed such thoughts

Sarga Twelve: Hanuman in his remote thoughts wondered and was even concerned of Devi Sita's very existence but quickly recovered from such apprehensions resumed 'Sitanveshana' yet again with confidence and belief! [Vishleshana on Continued Endeavor towards success vide Bhagavad Gita

Sarga Thirteen: Despite his sincere efforts of finding Devi Sita, the indications were slimmed and might even return disappointed. Yet, Sampati assured and visited 'Ashoka Vaatika' [Vishleshana on Sampati's assurance to Vanara Sena vide Kishkindha Ramayana Sarga 63]

Sarga Fourteen: While admiring Ashoka Vaatika's prakriti soundarya, Hanuman mused as to how Devi Sita would be happy as she was stated to be an admirer of Prakriti Soundarya

Sarga Fifteen: Hanuman yet in his miniature form finally visioned Devi Sita near a 'Chaitya Praasaada Mandira' and identified her and felt ecstatic
[Vishleshana on Sankhya Shastra vide Brahma Sutras]

Sarga Sixteen: Hanuman having finally ensured that Devi Sita was visioned, felt that as to why she, an outstanding Pativrata, why and how Ravana has been disgusting, yet sad.
Vishleshana on Rama killing Karbandha who described his 'Atma Katha' ref. Sarga 69, Aranya Khanda]

Sarga Seventeen: Hanuman was nodoubt happy to see Devi Sita most closely with sympathy, yet contrarily was repulsed with hatred at the sight of the Rakshasa stree encircling her

Sarga Eighteen: Ravana'sura along with his beloved females enters Ashoka Vatika and the spot where Devi Sita was being guarded as seen by Anjaneya in his miniature form

Sarga Nineteen: Even with a single nasty and desolate glance of the detestable Ravana'sura, Devi Sita was drowned in gloom-fear-and apprehension as noticed by Hanuman

Sarga Twenty: Ravana then addresses Devi Sita opening his heart fancying her, praises her origin, charm and conduct, and seeks to convince her to discard fear complex, to be sympathetic to him, and wait for her consent

Sarga Twenty One: Devi Sita emboldens herself and replies highlighting Ravana's wretched manner of abducting her and of his features of cruelty, selfishness, and ego; mocks his ability and readiness to face hero Rama.

Sarga Twenty Two: As Sita heckled Ravana's claim of heroism and his stealthy timidity, asserted her 'pativratya', and challenged him to face Rama- as Ravana threatened her granting three months to change or get killed

Sarga Twenty Three: Select Rakshasis of learning like Ekajata-Harijata-Vikata- and Durmukhi extoll the qualities of bravery of Ravana'sura while seeking to convincingly pressurise Devi Sita to accept the offer of Prime Queenship
[Vishleshana on Prajapatis, Adityas, Rudras, Vasus and Ashvini Kumars]

Sarga Twenty Four: While a few of enlightened Rakshasis sought to convince Devi Sita to wed Ravana, the rest of the cruel lot threatened her to death and fancy to taste her flesh, cook it with spices, and eat with wine and dance!

Sargas Twenty Five and Twenty Six: Totally rattled by the perilous intimidation of the Rakshasis to nearly kill her and celebrate, Devi Sita nearly resorted to 'praana tyaga' especially cursing her fate still disabling her from Shri Rama darshana.

Sarga Twenty Seven: Even as the cruelmost Rakshasis surrounded Devi Sita to attack, the eldest of them named Trijata screamed from her ominous dream and described tragic forebodes of 'Lanka Vinaashana' too soon
[Vishleshana of two birds seated on the same branch of a tree-source Mundaka Upanishad]

Sargas Twenty Eight and Twenty Nine: Despite Trijata's 'dussvapna' foreboding shouts of disasters about Ravana and Lanka Rajya, Devi Sita continued to cry shell shocked; however gradually recovered due to her own forevisions of auspiciousness
[Vishleshana on Indra entering Devi Diti's garbha sourced from Maha Bhagavata Purana:

Sarga Thirty: Hanuman witnessed series of Ravana's sweet offers to wed Sita, her no-nonsense reaction, his three month notice, violent threats of Rakshasis, Trijata's forebodings, now desires to appear before her, but how!

Sargas Thirty One and Thirty Two: Veera Hanuman sings Shri Rama Katha exclusively for Devi Sita but she wonders its genuineness!

Sarga Thirty Three: Then Hanuman appears before Devi Sita in his own form and conveys about Shri Rama's welfare, his arrival here, and assures Rama's arrival soon.

Sarga Thirty Four: Devi Sita still unconvinced fully about Hanuman's genuineness he describes Rama's physical features and mental acumen and bravery, pleading his own authenticity.

Sarga Thirty Five: Devi Sita finally concedes Hanuman's genuineness- then he describes Rama's 'guna ganaas', how Rama missed her, Sugriva's help repaying Rama's help by killing Vaali- Sampati's guidance to reach her.
[Vishleskana on a) Vedas and Vedangas b) [Comprehensive Vishleshana on a) Kesari-Shambanaada-Anjana Kumari; b)-Vayu Deva and Anjana Devi-c) Glory of Anjaneya d) Hanuman and Ravanaasura]

Sarga Thirty Six: Maha Veera Hanuman bestows Shri Rama's finger ring to Devi Sita as a memory refresher- the highly excited Devi Sita falls back to her memory screen, as Hanuman assures Rama's arrival too soon!
[Vishleshana on Danava Anuhlaada-Shachi Devi- Indra]

Sarga Thirty Seven: As Devi Sita seeks Hanuman to hasten Shri Rama's arrival at Lanka, Hanuman suggests carrying her and reach Rama swiftly, but she declines giving reasons, especially stressing Rama's invincibility.

SargaThirty Eight: Before handing over her 'choodaamani' to Hanuman, Devi Sita recalled how Rama expressed his concern by using 'brahmaastra' on a crow- Indra's son- pestered her; the crow went from pillar to post and fell at Rama's feet; though Rama pardoned, still had to block any crows's vision of left eye ever since!

Sarga Thirty Nine: Having taken the possession of precious Sita 'Choodaamani' as a proof of meeting her, Hanuman felt elated to display his grit, devotion and resolution to all concerned, especially for the delight of Rama!

Sarga Forty: Devi Sita reiterated what Anjaneya should convey to Rama about her life's threats while handing over hair clip to Shri Rama; Hanuman reiterates his reaching Rama's soonest.
[Vishleshana on the sources of precious pearls from Essence of Soundarya Lahari]

Sarga Forty One: Veera Hanuman devastates Ashoka Vaatika- on witnessing this the frightened Rakshasis surrounding Devi Sita ran away to Ravanaasura stating some Celestial Being had reached at the Ashoka Vaatika to destroy it

Sarga Forty Two: Ravana'sura on learning of a stranger devastating Pramadaavana, despatches a strong regiment of his army of well trained eight thousand rakshasa force named Kinkaraas.

Sarga Forty Three: Mahabali Vayu Putra then devastates 'Chityapraasaada'- the Rakshasa Kuladevatashtana and the rakshasas around it.

Sarga Forty Four: Veeranjanya smashes the expertise of 'baana-prayoga' of the Maha Rakshasa Jambumali, as Ravanaasura decided to utilise the extraordinary skills of archery of the Prahasta Putra to pull down the enemy.

Sarga Forty Five: As Hanuman successfully killed Kinkaras and Jambumaali and demolished Pramadaavana and Chatya Praasada along with inmates, enraged Ravana instructed the mighty sons of his Ministers to face Hanuman

Sarga Forty Six: With successive deaths of his select Rakshasa Veeras, Ravana'sura had wondered that even one Vanara of Hanuman demoralised him as a wake up call and despatched his five Senapatis who too were killed!

Sarga Forty Seven: Anxiously awaiting Hanuman's destruction by the Five Senapatis and army forces, Ravana got negative messages. As he was dismayed, his son Akshaya Kumara, well versed in war tactics, then took his turn.

Sarga Forty Eight: Shattered with putra shoka and humiliation, Ravana finally asked Indrajit to use his brahmastra to end up the menace of Hanuman and save the Rakshasa Samrajya and his personal prestige and fame at stake!
[Vishleshana on Astra Vidya and illustrative 'Mantrika Astras']

Sarga Forty Nine: Veera Hanuman was no doubt impressed by Ravana'sura's accomplishments and his own personalised feelings.

Sarga Fifty: Pretending as bounded by Indrajit's Brahmastra, though Brahma granted his immunity, Hanuman faced Ravana whose Minister asked him why he visited Lanka; he confirmed, he was Shri Rama's messenger.
[Vishleshana on 1. Nandishwara and 2. Baanasura]

Sarga Fifty One: Addressing Ravana, Veera Hanuman detailed Shri Rama's 'Prabhava' and warned that if Devi Sita were in any way hurt, that would be the instant final doom of Ravana and Lanka; Ravana went mad with fury.
[Vishleshana on Ravana's disgraced encounter with Vaali]

Sarga Fifty Two: Infuriated by Hanuman's insinuations of Ravana's record of failures and praising Rama's successes, Ravana'sura orders the vanara be killed- Vibhishana pleads against killing a messenger, as Ravana heeds
[Vishleshana on Ravana's origin, family background and accomplishments in brief]
[Vishleshana on Parama Shiva's destruction of Tripuraasuras vide Kurma Purana]

Sarga Fifty Three: As Vibhishana appealed, Ravana consents to burn Hanuman's tail to display the blazings to Lanka's public. As Rakshasis conveyed, Sita prays to Agni to lessen the heat. Hanuman starts the revenge.

Sarga Fifty Four: Hanuman's vengeful 'Lanka Dahana and Vidhvamasha' as the Rakshasaas were shocked wonderstruck whether he was of Rudra Swarupa or Rama Bhakta! [Vishleshana on Parama Shiva's destruction of Tripuraasuras vide Kurma Purana]

Sarga Fifty Five: Veera Anjaneya's successful 'Lanka Dahana' but concerned of Devi Sita's safety- her 'punardarshana'

Sarga Fifty Six: Hanuman reassuring Devi Sita of soonest arrival of Rama Laksamanas, jumped off from Arishta Parvata to cross the Maha Sagara as vanara pramukhas were waiting anxiously.

Sarga Fifty Seven: As Vayu Putra dashed through thick sky high clouds to return to the ever awaiting Vanara yoddhas, the latter were ever concerned, but his return overjoyed them especially Angada and Jambavan

Sarga Fifty Eight: On his victorious return from Ravana's Lankapuri, Hanuman briefly detailed the happenings, especially Devi Sita darshana, killing spree of Rakshasas, challenge to Ravana, burning his tail and Lanka dhvamsa.

Sarga Fifty Nine: Veeranjaneya makes a fervent appeal Vaanaraveeras like Jambavaan-Angada-Neela- or Ashvini Kumara Putras Mainda- Dvividhaas to relieve Devi Sita from Ravana's clutches for her inhuman harassment.

Sarga Sixty: As Hanuman returned successfully, Angada suggested another collective attack, destroy Ravana and others, bring Devi Sita back, but Jambavan advised to return and report back only!

Sarga Sixty One: On return to Kishkindha vanara veeras plundered Madhuvana of fresh sweet fruits and destroyed it. The incharge Vanara Dadhimukha - Sugriva's uncle - was beaten in return Sargas Sixty Two and Three: Dadhimukha and staff ran away to Sugriva for protection; he wondered if south bound Vanara Sena with Angada and Hanuman was returning with success'!

Sarga Sixty Four: On Sugriva's instruction, dakshina sena reached reporting success- and of Devi Sita's safety.

ESSENCE OF VALMIKI SUNDARA RAMAYAMA

Introduction:

Brahmarshi Narada taught Brahmana Vidyaarshi Pracheta the 'two golden principles of not preaching what he himself would not practise and take to the name and thought of Rama till his death'. The boy learnt the Mantra 'Mara' or to Kill- kill 'ahamkara', 'shadvarga shatrus' of excessive desires, anger, selfishness and avarice, infatuation, ego and jealousy. Constant repetition of 'Mara' turned as 'Rama' gradually developed 'valmikaas' or anthills till his 'atma saakshaatkaara' or Self Realisation and eventually came to be reputed as Valmiki Maharshi. Once when he was bathing in the clear waters of Ganges he sighted two doves while mating but were shot to death by a hunter and the Maharshi cried :maa nishaada pratishthaa tvamagamah shasshvatih samaah, yat krouncha mithunaa -dekam avadheeh kaama mohitam/ Nishaada! There could never be rest for long years till eternity, for you killed the mating birds unsuspectingly! This is the 'prerepana' or the inspiration of the illustrious scripting of Valmiki Ramayana! Maharshi Valmiki asked Brahmarshi Narada: Konyasmin saampratam loke gunavaan kascha veeryavaan, dharmagjnascha kritagjnascha veeryavaan, dharmagjnascha kritagjnascha Satyavaakyo dhridhavitatah as to who indeed was the Guna- Veerya-Dharmagjna- Kritagjna- Satya Vaadi- Dhridha Sankalpa or of the superior traited- brave- virtuous-ever grateful - truthful and decisive on Earth during the Treta Yuga! Ramayana is relevant now as much as in the past -present and for ever as narrated in Six Khandas or sugar cane stems viz. Baala Khanda-Ayodhya Khanda- Aranya Khanda-Kishkinda Khanda-Sundara Khanda-Yuddha Khanda. Baala Khanda comprises seventy seven Sargas- Ayodhya Khanda one hundred nineteen Sargas-Aranya Khanda has seventy three Sargas-Kishkinda Khanda has sixty seven Sargas-Sundara Khanda comprises of sixty eight Sargas- Yuddha Khanda has one twenty eight Sargas. Additionally Uttara Khanda has one hundred eleven Sargas.The current presentation is relevant to Sundara Khanda- the Fifth Piece of the Sugar Cane.

Baala Khanda

The overview of Ramayana by Maharshi in his trance- Valmiki Ramayana of 24000 stanzas was sung by Lava- Kusha kumars of 'Shri Rama -Devi Sita' at a Conference of Muni Mandali before Shri Rama- From the Vaivaswa Manvantara to the Ikshvaku Vamsha at Ayodhya till King Dasharatha to Shri Rama- King Dasharatha-Vasishta- Ministers plan to perform Ashvamedha Yagna and despatch Sumantra the Charioteer request to request Maharshi Rishyashringa- Historic Arrival of Rishyashringa heralding the season to rains- There after Vasishtas gave to the King 'yagjna diksha'- removed evil influences - made arrangements of the yagjna like architecture, construction and maintenance; groups of jyotishadi vedangas; workforce; nata- naatya -nartaka groups,cooking, culinary,construction of colonies, conference Halls etc.Ashvamedha Yagna executed gloriously- Putra Kaamekshi Yagjna- Celestials preparing for arrival of Maha Purusha-Devas and Indra approached Vishnu to desrtoy Ravanaasura as Vishnu said only in human form Rama, Dasharatha's son could do so. At the Yagjna, a Maha Purusha emerged from the flames and handed over a 'payasa patra' to Dasharatha to distribute to his three queens as instructed.As Rama-Lakshmana-Bharata-Shatrughnas were born thus, Indra and Devas manifested 'Vaanaraas' including Hanuman with Ashta Siddhis. Dasharatha distributes 'payasa' to queens Koushalya-Sumitra- Kaikeyi -Samskararas to Ramaadi Kumaras; Arrival of Brahmarshi Vishvamitra at Ayodhya to King Dasharatha. Vasishta assured Dasharatha about Shri Rama's safety in safeguarding the Vishvamitra Yagjna as the satisfied King allowed Rama Lakshmanas and teach Bala-Atibala. The trio reached Angamuni Ashram-Sarayu-Ganga confluence at Malada- Kurusha Villages where Indra hid-the reason was that Indra killed brahmana Vritraasura.-They enter 'Tataka Vana'-Rama Lakshmanas encounter Tataka and Vishvamitra prevails on stree hatya-Vishvamitra teaches most of archery mantras to Rama Lakshmanas-Vishvamitra takes Rama brothers to the 'Vamana Ashrama' -Yaginas spoilt in other ashramas by Maricha Subahus punished by Rama-'Ashramavashis' conveyed about Janaka's Yagjna and Shiva Dhanush- Vishvamitra seeks take heros to Siddhashrama by difficult terrain and explains about adjacent Kusha Desha, King Kushanabha, Apsara daughters and Vayu Deva-By boat from Shonabhadra to Ganges, Vishvamitra explains about flows of Ganges - birth of Skanda- King Sagara's tapasya for sons- queen Sumati begets 60,000 strong sons while Keshini just only Asamanjasa.Sagara planned Ashvamesha yagna, Indra stole the Sacrificial horse- Sumati's strong sons searched bhuloka-and patalas with pomp and noise-Kapila Muni curses the sons in patala to become stones-Asamanjasa goes in search and conveys the result to Sagara who dies- King Asamanjasa gaveup hopes and so does his son Amshuman and the latter's son Dilip. But Bhagiradha takes up the thread and prays to Ganga from skies at Gokarna Tirtha.Bhagiratha standing by foot fingers, invoked Maha Deva-Crossing Ganga, Rama approaching Vaishali asked about Deva Danavas-Having failed to secure Amrit, Diti- daitya mother-seeks to destroy Indra- Diti fell asleep unconsciously, Indra entered her Garbha with his 'Vajraayudha', saw the fully grown up boy inside ,cajoled him saying 'don't cry, don't cry' and sliced the child into seven parts and further to forty nine sub-parts-Vishvamitra stated that they were at that very place where above instances had occurred when there was an Ikshvaaku Kings Kakutstha- Sumati and then proceed to Mithila the kingdom of Janaka Raja!Sumati showed the way to Gautama Ashram en route Mithila.- Entering King Janaka's Yagnyashaala, Vishvamitra introduces Rama Lalshmanas and their acts of glory so far to King Janaka and his Purohita 'Shataananda'-Having congratulated Rama Lakshmanas, Shatananda makes a detailed coverage on the lifestory of Vishvamitra who as a Kshatriya King through tapsyas became a Brahmarshi!King Vishvamitra sighted Shabali Kamadhenu and demands it but was refused; in a battle Shabala smashed the army but the latter took to severe tapasya.Brahma blesses Vishvamitra be the status of Maharshi-Trishanku desires to reach swarga being mortal and Vishvamitra creates a mid- sky swarga with his tapo bala; -Ambarisha performs Yagjna at Pushkara but as sacrifice animal was stolen, a 'nara pashu boy' was arranged - Vishvamitra took pity but to no avail; got entangled instead by co-Munis.-Vishvamitra disturbed by 'Menaka' at Pushkara, then shifted to heights of himalayas when 'Rambha' disturbed too-Ultimatelyeven as Indra ever stole his food, Maharshi stopped his breathing but kept on his tapsya on Brahma, and the latter conferred the title of 'Brahmarshi'! Vishvamitra conveys Rama's desire to show Shiva Dhanush and Janaka gives the background of the Dhanush ; King Nimi was gifted Shiva Dhanush at his son Devarata's wedding; Devi Sita as 'Ayonija' as Janaka tills bhuyagjna.-Rama lifted up the Shiva Dhanush as if it were a toy, straightened it with great ease, held the middle part, and as though of a child play broke into two pieces. That breaking resulted in earthshaking like reverberations.King Janaka said:Once wedded to Shri Rama, my daughter ought to be proud to his life partner and bring in glory to Janaka vamsha! Brahmarshi said: tathaastu!- King Janaka sent a messenger to King Dasharatha to state: Shri Rama in the midst of all of us had managed the control and breaking of the age old Shiva Dhanush and as per my repeated announcements would like to propose my daughter Devi Sita to Shri Rama in a wedding ceremony and therefore request you to attend the same along with your queens and the entire retenue. Besides Rama and Devi Sita, may we also propose the wedding of Lakshmana with my younger daughter Urmila too- Dasharadha was pleased and addressed Vasishtha and Ministers to leave next morning -Accompanied by Gurus, wives and intimate and other relatives and friends, King Dasharatha was happy and blissful and instructed Sumantra to let the royal treasurer carry surplus funds of cash, jewellery, nine gems ahead and for their safety there ought to be fool proof defence arrange -ments. A four day procession with needed halts on way moved on with plentiful food and drinks. On their arrival at the outskirts of the Kingdom, King Janaka made elaborate reception with music, song, dance and ecstatic welcome showers of flowers-In an open Janaka Sabha, Vasishtha narrated the glory of Ikshvaku Vamsha: Brahma Deva the Swayambhu manifested Marichi, from the latter was born Kashyapa whose son was Vivisvaan as the latter gave birth to Vaivasvata Manu. Manu was the foremost Prajapati and from Manu was born Ikshvaku the first King of Ayodhya. Then were highlighted: Pruthu-Mandhata-Sagara- Bhagiratha- Ambareesha-Nahusha-Yayati-Naabhaga- Aja- and Dasharatha- King Janaka explained about his vamsha from renowned King Nimi ,whose son named Mithibeing the ever first Janaka as the ‘vamsha’ known as of Janakas. Then he introduced Kushadhvaja his younger brother desirous of getting his two daughters to Bharata and Shatrughna and declared Mandaveeka and Shutakeerti as their respective wives. respectively.- Public Declarations were made in the presence of Kings, Maharshis, and the public and hectic preparations were made; The vivahika vedika was got ready befitting the status and magnificence of two great Kings. Then Janaka welcomed the brides and bridegrooms.-- After the festivities concluded, guests were showered with precious gifts, the groom's party moved back on the return journey but a terrible sand storm was faced. Parashu Rama arrived shouting ‘Rama Rama’ with terrible anger as the Shiva Dhanush was broken. Dasharatha tried to pacify but with anger, handed over Vishnu Dhanush and challenging Rama to break it if at all possible. An angry Rama not only lifted the dhanush as though Vishnu did against Madhukaitabha daityas but stated that with that very dhanush he could as well demolish Parashu Rama too! An utterly humiliated Parashu Rama was then instructed to return to Mahendra Mountain for ever!- As the return procession finally reached the city of Ayodhya , it was ready with dhvaja-patakas, welcome sounds of drums and music, dances and decorations. Dasharatha along with his sons and new daughters-in-law along with the Queens made an auspicious entry. Later, Raja Kumaras shared royal responsibilities. Rama and Sita became famed as Vishnu and Lakshmi.

Ayodhya Khanda

Considering Shri Rama's eligibility for Ayodhya's Yuvarajatva,King Dasharatha convenes a durbar meeting -King Dasharatha secures public approval for Rama's Yuvarajatva-Dasharatha discusses the details of Rama's Rajyabhisheka with Vasishtha and asks Rama to attend the Rajya sabha- Rama seeks his mother Devi Koushlya's blessings and endears Lakshmana-Dasharatha and Vasishtha ask Rama and Sita to observe fasting before the celebrations of Yuvarajatva- Ayodhya public's joy and pre-celebrations- Villianous Manthara gets upset on Rama's Yuvarajatva and reaches Kaikeyi and provokes and poisons Kaikeyi's mindset suggesting Rama's Vana Vaasa and Bharata's elevation as Yuvaraja- Fully poisoned by Mandhara, Kaikeyi enters 'Kopa griha' - the symbolic Anger Chamber-King Dasharatha seeks to pacify her beloved queen Kaikeyi-Kaikeyi seeks to remind of Dasharatha's promise of granting her of two boons at a battle as she saved him, demands Rama's 'vana vaasa'/ Bharata's Rajyabhisheka-Dasharatha's remorse at Kaikeyi's undue demands even having admitted the boons and pleads with Kaikeyi not to insist but in vain - Dasharatha's intense cryings and persistent pleadings with Kaikeyi but she argued in the name of dharma citing the tradition of truthfulness of Ikshvaku ancestors- Kaikeyi's stubbornness to relent - Vashishta Maharshis intervention fails and Charioteer Sumantra asked for Rama's arrival at the King's Palace-Sumanta arrives at Rama's palace while Rama and Lakshmana on the way to King's Palace enjoying public's joy at Rama's elevation-Excellent preparations in the city for the celebrations by the following day- Rama witnessing heart broken Dasharatha and Kaikeyi's rude intervention demanding Rama's Vana Vaasa for fourteen years in prescribed dress code and of Bharat's Kingship-Rama agrees to her terms and proceeds to Koushalya to break the news - Koushalya's sudden and of tragic news leads to agony and standstill senselessness as Rama seeks to pacify-Lakshmana gets agitated at the turn of the events and so did Kousalya but Rama assuages their badly hurt as Rama explains that 'pitru vaakya paripaalana' ought to be his life's motto and dharma. Rama asked Lakshmana to remove all the preparatory materials like the vessels etc. meant for his Rajyabhisheka since that would be unwanted then-Reacting to remove the material for Rajyabhisheka, Lakshmana argued whether the decision was correct, but Rama once again reiterated as irrevocable - Devi Kousalya, reacting sharply about Rama's decisiveness to undergo vana vaasa resolves to follow him, and Rama invoked the argument of her preserving Pativrata and should not desert her husband-With great difficulty, Rama finally convinces Kousalya to let him leave for 'vana vaasa'and she relented finally.- As Rama left Kousalya with mutual anguish, the Public too was unaware of the tragic development, much less Devi Sita who was horrified-Devi pleads her accompanying Rama for the forest life -Rama dissuades Sita to accompany him for Vana Vaasa-Sita invokes her 'Pativrata Dharma' and insists- Devi Sita sobs heavily and Rama had to finally concede-Lakshmana too insists on accompanying Rama- latter agrees; Rama desires of offering charities- Sita Rama's charity to Vasishtha Kumara Sujyagjna and wife, brahmanas, brahmacharis, servants- Sita Rama Lakshmanas visit Kaikeyi's palace to meet Dasharatha as Nagara vaasis weep away -Sita Rama Lakshmanas approach Dasharatha with queens before vana vaasa; the latter swoons and recovers and embraces them and swoons again-Sumantra criticizes Kaikeyi as the latter justifies-Dasharatha instructs treasure to be sent along with Sumatra for initial phase of vana vaasa; Rama Lakshmanas dressed up in valkals as Vishtha rejects Sita wearing that dress- Dasharatha too rejects Sita wearing Valkava vastras even as Kaikeyi was unhappy, but Rama approves--Dasharatha breaks into cryings, Sumantra arrives with the chariot, Sita receives 'pati seva upadesha' from Kousalya, Rama Sita Lakshmanas bid farewell to all - Sita Rama Lakshmanas perform pradakshinas to Dasharatha and the mothers, Sita Rama Lakshmanas alight the chariot and the crowds get terribly agitated-As the unruly crowd was interrupting the Chariot several times, the citizens were crying away aloud shattering the skies, especially the women folk-King Dasharatha cries and swoons for Rama, distances from Kaikeyi's palace and shifts to Kousalya's-Maha Rani Kousalya's agony asDevi Sumitra assuages Kousalya's tormented psyche-Rama appeals to the Ayodhya public not to hurt Dasaratha or Bharata- the elders of the public insist on following Rama upto Tamasa river banks- Rama Sita Lakshmana's over night stay at Tamasa banks- they leave earliest unnoticed- public felt bad-Ayodhya elders and women got disturbed inability to see off Rama to the deeper forests crossing Tamasa- Ayodhya woman folk cry away Rama Sita Lakshmanas for further 'vana vaasa'- Public of Kosala Janapada throng at the Chariot carrying Ramas whoalso cross Veda shruti-Gomati-Skandika rivers- Ramas arrive at Shringavera pura on the banks of Ganga- stay overnight and Nishada Raja Guha welcomes them-Lakshmana - Guha feel and exchange expressions of sadness-Guha navigates Sita Rama Lakshmanas across Ganga- Rama bids farewell to the reluctant Sumantra- Sita's intense prayers to the Sacred Ganga- after crossing Ganga reach Vatsa desha for night halt- As Rama asks Lakshmana to return back to Ayodhya at least now but Lakshmana protests-Ramas reach Bharadvaja ashram and the Maharshi advises them to settle at Chitrakoota mountain - while they cross Yamuna from Prayaga- Sita prays to Yamuna- their overnight stay at otherside of Yamuna-Ramas reach Chitrakoota-Maharshi Valmiki at ashram- Maharshi teaches Lakshmana Vaastu Shastra- Sumantra reaches Ayodhya- 'aarta naadaas' by public and Dasharatha and queens-Sumantra conveys Shri Rama- Lakshmanas's messages to the parents-Condition of the Ayodhya public and at the state of Rama's distresses Dasharatha extremely- Anguish of Devi Kousalya sought to be assuaged by Sumatra-Kousalya's crying protests against Dasharatha-Regretful Dasharatha with folded hands and prostrations seeks pardon from Kousalya-Dasharatha's confession to Kousalya about his youthful blunder of killing a Muni Kumara - Having revealed details of the Muni hatya, the helpless cryings of his blind parents - Vriddha Muni's curse that Dasaradha would die in son's absence- Dasharatha - Pursuant to Dasharatha's death, his queens cried out, deathwise-praises and music followed- Queens, Ministers and staff- and public vision the body as retained in oil vessels- Maharshi's assemble with Purohita Vasishtha to decide on the successor Kingship- Vasishtha despatches messengers to Kaikeya kingdom to bring Bharata along with Shatrughna.- As messengers arrive at Bharata's place, the latter felt 'dussvapnas' early morning- Ayodhya's messengers arrive at Bharat's maternal uncle's palace, bring gifts and message to return- Bharata Shatrughnas arrive at Ayodhya and found the city as silent and listless!- Bharata reaches Kaikeyi palace and hears the news of his father's demise and Rama Sita Lakshmana 'vana vaasa' and Bharata's rajyaabhisheka!- The rattled up Bharata protests violently and detests- Kaikeyi's evil mindedness- Bharata's open protests against Kaikeyi- Bharata's 'shapatha' / swearing in the presence of Kousalya- Raja Dasharatha's 'antyeshti' / 'dahana samskaara'- Bharatha performs Dasharatha's 'shraaddha karma' and 'maha daanaas'- collection of ashes and 'nimajjana'- 'daaha samskaara'- Shatrughna attacks the villainess Kumbha, the servant maid of Kaikeyi, to senselessness and spares her death! Ministers propose Bharata's 'rajyaabhisheka'- but the latter proposes only temporary authority as Shri Rama ought to be the real King- Bharata initiates the construction of comfortable 'Raja Marga' from Rivers Sarayu to banks of Ganga- As 'mangala vaadyas' were heard on a morning, Bharata felt uneasy and asked Vasishtha to come to Rajya sabha with Ministers and officials- Bharata disagrees with Vasishtha that kingship was Rama's birth right and only a passing solution now- Bharata's vana yatra and night halt at Shringaverapura - Nishada Raja hosts Bharata's overnight stay before crossing Ganga the next day- Bharata and Nishada Raja exchange views of Rama's magnanimity- Nishada Raja extols about the nobility and devotion to Rama of Lakshmana- On hearing details of Rama Sita Lakshmanas, Bharata swooned down, Shatrughna and the mothers cried away, and persisted on the details of the threesome regarding their food and sleeping patterns- Guha showed the bed of 'kusha grass' by which Sita Ramas slept on that night and the 'valkala vastras' left behind- Bharata accompanied by sena, mothers, Munis and public arrives at Bharadvaja ashram- Bharata visits Bharadvaja 'ashram'- The Maharshi bestows Bharata and entire entourage including vast army a heavenly hospitality- Bharata introduces his three mothers and Bharadvaja blesses them and indicates the way to Chitrakoota- Bharata's Chitrakoota yatra described- Shri Rama shows the beauty and grandeur of Chitrakoota to Sita- Shri Rama displays the exquisiteness of River Mandakini to Sita- As the wild beasts and birds running astray of Chitrakoota, Lakshmana went up atop a shaala tree as an army was nearing and Lakshmana was angered- As Lakshmana saw Bharata approaching, he got angry but Rama cooled him down- Bharata and advance party located Rama's 'kuteera' and visited the details inside- Bharata Shatrughnas locate Rama, prostrate and crying- Shri Rama having enquired Bharata's welfare gave elaborate lessons of Kshatra Dharmas on his own- Rama asks Bharata the reason of his arrival as Bharata requests him to return and accept Kingship; but Rama refuses- Bharata requests Rama to reconsider Kingship and informs King Dasharath's sad demise- Rama- Sita- Lakshmanas cry away at father's death- offerings of tarpana and pinda daana - With Vasishtha ahead the three Devis arrive, all the sons prostrate the mothers and Vasishtha too- Bharata broaches about Rama's return & kingship - Bharata again pesters Rama to assume kingship- Shri Rama instructs Bharata to return to Ayodhya at once- Muni Jaabali supports Bharata and his argument that sounded spread of 'nastikata'- Rama asserts that karma and rebirth are the corner stones of 'Astikata'- Vasishtha traces the geneology of Ikshvaku Vamsha and asks to uphold its fame and assume Kingship as the eldest son of Dasharatha- Shri Rama reiterates that 'Pitru Agna' was paramount yet doubled edged that he should undergo vana vaasa and Bharata should rule for that period ! - As Bharata was not ready yet to return to Ayodhya, Shri Rama grants his 'charana paadukaas' and finally bid farewell to Bharata and the entourage-Bharata and the entourage reach back to Maharshi Bharadwaja's ashram and return to Ayodhya-On return to Ayodhya Bharata realises the sad state of the city of Ayodhya-Bharata installs Shri Rama 'Paadukaas' at Nandigrama and administers Ayodhya from there-All the Rishis of Chitrakoota commenced leaving the place due to problems of Rakshasas-Sita Rama Lakshmanas too decided to leave Chitrakoota and proceeded to Maharshi Ashram of Atri and Maha Pativrata Anasuya-Devi Anasuya and Sita exchange views- Anasuya gives gifts to Sita- Sita describes her 'swayamvara'-Thus Devi Sita having accepted the gifts from Devi Anasuya reaches Shri Rama for overnight stay at Atri Maharshi Ashram for further journey.

Aranya Khanda:

Shri Rama - Devi Sita-Lakshmanas felicitated in 'Muni ashramas' - As Rama-Sita -Lakshmanas proceeded into the thick forest, they encountered Rakshasa Viraath- Exchange of hot words by Rama Lakshmanas with Rakshasa Viraatha-Rama Lakshmanas kill Rakshasa Viraatha--Shri Rama-Sita-Lakshmanas visit Sharabhanga Muni's ashrama and after 'atithya' the Muni departs for Brahma Loka- Vaanaprastha Munis approach Shri Rama for safety from Rakshasas and Rama Lakshmanas assure and pacify them Shri Rama-Sita-Lakshmanas reach the ashram of Muni Suteekshna who offers 'atithya' overnight- Next early morning Rama-Sita-Lakshmanas exit Suteekshna ashram-Gathering of innocent commoners and Munis seek protection from frequent- attacks by Rakshasas and Devi Sita enumerates the tenets of dharma-Rama Lakshmanas assure and make 'pratiginas' of Kshatriya kula duty to safeguard the tenets of Dharma-Rama Sita Lakshmanas visit Panchapsara Tirtha and Maandikarana ashrama and after visiting other Muni Ashramas too, visit the ashram of the brother of Agastya Maharshi who lauds the glory of Agastya- Rama Lakshmanas visit Agastya Maharshi and after welcoming them, Agastya gifts 'diyvaastras'-Maharshi Agastya complements Devi Sita as a 'pativrata' and directs-Rama Lakshmanas to construct Panchavati Ashram-On the way to Panchavati, Rama-Sita-Lakshmanas meet the Great Grudhra Raja Jatayu who vividly explains the family background of Jatayu-The compact and vastu based 'Panchavati Parnashaala' of Rama-Sita- Lakshmanas reside comfortably-Happy living by Rama Sita Lakshmanas at Panchavati through Hemanta Ritu and Godavari Snaan-Rakshasi Shurpanakha arrives at Panchavati, introduces, proposes to Rama to wed as his wife-Shurpanakha compromises to wed Lakshmana as he was single there but the latter cuts off her ears and nose-Khara incensed the treatment to sister and despatches fourteen rakshasas to kill Rama Lakshmanas-Shri Rama devastates fourteen followers of Khara- Shurpanakha reaches brother Khara , conveys Rama's killing fourteen rakshasas, provokes Khara to seek revenge-Khara Dushana Rakshasas along with fourteen thousand sena attack Panchavati of Ramas-Khara then noticed dusshakunas like donkey brayings and squeaks of vultures from the sky, but having ignored these, Khara reaches Shri Rama 'ashrama' -As the dusshakunas loomed large, Rama hopes for the doom of Rakshasas and victory for himself- as a precaution, he asked Lakshmana to hide Devi Sita in a cave and got readied for the battle-Rakshasas attack Sri Rama, deva gandharva rishis apprehensive,but the invincible Shri Rama devastates thousands of rakshasas single handed-Senapati Dushana and thousands of rakshasas devastated by singular Shri Rama-Trishira, Khara Maha Rakshas's Senapati exterminated-Fierce battle between Shri Rama and Khara Rakshasa by the usage of their expertise in dhanur vidya-Exchange of heated arguments between Shri Rama and Khara Rakshas whose mace attack defended by Rama -Shri Rama the action hero hits Khara Rakshasa to death and affirms victory celebrated by Celestials and Rishis- Akampana Rakshasa reaches Ravana's Lanka and poisons the latter's mind hatch a vicious plot to lure Devi Sita by a deer impersonated by Mareecha-

Shurepanakha hurt physically with mutilated ears and nose arrives grievously at Maha Ravana Sabha:- Highly alarmed and frustrated Shurpanakha incites and ignites her brother Ravana as Ravana was inquisitive from Shurpanakha about details of Rama-Sita-Lakshmanas as the latter asks Sita to be abducted and wedded to Sita, Ravana once again approaches Mareecha once again to seek the latter's help- Ravana once again seeks the help of Mareecha to kidnap Devi Sita- 'The self shaken up Mareecha appeals to Ravana to very kindly withdraw the plan in view of Rama's extraordinary mental acumen and physical energy- Mareecha explains his erstwhile experience of Vayavyastra and requests Ravana to pardon him- Mareecha seeks to further convince Ravana as Mareecha entered having assumed the form of a Maya Harina or a feigned deer- Ravana resents Mareecha's argumentative pattern and commands Mareecha to get involved in the mission of 'Sitaapaharana' while detailing the plan of abduction- Mareecha issues ultimate warning to the doom of Ravana and disaster of Lanka Kingdom- Rakshasa Mareecha forced by Ravana to assume the deer form of glitter and attract Sita's attention- Even as Lakshmana doubted about the Maya Mriga, Sita was bent to secure it alive or dead and Rama had to yield to her intense wish proceeded with the chase, while entrusting responsibility to Lakshmana. chase- Shri Rama kills Mareecha, no doubt, but the latter shouts for help in Rama's tone causing gitters to Sita- As expected, Lakshmana was taken aback by Sita's insinuations against him who was pressurised to reach Shri Rama- Ravana approaches Devi Sita under Sadhu's garb, familiarises and mesmerises her- Devi Sita introduces herself as the daughter of King Janaka and the husband of the valiant Shri Rama and the cause of their arrival; Ravana proposes to Devi Sita as a co-wife and the latter reacts haughtily- Ravana explains his own background and valor and Devi Sita ignores and discounts- Ravana forcibly abducts Devi Sita who cries away helplessly but Maha Jataayu grudhra tries to intervene and seeks to help- Jataayu warns Ravana to withdraw from the evil act of 'Sitaapaharana' - and otherwise be ready for encounter- Fierce battle between Jataayu and Ravana but Ravana kills Jataayu- Thus Ravana finally concludes 'Sitaapaharana' as Devi Sita was kept under vigilant custody- Rattled and shocked Devi Sita shouts being highly critical of Ravana and his heinous actions- As Devi Sita sought to drop down her jewellery and dress to notify Rama Lakshmanas, Ravana kept vigil by five monkeys, and at Lanka in antahpura by eight rakshasis - Ravana takes Devi Sita to his antahpura and seeks to pressurise her to become his queen- Having suffered Ravana's entreaties, Sita intensified her thoughts on Shri Rama and praised him while angry Ravana instructed rakshasis to take Sita away to Ashoka Vatika and frighten her to surrender- Shri Rama having killed Mareecha returns while noticing bad omens gets concerned about Devi Sita- On a run back to the Ashram, Rama Lakshmanas were subject to innumerable kinds of doubts and reaching there were not able to see Devi Sita and got stunned and terrified- Rama Lakshmanas recalled the events before the latter left for Rama at the false shouts of the dying Mareecha and Rama was truly upset by Lakshmana's grave indiscretion- Shri Rama's deep distress at Devi Sita's disappearance- desperate search for her even addressing animals and vegetation around the ashram in frustration- Shri Rama and Lakshmanas got intensely frustrated with their extensive search for Devi Sita- Rama's anguish - his sustained efforts with Lakshmana- following Maya Mriga's southern direction- recognising fallen Sita's dried up flowers and ornaments- and signs of a recently fought battle!- Lakshmana seeks to cool down the unbelievable rage and anger and recounts the fundamental features of self restraint while getting ready to display his outstanding bravery in human like and Gods like battle!- Rama Lakshmanas witnessed the grievously hurt Maha Grudhra Jataayu who fought for Devi Sita being kidnapped by Ravana the Lankeshwara- Shri Rama performs the 'dahana samskara' of Jataayu - Nasty encounter with Athomukha and blind Rakshasi Kabandha who caught Rama Lakshmanas by its long and surrounding arms within a huge embrace seeking to eat their flesh-By the enormous force of their sheer grit and decisiveness and of mutual consultations, Rama Lakshmanas severed both the mighty shoulders of Kabandha-Tormented by Sthula Rishi, Karbandha got 'vikrita rupa' but he performed tapsya to Brahma for deerghaayu, attacked Indra and vajraayudha's hit raised his stomach over body, now relieved by Rama Lakshmanas - As Kabandha Rakshas's mortal remains secured 'daah samskara' by Rama Lakshmanas, his celestial form reveals details of Ravana vs Sita and advises Rama's friendship with the exiled Vaanara King Sugriva -Kabandha in his celestial form showed the way to Rishyamooka Parvata and Pampa Sarovara, as also of Matanga Muni Ashrama-Rama Lakshmanas proceed towards Matanga Vana and meet Tapasvini Shabari awaiting Shri Rama Lakshmanas all along her life with indefinable devotion.-Having witnessed the glorious departure of Maha Yogini to Bliss, Rama Lakshmanas proceeded along with Pampasarovara in their 'Sitaanveshana'towards Gandhamanana Mountain and meet Sugriva. Kishkindha:On reaching Pampa Sarovara Rama was excited at its natural grandeur especially Sita's absence,Lakashmana solaces- as they approached Rishyamooka, Vanaras and Sugriva. As Sugriva and follower vaanaraas were still wondering, Hanuman felt convinced and confident and directed Shri Rama Lakshmanas to approach their head Sugriva the fugitive King of Vaanaras.Hanuman reached Rama Lakshmanas in a Tapasvi form, complemented Rama Lakshmanaas by their appearance as Hanuman was pleased; Lakshmana briefed Hanuman about their purpose of 'Sitaanveshana' and seeking Sugriva's close friendship and active assistance- Hanuman's assurance for unswerving and dutiful cooperation. Firm establishment of Agni Saakshi Friendship of Shri Rama and Sugriva and Shri Rama vows to kill Vaali to pave the way to Sugriva for unopposed Kingship of Vaanara Rajya .As Sugriva showed golden ornaments secured by his followers as Devi Sita threw away down from Ravana's donkey's chariot vimana, Rama readily recognised, cried away and got intensified up with anguish. As Shri Rama expressed his anguish and anger too, Sugriva seeks to assuage Rama's inner feelings and assures 'karya siddhi' finally; reciprocatively Rama assures Sugriva to regain his kingdom and wife too! Rama assures help in killing Vaali and enquires of Sugriva about the details of their mutual enmity.Sugriva then provides an account of the root causes of his antagonism with his elder brother. As Sugriva recounted as to how Vaali displayed his vengeance against him,Sugriva describes Vaali's invincibility, his extermination of Daitya Dundhubhi,throwing off his dead body off to Matanaga Muni, curse of barring entry of Rishyamooka-Rama's test of throwing off Dundubhi's skeleton. Shri Rama's feat of destroying Seven Taala Trees in a row- Sugriva's challenge to Vaali but gets beaten as Sugriva runs to Rishyamooka- Sugriva vilaapa-Rama explains the problem of Vaali Sugriva identity.Much unlike Sugriva got thrashed by Vaali last time, the party of Rama-Sugriva party proceeded again, enjoyed Prakriti Soundarya back to Kishkindha and secures blessings from Sapta Janaashrama Muni.Fully backed by Shri Rama's confident assurances of victory, Sugriva challenged Vaali for a repeat encounter of 'dwandva yuddha' amid thunderous shoutings.Enraged by the repetitive challenges echoing the 'Rani Vaasa', Vaali got ready for the battle but Tara Devi entreated Vaali for a truce of mutual peace, friendship with Rama and 'yuva rajatva' to Sugriva.Ignoring away Devi Tara's earnest appeals for amity with Sugrivas-Ramas, haughty Vaali resorts to battle with Sugriva, gets grievously hurt by Rama baana and succumbs to earth.Falling before death, Vaali heavily criticizes Rama for his stealthiness, undeserved glory, falsity, and sheer selfishness colliding with Sugriva only to recover Devi Sita, which he too could have with bravery. Shri Rama, having let Vaali steam off his anguish from his deadly fall, replies point by point and fully justifying action in releasing his frightful arrow, yet with sympathy.Vaali calls Devi Tara and Angada Kumara near to his death bed cryingly and Devi Tara's 'vilaapa'.Hanuman seeks to assuage Devi Tara's extreme distress while the latter declared her intention of 'Sati Saha Gamana'. Vaali terminates his life after conveying his death bed wishes about Sugriva and Angada. With Tara's the unbearable distress, Vaali laid down his life. Realising anguish of Tara Devi, Sugriva reacts severely and requests Shri Rama to allow him to die while Tara too requests so- Rama seeks to assuage them. Rama Lakshmanas pacify Sugriva, Tara, and Angada- Vaali's 'dahana samskara/ jalaanjali' by Angada. Hanuman requests Rama Lakshmanas to witness Rajyaabhishekas of Sugriva and Angada, Rama assents and blesses but not by entering Kishkindha. Rama Lakshmana's dialogues at their of Prasravana Giri Cave. Shri Rama describes to Lakshmana about the features of Varsha Ritu. Hanuman prevails on Sugriva to initiate action for Sitaanveshana even before Rama's reminder and instruct Neela Vaanara to assemble the Vanara soldiers to group together. Sharad Ritu Varnana- Shri Rama instructs Lakshmana to reach King Sugriva. Lakshmana proceeds to Sugriva's Rajya Bhavana at Kishkindha with anger yet restrained by Rama's convincing, meets Aangada who in turn seeks Sugriva to somehow pacify. Hanuman sincerely advises Sugriva to withstand Lakshmana's anger besides consolidate action towards 'Sitaanveshana'. Even admiring Kishkindha's beauty, Lakshmana seeks to enter Sugriva's Inner Chamber by resounding his dhanush and the frightened Sugriva advises Tara's help to cool him down convincingly even before his appearance. Sugriva faces the wrath of Lakshmana and Tara continues to soothen Lakshmana by her tactical talks. Thus Tara managed the anger of Lakshmana convincingly and praised of Rama and his stature vis-à-vis that of Sugriva- Sugriva expresses of Rama's magnificence and his mere supplementary assistance. Sugriva instructs consolidating Vanara Sena and proceeds to Kishkindha and inform compliance to him. Lakshmana returns to Rama as accompanied by Sugriva as he was despatched to ascertain as to why Sugriva did not action for Sitanveshana yet! As Shri Rama had sincerely thanked the efforts in mobilising an ocean like Vanara Sena to fight his battle against Ravana, the grateful Sugriva returns back for further action. Now that the full backing of Vanara Sena along with enthused dedication of 'Swami Karya', Rama instructed Sugriva to take off the efforts of 'Sitaanveshana' in the eastern direction. Sugriva as totally absorbed in the singular task of 'Sitanveshana' and having already despatched one force of Vanaraas to 'purva disha' now forwards another batch to 'dakshina disha'. Sugriva who despatched another strong contingent of Vanara Warriors to the southern direction, now commissions a batch to the Western Side along with Sushena explaining probable areas for 'Sitanveshana'. Sugriva explains the significance of the northern direction for Sitanveshana under the leadership of Shatabali of several 'vaanara veeraas'. As Sugriva despatches the Vanara Sena to the Southern direction, under the command of Yuva Raja Angada, Shri Rama gives his ring to Hanuman to possibly show to Sita Devi to recognise and trust him. While despatching the four directional Vaanara Sena, the text of Sugriva's encouraging remarks were as follows- King Sugriva explains to Shri Rama of his own escapades of 'Bhu Bhramana' and hence his vast knowledge and memories of destinations, parvatas, oceans, rives and the geographical detailings! Vaanara Senaas that Sugriva organised to the north-west and eastern sectors for 'Sitanveshana' had returned disappointed with negative results; but from the southern sector were awaited still. Angada seeks to revive the fallen hopes of 'Sitanveshana' of the dakshina vaanara sena, but soon after the tired hungry sena sights a celestial tree-sarovara and bhavana of a Tapasvini whom Hanuman contacts. As Hanuman enquires of the 'vridha tapasvini', she displays her 'bhavan', asks about Vanara Sena and their purpose, invites them for bhojan, reveals her identity, and facilitates them towards the Sea shores. As the prescribed time limit for return to Sugriva was over, Angada and other Vaanara Veeras got ready for 'praana tyaga' but clever Hanuman adopted 'bheda -neeti' or of divided opinion saving them all! Angada- having asserted of Sugriva's dubious nature and selfishness while the task of 'Sitaanveshana' was due to Lakshmana's anger- thus gets readied for 'praayopavesha' along with his fellow vaanaras. Gridhra Raja Sampaaati arrives and frightens Vanaras initially but on hearing about the noble deed of ‘Sitaanveshana’ makes friends - Sampaaati then hears of Ravana’s killing of Jatayu, his younger brother. Angada places the badly hurt body of Sampaaati from the mountain top and describes the details of Jatayu as killed by Ravanaasura- Rama Sugriva friendship- Vaali’s death- and his ‘aamarana upavaasa’. Sampaaati informs the Vanara Veeras as to how his wings were burnt, confirms Ravana-Sita’s place details- and performs jalanjali to his brother Jatayu since known from Vanaras of his passing away. Sampaaati conveys to the Vanara Sena Yoddhas of what his son Supaarshvya informed of Devi Sita and Ravana at Lanka. Sampaaati’s interacts with his preceptor ‘Nishakara Rishi’ and explains as to how the wings of both his and his brother Jatayu’s wings were burnt in a competition with Surya in the latter’s triloka parikrama! Nishakara Muni readily sympathises and wishes recovery to Sampata but instructs him to contribute in the context of Shri Rama Vijaya Karya all his life. Sampaaati eventually recovers fresh wings and enthuses Vanara Veeras to proceed to the farther South and step forward to Lanka. With great excitement and drive, especially fired up by Sampaaati, the vast vaanara sena pushed forward to the Sea bed; then Angada asked the select Yoddhas to express their individual abilities to cross the Sea. As Angada asked select Vanara yoddhas of their ability to cross and return, individual responses were heard- then Jambavan recommends Veera Hanuman for this impossible and daring act. Jambavan along with Angada approaches Anjaneya, recalls the background of the latter’s birth and past glories, glorifying him up with extraordinary capabilities, while preparing him to cross the Maha Samudra. As Hanuman was enthused and readied to cross the Maha Sagara, he dashed forward to Mahendra Parvata and climbed it with ease.

Sarga One

Veera Hanuman had decided to perform such impossible feat that no earthly beings could ever perform as he commenced expanding his head and shoulders. His intention was to move about freely all over the earth and cross the Maha Sagara even with the facility of divinities like Surya-Indra-Pavan-Brahma. He took to such gigantic physique that with that body he would trample mountains with his hold and feet into pieces. As the Mountain Mahendra was subdued, the creatures in the mountain caves were rattled and created screeching sounds. As the Mountain was suppressed, the big size serpents made loud hissing sounds seeking to crush the mountain boulders. The thrust and speed of the jumpings of Hanuman shook up the tall and strong trees in such a manner that heaps of flowers fell right onto the surfaces of the gushing and roaring sea waves spreading heavenly smell all around. The plentiful spread of inherent natural herbal medicines on the mountain ranges seemed to have failed the free flows of heaps of poisons as emitted from the huge serpents. Then, tapasvi Vidyadaraas and Siddha Chanuraas felt that some Maha Shaktis were annoyed and parvataas were being broken down and as such left their abodes along with their woman folks and shifted skyward. Then they soon realised that Vewera Hanuman was seeking to cross the Sea. Meanwhile, Hanuman roared with the strength of thousands of lions as if Vayu deva was creating reverberations along with Varuna Deva across the sky. lāṅgalaṁ ca samāviddham plavamānasya śobhate, ambare vāyuputrasya śakradhvaja ivocchritah/ lāṅgūlacakreṇa mahāñ śukladaṁṣṭro 'nilātmajaḥ, vyarocata mahāprājñāḥ pariveśīva bhāskaraha/ As Hanuman was virtually floating on winds his tail like the dharma dhvaja of Lord Indra Deva was similar. Buddhimaan Pavana putra Hanuman's white beard and the tail curled up and twisted in circles as though the globe of the Surya Mandala was flashed up gloriously and thus the Celestials could recognise him readily especially by the flashes of his long and elongated tail. Khe yathaa niputtululkā uttarāntād viniṣṣṛtā, dṛśyate sānubandhā ca tathā sa kapikuñjaraḥ/ patatpataṁgasam̐kāśo vyāyataḥ śuśubhe kapiḥ, pravṛddha iva mātāṁgaḥ kakṣayā badhyamānayā/ upariṣṭāc charīreṇa chāyayā cāvagādhayā, sāgare mārutāviṣṭā naur ivāsīt tadā kapiḥ/ Just as meteor or rapidly shooting Star creating streaks of incandescence, Hanuman is ever recognised by its tail! Further his Surya like colossal form is recognised by the tail just like an elephant is recognised by the strong iron rod fixed deep on the earth. khe yathā nipataty ulkā uttarāntād viniṣṣṛtā, dṛśyate sānubandhā ca tathā sa kapikuñjaraḥ/ patatpataṁgasam̐kāśo vyāyataḥ śuśubhe kapiḥ, pravṛddha iva mātāṁgaḥ kakṣayā badhyamānayā/ upariṣṭāc charīreṇa chāyayā cāvagādhayā, sāgare mārutāviṣṭā naur ivāsīt tadā kapiḥ/ Just as meteor, known as a shooting star or falling star-a comet or asteroid through Earth's atmosphere, -after being heated to incandescence by collisions with air in the upper atmosphere in its wake- Hanuman's tail too is visible on the sky line. Like the ever mobile Surya Deva, Hanuman too is clearly distinguishable on account of his ever long and mighty tail, even as a King of elephants could be seen clearly by the iron rod with which its mobility is halted. yam yam deśam samudrasya jagāma sa mahākapiḥ, sa sa tasyāṅgavegena sonmāda iva lakṣyate/ sāgarasyormijālānām urasā śailavarṣmaṇām, abhignaṁs tu mahāvegah pupluve sa mahākapiḥ/ kapivātaś ca balavān meghavātaś ca niḥsr̥taḥ, sāgarām bhīmanirghoṣam kampayām āsatur bhr̥śam/ Interestingly as and when Hanuman's colossal body moved farther and farther up on the high Sea, the waves rise higher only to see, stare and admire his massively unbelievable physical frame. The Maha Vegashaali Maha Kapi Huanman like of the height of mountains then raced up across by making forcible ways by smashing such waves and making further way by the might of his huge and brawny chest. As the Kapi Shreshtha with mountain like form was dashing with the speed of 'Vaayu', the high tide waves seemed to have been distressed with panic and what with the vayu garjana and the dreadful atmosphere all around. The fishes of small and huge dimensions were jumping up quite high and deep down quite visible to the onlookers on the shores., especially the fishermen running far away from the shores. daśayojanavistīrṇā trimśadyojanam āyatā, chāyā vānarasimhasya jale cārutarābhavat/ śvetābhragha -narājīva vāyuputrānugāminī, tasya sā śuśubhe chāyā vitatā lavaṇāmbhasi/ The shadow of Hanuman at that time was of the dimension of ten yojanas of width and thirty yojanas of height looking fantastic from the onlookers on the shores. The shadow of His profile if one could follow was similar to the linings of white clouds up above on the sky.

Veera Hanuman stood amidst the Vaanaras and addressed them especially the elderly Vanara Vriddhas thus: ' I am of the strength and speed of Vaayu Deva , my originator and am possessive of endless energy. Vayu Deva is a great friend of Agni Deva! I am blessed with the might of destroying mountains to pieces. Being the step son of Vayu Deva, my single jump could cross Maha Samudras. I could perform thousand parikramas of the thousand yojana spread of Maha Meru Parvata. bāhuvegapraṇunnena sāgareṇāham utsahe, samā -plāvayitūṁ lokam saparvatanadīhradam/ mamorujaṅghāvegena bhaviṣyati samutthitaḥ, saṁmūrchitamahāgrāhaḥ samudro varuṇālayaḥ/ pannagāśanam ākāśe patantaṁ pakṣisevitam, vainateyam aham śaktaḥ parigantaṁ sahasraśaḥ/ With the unimaginable might of my shoulders and hands, I could splash and pound the high waves of Maha Samudras, and create devastation and mahem of high mountains. Lord Varuna's nivasa of Sapta Sagaras [Sapta Samudras: Lavana or Salt, Ikshurasa or Sugarcane juice, Sura or Wine, Ghr̥ta or Classified Butter, Dahi or Curd, Ksheera or Milk and Suswada or Sweet Water] could be violently shaken to distress. Vaanara vriddhaas! Like Maha Veera Garuda the elder son of Vinata Devi is in the habit of 'akaasha parikrama' and my ability is such that I could comfortably perform such parikramas by thousand times. I could follow Surya Deva in his regular daily pradakshinas from Udayaagiri to the Astamaagiri! utsaheyam atikrāntūṁ sarvān ākāśagocarān, sāgarām kṣobhayiṣyāmi dārayiṣyāmi medinīm/ parvatān kampayiṣyāmi plavamānaḥ plavaṁgamāḥ, hariṣye coruvegena plavamāno mahārṇavam/ Surely I have the capacity and aptitude to cross ahead of Nava Grahas, dry up oceans, destroy mountains, and keep jumping across the universe! buddhyā cāham prapaśyāmi manas̐ ceṣṭā ca me tathā, aham drakṣyāmi vaidehīm pramodadhvaṁ plavaṁgamāḥ/ mārutasya samo vege garuḍasya samo jave, ayutaṁ yojanānām tu gamiṣyāmīti me matiḥ/ vāsavasya savajrasya brahmaṇo vā svayambhuvaḥ, vikramya sahasā hastād amṛtaṁ tad ihānaye, laṅkāṁ vāpi samutkṣīpya gaccheyam iti me matiḥ/ Vaanaras! As I apply my mind and cogitate, so do the circumstances and conditions too shape up likewise. My decisiveness right now is to see Videha Kumari's immediate darshan; now, you folks! Enjoy now and rejoice with very quick and most positive results and sweet fruits. I am only comparable to Vayu Deva and Garuda Deva; my strong belief and firm conviction at present is that I could comfortably undertake a rapid run of ten thousand yojanas of distance by air! Believe me my friends, right now, my morale and enthusiasm is such that I could seize and secure 'amrit' from the hands of Vajradhaari Indra or even Svayambhu Brahma Deva himself! Of which avail is, after all, pulling and uprooting the Kingdom Ravana's Lanka!' As Veera Hanuman assured thumping success from his tour of Lanka and back, the huge mass of Vaanaras paid sky high tributes, clappings, and victory shoutings of feverish rejoicings. Then commenced ‘Swasti Vachanaas’ and high tributes to the hero stating: ṛṣhñām ca prasādena kapivṛddhamatena ca, gurūñām ca prasādena plavasva tvaṁ mahārṇavam/ sthāsyāmaś caikapādena yāvadāgamanam tava, tvadgatāni ca sarveṣām jīvitāni vanaukasām/ ‘Maha Vanara Anjaneya! May you carry with you in your epic like tour by crossing the Maha Sagara with memorable success and safe return the heart felt blessings of Maharshis, Gurus, Elders and friends. We would all await your successful travel and very fruitful return; do trust us that your success would provide us all a fresh lease of our lives.’ Hanuman replied: As I would now jump and cross the Samudra, be assured that in the universe none could ever imitate. My initial jump would be to the top of Mahendra Parvata which is replete with trees bearing juicy and sweet fruits.’ Thus, the Maha Kapeshvara reached, selected a few luscious fruits, enjoyed them relaxingly and remembered of Lanka forthwith for the subsequent jump forward.]

Stanza 83 onwards: plavamānam tu taṁ dṛṣṭvā plavagam tvaṛitam tadā, vavṛsuḥ puṣpavarṣāṇi devagandharvadānavāḥ/ tatāpa na hi taṁ sūryaḥ plavantam vānareśvaram, siṣeve ca tadā vāyū rāmakāryārthasiddhaye/ ṛṣayas tuṣṭuvuś cainam plavamānam vihāyasā, jaguś ca devagandharvāḥ praśamsanto mahaujasam/ As the Maha Vanara like was dashing to the southern direction, Deva-Gandharva-Chaaranas from the high skies were performing rains of flowers; this was especially so as Veera Hanuman was dashing on Shri ‘Rama Karya’ and Vayu Deva was accordingly cooperating to shower and reach the Great Messenger! Rishi Munis on earth too were showering ‘veda pravachana ashirvaadas’ too simultaneously. tasmin plavagaśārdūle plavamāne hanūmati, ikṣvākukulamānārthī cintayām āsa sāgaraḥ/ sāhāyām vānarendrasya yadi nāham hanūmataḥ, kariṣyāmi bhaviṣyāmi sarvavācya vivakṣatām/ aham ikṣvākunāthena sagareṇa vivardhitaḥ, ikṣvākusacivaś cāyam nāvasīditum arhati/ The Deva Karya in the context of Anjaneya was intending to perform was in the interest of the famed Ikshvaku Vamsha. In case the Vanara Raja Hanuman were not to have dutifully done then that would have become a target of blamefulness. The glory of Ikshvaku Kula was pioneered by Sagara Chakravarti Himself. In case, Veera Hanuman had not performed the present noble and virtuous deed despite his outstanding ability to help then the posterity would most certainly dishonour Anjaneya! Then Sagara Deva on his part decided to help Anjaneya by giving the latter some rest and diversion and approached the golden coloured ‘Giri Shreshtha Maina Parvata’

[Vishleshana on Sagara Chakravarti: as sourced from Maha Bhagavata Purana:

Harischandra and his wife displayed unprecedented determination and tenacity to uphold Virtue and Self-sacrifice. The Son Rohitasya was brought back to life and was made the King, while Harischandra and wife Chandramati were provided instant places in Heavens. Visvamitra helped to populate the Kingdom and set examples of Dharma and surrender to Almighty. Harischandra’s lineage after his son, Rohitasya was followed by sons Haritha-Champa-Sudeva-Vijaya-Bharuka-Vakra-Bahuka and Sagara (Sa-Gara ie born with poison, as Bahuka’s co-wives tried to poison the boy’s mother). Emperor Sagara performed Asvamedha (Horse) Sacrifice and Indra hid the horse which was discovered by the unruly 60,000 sons of Sagara, nearby the place where Sage Kapila was practising Sankhya Yoga and when disturbed badly, the Sage burnt all of them into ashes by his power. Sagara’s son by another wife, Asamanjasa or Ansuman pursued the search of the Sacrificial Horse and found the Horse where Kapila was in meditation. Ansuman begged of the Sage about the whereabouts of his cousins and was informed that the hooligans were burnt to death and could be brought back to life only when washed by the River of Ganges which could only be brought down to Earth from the Skies. The Sacrifice of Horse having been performed by Sagara, Ansuman began his devotion to Lord Siva to bring Ganges down to Earth. But neither he nor his father Dilipa could succeed in the mission. It was for Bhagiradha to pursue the operation further. If Harishandra gave an eternal memory in truthfulness and integrity, a person of the same dynasty proved as a role model in tenacity. His life’s mission was to bring Ganges down to Earth from Heavens]

Please recall that Lord Indra asked you to close the path for Patala as that that way happened to be a direct route to that from where Asuras as their desperation to enter Bhuloka to create a scare here especially to Tapasvis. prītiṁ ca bahumanyasva prīto 'smi tava darśanāt/ Thus after a long gap of time, I have the honour of repaying the debt and please accept this offer. Kindly oblige me. Then Kapi shrestha Hanuman replied that he was very pleased as his offer to rest was quite welcome and could not be negated in any case, but in the presence of a huge multitude of Veera Vaanaraas, he made a 'pratigjna' and as such he would not be spare much time. Having thus stated by Maina Parvata, he touched Maina with affection, received his atithya with veneration, and flew in continuation of Shri Rama Karya of Sitanveshana. Then tato devāḥ sagandharvāḥ siddhāś ca paramarṣayaḥ, abruvan sūryasaṁkāśāṁ surasāṁ nāgamātaram/ ayaṁ vātātmajaḥ śrīmān plavate sāgaropari, hanūmān nāma tasya tvam muhūrtaṁ vighnam ācara/ Deva-Gandharva- Siddha-Maharshis then assembled and approached 'Naaga Maata' to test Veera Hanuman's endurance and create some disturbance of his psychology and will power and prove to the world that it was not his bravado but unswerving determination to accomplish. They asked the Naga Maata to assume the form of a rakshasi: rākṣasaṁ rūpaṁ āsthāya sughoram parvatopamam, daṁṣṭrākārālaṁ piṅgākṣam vaktraṁ kṛtvā nabhaḥsprṣam/ balam icchāmahe jñātum bhūyaś cāsyā parākramam, tvam vijesyaty upāyena viśadam vā gamiṣyati/ In a truly heinous form of hers with grotesque cruelty, yellow eyes and agry looks, the test would be to create horror and dissuade or at any rate delay Hanuman for long enough time. She addressed Hanuman disgustingly: 'Vanara! You have now entered my face and could never get out of it.' Having said thus she expanded her face further and stood right before him. Then Hanuman replied: You may keep expanding your face as much as you would feel far heavier with my weight and volume, and kept quiet; Surasa magnified her face by ten yojanas while Hanuman doubled the size to twenty yojanas, infact he got irritated and further expanded to thirty yojanas. As she made it forty, he did fifty. Surasa was still on the counter move and expanded upto sixty yojanas. The competition continued till Surasa made a full hundred yojanas. tad dṛṣtvā vyāditam tv āsyam vāyuputraḥ sa buddhimān, dīrghajihvam surasayā sughoram narakopamam/ sa saṁkṣipyātmanaḥ kāyaṁ jīmūta iva mārutiḥ, tasmin muhūrte hanumān babhūvāṅguṣṭhamātrakah/ so 'bhipatyāśu tad vaktraṁ niṣpatya ca mahājayaḥ, antarikṣe sthitaḥ śrīmān idam vacanam abravīt/ As Surasa thus expanded her face up to hundred yojanas, Vayu putra Hanuman very cleverly started shrinking his massive body to the size of just a finger ring. praviṣṭo 'smi hi te vaktraṁ dāksāyaṇi namo 'stu te, gamiṣye yatra vaidehī satyaṁ cāstu vacas tava/ tam dṛṣtvā vadanān muktaṁ candram rāhumukhād iva, abravīt surasā devī svena rūpeṇa vānaram/ arthasiddhyai hariśreṣṭha gaccha saumya yathāsukham, samānaya ca vaidehīm rāghaveṇa mahātmanā/ tat tṛtīyaṁ hanumato dṛṣtvā karma suduṣkaram, sādhu sādhu iti bhūtāni praśaśaṁsus tadā harim/ Then he asserted to the rakshasi swarupa Surasa Naga Devata and thundered: 'Daksha Kumari! My greetings to you! I have now comfortably entered into your mammoth face and your boon of truthfulness to me stands consolidated and accomplished now. Now I should be able to reach Devi Sita very easily and quickly'. So saying, Veera Hanuman had freed himself from the hundred yojana size of the face of Maha Nagini Surasa just as Chandra Deva gets relieved from the tight clasp of Rahu Graha! Then Maha Nagini complemented Hanuman and wished him best wishes to soon meet Videhanandini Devi Sita soon. Then Hanuman started racing forward as though he was tearing through the red, yellow and white clouds while receiving the compliments of all the Beings on earth for having successfully encountered the third difficult issue to on the way thus far. plavamānam tu tam dṛṣtvā śimhikā nāma rākṣasī, manasā cintayām āsa pravṛddhā kāmārūpiṇī/ adya dīrghasya kālasya bhaviṣyāmy aham āsitā, idam hi me mahat sattvaṁ cirasya vaśam āgatam/ iti saṁcintya manasā chāyām asya samakṣipat, chāyāyām saṁgrhītayām cintayām āsa vānarah/ samākṣipto 'smi sahasā paṅgūkṛtaparākramah, pratilomena vātena mahānau iva sāgare/ He was rushing forward by changing his sizes from miniature to mammoth, he faced the Maha Kaya Rakshasi named Simhika. She was happy to see a Vanara and was delighted that he could be a nice prey to enjoy his delicious meat. Thus thrilled at the golden chance, the rakasasi quickly grabbed that that unfortunately for her that was a mere shadow of Hanuman. She regretted her misgiving to catch the shadow but not the real vanara and ruminated: 'aho! I have only caught hold of the shadow of the Vanara as the sweep of winds misled me that the shadow was not the real one. tiryag ūrdhvam adhaś caiva vikṣamāṇas tataḥ kapiḥ, dadarśa sa mahāsattvaṁ utthitam lavaṇāmbhasi/ kapirājñā yad ākhyātam sattvaṁ adbhutadarśanam, chāyāgrāhi mahāvīryam tad idam nātra saṁśayaḥ/ Then Hanuman saw up and down and realised that on the banks of the Maha Sagara and its high tides had shown a clear shadow of a huge figure. He recalled that once before Sugriva did mention that a ghastly encounter with a Maha Rakshasi would be possible on reaching the shores of Lanka. Sa taam buddhvārtha -tattvena simhikām matimān kapiḥ, vyavardhata mahākāyaḥ prāvṛṣīva balāhakaḥ/ tasya sā kāyam udvīkṣya vardhamānaḥ mahākapeḥ, vaktraṁ prasārayām āsa pātālāmbarasānibham/ sa dadarśa tatas tasyā vikṛtaṁ sumahan mukham, kāyamātraṁ ca medhāvī marmāṇi ca mahākapiḥ/ sa tasyā vivṛte vaktre vajrasamhananaḥ kapiḥ, samkṣipyā muhur ātmānaḥ niṣpapāta mahābalaḥ/ Then had mentally confirmed that the Rakshasi was apparently the Simhika Rakshasi. The latter made a huge roaring sound enlarging her from as if from Patala to Aakaasha and ran after Hanuman. The intelligent Anjaneya aimed at her ‘marma sthaana’ and gave a strong but deadly punch. Then as the proceedings of Hanuman’s landing on the Seashore were being closely monitored, ‘Siddha Charuna Mahatmas’ had instantly visioned the scene Hanuman’s punch effect in the deathwise fall of the huge figure of Simsika. There were hailings from them saying: ‘Kapi Vara! I have just performed a frightful deed indeed by virtue of presence and timely application of your mental caliber. Now hopefully your way ahead is of victory. asya tv etāni catvāri vānarendra yathā tava, dhṛtir dṛṣṭir matir dāksyaṁ sa karmasu na sīdati/ sa taiḥ sambhāvitaḥ pūjyaḥ pratipannaprayojanaḥ, jagāmākāśam āviśya pannagāśanavat kapiḥ/ prāptabhūyiṣṭha pāras tu sarvataḥ pratilokayan, yojanānām śatasyaṁte vanarājīm dadarśa saḥ/ dadarśa ca patann eva vividhadrumabhūṣitam, dvīpaṁ śākhāmṛgaśreṣṭho malayopavanāni ca/ The celestial voices further hailed: ‘Vaanarendra! A Being of dhṛiti-dṛishti-mati-deeksha or courage- visualisation - application of mind, and dedication would never face failures in life. Thus having successfully killed Simhika, Hanuman got up to the sky again as having covered the distance of the hundred yojanas of the Sea successfully and reached the Malaya named mountain and saw the gardens there. Then having discarded his varying physical forms of giant to very minute sizes assumed the normal and natural size. Subsequently he stared at the magnificence of Lanka from above.

Maha Veera Hanuman having ascended the mountain top witnessed the scenic grandeur of Lanka puri. Even after crossing the Maha Sagara sprawling a distance of hundred yojanas facing encounters on way, especially Mainaaka, Naagini Surasa and the latest Simhika Rakshasi, Veera Hanuman showed no signs of tiredness or heaving long breaths. On the other hand he seemed to have thought that crossing a mere hundred yojanas should be child's play. The Kapi shreshtha then saw the 'vriksha sampada' alike on the mountain top and more tellingly inside the Kingdom of Ravana. The broad range of the trees were of Sarala-Karnika-Khajura-Priyala-Muchulinda-Kutaja-Ketaka-Sugandha Priyangku, Ashoka, Kovida, Karaveera and so on dancing away by the speed of the winds as all with a range of fresh fruits of taste and flowers of fragrance. The 'jalaashayas' are repleted with hamsa-karandika and such other birds surrounded by seasonal fruits and roots. Gradually, Hanuman moved forward into the Lankapuri of Ravana inside with giant size Rakshasas wearing 'ayudhas'. The buildings are tall, well decorated, and full of citizens as the roads, streets and markets are wonderfully organised. pālītām rākṣasendrena nirmītām viśvakarmaṇā, plavamānām ivākāśe dadarśa hanumān purīm/ sampūrṇām rākṣasair ghorair nāgair bhogavatīm iva, acintyām sukrītām spaṣṭām kuberādhyuṣitām purā/ damṣṭribhir bahubhiḥ sūraiḥ śūlapaṭṭiśapāṇibhiḥ, rakṣitām rākṣasair ghorair guhām āśīviṣair api/ Kapivara Hanuman flew around the city by an areial view of grandeur and majesty admiring the skills of Vishvakarma as if the city was like an woman of rare beauty and figure. The surrounding walls, the central vedis and janasthali surrounded by the Sea with its jala raashis in the background look as if the beautiful the female was draped in a fluttering saree! Lankapuri was full of frightening rakshasas as though patala loka's bhogavati puri of Maha Nagas whose construction was peerless as it was visible to Hanuman. Further the city was like the Bilwa Swarga of Maha Nagas. Indeed, that was the erstwhile place of residence of Kubera the brother of Ravana.

[Vishleshanas on a) Bilwa Swarga of Maga Nagas b) Kubera

a) Renowned as Bilwa Swarga, the lokas underneath the Seas occupy as much an area as Prithvi; the span of Earth is seventy thousand yojanas, height too is as much. The expanse of Patalas too is as much; these lokas are Atala, Vitala, Nitala, Sutala, Talatala, Rasatala and Patalas and each of these lokas has an expanse of ten thousand yojanas. The colour of these lokas is black, white, yellow, red, grey and golden respectively. The inhabitants of these lokas are Daityas, Danvaas and Nagas. Having visited these lokas, Brahmarshi Narada called these Patalas as Bilwa Swarga and even better than Swarga. These lokas enjoy extreme illumination from the 'Manis' (diamonds) on the hoods of the Nagas; Narada said: the powerful rays of Surya Deva provide radiance but not heat during the days, while Chandra Deva gives brightness but not too much of coldness. The inhabitant serpents and Daityas revel in themselves with festivities and luxurious delicacies of food, wine and intoxication for long hours of time without concerns and worries. They enjoy good time by way of swims in Sarovaras, rivers and lotus-ponds and deal with all kinds of valuable possessions. Underneath these Lokas shines Bhagavan Vishnu's 'Tamoguna Rupa' as Sesha Naga named as Anantha, worshipped by Siddhas, Devatas, Devarshis and Daityas alike. Lying under the entire Universe, the mighty Sesha Deva bears the brunt of the Prithvi and the 'Charaachara Jagat'. (Brahmanada Purana)

b) Kubera: Vishrava was the father of Kubera. He married Kaikesi, the stepmother of Ravana, Kumbhakarna, Vibhishana and Surpanakha. Ravana after acquiring a boon from Brahma Deva drove away Kubera and seized Pushpaka Vimana which Kubera recovered only after Ravana's death in Shri Rama's hands. Kubera was stated to have settled on Gandhamadana Mountain at Alkapuri, the city of Treasures and had a grove called Chaitraratha where the leaves were of jewels and the flowers and fruits were of celestial s and angels, besides a charming lake called Nalini. Kubera is stated to be the Chief of Ashta Diks or eight directions and Ashta Loka Palakas viz. Indra, Agni, Yama, Nirruti, Varuna, Vayu, Kubera and Ishana. Kubera, the King of Yakshas and Unparalleled Possessor of Gems and Jewels has two Shaktis Viriddhi and Riddhi as his spouses and his Generals Manibhadra, Purnabhadra, Maniman, Manikandhara, Manisvargi, Manibhushana and Manikar Muktheadhari. There is an interesting reference about how Ganesha had overtaken Kubera's pride vide Ganesha Purana:

By His very name, Vinayaka is a Jnaana Swarupa or the Symbol of Wisdom and Knowledge. Yet, any third party seeking to exhibit their own supremacy - especially by Devas, He could hardly stomach the false superiority. Lord Kubera the King of Yakshas once hosted a lavish feast and among other dignitaries called on Shiva and Parvati; the noblest couple responded that due to their preoccupations, they might have to regret but would ably deputise Lord Ganesha. At the scheduled time and day, all the Devas arrived and Ganesha too. Kubera was so happy as streams of Deva ganas were arriving at Alkapuri and felt proud of himself. Ganesha too arrived and showed off condescendingly remarking to other dignitaries nearby that Parvati Parameshvaras were busy and deputed Vinayaka instead. Then the dinner commenced with great pomp, while the invitees had thoroughly enjoyed the nine course dinner. Meanwhile however Ganesha whose appetite was unending made thousands of servers kept their beelines gasping and tottering the supply lines. As the three crore strong Deva Ganas were bemused witnessing the failure of lakhs of servers and cooks alike, Kubera was put to shame and ran to Parameshvara couple to Kailasha with a fistful of cooked rice by way of his offering to the illustrious Universal Parents of Maha Deva and Maha Devi. Ganesha with dissatisfied appetite too was already present there with His parents.

The benign parents found a gasping Kubera running from Alkapuri to Kailasa cowed down and demoralised while prostrating Shiva- Parvati- and above all to Ganesha too.]

Further Stanzas onward of Sarga Two: tasyāś ca mahatīm guptīm sāgaram ca nirīkṣya sah, rāvaṇam ca ripum̐ ghoram̐ cintayām āsa vānarah/ āgatyāpīha harayo bhaviṣyanti nirarthakāḥ, na hi yuddhena vai laṅkā śakyā jetum̐ surair api/ imām tu viṣamām durgām laṅkām rāvaṇapālītām, prāpyāpi sa mahābāhuḥ kiṁ kariṣyati rāghavaḥ/ As Hanuman witnessed the invincibility of the mighty Ravana's sovereignty of Lanka Puri as protected by all the sides by the Maha Samudra and his cruel rakshasa maha sena, he wondered as to what could the Vanara Sena, albeit huge in number but not by the might and cruelty of the Rakshasas! This place indeed is therefore not a child's play and what could Rama do even! Of which avail would be the precepts of battle like Saama- Daana- Bhedaadi means in the case of Rakshasas! Anjaneya further introspected that perhaps only four Vaanara like Vaali Putra Angada, Neela, and Sugriva besides the self be of some resistance ! Having thus ruminating, Hanuman then decided to ascertain about the most essential need for which he had arrived viz. 'Devi Sitanveshana', her safety and possibly his seeing and contacting her. Then he had seriously and intelligently cogitated: kenopāyena paśyeyam̐ maithilīm janakātmajām, adṛṣṭo rākṣasendreṇa rāvaṇena durātmanā/ na vinaśyet katham̐ kāryam̐ rāmasya viditātmanah, ekām ekaś ca paśyeyam̐ rahite janakātmajām/ bhūtāś cārtho vipadyante deśakālavirodhitāḥ, viklavam̐ dūtam āsāḍya tamah̐ sūryodaye yathā/ ' By which possible means that duratma Ravana's attention be least drawn and be able to secure Devi Sita's 'darshan', discreetly and secretly! Many a time, when caution is disregarded, the very purpose gets defeated and thus failure would have to be confronted. One should take all possible precautions well before plunge into action successfully; just as Sun Rise follows the darkness of nights. As a King having consulted with his ministers and ensures 'kartavyaakartavyas' or dos and don't's, and despatches a messenger, then the latter ought to be worthy of the responsibility and trust with intelligence and diligence. The labors put in for crossing the high Sea and encountering the tribulations on the way should never be spoilt by flippancies and carelessness. There should not be any eventuality by which the close and minutely monitored attention of the guards of rakshasis around be slipped. na hi śakyam̐ kva cit sthātum̐ avijñātena rākṣasaiḥ, api rākṣasarūpeṇa kim utānyena kena cit/ vāyur apy atra nājñātāś cared iti matir mama, na hy asty aviditam̐ kiṁ cid rākṣasānām̐ balīyasām/ ihāham̐ yadi tiṣṭhāmi svena rūpeṇa samvṛtaḥ, vināśam upayāsyāmi bhartur arthaś ca hīyate/ Suppose I assume the form of a Rakshasi, then the maha maayaavi Rakshasis kept as guards would be instantly become aware of that possibility. My intention should therefore be to some how hide myself, dodge here and there, ensure that the Swami Karya be some how saved , wait till the day time be over and enter the interiors of Lanka with extreme caution in a miniature form. tad aham̐ svena rūpeṇa rajanyām̐ hrasvatām̐ gataḥ, laṅkām̐ abhipatiṣyāmi rāghavyārthasiddhaye/ rāvaṇasya purīm̐ rātrau praviṣya sudurāsadam̐, vicinvan bhavanam̐ sarvam̐ drakṣyāmi janakātmajām/ Even as the entry of Ravana Puri is somewhat impossible, then in the course of the dead night enter and search for Devi Janaki. candro 'pi sāvīryam̐ ivāsy kurvaṁs; tārāgaṇair madhyagato virājan, jyotsnāvītānena vitatya lokam; uttiṣṭhate naikasahasraraśmiḥ/ śaṅkhaḥprabham̐ kṣīram̐ṇālavarṇam; udgacchamānam̐ vyavabhāsamānam, dadarśa candram̐ sa kapipravīraḥ; poplūyamānam̐ sarasīva haṁsam/ At that time past the 'pradosha kaala', Chandra Deva arrives with his 'Taaraa ganas' with whose security and courtesy when swans cease to swim in the lotus ponds, Hanuman enters into the Ravana Puri.

Sargas Three and Four

As Hanuman sought to enter, Rakshasi Nishachari is encountered, he subdues her seriously; she recalls Brahma's warning that once a Vanara gives a hit to her, then Lanka gets its doom and lets him in! Then Hanuman enters Ravana's 'antahpura' comprising many palaces but gets disappointed.

As Hanuman in a miniature form sought to stealthily enter Lankapuri which is like the Bhoga Puri like Bilva swarga surrounded by countless poisonous snakes, had the close view of the city with awe inspiring looks. But then he appeared in his normal stature . Then a Vikaraali Rakshasi shouted at Veera Hanuman: Kastvam kenacha karyena iha praaptonam vanaalaya, kathayasveha yat tatvam yaavat praanaa dharanti te/ Nashakyam svalivyam Lankaa praveshtum vaanara tvayaa, rakshitaa Ravana balairabhi guptaa samantatah/ Vanara! Who are you and why are you here! As long as you are alive now, tell me as for which purpose you are here; tell to truth! Are you not aware that entry to Lankapuri is strictly forbidden except with my my permission! Hanuman had sternly shouted: ‘Very arrogant you are; are you not! I may perhaps inform you why I am here; but who are you to interrogate me this way! Your looks are red with anger; but why! Can you not be polite!’ Then Lankini replied: I am the trusted servant woman of King Ravana being the in charge of this gate for entry into Lanka. I feel like beating you so that you may rest in peace for good.’ Then the ever intelligent Hanuman explained to Lankini that he wished to see and enjoy the grand spectacle of Lanka, its of green gardens, excellent buildings and so on, what else! After thus enjoying I would return away’. As Hanuman explained rather unconvincingly with affected innocence, Lankini shouted boisterously and gave a resounding slap to him. Tatah kritvaa mahaa naadam saa vai Lankaa bhayankaram, talena Vaanarashreshtham taadayaamaas vegitaa/ Stree cheti manyamaanena naatikrodhah swamam kritah, saa tu tena prahaarena vihvalaangee nishaacharee, papaata sahasaa bhumou vikritaanana darshayaa/ Praseeda sumahaa baho traayasva harisattamah, samaye soumya tishthanti satvavaanto maha balaah/ Then Anjaneya extended his left hand, closed his fist and gave her a swooning hit. In fact having realised that Lankini was after all a stree, the hit was not that severe to death. The Nishaachari fell flat on the ground and then her face was distorted. Then Hanuman took pity on her yet sought to put an end to her irritating attitude. Then she had slowly recovered, stood up and slowly responded: Maha bali Vanara! Believe me I am the gatekeeper of the entry into Lankapuri. But I wish to confess something significant: Idam cha tatthyam shrinume bruvatyayai bruvatvaa vai Harishvara, svayam svayambhuva datthham varadaanam yathaa mama/ Yadaa twaam Vaanarah kaschid vikramaad vashamaanayet, tadaa tvaa hi vijeyam rakshasaam bhayamaagatam/ Vanareshvara! I would now like to truthfully confess as Svayambhu Brahma Himself blessed and stated as follows: ‘ Whenever a Vanara would approach me and hit me with a strong slap down to earth and subdue me, then do realise that hard days would commence to Lankapuri! Maha Veera! By my interaction and altercation with you do herald the doom of Lanka and Maha Ravana! Soumya! With your ‘darshan’ , Lord Brahma’s statement gets vindicated right now! Sitaanimittam raajastu Ravanasya duraatmanah, rakshasaam chaiva sarveshaam vinaashah samupaagatah/ Tat pravishya harishrashtha pureem Raavana paalitaam, vidhvasva sarva kaaryaani yaani yaaneeha vaancchasi/ Pravishya shaapopahataam hareeshwara pureem shubhaam raakshasa mukhya paalitaam/ Now only due to the cause of Devi Sita, the days of the arrogant and sinful Ravana’s destruction along with his followers is round the corner. Kapi shrashtha! My best wishes now and do please enter Lankapuri now for good.

Thus the ‘Satva Guna Pradhaana’ Pavana Putra Hanuman entered Lankapuri in the night. As the sky was enriched with white clouds, the houses of Rakshasaas of Lankapuri were silent; the houses were displaying Swasti symbols as also of the shapes, representing ‘Vardhamaana Sangina’ or the representation of progress. The houses are with four entrances in four directions known as ‘Sarvato bhadra’ of Safe from all sides and are stated to bring in prosperity from all the directions!

From the interiors of the homes were heard instrumental music sounds, sweet songs, and even ‘swaadhyaya’ mantras of asuras. Some groups of Rakshasas were assembled on high road interjections, mainly extolling the glories the King Ravana, his family members and his close followers. rājamārgam samāvṛtya sthitam rakṣobalam mahat, dadarśa madhyame gulme rākṣasasya carān bahūn/ dīkṣitāṇ jaṭilān muṇḍān go’jināmbharavāsasah/ One might also notice quite a few ‘Gupatacharaas’ of Ravana or the King’s Intelligence persons, some look having taken ‘deeksha, some with beards and twisted hairs, some dressed in hides of cow or deer skins, some with hidden ‘aayudhas’ or weaponry, and some with open arms. Ekaakshaaneka varnaascha lambodarapayodharaan, karaalaan bhugnavaktrāmś ca vikaṭān vāmanāmś tathā/ dhanvinaḥ khadgīṇas caiva śataghñī musalāyudhān, parighottamahastāmś ca vicitrakavacojjalān/ Some of the Rakshasaas are single eyed in their foreheads, and some with varied skin colours; some with their stomachs up to their chins and likewise of varied bodypart combinations. Most of them were armed differently as per their body statures. śatasāhasram avyagram ārakṣam madhyamam kapiḥ, prākārāvṛtam atyantam dadarśa sa mahākapiḥ/ Hanuman estimated that over a lack of foot soldiers were guarding the center of Lanka with varied weaponry. Having thus noted the ever preparedness of the army of Ravana and the range of weaponry that the soldiers were well equipped with proceeded to Ravana’s ‘antahpura’ for ‘Sitaanveshana’.

Hanuman seeking to enter Ravanaasura's 'antahpura' palaces at first witnessed the 'goshaala'. Then the coolness of Moon on the sky along the twinkling stars was prominent. The Rani vaasa stree were either engaged in 'pranaya kalahas' or busy with singing or instrumental music. Then 'Vanara prasiddha' Hanuman witnessed that the male Vanaras were absorbed in 'madya paana' or drinking sessions. Some were witnessed to be busy with romance as the males and females were converesing 'sweet nothings'. Groups of youthful rakshasa females dressed up in their best were agitatedly exchanging views and news of their neighbours. Quite a few housewives were collected on the roof top 'verandaas' and were busy with conversations with their family members. anyāḥ punar harṁyatalopaviṣṭās; tatra priyāṅkeṣu sukhopaviṣṭāḥ, bhartuḥ priyā dharmaparā nivīṣṭā; dadarśa dhīmān manadābhiviṣṭāḥ/ Some married women of middle ages who were virtuous and 'pativratas' were quietly spending conversations of their youthful experiences as also perhaps of the future of sons and daughters. tataḥ priyān prāpya mano 'bhirāmān; supṛītiyuktāḥ prasamīkṣya rāmāḥ, gr̥heṣu hr̥ṣṭāḥ paramābhirāmā; haripravīraḥ sa dadarśa rāmāḥ/ Thus the happenings in the various house holds in the Ravana 'antahpura' palaces were seen keenly with sustained interest as the house holds were busy with varied views and experiences. But: na tv eva sītām paramābhijātām; pathi sthite rājakule prajātām, latām praphullām iva sādhujātām; dadarśa tanvīm manasābhijātām/ Kushaangi Devi Sita was not seen in the entire 'antahpura' of Ravanaasura; indeed she was the product of sanatana dharma, Raja kula janita, parama aishvarya daayini, and parama pativrata! Hanuman was thus badly disappointed, as his extensive search proved futile. Thus kept ruminating as to where she could have been discovered, as there were definite indications that she was certainly in Lanka itself!

Bestowed with the ability of miniaturising and magnifying his physical form, Veera Hanuman had freely moved about in the homes of Lankapuri. Then he landed on the palace of King Ravana. Ravana's residence was a unique example of glitter and glare made of gold and silver, the nine gems of Diamonds, pearls, sapphires, corals, rubies, gomedha and vaidurya, besides huge ivory studded seats, tables and frames. Besides, an excellent pashu sampatti, staggering variety of birds, and flowers and fruits. The 'Asura Yuvatis' are ever contented with the pleasures of life with ornaments, body scents, affluence, are keep mutual comparisons and competitions making much noises in gatherings in gardens and private and public places of glitter and pomp against the overall background of the ever gushing noises of the Sea waves. 'Bheri, Shankha and Mridanga Naada' cadences add to the overall enthusiasm, especially on festivals when homa-puja-congregations are galore. The buzz of chariots, elephants, horses and streams of Ministers, Sena patis, Commanders, purohitas, select visitors by special invitations to the Ravana's palace is a normal routine. On gazing at the places ,scenes and happenings at the Palace, the vega shaali and paraakrami Hanuman jumped down to Palace Corridors or the outer spread passages. *atha meghapratīkāśam kumbhakarnaiveśanam, vibhīṣaṇasya ca tathā pupluve sa mahākapiḥ/ mahodarasya ca tathā virūpākṣasya caiva hi, vidyujjihvasya bhavanam vidyunmāles tathaiva ca, vajradamṣṭrasya ca tathā pupluve sa mahākapiḥ/*He then entered the Kumbhakarna and Vibhishana Mahals, besides the rows of Mahodara, Virupaksha, Vidyujihva and Vidyunmaali residences. Jumping from the residences to residents, Vegashali Maha Kapi Hanuman graced the living places of Vajradamshttra, Shuka, Buddhimaan Sarana's residences. Then the Vaanara Yudhapati Kapishreshtha Mahanjaneya jumped over to the residences of Indrajit- on to Jambumaali and Sumaali. Hopping forward, the Maha Kapi peeped in to the homes of Dhumraksha-Sampaati-Vidyudrupa- Bheema-Ghana-Vighana-Shukanaadha-Chakra-Shatha-Kapata- Hrasvakarna-Damshttra-Lomasha-Yuddhonnematta-Mattha-Dhvajagreeva-Vidhyujihva-Dvijahva-Hastimukha-Karaala- Pishaacha-Shonitaaksha and so on. That was how Veerajaneya hopped and skipped the prosperous residences of the prominent Rakshasa Veeras. *rāvaṇasyopaśāyinyo dadarśa harisattamaḥ, vicaran hariśārdūlo rākṣasīr vikṛteṣaṇāḥ/ sūlamudgara - hastāś ca śakto tomaradhārīṇīḥ, dadarśa vividhān gulmāms tasya rakṣahpater grhe/*Skipping and hopping Vaanara Shiromani Anjaneya then approached the very Living Interior of Ravana's actual chamber and witnessed the gate protecting groups of Maayaavi Rakshasas with grotesque eyes and stealthily looks armed with 'shula-mudgara-shakti-tomaar- and such other astra-shastras.' Besides, the Maha Rakshasas are swift and ever-ready for instant action with well trained horsemen and horses. There along side, superior and well draped 'gaja raajaas' making periodical 'megha garjanas' mounted by ever alert and well equipped elephant riders seated under huge and colourful umbrellas are quick witted and able . Veera Hanuman stared and was thoroughly impressed at the gatekeepers of Ravana and their instant action of defence and offence. Then having peeped inside in the minutest form, Pavanaputra Anjaneya witnessed seating and relaxing cushioned furniture, creeper homes, photo galleries, kreeda bhavanas, and luxury extravagances. sa mandaratalaprakhyam mayūrasthānasamkulam, dhvajayaṣṭibhir ākīrṇam dadarśa bhavanottamam/ anantaratnanicayam nidhijālam samantataḥ, dhīraniṣṭhitakarmāntam grham bhūtapater iva/ He was amazed to vision 'Ravana Mahal' of the height of Mandaraachala, equipped with corners where colourful peacocks dance away by spreading their wings of flashing colors, speards of high dhajas of glittering precious stone studs, and such feasts of colours of ' Indra Dhanush of Vibgyor- [violet-indigo-blue-green-yellow-orange-and red] was akin to 'Bhutanaaddha Bhavan' or of the kind of Maheshwara or Kubera. Hanuman had thus entered the interior most of Ravana's, partly out of curiosity but most essentially for 'Devi Sitanveshana'!

He perched up as it was like on the high clouds with midboggling looks as it were a 'bhutala swarga' with unusual grandeur. This celestial 'vimana' was like what was adored by a series of lightning garlands with the glitter of diamonds. Just as the clouds enriched by the 'Parvata shikhara dhaatu sampada', besides the causation of planets and of the Moon, the Pushpaka Vimana of Lanka was like what resembles on the high skies being unique in bhutala srishti as up on the celestial zones. In side the Pushpaka vimana, there were 'sveta bhavanas' or high pure white palaces with built in 'sarovaras' and the ever floating lotus ponds. puṣpāhvayaṁ nāma virājamānam; ratnaprabhābhiś ca vivardhamānam, veśmottamānām api coccamānam; mahākapis tatra mahāvīmānam/ That precisely what Hanuman saw for himself and alighted into being the world renowned Pushpaka Vimana, which by virtue of the immortal 'mani ratnas' as studded into has the facility of getting air borne, and is very well respected by celestial beings too, despite the reality of stationed right on earth in Ravana's Lanka of glory. pravārajāmbūnadapuspapakṣāḥ; salīlam āvarjitajihmapakṣāḥ, kāmasya sākṣād iva bhānti pakṣāḥ; kṛtā vihaṁgāḥ sumukhāḥ supakṣāḥ/ niyuḥyamānās ca gajāḥ suhastāḥ; sakesarās cotpalapatrahastāḥ, babhūva devī ca kṛtā suhastā; lakṣmīs tathā padmini padmahastā/itīva tad gr̥ham abhigamya śobhanam; savismayo nagam iva cāruśobhanam, punaś ca tat paramasugandhi sundaram; himātyaye nagam iva cārukandaram/ This Pushpaka Vimana meant for 'vihanga yatra' or airborne travels appears as piloted by Kama Deva Manmatha himself, with wings made of the glitter of gold and diamonds and other gems. The built in sarovaras of the Pushpaka Vimana are such that the freely moving elephant kings are ever ready and commissioned with the sacred duty of performing abhisheka to Maha Lakshmi herself assuming the ready form of Gaja Lakshmi as Her hands are adorned by fresh and fragrant lotuses!

Veera Hanuman who indeed was the true symbol of 'Paramaarth Chintana' and of pure heartedness retrospected once again as to where indeed be Devi Sita right now!

Essence of Sarga Eight begins:

Veera Hanuman thus realizing the glamor and glory of the Pushpaka Vimana had revisited it once again with a view to appreciate its detailed workmanship of Mayaasura. Was it Ravanaasura who had in the past performed deep tapasya with singlemindedness and then only could secure the authority to possess it, wondered Hanuman. Indeed the reality of the construction was no doubt a gifted perseverance of the producer but equally so was the unique fact of obtaining its ownership. Thus the tributes are readily applicable to its creator and equally so to the owner Manah samaadhaaya tu sheeghra gaaminam duraasadam maarutatulyagaaminam, mahaatmaanam punya kritaam mahardhinaam yashasvinaam agrayamudaamivaalayaam/ This Pushpaka follows the thoughts of the user as per its inner thoughts of the owner be it in terms of its speed and direction. This ownership could be possible only the maha tapasvis, and punyakaari mahatmaas. In the past before Ravana succeeded to secure its ownership, that was always in the domain and control of 'Mahadananda Praapti Tapasvis' and Mahatmaas.

Sarga Nine

In the process of 'Devi Sitaanveshana' in the Pushpaka Vimana of Ravana's residence, Hanuman witnessed countless 'strees' of youthful charm being playful inside; but wondered as to why had Ravana forcefully abducted Sita, despite his reputation of never forcing a woman but willingly married him!

Having affirmed that only Maha Tapasvis could have accomplished the ownership of the Pushpaka Vimana, Hanuman realised that its length was as much as hundred yojanas, while its breadth would be one half of it. mārgamāṇas tu vaidehīm sītām āyatalocanām, sarvataḥ paricakrāma hanūmān arisūdanaḥ/ caturviṣāṇair dviradais triviṣāṇais tathaiva ca, parikṣiptam asambādham rakṣyamāṇam udāyudhaiḥ/ While thus keenly observing the details of the ‘maha bhavana’ of the Pushpaka, Hanuman was searching even a suspicion, let alone a hint, of Devi Sita’s whereabouts. As thus he was searching, he realised that Ravana’s own interior most ‘nija sthaana’ or his very place of living. That actual place of his residing was full of his own raja kanyas or royal damsels just as in the case of the interiors of Kubera, Chandra or Indra residing there with comfort and confidence. brahmaṇo 'rthe kṛtaṁ divyaṁ divi yad viśvakarmaṇā, vimānaṁ puṣpakaṁ nāma sarvaratnavibhūṣitam/ pareṇa tapasā lebhe yat kuberaḥ pitāmahāt, kuberaṁ ojasā jivā lebhe tad rākṣaseśvaraḥ/ Pavan Kumara then realised that Vishvakarma had originally manifested this Pushpaka Vimana for Brahma. This was obtained by Kubera by means of rigorous and long tapasya but Ravanaasura defeated Kubera and thus was seized from his cousin brother. In the course of his further movements of the Pushpaka, Hanuman was seated for a while: tatrasthaḥ sa tadā gandham pānabhakṣyānnasambhavam, divyaṁ saṁmūrchitaṁ jighran rūpavantam ivānilam/ sa gandhas taṁ mahāsattvaṁ bandhur bandhum ivottamam, ita ehīty uvāceva tatra yatra sa rāvaṇaḥ/ There was a wide spread of of bakshya-bhojya-paaneeyas. Later, a damsel appeared to have signalled a direction where Ravana was to be seated. That was pointed out as a ‘haveli’/ mansion or a meeting hall, which was immensely liked by Ravana. Patrapushpopahaarena kalmaasheemiva suprabham, manaso modajananeem varnasyaapi prasaadhinaam/ That was the earlier mansion of Ravana where all the wishes of the select invitites were fulfilled by Ravana just as Maharshi Vasishtha fulfilled the Kama dhenu famed as Shabala.

[Vishleshana on Maharshi Vasishtha and Kama Dhenu Shabala:

Maharshi Vasishtha welcomed King Vishvamitra and formally offered fresh fruits and ground grown tubular vegetables and enquired of the happiness and general welfare of his subjects. Similarly the King enquired of the welfare of the Sage, and the inmates of the ashram.. Then Vasishtha smilingly stated: ātithyaṁ kartum icchāmi balasyāsyā mahābala, tava caivāprameyasya yathārham saṁpratīccha me/ satkriyāṁ tu bhavān etāṁ pratīcchatu mayodyatām, rājāṁs tvam atithiśreṣṭhaḥ pūjanīyaḥ prayatnataḥ/ Maharaja! May I offer appropriate lunch to you and your several follower armymen, as my duty is to provide ‘atithya’ as behoved of a King and followers. The King responded stating that the honours as from an ashram have been more than fulfilled already; more so it was time for his departure. But as the host insisted the King replied: bādham ity eva gādheyo vasiṣṭhaṁ pratyuvāca ha, yathā priyaṁ bhagavatas tathāstu munisattama/ King Vishvamitra as per the insistence of Vasishtha Muni replied that he ought to obey the instruction of Maharshi Vasishtha. Then Vasishtha asked his ‘mind born homa dhenu’ named Shabali the celestial cow and requested that she might provide such food as would behove of a famed King and his countless followers. yasya yasya yathākāmaṁ śaḍraseṣv abhipūjitaṁ, tat sarvaṁ kāmadhug divye abhivarṣakṛte mama/ rasennānnena pānena lehyacoṣyeṇa saṁyutam, annānām nicayaṁ sarvaṁ sṛjasva śabale tvara/ ‘Divya Kamadhenu’! entreated Vasishtha, ‘please get ready with ‘shadrasa

Do accept the charity from my kingdom about a lakh of prize cows yielding barrels of fresh and sweet milk due to my being the overall king of my subjects. It is out of the same authority of my being the King of this kingdom again, let me exchange Shabala as per the established principle of kingship. Vasishtha replied : Just as a dharmika parayana could never be severed from his inner consciousness, I too could never be aloof from me since my ‘havya-kavya kaaryas’ in my daily routine would certainly get affected severely. My routine of agnihotra-bali-homa- swaaha-vashatkaara and all the practice of related vidyas should get adversely disturbed too in her absence. In short, my very existence is my possession of Shabala. King Vishvamitra then offered fourteen thousand elephants, eight hundred golden chariots each of which adorned with four each of mighty horses of excellent nativity, in addition to which eleven thousand horses of the best possible parts of the contemporary kingdoms too, apart from one crore cows of sweet milk bearing breed. Maharshi Vasishtha declared: King Vishvamitra! I will not part with Shabala as this is my jewel, my prosperity, my life and my totality! Sargas 52 and 53 of Valmiki Bala Ramayana]

Stanza 29 onward continued: tām śokanāśinīm divyām śriyaḥ saṁjānanīm iva/ indriyāṇīndriyārthais tu pañca pañcabhir uttamaiḥ, tarpayām āsa māteva tadā rāvaṇapālītā/ svargo ’yaṁ devaloko ’yaṁ indrasyeyam purī bhavet, siddhir veyam parā hi syād ity amanyata mārutiḥ/ Hanuman then saw the ‘Shaala’ or the entrance hall of Ravana’s residence which was literally the ‘Lakshmi Nivasa’ where the ‘Panchendriyas’ are bound to be thoroughly contented. He wondered and argued within himself whether it was Indrapuri Swarga or Brahma Loka itself beyond one’s comprehension!

The jingling sounds of their glittering body ornaments were supplemented by the screeches of swans in the water ponds and the buzzing noises of groups of honey bees there around. Ravana’s ‘haveli’ streees as felt by Hanuman were of the grandeur of Sharat kaala sky’s ‘nakshatra mandalis’ and the charming females were like the Chandra in the middle. Subsequent to the session of madhupaana, the groups of sundaris had initiated ‘nritya-gaana-kreeda’ with their fragrant and long head hairs were let loose or flying away all around their well shaped bodies swirling around in dances step by step, even as the fragrant garlands as adorned by the soft necks again with the tinkling clinks of their body. mṛduṣv aṅgeṣu kāsām cit kucāgreṣu ca saṁsthitāḥ, babhūvur bhūṣaṇānīva śubhā bhūṣaṇarājayaḥ/ amśukāntās ca kāsām cin mukhamārutakampitāḥ, upary upari vaktrāṇām vyādhūyante punaḥ punaḥ/ tāḥ pātākā ivoddhūtāḥ patnīnām ruciraprabhāḥ, nānāvarṇasuvārṇānām vaktramūleṣu rejire/ Some of the ‘yuvatis’ in the course of their ecstasy, happen to display the softness of their body parts while also expose the firmness of their peeping out breasts with their swinging neck ornaments. Thus Hanuman came to the decisive conclusion that a Devi of the standing and status of Sita the loyal wife of Shri Rama, could never ever become Ravana's wife. None of Ravana's wives was such as not originated from enviable family background, or unintelligent, or neglected, or a weakling by physique, unattractive, or of loose character or conduct. punaś ca so 'cintayad ārtarūpo; dhruvaṁ viśiṣṭā guṇato hi sītā, athāyam asyām kṛtavān mahātmā; laṅkeśvaraḥ kaṣṭam anāryakarma/ Having introspected so, Hanuman wondered as to why Lankeshwara had perpetrated the hateworthy, deliberate, and even desperate act of forcefully abducting the 'Pativrata shiromani' Sita Devi!!

As ‘uttama kula stree shiromanis’ originating from the background of yaksha-naaga-gandharva-deva daanavas, were mildly pressing his shoulders and applying ‘sugandha chandana’, Ravana’s sleep was soothened further and faster. dadarśa sa kapis tasya bāhū śayanasaṁsthitau, mandarasyāntare suptau mahārḥī ruṣitāv iva/ Kapivara Hanuman kept on staring Ravana’s high and mighty shoulders for long as though an ‘ajagara’ or python was resting in the deep caves of Mandaraachala Parvata! As the Rakshasa Raja Ravana’s broad and well stretched face was breathing, his nostrils were fast emanating the mix of ‘sugandhas’ of ‘naaga kesaari pushpas’, ‘anna rasa’ of sumptuous food of bhakshya-bhojya- lehya-choshya- madiraa paaneeeyas, as spread all around. The scintillating ‘manikarna kundalas’ decorated on the his ears enhance the brightness of his broad face, while his broad chest was besmeared by chandana, further boosted the glitter of his long and dangling necklaces. His darling wives were then witnessed by Hanuman as they were lost in deep sleep at the feet of Ravanaasura. Vaanara yudhapati Anjaneya then kept on gazing intently at each of the faces of his wives again and again; they were all with ‘ksheena katipradeshas’ or of slender waists, exhausted with ‘rati kreedaas’, lying in deep slumber. Vidhata Brahma appeared to have created their body parts with care and caution as evidenced in the course of their dances with ‘nava rassas’ of ‘shringara’ or romance, ‘bheebhatsa’ or disgust, ‘roudra’ or reactionary with anger, ‘bhayanaka’ of hissing of cobras, ‘veera rasa’ or of awe and anger, ‘haasya’ or of humor, ‘karuna’ or kindness and devotion and ‘shanti’ or union with the lover! She was the most beloved of Ravana and the ‘Antahpura Swamini’. Rupa-Youvana- Sampada-Vastra Vibhushita Devi Mandodari was mistaken by Pavana Kumara Hanuman was in bliss for all his adventures had ultimately reaped in great success! He kissed his long tail with untold joy and started jumping and leaping, dancing and playing!

[Vishleshana on Devi Mandodari

Devi Mandodari was the daughter of Mayasura and Hema, a noted pativrata of the ranking of Ahalya, Tara, Anasuya, Sumati and Draupadi. She was reputed for faithfulness, selflessness, innocence, righteousness, besides of convincing capacity which of course failed in the case of her husband Ravana much as in the case of Tara. Her trait of carrying conviction was well proven as in the case of her own brothers named Mayavi and Dundubhi who were always at loggerheads. But her capability of gentleness, and honesty were stated to be unparalleled. Ravana was no doubt an admirable being, a glorious warrior, a reputed Shiva bhakta, excellent family background and a person of dharmic nature who never forced women to bed. But he failed in the case of Devi Sita as that faced his doom along with his followers. She pleaded her husband, who incidentally was younger to her husband, just as Devi Tara did to Vaali but failed. Indeed she had the rudimentary virtue of a proven Pativrata with the proverbial Puranic features of an ideal life partner being a servant like service, a mother like affection, an ever comforting woman of charm, beauty and kingly family origin with prosperity, besides dedication, humility, forgiveness, compassion and the patience as of Bhudevi!]

Having discarded his natural suspicion that the Devi identified was Mandodari but not of Devi Sita continued with his further search. He flashed back about his thoughts and felt firmly: After all Devi Sita was forcibly taken away from Shri Rama and in that state of extreme disgust, she would neither take food, let alone ornament herself, seek to get better dressed and least of all take to 'madiraapaana'! She would never ever be seated near any body else in her life, even if it were other Devatas or Ishvara Himself! Indeed that ought to be another 'sthree' who was mistaken seated comfortably in the 'madhu shaala'. In that place, dances, music, 'madya paana', 'shringara' were all in excellent progress and Lankeshvara was asleep following 'rati kreedas' like a single 'vrishabha' amidst numberless cows. Hanuman had just witnessed the type of feast of food of fresh meat of animals like pigs, deers, goats and sheep as also of birds of peacocks, chicken, doves, besides of fishes, apart from 'madya paana' of choicest wines, before-along-and followed by sumptuous dinner, dance and music sessions, leading to romance, lust and sleep. evam sarvam aśeṣeṇa rāvaṇāntaḥpuram kapiḥ, dadarśa sumahātejā na dadarśa ca jānakīm/ nirīkṣamāṇas ca tatas tāḥ striyaḥ sa mahākapiḥ, jagāma mahatīm cintām dharmasādhvasaśaṅkitāḥ/ In this manner, Kapi shreshtha Hanuman searched the nooks and corners of the antahpura of Lankaadhipati but was still there was no trace of Devi Sita anywhere. As Hanuman kept on the search, he was a little concerned in his inner thoughts about the possible impact of witnessing those flashes of the atmosphere of food feasts- music-dance-drunkenness-bodily desires of love-lust-streets- sleep and so on. paradārāvarodhasya prasuptasya nirīkṣaṇam, idam khalu mamātyartham dharmalopam kariṣyati/ na hi me paradārānām dṛṣṭir viṣayavartinī, ayam cātra mayā dṛṣṭaḥ paradāraparigrahaḥ/ Indeed, even the very thoughts of women and of staring them when they were asleep would dilute the concepts of virtue!

Hanuman further felt so far he was immune of the thoughts of bodily desires while he recalled as to how Ravana was unable to resist the thoughts of Devi Sita! Then Hanuman realised that his mission of ‘Sitanveshana’ ought not to be tempered with and weakened! Then his inner thoughts were stirred up again: mano hi hetuḥ sarveṣāṃ indriyāṇāṃ pravartate, śubhāśubhāsv avasthāsu tac ca me suvyavasthitam/It indeed the mind which is the root cause of raga-dveshas originated by panchidriyas of seeing, hearing, smelling, feeling and touching. But Hanuman expressed with determination and declared: nānyatra hi mayā śakyā vaidehī parimārgitum, striyo hi strīṣu dṛśyante sadā saṃparimārgaṇe/yasya sattvasya yā yonis tasyām tat parimārgyate, na śakyam pramadā naṣṭā mṛgīṣu parimārgitum/tad idam mārgitam tāvac chuddhena manasā mayā, rāvaṇāntahpuram saram dṛśyate na ca jānakī/ ‘ After all, Devi Sita would necessarily have to be searched only in the groups of other women only as she is that race only but not among the groups of female deers! That is why I have assumed clean heart and thoughts and made sincere efforts inside the Ravanaasura’s antahpura, most certainly not to stare the females, nor at the food festival, music and dance sessions, their amorous affairs and such activities! Thus being assured of his own thoughts of the inner self, Anjaneya resumed his sincere efforts of ‘Devi Sitaanveshana’.

Sarga Twelve

Hanuman in his remote thoughts wondered and was even concerned of Devi Sita’s very existence but quickly recovered from such apprehensions resumed ‘Sitanveshana’ yet again with confidence and belief!

Having exited Ravana’s Raja bhavana, Hanuman visited gradually the ‘Lataamandapa’ the ‘chitrashala’ and the ‘Vishrama griha’ too in the mid night hours. Then he felt: sa cintayām āsa tato mahākapiḥ;

priyām apaśyan raghunandanasya tām, dhruvaṁ nu sītā mriyate yathā na me; vicinvato darśanam eti maithilī/ sā rākṣasānām pravareṇa bālā; svaśīlasamrakṣaṇa tat parā satī, anena nūnam pratidūṣṭakarmanā; hatā bhaved āryapathe pare sthitā/ Raguhunandana's priyatama Sita, is not to be seen anywhere and it appears that Mithileshvari might not be alive. Indeed, she followed the principles of the Arya Maarga, dedicated to 'sadaachara pravartana', and it is likely the cruel Rakshasa Raja Ravana might have ended her existence. Or else, the servants of Ravana are 'virupa vikrita vivarchaas' with frightening eyes and looks and out of sheer fright of them, Janaka Nandini might have collapsed to her end. Neither the 'purushadha phala' of succeeding the vision of Devi Sita was successful, nor the time limit of return to kishkindha as decided by King Sugriva would be available now as he should punish me mercilessly. I have had most meticulously searched all possible places and my labours have turned wasteful; I had explored and rummaged around the antahpura, keenly examined all the streets. When I might return back to Angada, Jambavanta and the other stalwarts back to the other shore, what could I reply to them excepting accepting my misadventure! anirvedaḥ śriyo mūlam anirvedaḥ param sukham, bhūyas tāvad viceśyāmi na yatra vicayaḥ kṛtaḥ/ anirveda hi satatam sarvārtheṣu pravartakaḥ, karoti saphalam jantoḥ karma yac ca karoti saḥ/ tasmād anirveda kṛtam yatnam ceṣṭe 'ham uttamam, adṛṣṭāms ca viceśyāmi deśān rāvaṇapālitaṁ/ Anjaneya thus having been defeated of the purpose realised: Any Being once lost the objective should not lose the spirit of enthusiasm but endeavor again and again [like the proverbial spider weaving threads from its mouth]; thus relent effort of 'Sitanveshana' ought to resume. Passion and dedication should lead to success. Therefore, let me pull up my patience and continue my effort, asserted Ananjanya.

Karmayedhikaaraste maa phaleshu kadaachana, maa karma heturbhuuh maate sangosta karmani/ Partha! You do only the liberty to 'do' but never demand the return fruits about which you have no control. Yet never abstain from the performance surely expected of you. 'Karma Phala' is as per the decision of the Almighty. What ever is decided as per destiny shall doubtless be awarded to you. Never hesitate to accept by way of self desire or by the misleading advice of the public. The very feeling of disappointment creates suspicion and self repudiation. This tends to lead to frustration which is the anti-thesis of contentment and thus further leads to a string of inabilities for further successes! That situation is tantamount to ' jadatva' or total lack of initiative!]

He peeped in the doors kept ajar, the windows and the surroundings of the residences, lanes and by lanes, vedis, kurupa rakshasa rakshasees asleep, the residences of Vidyadhara-Nagakanyas and all possible palaces, public places and so on. Yet the nightlong searches were still elusive thus far. Hanuman was then drowned deep with disappointment with somewhat subdued spirits for a while.

[Vishleshana on Sampati's assurance to Vaanara Sena vide Valmiki Kishkindha Ramayana Sarga 63:

As Maharshi Nishaakara instructed Sampati intensively to keep serving Shri Rama Karya as a singulat duty of Sampati's life and very existence, the latter slowly walked out from the Maharshi's cave and slowly crawled up to the top of the Vindhya Parvata. With the passage of time, the Maharshii passed away and there eversince, Sampati had been waiting . He told the Vaanara shreshthas further that he wished to sacrifice his life since his living proved to be a drag eversince, but the Maharshis words were ringing in his years to wait till the arrival of the Vanara sena on 'Shri Rama Karya'. Time and again Sampati had been chiding his son as and when he used to fetch food for him as why he had not punished 'duraatma' Ravana'sura and save Devi Sita some how. Like wise he was sharing his thoughts to the vaanara shreshthaas who assembled around him. Meanwhile, Sampati realised that his burnt off wings were slowly regenerating. He was excited to address the Vaanara veeras: niśākarasya maharṣeḥ prabhāvād amitātmanaḥ, ādityaraśminir -dagdhau pakṣau me punar utthitau/ yauvane vartamānasya mamāsīd yaḥ parākramaḥ, tam evādyāvagacchāmi balaṁ pauraṣam eva ca/ sarvathā kriyatām yatnaḥ sītām adhigamiṣyatha, pakṣalābho mamāyaṁ vaḥ siddhipratyaya kārakaḥ/ 'Kapi varaas! Thanks indeed by the blessings of Maharshi Nishaakara, my wings which were totally burnt off during my escapade with Surya Deva, have come come back sprouting. Now I should now onward be able to experience and enjoy my purusharthaas of 'Dharmaartha Kaamaas'! Vaanara veeras! All of you now should now put in your very best to take up the challenging endeavour to attain Devi Sita mother's darshan as soon as possible. This success is indeed round the corner, just as my wings are sprouting back.' Unable to suppress his greatest desire to fly any longer, Sapmpaati flew off in excitement as all the vaanara veeras clapped in response with the strong determination to initiate and propel the action on hand.]

Stanzas 5 onward:kiṁ nu sītātha vaidehī maithilī janakātma jā, upatiṣṭheta vivaśā rāvaṇam duṣṭacāriṇam/ kṣipram utpatato manye sītām ādāya rakṣasaḥ, bibhyato rāmabāṇānām antarā patitā bhavet/ Hanuman wondered whether Devi Sita was coerced the impossible task of serving Ravana? Was it probable that she might have jumped off from vimana of Ravana after her struggle in his strong hands and jumped down off! atha vā hriyamāṇāyāḥ pathi siddhaniṣevite, manye patitam āryāyā hṛdayam prekṣya sāgaram/ During that travel, she could have been bewildered to see the Maha Samudra on the way to Lanka and out of fright might have dropped off! There could be such other possibilities such as cited as above. In any case, Hanuman wondered: yadi sītām adṛṣṭvāham vānarendrapurīm itaḥ, gamiṣyāmi tataḥ ko me puruṣārtho bhaviṣyati/ mamedam laṅghanaṁ vyartham sāgarasya bhaviṣyati, praveśaś civa laṅkāyā

My deeds of Samudra Langhana-Lanka Pradesha-vizualising the Rakshasas would indeed be mere waste! On reaching Kishkindha empty handed, what would be the reaction of not only of Sugriva and the followers, besides that of Rama Lakshmanas! gatvā tu yadi kākutstham vakṣyāmi param apriyam, na dr̥ṣṭeti mayā sītā tatas tyakṣyanti jīvitaṃ/ In case, I dare to utter this hard truth that Devi Sita was not traceable, then would Shri Rama not hesitate to resort to his 'praana tyaga! If that were to be so, then the vicious circle of 'atmarpanas' of Lakshmana-Bharata Shatughnans, Devis Kousalya-Sumitra- Kaikeyi-and the daughters in law too! Further atmarpanas would happen to Sugriva, Devi Tara-Angada too could happen. The ripple impact would fall like a thunderbolt on the race of Vanaras who got collected from earth, commanded by Sugriva in 'arbuda sanhkya' for 'Sitanveshana' in the directions of east-north-west- and finally to south under Angada's command as pioneered by Anjaneya. Those Vaanaras with their wives and progeny would resort to drinking poison or by jumping from parvata shikharas, or into flames, or my breathing failures. Indeed the extinction of Ikshvaku vamsha and of the race of Vamanas would follow too. so 'ham naiva gamiṣyāmi kiṣkindhām nagarīm itaḥ, na hi śakṣyāmy ahaṃ draṣṭuṃ sugrīvaṃ maithilīm vinā/ mayy agacchatī cehasthe dharmātmānau mahārathau, āśayā tau dhariṣyete vanarāś ca manasvinaḥ/ hastādāno mukhādāno niyato vṛkṣamūlikāḥ, vānaprastho bhaviṣyāmi adṛṣṭvā janakātmajām/ sāgarānūpaje deśe bahumūlaphalodake, citāṃ kṛtvā pravekṣyāmi samiddham araṇīsutam/ Hanuman out of sheer frustration imagined the far reaching shocking crash consequences of the resultless 'Sitanveshana'and decided never to return to Kishkindha empty handed. He further cogitated that in case of non return without seeing and meeting Devi Sita, then he might either take to 'Vaanaprastha' in surrounding forests eking his life by living fruits and roots and following 'niyamas of shoucha- dharmika- japas' incognito under trees. He felt further that on the face of extreme mental aggravation, he might resort to 'aamarana upavasa' or jump into 'agni pravesha'. evam bahuvidham duḥkham manasā dhārayan muhuḥ, nādhyagacchat tadā pāraṃ śokasya kapikuñjarāḥ/ rāvaṇaṃ vā vadhiṣyāmi daśagrīvaṃ mahābalaṃ, kāmam astu hṛtā sītā pratyācīrṇaṃ bhaviṣyati/ Thus Anjaneya was unable to control his inner feelings and the utter failure of Sitanveshana. He then could not suppress his anger and had seriously felt as to why not kill Ravana, even stealthily and take revenge and hand over the severed heads of Ravana into the hands of Shri Rama!' Then after musing various permutations and combinations of thought ripples of the tides of the deep ocean, Hanuman made a firm declaration of faithful resolve as follows: yāvat sītāṃ na paśyāmi rāmapatnīm yaśasvinīm, tāvad etāṃ purīm laṅkāṃ vicinomi punaḥ punaḥ/Till such day and time I ought not to accomplish Darshan of Devi Sita, I should keep on searching for her. As Hanuman slowly approached the Ashoka Vatika with ‘Sitaasmarana’ profused in his mind, he was thrilled to witness the unimaginable grandeur and the splash of the Prakriti Soundarya as the early break of Vasanta Ritu as dominated by Vasu Devatas heralding colors, flowers and freshness with fruits and singings of birds like koels and the buzzing music of honey bees. The garden was replete with the tall trees of Saala-Ashoka-Uddhaalaka-Naagakesara-adi maha vrikshas. As Hanuman initiated the search of Devi Sita, the swings of the tree branches were like what the birds comfortably resting in their nests were disturbed. As the Kapivara Anjaneya was jumping back and forth from branch to branch the Rakshasa-Rakshasis were wondering whether Vasanta Ritu Raja having assumed Vaanara Swarupa was moving about in the Vaatika freely. The speed of movement from branch to branch of the trees as like the rains of green leaves, fragrant flowers and sweet fruits down to earth. As though the sweeps of air in the Varsha Ritu tend to break the thick black clouds into pieces Anjana Putra then started breaking the sub-branches of the trees as the groups of Rakshasa-Rakshasis commenced staring up and watching the movements of the Vanara Shekhara. Then the attention of Hanuman got diverted to the flows of sarovaras and the groups of birds flying up or the swimming swans hovering around the lotuses and buzz of bees. Further around he saw from a good distance a massive ‘Ashoka Vriksha with a ‘SuvarnamayaVedika’ there under. The background of the Vedika was a huge ‘maidan’ like open space with lines of encircling mountains. Hanuman then mused as to wonder what he might be able to vision Devi Sita as she might be moving there restlessly. Duraatma Ravana had indeed made this Vatika skillfully no doubt, as the glamour of the trees of chandana-champa-vakulas truly enhance the prettiness. Hopefully, Devi Sita the most beloved of Shri Rama is safe and moves around here. How I wish that she could be seen on the banks of this ‘sarovara’. She should have turned weak and dejected, yet might be some what pacified with the beauty of these surroundings. rāmaśokābhisaṁtaptā sā devī vāmalocanā, vanavāsaratā nityam eṣyate vanacārīṇī/ vanecarāṇām satataṁ nūnam sprhayate purā, rāmasya dayitā bhāryā janakasya sūtā satī/Sundara netravadana Devi Sita must be by now extremely dejected and crying away with none to solace. Yet there could be possible chances of seeing her as she might like to endear Vanavaasi species like me! Thus Hanuman decided to climb and hang around on the Ashoka Tree itself.

From up around the height of the Ashoka tree in the Ashoka Vana, Hanuman was rejoicing the grand view of Ashoka Vana which was similar to the Devodyana Nandana Vana of Swagaloka, or the Chaitra Vana of Kubera both being extremely tranquil, celestial and 'dedepta maana' of glitter. As this was spread all over with heavenly fragrance with the varied 'pushpa sampada', especially in the Vasanta Ritu, that 'udyaana vana' was similar like that of the top of 'Gandhamaadana'. Vaanara Pramukha Anjaneya viewed a well rounded elevated Mandira popular as ‘Chaitra Mandira’ of pure marble construction like Kailasa Madira surrounded by ugly and grotesque Rakshasis; tato malinasamvītām rākṣasībhiḥ samāvṛtām, upavāsakṛśām dīnām niḥśvasāntīm punaḥ punaḥ, dadarśa śuklapakṣādaṁ candrarekhām ivāmalām/ mandaprakhyāyamānena rūpeṇa ruciraprabhām, pinaddhām dhūmajālena śikhām iva vibhāvasoḥ/ Those frightening and disgusting Rakshasis encircled a stree who appeared to have been fasting for days and hence was weak and pitiable. She was of the body frame that was weak, thinned down, exhausted and fatigued like that of Chandrama of the very first night of Shukla Paksha . Hanuman suspected that woman of virtue under harassment by the cruel Rakshasis. On the basis of various descriptions, indications and signs, Hanuman was able to identify ‘her’; indeed her features, characteristics were recalled. She was robed in yellow silk, which was unclean and dusty; she was ‘alankaara viheena’ yet beautiful and of arresting features of charm. Hanuman felt that she pale and unspirited like the Pushkarini Sarovara without lotuses. That tapasvini was in enormous sadness and misery as if the Devi Rohini were at the time of Chandra grahana. Accentuated by her fastings she was weeping away in her condition of physical weakness. Instead of being surrounded by her affectionable persons, she got subjected to the company of Raakshasis all around as is an attractive deer was encircled by wild and ever barking dogs. Indeed her long and dark ‘veni’ down her waist was like a black ‘naagini’ just as blue rows of tall trees on earth shine against the background of blue clouds of the high sky! She was born of comfort and luxurious family but right now was tormented to misery and fear. Yet she was brave, ready to face impediments of hard living, but now pathetic, clad in dirty robes, weak in body and mind, being under constantly and readily subjected to threats and due to various reasons. tām samīkṣya viśālākṣīm adhikam malinām kṛśām, tarkayām āsa sīteti kāraṇair upapādibhiḥ/ Hanuman had almost decided apparently on the basis of the similarity of circumstances, interpretation and decisiveness as per ‘Saankhya Shasrta’

[Vishleshana on Sankhya Shastra vide Brahma Sutras:

Brahma Sutras too explain this vide Chapter I on Samanvaya: Understanding by Interpretation:

Upanishads seek to imply the very purport of Vedas. These comprehend the basis of Awareness about the original cause of Existence and of the Universe. It is only by that Supreme Consciousness that the Ancient Scriptures seek to comprehend but not by a secondary Source of what is loosely designated as the Self Consciousness as Sankhya Yogas interpret; indeed, the Self as an individual is Brahman and is not a separate entity either. This is what Upanishads and Scriptures based on the ancient Scripts handed down the ages about the awareness of Brahman from whom the Universe originates, sustains, terminates and regerminates again and again; it is that Supreme Energy as the Source of Vedas, which is the uniform topic of Vedanta Scripts, who is admitted to be the Cause of the World as argued and decidedly established. Brahman is not the ‘Koshamaya’ or of Pancha Koshas or body sheaths of Annamaya-Pranamaya-Manomaya-Vijnanamaya and Anandamaya as based on Saankhya Thought but is indeed the Supreme Self of Nirguna Niraakara or alternatively of the ‘Saakaara Saguna Swarupa’ or of Form and features viz. the Magnificent Bliss that is in turn reflected as the Antaratma or of the Individual Self of all the Beings in Srishti. It is this Blissful Brahman who is not only the Antaratma or the Individual Consciousness; this Paramatma is not only Antaratma, but also the Pancha Bhutas, Space, Light, the Praana or Vital Force, the Illumination within and without. It is that Singular Entity, The Bhokta and the Bhojya or the Cause and the Effect, the Material Cause, the one inside the ‘Daharakasha’ or the Sky within the invisible cavity of the Heart and the Sky above, the Pancha Bhutas, the Panchendriyas, Sleep and Death, above all the Cause and Effect. Indeed, Brahman is the Material Cause of the Universe. !]

Further Stanzaas continued: hriyamāṇā tadā tena rakṣasā kāmārūpiṇā, yathārūpā hi dṛṣṭā vai tathārūpeyam aṅganā/ pūrṇacandrānanām subhrūm cāruvṛttapayodharām, kurvantīm prabhayā devīm sarvā vitimirā diśaḥ/ tām nīlakeśīm bimbauṣṭhīm sumadhyām supraṭiṣṭhitām, sītām padmapalāśākṣīm manmathasya ratīm yathā/ iṣṭām sarvasya jagataḥ pūrṇacandraprabhām iva, bhūmau sutanum āsīnām niyatām iva tāpasīm/ Hanuman felt that Devi Sita seemed to keep her form and face in precisely the same similar when the Rakshasa Ravana had forcibly abducted her. She should have been in her earlier form when her countenance must have been bright like Purnachandra and her chest too encircled firm in all the directions. Her excellent body figure then, but alas now lying seated, neglected and dirty now. As she was shedding agitated tears now, she was like smokes spreading all over from ‘agni jwaalaas’. tām smṛtīm iva saṁdighdām rddhīm nipatitām iva, vihatām iva ca śraddhām āsām pratihatām iva, sopasargām yathā siddhīm buddhīm sakaluṣām iva/ abhūtenāpavādena kīrtīm nipatitām iva, rāmoparodhavyathitām rakṣoharanakarśitām/ Devi Sita appeared to have thinned down her memory power, accomplishments, patience, aspiration, contentment, clean and clear mindedness, and a sense of frustration. Further, his attention was drawn to her body ornaments. He had at once realised that Shri Rama used to describe Devi Sita’s ornaments in great detail. pītam kanakapaṭṭābham srastam tad vasanam śubham, uttarīyam nagāsaktam tadā dṛṣtam plavaṅgamaiḥ/bhūṣaṇāni ca mukhyāni dṛṣṭāni dharaṇītale, anayaivāpaviddhāni svanavanti mahānti ca/ idam ciragrhitatvād vasanam kliṣṭavattaram, tathā hi nūnam tad varṇam tathā śrīmad yathetarat/ Hanuman recalled that the ornaments stated to have been dropped by her along with her yellow upper garment like an over -cover and the golden ornaments on her body as collected by the Vaanaras up on the mountain top. Then he examined that she was neither ornamented similarly nor had such an upper vastra. iyam sā yat kṛte rāmaś caturbhiḥ paritapyate, kāruṇyenāṇṛśamsyena śokena madanena ca/ Hanuman had finally concluded that what was hesitatingly felt would now get confirmed that in this world the lady of Shri Rama, especially since she was bestowed with four essential reasons of her kindness, forgiveness, extreme dejection and love for all the Beings on Earth! Thus having found Devi Sita, Hanuman was extremely happy for the close of the chapters of the mission of ‘Sitaanveshana’ to a glorious finality!

Hanuman having finally ensured that Devi Sita was visioned, felt that as to why she, an outstanding Pativrata, was being harassed by Ravana and the disgusting, yet sad, scenes of her treatment conditions.

Having finally succeeded in discovering Devi Sita, Hanuman began to feel to witness the extremely pitiable conditions that the Maha Saadhvi had to find her. He was hurt and pained that she was being treated to her: ‘ Aho! She was taught and trained by stalwart ‘guru jana’ and was a symbol of Vidya and Vinaya or knowledge and politeness, but the time cycle had been too harsh on her. Like the arrival of Varsha Ritu, the sacred Ganga was rattled, she has had to pass through the merciless times even notwithstanding the heroism of Shri Rama and the unflinching loyalty of Lakshmana. Her characteristics of sheelata-svabhava-and avastha were similar to those of Ramachandra himself as her family background was equally alike. Then Hanuman had a retrospective thinking of Rama had the extraordinary ability of exterminating Vaali himself who had the ‘amsha’ of Lord Indra, besides pulling down Kabandha to near-death.

[Vishleshana on Rama’s killing Kabandha as per his latter’s ‘Atma Katha’ vide Sarga Sixty Nine of Valmiki Aranya Khanda: .Karbandha narrates his ‘atma katha’ the autobiography to Rama Lakshmanas stating that in the distant past he was a Maha Rakshasa of notoriety terrifying Maharshis. As the Rakshasa assumed a huge and intolerable form, sought to terrify a Rishi named Sthulashira, the Rishi was angry and cursed him to assume that hideous form for ever: ‘Rakshasa! You continue this very nasty swarupa for ever till you die. Then Kabandha was afraid of the consequent form and requested for relief and then the Rishi forevisioned to say that only when Rama Lakshmanas the epic heros should get caught by you and then finally slice off both of your shoulders, then you would attain ‘mukti’. As Kabandha since became the vikrita swarupa as a result of the Maha Munis’s ‘shaapa’, the Rakshasa was mellowed down and undertook severest possible tapasya to Brahma Deva. In turn, Brahma was pleased and granted the Rakshasa’s wish for longevity. Then Kabandha having secured Brahma Deva’s blessing for longevity, his demonic instinct was puffed up and attacked Lord Devendra himself. Devendra then threw away his peerless ‘vajraayudha’ and as a result, Maha Rakshasa Kabandha’s lower body portion got upside down! Then I asked Indra: Deva Raja! You had utilised your invincible ‘vajrayudha’ and consequently, my very physical form changed transformed; how could I survive without food while Brahma blessed me with longevity. Then Indra Deva helped me to extend my both the arms by a yojana each so that the stretch of the hands could be conveniently extended so that the food could reach right into the mouth! Indra further fore-visioned that Rama Lakshmana’s would get caught in the grip of the rakshasa but they would sever the Rakshasa’s shoulders and get relieved for mukti.]

Stanza 9-10 onward continued: caturdaśasahasrāṇi rakṣasāṃ bhīmakarmaṇām, nihatāni janasthāne śarair agniśikhopamaiḥ/ kharaś ca nihataḥ saṃkhye triśirāś ca nipātitaḥ, dūṣaṇaś ca mahātejā rāmeṇa viditātmanā/ aiśvaryaṃ vānarāṇām ca durlabhaṃ vālipālitaṃ, asyā nimitte sugrīvaḥ prāptavāṃl lokasatkṛtam/ Hanuman had a retrospective as follows: Rama had all by himself- even as Lakshmana left from scene of the battle killed fourteen thousand Rakshasaas, besides Dushana- Trishira-Kharas [vide Sargas Twenty Six- Twenty Seven and Thiry Valmiki Ramayana Aranya Khanda] Then Rama befriended Sugriva- killed Vaali- enabled to cross Maha Samudra. Then he was instrumental to cross the Maha Samudra- reached Lankapuri- searched for Devi Sita all over- and finally succeeded in identifying her. Devi Sita is an ideal pativrata, the eldest daughter-in-law. Most unfortunately, she was kidnapped by Ravanaasura. Shri Rama who is a symbol of Dharma and Atma jnaana. But Devi Sita out of sheer dedication to her husband, had sacrificed the pleasures of life and accompanied him on her own choice entered the frightful forest life. She was contented with phala-moola -ahaara and discarded pleasures of royal life, having a smile with patience and contentment. She assumed all those qualities only for Rama. Neither she was frightened of Raakshas, nor clamoured for food, much less for dhana-dhanya-vastu-vaahanaas. bhartā nāma param nāryā bhūṣaṇaṃ bhūṣaṇād api, eṣā hi rahitā tena śobhanārḥā na śobhate/ duṣkaram kurute rāmo hīno yad anayā prabhuḥ, dhārayaty ātmano dehaṃ na duḥkhenāvasīdati/ imām asitakeśāntām śatapatranibheṣaṇām, sukhārḥām duḥkhitām dṛṣṭvā mamāpi vyathitaṃ manah/ Hanuman further kept on deliberating further: ‘Indeed, it is common knowledge that women as a race are extremely enamored of precious ornaments, excellent food and luxuries of living, but Devi Sita is an unique exception. Her living is purposeless without her dearest Shri Rama. By realising this only she is still braving and withstanding her ongoing tribulations and miseries. Aho! She is of the perseverance and firm determination to exist only and merely for her dearest husband as seated right before and surrounded by the frightening looks of the Rakshasis’. Hanuman then declared: It is common knowledge that a unique woman of Devi Sita’s magnificence is well proven, but her misery right now unparalleled too. Having affirmed thus Maha Vanara- Pavana Putra Anajanya was seated on the Maha Vriksha uttering: ‘Haa Devi Sita!’ again and again.

Engulfed by the extreme distress and sorrow for Devi Sita, Vayuputra Hanuman from a far nearer distance seated on a tree branch for a closer view, witnessed the most pitiable condition of Devi Sita whose visage was like of Purnachandra, as she was suppressed her sobbings like the forceful waves of the Sea. Some of their hairs were blown away in portions while some have their hairs only on their faces only but not on their heads. Some had their ears on the ‘lalaata’ or the forehead while others on their stomach. Their breasts were invariably sagging as they run or take their steps fast hitting their faces. Some of them had their faces huge while those of others were of dwarf size even as bodies were tall and giantlike. hrasvām dīrghām ca kubjām ca vikaṭām vāmanām tathā, karālām bhugnavastrām ca piṅgākṣīm vikṛtānanām/ vikṛtāḥ piṅgalāḥ kālīḥ krodhanāḥ kalahapriyāḥ, kālāyasamahāsūlakūṭamudgaradhāriṇīḥ/ varāhamṛgaśārdūlamahiṣājaśivā mukhāḥ, gajoṣṭṛahayapādās ca nikhātaśirasas ‘parāḥ/ The body formations of the surrounding Rakshasis were of hrasva-deergha-kubja-vikata-vaamanakara-vikaraalas-. Very many rakshasis had bodies of bizarre and weird, dark -bluish-yellow- and angerd red, everedy to quarrel and fight among themselves with cloud bursting cacophony, while they were all armoured with huge shulaas-long and piercing swords, kavachaas. Further the face formations of the rakshasis were of varied animals of pigs, deers, lions, goats, elephants; some were slow like camels and fast like horses of speed and jumps. ekahastaikapādās ca kharakarṇyaśvakarṇikāḥ, gokarṇīr hastikarṇīs ca harikarṇīs tathāparāḥ/ anāsā atināsās ca tīryan nāsā vināsikāḥ, gajasam nibhanāsās ca lalāṭocchvāsanāsikā/ Some of the Rakshasis were either single handed or single legged; some with the ears donkeys or of horses; some of cows, or flappy like of elephants or loins. Shulamudgaraahastās ca krodhanāḥ kalahapriyāḥ/ karālā dhūmrakeśīs ca rakṣasīr vikṛtānanāḥ, pibantīḥ satatām pānam sadā māmsasurāpriyāḥ/ Some were armed with spears in hand, or shulas or mudgaras, ready to fight or kill among themselves, ever drunk with madira or other hard drinks. māmsaṣṇitadigdhāṅgīr māmsaṣṇitabhojanāḥ, tā dadarśa kapiśreṣṭho romaharṣaṇadarśanāḥ/ The rakshasis as thus surrounded around Devi Sita were all smeared with the blood and meat of animals as Hanuman was totally revulsed with. He then kept on thinking about and intently gazing at Devi Sita was seated benumbed with her naturally bright visage yet with unkempt hairs covering it, like a Star of luminosity had fallen from the vicinity of Chandra mandala down to earth. The exemplary Pativrata was thus waiting and waiting on for the arrival of her heroic Shrirama with hopes against hopes. It appeared that a she elephant lost her moorings of ‘swajanaas’ of the kith and kin and was having to face a cruel lion; indeed Devi Sita was then under the cruel duress of Ravnaasura. It was that precise stage and condition of ‘Sitaadarshana’, Veera Hanuman was gratified- in fact thrilled, undoubtedly. Hanuman then had his full night's sleep even while pondering over as to how Devi Sita was ensnared by Ravana notwithstanding the heroism of Shri Rama. As the early hours of the following day, he heard the ‘mangala vadyaas’ to wake up the King Ravana. The latter then rose from his bed with the amorous thoughts of Devi Sita and having got ready with his attractive body ornaments entered the Ashoka Vaatika which was fresh with cool winds swaying the trees and plants and the fragrance of the just sprouted flowers all around. He was accompanied by some hundred beautiful and well ornamented ‘kanyaas’ further enhancing the grandeur and stateliness of the atmosphere as if Lord Indra was accompanied by deva-gandharva kanyas entering the ‘paarijaata vana’. Like the clouds are accompanied by lightnings, some of the damsels were behind the King of Asuras, some ahead of him, while others were encircling him. It looked that Ravana was full of desire for Devi Sita who was like a natural beauty ‘par excellence’ like a pearl peeping out an oyster. tataḥ kāñcīninādaṁ ca nūpurāṇāṁ ca niḥsvanam, śuśrāva paramastrīṇāṁ sa kapir mārutātmaḥ/ taṁ cāpratimakarmāṇam acintyabalapauruṣam, dvāradeśam anuprāptaṁ dadarśa hanumān kapiḥ/ Then Vayunandana Hanuman then heard the jingling sounds of very attractive damsels with their sprightly faces and slim figures with ornaments and fragrant smells. There again he saw and keenly observed the unbelievable personality of the hefty and strong physique of Ravana the star attraction of ‘bala-pourusha’ mahaasura at the entrance of Ashoka Vaatika. Ravana was replete with ‘kaama- darpa-mada’ or passion-power and pride with enlarged- red-and sharp eyes with fixed looks. He was dressed with extremley decorated chest and clothes with dangling white diamonds and sparkling milky pearls studded with gold like Kama Deva Mammadha without his pushpa baanaas and dhanush. The encircling sundaris of youthful ebullience too were noticed by Hanuman as if glittering Stars were around the Moon. That was how the Vishravaaka Muni Putra Ravana was glanced by Hanuman.

Even with a single nasty and desolate glance of the detestable Ravanaasura, Devi Sita was drowned in gloom-fear-and apprehension as noticed by Hanuman

Hanuman noticed that the blemishless Rajakumari Devi Sita glanced Ravanaasura with fear and a sense of apprehension like a plantain tree would wave, shake up and swing by the onslaught of the fearful and harsh winds. Janaka Raja Putri in her helpless state was sobbing away as her tears flowed down her shoulders down to her tight breasts and laps as she was seated in a head drooping posture. As already surrounded by Rakshasis of horror, she was like an ever wavering, semi-sinking torn off boat on the wide and high tided middle of the Maha Sagara, or like a ‘Kamalini’ floating being pulled down into deep and muddy slush. samīpam rājasimhasya rāmasya veditātmanaḥ, saṁkalpahaya -saṁyuktair yāntīm iva manorathaiḥ/ śuśyantīm rudatīm ekām dhyānaśokaparāyaṇām, duḥkhasyāntam apaśyantīm rāmām rāmam anuvratām/ Devi Sita was then noticed by the deep thinking of Shri Rama as if she were firmly seated on her mind driven chariot drawn by the hopes- like horses towards the Inner Soul (Antaratma) of

Shri Rama Chandra! Her body was as though drying up gradually by the months-weeks-and days, while being seated with endless cryings with ‘Shri Rama Viyoga’ - as though like Devi Sita Viyoga of Shri Rama in reciprocity! Hanuman then mused that Devi Sita was like a Naagini flashing her ‘naaga manis’ was waving her hoods desperately due to the disappearance of her Naaga Raja; or better still like Rohini Devi getting agitated at the time of Chandra Grahana by the viscous clasp of Ketu Graha. She looked to have forlorn her fame, lost her shradhha or her inherent features of intelligence, hope and aspiration, and appears to have dimmed her future, lost track of Deva puja, while she seemed like chandra during eclipse, a lotus in a dried up pond, a yajna vedi getting impure by the touch of hooligans, darkness hiding brightness, a she elephant with a damaged trunk, a water bird disabled to fly up, and a Pushkarini with poisoned water flows. upavāsena śokena dhyānena ca bhayena ca, parikṣiṇām kṛśām dīnām alpāhārām tapodhanām/ āyācamānām duḥkhārtām prāñjaliṁ devatām iva, bhāvena raghumukhyasya daśagrīvapārābhavam/ samīkṣamānām rudatīm aninditām; supakṣmatāmrāyataśuklalocanām, anuvratām rāmam atīva maithilīm; pralobhayām āsa vadhāya rāvaṇaḥ/ Devi Sita due to continuous fastings, unending distresss, prolonged mental agitations, and shocks of fear, lack of sleep, had turned her out like dried up rivers. In such pathetic conditions of Devi Sita, as Ravana looked back and wondered as to why and how she being a classic beauty of scintillating eyes and mecurial glances once upon a time was totally lost, albeit out of Shri Rama Viyoga, was looking desperate, and felt like his own ‘atmaarpana’ suicide!

Ravana then addresses Devi Sita opening his heart fancying her, praises her origin , charm and conduct, and seeks to convince her to discard fear complex, to be sympathetic to him, and wait for her consent.

As Ravana'sura expressed his bravado replete with selfishness, cunningness and arrogance, Devi Sita the 'tapasvini, pativrata and sadaa pati chintaa parayana' replied in a low voice. She said that instead of persistently praising her, her body beauty and grace, he be better advised to be contented and concentrated on his own multitude of wives. She further said that a sinful and evil minded person would not aspire for a series of further successes. He would not deserve them as he had cursed a pativrata, and worse still to force her to take to dubious and detestable alternatives. What is more, I was born into an outstanding family background and wedded into a glorious family. Ravana! I am a well married woman belonging to a different and distinguished family and most assertively not deserving of you as I should swear touching my back and feet. Nishaachara! He saw Devi Sita up and down with anger and even disbelief. His eyes were reddened as of poisonous cobras and displayed heavy breathings. He hissed: You woman still hankering after men of wretched and poverty stricken humans of forest life; Just as the emerging brightness of early morning Surya shatters through the night long darkness, I would soon enough most certainly finish you. Then, he glanced at the gang of Rakshasis surrounding Sita; among then were Ekaakshi-Ekakarna-Karnapraavarana-Gokarna-Hastikarna-Lambakarni-Ararnika-Hastipadi-Ashvapadi- Gopadi-Paadachurlika of feet haired-Ekapaadi-Pruthupaadi-Apaadika-Atimaatra Shirogreeva- Deergha jihvaa nakha- Atimaatra kuchodari-Atimaatrasyena netra- Anaasika-Sookara mukhi and so on. As King Ravana instructed them to change Devi Sita’s mind set in favor of King Ravana as he was departing Ashoka Vana, then the Rakshasis surrounded her gradually and decided to convince her, offer temptations, preach against Shri Rama, or finally by threats of physical violence to harm her. They addressed her: ‘Site! Do you not realise the big luck, honour and great fortune to become a life partner of Pulastya Dashagriva King Ravana, the shining star among Asura Rakshasaas. Then ‘Ekajata Rakshasi’ explained to Sita: do you know that Bramama Deva created six Prajapatis of whom Pulastya Prajapati was the fourth of the six. Pulastya’s Maanasa was the ‘Maharshi Vishrava’ who too was of the fame of Pulastya. Do understand the glorious lineage and heritage of Maha Baahu Dashamukha. To become the Prime Queen of the Lanka Saamrajya ought to be a dream come true! Then another knowledgeable Rakshasi ‘Hari Jata’ explained: ‘Devi Sita! Perhaps you are ignorant of the invincibility of Maha Ravana, as you feel Ravana is an upstart and his heroism is suspect. Now, let me clarify: Maha Ravanaasura had defeated and put to shame in a series of battles with thirty hundreds of devatas including Dwadasha Adityas, Ekaadasha Rudras, Ashta Vasus, and Two Ashvini Kumaras, besides Indra Himself. Now, do you realise as to which kind of honour that you should accomplish as your life time award! Harijata Rakshasi further annotated that Devi Sita! Maha Pativrata Mandodari is ready to discard the top position and most prestigious status of Patta Mahishi in your favour, once you accept the same!

Prajapatis: Mareechi-Atri-Angeera-Pulasya-Pulaha-and Kratu

Ashta Vasus: Aapa, Dhruva, Soma, Dhara, Anila, Anala, Pratyusha and Prabhasa. They once visited Vasishtha's Ashram along with their wives and desired to possess Nandini the Kamadhenu; as the Maharshi refused, Prabhasa he took lead in stealing the cow while other Vasus too abetted the plan. Vasishtha cursed the Vasus to become humans but reduced the impact of the curse to all of them to be born as humans only for a few hours except Prabhasa the ring leader. Thus Devi Ganga who was married to King Shantanu of Maha Bharata on condition that what even she did should not be questioned but she drowned the new borns one by one in the River but he could not contain himself and asked Ganga why did she do such merciless actions; Ganga left Shantanu as the eighth child was spared but deserted the King for good. The eighth child was Gangeya who was Bhishma and that was Prabhasa the Leader of Ashta Vasus who secured Vasishtha's curse that he should have a full life but without a wife since Prabhasa listened to his wife and stole the Kama Dhenu Nandini.

Ekaadasha Rudras: Mahan, Mahatma, Matimaan, Bhishana, Bhayankara, Ritudhwaja, Urthvakesha, Pingalaksha, Rucha, Shuchi and Kaalagni.

Dwaadasha Adityas: Aditya Deva assumes twelve other Murti / Forms viz. Indra, Dhata, Parjanya, Pusha, Twashta, Aryama, Bhaga, Vivishwan, Amshu, Vishnu, Varuna and Mitra. Among these twelve Murthis, Indra was Chief of Devas ruling Amaravati and destroying Daityas and Danavas from time to time. Dhata being in the Status of Prajapati took up the task of Creation; Parjanya in the Form of Sun rays rained all over the Universe; Pusha is in the form of Mantras engaged for Prajaaposhana; Twashta is present in the form of 'Vanaspati' and 'Aushadhi' (Vegetable Oils and Herbal Medicines); Aryama who provides protection and relief to humanity; Bhaga is in the form of Earth and Mountains; Viviswan in the form of Agni / Fire and is the cooking facilitator of food as also of the destroying power; the ninth name of Surya Deva is Amshu or of the form of Chandra Deva who provides coolness and pleasure of existence; Vishnu is the tenth name of Surya who constantly checks the evil forces in the World and slays Danavaas and establishes virtue from time to time by assuming Incarnations; Varuna is the eleventh appearance present in water as the source of life and fertility staying in Oceans, Rivers and various water profiles; and finally, Mitra or form of propitiousness and help to humanity. In whatever form he might be, Surya Deva is indeed the 'Karanam, Kaaranam and Karta' or the Act, Action and the Supreme Actor in the drama of Life! Bhakti (Devotion), Shraddha (fortitude) and Puja (Worship) sum up the meanings of human life! The corresponding Twelve Names of Aditya are stated to identify with the Twelve Months of a Year viz. Chaitra with Vishnu, Vaishakha with Aryama, Jyeshtha with Viviswan, Ashadha with Amshuman, Shravana with Parjanya, Badrapada with Varuna, Ashwin with Indra, Kartika with Dhata, Margasirsha with Mitra, Pausa with Pusha, Magha with Bhaga and Twashta in Phalguna

Vishleshana on Ashvini Kumars from Surya Purana:

Vishwakarma the Shilpi's daughter was Sagina whose celestial name is Raagini also called Surenu in dyuloka. Sangina's shadow is Chhaaya also called Nikshubha. Sangina is not only pretty but a Pativrata too; she gave birth to Manu and Yama. But she was unable to approach the ever fiery form of Surya and after retaining her shadow left to her father Vishvakarma's home to stay there for very thousand and odd years, despite the father advising her to return to her husband's home as soon as possible. As the father pressurised her, she left for Utrara Kuru pradesha in the form of a horse. Chhaya Devi and Surya Deva gave birth to two sons named Shritashrava and Shrutakarma, besides a daughter named Tapati. Shritashrava's son was Saavarni Manu and Shanaishwara was the son of Shritakarma. Just as Sangjna Devi was too affectionate with her children, Chhaya Devi was not so. Chhaya had normal relation with Sangjna's elder son Manu, but had difference of opinion with Yama. As Chhaya bothered Yama too much, then the latter desired to lift her physically and held her upside down and in the process touched her feet. Chhaya then gave a 'shaap' or curse that Yama's feet be twisted and disfigured. In this physical altercation, Surya appeared and said that every 'shaap' could be negated but not that of a mother and suggested that the only way could be to the flesh of Yama's feet be kept on 'krimis' or vicious worms so that the flesh of the feet be eaten and got disappeared and the fleshless feet be retained. This way- out would save Yama's feet and Chhaya Devi's curse be carried out too. Soon after this shaap incident, Vishvakarma the father of Sangjna approached Surya Deva and informed him that his daughter Sangjna was in the form of a horse in Shaaka dwipa, and made Surya to assume the form of a male horse at where Sangjna was grazing. Then Surya in the form of a male horse approached Sangjna in the form of a female horse and tried to mate. Sangjna struggled in the act of mating as she was of the feeling that Surya was a 'para purusha'; in the process of the struggle Surya's virility entered Sangjna's nose and she gave birth to two sons viz. Ashvini Kumars the celestial physicians, named Naasatya and Dasnna. After Surya Deva revealed his identity, then the two horses mated again and Revant was born with similar radiance like that of the father.]

Stanzas 14 onward to follow:

'Vikata naama Rakhasi' asserted that Maha Ravana subdued Naaga- Gabdharva-Danavas several times in their group battles. Further 'Durmukhi Rakhasi' emphasised that out of Ravanaasura's fear Surya Deva reduced his radiance and Vayu Deva his sweep and speed. In sum the well wisher Rakshasis stated: tasya nairrtarājasya rājarājasya bhāmini, kiṁ tvam na kuruṣe buddhiṁ bhāryārthe rāvaṇasya hi/ sādhu te tattvato devi kathitaṁ sādhu bhāmini, grhāṇa susmite vākyam anyathā na bhaviṣyasi/ Bhamini Sita! How is it that you are denying the fabulous opportunity. We the senior and learned Rakshasis are therefore extending our hearty congratulations to you in advance as you need to be convinced of King Lankeshwara's deservedness and the unique honour bestowed on you !

While a few of enlightened Rakshasis sought to convince Devi Sita to wed Ravana, the rest of the cruel lot threatened her to death and fancy to taste her flesh,cook it with spices, and eat with wine and dance!

Having extensively extolled the unique magnificence and bravery of Mahasura Ravana who had controlled the celestial Dwashaadityas, Ekaadasa Rudras, Ashta Vasus, and Ashvini Kumaras, let alone daanava-maanavas, the rakshasis, especially the flesh eaters, drunkards, threatened Devi Sita and shouted at her as to why and how she ought not to marry the history making overlord of the world. Then the Rakshasis got gradually ignited, frustrated and exasperated and jibed at her: ‘ After all you are a maanva’s wife and is infatuated by a human Rama, who was ousted out from his kingdom, left to his fate in the wilderness exposed to cruel wild animals, ever tormented and harassed.’ Then Devi Sita replied rather boldly: yad idaṁ lokavidviṣṭam udāharatha saṁgatāḥ, naitan manasi vākyam me kilbiṣam pratitiṣṭhati/ na mānuṣī rākṣasasya bhāryā bhavitum arhati, kāmam khādata mām sarvā na kariṣyāmi vo vacaḥ, dīno vā rājyahīno vā yo me bhartā sa me guruḥ/ you have collected together and seeking to pressurise me on and on. You might torture me, threaten me to death and even devour me in pieces, but could never ever yield! Yes, my dear husband was thrown out from his kingdom, but he is my master, preceptor, and my blemishless attachment to him is everlasting as I survive. Take the examples of Devi Suvarchala to Surya, Shachi Devi in the service of Indra, Arundhati Devi to Maharshi Vasistha, Devi Rohini to Chandra Deva, Sukanya to Chyavana Muni, Savitri to Satyavaan, Devi Shrimati to Kapila Maharshi, Madayanti to Soudaasa, Devi Keshini to Sagara, Damayanti to Nala the Nishedha Naresha and so on. Now, let me have the self contentment to earnestly get attached to Shri Rama the Ikshvaaku Shiromani! As Devi Sita’s assertiveness was reiterated again and again, then being anxiously following the proceedings of the action scenario, Pavana Kumara Veera-Anjaneya was noticing the efforts and threats of the Rakshasis surrounding her. tām abhikramya

Then one of the worst of the Vikaraala Rakshasi named ‘Vinata’ with her huge and distored figure of protruded and shapeless sromach shouted: Dirty woman, enough of this nonsense of your wreched husband, devotion and such filthy talk. Do not over do this as you would soon real the consequencess. As a last chance, either you agree to Ravana or not. We could give you the option of yes or no! Then another Rakshasi named Vikata pushed others as she was with ground drooping breasts and readily disgusting hoarse tone: ‘Hopeless Site! you have lost your head and senses. So far you do not seem to realise that you are under custody and not in Ravana’s Antahpura. You have not yet faced the worse side of Ravana. Even Indra would not be able to save you from this situation. There is no point in crying on and on. Forget your principles and self restraints. Life is short and youthfulness is shorter dissloving much faster. Enjoy the ‘ here and now’ as tomorrow remains tragic as in the long run one is dead! Then another Rakshasi named ‘Prathasa’ said in bursting anger looking at the co rakshasis : let us throttle this hopeless woman quietly and inform the King that this human female in our custody then the latter might as well instruct us saying: ‘why do you not enjoy pieces of her body! Another Rakshasi named ‘Ajamukhi’ further commented: ‘ I am not happy and excited n this wastage of time as the idea of killing the human female; come let us initiate the action of mincing her body and share them at once, and simultaneously get the cooking utensils and the accompanying powders, spices, chillis, salt, and so on! Yet another Rakshasi named ‘Shurmanakha’ commented on what Ajamukhi said; I might only add that in this memorable party, we must add to the list by way of ‘suraapaana’ and nritya naatya while rejoicing ‘nara maamsa’ that too a delicacy of a female!’ As the brutal and monstrous Rakshasis commenced their plans, the celestial like Devi Sita broke down into non stop cryings with fright and body shiverings of facing a deathlike precipice.

Torally rattled by the perilous intimidation of the Rakshasis to nearly kill her and celebrate, Devi Sita nearly resorted to ‘praana tyaga’ especially cursing her fate still disabling her from Shri Rama darshana.

As Devi Sita was scared and panicked that the cruel Rakshasis were preparing her murder by throttling and informing Ravana that she committed suicide, she entreated them as were closely encircling her in shaken up low and whispering tone. ‘ Kindly understand that a human female could never marry a Rakshasa. Even if you eat me alive, then again I could even dream like that.’ As she pleaded likewise, she was looking like a lamb seeking to hide its face as was attacked by a pack of wolves. She was shivering with the fear of death being round the corner. Like disastrous winds hit a platan tree, she fell down in semi-consciousness. What with fear as though that death was closeby, she was breathing fast at times and too slow as of seemingly still at others. It was at that time that she seemed to whisper: hā rāmeti ca duḥkhārtā punar hā lakṣmaṇeti ca, hā śvaśru mama kausalye hā sumitre bhāvinī/ lokapṛavādaḥ satyo ’yaṁ paṇḍitaiḥ samudāhṛtaḥ, akāle durlabho mṛtyuḥ striyā vā puruṣasya vā/ yatrāham ābhiḥ krūrābhī rākṣasībhir ihārditā, jīvāmi hīnā rāmeṇa muhūrtam api duḥkhitā/ ‘Ha Rama, ha Lakshmana! She futhered whispered: ‘ Lokokti (adage) states: neither a male nor a female would face death unless so destined and scripted on one’s face by ‘Vidhaata’. But contrary to his writing so, the Rakshasis appear to do so in my case as I might have to die in their hands. It appears that in my earlier life I had not stored up adequate ‘punya’ and hence am on the verge of death on the unfortunate analogy of a big Sea Vessel stuffed up with disproportionate weight would sink at mid sea by stormy winds. bhartāraṁ tam apaśyanti rākṣasīvaśaṁ āgatā, sīdāmi khalu śokena kūlaṁ toyahataṁ yathā/ tam padmadalapatrākṣaṁ simhavikrāntagāminam, dhanyāḥ paśyanti me nāthaṁ kṛtajñaṁ priyavādinam/ sarvathā tena hīnāyā rāmeṇa veditātmanā, tīṣṇaṁ viṣaṁ ivāsvādya durlabhaṁ mama jīvitam/ What a misfortune as am not blessed to vision my Pati Deva for long long times. While missing that Atma Jani Rama’s darshan is getting faded by the months, weeks and days, even by resiting the need for consuming poison. ‘Manava jeevana and Paratantra’ - or human life and dependence on others are like two concepts negating each other; alas I am not free to take my own life at my volition itself!

In fact, it appears that all my married life was saturated with endless tribulations and now, even the threats of death. I was born to suffer and survived through various phases each of which was fraught with dangers of life at each step of married life. Believe me, I would hate to touch Ravana even with the left toe of the little finger of my left leg. Rakshasa Rakshasis! Of what avail of my keep crying all the time; better kill me, slaughter me to pieces, throw me into fire and make ash out of it. Still, I could never get close to Ravana. As the dreaded sinful Ravana once drowned in the high tides of the Maha Samudra, then Lankapuri gets widowed soon. Undoubtedly then each and every household in Lanka there should be heartrending 'aarta nadaas' reach reverberating on the sky. akāryam ye na jānanti nairṛtāḥ pāpakāriṇaḥ, adharmāt tu mahotpāto bhaviṣyati hi sāmpratam/ naite dharmam vijānanti rākṣasāḥ piṣitāśanāḥ, dhruvam mām prātaraśārthe rākṣasaḥ kalpayiṣyati/ This paapaachari Ravana's auspicious killing is certain no doubt but still he is blissfully unaware of his disastrous catastrophe too soon. Right now but, the explosive ahead is least realised by the flesh consuming Rakshasis who are opaque to even know the roots of virtue and justice. They are only waiting for my dead body flesh. sāham katham kariṣyāmi tam vinā priyadarśanam, rāmam raktāntanayanam apaśyanti suduḥkhitā/ yadi kaś cit pradātā me viṣasyādya bhaved iha, kṣipram vaivasvataṃ devam paśyeyam patinā vinā/ Then what else could I the lonely and helpless single human amid the cruel rakshasis do without the appearance of Rama. Is it possible any further that I could drag on my living now devoid of Shri Rama darshana with his radiant looks and with the fortune of his 'charana sparsha' before proceeding to Yama loka ! Hope on finding my dead body, he himself get prepared to 'Atma tyaga' and visit Deva Lokas to witness the joy of deva-gandharva-siddha-maharshis anxious for his 'darshana' ! Surely indeed, he should not resort to such steps! priyān na sambhaved duḥkham apriyād adhikam bhayam, tābhyām hi ye viyujyante namas teṣām mahātmanām/ sāham tyaktā priyeṇa rāmeṇa viditātmanā, prāṇāms tyakṣyāmi pāpasya rāvaṇasya gatā vaśam/ As I may have to soon leave Mother Prithvi, may I sincerely pray to Mahatmas on earth or upper lokas, as they are totally immune from the likes and dislikes, successes and failures, positivities or negativities of one's living. But what a misfortune of my life to be presumably exiting it without the darshan of 'atma jnaani' Shri Rama as death appears to be glaring at me as I am in the close clutches of the most dreaded personification of wicked immorality of Ravana!

As the attacking rakshasis kept on Devi Sita haranging in her almost inaudible and low voiced fanciful musings, mentioning of her own fate and of Lanka's doom, they shouted at her: adyodānīm tavānārye sīte pāpaviniścaye, rākṣasyo bhakṣayiṣyanti māmsam etad yathāsukha/ Paapa chintaka Site! She stated: 'Go away and get lost; brainless nishacharies! don't you dare to harass Devi Sita any further! I had been just woken up all of sudden from the ugliest possible dream right now! This is all about our peril and of auspiciousness for Sita.' Trijata was literally shivering when she shouted thus: In this nasty and wretched dream I found a celestial mountain cave on the fast revolving sky made of huge elephant tusks pulled by some hundred white horses with white garlands while Shri Rama accompanied by Lakshmana were seated firmly. In that horrible dream, Sita was clad in milk white robes. As I visioned Raghu Rama again very keenly and he along with Lakshmana behind, Devi Sita riding the elephant joined them and she was seated besides Rama smilingly. tatas tābhyām kumārābhyām āsthitaḥ sa gajottamaḥ, sītayā ca viśālākṣyā laṅkāyā upari sthitaḥ/ Then as all the three being settled on the Iravata like Gaja Raja, proceeded to Lanka Dvipa and saw the Kingdom critically as the elephant stood still on the sky. Then in that disastrous dream, I saw somebody like our great King Ravana just before me. He appeared to have bathed in oil and was robed in oil drenched blood red attire. He appeared to have been drunk with intoxicants and was garlanded in karaveera flowers. As was dressed thus, King Ravana appeared to have just got down from pushpaka viman to earth. It then looked as if he was dragging a female. At that time, King Ravana was wearing dark clothing and was riding a donkey chariot. That woman was looking shocked and rattled. Her face was frightened with madness. They both were airborne flying southbound. Then I saw the King descending and touching the earth by the air borne chariot of donkeys. The woman thus having been seated on his lap rolled down to earth as having been dragged. Then the female was shivering with fright and was screaming like a mad woman in distress, half clad, and was shouting curses at him. Then King Ravana dragged the woman into a hell like dirty and dingy cave with disgusting smell. There was a water body there around with slush and flies of large size. As her 'dussvapana' continued, Trijata continued: As Ravana proceeded further south ward, he witnessed yet another water body which did not, no doubt, have slush and mud as the waters were clean, but there was a black woman wearing red clothing crying away as Ravana was forcibly dragging her further south. Then one might notice Mahabali Kumbhakarna snoring in sound slumber. Mahasura Ravana's son Indrajit was bathing in streams of oil. It appeared that Kumbhakarna was in the sleeping posture on a cot hung down on the hump of a camel while Indrajit was bathing on the back of a huge frog. The aged Trijata then passed above the house of Vibhishana wearing white clothes, white garland of flowers perfumed with white chandana. Vibhishana's residence was resounding with drums, music and dance. Then Vibhishana was visioned as seated on a white elephant. Then Rakshasi Trijata's dussvapna continued showing multitudes of Royal horses and elephants were seen sinking as forcibly pulled down by high and gushing tides of the great ocean. Lanka drushtvaa maya sapne Raavanen aabhi rakshati, dagdhaa Ramasya dootena vaanarena tarsvitaā/ Trijata further dreamt that one mighty Vaanara as the messenger of Shri Rama would very soon be burnt off to devastation of the fabulously built up and well decorated Lankapuri of the world renown. Then Lankapuri like a wax made city of fame would turn to a huge 'smashaana', the burial ground. Then Vrissaha Rakshasi Trijata shouting loud at the brain weak yet brawn mighty Maha Ranshis about to devour Devi Sita alive addressed them as follows: apagacchata naśyadhvaṁ sītām āpnoti rāghavaḥ, ghātayet paramāmarṣī sarvaiḥ sārddhaṁ hi rākṣasaiḥ/ priyām bahumatām bhāryām vanavāsam anuvratām, bhartsitām tarjitām vāpi nānumamśyati rāghavaḥ/ Stupid Rakshasis! Do you still wish to eat Devi Sita alive even after my explaining the details of my worst ever dreams as she indeed is an illustrious Pativrata of Shri Rama the signage of virtue, courage and proven invincibility. He would never pardon you, despite being a symbol of forgiveness of tolerable level, but not to throttle Sita's head and seek to eat her flesh! You must in fact fall at her feet straightaway and beg for your mercy! bhartsitām api yācadhvaṁ rākṣasyaḥ kiṁ vivakṣyā, rāghavād dhi bhayaṁ ghoram rākṣasānām upasthitam/ praṇipāta prasannā hi maithilī janakātmajā, alam eṣā paritrātum rākṣasyo mahato bhayāt/ Maha Rakshasis! I do realise that you may all try to reply something or another, but of use and of substance could that be! You have perpetrated the most heinous and unimaginable act of depravity. Having encircled around her prepared to devour her alive, no amount of begging her now would whitewash that away by falling at feet and such dramatics. The transformation would need to be a truly changed mindset. May be then your mercy appeals might be effective marginably though. But once convinced she might have the evocation of forgiveness! Rakshasis! Do realise the analogy of the birds seated on the same tree branch have different mind sets, a very few being dharmic and many others of demonoic! Very few with sonorous sounds of auspiciousness welcoming the arrival of their lovers but by and large with screeches of lust and hunger.

[Vishleshana of two birds seated on the same branch of a tree-source Mundaka Upanishad]

Dve Suparnaa Sayuja sakhaaya samaanam vriksham parishasvajaate, tayoranyam pippalam svaaddhvatti anaishnan anyobhichaakasheeti/ (An analogy of two companion birds named Suparna and Sayuja is drawn sharing the same tree as one is busy eating the fruits of the tree while the other remains watching without tasting; this is just as two persons are enjoying the taste even as the other refrains. While one regales by rejoicing the sweet results of different kinds of material happiness the other person calculates and weighs the pros and cons of the karma and the resultant reactions.)

Despite Trijata's 'dussvapna' foreboding shouts of disasters about Ravana and Lanka Rajya, Devi Sita continued to cry shell shocked; however gradually recovered due to her own forevisions of auspiciousness.

Acutely suffering the heart-rending distress of 'Pati Viyoga', Ravana's unthinkable advances to her, and the physical assaults by the Rakshasis surrounding, Devi Sita truly realised she was indeed like a she-elephant being attacked from all sides by a cruel lion. She felt that a lamb caught amid a pack of wolves. There is an adage as asserted by Mahatmas of virtue that as once a youthful person encounters deathful crises, those are but passing phases being unbearable experiences. A well married female of excellent family upbringing and surfiest of dedication to husband should not imagine nightmares even if exposed to crises. sukhād vihinām bahuduhkhapūrṇam; idam tu nūnam hṛdayam sthiram me vidīryate yan na sahasradhādyā; vajrāhataṁ śṛṅgam ivācalasya/ Indeed my heart is bereft of happiness; nevertheless, one's inner strength fortified by 'atma nigrha' or immense resoluteness and single minded courage is truly comparable to a mountain minaret even hit by diamond like rocks. naivāsti nūnam mama doṣam atra; vadhyāham asyāpriyadarśanasya, bhāvam na cāsyāham anupradātum; alam dvijo mantram ivādvijāya/ nūnam mamāṅgāny acirād anāryaḥ; śastraiḥ śitaiś chetsyati rākṣasendraḥ, tasminn anāgacchati lokanāthe; garbhasthajanor iva śalyakṛntaḥ/ I am unfortunately caught in the grip of Ravana hence atma tyaaga might not be a crime. Since a low class human is highly unworthy of teaching Veda vedangas, likewise I could never make him understand the values of 'paativratya'. Alas! May be this Ravana might not mince my body into pieces as Indra entered Devi Diti's garbha and minced parts of it!

Chakravarti Bali, who was also punished by Vamana, the incarnation of Vishnu. Diti felt that Indra was responsible for several killings of her progeny including Hiranyaksha and Hiranuyakasipu and thus her anger for Indra became intense. She thus requested her husband Kasyapa to bless her with a son who could kill Indra. Sage Kasyapa felt extremely sad that his wife was following a wicked route to bear her a son to kill Indra. He somehow desired that such an eventuality should never arise and planned to at least prolong time for a year and asked Diti to follow very strict regime of personal sacrifice named 'Pumsavana'. During the year, Diti should not think ill of others, nor speak lies, nor hurt any body, nor eat flesh or fish, nor wear robes unwashed by herself, but worship Brahmanas, cows, and women with husbands and sons alive, in short follow a life of a hermit. Any discrepancy or deviation from the prescribed do's and don'ts would not only kill Indra but would become a friend and associate. The nephew Indra knew the intention of Diti, but pretended to help her in the Daily Worships by fetching flowers and fruits to Diti and such other services. At the time of Diti's delivery after a year, Indra who had yoga sidhis, like 'anima' and 'laghima' entered Diti's womb and with the help of his 'Vjara' (the Thunderbolt) cut the embryo into seven pieces and cut each piece to another seven pieces. Each of the forty-nine pieces thus born became as many 'Maruts' who became demigods and thus Diti was purified of her envy and animosity of Lord Indra.]

It is nearly two months since Ravana dragged me here. I am precisely in the hopeless situation of being imprisoned and kept awaiting death as on the night before Ha Rama Ha Lakshmana! Ha Devis Koushalya- Sumitra; this sinking boat of my 'praarabhha' is floating in the 'dukhha maha saagara' facing my termination!!

Hanuman witnessesd series of Ravana’s sweet offers to wed Sita, her no-nonsense reaction, his three month notice, violent threats of Rakshasis, Trijata’s forebodings, now desires to appear before her, but how!.

Maha bala Veera Hanuman had witnessed the senario of Devi Sita's distress and helplessness, the threats of Rakshasis surrounding her to eat her alive, Rakshasi Trijata's warnings and evil forebodings to 'Lanka Saamrajya' and the killing of the King and followers and the like. His thoughts flashed off in different directions. Innumerable Vaanara Veeras were despatched by King Sugriva to all the directions to search for Devi Sita's whereabouts. Happily I had succeeded. Blessed with my utmost dedication to Swaami Karya, and having assumed miniature form, I have been keenly observing the enemy's strength, the varied shades of their 'dharmaadharma pravartana', and the significance of Ravana's mental aberrations and so on. Devi Sita a peerless Pativrata has no other thoughts excepting of Shri Rama. She is literally flustered for his 'darshana'. Her face is like Purnachandra and had never missed his nearness; she never ever got unnerved as of now. I feel like to console her atonce and give extremely positive arrival of the epic hero. yadi hy aham imām devīm śokopahatacetanām, anāśvāsya gamiṣyāmi doṣavad gamanaṁ bhavet/ gate hi mayi tatreyāṁ rājaputrī yaśasvinī, paritrāṇam avindantī jānakī jīvitam tyajet/ mayā ca sa mahābāhuḥ pūrṇacandranibhānanaḥ, samāśvāsayituṁ nyāyayāḥ sītadarśanalālasaḥ/ In the eventuality of my returning back without assuring her of Shri Rama's arrival soon and thus controlling her agony, it should indeed be a huge lapse on my part. In case I do so, the crue Rakshasis on one pretext or another might even resort to devouring her alive. Worse still would be that she herself resort her atma samarpana out of extreme frustration. Hence it ought to be opportune for me to convey positive indications to her. niśācarīṇām pratyakṣam akṣamaṁ cābhibhāṣaṇam, athaṁ nu khalu kartavyam idaṁ kṛcchra gato hy aham/ anena rātriśeṣeṇa yadi nāśvāsyate mayā, sarvathā nāsti saṁdehaḥ parityakṣyati jīvitam/ rāmaś ca yadi pṛcchen mām kim mām sītābravīd vacaḥ, kim aham taṁ pratibrūyām asaṁbhāṣya sumadhyamām/ But under these circumstances however, it is certainly not advisable for me to address Devi Sita in front of the cruel Rakshasis surrounding her. Under these circumstances, it is rather irksome for me to freely converse and convince her to be brave and feel confident. If I am not able to utilise this opportunity to night itself what all has been accomplished by me so far would be a sheer waste. On my return to Shri Rama, he should definitely enquire about Devi Sita's whereabouts and more significantly about her whatabouts and then I should not be able to reply. Then Bhagava Shri Rama could be incensed and burn me alive. May be some how my should be able to assuage her emotions. As it is body is quite miniaturized and more so I am a Vanara. If I were to convey my thoughts to her in Samskrita Vaani, then she might think that Ravana was talking to her assuming his form as a 'dwija'. Then I might have to such language as spoken in the type of language in Ayodhya and thereabouts. Then again she might suspect Ravana in my form. Then again the Rakshasis suspect Ravana's presence there and harass me further more. Suppose that in my own form then I might get caught and the entire Ravana Sena could be alerted to pounce on me and thus the Swami Karya could remain unfulfilled. kāmaṁ hantuṁ samartho 'smi sahasrāṇy api rakṣasām, na tu śakṣyāmi samprāptuṁ param pāram mahodadheḥ/ asatyāni ca yuddhāni samśayo me na rocate, kaś ca niḥsamśayaṁ kāryaṁ kuryāt prājñāḥ samśayaṁ/ eṣa doṣo mahān hi syān mama sītābhibhāṣaṇe, prāṇatyāgaś ca vaidehyā bhaved anabhibhāṣaṇe/ No doubt I do posses the capability of devastating thousands of Rakshasa yodhas, but then getting involved with such adventurous steps, I might not be decisive of the endeavor with uncertainties nor be then capable of my crossing the ocean for certain. All the same, not being able to converse with her and pacify her with the awareness of the Rakshasis appears to be a huge question mark! bhūtās cārthā vinaśyanti deśakālavirodhitāḥ, viklavam dūtam āsādyā tamaḥ sūryodaye yathā/ This is the most unfortunate predicament as a dull and foolhardy messenger of Shri Rama's standing is finding lost in a critical situation disabled to adjust as per the 'desha kaala paristhitis', like a critical night enveloped with thick darkness awaits the Ushakaala Surya! No foolish messener of a standing of Shri Rama, without the awareness of 'kartavyakartavya' or dutifulness or otherwise is worthy of being trustworthy who would feel that he is a quite intelligent, might invariably spoil the mission entrusted. katham nu khalu vākyaṁ me śṇuyān nodvijeta ca, iti samcintya hanumānś cakāra matimān matim/ rāmam akliṣṭakarmāṇaṁ svabandhum anukīrtayan, nainām udvejaiṣyāmi tad bandhugatamānasām/ Therefore, I feel that the task entrusted to me should not be performed, the very purpose of my crossing the Maha Sagara be not spoilt, yet Devi Sita be conveyed my message, never be careless out of fear or confusion. I should therefore decide to start singing the 'guna ganas' of Ikshvaaku Vamsha, Shri Rama's outstanding qualities without provoking those Rakshasis, yet making sure that Devi Sita would certainly lend her ears too. I should seek to sweet singing like a lullaby to others, yet might convince Devi Sita too as of statemens of genuineness.' This was how after prolonged introspection, Veera Hanuman decided to hide himself in a miniature swarupa well settled and seated on a broad and sturdy branch of the Ashoka Vriksha, while witnessing the disturbed yet sweet face of Devi Sita whose was lost in agitation and deep introspection of Maha Veera Shri Rama and of the sweet memories of of his unending care and deep affection showered on her as a peerless pativrata.

Having thought over of the pros and cons of approaching Devi Sita for long time, Veera Hanuman in his miniature form sitting on a branch of the Ashoka tree started singing in his low and sweet tone as follows: Onec there was a famed King Dasharatha of ourstanding virtue and world wide fame in the Ikshvaku dynasty. He was a Rajarshi commended by Maharshis and the Praja alike. Being bestowed with the qualities of in ideal king, a dharma swarupa, and of the bravery, he was blessed with his eldest son popular as Shri Ramawho was a symbol of kindness, bravery, dhunur vidya, and pitruvaalka parapaalata. rakṣitā svasya vṛttasya svajanasyāpi rakṣitā, rakṣitā jīvalokasya dharmasya ca paramtapah/ tasya satyābhisamdhasya vṛddhasya vacanāt pituḥ, sabhāryaḥ saha ca bhrātrā vīraḥ pravrajito vanam/ tena tatra mahārāṇye mṛgayām paridhāvatā, janasthānavadham śrutvā hatau ca kharadūṣaṇau/ tatas tv amarṣāpahṛtā jānakī rāvaṇena tu/ yathārūpām yathāvarṇām yathālakṣmīm viniścītām, aśrauṣaṁ rāghavasyāham seyam āsāditā mayā/ That parakrami Shri Rama, the know dharma rakshaka declared to the worlds his satya pratigjna to undergo vanavasa, and his wife a parama pativrata and his most loyal younger brother Lakshmana too accompanied him. During their stay he and the brother several rakshasa. In the course of their staty at the ‘jana sthaana’, Mahasura Ravavana had forcibly abducted Devi Sita whiie while she was left all alone by arranging rakshasa Mareecha to assume a maya mriga form forcing Rama to chase and Lalshmana followed suit. Seaching for Devi Sita Rama Lakshmanas approached kiushkindha, met and made friends with the fugitive King of Vanaras, named Sugriva, killed the then vanara king Vaali. Subsequently, the new Vanara King arranged for Devi very many Vanara soldiers for Devi Sitanveshana and one of the able one of them jumped in , crossed the oceanand reached where Devi Sita is being surrounded by cruelmost rakshasis. As the maha jnaani Hanuman had deftly conveyed the required message to Devi Sita, the latter was thrilled with indescribable relief and relief. and looked up the tree. and saw a vanara, apparently in a mini form. Meanwhile, buddhimaan Hanuman sat there looking up and down.

Taḥ śākhāntare līnam dṛṣṭvā calitamānasā, sāvīryaḥ kapim tatra praśritam priyavādinam/ sāvīryaḥ dṛṣṭvā hariśreṣṭham vinītavad upasthitam, maithilī cintayām āsa svapno ‘yam iti bhāminī/ sāvīryaḥ tam samīkṣyaiva bhr̥ṣaṁ viśamjñā; gatāsukalpeva babhūva sītā, cireṇa samjñām pratilabhya caiva; vicintayām āsa ‘Ramabhavena; saṁpīditā tad gatasarvabhāvā, vicintayantī satatam tam eva; tathaiva paśyāmi tathā am unable torūpam; saktarūpaś ca vadaty ayaṁ mām/ namo ‘stu vācaspataye savajriṇe; svayambhuve caiva hutāśanāya, anena cokaṁ yad idaṁ mamāgrato; vanaukasā tac ca tathāstu nānyathā/

As Devi Sita found a hazy form of a Vanara of 'pingala shareera' adorned in white clothing looking like a lightning, she stood up instantly. She was puzzled to clearly see a vanara with unbelievable eyes but not daring to see him straight. Being frightened partly with disbelief and partly with the hope and being unbearable suspense and suspicion, fell down in swoon. On gradual recovery, she cried: 'hey Rama, he Lakshmana' and broke down in intolerable weeping. Swapno mamaayam vikritodya drishtah, shakhaa mrigah shaakhaganairnishiddhah, svasyastu raamaaya salakasmanasya tathah piturmr janakasya raagjnah/ Swapne hi naahimemita nidra shokena dhukhena cha peeditayaa/ sukham hi naasti yato viheenaa tenendupurnaapratimaanbanena/ Thereafter, she felt again whether she saw either a dream or a hallucination. It is well known that seeing a monkey in dreams is inauspicious. Yet, due to extreme restlessness, one is unable to sleep properly keeping on crying Rama, ah Rama, I am getting drowned in distress; am not able to concentrate, much less to take to 'tarka- vitarka' or the pros and cons of this situation, being totally have lost mental awareness as nothing becomes clear excepting this Vaanara swarupa.; or else, I can only remember Vajradhari Indra, Srishtikarta Brahma, Adishthaana rupa Agni Deva!!

.Veera Hanuman having got down from the top branch of the Ashoka Vriksha extending his folded hands to Devi Sita with extreme politeness stated in his soft tone: Open lotus like faced Devi! Who are you! Are you a devata, or gandharva, yaksha, naaga, kinnara. Are you Devi Arundhati angry with her husband

Maharshi Vasishtha! Who indeed is your husband, father, relatives! Why are you crying away! Hope not Shri Rama's dharma patni Devi Sita, forcibly abducted by Ravanaasura. Then Devi Sita was extremely pleased and stood up despite being weak by holding the Ashoka tree trunk. She stated: Kapi shreshtha! I am indeed the daughter in law of the famed King Dashratha, the dharma patni of the glorious Maha Veera and dharmagjna Shri Rama. Then she narrated her life's erstwhile experiences, as to how she enjoyed her marital bliss with her dear husband for twelve years, how King Dasharatha in consultation with the Raja guru Maharshi Vasishtha decided Shri Ram's yuva raajya pattaabhisheka, how on the night before, Devi Kaikeyi the third and youngest wife of King Dasharatha reminded of the King's erstwhile promise to her to make her own son Bharata the yuva Raja, and how she demanded Shri Rama to proceed to forest life. Devi Sita still unconvinced fully about the guineness of Hanuman, the latter describes Rama's physical features and mental acumen and bravery, pleading his own genuineness.

On hearing what all has been stated by Devi Sita, Hanuman sought to give solace and stated ‘Devi! I am the messenger of Shri Rama; he is safe and sought to know about your welfare. Devi! Shri Rama is not only an expert of Brahmastra but of veda vetta. My self along with Lakshmana, we seek to prostrate to you in reverence. Hanuman stated thus, she was mighty thrilled with happiness. kalyāṇī bata gatheyam laukikī pratibhāti me, ehi jīvantam ānado naram varṣaśatād api/ If only a human being were alive, that conversing with Hanuman freely and frankly. Yet, there as a streak of remote fear whether Ravana had not entered as Hanuman! She then addressed Ravana: If you have appeared here as a Hanuman, tell me whether you are really not Ravana whom I met at the ‘janasthanan’! If not, then I feel contented. But, do make a detailed description of Shri Rama. aho svapnasya sukhatā yāham evam cirāhṛtā, preṣitam nāma paśyāmi rāghaveṇa vanaukasam/ svapne 'pi yady aham vīram rāghavam sahalakṣmaṇam, paśyeyam nāvasīdeyam svapno 'pi mama matsarī/ nāham svapnam imam manye svapne dṛṣṭvā hi vānaram, na śakyo 'bhyudayaḥ prāptum prāptaś cābhyudayo mama/ Aho! If only this were not to be a dream, how wonderful this situation could be! Am I really seeing Shri Rama’s messenger! Rama is comparable to ‘Maha Yashasvi Vishnu Samaa’ and ‘sathavaadi and madhura vaani samana’ like Brishpati Deva. As per Rama’s physical form, Shri Rama was comparable to ‘Kama deva’; yet once kindled with anger, he would be a Maha Rathi with no comparison in the worlds. Then Anjaneya reiterated that indeed he was the truthful and real messenger of Sri Rama, indeed. He is really suffering Devi Sita’s viyoga and is truly and most concerned of your whereabouts and what abouts. Achiraad Ravanam samvyey yo vadhishyanti veerayavaan, krodha pramuttairapirishur -bhirjaladdbhirivapaavakaih/Maha Parakrami Shri Rama should therefore soon arrive here and armed with fiery arrows and in a combat with Ravana should destroy him and his clan. I happen to be the Minister to Sugriva; soon enough you should soon enough see crores of Vaararas fighting for Shri Rama to uproot Rakshasas and Ravanarura along with his entire clan. I had arrived here having crossed the Maha Sumudra and seen the entire proceedings of Ravana and his ill begotten wealth and fame.

Devi Sita finally concedes Hanuman’s genuineness-he describes Rama’s ‘guna ganaas’, how Rama missed her, Sugriva’s help repaying Rama’s help by killing Vaali- Sampati’s guidance to reach her.

Totally convinced by now of Anjaneya's genuineness by the way he explained lucidly as to what all seemed to have happened pursuant her abduction by the crura Ravana, Devi Sita addressed Hanuman as follows: Kapi Veera! Where did you meet Shri Rama! What is the mutual treatment of Shri Rama to you. How well do you know Veera Lakshmana? How come you vaanaras and Rama Lakshmanas met together! Vanara! What are the physical features of Rama Lakshmanas! Explain to me more accurately without getting emotional. Provide me details of their shoulders, physical cut and overall impression. Vishleskana on Vedas and Vedangas

Chaturvedas: Originally there was only one Unique Veda from the face of Lord Brahma but Vyasa Maharshi felt that the Single Veda covering all the aspects of Existence would be difficult to absorb by the successive generations and hence facilitated the division into Chatur Vedas viz. Rik-Yajur-Saama-Atharvana. Vedas are the beacon lights to search the ways and means to achieve the 'Purusharthas' of Dharma, Artha, Kama and Moksha. The four Vedas viz. Rig, Yajur, Saama and Atharva Vedas put together are stated to total one lakh Mantras. Rigveda contains two distinct 'Shaakhaas' or branches, viz. 'Sankhyayana' and 'Ashvala -ayana' and together contains one thousand Mantras, while Rigvediya Brahmana Bhhaga contains two thousand Mantras. Maharshis like Shri Krishna Dwaipayana took Rigveda as 'Pramana' (Standard) Veda. Yajur Veda contains nineteen thousand Mantras. Of these, the Brahmana Grandhas have one thousand Mantras and the Shaakhas have one thousand six hundred and eight Mantras. In Yajurveda the main Shaakhaas are ‘Kanvi’, ‘Maadhyandini’, ‘Kathi’, ‘Maadhya Kathi’, ‘Maitraayani’, ‘Taittiriya’ and ‘Vaishampaaniya’. Saama Veda has two main Shakhas viz. ‘Kouthuma’ and ‘Aatharvaayani’ or Raamaayaniya’ and these contain ‘Veda’, ‘Aaranyaka’, ‘Uktha’ and ‘Vuuha’ ‘Gaanaas’ or Verses. Saama Veda has nine thousand four hundred twenty five Mantras-all stated to be related to Brahma. Atharva Veda has Rishi-oriented Shaakhaas like Sumantu, Jaajali, Shlokaayani, Shounaka, Pippalaad and Munjakesha. These contain sixteen thousand Mantras and hundred ‘Upanishads’. The Shaakha differentiation of Vedas and of Itihaasaas and Puraanas was stated to have been done by Vishnu Himself and were of Vishnu Swarupa. Vyaasa preached Puranas to Lomaharshana and to Suta by way of ‘Purana Pravachana’. The main ‘Sishyas’ of Vyasa were Sumati, Agnivarcha, Shimshapaayan, Kritavrata and Saavarni. Shimshapaayan and others were engaged in constructing ‘Samhitaas’. (Source: Agni Purana)

Shat Vedangas: Siksha, Vyakarana, Kalpa Grandha, Nirukta, Chhandas, and Jyotisha. Siksha is essentially about Sangeeta or Music the Swara Shastra viz. Sapta Swaras, Gramas or scale or gamut in music, Murchanas or intonations/modulations, ten Gunas, Padas (letters); Kalpa grantha comprises kalpas of Nakshatra or Chandra-Nakshatra movement; Veda for attaining Purushardhas viz. Dharma-Artha- Kaama-Moksha; Samhita about Tatwa Darshi, Mantras Chhandas etc; Angirasa Kalpa about abhichara vidhi vidhana like procedures of magic, charms, benevolent or malevolent karma kaanda and finally Shanti Kalpa, Mantras, Procedures, to ward off dangers, and usher in good tidings from Celestial, Terrestrial, extra terrestrial sources. Griha Kalpa too is significant like Homa Prakriyas, Mudras, Mangala Snaanaas, Abhishekas, Pujas for Deva-Devis and Nava Grahas etc. Vyakarana Shastra is about grammar, vibhaktis or cases, vachanas, naama - sarvanaamas, Pratyaya, Samaasa, Karakas. Nirukta is derived and rhetoric or artificial interpretation seeking to bring out the hidden meaning of Vedas; viz. ‘nir’ connoting the comprehensive sense that is sought to be conveyed and ‘ukta’ states that which is revealed more than what is concealed. Chhandas Shastra is stated as the feet of Vedas, being ‘Vaidik’ and ‘Loukik’; Gayatri-Brihati-Ushnik-Jagati-Trishthup- Anushtup -Pankti being the Chhando Vidhi and the various combinations of ‘Ganas’ varied basically with ‘ya-maa-taa-raa-ja-baa-na-sa-la-ga’ and poetry made there of in three letter combinations; the ruling deities of the Ganas are: Ya gana (Water), Ma gana (Prithvi), Ta gana (Sky), Ra gana (Agni/ fire), Ja gana (Surya), Bha gana (Chandra), Na gana (Ayu or Life/health) and Sa gana (Vaayu). Jyotisha Shastra is all about Siddantha Ganita, Jaataka/ hora, and Samhita. The means of Jyotisha are Panchanga Sadhana by way of Thithi-Vaara-Nakshatra-Karana-Yoga; Grahana Sadhana of Solar/ Lunar Eclipses, besides Dik-Sadhana. Jaataka Skandha is the Science of Raashi-Shad Varga, ‘Maitri Bhaavaabhaavaas’ and Graha-Nakshatra compatibilities. (Source: Narada Purana)

His body parts are wonderfully chistelled and sturdy as his chest is broad, shoulders hefty, and ‘naabhi sthaana’ well proportioned to the stomach above. His knees too are in ideal alingment with legs. His eyelashes are alluring, finger tips and nails of both hands and feet are the most attractive. His tone, gait, and body middle are in perfect unison. All his fourteen body parts are like his eyes, nose, ears, mouth, thighs, hands, legs, knees, feet, lips, chin, broad face, skin, forehead, and so on. In fact, Shri Rama’s Pancha Jnanendriyas viz. Both the cousins landed at the foot hills of Rishyamooka parvata searching for the exiled King Sugriva. Then I had taken them to Sugriva, but the latter was non-plussed at their sudden and strange appearance of Rama Lakshmanas with their respective bows and arrows wearing deer skins and climbed up to the mountain top with suspense and fear! Then I made Sugriva realise that the strangers were brothers who had arrived seeking friendship with him, while I took the brothers on my shoulders and reached them to Sugriva. niveditau ca tattvena sugrīvāya mahātmane, tayo anyonyasambhāṣād bhr̥ṣaṁ pr̥tīr ajāyata/ tatra tau kīrtisaṁpannau harīśvaranareśvarau, parasparakṛtāśvāsau kathayā pūrvavṛttayā/ tam tataḥ sāntvayām āsa sugrīvaṁ lakṣmaṇāgrajaḥ, strīhetor vālinā bhr̥trā nirastam uru tejasā/ Hanuman continued the narration to Devi Sita further: 'Devi! I had explained the details of what all had happened to both the parties in detail. They understood the contexts and assured of mutual help. Shri Raghunatha understood that Sugriva's elder brother Vaali a maha parakrami kicked Sugriva from the kingdom and even forcibly retained Sugriva's wife. On the other hand, when Lakshmana explained: 'Shri Rama's wife Devi Sita a 'maha pativrata' was forcibly kidnapped by Ravana when the 'maha veeraas' of Rama Lakshmana were absent by creating a circumstance of make believe 'maya'. sa śrutvā vānarendras tu lakṣmaṇeneritaṁ vacaḥ, tadāśīn niṣprabho 'tyarthaṁ grahagrasta ivāśmūn/ tatas tvadgātraśobhīni rakṣasā hriyamāṇayā, yāny ābharaṇajālāni pātītāni mahītale/ tāni sarvāṇi rāmāya ānīya hariyūthapāḥ, saṁhṛṣṭā darśayām āsur gatiṁ tu na vidus tava/ When Lakshmana heard thus, Sugriva turned pale as if Surya was devoured by Rahu! Then he called the co-vanaras to bring the ornaments and clothes dropped presumably by a distressed and crying loudly woman and displayed the same to Shri Rama Lakshmanas. tāni rāmāya dattāni, mayāvopah -rtāni ca, svanavanty avakīrṇanti tasmin vihatacetasī/ tāny anke darśanīyāni kṛtvā bahuvīdhaṁ tataḥ, tena devaprakāśena devena paridevitam/ Sugriva further explained to Rama Lakshmanas: as the ornaments and upper garment coverings fell down on the mountain top, there were noises of loud and desparate cryings of a woman and the sounds of the droppings of ornaments and flying clothes down. paśyatas tasyā rudatas tām yataś ca punaḥ punaḥ, prādīpayan dāśarathes tāni śokahutāśanam/ śayitam ca ciraṁ tena duḥkhārtena mahātmanā, mayāpi vividhair vākyaiḥ kṛcchrād utthāpitaḥ punaḥ/ Then Shri Rama readily recognised them, hugged them on to his chest, and broke down in to instant cryings. Both Rama and Sugriva are bound by mutual pratigjnas with Agni Deva as the Saakshi. Rama on his part had already fulfilled his golden promise and here am I having been despatched for Devi Sita-anveshana. King Sugriva had despatched crores of Vaanara Yoddhas like me or far more abled to north-west-east and now to the south. Happily I feel honoured to have discovered you here. Maha Bali Vaali's son named Kapi sreshtha Angada, the Yuva Raja of the 'maha vaanara sena' including some born with 'Devaamsha', is heading our dakshina vaanara

sena was disappointed, even having faced several challenges and desired to resort to ‘atmaarpana’ em mass as the prescribed by King Sugriva for our return. We had crossed impossible teraaain, insurmounta - ble mountains, and hence the ‘aamarana upavaasaas’. Then the elder brother of Jatayu named Sampati- prevented us from the desperate of atmaarpana; you are aware Devi! Jatayu fought to near death the most disgusting Ravana while abducting you and were seen by Rama Lakshmanas subsequently and performed his ‘antima samskaaraas’. Believe me Devi! as we headed by Angada prevented all of us the southern side bound vaanara sena boosted our morale: athāham harisainyasya sāgarām dṛśya sīdataḥ, vyavadhūya bhayaṁ tīvraṁ yojanānām śataṁ plutāḥ/ laṅkā cāpi mayā rātrau praviṣṭā rākṣasākulā, rāvaṇas ca mayā dṛṣtas tvaṁ ca śokanipīditā/ etat te sarvaṁ ākhyātāṁ yathāvyṛttam anindite, abhibhāṣasva mām devi dūto dāśarather aham/ Then all the ‘vanara yodhhaas’ reached the Sea shore but got nervous how to cross the other side of the Sea with a span of hundred yojanas by way of a very very long jump. As I was finally chosen and crossing hurdles on the way and at the other side of Lankapuri ‘simha dwaara’, I was able to succeed in visioning you finally as being tormented by Ravana and the surrounding Rakshasis. Sati shiromani! This is briefly my background and hopefully conveyed to you in essence. I am the trustworthy and dutiful servant and messenger of Shri Rama; I happen to be the Prime Minister of King Sugriva and might consider me as the son of Vayu Deva and Devi Anjana. Devi! Your dear husband Kakutstha kula bhushana Shri Rama Chandra is safe yet ever missing you, and so does Lakashmana your dear brother-in-law.’ As Hanuman assuaged her mental feelings, Devi Sita was wet with tears of relief and signs of welcome auguries, then the latter continued further: ‘Mithileshwari kumari! As you have enquired, hope I have replied to you in some detail. Now, please be brave, and ask me if you have any further clarifications. If allowed, may I leave now. hate ’sure saṁyati śambasādane; kapipravīreṇa maharṣicodanāt, tato ’smi vāyuprabhavo hi maithili; prabhāvatas tatpratimaś ca vānarh/ Finally while seeing off Devi, Veera Hanuman asserted: ‘I am the Vaanara putra of the famed Kesari who as prompted by Maharshi to kill Shambasaadanapura and married to Devi Ajana who in turn was wedded to Vayu Deva too as her fleeting husband!’

[Comprehensive Vishleshana on a) Kesari-Shambanaada-Anjana Kumari; b)-Vayu Deva and Anjana Devi-c) Glory of Anjaneya d) Hanuman and Ravanaasura]

a) Kesari was the son of Gautami Rishi and Kesari’s wife was Devi Anjana who secured a son named Anjaneya. Once Raakshasa Shambasaadana spied on Anjana Kumari who was playfully singing a song but a dirty hand of a Rakshasa tried to draw her close as she was bewildered with fear as was seeking her near, whispering in a heavy: My dear dove! Why are you fleeing from me! As shrieked saying ‘help me, help me.’ The Rakshasa said: none ever can save you; not even God. Kesari a huge Vanara saw from a tree top and jumped down and intervened. There followed a roaring fight but the Rakshasa overpowered Kesari, who in turn aimed at the rakshasa with his bow and arrows. The fight continued as the Rakshasa took the form of a huge elephant. The rain of arrows continued yet the rakshasa remained invincible since the thick skin of the elephant was infact boomeranging back to Kesari. Then Kesari suddenly assumed a miniature form, flew on to the elephant head, tortured the weakest points of the elephant’s brain cells. The Rakshasa in response dropped the miniaturized vaanara down to earth as Kesari’s blood cells were cut and blood started flowing out. Meanwhile, the dazed Anjana Kumari prayed to Lord Shiva, and a whispering voice was heard: nothing could happen to the rakshasa as he is invincible, except by the rakshasa’s own blood. Anjana Kumari got the hint, secretly crawled on the ground, picked up an arrow from Kesari, smeared rakshasa’s own blood there on, whispered to Kesari, reached the bow and arrow to his hands and hit at Rakshasa once again. Meanwhile, Shambasaadana took the form of a huge bull with a view to gore Kesari’s writhing body to trample to death by lowering the bull horns. Kesari stood up somehow and shot his arrows- as smeared by Shambasaadana’s own blood- at the bull’s eyes. The bull’s eyes were punctured and the rakshasa’s blood came out in flows and the Rakshasa collapsed down. Kumari Anjana had quickly smeared the rakshasa’s own blood on to Kesari’s arrows and supplied to the bow of Kesari. Thus crashed down the Rakshasa’s huge bull body to death. As Maharshi witnessd by their ‘divya drishti’ appeared and endeared both Kesari and Anjana and having taken their mutual consent blessed them as ideal couples.

b) Excerpts from Sarga 67 of Kishkindha Khanda of Valmiki Ramayana on Vayu Deva and Devi Anjana:

Veeranjaneya! Your origin and of birth are indescribable: Pujikasthala was indeed a famed Aprasa was cursed to be born as ‘Kapini’ or Vanara Stree famed as Anjana who was wedded to Kesari. As the Kapini had the ability to assume any form as she pleased and during the rainy season was seated on a mountain top dressed in silks, with priceless ornaments and decorated with sweet odoured flowers. Then there was a sweep of wind and Devi Anjana and Vayu Deva touched her tightly. sā tu tatraiva sambhrāntā suvṛttā vākyam abravīt, ekapatnīvrataṁ idam ko nāśayitum icchati/ añjanāyā vacaḥ śrutvā mārutaḥ pratyabhāṣata, na tvām himsāmi suśroṇi mā bhūt te subhage bhayam/ But Devi Anjana was an ideal ‘Pativrata’ and in that hesitant concern, did not make further advances and was in fact terribly afraid. Then Vayu Deva smiled reassuringly and said: ‘Who indeed wishes to spoil your pativrata vrata! Sushreni! Don’t you be scared as your mind must be rid of misleading thoughts. manasāsmi gato yat tvām pariṣvajya yaśasvini, vīryavān buddhisampannaḥ putras tava bhaviṣyati/ abhyutthitaṁ tataḥ sūryam bālo dṛṣṭvā mahāvane, phalaṁ ceti jighṛkṣus tvam utplutyābhyapato divam/ Yashasvini! I would only like to embrace you mentally by way of ‘maanasika sankalpa’ but not physically. As a result of such ‘maanasika samyoga’, you would be blessed with a ‘Maha Bala Paraakrama, Buddhi Sampanna Putra praapti’ who could cross oceans with speed and great ease!. Subsequently, Anjana Devi gave birth in a mountain cave!

c) Glory of Anjaneya from Sarga 67 as above:

Even in childhood, you always felt that Surya Deva too was a sweet fruit on the sky. śatāni trīṇi gatvātha yojanānām mahākape, tejasā tasya nirdhūto na viśadam tato gataḥ/ tāvad āpatatas tūrṇam antarikṣam mahākape, kṣiptam indreṇa te vajraṁ krodhāviṣṭena dhīmatā/ tataḥ śailāgraśikhare vāmo hanur abhajaṣya, tato hi nāmadheyam te hanumān iti kīrtiyate/ Maha Kape! Therefore you jumped up by three hundred yojanas once and felt that you could not still reach Surya. You kept on trying and finally reached Surya Deva, but Indra Deva was angry and hit you with his Vajrayudha. That was why your left side - hanu- was hurt and hence your name is ‘hanuman’! On seeing the entire scene, Vayu Deva was terribly concerned and thus the Prabhanjana Deva Vaayu stopped his movement in trilokas and then the Ashta Dikpalakas tried their best but finally Brahma Deva had to pacify Vayu Deva blessing Anjaneya would be immune from ‘astra shastras’! vajrasya ca nipātena virujam tvām samīkṣya ca, sahasranetraḥ prītātmā dadau te varam uttamam/ svacchandataś ca maraṇam te bhūyād iti vai prabho, sa tvām kesariṇaḥ putraḥ kṣetrajo bhīmaṁ vikramaḥ/ mārutasya aurasāḥ putras tejasā cāpi tatsamaḥ, tvām hi vāyusuto vatsa plavane cāpi tatsamaḥ/ Anjaneya! Even ‘vajra prahara’ by Indra Deva would be futile on your body and Mrityu is in your control’. Finally, Maha Jaambavan asserted: tad vijyambhasva vikrāntaḥ plavatām uttamo hy asi, tvadvīryam draṣṭukāmeyam sarvā vānaravāhini/ uttiṣṭha hariśārdūla laṅghayasva mahārṇavam, parā hi sarvabhūtānām hanuman yā gatis tava/ viśāṇṇā harayaḥ sarve hanuman kim upekṣase, vikramasva mahāvego viṣṇus trīṇ vikramān iva/ Parakrami Mahaanjaneya! Now is the time that you have to proclaim to the trilokas to heighten your stature as the Vanara Sena is longing to witness what you really indeed are. Kindly get up and cross this Maha Sagara in one jump as that indeed is a sure step for Loka Kalyana. All the Vaanara Veeras are right now are on the verge of collapse. As Maha Vishnu as Vamana Deva measured the Universe with three steps, please put forth three steps ahead to sure success! As Hanuman was ready to cross the Maha Samudra with gusto, the Vanara Sena which had hitherto were drowned in incapacity, helplessness and preparedness for self sacrifices, roared in ecstasy. Samstūyamāno hanumān vyavardhata mahābalaḥ, samāvidhya ca laṅgūlam harṣāc ca balam eyivān/ Enthused by their frenzy, he gradually increased his height and the proportionate volume of his body, just as Vamana Deva did. harīṇām utthito madhyāt samprahṛṣṭatanūruhaḥ, abhivādya harīn vṛddhān hanumān idam abravīt/ arujan parvatāgrāṇi hutāśanasakho ’nilaḥ, balavān aprameyaś ca vāyur ākāśagocaraḥ/ tasyāham śīghravigasya śīghragasya mahātmanaḥ, mārutasya aurasāḥ putraḥ plavane nāsti me samaḥ/ Veera Hanuman stood amidst the Vaanaras and addressed them especially the elderly Vanara Vriddhas thus: ‘I am of the strength and speed of Vaayu Deva, my originator and am possessive of endless energy. Vayu

Deva is a great friend of Agni Deva! I am blessed with the might of destroying mountains to pieces. Being the step son of Vayu Deva, my single jump could cross Maha Samudras. I could perform thousand parikramas of the thousand yojana spread of Maha Meru Parvata. bāhuvegapraṇunnena sāgareṇāham utsahe, samā -plāvayitum lokam saparvatanadīhradam/ mamorujaṅghāvegena bhaviṣyati samutthitaḥ, sammūrchitamahāgrāhaḥ samudro varuṇālayaḥ/ pannagāsānam ākāśe patantaṁ pakṣisevitam, vainateyam aham śaktaḥ parigantum sahasraśaḥ/ With the unimaginable might of my shoulders and hands, I could splash and pound the high waves of Maha Samudras, and create devastation and mahem of high mountains. Lord Varuna's nivasa of Sapta Sagaras [Sapta Samudras: Lavana or Salt, Ikshurasa or Sugarcane juice, Sura or Wine, Ghrita or Classified Butter, Dahi or Curd, Ksheera or Milk and Suswada or Sweet Water] could be violently shaken to distress. Vaanara vridhdhaas! Like Maha Veera Garuda the elder son of Vinata Devi is in the habit of 'akaasha parikrama' and my ability is such that I could comfortably perform such parikramas by thousand times. I could follow Surya Deva in his regular daily pradakshinas from Udayaagiri to the Astamaagiri! utsaheyam atikrāntum sarvān ākāśagocarān, sāgaram kṣobhayiṣyāmi dārayiṣyāmi medinīm/ parvatān kampayiṣyāmi plavamānaḥ plavaṅgamāḥ, hariṣye coruvegena plavamāno mahārṇavam/ Surely I have the capacity and aptitude to cross ahead of Nava Grahas, dry up oceans, destroy mountains, and keep jumping across the universe! buddhyā cāham prapaśyāmi manaś ceṣṭā ca me tathā, aham drakṣyāmi vaidehīm pramodadhvam plavaṅgamāḥ/ mārutasya samo vege garuḍasya samo jave, ayutaṁ yojanānām tu gamiṣyāmīti me matiḥ/ vāsavasya savajrasya brahmaṇo vā svayambhuvaḥ, vikramya sahasā hastād amṛtaṁ tad ihānaye, laṅkāṁ vāpi samutkṣipyā gaccheyam iti me matiḥ/ Vaanaras! As I apply my mind and cogitate, so do the circumstances and conditions too shape up likewise. My decisiveness right now is to see Videha Kumari's immediate darshan; now, you folks! Enjoy now and rejoice with very quick and most positive results and sweet fruits. I am only comparable to Vayu Deva and Garuda Deva; my strong belief and firm conviction at present is that I could comfortably undertake a rapid run of ten thousand yojanas of distance by air! Believe me my friends, right now, my morale and enthusiasm is such that I could seize and secure 'amrit' from the hands of Vajradhaari Indra or even Svayambhu Brahma Deva himself! Of which avail is, after all, pulling and uprooting the Kingdom Ravana's Lanka!' As Veera Hanuman assured thumping success from his tour of Lanka and back, the huge mass of Vaanaras paid sky high tributes, clappings, and victory shoutings of feverish rejoicings. Then commenced 'Swasti Vachanaas' and high tributes to the hero stating: ṛṣṭhāṁ ca prasādena kapivṛddhamatena ca, gurūṇāṁ ca prasādena plavasva tvaṁ mahārṇavam/ sthāsyāmaś caikapādena yāvadāgamanam tava, tvadgatāni ca sarveṣāṁ jīvitāni vanaukasām/ 'Maha Vanara Anjaneya! May you carry with you in your epic like tour by crossing the Maha Sagara with memorable success and safe return the heart felt blessings of Maharshis, Gurus, Elders and friends. We would all await your successful travel and very fruitful return; do trust us that your success would provide us all a fresh lease of our lives.' Hanuman replied: As I would now jump and cross the Samudra, be assured that in the universe none could ever imitate. My initial jump would be to the top of Mahendra Parvata which is replete with trees bearing juicy and sweet fruits.' Thus, the Maha Kapeshvara reached, selected a few luscious fruits, enjoyed them relaxingly and remembered of Lanka forthwith for the subsequent jump forward.

d) Hanuman and Ravana'sura from Bhavishya Purana:

Kesari the son of Gautami Rishi and Kesari's wife Anjana secured a grand son named Hanuman with the 'Amsa' (facet) of Parama Shiva and Vayu Deva too was responsible in the birth of the boy. Mistaking Surya Deva for a red-coloured fruit, the boy was tempted to fly skyward tried to hold Surya Deva, as Indra threw his Vajra on Hanuman's body and Ravana tried to hold Hanuman's tail but Hanuman never left his firm hold of Surya Deva. Ravan kept on fighting for a year in vain and tried to wriggle out of Hanuman's powerful clasp. Meanwhile Rishi Vishrava arrived at the spot and eulogised Hanuman to release Ravana the terror of the Universe. There after Hanuman resided for long time at Pampapura on the banks of PampaRiver as a strong fixture and was thus acclaimed as 'Sthanu'. Also since Ravana who had dictated the World and controlled Devas was humiliated by Anjaneya, his name and fame spread as Hanuman: Nighnanta cha Suraan mukhyan Ravanam Lokaraavanam, Nihanti Mushthirbhayah sa Hanumaaniti vishrutah. (Ravana who was in the habit of badly hurting Devas and related Demi-Gods and killing Vishnu- Bhaktas without mercy had thus been restrained badly and received a jolt by Hanuman; the ‘Mushtighatas’ or ‘Hanus’ (beatings of closed hand grasps) damaged Ravana was the reason why Hanuman was named as such. Lord Brahma informed Hanuman that during the twenty eighth Tretayuga’s first Part of Vaivaswa Manvantara, Bhagavan Vishnu would take the Incarnation of Shri Rama and that he would achieve Rama’s unreserved devotion to Hanuman and destroy the clan of Ravana, his cruel brothers and sinful sons.]

Maha Veera Hanuman bestows Shri Rama’s finger ring to Devi Sita as a memory refresher- the highly excited Devi Sita falls back to her memory screen, as Hanuman assures Rama’s arrival too soon!

Veera Hanuman then handed over Shri Rama's hand finger 'anguthi' as a parting refresher of sweet memories stating that Shri Rama had himself given to be handed over to Devi Sita and assured her of most auspicious moments soon. Devi Sita was truly thrilled as if Shri Rama himself had met her. Her face was brightened up with blushings as her looks were suddenly transformed to happiness and relief as if Full Moon was released by the clutches of Rahu Graha. She exclaimed to Hanuman: Vanara shiromani! I am totally convinced that you are not an ordinary Vaanara but a Maha Paraakrami, Shakti shaali, and most essentially a 'Buddhimaan' of excellence to have dared to enter this fortress of Lankapuri all by your grit and bravery, without even a semblance of fear and hesitation. I am convinced now that an unparalleled 'atma jnaani' of Shri Rama's caliber and reputation had selected you as his messenger as he should have been totally convinced of your capabilities. Having now learnt from you about the anxious moments being spent by Rama Lakshmanas who indeed are safe otherwise, I am relieved and once you convey to them personally, they too ought be pacified equally so on your return to them. Would not Shri Rama now display his caliber to burn down with anger and revenge the entire earth, let alone cross the Maha Sagara now and appear here instantaneously! Indeed, Rama Lakshmanas would not let even celestial powers let off now that my whereabouts are conveyed to them, since so far they had to necessarily keep their hands folded. Tell me Vanara Veera! Are Rama Lakshmanas getting extremely agitated or able to suppress their inner agitations! kaccin na dīnaḥ sambhrāntaḥ kāryeṣu ca na muhyati, kaccin puruṣakāryāṇi kurute nṛpateḥ sutaḥ/ dvividhaṁ trividhopāyam upāyam api sevate, vijigīṣuḥ suhṛt kaccin mitreṣu ca paramtapaḥ/ kaccin mitrāṇi labhate mitraiś cāpy abhigamyate, kaccit kalyāṇamitraś ca mitraiś cāpi puraskṛtaḥ/ Is Rama's psyche is orderly enough to exercise his sensitivities! [Vishleshana of Six Neeti Chandrikas vide Sarga Seventy of Valmiki Aranya Ramayana: 'Mahabali Kabandha shook off the ashes of the totally burnt off body and was visioned to have alighted a celestial vimana with clean robes smilingly and addressed Raghu nandana and declared: rāma śaḍ yuktayo loke yābhiḥ sarvaṁ vimṛśyate, parimṛṣṭo daśāntena daśābhāgena sevyate/ Shri Rama! Listen to me carefully: there are six ways and means of accomplishing Six 'Neeti Chandrikas' viz. Sandhi-Vigraha-Yaana-Aasana-Dwidhi bhaava-and samaashraya. Sandhi denotes the Principle of Truce, Tolerance and Coexistene. Vigraha refers to conflict of similar forces leading to balance of power. Yaana suggests travel or movement of forces for attack-aasana or tishtha the waiting period-dwidvidha of bheda bhaava or break up of friendship by similar forces of the enemies and finally 'samaashraya' or the celebrations of victory of togetherness.']

Devi Sita continues to ask Hanuman a series of questions: Kaccin na vigatasneho vivāsān mayi rāghavaḥ, kaccin mām vyasanād asmān mokṣayiṣyati vānaraḥ/ sukhānām ucito nityam asukhānām anūcitah, duḥkham uttaram āsādyā kaccid rāmo na sīdati/ kausalyāyās tathā kaccit sumitrāyās tathaiva ca, abhikṣṇam śrūyate kaccit kuśalam bharatasya ca/ Most unfortunately, Veera Hanuman! As I have been in Lanka and therefore for Devi Sitaanveshana, I am not able to to provide an update on the present well being of Shri Rama, but be assured that as Indra lifted up and made Shashi Devi relieved of danavas, you should very soon be relieved of your agony. As soon as I return to Shri Rama, he would at once seek to arrive here with the entire sena of Vanaraas and giant bears. They should too soon shake up the Maha Samudra, build up a ‘setu bandhana’ or a bridge across the Saagara with the almost instant arrows of Veera Rama. Thus, even of Mrityu Devata, of Deva-samuha or gigantic rakshasaas are encountered they should all be perished!

Devi! We simple yet brave Vanaras are contented with our residing on mountains like Mandhara and are satisfied by surviving with the food of fresh fruits, nuts and roots, while rejoicing and regaling at the Purnachandra like visage of Shri Ramachandra, his lotus like eyes and kind glances, red lips like of ‘bimbaphala’ and his sparkling ear rings. Be assured Devi Sita! Shri Rama should very soon arrive like Indra himself seated on the celestial Elephant Iravata as generated by the Ksheera Samudra Mathana, on the top of the Pasravana Mountain!

I am aware that none of the Raghuvamsheeyaas are meat eaters or ‘madyapaanaas’. Then what indeed is Shri Rama used to: he keeps on fasting for four durations of a day and on the fifth, eats a frugal food of jungle fruits, roots and nuts . He does not even clear off on his body of flies, scorpions, or even poisonous snakes crawling freely as he truly observes the principle of being against ‘jeeva himsa’! As and when, he sees ripe fruits, fresh and fragrant flowers, or even crosses charming women, then he draws long breathings murmuring ‘ ha priye, ha priye’. Devi! Raja Rama is ever deeply pensive, and is craving for you literally and truly!’ As Hanuman kept on describing thus, Devi Sita was immersed in the sweet memories and the present states of minds mutually like the usherings of ‘sharad ritu’ when the twilights occur as dark clouds are surrounded by the emerging Moon as desperation and relief were to occur coincidentally!

As Devi Sita seeks Hanuman to hasten Shri Rama’s arrival at Lanka, Hanuman suggests carrying her and reach Rama swiftly, but she declines giving reasons, especially stressing Rama’s invincibility.

Having heard Hanuman's assurances of the arrivals of Rama Lakshmanas at the earliest, Devi Sita was somewhat pacified and addressed Hanuman as follows: Vanara shreshtha!Your assertions that Rama was not thoughtful of anything else than of me are like drops of ‘amrita’, yet in the present poisonous state of mine. This reminds me of a situation when a human being at the precipice of a deep drench is pulled off from strong chains of iron to a safety haven. Vanara shiromani! The impact of destiny is beyond human control. Take the instance of Lakshmana, myself and of Shri Rama; what type of situations that we have been exposed to! As one is thrown off from a safe boat into the deep depths of an ocean, is it possible to continue swimming be the bare hands for long! rākṣasānām kṣayaṁ kṛtvā sūdayitvā ca rāvaṇam, laṅkāṁ unmūlitām kṛtvā kadā drakṣyati mām patiḥ/ sa vācyaḥ saṁtvarasveti yāvad eva na pūryate, ayaṁ saṁvatsaraḥ kālas tāvad dhi mama jīvitam/ vartate daśamo māso dvau tu śeṣau plavaṅgama, rāvaṇena nṛśaṁsena samayo yaḥ kṛto mama/ When indeed could I ever vision in my life time the stages of Raakshasa Vadha, Ravana samhaara, Lankapuri vidhvamsa, and finally my union with Shri Rama are mere illusions or realities! Go away at the earliest, Hanuman. I hope that I should be able to keep my life ticking till my ambitions and dreams are not falsified. This is the tenth month and Ravanaasura granted me an extension of my life for two months more! [Recall Sarga Twenty two above: dvau māsau rakṣitavyau me yo ’vadhis te mayā kṛtaḥ, tataḥ śayanam āroha mama tvaṁ varavarṇini/ dvābhyām ūrdhvaṁ tu māsābhyām bhartāraṁ mām anicchatīm, mama tvām prātarāśārtham ārabhante mahānase/ Maha Ravana further threatened Devi Sita: ‘Sundari! I am now declaring to you a reasonable time of two months to you to reconcile and surrender and creep into my bed. Otherwise, do mark my words, I would have despatched your dead body to the royal kitchen to have mince it to pieces for cooking!’] Ravanaasura’s younger brother Vibhishana entreated him to please return me back, but he went off to deaf ears. Vibhishana’s eldest daughter named Kala Devi and accompanied by her mother came to me and conveyed that the ever arrogant Ravana never heeded Vibhishana’s request too. Another Rakshasa named Avindhya who was a buddhiman, vidvaan and Ravana sammaana too never heeded the advice. Kapishreshtha! My single hope and aspiration still lingers in my remote psyche that Rama would arrive, but how soon! Shri Rama is instinctively enthusiastic, ever pursant of purushaardhas of dharma-arthakaamaas, brave, kind, forgiving, ever grateful, and knowledgeable. I recall that having asked Lakshmana to ensure my safety, fought single handed over fourteen thousand maha rakshasaas: tell me is there any other example of heroism. Shri Ramachandra is truly and emphatically a ‘purusha shreshtha’, and facilitates and vindicates himself by withstanding the hardest possible challenges of life. Kapivara! He is similar to Bhagavan Surya as his arrows could reach any where like Surya Kiranas, which the deep waters of Raakshasaas could get dried up sooner or later!’ As Devi Sita was introspecting and giving expressions to her innermost thoughts, while seeking to suppress her tears, Veera Hanuman said: Devi! brace up your self for now as it would not be too far away that Shri Rama along with with multitudes of Vaanara- Bear Veeras many of whom are celestials born exclusively for the purpose of dharma rakshana and possible assistance to Shri Rama. Athavaa mochayishyaami tvaavadhyava sarakshasaat, asmaad duhkhaadupaaroaha mama prishthamanindite! In case, you wish to get rid of all this torments of raakshasas, please trust me as I could comfortably be carried on my back! I would then cross the Maha Sagara; or else, I do possess the physical energy to destroy the entire ‘Lanka Saamrajya’ in one go. Then, Mithileshwari, I should be able to reach Shri Rama seated atop on ‘prasnaganagiri’; this would then be like Agni Deva would carry the havish to Indra Deva well in tact. Devi, do kindly be seated on my back and pious mission should be like Devi Rohini reaching Chandra. If I carry you on my back the entire Lankaavaassa rakshasaas would only stare, be not possible to chase me and might perhaps be able to survive.’ As Hanuman was pondering thus, Devi Sita responded thus: Vaanarayudhapati Hanuman! How could you carry me all the way; is this not a typical chapala buddhi of a typical Vaanara!’ Anjaneya replied: Devi, you are not aware of my capabilities; I can change my form as per your choice. My body could be transformed like meru parvata; I have the ability to carry Lankapuri with Ravana there inside’. Then Devi Sita stated: yes, Vanara Pramukha! I do understand by now as to what and who you truly are! Can I not appreciate that you are truly born with Almighty’s own blessings. But, ayuktaṁ tu kapiśreṣṭha mayā gantuṁ tvayā saha, vāyuvegasavegasya vego mām mohayet tava/ aham ākāśam āśaktā upary upari sāgaram, prapateyaṁ hi te pṛṣṭhād bhayād vegena gacchataḥ/ patitā sāgare cāhaṁ timinakrajaḥśākule, bhayeyam āśu vivaśā yādasām annam uttamam/ Kapi Shreshtha! my leaving away on your back is most improper and unthinkable for multiple reasons; your speed is unthinkable and I might swoon out of fear of life and fall down right into the depths of the Maha Sagara and become a tasty food to the huge fishes or crocodiles. As a vanara taking a woman on the back and flying away would be the hot topic for Lankaapuri residents. Ravana would atonce command maayaavi rakshasaas who too could fly as well. Then a battle between them and you would break up and in the process there are several chances of my falling down into the ocean any way from your back. God forbid, if you are hurt even by some remote chance, my survival could be a myth, anyway. Kamam tvamapi paryaapto nihantum sarva raakshasaam Raaghavasya yasho heeyet tvayaa shastaistu raakshasai/ Even presuming that you could devastate the totality of rakshasaas, what indeed would happen to Rama's fame and glory of invincibility! The world would opine Rama's inability to free and rescue Devi Sita, his own better half! Aarambhastu madathoryam tatastva nirarthakah, tvaayaahi saha Raamasya mahaanaagamane gunah/ Mayti jeevita-maayattam Raaghavasyamitoujasah, bhraatrunaam cha mahabaho tava rajakulasya cha/ What all your persistend efforts thay you have made so far could be fruitless and might back fire for no reason. However in case Shri Rama himself as accompanied by mighty Lakshmana and all the strength of Maha Vanaras were to enter the scene, that should indeed be a true battle of Dharma and Adharma! I do repose my full faith and self assurance that the 'amita parakrami' Raghunadha along with Lakshmana followed by King Sugriva and the enormous Vanara sena should very soon arrive. Yet, there is another significant reason is that from the viewpoint of Pativtathya pavitrata, I would not dare touch another purusha excepting Shri Rama. [If Ravana did so, he should have done so at his own peril!] Hence, it is most appropriate that Shri Rama himself should destroy the mahasura Ravana. I have heard that as Shri Rama decides to confront even Deva-Gandharva-Naga-Raakshasaas were united against him, he would still be invincible. On the battle front, he and Lakshmana are like a combine of Vayu Deva and Agni Deva! Salakshanam raghavaajimaadanam; disāgajam mattam iva vyavasthitam, saheta ko vānaramukhya samyuge; yugāntasūryapratimam śarārcīṣam/ sa me hariśreṣṭha salakṣmaṇam patim; sayūthapam kṣipram ihopapādaya, cirāya rāmam prati śokakarṣitām; kuruṣva mām vānaramukhya harṣitām/ Hence, Vanarashiromani! Trust me that on the battle front who indeed could face Rama Lakshmanas as truly they are like the two mammoth diggajas, ney, pralaya kaala Suryas. Therefore, Vanara shreshtha Maha Veerya Anjaneya! Do very kindly move with all your tempo and rapidity as aided by Vayu Deva and reach King Sugriva and Rama Lalshmanas at once.

Before handing over her 'choodaamani' to Hanuman , Devi Sita recalled how Rama expressed his concern by using 'brahmaastra' on a crow- Indra's son- pestered her ; the crow went from pillar to post and fell at Rama's feet; though Rama pardoned, still had to block any crows's vision of left eye eversince!

As Devi Sita convinced citing her reasonings against Hanuman's proposal to lift her on his back and fly down to reach where Rama Lakshmanas stayed on the prastravana mountain top, Hanuman conceded and decided to return as earliest as possible. Hanuman agreed that neither Devi Sita was able to cling to Hanuman's back all the while crossing the long distance and duration with her frail figure and speed, rough and windy weather, nor her pativratya in touching and embracing another male would allow, and most essentially Rama's own fame and the need for his personal presence. Hanuman then stated that he would truthfully convey to Rama of the various reasons that she was not willing to accompany me convincingly. Then Devi Sita in a hush hush tone nartated: ‘ Vanara shreshtha! Please do remind Shri Rama an interesting incident when we were together at the top of Chitrakuta parvata where the holy Mandakini was flowing thereunder; after our ‘jala vihara’ of swimming together, we entered a flower and fruit garden and were resting. Rama was relaxing with his closed eyes on my folded legs, as I was seated comfortably. Then a crow with a piece of meat started hitting me and I tried my best to shove it off but the bird was hitting my face repeatedly. I got angered and wished to hit it but I never wished to disturb Rama’s rest. Then the naughty bird tried to pull out my ‘mangala sutra’ around my neck. Then the bird kept on hitting my nose, cheeks, lips and ears. Then it sat on my thighs. With these successive attacks of the bird, I started crying and the tears fell down on Rama’s face. He shouted: what is the matter and got up! Instantly the bird attacked on my breasts. Then there were scratches and drops of blood. Rama shouted: āsīviṣa iva kruddhaḥ śvasān vākyam abhāṣathāḥ, kena te nāganāśoru viṣṭatam vai stanāntaram, kaḥ krīdati saroṣeṇa pañcavaktreṇa bhoginā/ viṣṭamāṇas tatas tam vai vāyasam samavaikṣathāḥ, nakhaiḥ sarudhirais tīkṣṇair mām evābhimukham sthitam/ The ever composed Shri Rama then went in white rage swaying to and fro like a maha sarpa shouted: ‘who has done this!’ It looked as though somebody was wantonly doing this by playing with this obnoxious creature!’ Then the angry Rama found a nasty crow; a celestial whisper was heard. ta putrah kila sa śakrasya vāyasah patatām varah, dharāntaracarah śīghram pavanasya gatau samah/ tatas tasmin mahābāhuḥ kopasamvartitekṣaṇah, vāyase kṛtavān krūrām matiḥ matimatām vara/ sa darbhasamstarād grhya brahmaṇo ‘streṇa yojayah, sa dīpta iva kālāgnir jajvālābhimukho dvijam/ This crow is the mischievous son of Lord Indra! The bird’s flying speed is of Vayu Deva himself. It has escaped from swarga to earth. Then the totally worked up Shri Rama had mentally resolved to punish the crow irrevocably. He removed a ‘darbha’ from the dried mat as was being rested on and whispered the ‘brahmastra mantra’ while the straw assumed emitting gigantic flames and chased the crow. cikṣepitha pradīptām tām iṣṭkām vāyasam prati, anusṛṣṭas tadā kālō jagāma vividhām gatim, trāṇakāma imām lokām sarvām vai vicacāra ha/ sa pitrā ca parityaktaḥ suraiḥ sarvair maharṣibhiḥ, trīṃś lokān samparikramya tvām eva śaraṇam gataḥ/ tam tvām nipatitam bhūmau śaraṇyaḥ śaraṇāgatam, vadhārham api kākutṣṭha kṛpayā paryapālayaḥ, na śarma labdhvā lokeṣu tvām eva śaraṇam gataḥ/ As Rama released the ‘brahmastra’, the nasty crow ran in a race with alarming speed and fright, but the straw like arrow chased and chased from one loka to another. Ultimately it fell down half dead at the feet of Rama. Raghunadha the well popular ‘sharanaagata vatsala’ did take pity. But: Brahmastra could never be a failure and has to obey the command of the User, who in this case Rama himself. paridyūnam viṣaṇnam ca sa tvam āyāntam uktavān, mogham kartum na śakyam tu brāhman astraṁ tad ucyatām, tatas tasyākṣi kākasya hinasti sma sa dakṣiṇam/ sa te tadā namaskṛtvā rājñe daśarathāya ca, tvayā vīra viṣṛṣṭas tu pratipede svam ālayam/ matkṛte kākamātre ‘pi brahmāstraṁ samudīritam, kasmād yo mām harat tvattaḥ kṣamase tam mahīpate/ sa kuruṣva mahotsāham kṛpām mayi nararṣabha, ānṛsaṁsyaṁ paro dharmas tvatta eva mayā śrutaḥ/ As the crow’s was tired so much as is nearing death, Rama no doubt wished to pardon it but brahmastra ought to take its toll; therefore he allowed a crow to see only with its left eye ever since! Thus Devi Sita recalled the inimitable love for her and continued her narration to Hanuman; she asked Veera Hanuman and asked him to convey to Shri Rama as follows: ‘ Praana naadha! Prithvi pate! Even for such negligible misdemeanour of a crow on me you utilised brahmastra, how is it that you have not appeared me for months now! Is Sita considered by you an ‘anaatha’! I learnt from you only that to be kind to others is a parama dharma. I am fully aware of your bravery and grit and is truly limitless. Raghunandana! Even being a symbol of profoundness and uprightness, yet why are you reluctant to utilise your shakti against Ravana and his followers! bhrātur ādeśam ādāya lakṣmaṇo vā paramātapah, kasya hetor na mām vīraḥ paritrāti mahābalaḥ/ yadi tau puruṣavyāghrau vāyvindrasamatejasau, surāṇām api durdharṣo kimartham mām upekṣataḥ/ mamaiva duṣkṛtam kiṁ cin mahad asti na saṁśayaḥ, samarthāv api tau yan mām nāvekṣete paramātapau/ Why does not Lakshmana atleast Lakshmana follow his elder brother’s instruction even being an enemy hunter! Both the brothers are no doubt heroes of fame and chivalry; why are both of them neglecting me for months like this, and are totally neglecting me in this way!’ Then Hanuman replied: ‘ Devi! I would swear in the name of Truthfulness that Shri Rama is missing you every minute and have ceased to take any inclination to carry out even his daily routines and is ever lost in your own memories; and so does veere Lakshmana too, but are still unaware of where are you and of which kind of difficulties that you must be undergoing. Once they come to know this, they would uproot the name and very existence of asuras where ever they be. I am assuring you repeatedly that no sooner they get even an inkling of your bveing here, than they are replete with seething anger and revenge on Ravana and his clan. Now, do kindly give me your message as I am about to beg of yout leave.’ Then Devi Sita addressed Hanuman as follows: ‘ Kapi shreshtha! As Devi Kousalya gave birth to Sampuran Jagat Swami Shri Rama, do kindly let my earvest prostrations to him and convey to him of me survival and place of m sufferance. Beyond this what else could I explain for you to convey to dearmost Shri Rama, and his dauntless and ever faithful and devoted Swami Lakshmana too. As per my heartfelt appeal to both of them, kindly concey my desperation well before thay I do still survive and not yet perish. What else could I convey to them! Vanarayudhapati Anjana putra! What else further could I convey! You having seen for yourself a full account of my current state of affairs, ever own descriptive capability needs to be realised with clarity and realism. Now this is wholly dependent on you to hasten Rama Lakshmanas to convince. idam brūyās ca me nātham sūram rāmaṁ punaḥ punaḥ, jīvitam dhārayiṣyāmi māsaṁ daśarathātmaja, ūrdhvaṁ māsān na jīveyaṁ satyenāhaṁ bravīmi te/rāvaṇenoparuddhāṁ mām nikṛtyā pāpakarmaṇā, trātum arhasi vīra tvam pātālād iva kauśikīm/Mahaanjaneya! Very kindly emphasise this to Bhagavan Shri Rama that Ravana had imposed my life time for the said duration of prescribed months, and there after it should be like pouring fragrances on by dead body’s ashes. Veera! The most sinful Ravana has crully imprisoned me and the cruel rakshasis desirous of a ripe feminine human flesh are ready to pounce on me and throttle my neck any moment’. tato vastragataṁ muktṛvā divyaṁ cūḍāmaṇim śubham, pradeyo rāghavāyeti sītā hanumate dadau/pratigṛhya tato vīro maṇiratnam anuttamam, aṅgulyā yojayām āsa na hy asyā prābhavad bhujah/ maṇiratnam kapivarah pratigṛhyābhivādya ca, sītām pradakṣiṇam kṛtvā pranataḥ pārsvataḥ sthitaḥ/ Thus having given her final message to Anjaneya before his leaving her, Parama saadhvi Devi Sita opened up the knots of her dirty upperworn garment and pulled out a magnificent ‘choodaamani’ or sparkling golden hair clip and handed it over to Veera Hanuman as a memory reviver. Then having taken the same, Anjaneya tried to wear it on his finger, but the miniature form of his body did not readily fit in as he had to adjust his body form accordingly. There after he perfomed a venerable ‘pradakshina’ of Devi Sita and srood befire her with reverence and esteem. harṣeṇa mahatā yuktāḥ sītadarśanaajena saḥ, hṛdayena gato rāmaṁ śarīreṇa tu viṣṭhitaḥ/ maṇivaram upagṛhya tam mahārham; janakanṇpātmajayā dhṛtam prabhāvāt, girivara -pavanāvadhūtāmuktaḥ; sukhītanāḥ pratisamkramam prapede/ As Janaka putri who had been carefully and cautiously preserving all the time during her imprisonment handed over the precious gift to Veera Hanuman, he was truly thrilled as if his sweet dream of ‘Sitaanveshana’ had thus been fulfilled as dream come true!

Having taken possession of Devi Sita's 'choodaamani' Hanuman resuured himself that Shri Rama should most certainly trust that I had 'Sita darshana and sambhaashana.' Then Devi Sita asked Hanuman as to what he would be his 'takshana kartavya' or the next step of his. She re-emphasised: Vanara shiromani! Do swear, reiterate my desperate relief and make the best possible of our exchange of views; then Anjaneya with all the courtesy at his command for the Devi nodded his head thoughtfully. She further said in low tone in broken words with suppressed anguish: kuśalam hanuman brūyāḥ sahitaū rāmalakṣmaṇau, sugrīvaṁ ca sahāmātyaṁ vṛddhān sarvāmś ca vānarān/ yathā ca sa mahābāhur mām tārayati rāghavaḥ, asmād duḥkhāmbusaṁrodhāt tvam samādhātum arhasi/ jīvantīm mām yathā rāmaḥ sambhāvayati kīrtimān, tat tvayā hanuman vācyam vācā dharmam avāpnuhi/Hanuman! Please do convey that I am still existing and expect do so further with rays of hopes. Also convey this to Sugriva and various other vaanara veeraas. Shri Rama should get to action at once as I am sinking further deeper and deeper. Please request Rama Lakshmanas to initiate action plans and save me before my time. May you be blessed to sustain and hasten the process of ‘dharmaacharana’ that you have taken up with grit and perseverance to its logical success. Hopefully, by your convincing capacity and persuasion, Rahunatha might become dutiful.’ As Deci Sita was making requests to Hanuman, he replied: *kṣipram eṣyati kākutstho haryrksapravarair vṛtaḥ, yas te yudhi vijityārīṇ śokaṁ vyapanayiṣyati/ na hi paśyāmi martyeṣu nāmareṣv asureṣu vā, yas tasya vamato bāṇān sthātum utsahate ‘grataḥ/ apy arkam api parjanyaṁ api vaivasvataṁ yamam, sa hi soḍhum raṇe śaktas tava hetor viśeṣataḥ/ sa hi sāgaraparyantām mahīm śāsītum īhate, tvan nimitto hi rāmasya jayo janakanandini/Devi! Rama who should very soon arrive here accompanied by the multitudes of Vanaras and bhaalus with the singular decisiveness of success. Never in my life, had ever seen how Rama rains uninterrupted releases of arrows. In his battles, even Surya-Indra- or Yama Raja would be truly dazed unparalleled. Janaka nandini! As one witnesses his composure and authoritative finality assures me again and again that triumph is well within your reach’ As Hanuman has repeatedly assured Devi Sita, she got overwhelmed and still desired to say something once again. yadi vā manyase vīra vasaikāham arimḍama, kasmimś cit saṁvṛte deṣe viśrāntaḥ śvo gamiṣyasi/ mama ced alpabhāgyāyāḥ sāmniḍhyāt tava vīryavān, asya śokasya mahato muhūrtaṁ mokṣaṇaṁ bhavet/ gate hi hariśārdūla punarāgamanāya tu, prāṇānām api saṁdeho mama syān nātra saṁśayaḥ/ She said endearingly: Pavan Kumara, in case, you are tired right now, do defer your return from Lanka tomorrow and keep yourself secretly and safely with ample rest. I am a mandabhagini any way, and for my sake. If you were to take a hasty step by any mischance, then I might have to experience redoubled anguish which would keep tormenting me further. For instance, I keep wondering as to how such massive Vananara-bhalluka sena could cross this huge ocean! trayānām eva bhūtānām sāgarasyeha laṅghane, śaktiḥ syād vainateyasya tava vā mārutasya vā/ tad asmin kāryaniriyoge vīraivaṁ duratikrame, kim paśyasi samādhānam tvam hi kāryavidām varaḥ/ kāmam asya tvam evaikaḥ kāryasya parisādhane, paryāptaḥ paravīraghna yaśasyas te balodayaḥ/ To my limited knowledge, in the entire universe there are only distinguished personalities viz. you, Garuda deva and Vayu deva. Veera! The very task of crossing this Maha Samudra appears impossible for the millions of Rama Sena defying my comprehension. Veera Hanuman, despite such apprehensions of mine in my extremely limited imagination, your repeated assurances do soothen my inner confidence and trust in you that hopes of victory loom large on my otherwise dark and long nights of my mental horizon. balaiḥ samagrair yadi mām rāvaṇaṁ jitya saṁyuge, vijayī svapuram yāyāt tat tu me syād yaśaskaram/ balais tu saṁkulām kṛtvā laṅkāṁ parabalārdanaḥ, mām nayed yadi kākutsthas tat tasya sadṛśaṁ bhavet/ tad yathā tasya vikrāntam anurūpaṁ mahātmanaḥ, bhaved āhava sūrasya tathā tvam upapādaya/ What a sweet dream, Veeranjaneya! That Shri Raghu Rama would walk in with his army of Vanaras, destroy Ravana and the rakshasaas, declare victory of ever memorable history to generations ahead and of my walking back to my union with the real and undisputed hero of the epic! Do very kindly keep suggesting the ways and means of assuring victory!’ Thus Devi Sita narrated the suggestive ‘yupayukta-arthayukta-snehayukta-and yukti yukta- upaayaas’ or the most appropriate-well meaningful-friendly-suggestive means of accomplishment, Hanuman further annotated: ‘Devi! the role of Kapi Shreshtha King Sugriva is considerable and significant. His sena is replete with parakrami-dhairyaashali-maha bali-and manasika sankalpa samana veeras’ who are ever-ready for ‘atmaarpana’! The ‘vaanara veeraas’ normally imagined as fickle minded, are straight directioned, unwavering, unrelenting, with the grit, energy and speed far beyond human comprehension. asaḁṛt tair mahotsahaiḥ sasāgaradharādharā, pradakṣiṇīkṛtā bhūmir vāyumārgānu - sārībhiḥ/ madviśiṣṭās ca tulyās ca santi tatra vanaukasah, mattaḥ pratyavaraḥ kaś cin nāsti sugrīva - sāmniḍhau/ aham tāvad iha prāptaḥ kim punas te mahābalāḥ, na hi prakṛṣṭāḥ preṣyante preṣyante hītare janāḥ/ Some of the illustrious Vanara Pramukhas could cross good and long distances of the the hundred* yojanas of the Maha Samudra by simply flying in parts. In the Sugriva Sena, there are veeraas of my comparability too. As I have arrived here, Devi why are you apprehensive of similar vaanara veeraas! Do you realise that only vanaras of normal capability are despatched as messengers as this is a normal practice of royalties!

[Vishleshana on Devi Sita's apprehension of Vanaras crossing the hundred yojana span of Maha Samudra: vide Sarga Sixty of Valmiki Kishkindha Ramayana.]

Yuva Raja Angada then asked the Maha Vaanara Veeras by turn and named them as Gaja-Gavaaksha-Gavaya-Sharabha-Gandhamaadana- Mainda- Dvivida - Sushena-and Jambavan. The replies were as follows: Maha Vanara Gaja said that he could jump off by ten yojanas- Gavaksha could cover twenty yojanas-Sharabha confirmed thirty yojanas-Rishabha assured forty yojanas-Gandhamaadana would cover fifty yojanas comfortably- Mainda quoted sixty with enthusiasm- Dvipada by seventy yojanas- and Sushena the dare devil upto eighty yojanas. Then Jambavan stated that in his youthful days and years he no doubt could have crossed the distance from hear to the other shore, but now his present ability would now be restricted to some ninety yojanas but might not be more. Jambavan further confirmed: tāmś ca sarvān hariśreṣṭhāñ jāmbavān punar abravīt, na khalv etāvad evāsīd gamane me parākramah/ mayā mahābalaiś caiva yajñe viṣṇuḥ sanātanaḥ, pradakṣiṇīkṛtaḥ pūrvaṁ kramamāṇas trivikramaḥ/ In the years of yore when Bhagavan Vishnu assumed the incarnation of Vaamana Deva, as Danava Bali Chakravarti bestowed mere three feet of land to Vaamana, then the latter measured mere two feet as earth and urthva lokas and for the third foot was of the nether lokas with Bali down under too. That was the time, Jambavaan recalled he was able to perform full parikrama to the Virat swarupa!]

Kindly be rid of doubts as to how such vast vaanara sena could even cross this huge ocean to reach you and wear out with such issues; Vaanara veeras should be able to arrive right on the shores of Lanka soon. Like the Ushahkaala Surya Chandras, Shri Rama and Lakshmanas accompanied by the vaanara senashould be soon arriving seated on my shoulders just for your sake! Both of them ought to destroy Lanka, Lankadhipati and the followers and take you back right at your kingdom. Be assured,Varaaroha! and do not get alarmed for now as Rama should vision you like the radiant agni jvaalas to comfort you for ever. Indeed, who else is the Yuga Purusha like Shri Rama! Who else is comparable to Lakshmana for his devotion and commitment for Shri Rama. Why ought you to get rattled for now when both the brothers are with you together like Agni Deva and Vayu Deva! Devi Sita! You would have stay for more than but a few days in this fearful atmosphere; even as my reaching your present to Shri Rama, he should soon appear before you; and hence bear with patience a few more days and nights for now.'

On hearing the assurances of the arrival soon of Rama-Lakshmana-Sugrivas along with the maha vaanara sena, Devi Sita replied to Hanuman as follows: ‘ Vaanara veera! You have truly delighted me as I feel thrilled with joy just like the dried up food grain fields are sprouting greenery once again with the delightful showers of rains. Be kind to me as my ever continued cryings lead me to ill health and loss of appetite with the dreamlike hope of loving the touch of Shri Rama's body. Vanara shreshtha! I am reminded of Rama's affected anger with which he was aiming his arrow on a frightened deer. Rama! My beloved! You have the bravery and ability of Mahendra or Varuna! But why are you avoiding me and imprisoning me known as Sita in the midst of rakshasaas and punishing me for long times! Praneshwara! Whenever my extreme distress and grief overcome me, then I tend to pull out my chudamani gifted by you as hidden from my dirty clothes and seek solace for a while. It is that very hair clip of mani ratna as studded with the very rare sea pearl gifted by you is being returned to you as my precious reminder of our love, as I am sobbing!

[Vishleshana on the sources of precious pearls:

I am unable to suffer and tolerate any further the heartrending 'rakshasi himsa' surrounded by me. Shatrusudana! I feel that I could somehow eke out my breathing for a very maximum of perhaps a month or so, but might not be further more. This Rākshasa Raja Ravana is extremely cruel and merciless; his desperation for me is alarming; should there be any atyaachara for me then I might not last for a minute more! Then as she broke down crying, Hanuman replied most convincingly: Tacchokamimuko ramo devi satyena te shape, raame shokaabhibhute tu Lakshmanah paritapyate/ Drushtaa kathamchid bhavati na kaalah paridevitum, iyam muhurtam duhkhamānaamantam drakshyasi bhamini/ taa vibhou purusha vyaaghrou rajaputraavananditau, tvaddharshana kritotsaahou lankaam bhasmeekarishyatah/ Hatvaa tu samare raksho raavanam sahabaandhavaih, Raaghavou tvaam vishaalaakshi svaam pureem pratineshyatah/ Devi! I am swearing in the name of Truthfulness that no sooner I convey your statements than that the Purusha Simhas of Rama Lakshmanas, should get desperate seeking your 'darshan' and pull down Lankapuri to ashes. Having destroyed Ravana along with his relatives and followers, they would most definitely take you to 'ayodhya' back with pomp and fame.' Having finally assured Devi Janaki, Veera Hanuman jumped off while he wiped off her tears uttered mangala vaakyas for Rama Lakshmana Sugriva, Vanara Pramukhas and the entire Maha Vanara Sena. She had finally addressed Hanuman: sa rājaputryā prateditārthaḥ; kapiḥ kṛtārthaḥ parihr̥ṣṭacetāḥ, tad alpaśeṣaṁ prasamīkṣya kāryam; diśaṁ hy udīcīm manasā jagāma/ Having fully realised Devi Sita's inner feelings of fear of life, pangs of separation, utter relief from his words of repeated assurances, Hanuman got pensive and moved on northward for his spree of Lanka's destruction to send shock samples of what all even one Vanara Veera was able to perform!

Having taken leave of Devi Sita, Hanuman cogitated that now that the most essential duty of Devi Darshana and mutual conversation, the next most significant task still remained viz. an assessment of the might of the offender Rakshasaas. They possess high level prosperity indulging in all sorts of criminalities and are truly ruthless. They need to be tested from the view point of ‘Chaturupaaya saadhana’ of Saama-Daana-Bheda-Dandas. In such a context, would it be proper for me to resort to my providing them of their glimpses of my capacities of chivalry and ask for needless troubles especially for Devi Sita! On the other hand, one needs to realise that for ‘karyha siddhi’ or the ultimate goal, the taste of even one Vanara Veera’s ability to stir up chunks of Rakshasaas would be an eye opener to Ravana and his clan. kārye karmaṇi nirdiṣṭo yo bahūny api sādhayet, pūrvakāryavirodhena sa kāryam kartum arhati/ na hy ekaḥ sādḥako hetuḥ svalpasyāpīha karmaṇaḥ, yo hy artham bahudhā veda sa samartho ’rthasādhane/ He who could possess the ability to make a break through should be able to see the positive results of any action to be followed too as a trendsetter to his associates too. If I were to succeed in the sample task, then my colleagues would follow suit. The experimental tasks one succeeded, the art of such performances the would be natural corollaries. No doubt any failure of the initial task might boomerang to a disaster, hence only initial thrust becomes very crucial as the art of evasion would be an additional asset. Only such a capable person with an expertise of all the shades of tactics of offence and defence too. ihaiva tāvat kṛtaniścayo hy aham; yadi vrajeyam plavagesvarālayam, parātmasamṁmarda viśeṣatattvavit; tataḥ kṛtam syān mama bhartṛśāsanam/ katham nu khalv adya bhavet sukhāgataṁ; prasahya yuddham mama rākṣasaiḥ saha, tathaiva khalv ātmabalaṁ ca sāravat; samānāyēn mām ca raṇe daśānanaḥ/ Therefore an initial assesment of my this ‘yatra’- quite apart from my success of Devi Sitaanveshana which is paramount- would surely be appreciated by King Sugriva, under whose instructions, this might prove to be a bonus achievement. In fact, he should help this experimental exercise of mine being a success, I might as well take up the next duty of assessing the enemy strength which is the next useful- nay quite essential prerequisite of the impending battle! idam asya nṛśaṁsasya nandanopamam uttamam, vanam netramanaḥkāntam nānādrumalatāyutam/ idam vidhvamsayiṣyāmi śuṣkam vanam ivānalaḥ, asmin bhagne tataḥ kopam kariṣyati sa rāvaṇaḥ/ tato mahat sāsṣvamaḥārathadvipam; balaṁ samāneṣv api rākṣasādhipaḥ, trīśūlakālāyasapaṭṭiśāyudham; tato mahad yuddham idam bhaviṣyati/ Then Hanuman mused further: Nirdaya Ravanaasura has the appreciable taste of creating this type of highly attractive and even picturesque ‘Pramadaavana’ or the Ashoka Vatika; how is it that after searching the nook and corner of Lanka’s ‘Raani Nivasa’ akin to Pushpaka Vimana seized forcibly from his brother Kubera, that I discovered the Pranadaavana by my sheer luck! Now, should I not start with this chaming ‘upavana vidhvamsa’ so that the Raashasa Raja would receive warning signals merely, lest Ravana might not even get ready for a battle, so that he would instantly get agitated and send elephants, horses, huge chariots with rakasasas equipped with trishulas, and astra shastras and purpose might not be out of hands and non productive. That might only appear like the mischief of a vanara deserving to be punished. Thereafter I might as well depart from Lanka with contentment. tato mārutavat kruddho mārutir bhīmavikramaḥ, ūruvegena mahatā drumān kṣeptum athārabhat/ tatas tad dhanumān

vīro babhañja pramadāvanam, mattadvijasamāghuṣṭam nānādrumalatāyutam/ tad vanam mathitair vṛkṣair bhinnaiś ca salilāśayaiḥ, cūrṇitaiḥ parvatāgraiś ca babhūvāpriyadarśanam/ Thus having introspected by carefully thought over, Hanuman commenced the process of destroying the Vana by hitting with the speed of winds uprooted the huge trees; then the tranquility of the garden was suddenly destroyed by the screaming birds and the ‘antah pura’s upavana’ went into wreckage. The lataa mandapa and chitra shaala went into rubbles and the ‘antahpura strees’ - quite a few of them being gandharvayaksha-and of course rakshasis ran away helter skelter. As the message was instantly flashed by his messengers, Ravana went into red rage when he was actually resting.

As the sudden flare up of the birds and their deafening noises besides the thuds of big tree collapses, Lanka Pura residents were shocked and trembled with fear. They believed that Lankapuri was faced with frightening ‘apashakunas’ or dangerous evil omens. The ‘vikaraala mukha rakshasis’ surrounding Devi Sita were jolted up from their deep slumber. Then they sighted a normal figure of a vaanara; then Hanuman increased his height and proportionate physique. Then they started interrogating Devi Sita as to who was that giant sized Vanara. She was in shivers and replied by nodding her head across and replied that perhaps that figure was that of a maayaavi raakshasa! Then the surrounding Rakshasis ran away out of fright. They raced up to the antah pura of Ravana and informed him agitatedly that a frightening and grotesque figure of a Vaanara had entered the ‘Pramadaavana’ and he is still there! na ca tam jānakī sītā hariṁ hariṇalocaṇā, asmābhir bahudhā prṣṭā nivedayitum icchati/ vāsavasya bhaved dūto dūto vaiśravaṇasya vā, preṣito vāpi rāmeṇa sītānveṣaṇakāṅṣayā/ tena tvadbhūtarūpeṇa yat tat tava manoharam, nānāmṛgagaṇākīrṇaṁ pramṛṣṭaṁ pramadāvanam/ na tatra kaś cid uddeśo yas tena na vināśitaḥ, yatra sā jānakī sītā sa tena na vināśitaḥ/ We had interrogated Sita under our direct control and she replied in the negative as she presumed that the stranger must have been a ‘maayaavi rakshasa’! Maybe that huge figure was sent by Indra or even possibly Kubera! That mammoth figured Vanara had pulled down the entire Pramadaavana and spared nothing excepting where Sita was stationed as guarded by us. Maha Ravana! You may like to impose a ‘maha danda’ to that Vanara. Rakshasa Raja! As you had very kindly kept trust in us, we have been dutifully following your kind instructions and guarding Sita day and night. Rakṣasīnāṁ vacaḥ śrutvā rāvaṇo rākṣaseśvaraḥ, hutāgir iva jajvāla kopasamvartitekṣaṇaḥ/ ātmanaḥ sadṛśāṁ sūrāṇ kimkāraṇ nāma rākṣasān, ādideśa mahātejā nigrahārthaṁ hanūmataḥ/ teṣāṁ aśītisāhasraṁ kimkāraṇāṁ tarasvināṁ, niryayur bhavanāt tasmāt kūtamudgarapāṇayaḥ/ On being thus informed by the group of trusted rakshasis fully, Ramanaasura went in uncontrollable rage as his eyes were reddened even as his hot tears were rolled down seething anger. He called for the group of eighty thousand of well trained Maha Rakshasas of ‘Kinkara Group’; they were of frightening, tall, sturdy body forms with bulging bellies, protruded ‘simha damshtas’ fully prepared with shulas-mudgaras- maces and shields. They were excited with enthusiasm to catch a monkey. Pavana putra Hanuman in his giant body form extended tail which made its resounding sounds which the entire Lanka pura vaasis shouted: Victory to Mahabali Shri Rama and Lakshmana. Victory to my King Sugriva of billions of Maha Vanaras. I am the servant-messenger of Maha Veera Shri Rama who is about to arrive here instantly. I am the Vayu Putra Veera Hanuman who could comfortably encounter thousands of Ravanaas. I am capable of devastating Lanka and have arrived here to greet with humility and respect Devi Sita and would return to Shri Rama. tasya samnādaśabdena te ’bhavan bhayaśaṅkitāḥ, dadṛśuś ca hanūmantam samdhyāmegham ivonnatam/ svāmisaṁdeśaniḥśaṅkāś tatas te rākṣasāḥ kapim, chitraiḥ praharaṇair bhīmair abhipetus tatas tataḥ/ As Hanuman thundered likewise, the totality of Rakshasas were so frightened as many had even lost their consciousness as his body profile seething with anger like the clouds at the sunset time turned red. sa taiḥ parivṛtaḥ sūraiḥ sarvataḥ sa mahābalaḥ, āśasādāyasam bhīmaṁ parigham toraṇāśritam/ sa tam parigham ādāya jaghāna rajanīcarāṇ, sa pannagam ivādāya sphurantam vinatāsutaḥ/ vicacārāmbare vīraḥ parigrhya ca mārutīḥ, sudayaamaasa vajrena daityaaniva sahasradruk/ Then the eighty thousand rakshasas of the Kinkara regiment surrounded Vira Hanuman with their armoury, and the very many astra shastras. Then having taken the name of Shri Rama, his master, the latter manifested a fearful ‘loha parigha’ (iron club) in his mighty arms and methodically, yet, mercilessly butchered the gang of the Kinkaras to pieces. sa hatvā rākṣasāṇ vīraḥ kimkāraṇ mārutātmajaḥ, yuddhākāṅkṣī punar vīras toraṇam samupasthitaḥ/ tatas tasmād bhayān muktāḥ kati cit tatra rākṣasāḥ, nihātāṇ kimkāraṇ sarvāṇ rāvaṇāya nyavedayan/ sa rākṣasānāṁ nihataṁ mahābalaṁ; niśamya rājā parivṛttalocaṇaḥ, samādideśāpratimaṁ parākrame; prahastaputraṁ samare sudurjayam/ Having done so, Pavana Putra was still standing erect as though was awaiting for another batch of rakshasas. As a few of the rakshasas ran away and reached Ravana, the latter got amazed and even nervous. On recovery of his senses back, Ravana then named ‘Prahasta Putra Jambumaali’ who had the name and fame as an invincible Rakshasa that be the choicest parakrami to teach a fitting lesson by uprooting Hanuman.

Mahabali Vayu Putra then devastates ‘Chityapraasaada’ the Rakshasa Kuladevata sthaana - and the rakshasas around it.

Veera Hanuman felt glad that he had ravaged the so called rakasha regiment of Kinkaras, but the adjacent Chaitya Praasaada the ‘Kuladevataa sthaana’ allured him too and instantly jumped across in one leap. This was of the mountain like dome into which several rakshasaas were already assembled. As the entire Lanka rajya population could hear, there were reverberations as Hanuman lifted up his mighty parigha which was created by him to massacre the gang of Kinkaras and demolished the dome, the strong walls and the entire flooring made of quality marble so systematically and assiduously carved by thousands of mighty rakshasas. The thousands strong birds living in their nests for years and decades were either flew away creating resounding noises or got fainted or dropped dead down into the crevices of the shattered flooring to creating havoc. Then Anjaneya in that very colossal ‘swarupa’ made a ‘megha garjana’ of thunderous voice: na rāvaṇasahasraṃ me yuddhe pratibalaṃ bhavet, śilābhis tu praharataḥ pādapaiś ca sahasraśaḥ/ ardayitvā purīm laṅkāṃ abhivādya ca maithilīm, saṃṛddhārtho gamiṣyāmi miṣatām sarvarakṣasām/Victory to the ever famed Shri Rama, the world’s outstanding warrior Lakshmana, and King of the Vanara race worldwide, Sugriva! Neither Rakshasa King Ravana nor his Rakshasa clan could ever dream of encountering Shri Rana the hero of this yuga!My name is Anjaneya, the unchallengeable associate and true devotee of the bravest and invincible warrior of unbelievable skills of archery on the earth. Being the illustrative and proud son of Vayu Deva, I must be remembered for my bravery and battling. Even thousand Ravanaasurus should pale into insignificance before me my agility, speed and energy. At the same time, I am subservient to the Super Hero and ‘mahaastra vetta’ and Maha Bali Veera Lakshmana. As start devastating huge trees in thousands and annihilating countless mighty and maayaavi rakshasaas without mercy, thousands of Ravanaas who had timidly and surreptitiously kidnapped Devi Sita a ‘maha pativrata’ in the absence of Rama Lakshmanas. Now I challenge the meanest Ravanaas galore to face me in an encounter to stop Devi Sita to be recovered accompanying me back to Shri Rama’. As Hanuman thundered , the thousand strong rakshasa veeras surrounded the mammoth swarupa of Anjaneya and once again as in the case of the Kinkara Rakshasaas, lifted his powerful parigha and slaughtered the Rakshasa security force of the chaityapraasaada which had neither a dome nor carved floor. There after, the highly angered Hanuman assumed a frightening and further heightened form of furious and high velocity winds and pulled down pillars and the roof coverings instantly and roared like an angered lion:

I am a mere sample of a Vanara Yodhha; beware my King Sugriva who has thousands of Vanara Yoddhhas - apart from the full race of Vanaras in crores- is about to despatch very soon. Some of such Vaanara warriors do possess the physical strength of ten to hundred elephants put together; while quite a few of them of thousand elephants even without exaggeration. Believe me thousands of average marked Vaanaras possess such sharp and mighty teeth and nails are going to arrive on crores under the overall control of Sugriva our King. Now, on that arrival of Rama Lakshmana Sugrivas just round the corner, there would be neither Lanka puri, nor you, and your King Ravanaasura, as the latter picked up enmity with the Ikshvaaku Vamsha Maha Veera Shri Rama.

Veeranjaneya smashes the expertise of ‘baana-prayoga’ of Maha Rakshasa Jambumali, as Ravanaasura decided to utilise the extraordinary skills of archery of the Prahasta Putra to pull down the Pavana Putra

As Hanuman had brought down from the dome to debris of the Kula Devata’s place Chaityaprasaada, King Ravana had instantly decided to despatch Prahasta putra Jambumaali an extraordinary warrior specially trained in proficiency and expertise in archery. As instructed by the King, Jambumali emerged from the Raja Mahal with his dhanush in his arms attired in a red dress, wearing a glittering necklace around his neck, sparkling kundalas on his ears , while he was seething anger. Indeed he was unassailable on any battle front, even against celestials. His dhanush was like Indra dhanush releasing arrows of ‘vibgyor’ colours of violet-indigo-blue-green-yellow-orange-and blood red! As he releases the arrows, earth shaking tremors are resounded in ‘ashta dishas’. He too is seated on a donkey drawn chariot looking in search of Anjaneya. Having spotted the enormous form of Veera Hanuman even from long distance from his donkey chariot on the sky, Jambumaali blasted ten each of ‘ardha-chandraakaara baanas’ on Hanuman’s face, and ‘karnika’ baanas on his head. Then as the spree of arrows thus released by the well renowned rakshasa Jambumaali, Hanuman was taken aback by surprise as his hands were hurt grievously hurt and his red face was like a red lotus freshly opened up by the ushakaala Surya especially in the Sarad

Ritu or the Autumn Season. Indeed, Hanuman turned terribly angry. cukopa bāṇābhīhato rākṣasasya mahākapiḥ, tataḥ pārśve 'tīvulām dadarśa mahatīm śilām/ tarasā tām samutpāṭya cikṣepa balavad balī, tām śarair daśabhiḥ kruddhas tāḍayām āsa rākṣasaḥ/ vipannam karma tad dṛṣṭvā hanūmānś caṇḍavikramaḥ, sālam vipulam utpāṭya bhrāmayām āsa vīryavān/ He heightened up his gigantic form further and having noticed around him a huge chunk of a mountain as fallen down as a boulder, pulled it and lifted on to his shoulders and hurled at the rakshasa with his mighty speed and force. Jamubumaali in his turn having noticed the boulder thrown by Hanuman, shot then mighty 'manatrika' arrows of ten in a forceful rainy form. Having noticed that the boulder got spilt up into parts, Anjana Putra kept on hurling at maha vrikshas in quick succession as a sequence run of a chain. bhrāmayantaṁ kapiṁ dṛṣṭvā sālavyrkṣaṁ mahābalaṁ, cikṣepa subahūn bāṇān jambumālī mahābalaḥ/ sālam caturbhir ciccheda vānaraṁ pañcabhir bhuje, urasy ekena bāṇena daśabhis tu stanāntare/ sa śaraiḥ pūritatanuḥ krodhena mahatā vṛtaḥ, tam eva pariḥṣaṁ grhya bhrāmayām āsa vegitaḥ/ As Jambumali noticed that Hanuman was thus hurling huge trees in succession, then with equal agility, he rained his arrows too with matching agility. As the Rakshasa did so, four of his arrows smashed down the 'saala vrikshaas', five hit the massive hands of Hanuman, one hit his chest and ten on his nipples. ativeda bhrāmayitvā balotkaṭaḥ, pariḥṣaṁ pātayām āsa jambumāler mahorasi/ tasya caiva śiro nāsti na bāhū na ca jānunī, na dhanur na ratho nāśvās tatrādṛśyanta neṣavaḥ/ sa hata tarasā tena jambumālī mahārathaḥ, papāta nihato bhūmau cūrṇitāṅgavibhūṣaṇaḥ/ Maha Vanara Veeraanjaneya was infuriated as never before, he picked up his parigha once again and hurled it with unimaginable 'vayu vega' at Jambumali's chest, and again on his broad head and knees. Thus neither Jambumaali's dhanush, nor the donkey chariot, nor the donkeys were visible. Then the maha rakshasa fell down to earth with a huge sound of thud. jambumālīm ca nihataṁ kimkarānś ca mahābalān, cukrodha rāvaṇaḥ śrutvā kopasaṁraktalocaṇaḥ/ sa roṣasaṁvartita - tāmralocaṇaḥ; prahastaputre nihate mahābale, amātyaputrān ativīryavikramān; samādideśāsu niśācareśvaraḥ/ As he got the message of death of Jambumali the outstanding rakshasa with proven fame of a great archery, besides the kinkara rakshas of eighty thousand, Ravana went into mad rant and rave with vengeful 'prateekara' and ordered his 'mantri putras' to demolish Anjaneya.

As Hanuman successevely killed Kinkaras and Jambumaali and demolished Pramadaavana and Chatya Praasada along with inmates, enraged Ravana instructed the mighty sons of his Minsters to face Hanuman

As instructed by the Rakshasa Raja Ravana, the seven youthful and renowned warrior sons of Ravana's Ministers, the latter emerged out of the Raja Mahal. All of them had the backing of their own regiments and their own chariots with their own 'dhvaja pataakaas' symbolizing their individual regiments. All of them encircled Anjana Putra suddenly raining away their individual arrows, even as the resounding chariots added to the lion like roarings at once. While deftly evading the rains of arrows of the over enthusiastic Mantri Kumaras, Hanuman was merely allowing their wasted arrows just a huge mountain has very little impact of normal rains. sa taiḥ krīḍan dhanuṣmadbhir vyomni vīraḥ prakāśate, dhanuṣmadbhir yathā meghair mārutaḥ prabhur ambare/ sa kṛtvā ninadam ghoram trāsayaṁs tām mahācamūm, cakāra hanumān vegam teṣu rakṣaḥsu vīryavān/ Just as the Maha Shaktishaali Vayudeva plays with the clouds glittering with Indra Dhanush like lightnings do transmit 'megha garjanaas', Anjaneya was rather playful with the Mantri Kumaras. talenābhīhanat kāmś cit pādaiḥ kāmś cit paramatapaḥ, muṣṭinābhyahanat kāmś cin nakhaiḥ kāmś cid vyadārayat/ pramamāthorasā kāmś cid ūrubhyām aparān kapiḥ, ke cit tasyaiva nādena tatraiva patitā bhuvi/ tatas teṣv avapanneṣu bhūmau nipatiteṣu ca, tat saṁnyam agamat sarvaṁ diśo daśabhayārditam/ Thus the Maha Vanara Veera Hanuman made a series of startling jumps on to the chariots at each of the Mantri Kumaras and slapped to the death of one of them, kicked another by his strong legs on the head of another with force to death, fisted on another's chest to death, tearing yet another with his sharp finger nails of his mighty hands and feet and so on, by assuming a mountainous swarupa. The rakshasa sena of the Mantri Kumaras got demoralised with the frightening deaths of their leaders and ran away helter skelter. vinedur visvaram nāgā nipetur bhuvi vājinaḥ, bhagnanīdadhvajacchatrair bhūś ca kīrnābhavad rathaiḥ/ sa tām pravṛddhān vinihatya rākṣasān; mahābalāś caṇḍaparākramaḥ kapiḥ, yuyutsur anyaiḥ punar eva rākṣasais; tad eva vīro 'bhijagāma toraṇam/ Then the elephants and horses disappeared and the sound of crumbing crashes of the ratha dhvajās added to the chaos. All over the battle field there was flows of blood and it appeared that a sizeable part of Lankapuri was getting demolished, even as Maha Vanara Veera Hanuman was awaiting such other further onslaughts.

With successive deaths of his select Rakshasa Veeras, Ravanaśura had wondered that even one Vanara of Hanuman demoralised him as a wake up call and despatched his five Senapatis who too were killed!

On being intimated that the Mahaasura Mantri Putras along with their respective regimental senas too were annihilated as a child's play by a single Vaanara, Ravana'sura was shocked and got jolted that even a massive vanara sena under the leadership of Sugriva if awaited along with Rama Lakshmanas the known archery experts might indeed uproot the Lanka Samrajya. He then decided to instruct the five Senapatis along with their respective senas too to bring Anjaneya to the very face of Mrityu for the time being, without getting concerned of the future eventualities. Accordingly, the five Senapatis viz. Virupaksha, Yupaksha, Durdhara, Prathasa, and Bhaasakarna, who were not only Maha Rakshasa Veeras but also 'Neeti Nipunas' of the chaturvidha Upaayas of battle viz. mitra laabha-mitra bheda, sandhi and danda. They addressed their respective senas to utilise their horses, chariots, elephants and having subdued the Vanara to catch and subdue him and teach him a lesson. You must follow my instructions perfectly as there would follow the imposition of a punishment as per 'desha kaala paristhitis.' na hy aham taṁ kapim manye karmaṇā pratitarkayan, sarvathā tan mahad bhūtaṁ mahābalaparigraham, bhaved indreṇa vā sṛṣṭam asmadartham tapobalāt/ sanāgayakṣagandharvā devāsura maharṣayaḥ, yuṣmābhiḥ sahitaiḥ sarvair mayā saha vinirjitāḥ/ tair avaśyam vidhātavyam vyalikam kim cid eva naḥ, tad eva nātra saṁdehaḥ prasahya parigrhyatām/ As one could seriously introspect, this Hanuman really does not truly be a mere Vanara with his familiar traits; indeed, he ought be a 'maha praani and maha bala sampanna' or a distinctive being with extraordinary powers of body and mind. At the same time, he need not be spared either. Considering the circumstantial evidences, he looks like to have been born as a result of deep tapasya of his originators. Probably Indra had in the past had performed his deep tapasya and got a praani manifested who could overpower yaksha-gandharva-deva-asura-maharshis even. In any case, this 'vaanara' is distinctively distinguished. Therefore, the uniform decision of we the senapatis of Ravana Rakshasa Sena must catch him alive. King Ravana's fore front sena! Your strict instruction to you all is to subdue this phenomenal enemy in the facade of a Vaanara Hunuman should be to catch him, overpower him and return with roaring success. nāvamānyo bhavadbhiś ca hariḥ krūraparākramaḥ, dṛṣṭā hi harayaḥ śīghrā mayā vipulavikramāḥ/ vālī ca saha sugrīvo jāmbavānś ca mahābalaḥ, nīlaḥ senāpatiś caiva ye cānye dvividādayaḥ/ naiva teṣāṁ gatir bhīmā na tejo na parākramaḥ, na matir na balotsāho na rūpaparikalpanam/ Considering that Hanuman is a Vanara only and ignore him and make fun of him either as our combined assessment is an unusual 'dheera-paraakrami'. We have witnessed maha veeras like Vaali, Sugriva, Jambavan, Sena pati Neela and such parakramis. They resemble normal monkeys yet are possessed such qualities of fitness, dashing bravery, intrepidity, mental energy, and overflowing enthusiasm. mahat sattvam idaṁ jñeyam kapirūpaṁ vyavasthitam, prayatnam mahad āsthāya kriyatām

You should therefore realise that in the guise of Vanaras , ‘maha shakti shaalis’ are hidden behind and having thus realised do make all out endeavours to surround and catch him red handed and bring him. We are fully aware that on the battle front, even devatas headed by Indra, or asuras, other celestial beings, much less of manushyas , you had always brought our King Ravana to glory. Yet as per the fundamental principles of ‘Neeti’, you must be defensive too as the outcome of a battle is like a ‘knife on a sensitive balance’ invariably. te svāmivacanāṃ sarve pratigṛhya mahaujasaḥ, samutpetur mahāvegā hutāśasamatejasaḥ/ rathaiś ca mattair nāgaiś ca vājibhiś ca mahājavaiḥ, śāstraiś ca vividhaiś tīkṣṇaiḥ sarvaiś copacitā balaiḥ/ Therefore according the instruction of King Ravana, you maha rakshasa veeraas of ‘shakti and yukti’ must make all out and desperate efforts to surround and subdue the Maha Veera who too even being single might not hoodwink you to slipby’. Such was the elaborate and detailed briefing to the enormity of Ravana Sena by the respective Senapatis. tatas taṃ dadṛśur vīrā dīpyamānaṃ mahākapim, raśmimantam ivodyantaṃ svatejoraśmimālinam/ toraṇasthaṃ mahāvegam mahāsattvaṃ mahābalaṃ, mahāmatim mahotsāhaṃ mahākāyaṃ mahābalaṃ/ taṃ samīkṣyaiva te sarve dikṣu sarvāśv avasthitāḥ, taiś taiḥ praharaṇair bhīmair abhipetus tatas tataḥ/ As Maha Kapi Anjaneya saw the Rakshasa Veeras initiated approaching him, he stood up erect and ready as the enemies looked full of shakti-bala-vega-buddhi-utsaaha-and of huge physical forms. Instantly they initiated raining arrows aimed at him. On nearing him, they aimed at his head as his iron parigha was already in position there in defence. They appeared to have already protected themselves with sheaths of their lions. Then they initiated action by raining non stop releases of their arrows and despite his parigha being propective of his head, five arrows managed to hit his head. tasya pañcāyasās tīkṣṇāḥ sitāḥ pītamukhāḥ śarāḥ, śirasty utpalapatrābhā durdhareṇa nipātītāḥ/ sa taiḥ pañcabhir āviddhaḥ śaraiḥ śirasi vānaraḥ, utpapāta nadan vyomni diśo daśa vinādayan/ tatas tu durdharo vīraḥ sarathaḥ sajjakārmukaḥ, kiraṇ śaraśatair naikair abhipede mahābalaḥ/ Thus the five ‘baanaas’ hit his head, he jumped up high skyward and made a roaring like a ‘megha garjana’ which got resounded from the ten directions. Then the maha rakshasa seated on the chariot released hundred and odd arrows while dashing off towards Hanuman. Yet like the end of the varsha ritu, the rough and rigid clouds resist and dodge the rains, Hanuman self protected himself deftly. ardyamānas tatas tena durdhareṇānilātmajaḥ, cakāra ninadam bhūyo vyavardhata ca vegavān/ sa dūram sahasotpatya durdharasya rathe hariḥ, nipapāta mahāvego vidyudrāśir girāv iva/ tatas taṃ mathitāṣṭāśvaṃ ratham bhagnākṣakūvaram, vihāya nyapatad bhūmau durdharas tyaktajīvitaḥ/ As the Durdhara Rakshasa increased the pace of his arrows against Hanuman, then he roared again and again and assumed a colossal form and jumped off considerable distance. Veera Hanuman then attacked the rakshasa, the latter jumped off from the chariot and yet resuming the arrow releases still hopeful of the gatherings of lightnings might still hit a huge mountain while maha veera Hanuman hit Durdhara’s head to pieces. Then two of the more intrepid rakshasaas named Dhurdharsha and Virupaksha jumped up high enough at the huge form of the Vanarashiromani’s chest and sought to hit it by their ‘mudgaras’. But having cleverly dodged the hit once again, Hanuman like Garuda Deva swooped down to earth again. sa sālavr̥kṣam āsādy samutpātya ca vānaraḥ, tāv ubhau rākṣasau vīrau jaghāna pavanātmajaḥ/ tatas tāms trīn hatāñ jñātvā vānareṇa tarasvinā, abhipede mahāvegaḥ prasahya praghaso harim/ bhāsakarnaś ca samkruddhaḥ śūlam ādāya vīryavān, ekataḥ kapiśārdūlam yaśasvinam avasthitau/ He then pulled up and uprooted a ‘maha saala vriksha’ and smashed the heads of Dhurdharsha and Virupaaksha. As the ‘vegashali maha vaanara veera’ Hanuman killed Durdhara- Dhurdarsha-and Virupalsha in a series, another Rakshasa named Prathasa who too had the ability of speed approached Hanuman with an affected smile. From another side approached Bhaasakarna with rage and with a sharp ‘shula’. As both the rakshasaas were left and right of Veera Hanuman and sought to hurt Veera Hanuman simultaneously; then the Maha Vaanara was hurt by Bhaskarna’s pattisha and Pradhasa with a paattisha and Bhasakarna with the shula almost simultaneously. sa tābhyām viḡṣatair gātrair asṛgdigdhatanūruhaḥ, abhavad vānaraḥ kruddho bālasūryasamaprabhaḥ/ samutpātya gireḥ śṛṅgam samṛgavyālapādapam, jaghāna hanumān vīro rākṣasau kapikuñjaraḥ/ As both the Rakshasaas hurt the Vanara Veera, his hairy body received cuts at places bleeding; then the maha vaanara veera

Hanuman suffered blisters with oozing blood and was incensed up with his face was like the early morning Surya Deva gets extreme redness. Then soon enough, he pulled and lifted a mountain top full of huge trees, forest animals and crawling cobras and hurled on the heads of Pradhasa and Bhaskarna to death. tatas teṣv avasanneṣu senāpatiṣu pañcasu, balaṁ tad avaśeṣaṁ tu nāśayāṁ āsa vānaraḥ/ aśvair aśvān gajair nāgān yodhair yodhān rathai rathān, sa kapir nāśayāṁ āsa sahasrākṣa ivāsurān/hatair nāgaiś ca turagair bhagnākṣaiś ca mahārathaiḥ, hataiś ca rākṣasair bhūmī ruddhamārgā samantataḥ/ Thus the Maha Vanara killed all the Senapatis of Ravana Sena and cleared the remaining rakshasa soldiers too who had either ran away or were cleared to death. Just as Deva Raja Indra would kill the Asuras by their mutual killings, Hanuman too forced mutual killings of horses against horses, elephants against elephants and asura yoddhas against each other too. Thus the battle field was inaccessible as blood was flowing, corpses and carcasses were surfiet. tataḥ kapis tān dhvajinīpatīn raṇe; nihatya vīrān sabalān savāhanān, tad eva vīraḥ parigrhya toraṇaṁ; kṛtakṣaṇaḥ kālā iva prajākṣaye/ In this manner, the Five Senapatis and their army force were despatched to annihilation by singular Hanuman while the Lankapuri citizens were shivering with fear whether their turn might be round the corner too!

As even the five Senapatis and sena were shattered by Hanuman, Ravana looked at his son Akshaya Kumara who was ably trained in the art of big battles even against celestial beings. Inspired at the looks of his father encouragingly, the Kumara was readily enthusiastic as though shreshtha brahmana panditas rise to make their offerings of 'havishaanna' to Agni Deva. He then proceeded to that very place where the Vanara Yoddha was located. The Kumara had the erstwhile popularity of having performed long tapasya and accomplished a 'maha dhwaḥ' of gold studded with glittering nava ratnas hoisted on his famed chariot which was reputed as unbreakable and driven by illustrious horses flying high on the sky and earth alike. Having arrived at the very spot where Hanuman stood up smilingly, Akshaya Kumara gave such a conceited look at him as though pralaya kaala Surya looks down on the earth ready for extinction at the 'yugantara kaala'. Veera Hanuman ever ready for the battle returned an extremely incensed look at the rakshasa veera kumara. By hitting the air above with his three rows of arrows suggestively inviting Anjaneya for the battle, Akshaya Kumara provoked the invincible vanara veera. While the Kumara wearing a glittering golden necklace, karna kundalas, and so on proceeded to Veera Hanuman; indeed when ever asuras or devatas encountered the Kumara, they were invariably apprehensive of their own safety and survival. His manner of raising his bow and releasing his arrows with incredible precision were popular. Now in the present encounter of Kapishreshtha Hanuman and Akshaya Kumara, it appears bhutala vaasis appear to be alarmed, Surya's tejas dimmed and Vayu Deva's speed slowed down. Then Veera Kumara who was an outstanding expert in the style of release shot three initial arrows on Hanuman's head. Instantly there were flows of blood trickling down his shoulders. Then Hanuman felt somewhat dazed and initiated enlarging and heightening his body. *sa mandarāgrastha

Hanuman got infuriated and having roared again, started jumping up all across the high skies. But, Akshaya Kumara too continued releasing his arrows with equal agility followed the ever jumping Anjaneya as if sky high clouds of density chased the mountainous profile of Hanuman. Then Hanuman’s flashes of his thoughts: ‘doubtless, Akshaya Kumara is an extremely capable arrowsman and it should be ruthless for him to be decimated without mercy; yet, he ought not be allowed to survive any further as the very purpose of the arduous task on hand. *na khalv ayaṁ nābhībhave upekṣitaḥ; parākramo hy asya raṇe vivardhate, pramāṇam tv eva mamāsyā rocate; na vardhamāno ’gnir upekṣitum kṣamaḥ/ iti pravegam tu parasya tarkayan; svakarmayogaṁ ca vidhāya vīryavān, cakāra vegam tu mahābalas tadā; matim ca cakre ’sya vadhe mahākapiḥ/ sa tasya tām aṣṭahayān mahājavān; samāhitān bhārasahān vivartane, jaghāna vīraḥ pathi vāyusevite; talaprahālaiḥ pavanātmajaḥ kapiḥ/*Therefore, if out of my mercifulness, the Ravana Kumara now on the very enthusiastic mental frame work should not be allowed to cross his excusable limits as he is now at the peak of his pride and foolhardiness. Thus having deeply introspected, Veera Anjaneya had increased the velocity of his ‘vaayu vega’ and decided to resort to ‘shatru samhara’. Then, Veera Anjaneya already in the skies hit the eight horses of Ravana Kumara’s chariot by which the incessant ‘baana prayogas’ and thus despatched the horses to yama loka. tatas talenābhīhato mahārathaḥ; sa tasya piṅgādhipa -mantrinirjitaḥ, sa bhagnanīḍaḥ parimuktakūbaraḥ; papāta bhūmau hataavājir ambarāt/ sa tam parityajya mahāratho ratham; sakārmukaḥ khaḍgadharāḥ kham utpatat, tapo ’bhiyogād ṛṣir ugravīryavān; vihāya deham marutām ivālayam/ tataḥ kapiḥ tam vicarantaṁ ambare; patatirājānilasiddhasevite, sametya tam mārutavegavikramaḥ; krameṇa jagrāha ca pādayor dṛḍham/ Then the great Prime Minister of Vaanara King Sugriva demolished the Akshaya Kumara’s chariot as also the maha dhvaja which was one of Akshaya’s proud accomplishment pursuant to his deep tapasya. Then the Maha Rathi Akshaya Kumars jumped of his chariot with his dhanush and sword and jumped high on the sky, just as maha yogis would have discarded their bodies to the lokas above. Then Vayu Putra Anjaneya accelerated his ‘vaayu vega’ and swooped like Garuda Deva and faced Akshaya Kumara and held the Kumaras’s feet firmly. sa tam samāvidhya sahasraśaḥ kapir; mahoragam grhya ivāṇḍajeśvaraḥ, mumoca vegāt piṭṛtulyavikramo; mahītale samyati vānarottamaḥ/ Then like his father Vaayu Deva having got the grip of Akshaya Kumaras’s body stood up, lifted Akshaya Kumaras’s youthful body and like Garuda Deva would toss poisonous cobras with their tails, hurled the body severely down to the battle ground. sa bhagnabāhūrukaṭīśiro dharaḥ; kṣarann asṛṇ nirmathitāsthilocanaḥ, sa bhinnasamdhīḥ pravikīrṇabandhano; hataḥ kṣitau vāyusutena rākṣasaḥ/ As the body was thrown down, Akshaya Kumara the Ravana Putra, got split up and his shoulders, hands, chest etc. were broken, his sharp eyes sprouted out, and the nasa- needi bandhanas were shattered. Thus Pavan Kumara had successfully demolished Akshaya Kumara the younger son of Ravanaasura. mahākapir bhūmitale nipīḍya tam; cakāra rakṣo ’dhipater mahad bhayam/ maharṣibhiḥ cakracarair mahāvratāiḥ; sametya bhūtaiḥ ca sayakṣapaṇnagaiḥ, suraiḥ ca sendrair bhṛṣajātavismayair; hate kumāre sa kapir nirīkṣitaḥ/ nihatya tam vajrasutopamaprabham; kumāram akṣaṁ kṣatajopamekṣaṇam, tad eva vīro 'bhijagāma toraṇam; kṛtakṣaṇaḥ kāla iva prajākṣaye/ As Ravana realised the death of his son by Hanuman, Ravana got jitters in his heart. But Maharshis who were used to travel in the 'nakshatra mandali', even as Indra and Devas were proud of Vayu Putra Hanuman, witnessed the 'going ons' and blessed the latter with flashes of their darshan of the hero who was full of their grace in extreme humility. Then Veera Hanuman reappeared at the thresholds of Ashoka Vatika for further encounters by Ravana and his followers.

Shattered with putra shoka and humiliation, Ravana asked Indrajit to use his brahmastra to end up the menace of Hanuman and save the Rakshasa Samrajya and his personal prestige and fame at stake!

Partly grieved by the killing of his herioc, ever enthusiastic son Akshaya Kumara, as also a big and irretrievable blow to his own personal glory, King Ravana looked at his elder son and stated: 'My dear Indrajit! You have the fame of securing countless 'astras' at your command pursuant to your tapasya to Brahma Deva. You are well versed 'astra vetta, shastra dhaari', and more essentially the tormentor of Indra and 'sarva devataa gana', and literally the unique 'Indra Jit'! In fact, Devatas-Marud ganas and all the celestials are truly afraid of your capabilities and personal victories. Viewed from the view point of the present 'desha-kaala vigjñana- paristhitis' you are indeed the best possible choice to boldly encounter the Vayu Putra. On the battle fields, you are indeed are invincible as per the established tenets of 'Shatraankula buddhi purvaka rajakeeyas' of kings of yore, with undisputable and firmly established keerti. If we review the recent events, the Kinkara Rakshasaas were devastated- Maha Jambuali was killed- the young and dashing sons of of the Ministers of this Ravana Lanka Samrajya were killed-five senapatis along with their eveready maha rakshasa sena were decimated. Their elephants, horses and chariots were lost. *sahodaras te dayitaḥ kumāro 'kṣaś ca sūditaḥ, na tu teṣv eva me sāro yas tvayy ariniśūdana/ idaṁ hi dṛṣtvā matiman mahad balaṁ; kapeḥ prabhāvaṁ ca parākramaṁ ca, tvam ātmanaś cāpi samīkṣya sāraṁ; kuruṣva vegaṁ svabalānurūpam/ balāvamardas tvayi saṁnikṛṣṭe; yathā gate śāmyati śāntaśatrau, tathā samīkṣyātmabalaṁ paraṁ ca; samārabhasvāstra -vidāṁ variṣṭha/*Your dearmost younger brother Akshaya Kumarsa too was trapped to death. Now, happily my own in- born qualities of invincibility of trilokas, fame, and mental faculties as were present in me earlier have been now present in you now too in abundance. Keeping in the perspective of all these developments now, do make a proper assessment of this Vanara Hanuman, do make an honest effort to subdue him and possibly kill him, even. Shastra dhaari Veera Indrajit! Do silence the thorn of the Lanka Samrajya on your own personal strength without referece of others [as of mine, Kumbhalarna and so on]. You need not take the maha rakshasa sena too, since that might divert and even dilute your personal attention, as the sena might have a tendency of getting demoralised too soon following the collapse of some, followed by the running away of others. Like wise, you need not assume rage and desperation either; much less take all your armoury like the Vajraayudha (since acquired from earlier from Indra), as the Vayu Putra's physical and mental faculties are beyond assessment and he is a standing proof against such devices. That Vanara is of 'Agni tulya sadhaka' and thus his abilities are incomprehensible. Try to digest all these precautions and concentrate on the enemy very carefully. Trust the glory of your own dhanush and the hidden shaktis of the 'mahastras'. Do proceed with extreme caution and extraordinary mental poise and display such 'paraakrama' as should never be frittered away! na khalv iyaṁ matiḥ śreṣṭhā yat tvāṁ saṁpreṣayāmy aham, iyaṁ ca rājadharmāṇāṁ kṣatrasya ca matir matā/ nānāśāstraiś ca saṁgrāme vaiśāradyam arimḍama, avaśyam eva boddhavyaṁ kāmyaś ca vijayo raṇe/ Uttama buddhhi yukta maha veera! I am fully aware that I am exposing you to such impossible and dire and desperate situation and this is perhaps improper; but this specific action of mine is indeed as per ksatriya dharma and of 'Raja Neeti'. Shatru damana! A veera purusha should necessarily have to be equipped with the expertise of battle tactics for assured success.' Thus his father King Ravanaasura gave a serious and highly precautionary brief, Megha Naada Indrajit perfomed 'pradakshinas' around his dearmost father, philosopher, friend and guide proceeded to encounter Veera Hanuman, even as the rakshasa veeras cheered 'jaya jaya naadaas' with best wishes of safe and successful return from the battle field. Then Indrajit proceeded by a chariot drawn by four Lions with such speed akin to Garuda. He proceeded to where Veera Hanuman was comfortably seated awaiting the next batch of Asuras as per the directive of their King. As the anticipatory sounds of a chariot's arrival were heart, Hanuman was contented and alerted, yet with enthusiasm. Indrajit was indeed a well reputed in 'yuddha kala' or the art of battles. He proceeded with his 'dhanurbaanas' as his very few followers standing behind, while it appeared that all the directions were sullied with suspense, as the 'arta naadaas' of pashu pakshis were resounding the sky. Precisely at that time, Maha Naagas from the nether lokaas and yaksha-maharshi- siddha ganaas were agog with suspense in the nakshatra mandali high on the sky. As the Indraakaara Dhawaja was shining bright atop on the chariot approached Veera Hanuman, he heigtened his body frame, while simultaneously Rakshasa Kumara Megha made his 'dhanus-thamkaara'. The appropriate simile of that situation would be of Deva Raja Indra versus Bali Charavarti as the portented 'bandhana'! In their close encounter, Indrajit shot his arrows on the Maha Kaaya of Hanuman which indeed were wasteful. At that juncture, the earth quaking sounds emitted by the chariot wheels as also the screechings of the suuccessive releases of arrows of Meghanaada were like the receberations of sounds from mridangas and bheris! Panana Kumara being an expert in dodging the released arrows by his rapid jumpings. hanūmato veda na rākṣaso 'ntaram; na mārutis tasya mahātmano 'ntaram, parasparaṁ nirviṣahau babhūvatuḥ; sametya tau devasamāna - vikramau/ Neither Rakshasa Indrajit was ceasing to resort to the raining of arrows targetting Hanuman, nor the skippings by Hanuman avoiding the hits of the arrows was stopped for long. Meghanaada's strange and often crooked baana prayogaas were thus being tiresomely wasted. Despite his extreme concentration, Meghanaada was continously releasing innumerable 'astras' repetitively but to little impact. Indeed, Veera Vaayu Putra Hanuman was immune from any of 'mantrika prayogaas' including Indra's Vajastra, Vayavastra, Mohanaastra and so on.

'Celestial missiles of danda chakra, dharma chakra, kaala chakra, vishnu chakra, and the most powerful Aindra chakra and the arts of application and throwing away of Indra's Vajrastra, Shiva Deva's trishula praharana, and Brahma's granted Aishikastra and Shira -chedana astra was taught by Maharshi Vishvamitra to Rama Lakshmanas besides the magnificent vidya of 'gadaa praharana' or the art of battling with maces like 'modaki'- 'prahari'- shikhari of forcible applications of mace strokings, throwings and mace head rubbings. Then Vishmamitra taught the astras of 'dharma paasha-kaala paasha-

and varuna paasha'. Subsequently they were taught two kinds of dry and wet rounded applications of astras viz. 'ashani- pinaka-narayanaastras'. Then Rama Lakshmanas were taught Agneyastra fond of Agni Deva resulting in fierce flames of fire renowned as Shikharaastra- Vayavyastra which sweeps away the opponent with virulent sweeps away. Then the Maharshi teaches the Kakutsa nandanaas of 'Hayashira Astra'- 'Krounchana Astra' and 'Shakti Dvayaastra' or of high potent twin astras attacking the opponent with doubled up potency. The Maharshi was pleased to instruct Rama Lakshmanas the astras named 'kankala'-the devastating 'musala'- and the destructive 'Kapaala' and 'Kinkini' and such astras which could lift up and throw the opponents forcefully. Then in the series were taught the famed 'Nandana Astra' of Vidyadharas as well as the associated mace of fame. The 'Gandharva Priya' astras of 'Sammohana' for relapsing into senselessness like 'Prastaavana- Prashamana-and Soumya' were taught too, besides the 'Mohanaastras' such as for varshana-shoshana-santaapana-vilaapana-maadana which was the beloved of Kama Deva Manmadha himself, and the Gandharvapriya 'Maanava astra', besides the Pishacha priya 'Mohanastra'. Brahmarshi Vishvamitra then instructed the Astras named 'Taamasa-Soumana-Samvarta-Durjaya- Mousala-Satya-and Mayamayaastras too. Then the Maharshi imparted to Rama Lakshmanas the glorious 'Surya prabha Astra' which when once released as an arrow would destroy the enemies to ashes. Simultaneously, the Maharshi conferred 'Shishira naamaka Chandraastra', 'Tvashta (Vishvakarma) naamaka 'Daarunaastra', Bhaga Deva namaka 'Bhayankaraashtra' and 'Sheetoshna' naamaka Astra of Manu Deva. Then on realising that somehow, Veera Hanuman being apparently immune from all the 'astras', he might perhaps be surrendered by being tied tight by utilising the unique Brahmaastra only. Then an outstanding expert of Astra Vidya, Indrajit targetted at Maha Vayu Putra with his arrow released while invoking the Brahmaastra. avadhyo 'yam iti jñātvā tam astreṇāstratattvavit, nijagrāha mahābāhur mārutātmajam indrajit/ tena baddhas tato 'streṇa rākṣasena sa vānarah, abhavan nirviceshaḥ ca papāta ca mahūtale/ tato 'tha buddhvā sa tadāstra - bandham; prabhoḥ prabhāvād vigatālpavegaḥ, pitāmahānugraham ātmanaś ca; vicintayām āsa haripravīraḥ/ Astra Tatva expert Indrajit, having realised that Anjaneya was conversant, he tied him down with Brahmastra, as Maha Bali Anjaneya fell down and collapsed. However, Brahma realising that he was invoked blessed Anjaneya to get recovered almost instantly as the Vayu Putra regained consciousness. Having dutifully greeted in his mind for His 'anugraha' and recalled Brahma's 'varadana in his previous birth. tataḥ svāyambhuvair mantrair brahmāstram abhimantritam, hanūmānś cintayām āsa varadānam pitāmahāt/ na me 'strabandhasya ca śaktir asti; vimokṣaṇe lokaguroḥ prabhāvāt, ity evam evamvihito 'strabandho; mayātmayoner anuvartitavyaḥ/ Yet having recalled Brahma's varadaana, Anjaneya was unable to move freely as Indrajit had meanwhile tied with strong series of ropes; no doubt he could easily sever the ropes by his physical strength instantly but said to himself that anyway Brahma Deva's 'anugraha ought not to be impugned. sa vīryam astrasya kapir vicārya; pitāmahānugraham ātmanaś ca, vimokṣaśaktim paricintayitvā; pitāmahājñām anuvartate sma/ astreṇāpi hi baddhasya bhayaṁ mama na jāyate, pitāmahamahendrābhyām rakṣitasyānilena ca/ grahaṇe cāpi rakṣobhir mahan me guṇadarśanam, rākṣasendreṇa saṁvādas tasmād grhṇantu mām pare/ Moreover, I am least concerned of the tight rope 'bandhana' as I do enjoy the kindness of Brahma-Indra- Vaayu Devatas protect me always. Moreover, I should soon have an opportunity to see Ravanaasura in his Rakshasa Sabha and thus see for myself thereby assessing the strengths and weaknesses of the members of the Ravana Sabha. Having thus so decided, Hanuman pretended unconsciouness and fear and started howling and screaming of a common trait of a monkey. Indrajit then realised that Veera Hanuman was only tied with vrikshas which he could have removed with his might anyway and was only pretending and as such should be suspicion worthy. Any way he would have to be taken to the King Ravana and his sabha to show off that the enemy was subdued finally. Then as Veera Hanuman was produced before the King Ravana and the King interrogated Veera Hanuman: ko 'yam kasya kuto vāpi kim kāryam ko vyapāśrayaḥ, iti rākṣasavīrāṇāṃ tatra saṃjajñire kathāḥ/ hanyatām dahyatām vāpi bhakṣyatām iti cāpare, rākṣasās tatra saṃkruddhāḥ paraspāram athābruvan/ atītya mārgaṃ sahasā mahātmā; sa tatra rakṣo 'dhipapādamūle, dadarśa rājñāḥ paricāravṛddhān; grhaṃ mahāratnavibhūṣitaṃ ca/ 'Who are you, whose son are you, why have you come here, what purpose for which you had slipped into this Kingdom, and who is your support here!' As Ravana was interrogating Hanuman, most of the Rakshasas shouted: 'beat this despicable vanara, kill him, burn him alive or better still devour him straightaway.' Then Veera Anjaneya found his way towards the King, as the latter's personal attendants noticed that Hanuman was looking at the grandeur of the Sabha Hall was attractively decorated splendidly with precious stones and the well lit up the high dome and so on. As Dashamukha Ravana was glaring at Hanuman with reddened eyes and flamed looks with suppressed fury, he instructed the senior Ministers to interrogate the Vanara: In his reply, Veera Anjaneya with composure replied: yathā -kramaṃ taiḥ sa kapiś ca prṣṭaḥ; kāryārtham arthasya ca mūlam ādau, nivedayām āsa harīśvarasya; dūtaḥ sakāśād aham āgato 'smi/ As the respective Ministers asked Hanuman about the purpose of his visit and related questions; Veera Anjaneya merely replied: he was the follower of Vanara King Sugriva and his Messenger merely, and that was how and why that he arrived here at Lanka.

Sarga Forty Nine

Veera Hanuman was doubt impressed by King Ravana's accomplishments and his own personalised feelings.

As Ravana Putra Indrajit having tied up Hanuman with his Brahmastra Prayoga, and having produced right before the Rakshasa King Maha Ravana in the Maha Sabha inteterrogating the imprisoned culprit, he displayed his valor and showed his red eyes. Meanwhile, Hanuman kept on staring and admiring at the beauty and splendor of the Ravana Sabha and its embellishments of gold, invaluable jewellery, and its magnificence and glory. Maha Tejasvi Rakshasa Raja as adorned with glittering kireeta, attired with priceless silk robes, his face with charming application of red chandana, and surrounded by damsels of prettiness of body and etiquette. vipulair darśanīyaiś ca rakṣākṣair bhīmadarśanaiḥ, dīptatīkṣṇamahādamaṣṭraiḥ pralambadaśanacchadaiḥ/ śīrobhir daśabhir vīraṁ bhrājamānaṁ mahaujasaṁ, nānāvyaḷasamākīrṇaiḥ śikharair iva mandaram/ nīlāñjanacaya prakhyam hāreṇorasi rājatā, pūrṇacandrābhavaktreṇa sabalākam ivāmbudam/ King Ravana's highly attractive eyes were red and his looks were piercing, at once fearful, scaring, yet searching; his beard was too big hiding his lips providing a strange impression on the onlookers. Veera Hanuman saw how Ravana Dasha Mukhas were glittering, readily arresting the onlookers, frightening yet attractive like the Mandarachala Shikharas with surfiated poisonous serpents hanging all around. Ravana's body was black like koels and his massive and broad chest was bright with the shine of the 'nava ratna maalaas'. His face was like the clouds surrounded by bright with streaks of red glow like the 'Ushakaala Surya'. bāhubhir baddhakeyūraiś candanottama - rūṣitaiḥ, bhrājamānāṅgadaiḥ pīnaiḥ pañcaśīrṣair ivoragaiḥ/ mahati sphāṭike citre ratnasamyoga - saṁskṛte, uttamāstarāṇāstūrṇe upaviṣṭam varāsaṇe/ alaṁkṛtābhir atyartham pramadābhiḥ samantataḥ, vālavayajanahastābhir ārāt samupasevitam/ Ravana was possessive of his strong and fearful twenty hands was like of a chain of five hooded maha sarpas with natural and ever obtainable 'manis' there above. His 'simhaasana' or the throne seated by him of gold with studded sphatika manis was amazingly singular, as damsels each of whom was with admirable dresses and enviable 'aabharanas' were surrounded, being anxious serve him at mere nods of his waving heads and flips of his glances. Even as he was being seated, his able and popular Ministers named Dhurdhara, Prahasta, Maha Paarshva and Nikumbha were too seated. These were outstanding experts of Mantra Tatvas. Thus Veera Hanuman could simply not resist the awe of Ravana's presence and was truly engrossed at the supreme center of the Sabha, and of course the name and fame of his saamrajya, mentally recalling the symbolic 'simile' of Meru Parvata Shikhara with water falls all around gushing down ever. Then within himself, Veera Hanuman mused: aho rūpam aho dhairyam aho sattvam aho dyutiḥ, aho rākṣasarājasya sarvalakṣaṇayuktatā/ yady adharmo na balavān syād ayaṁ rākṣaseśvaraḥ, syād ayaṁ suralokasya saśakrasyāpi rakṣitā/ Aho! How impressive and breathtaking is this Rakshasa Raja! What kind of 'dhairya saahasa' does he possess. What type of 'rajodita lakshanas' or of characteristics truly worthy of an Ideal King of Kings. If only his is not a symbol of Adharma and of evil nature, he could have been like Indra the samrakshaka of Devas and of Swarga Loka. It only due to his cruel misdoings, Deva Danavas are scared of him as he could create havoc to Lokas ushering chaos in the 'srishti!'

Pretending as bounded by Indrajit's Brahmaastra, though Brahma granted his immunity, Hanuman faced Ravana whose Minister asked him why he visited Lanka; he confirmed, he was Shri Rama's messenger.

Maha baahu King of Rakshasaas, then saw Hanuman with his angry and piercing and searching looks. In his own mind, he was looking some what puzzled with surprise and concern. He ruminated within himself: Kimeva Bhagavan Nandi bhavet saakshaadihaagatah, yena shaptosmi kailase mayaa prahasite puraa, soyam Vaanara murthis syaatkinkasvid Baanopi vaasurah/ What! Had saakshaat Nandeeswara had arrived as this Vaanara , whom I had heckled him years ago when I was trying to lift Kailasa Parvata; or is he Banasura to teach me a lesson.

[Vishleshana on 1. Nandishwara and 2. Baanasura]

1. Origin and Glory of Nandishvara:

Maharshi Shilada performed severe Tapasya for thousands of years and his body got degenerated to such an extent that it became a skeleton full of worms. Finally, Maha Deva granted his vision and Shilada's wish: Tawa Putro bhavishyaami Nandi naamnaa twayonijah, Pitaa bhavisyaasi mama Pitruvey Jagataam Muney/ (I shall grant you a son with the name of Nandi and he would be my son and would be popular like wise). Then Nandi was born at Yagna Bhumi with the features of Maha Deva himself with Trinetras, Chaturbhjas and as Jataa mukuta and Vajra-Sarpa dhaari when Devatas rained fragrant flowers, Apsaraas danced and Gandharvaas sang tuneful hymns in praise of Lord Shiva and Nandi. Vasus, Rudras and Indra prayed respectfully and Devis like Lakshmi, Jyeshtha, Diti, Aditi, Nanda, Shachi, Bhadra and others rendered 'Stutis' to Nandi. Shailada Muni commended Maha Deva as well as Nandishwara and expressed his total satisfaction and gratitude. As Nandishwara was taken into the 'Parnashala' or thatched home of Shailada, Nandi assumed a human Rupa instead of Deva Swarupa. Shailada Muni was overjoyed, performed the child's Jaata Karma and other Vedic Tasks and on the son's attaining seven years performed his Yagnopaveeta dharana and 'Upaasana' of Gayatri and tendered him to the Ashram of Maharshi Mitraavaruna. The Guru taught Veda Vidya, Shastras and other Scriptures, besides Dhanur Vidya, Ayur Veda and MantraVidyaas, Chatushashti Kaalas, Ashrama Dharmas and so on. Mitravaruna was very proud of the student and so was Muni Shilada; the Guru then blurted at that time of Nandi's exit from Ashram that doubtless Bala Nandi displayed extra-ordinary brilliance as a fulfilled Scholar and accomplishment but was shortlived! Shilada fainted at this disclosure for long and after regaining normalcy took to extreme Tapasya again to Maha Deva; even as Shilada was engaged in Tapasya, Shiva appeared, fondled Nandi, assured him not to get disturbed from what was stated by his Guru. He said that actually he sent messengers that Nandi's life was almost over since his human birth would anyway be of Tapatrayas and hence he was terminating the Manava Janma to bestow Everlasting Life; by so saying, Maha Deva touched Nandi so that his physical body would fall down with his Jataa Mukuta etc and secure a permanent Rudra Rupa. The Place where the human form of Nandi's 'Jatajuta' fell on Earth was materialised into a Sacred River called Jatodaka and Nandi's new Form was of a 'Vrishabha'; Parama Shiva himself performed 'Abhisheka' on the new Form of Nandi and that Place came to be called Vrishadhwani, Jambunada or Panchanada and Vishwakarma gifted a Golden Mukuta or Headgear and Kundalaas or Ear Rings. Thereafter Nandishwara familiarised with his mother Devi Girija and also the 'Ganaas', whom he was empowered as their Chief. Devi Parvati endeared the son who prostrated before her with veneration. Maha Deva declared to the Tri Lokas that Nandishwara was the son of Shiva and Parvati. Devas headed by Indra, Brahma, Vishnu, Dikpalakas, Maharshis, besides Yaksha-Gandharva-Muni and Yogi ganaas were all invited to a huge event where Nandishwara's unique name was fame were known all over, where ever Maha Deva was known and indeed Maha Deva was acclaimed as the Supreme Lord of the Universe. Parama Shiva granted a boon to Nandishwara that He would be in the 'Sannithi' (Presence) of Shiva always and any kind of worship to himself would be incomplete without any Service to Nandi ! Even great sins of the magnitude of Brahma hatya could be nullified by Shiva Puja , but at first, Nandeeswara should be propitiated without fail; Aadaw kuryaanamaskaaram tadantey Shivataam Vrajat/ [Linga Purana]

2. Baanaasura whom was a nightmare to Devas and Indra with long life from Treta Yuga to Dwapara Yuga, was the grandson of the famed Bali Chakravarti and a parama bhakta of Parameshwara and ever worshipped a Rasa Linga gifted by Vishvakarma. As an ardent devotee of Shiva, he was stated to have thousand arms to play mridaaga at Shiva Parvati tandava nrityas. In the course of Dwapara Yuga, his daughter Usha Devi happened to see both Shiva and Parvati sitting together and being an Antaryami Devi Parvati joked with Usha that one day she would too land up in a situation like that. Usha asked Devi Parvati as to when would that day arrive! Parvati replied that she would dream of a youth on the night of Vaishakha Shukla Dwadashi. As the day arrived, Usha did get the dream and informed of the incidence to her friend Chitrlekha, the daughter of Banasura's Minister named Kushmanda. As Usha was unable to bear the feelings of love, Chitrlekha showed several drawings of eligible and handsome bachelors and after a few days, Usha succeeded finally to identify the youth. Then it was learnt that the youth was the son of Krishna. In course of time, the couple met and their romance became intense by the day. Learning of the desire of his daughter with Aniruddha, the son of Pradyumana -the erstwhile Cupid who was burnt into ashes by Lord Siva's third eye- and the grand son of Krishna (Avatar of Lord Vamana), Banasura quashed the wedding proposal and reprimanded his daughter since Krishna was his foe. Banasura prevented his daughter meeting Aniruddha and when the latter fought with him, he imprisoned Aniruddha. Yadavas in Dwaraka wondered as to what happened to Aniruddha. On learning from Narada Muni, it was learnt that Aniruddha was imprisoned in Shonitapur, the Capital of Banasura and Krishna, Balarama and Pradyumna lest by Garuda to that Place. There, they confronted Pramathaganas of Shiva and fought with Jwara the three footed Chief of the 'Parshads' named Maheswara and defeated him. This led to a full-fledged battle between Krishna and others on one side and Banasura, Shankara and Kartikeya on the other. As furious Shastra-Astraas were exchanged by both the Parties, the whole world was affected with Pralayaagni. Balarama attacked Banasura and the fight got intensified with alarming consequences. Meanwhile Krishna recalled his Sudarshana Chakra and sliced off the mighty hands of Banasura and was about to cut off the Asura's head too. It was at that climatic moment, Shankara addressed Krishna to stop. "Hey Krishna! I am aware that you are the Purushottama -Parameswara-Paramatmaa and Adyanta-Rahita! Do get cooled down. I have provided shield to Banasura my devotee and assured that I would stand guarantee at the time of his peril; please do not falsify my faith in me. He has not done any thing wrong to you but is egoistic due to my backing and therefore pardon him. Krishna replied: 'Shankara! If you so wish as you had given him a benediction, Banaasura would continue to be alive. In order to respect your assurance to him, I am withdrawing Sudarshana Chakra; if you had given him protection, so do I; You should never feel that you are different from me; you should always consider me as yourself and together we are the Devas, Asuras, human beings and all the rest; all those who consider us as different from each other are shrouded in Maya or Illusion; indeed, I am pleased and am gone. There after, Krishna and all the rest headed to Aniruddha's prison, where the latter was released by 'Naga bandhana' or tight-tied by a serpent which ran away at the appearance of Garuda Deva while Banasura politely agreed for the Sacred wedding of Usha-Aniruddhaas. Stanza 5 onward continued:

Ravanaasura with his angry looks then asked one of his able Ministers Prahasta: 'Amaatya! Ask this 'duraatma' (Hanuman) as to where had he arrived from, and for which purpose! What did he think was the reason as to why he shattered Pramadaa Vana! He had the audacity of entering my Lankaapuri; why did he fight with my rakshasa veeras. What was the meaning of slipping into my kingdom! Ask this durbuddhi Vanara! ' Then Matri Prahasta asked Hanuman: Vaanara! Don't you get nervous now, as you are caught and tied down by the Mahaastra; keep peaceful and be brave now; we assure you that it would be good for you; there is no need for you to get nervous. As you have now already entered this Maha Lanka similar to Indrapuri already, reply to us properly; we shall soon relieve you! Are you a spy of Kubera, or Yama or Varuna, confess now and you would be freed soon. Or in case Vishnu himself sent you, say that. You are obviously pretending to be a Vanara, but do certainly are not one as you vanara's characteristics are well recognisable. If you do not cooperate now, then there may not be any chance of our releasing you at all. For get all these queries of mine, just confess now as to why have you entered here cat all.’ Thus amaatyā Prahasta was naivety or artless simplicity which certainly not of the quality of an experienced investigating official of the ranking of a minister, addressed the questions posed at the extremely learned Veeraanjaneya, Hanuma replied: jātir eva mama tv eṣā vānaro 'ham ihāgataḥ/ darśane rākṣasendrasya durlabhe tad idaṁ mayā, vanaṁ rākṣasarājasya darśanārthe vināśitam/ tatas te rākṣasāḥ prāptā balino yuddhakāṅkṣiṇaḥ, rakṣaṇārthaṁ ca dehasya pratiyuddhā mayā raṇe/ Yes, by birth I am a Vanara; I have assumed this tough task and responsibility; yes, I had wantonly destroyed Pramadaa vana and killed a series of rakshasa veeraas as they provoked me wage battles. Addressing Ravana's politey with considerable restraint, Veera Hanuman stated: Rakshasa Raja! I have arrived here having brought Vanara King's message to you. Vaanara Raja Sugriva being like your brother had asked me to convey his greetings to you and of your welfare. Now, I am conveying to Sugriva's message to you as follows as 'Dharma-Artha Laabha daakika vachanas'. 'Recently Dasharatha Nandana Shri Rama had arrived here; you might be surely aware of King Dasharatha who was his 'praja hityaishi' and was of 'apaara sena' of 'chaturanga balaas' of foot soldiers, cavalry, elephantry, chariots comparable of Indra's comparability. Shri Rama following his father's instruction followed the 'dharma maarga' had since left Ayodhya their capital city and have been into 'dandakaaranya' as accompanied by his dharma patni Devi Sita and his brother Lakshmana. Devi Sita is the dear daughter of Videsha King Janaka. At the janasthaana, Shri Rama's wife disappeared. Raja Kumara Shri Rama along with his brother Lakshmana, in their search for the suddenly missing Devi Sita, had recently arrived at the Rishyamuka Parvata. Vaanara King Sugriva declared and swore that he would help Shri Rama to restore his missing wife Devi Sita. Subsequently, Raja Kumara Shri Rama killed Maha Veera Vaali, the elder brother of Sugriva, and helped Sugriva to be the present King of Vanaraas and Bears. King Ravana! You are well aware of the extraordinary might of Maha Vaali. But Shri Rama demolished Maha Vaali and made Sugriva the King of Vanaras.

Ravana'sura once decided to challenge Vaanara King Maha Baali; the latter was born of Indra Devaamsha and got a boon that he would attain half of the strength of any of his opponents standing face to face. This power enabled Bāli to defeat all his foes and bring the countries in all directions under his sway. Ravana heard about this and decided to overpower Bāli somehow or other and approached Kiskindha. Having learnt from Baali's Minister, Taran, that Vaali got the boon, Ravana somehow decided to kill Bali. His idea was to kill Baali by capturing and killing while going behind him when Vaali would daily perform his daily prayers. Next morning Bāli went to the eastern sea-shore and began his prayer and meditation. Ravana approached Baali behind and sat close to Vaali, presuming he could hold Vaali's tail and beat him from behind without facing Vaali. Baali knew that Ravana was sitting behind him. But pretending that he knew nothing put his long tail on the body of Ravana, and passed it lengthwise and breadthwise through every part of his body and tied him like a bundle of faggots, and made a jump into the air. Within a short time Vaali visited all the usual places and reached Kishkindhā. Seeing Ravana hanging by the tail of Bali, even the women folk laughed. Thus Ravana became a laughing stock as Ravana made a confession admitting surrender as the other wise invincible Maha Vali pardoned Ravana and let him go unhurt. entrusted to me as my noble responsibility, I jumped off to the other shores of this Maha Samudra which has a gigantic span of hundred yojanaas reached the Lanka Samrajya by ‘vaayu vega’. Having searched all over of this Lanka, I entered your antahpura foremost with hope against hope and finally located at the spot where I had the fortune of visioning Devi Sita tad bhavān dṛṣṭadharmārthas tapaḥ kṛtaparigrahaḥ, paradārān mahāprājñā noparoddhum tvam arhasi/ na hi dharmaviruddheṣu bahv apāyeṣu karmasu, mūlaghātiṣu sajjante buddhimanto bhavadvidhāḥ/ kaś ca lakṣmaṇamuktānām rāmakopānuvartinām, śarāṇām agrataḥ sthātum śakto devāsuresv api/ ‘Maha mate’! You are indeed fully aware of dharma tatva- of what is dharma and what is not. Those tenets are such that either these might uplift a Being in srishti, or down grade and eventually ruin them. You have had the unique glory of having performed tapasya and devotion to the Almighty. But could you please enlighten me how a highly learned person of your stature forcibly drag another person’s life partner! You are fully aware of the consequences since such thoughtless actiond are bound to recoil and destroy and uprooted. That is why, a maha purusha of your ranking never get involved; and even having done so would soon seek to recorrect soon. That is why, do very kindly make a proper introspection, and evenat this stage, please, let the past mis-doings be ignored and make a fresh initiative be upheld; let Devi Janaki be released and forward her to Shri Rama forthwith. Indeed repentance even at this final stage is what is aptly recommended. I have already seen and met Devi Sita and was delighted to have discovered an unamaginable fortune of my life. Infuriated by Hanuman's insinuations of Ravana's record of failures and praising Rama's successes, Ravana orders the vanara be killed-Vibhishana pleads against killing a messenger, as Ravana heeds.

As Veera Hanuman had badly heckled him for his record of humiliating deaths of his stalwart Rakshasaas by Rama, his own victories recently and severely warned him, King Ravana stood up in burning rage and commanded to kill Hanuman instantly. Then Ravana's brother intervened saying that a messenger of Sugriva and of Rama would be quite inappropriate. Vibhishana reminded : Vadham na kurvanti praavaragjnaa dutasya santo vasudhaadhipendro, rājan dharmaviruddham ca lokavṛtteś ca garhitam, tava

Kindly hold your anger. Pardon the messenger as he might have been blabbering all types of nonsense, yet should not be killed, though might be punished. Rajas should never kill messengers. You are indeed a dharma jnaatam raja dharma viseshajna. A person of your caliber should not be a ‘roshaavesha vasheebhuta’. As being a durjaya Rakshasa Raja, you surely impose reprimand and retribution. vairūpyāṁ aṅgeṣu kaśābhighāto; maunḍyaṁ tathā lakṣmaṇasaṁnipātaḥ, etān hi dūte pravadanti daṇḍān; vadhas tu dūtasya na naḥ śruto ’pi/ kathaṁ ca dharmārthavinītabuddhiḥ; parāvarapratyayaniścitārthaḥ, bhavadvidhaḥ kopavaśe hi tiṣṭhet; kopaṁ niyacchanti hi sattvavantaḥ/ There could be punishments to a ‘doota’ such as ‘anga bhanga’ or mutilation of the messenger’s body parts, or allow worms to hurt the messenger’s body, shave off the head or punish his body with a lasting body blemish. But I have never known of a killing the messenger. Maha Raja! Your basic mind set is replete with the purushardhas of ‘dharma and artha’. You may therefore balance the ‘neechatya and ounnatya’ or the low and mean characteristics as also the heights of the messenger; but a king of your repute an enormous accomplishments should indeed keep cool. Your psyche should reflect your origin and family background. na dharmavāde na ca lokavṛtte; na śāstrabuddhigrahaṇeṣu vāpi, vidyeta kaś cit tava vīratulyas; tvaṁ hy uttamaḥ sarvasurāsuraṇām/ na cāpy asya kaper ghāte kaṁ cit paśyāmy ahaṁ guṇam, teṣv ayaṁ pātyatāṁ daṇḍo yair ayaṁ preṣitaḥ kapiḥ/ Veera! None could be like you in digesting the ‘Dharma Vyavastha, Lokaachaara paalana, and Shastriya Sidhhantas’ and in that context none of Devaasuraas might be superceded to you. Hence, I am fully convinced that this Vanara’s being killed is not justified; but most certainly the personalities who sent the messenger be deserving of death, if you could. sādhur vā yadi vāsādhur parair eṣa samarpitaḥ, bruvan parārthaṁ paravān na dūto vadham arhati/ api cāsmīn hate rājan nānyaṁ paśyāmi khecaram, iha yaḥ punar āgacchet paraṁ pāraṁ mahodadhiḥ/ In fact, the messenger Vaanara shreshtha was only duplicating the traits and inner reactions of the senders viz. Sugriva and Rama and as such there is absolutely no justification of Hanuman’s outright murder. Nishaacharaanaamadhiponugṇasyaya Vibheeshanasyottama vaakyamishtam, jaraaha buddhyaa suralokashatrurmahaabalo Rakshasaraajamukhyah/ Thus Ravana heard his younger brother Vibhishana had thus expressed his laudable explanation against Hanuman’s challenging assertions, King Ravana had rethought of his earlier decision of killing Hanuman who was but a messenger of Sugriva and Rama.

[Vishleshana on Ravana’s origin, family background and accomplishments in brief:

Ravana was born to Vishrava Maharshi and Daitya Kaikeshi. Pulastaya, one of the ten Prajapatis or mind-born sons of Brahma, was maternal grandfather. Kaikeshi, born of Sumali and Tataka had two brothers Maricha and Subahu. On the paternal side, Malyavan was Ravana’s Prime Queen was the daughter of Mayasura and Apsara Hema and acclaimed as Maha Pativrata. Among his many other wives, the most mentionable after Mandodari were Maya, the daughter of the celestial architect, and the third one Dhanyamalini. Ravana’s elder half-brother was Kubera. Vibhishana, Kumbhakarna, Khara the King of Janasthana, Dushana the Senapati of Janasthana, Ahiravan, the King of Paatala were Ravana’s younger brothers. Kumbhini was Ravana’s elder sister and wife of Madhu Rakshasa, and Shurpakhana the younger sister. Ravana’s were Meghanaada or Indrajit, Atikaya, Akshayakumara, Devantaka, Narantaka, Trishira, Prahasta. Ravana was a great scholar of Vedic knowledge under the tutelage of Shukracharya. His perseverance in tapasya to Brahma, he offered his own head and as each time he did so, his heads sprouted again and again and Brahma appeared at his tenth head’s offering and blessed him with the option to be a Dashakantha; Brahma granted him of invincibility against Aditi- Diti Putras, Sarpa, Pakshi- Pashus but ignored ‘tucchha manavas.’ Accordingly, Ravana killed or subdued numberless rakshasa-daitya-daanava-pakshi-mriga-jalacharaas and asserted his unique fame. He was an expert in music, dance and all the fine arts. He was an outstanding Shiva Bhakta, having composed Shiva Tandava Gita; as Maha Nandi prevented Shiva Darshana, he quaked Kaiilasha Parvata and accomplished Shiva darshana. As Parama Shiva granted the boon of Atma Linga to be carried to Lanka Samrajya, Shiva obliged but Ganesha intercepted on way in the guise of a baalaka and got it installed at Gokarna Ksheatra].

As Vibhishana appealed, Ravana consents to burn Hanuman's tail to display the blazing to Lanka's public. As Rakshasis conveyed, Sita prays to Agni to lessen the heat. Hanuman starts the revenge.

Conceding to the advice of his younger brother Vibhishana, Ravana'sura addressed the brother: Vibhishana! I do realise that a messenger from another King need not be killed but surely he should be punished mortally otherwise. kapīnām kila lāṅgūlam iṣṭam bhavati bhūṣaṇam, tad asya dīpyatām śīghram

Hence let this be burnt at once. Then back home, his relatives, friends, and followers would all realise of his humiliation. Let his tail be burnt to amuse and enjoy the Lank Public too as he would be taken by its streets and other public places. As soon as he heard this instruction, Veera Hanuman kept on extending his tail as the soldiers initiated by covering it all the old and unused clothes from the public houses. Then Anjaneya kept on elevating his body size and the tail kept on expanding accordingly. There after, the tail was dripped in oil from barrel to barrel. The Rakshasa Rakshasis, especially the vridhha, baala baalikaas were excited and kept on rejoicing, clapping, dancing around and got rapturous. The soldiers as per the instructions of the higher authorities waited for the day break for the public view and their hilarious view street wise. Then the cruel Rakshasaas who had so far been hiding themselves thus far, gave their appearances now sheepishly intially and boldly later but overcoming their fear now breaking into loud laughs and over joy. They started slogans: You 'Ravana drohi'! you 'vanaraadhama'! what wonderful relief, what a well deserved punishment for you! What a retribution of justice! Actually the King should have ordered public hanging for this spy and so on'. Thus the public went berserk, even as Hanuman was delighted at the public reactions as he was conducted. There were resoundings of 'bheri-shankha ninaadaas' all over the city. hanumāns cārayām āsa rākṣasānām mahāpurīm, athāpaśyad vimānāni vicitrāṇi mahākapiḥ/ samvṛtān bhūmi -bhāgāms ca suvibhaktāms ca catvarān, rathyās ca gṛhasambādhāḥ kapiḥ śṛṅgātākāni ca/ Hanuman too was enjoying the delightful walk all over the high roads, crossings, the beautiful architectural tastes and finesse of wonderfully laid buildings. Then he had carefully noted the praakaaraas, domes, under ground buildings, the high rise public halls attractively furnished and decorated, the lighting effects, and so on. dīpyamāne tatas tasya lāṅgūlāgre hanūmataḥ, rākṣasyas tā virūpākṣyaḥ śamsur devyās tad apriyam/ yas tvayā kṛtasamvādaḥ sīte tāmramukhaḥ kapiḥ, lāṅgūlena pradīptena sa eṣa pariṇīyate/ Hanuman's long, strong tail was burning like wise, the fierce looking Rakshasis surrounding Devi Sita made hilarious fun of Devi Sita: 'Site! That red faced monkey who was blabbering with you is now being exhibited with his long tail covered with clothes dripped in oil is burnt with fire and is being exhibited all across the roads, streets, lanes and bylanes as the entire citizens of Lankapuri are berserk with cheers, drum beating resounds, and uncontrollable frenzy. shrutvā tad vacanam krūram ātmāpaharaṇopamam, vaidehī śokasamtaptā hutāsanam upāgamat/ maṅgalābhimukhī tasya sā tadāsin mahākapeḥ, upataste viśālākṣī prayatā havyavāhanam/ yady asti patiśusrūṣā yady asti caritam tapah, yadi cāsty ekapatnītvam sīto bhava hanūmataḥ/ As the Rakshasis were making fun and frolic likewise, Videhanadini Devi Sita then started her prayers to Agni Deva not to hurt Veera Hanuman by providing relief to him. yadi kaś cid anukrośas tasya mayy asti dhīmataḥ, yadi vā bhāgyaśeṣam me sīto bhava hanūmataḥ/ yadi mām vṛttasampannām tatsamāgamalālasām, sa vijānāti dharmātmā sīto bhava hanūmataḥ/ yadi mām tārayaty āryaḥ sugrīvaḥ satyasamgarah, asmād duḥkhān mahābāhuḥ sīto bhava hanūmataḥ/ Agni Deva! As you may very kindly appreciate the dire need for the success of Rama Kaarya, as also my own tasya as a pativrata, please lessen your flame power and cool down your ferocity. Deva! Please help me if only you are merciful to Rama the dharma paraayana and for the sake of saving my 'mangalya sowbhagya'. As Hanuman seeks to reach Rama at the earliest and save me from my misery and death facing crisis, do kindly accept my sincere prayers to you. Mahanubhava, as you note that Veera Hanuman is Vayu Deva's dear son, and as you are Vayu Deva's close and dear friend since both of you are always hand in hand, do kindly reduce your flames to help Vayu Deva, Veera Hanuman, Shri Rama and me to fortify the purity of my paativratya! Then Hanuman too introspected: sītāyās cānṛśamsyena tejasā rāghavasya ca, pituś ca mama sakhyena na mām dahati pāvakaḥ/ bhūyaḥ sa cintayām āsa muhūrtaṁ kapikuñjaraḥ, utpapātātha vegena nanāda ca mahākapiḥ/ Most certainly this is possible due to the kindness of Devi Sita, Shri Ram's maha tejas, and the close affinity of my father Vayu Deva and of Agni Deva, now the sky high fury of the jwaalaas are truly not hurting me now! But my decisiveness now is indeed to repay my revenge'. Decided thus, Veera Hanuman shattered the massive ropes as were laboriously tied by the rakshasaas, and jumped up high with speed and pull to the mountain top. vimuktaś cābhavac chrīmān punaḥ

Lankapuri and its boundaries and dropped huge boulders on the boundary walls to start with. Then along with the long tail with blazing flames glanced down the excellently arranged and magnificent Lankapuri, Hanuman was then like Bhaskara himself.

Having accomplished all the objectives of crossing the ocean, entry into Lankapuri, visiting Ravana's palace, discovering the very place where Devi Sita was kept, Ravana Darshana and his stern warning to Devi Sita, familiarising and convincing her that he was sent by Rama-Sugrivas, parting her, his successful spree of destruction of gardens, teams of rakshasas, pretentious surrender to Brahmastra, face to face challenge to Ravana as the latter's so called punishment of his tail to be burnt, Agni Deva's help, his relief followed by noting the details of Lanka's contours of curves and lanes, snapping off the bandhana and destroying the outer walls by boulders thrown down a mountain, now Veera Hanuman was ready to use his mighty already flamed up tail to burn the major parts of Lanka puri and enjoy the 'artaa naadaas' of the proud citizens as their abodes crumble down by the flames of his massive tail. yo hy ayaṁ mama agniṁ kālānalaśikhopamam/ Veera Vayu Putra decided that the tail displaying huge 'agnijvaalaas' be extended and expanded suitably as that should be proper and justified retribution by 'dharma and nyaaya' and satisfy the appetite of Agni Deva. So pondering, he lengthened his tail further and further as the flames would attack the well decorated the external and remotely interior corners of the fabulous houses get burnt off en mass to ashes. Jumping from place to place and shattering house after house, Hanuman assumed the 'Kaalaagni Swarupa'. Then very systematically he destroyed the abodes of Maha Rakshasaas as he had already noted well by his memory's screen already such as Vajradamshttra, Shuka, buddhi - maan Saarana, Indrajit Meghanada, Jambumali, Sumaali, Rashmikutu, Surya shatru, Hrasvakarni, Damshtra, Rakshas veera, Romesha, Ranonttamamattha, Dhvajagriva, Bhayanaka Vidyujjihva,

Hastimukha, Karaala, Vishaala, Shonitaaksha, Kumbhakarna, Makaraaksha, Naraantaka, Kumbha, Nikumbha, Yajna Shatru, Brahma shatru, and such very many Maha Rakshas Veeraas. Varjijyatvaa mahateja Vibhishana griham prati, krama maaah kramenaiva dadaahaa Haripubgavah/ Maha Teja Kapishreshtha Hanuman had then only spared the abode of Vibhishana's precious bungalow. With that exception, Hanuman burnt down all the houses of all the raskshas veeraas. śvasanena ca saṁyogād ativego mahābalaḥ, kālāgnir iva jajvāla prāvardhata hutāśanaḥ, pradīptam agniṁ pavanā teṣu veśmasu cārayat/ With vaayu vega, the flames got erased by Vayu putra made 'garjanas' similar to pralayakaala meghas. As the rows of 'bhuvanas' were crumbled to ash, the residents ran hither and thither to save a few secect precious possessions and the 'arta naadaas' of cries and shoutings of deseparation were resounding to the skies. Hanuman was little contented with the yellings of rakshasa veeraas who stood against him and were dead like Devi Vasundhara remained dissatisfied, and hence the mass killings and near total destruction of the abodes in rows and the generation of the cryings of harassment and agony. Hanumataa vegavataa Vaanarena mahaatmanaa, Lankaapuram pradagdham tas Rudrena Tripuram yathaa/ Vegashaali Vaanara Veera Viranjaneya burnt off Lankapuri, just as Maha Rudra had burnt off the Tripuras in the ages of the yore!

'As the ever shrewdest and the nastiest Daitya called Maya commenced his brutal Tapasya, two more Danavas of equal disrepute and desperation viz. Vidyunmali and Taraka joined him and their extreme tenacity was such that they meditated in snow valleys during high winter nights, amid 'Panchagnis' during blood blister summer days and during incessant and torrential rains standing under open skies. It looked that Earth trembled with the severity of their meditation and Brahma had to bestow the choice boons of indestructibility except by Parameswara that too by a single arrow-shot destroying their abodes together. The most noted top architect and builder that he was, Mayasura built 'Tripuras'/ three Tower Castles-each of hundred yojanas- one of indestructible iron on Earth, another on the Sky made of shining silver and the third above the second one made of glittering gold, all encased in inner- castle structures of same size of circumference but each invisible from outside in all directions. Each of the Tripuras is equipped with 'yantras'/ machines that could destroy hundreds in each shot, Chakras, Trishulas, Dhwas on the high wall structures, and 'Shikharas' (minarets) recognisable through the mountain tops of Meru and Mandarachala. These 'Puras' were insurmountable, let alone destructible to Devas, Danavas and any other species, excepting Maha Deva! Daithyas had very contented lives inside the Tripuras. Devas and other Celestial Beings were thrown out of their abodes and all the luxuries and joys of Swarga were confiscated. In course of time, the inhabitants of Tripuras became intolerable, awfully sinful, corrupt, wicked and highly immoral. While Maya Daitya was kept busy in the deeds of beauty, living comfort and pressing into the services of Devas as their servants to cater to the happiness of the inhabitant Daityas, Vidyunmali was kept busy with matters of Internal Administration and Taraka was made commander in Chief. In course of time, there came inevitable internal dissensions, group politics, differences of living styles and class-distinctions, 'Alakshmi' (poverty), 'Asuya' (jealousy), Trishna (avarice), 'Vibhuksha' (hunger), Kali and Kalaha (quarrels) among the residents of the Tripuras. This situation of 'Alakshmi' led to 'Atyaacharas' or transgressions on Devas, other Celestial Beings, Maharshis, the entire humanity and all other species of Lord's creation. The canker spread across the 'Tribhuvanas' and Devas sought refuge from Brahma who gave the boons to the three goons! Lord Brahma pacified the delegation of Devas and assured that the heinous and wildly vicious deeds of the Trio of Daityas reached a climax and that it was time to approach Parama Shiva who was the one and only Saviour that could destroy the abodes of the three Daityas in one go with one arrow, even if these residences were far apart from each other on Prithvi, Akaash and far beyond in the strong-hold Tripura fortresses! As Devas and Brahma reached Maha Deva, they visioned 'Trishulapaani Shankar' relaxing with Devi Parvati and Mahatma Nandi. They saw that 'Bhuta bhavishya Swami' whose eyes were red like 'Agni kundas' and physique was shimmering with thousand Suns with a pleasant countenance ornamented with a Bala Purna Chandra, even as Devas broke down into ecstasy and extolled him. Having pleased Parama Shiva thus, Devas explained the gravity and seriousness of the crisis created by the Tripura Daityas who not only unseated and tormented Devas and Celestial Entities but were also sending shock-waves all over the Universe, humiliating Sages, frightening women and children, making mass-scale carnage and blood bath of humanity and uprooting Dharma and age-old Values and Principles. Parameshwara infused confidence into the demoralised Devas and asked them to construct an exceptional chariot with unique specifications: Prithvi as the Ratha / Chariot, Meru and Mandara Mountains as axles, Surya and Chandra as Chakras made of gold and silver respectively, the Four Vedas of Ruk-Yajur-Sama and Atharva acted as the horses; Shukra, Brihaspati, Budha, Mangal, and Shanaischara seated on the Ratha ready to charge; the famous serpents viz. Takshaka, Karkotaka, Dhanajaya and Padmadwaya acted as the strings which were tied to the horses; most poisonous snakes like Surasa, Devashuni, Sarama, Kadru, Vinata, Shuchi, Trusha, and Bubhuksha were used as arrows; Mrutyu, Brahmahatya, Gohatya, Balahatya and Prajaabhaya were loaded on the Chariot so that they get activated as maces; Omkara and Vashatkara were the symbols on the Ratha; Sinivali, Kuhu, Raaka and Anumati - the 'Adhishtana' / in charge Deities of Chaturdashi, Amavasya, Suddha Purnima, Pratipadika Purnima respectively were used as auxiliary strings to the horses; the dhanush made of six 'ritus' / seasons which is safeguarded by Devi Ambika herself never to be broken; the specific arrow with which to kill the Tripurasura was strengthened by Vishnu, Soma and Agni and its head propelled by Agni and Chandra by its rear and Vishnu Maya smeared all over; and the extreme poison of Nagaraja Vasuki was loaded to ensure stability and speed of the arrow; Vayu was made in charge of the high velocity of the Chariot and finally Brahma was the Charioteer and Sesha Naag was made in charge of the personal security of Brahma as also of the Chariot. Yama Raja with his buffalo, Kubera on his serpent, Indra on Iravata, Ganeswara by his Mushika Vahana, Karikeya on his Peacock, Nandeshwara with his Shula running behind and sides of the Ratha were in full preparedness. Maharshis Bhrigu, Bharadwaja, Vasishtha, Goutama, Kratu, Pulastya, Pulaha, Marichi, Atri, Angira, Parashara, and Agastya were there too at the kick-start of the Battle to recite Veda Vachanas and Shiv Stutis. The Pramatha ganas were ready to charge as the army against the opponents- all swarmed around the Rath. Meanwhile, Sage Narada reached the Tripuras and tried his best to mend his ways, give back Indrapuri to Devas and avoid the worst ever battle in which the indestructible Tripuras would be destroyed along with the Three Demons as Maha Deva himself was approaching these Places with full preparation. Instead of talking peace, the Demons alerted their vast armies, and prepared for turning their defensive positions to that of an offence. On the instruction of Shankara Deva, Indra took his enormous army and attacked Tripura. As the Deva Sena made a highly offensive assault in full force, what with the revenge and frustration experienced by them for long as they were out of power as also owing to the excellent backing of Maheswara, they seized the best part of Tripuras. While quite a few Danavas sought to escape for their lives through the exit gates of Tripuras, Pramatha ganas calculated that the enemies would try to sneak out at those points and butchered thousands of Danavas. The remaining Danavas inside the Trinagaris were utterly confused by contradictory shouts that Taraka died or Shiva was defeated. In that melee, a strong contingent of Danavas quickly regrouped their men and material to make offensive attacks under the leadership of Vidunmali and Maya. Ganeswara divided Tripuras in three regions as Nandeswara was attacking Vidyunmali, while he was in position against Maya. Meanwhile, Vidyunmali threw a 'Parigha' on Nandi who was hurt and the enraged three 'Parshadaganas' named Ghantaakarna, Shankukarna and Mahakaal retaliated; they assumed the Forms of Ganeswara and assailed Vidyunmali by making the roars of lions. Even while the Parswaganas were about to leap on Vidyunmali, the hurt Nandikeswara hurled a Rudra Shakti on the demon who fell down like a mountain. There was utter silence among Danavas who were stunned and retreated. But, the highly cunning and crafty Mayasura chased the Ganas of Ganeshwara to divert attention of his own men from the fallen Vidyunmali to the Ganesha ganas. Mayasura created rains of Agni, crocodiles, snakes, huge mountains, lions, tigers, trees, black deers, eight-legged 'Sharabhas' / a species of oversized deer, torrential rain and powerful sand storms. As Taraka came into the battle field, Devas too appeared in full force, including Yamaraja, Varuna, Bhaskara, Kartikeya heading a Deva Sena of a Crore, with Indra, Shanaishchara, Chandra, and Rudras. The 'Maayavi' Mayaasura created several Wells full of herbal juices for invigoration and Danavas were in high spirits as their body strength increased manifold. But Keshava took the form of 'Vrishabha' and drank up the juice along with Devas and dried up the wells and

Devas occupied the Tripuras finally. Mayasura and other Daityas were forced to hide in the Sea. That was the decisive moment when there was an all-out battle on the seashores. Shankara divided the ‘Tridevamaya’ arrow into three parts and released it when Tripuras were destroyed; Shiva felt sad however that one of his own dear devotees, Mayasura too was involved. Nandi went faster than the arrow and saved Maya, well before the Tripuras were destroyed. In the end Taraka and Vidyunmali were killed and Maya was condoned with the curse of Indra that all his constructions would be burnt off eventually and Mayasura continued to hide in the Seas]

Further stanzas continued: The citizens of Lankapuri were truly rattled with fear at the massive flames all over including the houses, trees, gardens, public places, and so on, some of the Rakshasas had exchanged their views: ‘ What! In this form of a Vanara, has Vajra dhari Indra descended to Lanka puri; is he otherwise Varuna, or Vayu, Rudra, Agni, Surya, or possibly Kubera. In any case it should be Kaala! Other wise Bhagavan Vishnu with his powers of Maya, had manifested himself! Then they stated screaming: hey father, he my child, he Bhagavan! What a frightening shape that this famed Lanka puri has taken now to ashes! hutāśanajvālasamāvṛtā sā; hatapravīrā parivṛttayodhā, hanūmātaḥ krodhabalābhibhūtā; babhūva śāpopahateva laṅkā/ sasambhramam trastaviṣaṇṇarākṣasām; samujjvalaj jvālahutāśanāṅkitām, dadarśa laṅkāṁ hanumān mahāmanāḥ; svayambhukopopahatām ivāvanim/ Thus subjected by Hanuman’s rage, the best part of Lankapuri was burnt off to ashes and the damage and destruction appeared phenomenal by a single Vanara and its burning tail which caused ripples of joy and laughter initially had eventually led to a never heard of, nor of comprehensible catastrophic tragedy. Mahananasvi Hanuman was probably manifested by Brahma Deva’s anger as a jwaalaamukhi swarupa. sa rākṣasāṁs tān subahūmś ca hatvā; vanam ca bhāṅktvā bahupādapaṁ tat, viṣṭya rakṣo bhavaneṣu cāgnim; jagāma rāmaṁ manasā mahātmā/ laṅkāṁ samastām samdīpya lāṅgūlāgnim mahākapiḥ, nirvāpayām āsa tadā samudre harisattamaḥ/ Then Pavana kumara Vaanara veera who killed a series of raksha veeras, destroyed Pramadaavana, burnt off the best parts of Lankapuri and then took to the ‘naama smarana’ of Shri Rama! Subsequently, he leaped off to the seashore, washed of his tail thus far in flames, recalled the extreme kindness of Agni Deva, and blessings of Vaayu Deva and finally resorted to Shri Rama smarana.

As Hanuman no doubt overjoyed at the devastation of their very living homes by the flames from his tail of a singular Vaanara, the alarmed Lanka citizens were shaken to the core with disbelief. But Hanuman introspected: Hai! I had not realised as to what had I done to Lanka out of anger and vengeance affecting the common public. Indeed, those ‘maha manasvis’ seek to resist anger with controlled mind, like the common public resort to sprinkle water on fire. Kruddhah paapam na kuryaat kah kruddhho hatyaad guroonapi, kruddhah parushayaa vaachaa narah sadhhuunadhikshipet/ Vaachyaavaachyam prakupito na vijaanaati arhichit, naa kaaryamasti kruddhasya naavaachyam vidyate kacchhit/ Yah samutpatitam krodham kshamayaiva nirasyati,yathoragatvacham jeeranaa savai purusha uchyaate/ Does not anger lead to sinfulness as that might even end up even with Guru Hatya! As anger dominates and crosses limits, words and blamings are normal instincts. As one’s heart generates anger, ‘sanana shakti’ gets dissolved like a serpent having discarded its old skin hisses more. Thus Hanuman looked back as having hurt normal public, as the evil Rakshasaas should certainly deserve retribution. Then he realised that in this melee, what is the situation of Devi Sita’s safety! dhig astu rājasam bhāvam anīsam anavasthitam, īśvareṇāpi yad rāgān mayā sītā na rakṣitā/ vinaṣṭāyām tu sītāyām tāv ubhau vinaśiṣyataḥ, taylor vināśe sugrīvaḥ sabandhur vinaśiṣyati/ Aho! My mind was blank and my thoughts were totally misleading as never pondered about Devi Sita’s personal safety and kept on burning Lanka right and left! Did I then perform a task ending up ‘Swamini hatha! Shame in me. If Lanka were destroyed and the most untoward and shameful eventuality were to have resulted, the ‘chain-repercussions’ would be too tragic. It appears that there are little sparings of Lankapuri from the burning of my tail and the ashes generated. If only anything untoward had been caused, could I face Sugriva, let alone Rama Lakshmanas, Bharata Shatrughnas, the mothers, Ayodhya vaasis and Janaka Rajya vaasis! May I then jump alive into fierce flames myself!’ Thus having pondered about the misleading thoughts in the misplaced corners of his inner conscience, Hanuman then asserted and assured himself: Yad vaa dahana karmaayam sarvatra prabhuravyah, na me dahati laangulam kathaamaayaam pradhakshyati/ Tapasaa satyavaakyena ananyataatvaacha bhartari, asou vinirdaharagniṁ na taamaagnih prathakshyati/ Indeed, this ‘maha daahaka avinaashi agni deva’ does retain its own magnificence and fame as that might undoubtedly burn off always, yet my own tail retained its cooling effect; then how could Devi Mother be not spared! Considering her own ‘dharmaacharana and tapasya, satya bhashana, ananya paivratiya’, how Agni Deva would not spare her!’ Thus having pondered intensely, Hanuman reached the place of her retention as Devi Sita herself remarked: Aho khalu kritam karma durvigaaham Hanumataa, Agniṁ visrujataa teekshnam bheemam raakshasasadyani/dagdheyam nagarī laṅkā sāṭṭaprākāratoraṇā, jānakī na ca dagdheti vismayo 'dbhuta eva naḥ/ Aho! What all miraculous and unbelievable acts have been accomplished! Maha Veeranjaneya had successfully burnt off Lanka as raksha-stree-baala-vriddhas were left homeless with sky rocketing cries while the nagara was pulled down to ashes! As Hanuman touched Devi Sita’s feet, these nectar like words from her face came out, he was truly in rapturous heart beatings. sa nimittaiś ca dṛṣṭārthaiḥ kāraṇaiś ca mahāguṇaiḥ, ṛṣivākyaiś ca hanumān abhavat prītamānasaḥ, tataḥ kapiḥ prāptamanorathārthas; tām akṣatām rājasutām viditvā, pratyakṣatas tām punar eva dṛṣṭvā; pratiprayāṇāya matiṁ cakāra/ Thus having personally had his personal experiences of welcome omens, ever since he was crossing the maha sagara, Giri shreshtha Mainaka kripa, Simhilka Vadha, Lanka Pravesha, Devi Sita Darshana, convincing her of his genuiness, killings of ‘aneka rakasha veeras’, ‘brahmastra janita peedaa nivritthi’, ‘agni deva kripa kataaksha’ and now ‘Devi Sita purdarshana’ Thus he was overwhelmed by the success series, most obviously due essentially owing to Rama bhakti alone! Rama bhakti alone!

Veera Anjaneya having thus seen Devi Sita seated under the Ashoka Vriksha and greeted her as the Devi addressed him stating that since he himself had witnessed her, conveyed her present status and the subsequent sequences, he might convey to Shri Rama Lakshmana Sugrivas appropriately. She further stated : ‘ Vaanara Pravara, in your having seen me daringly had no doubt provided me solace for now, especially having noted and appreciated your deeds of bravery and unparalleled Rama Bhakti. As you are leaving me away, I should survive on hope awaiting my survival further. Veera! I have been experiencing shocks after shocks all along my life and have gradually lost my physical and mental forbearance and your visit to me now would lead to further trepidation of my heart balancing hope and relief on the wavering swing . To start with, my concern was whether Rama Lashnmanas could imagine as to where could I be, then they were destined to meet the fugitive king of vaanaras Sugriva and you, then even meeting you, whether Rama Lakshmanas could cross this Maha Sagara! Trayanameva bhutaanaam saarasasyaami langhane, shaktih syaada Vainateyasya taba vaa Maarutasya vaa/ Only three of the Beings in Brahma Shrishti, only three could cross this ocean that is yourself, Garuda and Vayu Deva. Only you are blessed with this unusual capability but not Rama Lakshmanas any way.’ Then Hanuman replied: Devi! There are other Vaanara Bhalluka Veeras determined to save you any way. Moreover thousand crores of Vaanaraas under the command of King Sugriva too are ready to assist. Along with them, Rama Lakshmanas should soon arrive here and uproot the enemy and as such you may please be a bit patient for some time yet.’ Having thus reassured and pacified Devi Sita, veera Hanuman decided to return to the other shores of the Maha Samudra. tataḥ sa kapiśārdūlaḥ svāmisamdarśanotsukaḥ, āruroha giriśreṣṭham ariṣṭam arimardanaḥ/ He was anxious to reach Shri Rama darshana and jumped towards the Arishta Giri and mounted it having seen the parvata shrenis, huge trees bearing sweet fruits irresistible to eat and satisfy his appetite, series of water falls in which to refresh, delighted with the sonorous and sweet sounds of birds, admiring the mahatmas engrossed with their tapasya, viewing the abodes on the mountain caves of Maharshi=Yaksha-Gandharva-Kinnara- Maha Nagas- the resting lions, tigers, bears and so on. Having thus reached the Shaila Raja Shikhaara, Anjaneya expanded his physique with the desire of travelling from south to north. sa ca bhūmidharaḥ śrīmān balinā tena pīḍitaḥ, savṛkṣaśikharodagrāḥ praviveśa rasātalam/ daśayojanavistāras trimśadyojanam ucchritaḥ, dharanyām samatām yātaḥ sa babhūva dharādharāḥ/ As Hanuman’s huge feet of his gigantic body was pressed down with a push, there appeared a thunderous sound as the maha vrikshas were uprooted rolling down to earth, the pranis in the caves were shocked, the fierce lions and tigers were alarmed as if there was a vajraayudha hit the ‘Parvata Shikhara’. As balavaan Hanuman jumped off with ‘vayu vega’ pressing the mountain down to earth it was like the gigantic trees slipped down the ‘rasaatala’ of the lokas under the earth. Thus the ‘arishta parvata’ of thirty yojanas height and ten yojanas of width looked to the level of earth pressed by the feet of the ‘Maha Vanara’s mountainous profile. It was at Vayu Vega, that the Vayu Putra crossed and reached the other shore skybound, as a child’s play.

As Jambavan asked truly excited as Mahabala Veera Hanuman returned safe and sound and asked him the key questions as to how he was able to find Devi Sita, how was she there, how the cruel Ravanaasura was behaving with her, please to convey to us in detail. He further queried: how were you able to locate Devi Sita and who had advised you like wise. After knowing all these details, then only we could chalk our further action plan. Further, as we would proceed and return back to Kishkindha, then please also give us the guidelines as to how we should highlight the facts as per your advice. As the mind sharp Jambavan asked all the most relevant questions, Veera Hanuman was truly impressed in high admiration of Jambavan's intellectual acumen, expertise and experience of the Maha Bhalluka Raja. He then nodded his head and with composure and with least proud of his accomplishment, Veera Hanuman initiated his detailed presentaton of facts as per the searching questionnaire of Jambavan as follows, well remembering Devi Sita: pratyakṣam eva bhavatām mahendrāgrāt kham āplutaḥ, udadher dakṣiṇam pāram kāṅkṣamāṇaḥ samāhitaḥ/ gacchataś ca hi me ghoram vighnarūpam ivābhavat, kāñcanam śikharam divyam paśyāmi sumanoharam, sthitam panthānam āvṛtya mene vighnam ca tam nagam/ As you may please recall that in your collective presence, I mounted the Mahendra Parvata shikhara and leaped down into the Maha Saagara facing southern direction. As I was air born I saw a golden shikhara as if it were holding my travel and I felt as though that did not seem to be good omen. Upasagamyā tam divyam kāñcanam nagasattamam, kṛtā me manasā buddhir bhattavyo 'yam mayeti ca/ prahataḥ ca mayā tasya lāṅgūlena mahāgireḥ, śikharam sūryasaṁkāśam vyaśṛyata sahasradhā/ vyavasāyam ca me buddhvā sa hovāca mahāgiriḥ, putreti madhurām bāṇīm manaḥprahlādayann iva/ My immediate reaction was to destroy the shikhara and proceed further. I raised my tail and gave a strong blow and soon enough the shikhara crashed into pieces. Then I heard a resounding voice: pitṛvyam cāpi mām viddhi sakhāyam mātariśvanaḥ, mainākam iti vikhyātam nivasantaḥ mahodadhau/ pakṣavantaḥ purā putra babhūvuḥ parvatottamāḥ, chandataḥ pṛthivīm cerur bādhamānāḥ samantataḥ/ śrutvā nagānām caritaḥ mahendraḥ pākaśāsanāḥ, ciccheda bhagavān pakṣān vajreṇaiśām sahasraśaḥ, ahaṁ tu mokṣitas tasmāt tava pitrā mahātmanā, mārutena tadā vatsa prakṣipto 'smi mahārṇave/ As I was addressed as Putra, I realised as I have heard soft voice of the Parvata; the voice further said: Do consider me as your uncle as I am a great friend of Vayu Deva. My name is Mainaka and I stay put in this Maha Sagara. In the hoary past, all the major mountains used to fly as they wished, but as the public appealed to Indra Deva that there had been frequent quakes on earth and the pattern of the movement of some of the huge mountains was disastrous. Then in response, Indra severed off the wings of thousand mountains on earth. My son Hanuman, then Indra instructed me stay in this Maha Sagara. But my close friend Vaya Deva helped me to retain my wings though I never use any way. rāmasya ca mayā sāhye vartitavyam arimḍama, rāmo dharmabḥtām śreṣṭho mahendrasamavikramaḥ/ etac chrutvā mayā tasya mainākasya mahātmanaḥ, kāryam āvedya tu girer uddhataḥ ca mano mama/ tena cāham anujñāto mainākena mahātmanā, uttamam javam āsthāya śeṣam adhvānam āsthitaḥ/ Dear son, Vayuputra! As you are dedicated to Shri Rama Karya, you do deserve all my sincere blessings and best wishes. Then the maha parvata Mainaka discarded manava swarupa subsequently. Veera Hanuman resumed his yatra once again. tato 'ham suciram kālam vegenābhyā -gamam pathi, tataḥ paśyāmy ahaṁ devīm surasām nāgamātaram/ samudramadhye sā devī vacanam mām abhāṣata, mama bhakṣyaḥ pradīṣtas tvam amārair harisattamam, tatas tvām bhakṣayaīṣyāmi vihitas tvam cirasya me/ My next encounter was Naaga Mata Surasa Devi and pleasingly: Kapi shreshtha! Devas instructed me that you are my bhashya and accordingly I am therefore devouring you. as should be treated! evam uktaḥ surasayā prāñjaliḥ praṇataḥ sthitaḥ, vivarṇavadano bhūtvā vākyaḥ cedam udīrayam/ rāmo dāśarathiḥ śrīmān praviṣṭo danḍakāvanam, lakṣmaṇena saha bhrātrā sītayā ca paramtapah/ tasya sītā hṛtā bhāryā rāvaṇena durātmanā, tasyāḥ sakāśam dūto 'ham gamiṣye rāmaśāsanāt/ As Devi Surasa stated thus, Hanuman politely replied with folded hands: Devi! I am the messenger of Dasharatha Nandana Shri Rama accompanied by his wife Devi Sita and his brother Lakshmana to Dandakaranya; there Durarma Ravanaasura forcibly kidnapped Devi Sita. Now I am being sent as Shri Rama's messenger to Lanka seeking to find her there anywhere. You too reside in the Dasharatha Rajya and thus help me discover the Mithilasha Rajya Raja Kumari Devi Sita. Kartum arhasi rāmasya sāhyam viṣayavāsini, atha vā maithilīm dṛṣṭvā rāmaḥ cākliṣṭakāriṇam, āgamiṣyāmi te vaktram satyam pratiśṇoti me/ Having had her darshan, I would certainly return to you and get devoured by you for good. evam uktaḥ mayā sā tu surasā kāmarūpiṇī, abravīn nātivarteta kaś cid eṣa varo mama/ evam uktaḥ surasayā daśayojanam āyataḥ, tato 'rdhaguṇavistāro babhūvāham kṣaṇena tu/ matpramāṇānurūpam ca vyāditam tanmukham tayā, tad dṛṣṭvā vyāditam tv āsyam hrasvam hy akaravam vapuḥ/ tasmin muhūrte ca punar babhūvāṅguṣṭha -saṁmitaḥ, abhipatyāśu tad vaktram nirgato 'ham tataḥ kṣaṇāt/ Then Naaga Maata Surasa who had the ability of changing her swarupa as she pleased, asserted: 'I had in the past attained the boon that any being in the creation once confronted by me ought to be devoured by me and none indeed could be an exception to this boon. Having asserted thus, she assumed a doubled up form to be able to swallow Hanuman's form which was as it was already of ten yojanas! Then in a moment, Hanuman had drastically his own body size as of a normal finger size as he could be devoured easily and at once got eased out comfortably. abravīt surasā devī svena rūpeṇa mām punaḥ, arthasiddhyai hariśreṣṭha gaccha saumya yathāsukham/ samānaya ca vaidehīm rāghaveṇa mahātmanā, sukhī bhava mahābāho prītāsmi tava vānara/ Then Surasa Devi the Naaga Mata reappeared in her celestial form and said: Kapi shreshtha! Now you can comfortably travel ahead for your ‘kaarya siddhi’ and my blessings to you to meet Videhanandini Devi Sita and assist Mahatma Shri Raghunatha. ‘Sukhibhava’! Maha bahu Vaanara shiromani, I am truly impressed with your valour coupled with ‘samaya sphurti’ of ever alert timeliness. chāyā me nigṛhītā ca na ca paśyāmi kiṁ cana, so ‘ham vīgatavegas tu diśo daśa vilokayan, na kiṁ cit tatra paśyāmi yena me ‘pahṛtā gatiḥ/ tato me buddhir utpannā kiṁ nāma gamane mama, īdṛśo vighna utpanno rūpaṁ yatra na dṛśyate/ adho bhāgena me dṛṣṭiḥ śocatā pātītā mayā, tato ‘drākṣam ahaṁ bhīmāṁ rākṣasīm salile śayām/ Then as Veera Hanuman flew ahead like Garuda Deva as none indeed notice him on the high skies. Then he had reviewed that so far no ordeals were faced by him so far fortunately due to Shri Rama Kripa. Even as he was self satisfied, he sighted down below in the deep waves of the Maha Saagara a frightening Maha Rakshasi. prahasya ca mahānādam ukto ‘ham bhīmayā tayā, avasthitam asaṁbhrāntam idaṁ vākyaṁ āsobhanam/kvāsi gantā mahākāya kṣudhitāyā mamepsitaḥ, bhakṣaḥ prīṇaya me dehaṁ ciraṁ āhāraavarjitam/ bāḍham ity eva tām vāṇīm pratyagrṇṇāṁ ahaṁ tataḥ, āsya pramāṇād adhikaṁ tasyāḥ kāyam apūrayam/ That ‘bheeshana nishaacharani’ was yelling boisteriously as an inauspicious tone like a megha garjana: ‘ Vishalakaya Vaanara! Where do you intend to land, so saying she had instantly assumed a gigantic body form. I am truly hungry and should be delighted to devour you. For long time now, being tormented with nice food, I feel thrilled with such a chance. tasyāś cāsyām mahad bhīmāṁ vardhate mama bhakṣaṇe, na ca mām sā tu bubudhe mama vā vikṛtaṁ kṛtam/ tato ‘ham vipulaṁ rūpaṁ saṁkṣipyā nimiṣāntarāt, tasyā hṛdayam ādāya prapatāmi nabhastalam/ sā viśṣṭabhujaḥ bhīmā papāta lavaṇāmbhasi, mayā parvatasamkāśā nikṛttahṛdayā satī/ As the Maha Rakshasi advanced Anjana Putra thus with her wide open mouth, she was indeed unware of his timely opportunism and having assumed the miniature physical form and flew up the skies and fisted so mightily that her two shoulders were slaughtered as they were crashed down swimming in the ever rising tides of the Maha Saagara. śṛṇomi khagatānām ca siddhānām cāraṇaiḥ saha, rākṣasī simhikā bhīmā kṣipraṁ hanumatā hṛtā/ tām hatvā punar evāhaṁ kṛtyam ātyayikaṁ smaran, gatvā ca mahad adhvānaṁ paśyāmi nagamaṇḍitam, dakṣiṇāṁ tīram udadher laṅkā yatra ca sā purī/ astam dinakare yāte rakṣasām nilayaṁ purīm, praviṣṭo ‘ham aviḣṇāto rakṣobhir bhīmavikramaiḥ/ Then as the Siddha Mahatmaa’s celestial voice was heard: ‘aho! This Simhika naamaka Maharakshasi was felled down dead disappearing in the Maha Samudra by Hanuman’s courtesy! Thus having waited for a while till ‘Suryaastama pradoshā kaala’, assuring himself that his entry to ‘Lanka Maha Dwaara’ would be unnoticed, Anjaneya made if successful entry. tatrāhaṁ sarvarātraṁ tu vicinvaṇ janakātmajām, rāvaṇāntahpuragato na cāpaśyām sumadhyamām/ tataḥ sītām apaśyaṁs tu rāvaṇasya niveśane, śokasāgaram āsādyā na pāram upalakṣaye/ śocatā ca mayā dṛṣṭam prākāreṇa samāvṛtam, kāṇcana viḣṣṭena gr̥hopavanam uttamam/ Hanuman continued his narration further: ‘ Having thus entered the Lankapuri, I commenced my ‘Devi Sitaanveshna’ all over the city and reached Ravana Mahal, imagining that by now, she should be drowned in deep distress. Then I entered the ‘grihodyaana’ which was goden - doored with a few successive entries therein. The central platform of the Ashoka Vaatika, I witnessed a huge Ashoka Vriksha mounting which I noted a ‘Kadali Vana’ with ripe and tempting plaitain fruits galore. It was under the Ashoka Vriksha I sighed a Sarvaanga Sundari - most probably Devi Sita herself! She was seated with her head down crying away. She was appearing like an ever sixteen years of age with the beauty of a damsel with extraordinary charm of grace with sparkling eyes comparable to fresh lotuses being dressed with ruffled and unclean ‘eka vastra’ surrounded by grotesque- ‘rakta maamsa bhakshi Rakshasis, who were ever threatening her to beat. As Ravana accompanied with his various wives, some of being of celestial background of gandharva- kinnara-nagalokas approached Devi Sita once I was a witness to that scene. tām dṛṣṭvātha varārohā sītā rakṣogaṇeśvaram, saṁkucyorū stanau pīnau bāhubhyām parirabhya ca/ tām uvāca daśagrīvaḥ sītām paramaduḥkhitām, avākṣirāḥ prapatito bahu manyasva mām iti/ yadi cet tvam tu mām darpān nābhinandasi garvite, dvimāsānantaram sīte pāsyāmi rudhiram tava/ etac chrutvā vacas tasya rāvaṇasya durātmanaḥ, uvāca paramakruddhā sītā vacanam uttamam/ As he reached her, Sarvaanga Sundari Devi Sita sat tight and bent down ensuring that none of her physical parts would be visible. As the Dashagriva addressed her she was looking frightened with her looks betrayed her feelings of dislike, fear, and extreme distress. He stated with feigned courtesy, affected kindness and affection He said: Self conscious and arrogant woman! Even being aware of my status and stature, you lack the courtesy of standing up and greeting me even; I might give you a leniency for two months more before your body would be sent to the royal kitchen for slicing to be cooked! As Ravana threatened her, the agitated yet immensely infuriated harsh pitch, replied: Raakṣasādhama rāmasya bhāryām amitatejasah, ikṣvākukulanāthasya snuṣām daśarathasya ca, avācyaṁ vadato jihvā katham na patitā tava/ kimsvid vīryam tavānārya yo mām bhartur asaṁnidhau, apahr̥tyā -gataḥ pāpa tenādṛṣṭo mahātmanā/ na tvaṁ rāmasya sadṛśo dāsyē 'py asyā na yuyjase, yajñīyah satyavāk caiva raṇaślāghī ca rāghavaḥ/ Neecha Nishaachara! Do realise that I am the devout ardhaangi of the Amita Tejasvi Bhagavan Shri Rama and the proud daughter of Ikshvaaku Vamsha's Maha Raja Dashradha. Are not well maannred enough to converse with a pativrata of my supreme status! Dushta paapi! What is your bravery in surreptitiously kidnapping me in the absence of my proud and invincible husband. You could never reach the stature, fame and courage in your lifetime.' jānakyā paruṣam vākyam evam ukto daśānanah, jajvāla sahasā kopāc citāstha iva pāvakah/ vivṛtya nayane krūre muṣṭim udyamya dakṣiṇam, maithilīm hantum ārabdhaḥ strībhir hāhākr̥tam tadā/ strīṇām madhyāt samutpatya tasya bhāryā durātmanah, varā mandodarī nāma tayā sa pratiśedhitaḥ/ uktaś ca madhurām vāṇīm tayā sa madanārditaḥ, sītayā tava kim kāryam mahendrasamavikrama, mayā saha ramaśvādya madviśiṣṭā na jānakī/ As Janaka nandini stated such hard hitting assertions, Dasha mukha Ravana was truly infuriated as his looks were rains of flames and was readied to murder her mercilessly. As Ravana's Prime Queen who too was present along with her co - queens was not able to digest Dvi Sitas's showers of insinuations, insults and challenges, jumped forward to Devi Sita to assault Sita but Ravana held Mandodari back. As all this was occurring, the co queens were stunned at Sita's audacity and shouted as well as what Mandodari too even as the Rakshasis around joined the protests very loudly. At the same time the Rakshasis addressed Ravana: Mahā Raja! you are of the stature superior to Indra! Sita is not a 'prapancha sundari' any way; to night you may like to come to my bed; also there are deva-gandharva-yakshakanyas ready to jump in your bed. There after Ravana having been humiliated by the desperate Sita walked back to his bhavan along with his queens.

As the surrounding Rakshasis had thereafter threatened of physical violence and kept on shouting at Sita for long time into the night. Later, she fell asleep tired, exhausted, and frustrated. Now, Hanuman noticed that a vriddha rakshsi named Trijata got suddenly woken up from an extremely ominous dream of the impending warnings to 'Lanka saamrajya' as Sita's husband Rama would arrive soon and shatter to pieces. She warned against mortally hurting Sita. sambhāṣaṇārthe ca mayā jānakyās cintito vidhiḥ, ikṣvākukulavamsas tu tato mama puraskṛtaḥ/ śrutvā tu gaditām vācam rājarṣigaṇapūjitām, pratyabhāṣata mām devī bāṣpaiḥ pihitalocanā/ kas tvaṁ kena katham ceha prāpto vānarapuṁgava, kā ca rāmeṇa te prītis tan me śaṁsitum arhasi/ tasyās tadvacanam śrutvā aham apy abruvam vacaḥ, devī rāmasya bhartus te sahāyo bhīmaśvīkramah, sugrīvo nāma vikrānto vānareṇo mahābalaḥ/ Having recalled the aftermath of the day behind of Ravana's warnings-her stern reply-the reactions of his queens and co rakshasis- and Trijata's swapna and her cautionary admonitions to co rakshasis, Hanuman was doubtless realised Devi Sita's mental status, he realised that it was high time to somehow he must break this vicious circle and initiate his presence to be conveyed to her. Then in the form of singing the praise and pride of Ikshvaaku Vamsaha and the fame of Rajarshis who followed; having heard the singing, Devi Sita's eye drops trickled down and soon there after as he appeared, she asked him: Kapi shreshtha! Who are you; who had sent you, what is your relationship wit Shri Rama. tasya mām viddhi bhṛtyam tvaṁ hanūmantam ihāgatam, bhartrāham prahitas tubhyaṁ rāmeṇākliṣṭakarmaṇā/idaṁ ca puruṣavyāghraḥ śrīmān dāśarathiḥ svayam, aṅgulīyam abhijñānam adāt tubhyaṁ yaśasvini/ tad icchāmi tvayājñaptam devī kim karavāṇy aham, rāmalakṣmaṇayoḥ pārsvaṁ nayāmi tvām kim uttaram/ In reply Hanuman explained in detail that he was the messenger of Shri Rama's close associate named Sugriva and the related details, stressing that he was a sincere Rama bhakta. He also said that Shri Rama instructed me to hand over his finger ring as my identity. Devi! I request you to instruct me now as to what service could of expected from me. If agreeable could I reach you to Rama Lakshmanas by my personal might to be able to to reach here all the way from Kishkindha by crossing the Maha Sagara, notwithstanding several hurdles !

But that dream should be subject to Ravana Samhara and the termination of Lanka Samarajya with Rakshasa vinaashana! Then Devi Sita asked me to personally hand over her invaluable ‘choodaamani’ as her memory of her steadfast love-trust-and her pativrata mahima of bringing him to personally declare his magnificence. Then as a trustworthy Rama bhakta, I had performed her ‘padaabhivandana and parikrama’. uttaram punar evāha niścītya manasā tadā, hanūman mama vṛttāntam vaktum arhasi rāghave/ yathā śrutvaiva nacirāt tāv ubhau rāmalakṣmaṇau, sugrīvasahitau vīrāv upeyātām tathā kuru/ yady anyathā bhaved etad dvau māsau jīvitaṁ mama, na mām drakṣyati kākutstho mriye sāham anāthavat/ tac chrutvā karuṇam vākyaṁ krodho mām abhyavartata, uttaram ca mayā drṣṭam kāryaśeṣam anantaram/ Then as I had firmly resolved to follow Devi Sita’s instructions, she re-emphasied again to me: ‘Hanuman, you must convince Rama and the rest there in such a manner that they should appear here at once to save me. Other wise my fear is that I might die as ‘anaatha’ as my life limit had been declared emphatically!’ On her parting statement kept ringing me repeatedly, then I had thought over the rest of my dutiful task reminder before departure and thus got worked up with anger coupled with anguish of the Maha Pativrata. Then my physique was instantly assumed a mountainous stature and commenced the devastation of Ravana’s proud ‘udyanavana’ to start with. The frightened Rakshasas reached Ravana who had instructed my death and despatched Kinkara Rakshasas with thousands of strong sena who were sent by me to ‘Yama puri’. Then I destroyed Chatya prassada along with several rakshasas inside. In the series of Maha Rakshasas smashed to death were Jambumali- sons of his Ministers- Ravana’s own son Akshaya Kumara and his huge sena were all killed with my unique parigha and a mountainous body form. tamashamāgataṁ bhagnam niśamya sa daśānanaḥ, tata indrajitaṁ nāma dvitīyaṁ rāvaṇaḥ sutam, vyādideśa susaṁkrudho balinaṁ yuddhadurmadam/ tasyāpy aham balaṁ sarvaṁ taṁ ca rākṣasapuṁgavam, naṣṭaujaṣaṁ raṇe kṛtvā paraṁ harṣam upāgamam/ mahatā hi mahābāhuḥ pratyayena mahābalaḥ, preṣito rāvaṇenaīṣa saha vīrair madotkṛtaiḥ/ Shocked and truly crestfallen with my might and truly single Vayu Putra, finally instructed Indrajit as the best part his stronghold Asura Shakti dominating tri lokas was burnt off like camphor balls by just one and only one Vanara claiming Shri Rama bhakti as his Kavacha to utilise his brahmastra as the last resort. brāhmenāstreṇa sa tu mām prabadhnāc cātivegataḥ, rajjūbhir abhibadhnanti tato mām tatra rākṣasāḥ/ rāvaṇasya samīpam ca grhītvā mām upānayan, drṣṭvā saṁbhāṣitaś cāham rāvaṇena durātmanā prṣṭaś ca laṅkāgamanam rākṣasānām ca tad vadham, tat sarvaṁ ca mayā tatra sītārtham iti jalpitaṁ/ asyāham darśanāḥkṣī prāptas tvadbhavanam vibho, mārutasyaurasah putro vānaro hanumān aham/ Then as - Maha Vayu putra confronted Indrajit as the latter having made initial attacks decided that it should be just not possible to control, let alone subdue this Vayu Putra, expect by his ‘brahmastra prayoga’, the soonest. Then having seemingly controlled by me, since Bhagavan Brahma himself granted me of immunity from brahmastra also, I pretended to let Indrajit and his rakshasas bind me with ropes and made me stand before Ravana as he through his ministers sought to investigate me and interrogated as to how and why I entered the Maha Lanka saamrajya and why he destroyed a series of Rakshasa Maha Yoddhas. Then I had politely, yet firmly replied: rāmadūtam ca mām viddhi sugrīvasacivaṁ kapim, so ’ham daityena rāmasya tvatsamīpam ihāgataḥ/ śṛṇu cāpi samādeśam yad aham prabravīmi te, rākṣaseśa harīṣas tvām vākyaṁ āha samāhitam, dharmārthakāma -sahitaṁ hitam pathyam ivāśanam/ vasato r̥syamūke me parvate vipuladrume, rāghavo raṇavikrānto mitratvaṁ samupāgataḥ/ Respected Rakshasa Raja! My name is Hanuman the Vayu Deva Putra on Rama Kanya of Devi Sitanveshana, which had since been accomplished. Maha Raja! Ravana had forcibly kidnapped in the absence of the Maha Veeras Rama Lakshmanas who in the past devastated Khara Dushaadi Rakshasas of your family. Rama killed your erstwhile enemy King Vaali who gave you nightmares. Now the present Vanara King Sugriva took a vow to let Rama destroy you, your followers and the Lanka Rajya in revenge. kṣipram ānīyatām sītā dīyatām rāghavasya ca, yāvan na harayo vīrā vidhamanti balam tava/ vānarāṇām prabhavo hi na kena vidītaḥ purā, devatānām sakāśam ca ye - gacchanti nimantritāḥ/ iti vānararājas tvām āhety abhihito mayā, mām aikṣata tato ruṣṭaś cakṣuṣā pradahann iva, tena vadhyo 'ham ājñāpto rakṣasā raudrakarmaṇā/ The message which Rama Lakshmana Sugrivas had sent through me a mere messenger is to assert that even at this disastrous end of your pomp and show, you might release Devi Sita at once as your final warning! Maha Raja! who indeed would not understand the vanara strength and resilience! They are pliable and at the same time rigid too. I happen to that Vaanara who is truly anchored to deva karyas as of now.' As thus concluded Hanuman's warnings with his dauntless firmness, Ravana looked at him as though he would put me ashes with his enflamed looks. Knowing fully aware, he ordered him to kill at once. tato vibhīṣaṇo nāma tasya bhrātā mahāmatīḥ, tena rākṣasarājo 'sau yācito mama kāraṇāt/ dūtavadhyā na dṛṣṭā hi rājaśāstreṣu rākṣasa, dūtena veditavyam ca yathārtham hitavādinā/sumahaty aparādhe 'pi dūtasyātulavikramah, virūpakaraṇam dṛṣṭam na vadho 'stīha śāstrataḥ/vibhīṣanenaivam ukto rāvaṇaḥ saṁdideśa tām, rākṣasān etad evādyā lāṅgūlam dahyatām iti/ Then buddhiman 'Ravana sahodara' Vibhishana intervened and prayfully requested not to kill the Vanara as a messenger of an alien king to be killed was against 'raaja neeti.' tatas tasya vacaḥ śrutvā mama pucchaṁ samantataḥ, veṣṭitam śaṇavalkaiś ca paṭaiḥ kārṇāsakais tathā/ rākṣasāḥ siddhasamānāḥ tatas te caṇḍavikramāḥ, tad ādīpyanta me pucchaṁ hanantaḥ kākṣhamuṣṭibhiḥ/ baddhasya bahubhiḥ pāsair yantritasya ca rākṣasaiḥ, na me pīḍā bhavet kā cid didṛkṣor nagarīm divā/ As Ravana had no doubt was pliable in response to Vibhishana's considered caution compromised to burn his tail. tatas te rākṣasāḥ sūrā baddham mām agnisamvṛtam, aghoṣayan rājamārge nagaradvāram āgatāḥ/ tato 'ham sumahad rūpaṁ samkṣipyā punar ātmanaḥ, vimocayitvā taṁ bandham prakṛtiṣṭhaḥ sthitaḥ punaḥ/ āyasaṁ parighaṁ grhya tāni rakṣāmsy asūdayam, tatas tan nagaradvāram vegenāplutavān aham/ pucchena ca pradīptena tām purīm sāṭṭagopurām, dahāmy aham asaṁbhrānto yugāntāgnir iva prajāḥ/ Thus as per the amended instruction of the King, Maha Rakshasaas removed my 'bandhanas' of thick ropes and covered up with plentiful clothing dipped in oil and burnt the tail which kept on lengthening as simultaneously clothed- dipped in oil and taken around the streets, roads, highways and all over Lankapuri. Hanuman having carefully noted the route of Lanka of the procession and with the blessings of Agni deva, a friend of Vayu deva- not to hurt the body of Hanuman refollowed the nooks and corners of the Lanka Rajya and burnt it all systematically. dahatā ca mayā lankām daghdā sītā na saṁśayaḥ, athāham vācam āsrauṣam cāraṇānām śubhākṣarām, jānakī na ca dagdheti vismayodanta - bhāṣiṇām/ Then as the entire Lankapuri crashed down in flames. But there was a celestial voice assuring her safety; tato me buddhir utpannā śrutvā tām adbhutām giram, punar dṛṣṭā ca vaidehī viṣṣṭaś ca tayā punaḥ/ rāghavasya prabhāvena bhavatām caiva tejasā, sugrīvasya ca kāryārtham mayā sarvam anuṣṭhitam/ etad sarvam mayā tatra yathāvad upapāditam, atra yan na kṛtam śeṣam tat sarvam kriyatām - iti/ The Voice said: As per very many shubha shakunas, Devi Janaki is safe, since Hanuman's tail was not burnt thanks to Agni Deva'. Having concluded his narration addressed to Jambavaan and his Vanara Pramukhas, stated that what all the happenings at Lanka were thus reported in brief truthfully may thus be noted and the program ahead of us all be framed accordingly.

Even holding 'agni jvaalaas' by one's hands might not be so disastrous as the pain and sufferance of Devi Sita's 'tapo mahima' once gets to the brim would most certainly terminate Ravana's disaster. Having stated thus, Anjaneya reiterated that the task as assigned to him by the maha veeraas like Jambavan and you all has been completed and now you have all to chalk out a program to enable Shri Rama to reach Devi Sita out of her grief. Am I not fully familiar with the might of personalities of the stature of Jambavan who could shift Mandaraachala or Vaali Putra Angada who could break Mandharaacha into pieces and destroy rakshaas of Lanka! There are such other Vanara veeras like Mainda or Dviveda- the Ashvini Kumaraputras- whom even Deva-Gandharava-Asura-Yaksha- Naaga-Pakshis could dare to encounter! As Hanuman had returned successfully, Angada suggested another collective attack Lanka, destroy Ravana and followers and bring Devi Sita back, but Jambavan advised to return and report back only!

Spontaneously reacting to Hanuman's appeal to co Vaanara Pramukhas to save Devi Sita from her harassment instantly, Vaali Kumara Angada pointed out about Ashvini Kumara Putras Mainda and Dvidida. Angada recalled that in the past, Mainda and Dvidida were very arrogant as Brahma Deva having kept the honour and fame of Ashvini Kumaras excused Mainda and Dvidida despite their egoistical bigheadedness and even allowed the reach of 'amrita' and thus their invincibility. Thus these maha veeras could devastate Ravana and his 'raakshasa sena'. Come to think of it, am too should be able to destroy Ravana and his entire followers, and like wise many others could certainly perform likewise backed up by all of you. Had not Vayuputra had just now demonstrated his ability all by himself! Should not all of us together attack with our combined might straight away and destroy Lanka on one go! As Vaanara Yuvaraja Angada affirmed likewise, Jambavan intervened being pleased with Angada Kumara's self assurances. He stated: Neshaam buddhirmahabuddhe yad braveeshi Maha Kape, vichetun vayamaagjnatvaa dakshinaam dishaamuttamaam, naa nrutam kapirajena naiva Ramena dheemataa/ 'Maha Kape! You are a known buddhiman of maturity and courage undoubtedly; yet your instant reaction on learning of the present 'duravastha' of Devi Sita, is perhaps not in order; [especially keeping in view of her hesitation of consenting Hanuman's offer to reach her to the presence of Rama-Lakshmana-Sugrivas instantly all by himself]. This is keeping in view that Vaanara Raja Sugriva as also of Shri Rama instructed us to expore for Devi Sitanveshana merely, but not to bring her to kishkindha for 'Rama darshana'. Even if we would have succeeded in doing so and presented Devi Sita before them, what about the magnificence of Ayodhya and would Shri Rama have appreciated such action? Pratigjnyaaya svayam Rajaa Sitaavijayamagatah, sarveshaam kapimukhyaanaam katham midhya karishyati/ Vipulam karma cha kritam bhavet tushtirna tasya cha, vrithaa cha darshitam veeryam bhaved vaanara pungavaah/ Shri Rama took a vow that he himself would go to Lanka and after his emphatic success he

Let us all reach Kishkindha and prove our success of Devi Sitanveshana-her darshana and all the rest. Raja Kumara! You may decide your self but this is my considered counsel!

Truly obsessed with the successful return of Veera Hanuman from Lanka- Devi Sita darshana- aneka Rakshasa Vadha-and destroying Lanka to flames and such heroics, decided to return to Kishkindha to meet Sugriva-Rama Lakshmans. As a mark of celebration, the Vaanaa Veeras entered 'Madhu Vana' and enjoy the fresh fruits with excessive excitement ravaged the massive garden creating ruckus and havoc. This popular Madhu Vana was basically owned by Vanara King Sugriva himself and Maha Vanara Dadhimukha, the maternal uncle of Sugriva, was managing the fruit garden on behalf of Sugriva. On sighting the fresh fruit garden, the Vanara Sena solicited Yuva Raja Angada's permission to enter and enjoy the readily inviting Madhu vana as the latter gave his consent as if he was the garden manager himself. Then followed the plundering of the fruit garden by destroying the tree branches, tasting the fruits, biting-spitting the fruit skins- throwing the unripened and rotten ones and such mischievous, disorderly damagings of trees, typical of monkey acts. Some of the Vaanaras were singing obscene songs, some were dancing, some falling down to earth, some shouting vulgarities, jumping with excitement, embracing each other, running fast all around, some chasing each other with tree branches, uprooting trees, yelling, and thus creating havoc all around. Thus the vaanara sena went berserk. As Dadhimukha the in charge Vaanara, tried to stop the nonsense and received groupwise thrasings and physical assaults in return. In sheer self defence, Dadhimukha tried to pierce the uncontrollable offenders by his sharp nails and teeth, but was subdued by the crowd of vanara soldiers and smashed the Madhu Vana to shambles.

As a mark of celebration of Veer Hanuman's successful Devi Sita darshana and conversation, aneka Rakshasa Vadha , Lanka dahana, and return, Vaanara Veeras on their return journey to Kishkindha found Madhu vana full of fresh and sweet fruits as encouraged by Hanuman and Vaanara Yuva Raja Angada.

The Vaanara sena had started breaking the trees to collect ripe fruits and eventually broke into the fruit garden for ‘madhupaana’ and devastated it as owned by King Sugriva himself and managed by Dadhimukha the maternal uncle of Sugriva. As the vaanaras went berserk in the celebrations, Dadhimukha shouted at the defiant vanaras. śrutvā dadhimukhasyedaṁ vacanaṁ vānaraṣabhāḥ, punar vīrā madhuvanaṁ tenaiva sahitā yayuḥ/ madhye caiṣāṁ dadhimukhaḥ pragṛhya sumahātaruṁ, samabhyadhāvad vegenā te ca sarve plavaṁgamāḥ/ te śilāḥ pādapāṁś cāpi pāṣāṇāṁś cāpi vānarāḥ, gṛhītāvābhyāgaman kruddhā yatra te kapikuñjarāḥ/ Dadhimukha’s stern, insinuating shouts at the Vanara soldiers, they got extremely worked up and replied by throwing broken trees, heavy stones and boulders at Dadhimukha and his follower vanaras. In reply there was exchanges of mutual fight reached Hanuman and the other Vanara Veeras to attack. atha dṛṣtvā dadhimukhaṁ kruddhaṁ vānarapuṁgavāḥ, abhyadhāvanta vegena hanūmatpramukhāś tadā/ taṁ savṛkṣaṁ mahābāhuṁ āpatantaṁ mahābalaṁ, āryakaṁ prāharat tatra bāhubhyāṁ kupito ’ṅgadaḥ/ As the angry Dadhimukha rushed to Hanuman and other vaanara stalwarts, the furious Angada held the hands of Dadhimukha, beat him black and blue, through him down and started fisting and damaging his shoulders, thighs, face and wrists. Having lost his consciousness and gradually recovered, Dadhimukha said in low whispers addressing his followers: ete tiṣṭhantu gacchāmo bhartā no yatra vānarāḥ, sugrīvo vipulagrīvaḥ saha rāmeṇa tiṣṭhati/ sarvaṁ caivāṅgade doṣaṁ śrāvayiṣyāmi pārthiva, amaraṣī vacanaṁ śrutvā ghātayiṣyati vānarān/ iṣṭaṁ madhuvanaṁ hy etat sugrīvasya mahātmanaḥ, pītṛpaitāmahaṁ divyaṁ devair api durāsadam/ ‘Come come with me. Let us straightaway go to Sugriva and report to him as should be seated along with Rama Lakshmanas now. King Sugriva is extremely fond of Madhu Vana and would not allow even Devas, let alone his kith and kin even and hit Angada on his head and break his bones. He should also punish to death the so called vanara veeras as they are drunk with some success. evam uktvā dadhimukho vanapālān mahābalaḥ, jagāma sahasotpatya vanapālāiḥ samanvitaḥ/ nimeṣāntaramātreṇa sa hi prāpto vanālayaḥ, sahasrāṁśusuto dhīmān sugrīvo yatra vānarāḥ/ rāmaṁ ca lakṣmaṇaṁ caiva dṛṣtvā sugrīvaṁ eva ca, samapraṭiṣṭhāṁ jagatīm ākāśān nīpāpāta ha/ Thus having suggested like wise, Dadhimukha and his followers leaped up to the sky and a matter of minutes and descended down, as Shri Rama-Lakshmana and Sugrivas noted their descent nearing him. sa nīpātya mahāvīryaḥ sarvaiś taiḥ parivāritaḥ, harir dadhimukhaḥ pālāiḥ pālānāṁ parameśvaraḥ/ sa dīnavadano bhūtvā kṛtvā śirasi cāñjalim, sugrīvasya śubhau mūrdhnā caraṇau pratyapīḍayat/ As they descended down they all kneeled down at once.

King Sugriva consoled Dadhimukha and his men extending his ‘abhaya hasta’ and desired to know the details of what had happened. Then the reply was Maha Vanara Raja! Your Yuvaraja Angada allowed his huge ‘veera sena’ to enter the Madhuvana to enjoy fresh fruits. Then Hanuman and others commenced breaking trees branches and eating the fruits and their juices. Gradually, they broke the tree branches for the fruit selection and the momentum got accelerated too soon and trees were smashed, branches were destroyed, ending up in disaster to the garden. I tried to scold them and eventually the balance was badly tilted as the joyful vaanara veeras went berserk. At that juncture, Veera Lakshmana interrupted and queried: what were the ‘raksha bhat’ force was doing then! Then Sugriva replied: surely Dadhimukha’s soldiers should have been performing their duty but Angada himself encouraged as the vaanara sena under his command and that must have led the sena to go out of control. aṅgadapramukhair vīrair hatam madhuvanam kila, vicintya dakṣiṇām āśām āgatair haripuṅgavaiḥ/ āgatais ca praviṣtam tad yathā madhuvanam hi taiḥ, dharṣitam ca vanam kṛtsnam upayuktaṁ ca vānaraiḥ, vāritāḥ sahitāḥ pālās tathā jānubhir āhatāḥ/ Lakshmana Prabho! As Yuva Raja Angada being extremely elated in his mission of success of the dakshina sena of Devi Sitaanveshana instructed his sena to celebrate with ‘madhupaana’ apparently and in the process created havoc there even by beating the ‘In charge’ and his men. Otherwise it would not be possible for a gang of vaanara hooligans to enter Madhuvana and destroy it in the manner that Dadhimukha had explained. etartham ayaṁ prāpto vaktum madhuravāg iha, nāmnā dadhimukho nāma hariḥ prakhyātavikramaḥ/ dṛṣṭā sītā mahābāho saumitre paśya tattvataḥ, abhigamya yathā sarve pibanti madhu vānarāḥ/na cāpy adṛṣtvā vaidehīm viśrutāḥ puruṣarṣabha, vanam dātta varam divyam dharṣayeyur vanaukasah/ Hence my maternal uncle had explained his having been physically beaten as also his men indirectly hinting that that Angada himself was responsible at his memorable success having been celebrated. tataḥ prahr̥ṣto dharmātmā lakṣmaṇaḥ saharāghavaḥ, śrutvā karnasukhām vāṇīm sugrīvavadanāc cyutām/ prahr̥ṣyata bhṛṣam rāmo lakṣmaṇas ca mahāyaśāḥ, śrutvā dadhimukhasyedam sugrīvas tu prahr̥ṣya ca, vanapālam punar vākyam sugrīvaḥ pratyabhāṣata/ pr̥to ’smi saumya yad bhuktaṁ vanam taiḥ kṛtakarmabhiḥ, marṣitam marṣaṇīyam ca ceṣṭitam kṛtakarmaṇām/ As Sugriva interpreted with happy revival of hope and even excitement, Lakshmana and Shri Rama too were truly delighted, displaying a great sigh of relief and with excitement; in fact, Shri Rama’s countenance was brightened as Lakshmana was overjoyed. Vanara King addressed the crestfallen Dadhi Mukha! Dear Uncle! I am thrilled that my dakshina vaanara sena did a splendid task and enjoyed the sweetness of ‘Madhu Paana’ having plundered the Madhu Vana after their memorable success even as I feel unhappy at their having beaten you and your soldiers badly for which I share my extreme sympathy as Angada too must be regretful. Now, you may kindly forget and forgive. Kindly return back soon to Madh Vana and ask the prominent leaders of the Dakshina Sena like Veera Hanuman and the Yuvaraja to reach us at once.’ Then Shri Rama Lakshmanas were truly in rapturous excitement, relief and suppressed emotions and softly extended their hands to King Sugriva as a gesture of appreciation, gratitude and extraordinary friendship !

As Vaanara Raja Sugriva instructed Dadhimukha to return back to Madhuvana at once and ask Angada, Anjaneyaadi 'maha vaanara yoddhas' to immediately reach Kishkindha, the latter performed paadaabhi vandana to Rama Lakshmana Sugrivas and thus was airborne to land at the Madhuvana and gave the message. Angada thus having overcome his erstwhile anger and gaining normalcy sought pardon from Dadhimukha. The latter too responded politely: 'I got furious as the per the reports my messengers spread all over the Madhuvana little realising that the sena was obviously exhausted after long journey; indeed you as the Yuva Raja, in the past, Sugriva too was taking similar care of the followers. Now, King Sugriva instructed me that all of you in the dakshina sena be sent expeditiously to him in kishkindha as he was delighted to hear the news of your success of your return from the seashores'. Angada replied: Vaanarottama! It appears that Bhagavan Shri Rama appears to have realised of our return. Now in any case our spree of madhu paana is over by now, and we are in any case, ready to leave. Then Angada pushed Veera Anjaneya ahead and as the south bound detachment of the Maha Vaanaraas were sky borne atonce shouting 'victory , maha victory' as the 'Jai Jai ninaadaas' were resounding at their landing. As the sena was landing, Vaanara Raja Sugriva addressed Shri Rama: samāśvasiḥi bhadraṁ te dṛṣṭā devī na saṁśayaḥ, nāgantum iha śakyam tair atīte samaye hi naḥ/ na matsakāśam āgacchet kṛtye hi vinipātite, yuvarājo mahābāhuḥ plavatām pravaro 'ṅgadaḥ/ yady apy akṛtakṛtyānām īdṛśaḥ syād upakramaḥ, bhavet tu dīnavadano bhrāntaviplutamānaśaḥ/ Maha Prabho! Mahabahu prostrated before Shri Rama and stated: Maha Prabho, Devi Sita of safe, hale and hearty physically while she is on ‘pativrata’s kathora niyamaas’ being weak. As Hanuman assured that he had indeed succeeded Devi Sita safe, Rama Lakshmanas were indeed thrilled. As already was assuring of Hanuman’s glory till now to Rama Lakshmanas, Sugriva hugged Hanuman with unbridled pride.

As Veera Hanuman paid his respects to Rama-Lakshmana-Sugrivas and had withdrawn, Angada-Jambavan and all the Vaanara Veeras of the Dakshina- Sena assembled and conveyed the details as Hanuman himself conveyed to them in detail. They explained in the open Vaanara Sabha as presided by Rama Lakshmana Sugrivas: They conveyed as follows in the question-answer conference: ‘Devi Sita was detained in the Ravana’s ‘antahpura’, yet in a remote garden as strictly surrounded by brutal, cruel and raw flesh eating-blood sucking maha rakshais ever threatening her ready to torment her physically thus her very living was being threatened. It was stated that she was the very heart throb and pulsation of Shri Rama. The ruthless Ravana had prescribed a two month time limit of her life; so far however she is safe yet under extreme duress.’ As the Vaanara Veeras had described her present status of the conditions, Rama was no doubt heaved a sigh of hope, but was not truly reflective of the fuller details. Then he desired to know further details about her darling wife. Then he asked other searching details: ‘Vaanaraas! Where exactly is Sita; is she missing me; give me further details’. Then Pavana putra Anjana Putra who indeed was an eye witness rose up, greeted Rama Lakshmana Sugrivas and having specially addressed Shri Rama detailed as follows: samudraṁ laṅghayitvāhaṁ śatayojanam āyatam, agacchaṁ jānakīm sītām mārgamāṇo didṛkṣayā/ tatra lankeṭi nagarī rāvaṇasya durātmanaḥ, dakṣiṇasya samudrasya tīre vasati dakṣiṇe/ tatra dṛṣṭā mayā sītā rāvaṇāntaḥpure satī, saṁnyasya tvayi jīvanti rāmā rāma manoratham/ Prabho! Having dedicated my very heart and soul to the ambition and decisiveness of ‘Devi Sita darshana’, I was able to jump and cross the the hundred yojana distance of the Maha Sagara and reached its southern tip. The duratma Ravana’s Lanka is situated. Shri Rama! Having entered Lanka, I saw Devi Sita in the Pramadaavana in Ravana’s ‘antahpura’ and there inside is pramadaavana’s outskirts under the Ashoka Vriksha, I had the fortune of sighting Devi Sita who was surrounded by the Rakshasis as already described, as the vikaraali rakshasis were ever shouting loud ready to beat and threatening her life. duḥkham āpadyate devī tavāduḥkhocitā satī, rāvaṇāntaḥ -pure ruddhvā rākṣasībhiḥ surakṣitā/ ekaveṇīdharā dīnā tvayi cintāparāyaṇā, adhaḥśayyā vivarṇāṅgī padmīnī himāgame/ rāvaṇād vinivṛttāṁ martavyakṛtānīśayā, devī katham cit kākutsṭha tvanmanā mārgitā mayā/ Veeravara! Devi Sita was to have had a comfortable living in your exciting company but now is subjected to most unfortunate desperation for minute to minute scare of living, ever concerned drag of existence and distressed to the bottom line of helplessness. She is dressed in just one body covering with drooped head ever awaiting relief literally sunk in deep sorrow. She lies down on bare earth, withstanding the cold nights and the heat of day time, and like a sagging baggy, one would reall a dried up lotus with least help from Ravana who has numbered her days already. I saw her in such a condition that she was resolving to conclude her existence. ikṣvākuvaṁśavikhyātīm śanaiḥ kīrtayātānagha, sa mayā naraśārdūla viśvāsam upapāditā/ tataḥ sambhāṣitā devī sarvaṁ arthaṁ ca darśitā, rāmasugrīvasakhyā ca śrutvā prītim upāgatā/ niyataḥ samudācāro bhaktiś cāsyās tathā tvayi, evaṁ mayā mahābhāgā dṛṣṭā janakanandinī, ugreṇa tapasā yuktā tvadbhaktyā puruṣarṣabha/ Kakutsṭha Kula bhushana! Her inner thoughts are always anchored on you as a sinking boat. Nara shreshtha! I made such desperate efforts to locate you and having done so she might suspect of my reality as Ravana could have taken a Vaanara Swarupa. Then, I would have to make her ponder over and trust my genuineness. Then a started cooing songs of the glory of Ikshvaaku vamsha, the lineage of Maha Dasharatha- and so on merely to convince her of my genuineness. Then having started gaining confidence in bits of conversation, I had given out the detailed information gradually about Rama Sugriva Maitri, the efforts of Devi Sitaanveshana and my locating you here and so on. She was happy to learn the details. Maha Bhaaga! Purushottama! In this manner having seen and conversed with her I had truthfully believed and realised, I have realised that why and how her unshakable, steadfast devotion and dedication to you as the roots, branches and fruits of incomparable

Devi Sita confided in me and narrated the incident as you were comfortably relaxing and resting on your lap at Chitrakoota, as to how she had never even moved to disturb you despite a crow made blood flowing pricks, cuts all over her face, hands, legs and even breasts, when Rama realise the blood streams, woke up stunned with rage made brahmastra prayoga on the crow, which actually was Indra putra. The impact of the astra made the crow running all over to trilokas and finally fell at you feet for refuge. As a result, the impact of the brahmastra made blindness of the race of crows in their left eyes! Having narrated the incident thus, Devi Sita gave me to hand over to her invaluable ‘choodaamani’ of pearl-studded hair clip as he had gifted to her to recall the sweet memories of her life! She then entreated Hanuman to kindly convey her parting appeal to her dearest husband: ‘Vayu nandana! You have indeed seen by my present condition yourself; kindly ask Shri Rama to reach here soonest and bring my hair clip too! ēṣa cūḍāmaṇiḥ śrīmān mayā te yatnarakṣitaḥ, manaḥśilāyās tikalas taṁ smarasveti cābravīt/ ēṣa niryātitaḥ śrīmān mayā te vārisambhavaḥ, etaṁ dṛṣṭvā pramodiṣye vyasane tvām ivānagha/ jīvitaṁ dhārayiṣyāmi māsam daśarathātmaja, ūrdhvaṁ māsān na jīveyaṁ rakṣasām vaṣam āgatā/ iti mām abravīt sītā kṛśāṅgī dharma cāriṇī, rāvaṇāntaḥpure ruddhā mṛgīvoṭphullalocanā/ Prabho! As Devi thus handed the Choodamani, she suggested that this unique pearl studded golden Ratna safe to be handed over by you to your beloved, do kindly convey to Shri Rama that during all her days of helplessness, she was looking at it during her days of desperation and distress. Hanuman, please convey to Rama that she could bear this condition for a month more only. Any further, she would have to surrender to Almighty! etad eva mayākhyātam sarvaṁ rāghava yad yathā, sarvathā sāgarajale saṁtāraḥ pravidhīyatām/ tau jātāśvāsau rājaputrau viditvā; tac cābhijñānam rāghavāya pradāya, devyā cākhyātam sarvaṁ evānupūrvyād; vācā saṁpūrṇam vāyuputraḥ śaśaṁsa/ Thus concluded Veera Hanuman finally stating: Raghunandana! This was the substance of my Devi Sita’s darshana; now you may kindly initiate the manner and methodology of crossing Samudra now. I hope I have thus truthfully conveyed Devi Sita’s message to Shri Rama and to Sugriva Lakshmanaas too!

Reacting to Hanuman’s handing over Devi Sita’s ‘choodaamani’ to him, Rama got worked up with his memories of her and showed his anxiety to hear what was her message to him.

As Veera Hanuman handed over Devi Sita’s ‘choodaamani’ to Shri Rama, Raghunandana drew it to his chest and broke down crying and so did Lakshmana too. As a cow endears its calf with love, its udders drop down flows of its milk, and the brothers too cried off quietly. Shri Rama recalled that at the time of Devi Sita's wedding the most invaluable choodamani was gifted to the bride. This priceless pearl was from deep waters and his father in law gifted it to her as Indra gifted it to Janaka Maha Raja at a Maha Yajna was performed. Indeed this instantly takes me back to my days of youthful life recalling my ever cherishable memories of my father and father in law and of my wedding with sowbhagyavati Videha Rjakumari. Soumya Pavana Kumara, I full elated as if a person swooned down with unconsciousness is sought to be normalised by sprinkling water on his face and body as a first aid and your bringing me back this memory reminder of my comfort in her company!' As Shri Rama thanked Hanuman, Rama addressed Lakshmana: 'Sumitra nandana! Even Devi Sita is not present here physically, this pure pearl jewel choodamani ever shining and worn on her head further steps up my anguish, is it not so?' Then Rama addresses Hanuman: 'Veera Pavana Kumara! I am truly appreciative of the care and devotion with which you have brought this priceless memory revival! Believe me, I am unable to live even for a second more! naya mām api tam deśam yatra dṛṣṭā mama priyā, na tiṣṭheyaṁ kṣaṇam api pravṛttim upalabhya ca/ katham sā mama suśroṇi bhīru bhīruḥ satī tadā, bhayāvahanām ghorāṇām madhye tiṣṭhati rakṣasām/śāradas timironmukho nūnam candra ivāmbudaiḥ, āvṛtam vadanam tasyā na virājati rākṣasaiḥ/ You have seen Devi Sita yourself; kindly to take me too to see her at once as I am unable to wait any further. Veera Vayu Putra detailed Devi Sita's actual status of the extremely distressed and her frantic and parting appeal to Rama Lakshmanas still concerned of their most urgent action to save her very life!

Then Hanuman initiated his address to Shri Rama quoting what all she said: ‘Purushottama! I explained to Hanuman all the happenings ever since our arrival at chitrakoota. ‘During our memorable stay there, you were comfortably resting on my lap as I too was sleeping. Then a crow started hurting my face and so on as though a five hooded serpent would. Then Rama realised that there was blood trickling from my body and got enraged. It was then learnt that the crow was actually Indra’s son. As Kaakasura continued to harass me you had decided to punish the bird fittingly. You may recall that you pulled out a straw from the mattress on which we were resting and had done the ‘jalaabhimantṛa’ of brahmastra and hit the crow. Then the fiery ‘kusha’ chased and even all the Devas avoided saving the crow. The brahmastra chased it all over the trilokas but none could dare to save it. Finally the crow fell at your feet. Having been a famed ‘sharanaagata paramatma’, you pardoned no doubt but- mogham astram na śakyaṁ tu kartum ity eva rāghava, tatas tasyākṣikākasya hinasti sma sa dakṣiṇam/ rāma tvām sa namaskṛtvā rājño daśarathasya ca, viśṣṭas tu tadā kākaḥ pratipede kham ālayam/ Raghunandana! Since the impact of brahmastra would be such as definitely to impact and as such pierced the right eye. Then Devi Sita addressing Shri Rama stated: evam astravidāṁ śreṣṭhaḥ sattvavān śīlavān api, kimarthaṁ astram rakṣaḥsu na yojayasi rāghava/ na nāgā nāpi gandharvā nāsura na marudgaṇāḥ, tava rāma mukhe sthātum śaktāḥ pratisamādhritum/ tava vīryavataḥ kaccin mayi yady asti sambhramaḥ, kṣipram sunīṣitair bāṇair hanyatām yudhi rāvaṇaḥ/ Raghunandana! Being such an ‘astravetta-shaktishaali-sheelavaan’ why are you not displaying for ‘rakshasa samhaara’! Shri Rama! Even daanava-gandharva-asura-devataas too could not encounter you! Being equipped likewise, if you do have any consideration and concern for me, come over fast and destroy and uproot Ravana and followers! ‘Hanuma! Atleast Rama could instruct Lakshmana and save me! Both the illustrious brothers are invincible and even devatas would not be able to counter them’. tvacchokavimukho rāmo devi satyena te śape, rāme duḥkḥābhībhūte ca lakṣmaṇaḥ paritapyate/ kathaṁ cid bhavatī drṣṭā na kālaḥ pariśocitum, imaṁ muhūrtaṁ duḥkḥānām antaṁ drakṣyasi bhāmini/ tāv ubhau naraśārdūlau rājaputrāv ariṁdamau, tvaddarśanakṛtotsāhau laṅkāṁ bhasmīkariṣyataḥ/ As Devi Vaidehi stated in extreme anguish and desperation, Hanuman assured her stating that he would emphasise and swear as a ‘satya pramaana’ that Shri Rama Lakshmanas would arrive here soonest; then both the brothers were in tears. Then Hanuman said: Devi! Do kindly give me such a proof to Rama Lakshmanas to get convinced of your ‘divya darshana’ and in ready response she imparted to me this ‘maṇi’ as a proof as folded in her waist in her ‘eka vastra’ as her dishevelled hair was not worthy of wearing it on her head hairs. As she handed to me thus, I placed it on my head respectfully and assoired her that it would be my privelege to carry it to hand it over to Shri Rama as Lakashmana too wuld be present. In fact, I made an offer to get her on to my back and cited the example of my carrying Rama Lakshnana on my shoulders to reach Sugriva up the mountain. She responded saying that is is not a principle of dharma although the sinful Ravana did so and kept on his laps as he kidnapped me when I was helpless. Further how about the glory of Rama as he himself should personally vindicate and protect me from this muddle as of now! Thus explained Hanuman the actual situation of the highly worked up Devi Sita in brief yet speaking volumes of her ongoing harassment and anxiety. Further, Devi Sita asked Hanuman to convince Rama Lakshmanas to instantly jump into action and reach at Lanka along with Vanara King Sugriva, his Ministers and his maha sena. etat tavāryā nṛparājasimha; sītā vacaḥ prāha viśādapūrvam, etac ca buddhvā gaditaṁ mayā tvam; śraddhatsva sītāṁ kuśalāṁ samagrām/ Nareswara! Your beloved Sita Devi is aggrieved and really shaken up mentally as also extremely weak physically no doubt, but believe me she is safe and 'sakushal'!

My King Sugriva is equipped with innumerable 'Vaanara Bhalluka Maha Sena' with unusual planning, executing capability and determination to have you released, quite apart from the well reputed heroism of Shri Rama Lakshmanas as a solid supplementary. The enormous paraakrami-shakti shaali, maha bali Vaanara yoddhas' are ready to dash and dare, under Sugriva's discipline. The vaanaras are so disciplined that straight minded never to look up or down, or hither-whither, and are totally dedicated to 'Swami Karya'. They have already proven their grit and in their regulated obedience and control in Devi Sitanveshana within a fixed time frame of one month to return and report back. asaṁkṛt tair mahābhāgair vānarair balasaṁyutaiḥ, pradakṣiṇīkṛtā bhūmir vāyumārgānusāribhiḥ/ madviśiṣṭās ca tulyās ca santi tatra vanaukasah, mattaḥ pratyavaraḥ kaś cin nāsti sugrīvasaṁnidhau/ ahaṁ tāvad iha prāptaḥ kiṁ punas te mahābalāḥ, na hi prakṣṭāḥ preṣyante preṣyante hītare janāḥ/ Among the stalwart Maha Vaanara B Yuva Raja Angada then asked the Maha Vaanara Veeras by turn and named them as Gaja-Gavaaksha-

The replies were as follows: Maha Vanara Gaja said that he could jump off by ten yojanas- Gavaksha could cover twenty yojanas-Sharabha confirmed thirty yojanas-Rishabha assured forty yojanas-Gandhamaadana would cover fifty yojanas comfortably- Mainda quoted sixty with enthusiasm- Dvipada by seventy yojanas- and Sushena the dare devil upto eighty yojanas. Then Jambavan stated that in his youthful days and years he no doubt could have crossed the distance from here to the other shore, but now his present ability would now be restricted to some ninety yojanas but might not be more. hallukas there are very many Vaanara yoddhas who could fly high on the sky for several yojanas; even in the 'dhakshina vaanaras sena itself, under the Vanara Yuva Raja Angada. [Yuva Raja Angada tasked the Maha Vaanara Veeras by turn and named them as Gaja-Gavaaksha-Gavaya-Sharabha-Gandhamaadana- Mainda- Dvividā - Sushena-and Jambavan. The replies were as follows: Maha Vanara Gaja said that he could jump off by ten yojanas- Gavaksha could cover twenty yojanas-Sharabha confirmed thirty yojanas-Rishabha assured forty yojanas-Gandhamaadana would cover fifty yojanas comfortably- Mainda quoted sixty with enthusiasm- Dvipada by seventy yojanas- and Sushena the dare devil upto eighty yojanas. Then Jambavan stated that in his youthful days and years he no doubt could have crossed the distance from here to the other shore, but now his present ability would now be restricted to some ninety yojanas but might not be more.] Thus, there are countless such Maha Vanara Yoddhas far superior to me under Sugriva. Devi Sita! There are superior Vaanara Veeras far better than me and surely Sugriva has better Vaanaras than me, undoubtedly. As even I had succeeded in this duty, you may be aware that only the lower ranking Vanaras are normally commising as messengers. tad alam paritāpena devi manyur vyapaitu te, ekotpātena te laṅkāṁ eṣyanti hariyūthapāḥ/ mama prṣṭhagatau tau ca candrasūryāv ivoditau, tvatsakāśaṁ mahābhāge nṛsimhāv āgamiṣyataḥ/ arighnaṁ simhasamkāśaṁ kṣipraṁ drakṣyasi rāghavam, lakṣmaṇaṁ ca dhanuṣpāṇīm laṅkā dvāraṁ upasthitam/ Therefore, there ought to be even any remote doubt, for Mahatmas Shri Rama Lakshmana and King Sugrivas to reach Lanka to uproot Ravanaadi Rakshasas, have you released of your sufferings, but of the most auspicious Shri Rama Samyoga at the soonest possible time. Maha Bhaaga! Purusha Simhas Shri Rama Lakshmanas like the Udayaachala Surya Chandras, seated on my shoulders should very soon arrive your presence. As Mithileshwara Kumari is as of now shaken up with deepest depths grief and shattered physical weakness, Narothama Shri Rama! I had sought to console and reassure her repeatedly with the soonest usherings of auspiciousness!

ESSENCE OF VALMIKI YUDDHA RAMAYANA

Translated and interpreted by V.D.N.Rao, Chennai

PREFACE

‘Those who devotedly perform the ‘pathana-shravana-nidhidhyaasas’ of this Adi Kavya of Maharshi Valmiki are assured of contentment of life and of ‘vamsha paaramparya’ asserts the Phala Shruti of the series of Valmiki Ramayana with this climactic Yuddha Khanda . From Ayodhya to Ayodhya the six memorable Sugarcane Khandas of Baala-Ayodhya-Aranya-Kishkindha- Sundara- Yuddhas were the Maharshi’s grant as the everlasting gift to the posterity with the fulfillment of ‘chaturvidha dharma - artha-kaama moksha purushardhas’.

Yuddha Khanda details that the Vanara Sena of Sugriva-Anjaneya-Angada-Jambavan-Neela-Nala-Sushena-Kesari-Swetasa- made possible the ever memorable Setu Bandhana- Ravana was alerted and even agitated , despatched Shardula-Shuka Saraanaadi ‘goodhacharis’ to assess the Vanara Veeras of crores in number, who were of undaunted intrepidity, besides devoted commitment to Shri Rama. Earnest appeals were made to Ravana, especially by the ‘mantri mandali’, Vibhishana and even Kumbhakara to release Devi Sita handing over to Shri Rama but his ‘vinaasha kaale vipareeta buddhi’ never allowed, as Vibhishana took refuge unto Rama. Ravana was over shadowed by his arrogant and self-image of ‘my way or no way’. Abhichara mantra-homa vetta’ Indrajit was of proactive villainy availing of ‘antardhaana vidya pragalbha’ subjecting Rama Lakshmanas to humiliation, while Lakshmana was a soft target again and again. The magical effects of Maya pradarshanas of Rama Sita ‘shirah khanda’ images were repeated. In the Maha Sangrama, countless ‘apaara vaanara sena’ was sacrificed and so were Maha Rakshasas. Kumbhakarna was devastated, nishachara Prahasta was destroyed while Veera Hanuman did the deed of Dhumraksha’s doom. Rakshasas Sushena and Vidyunmalis were sent to graves by Lakshmana who also had the fame of Indrajit samhaara. Angada the Yuvaraja Vaali putra did the feat of throwing Vikata Rakshas to their fate besides the ‘bhayankaraakaara Virupaksha-Mahapaashva-Mahodara Rakshasa Yoddhas. Akampana was yet another ‘balavan rakshasa’ who was despatched to the ‘mrtityu ghaata’, apart from Trishira-Mahakaaya-Devaantaka- Naraantakas too. The ‘Yuddhonmatta’ rakshasas of Kumbha Nikumbhas, Kumbhakarna putras ,too had their ‘mrtityu phala’. Vajradamshtra and Damshtra besides countless rakshasas too were felled down on, as so were Makaraksha, Akampana, Shonikaaksha, Yupaaksha, Prajangha, Vidyujjihva, Yagnashatru and Suptaghna. Finally Shri Rama doomed the ‘loka kantaka’ Ravana by ‘Brahmastra Prahara’ blessed my Agastya Maharshi. Indraadi Devas and all the celestial Beings blessed Rama. Indra Deva revived the lives of the dead vaanaras. But, Devi Sita’s ‘agnipariksha’ followed, as Agni himself asserted her ‘pativratya’ and purity. Kubera’s Pushpaka Vimana facilitated Ayodhaagamana and ‘Shri Rama Pattaabhisheka’ followed; Rama Rajya prevailed as never before or ever thereafter. Those were the highlights of Valmiki Yuddha Ramayana with the effectiveness of its ‘pathana-shravana-manana!’

As per HH Vijayendra Saraswathi’s benign directive, Six Khandas of Valmiki Ramayana were translated into English with numerous visleshanas as per my squirrel like ability of ‘setu bandhana’ with devotion and commitment for the interested readers. May he bless me and family members to accept this dedication at his feet.

Introduction and Retrospective

Sarga One: As Shri Rama heard Hanuman's Report of Devi Sita's darshana, her desperation, killings of rakshasa veeras and Lanka dahana, he hugged at the success and got concerned of reaching Lanka for action.

Sarga Two: As Shri Rama was since concerned as to how to cross the Samudra to reach Lanka and meet Devi Sita by devastating Ravana, Sugriva assuages Rama's concern and assures 'setu bandhana'

Sarga Three: Veera Hanuman provides the full account of Lanka's impregnability, statistics of gates, inbuilt locational advantages and so on, yet emphasizing the attacking abilities of vanara sena too.

Sarga Four: Rama Lakshmana Sugrivas followed by Maha Vanara Sena advances to the shores of Maha Samudra with confidence to initiate the massive task of 'Setu Bandhana'

[Vishleshana on Surya- Chandra-Shukraadi Grahas-Sapta Rishi Mandala- Dhruvas] [Vishleshana on Tarakasura Samhara by Skanda Deva]

Sarga Five: As Neela- Mainda- Dvidida Veeras made arrangements of night long rest and safety safety to vaanara sena, Shri Rama confided his feelings especially in view of Ravana's ultimatum of time limit to Devi Sita

Sarga Six: King Ravana'sura convened an emergency conference with his Ministers as the vanara Sena had reached the Sea shores with Rama in the lead

Sarga Seven: As Ravana'sura expressed his concern, his Ministers replied that a King of his stature and triloka -fame need not get worried especially when vaanaras and humans attack and Indrajit alone could smother them.

Sarga Eight: Ravana'sura was assured by Mahaasura Veeras like Prahasta-Durmukha- Vajradamshttra-Nikumbha and Vajradamshttra to demolish the Vanara-Manushyas if attacked

Sarga Nine: As Rakasha Veeras assured Ravana of assurances with bravado unminded of enemy strength, Vibhishana requests him to respectfully return Devi Sita safe to Rama and save Lanka's glory and of generations. [Vishleshana on Tapatrayas]

Sarga Ten: As Vibhishana approached Ravana again in the latter's Rajamahala, he narrated 'ashubhas' in Lankapuri after Sita's entry, but Ravana was firm not to release her as Rama and Indra even would fail to do so!

Sargas Eleven and Twelve : Ravana convenes a Public Sabha after tightening security, declares intense feelings for Sita- Kumbhakarna since woken up regrets Ravana's love affair yet challenges Rama's attacks all by himself -

[Vishleshana on Kumbhakarna- origin, monstrous physique and Brahma Varas- bravery and basic virtues]

Sarga Thirteen: As Rakshasa Mahapaarshva encourages Ravana to force Sita to bed, having kidnapped her anyway, Ravana recalls Brahma's curse to him never to force an unwilling woman to bed, especially after kidnapping

Sarga Fourteen: Vibhishana appeals Ravana to release Devi Sita, praising Rama and his valour - Prahasta heckles Vibhishana- as the latter retorts that neither Ravana with 'vyasnaas' nor his followers could match Rama ;[Vishleshana on Sapta Vyasanas of Kings]

Sargas Fifteen and Sixteen: Indrajit makes fun of Vibhishana- the latter retorts of immaturity of a youth- despite consistent appeals to release Sita, Ravana refuses finally- out of desperation Vibhishana leaves Lanka off for good!

Sarga Seventeen: As Vibhishana seeking asylum from Shri Rama, raises doubts of Vanara Veeras like Surgiva, Angada and so on, Hanuman felt yet that it was genuine for apparent reasons and asks for Rama's instructions.

Sarga Eighteen: Shri Rama being a 'sharanaagama rakshaka' replies to Sugriva, but Veera Anjana Putra, and asks the Vanara King to allow his darshan

[Brief Visleshana on Shibi Chakravarti and how Indra and Agni Deva tested his spirit of self sacrifice]

Sarga Nineteen:Following in-house deliberation by select Vanara Veeras about Vibhishana's Vibhishana's protection, Shri Rama, a 'sharanaagata rakshaka', finally consents and even assures Kingship after Ravana's imminent death. [Vishleshana on Ashta Dikpaalakas]

Sargas Twenty and Twenty One: a) Ravana's spy Shardula informed of the arrival of Maha Maha Vanara Sena at the Samudra teera, Ravana asked Shuka as parrot to Sugriva and try 'bhedopaaya' who wished to kill him but for Rama! b) Rama invoked Samudra Deva for three days long, lost patience and threatened by shooting arrows.

Sarga Twenty Two:Maha Sagara himself personified restraining Rama's fury-advised Vanara's 'maha shilpi', the method of constructing 'Setu Bandhana' to facilitate Ramas and the huge Vaanara Sena to cross the Maha Sagara [Vishleshana on Squirrel and Setu Bandhana]

Sarga Twenty Five:As Rama with Vanara Sena finally crossed the Sagara, the flustered Ravana despatched Shukha-Saaranas as Vanaras, Vibhishana gets them caught, but the kind Rama releases yet with an alert message

Sarga Twenty Six: Ravana asserted not release Devi Sita any way, yet asked Sarana about about Vanara yoddhaas and the latter mentioned Angada, Nala, Shweta, Kumuda, Chanda, Rambha, Sharabha, Panasa, Krodhana, Gavaya [Vishleshana on Ashta Bhiravas]

Sarga Twenty Seven:Saarana further added to the list of Vanara Pramukhas like Jambavan- Jambavan- Samnadana- Kratana- Pramaathi-Gavaksha- Kesari-Shatabali and so on now right at the door steps of Lankapuri..-

Sarga Twenty Eight:As Saarana reported of his findings to Ravana, Shuka detailed about about Sugriva's Ministers, Mainda-Dvididas, Hanuman,Rama Lakshmanas, Sugriva Vibhishanas, and further details of the number of Vanara Sena

Sarga Twenty Nine: As Shuka Saaranas reported yet with implicit praises of enemies, Ravana burst out, stripped them of ministership, asked his spies to see the enemy's status but Vibhishana noticed Shardula as Rama pardoned.

Sarga Thirty: Then Shardula the spy ran back, Ravana desired as to the origin of Pramukha Pramukha Vanaras like Jambavan, Sushena, Kesari, Sushena, Dadhimukhi, Sumukha-Sveta-Mainda brothers, Nala-Vegashali and so on Sarga Thirty One: Having shattered by Rama's impending attack by his spies, Ravana sought to a cover up his vicarious pleasure and planned a trick by presenting a Maya Rama Mastaka to Sita to force her to submission.

Sarga Thirty Two: As Ravana showed the maya Rama mastaka to Devi Sita mischievously mischievously, she was totally lost her self awareness totally shattered and requested Ravana to kill her and place her body besides Rama's too.

Sarga Thirty Three:As Devi Sita was drowned in 'duhka saagara'on seeing Rama's severed head, as shown by Mayavi Ravana, dharma buddhi Sarana Rakshsi reveals the truth asserting Rama Vijaya, assuaging Devi's fears

[Vishleshana on a) the Saptaashvas and Surya Ratha - b) Meru Pradakshina by the Sun Chariot]

Sarga Thirty Four: Dharmika Rakshasi Sarana was endeared by Devi Sita who despatched despatched someone to learn of the latest on Ravana's front and returned that Ravana rejected his motherly mantrini's advice to return Sita but to no avail!

Sarga Thirty Five: Buddhimaan Maalyavaan, on behalf of the Maha Mandali, appealed for appealed to 'Sandhi' with the impending attack by Rama citing 'neeti shastra' and especially due to several 'apashakunas'faced by Lankapuri.

[Brief Vishneshana on Fourteen Maha Vidyas and Principles of Neeti Shastra][Vishleshana on the impact of Kaala maana and the weakening of yuga dharmas: Excerpts from Manu Smirti- and Markandeya, Brahmanada and Bhavishya Puranas:]

Sarga Thirty Six: Even after Malyaavan Mantri demanded for Sandhi, citing several apashakunas experienced by the Lanka public, Ravana reasserting his firm stand and merely instructed for tightening security and walked off!

Sarga Thirty Seven: Vibhishana in a 'pakshi rupa' quickly witnessed the details of Ravana Sena at the four dwaaras of Lanka and its center, then Shri Rama indicates the formation of his own Sena.

Sargas Thirty Eight and Thirty Nine: a) Shri Rama along Lakshmana and followers ascended the Suvela Parvata Shihkhara, well known for dhaatu Sampada. b) The picturesque overview ----- especially impressed Vanara Veeras who assumed various forms to wander in Lankapuri while Rama and followers too were overawed at its magnificence.

Sarga Forty: Suddenly Sugriva spotted Ravana at his residential roof, was unable to control to control his anger jumped down challenging him for 'malla yuddha' - as Ravana felt that Sugriva was too good and thus disappeared. [Vishleshana on 'Malla Yuddha Chatur Mandala Prakaara and Shashtha Sthaana Vivarana' by Bharata Muni.]

Sarga Forty One: As Rama chided Sugriva's undesirable malla yuddha with Ravana and safe return, 'Maha Rama Sena' marches for an gate wise attack- Rama despatches Angada to reach Ravana with an ultimatum of Ravana's doom

Sarga Forty Two: Final placement of Rama Sena with followers of Lakshmana- Vibhishana- Sugriva-Maha Vaanaras at the Lankapuri Dwaras coordinating up above and near the gates reminding of Deva- Danava Yuddha!

Sarga Forty Three: Dwandva Yuddha of Ravana- Vaanara Bhallukas day long yuddha between Indrajit- Angada, Jambumali- Hanuman, Shatrughna-Vibhishana, Gaja-Neela, Prathasa-Sugriva, Virupasha-Lakshmana and so on.[Vishleshana on Maheshwara-Andhakaasura dwandva yuddha']

Sarga Forty Four: During the night long Rakshasa Vanara Yuddha, Angada defeats Indrajit, but out a shame as the latter disappears by maaya and did 'naagaastra bandhanastra prayoga' on Rama Lakshmanas.

Sarga Forty Five: As Rama Lakshmanas were tied down by 'Nagaastra' by Indrajit in hiding, Vaanara Shreashthas tried to locate him who too were the victims of Indrajit's astras as the bewildered Maha Vanaras broke down too. [Vishleshana on Indrajit]

Sarga Forty Six: As Indrajit was yet in his invisibility, avoiding the search party of Hanuman, hit Jambavan and other Vaanara Veeras, as Vibhishana pacified Sugriva as 'Satyameva Jayate', as Ravana praised Indrajit.

Sarga Forty Seven: As Vaanaras rescued Rama Lakshmanas from naaga bandhana, Ravana instructed Trijata Rakhasi to show Sita by Pushpaka Vimaana, as she broke out crying

Sarga Forty Eight: As Sita was broken down in disbelief, she wondered whether whether Saamudrika Shastra -and Astrological Precepts were truthful assuring final success, but Trijata assured so too yet with hurdles.[Vishleshana on Saamudrika Shastra on women in general]

Sarga Forty Nine: All of a sudden Shri Rama with his physical and mental strength tore off the 'naaga pasha' but was distressed to see Lakshmana could not, and kept on crying missing him and got readied even to retreat!

Sarga Fifty: Vibhishana distressed at Lakshmana unrecovered, Rama decides to withdraw from the battle; Sushena advises Hanuman to get herbs from Sanjeevani Parvata-Garuda lands freed from 'naaga bandhana' [Vishleshana on Garuda Deva, the Vinata Nandana]

Sargas Fifty One and Two: Rattled by Rama Lakshmanas release, the worried Ravana despatched Dhumraksha, who encouraged his Rakshasas who displayed initial success but Hanuman crashed the chariot and the head of Dhumraksha

Sargas Fifty Three and Fifty Four: Ravanaasura got furious that Dhumraksha was killed by Hanuman, he instructed Vajradamshra to take revenge, as Rakshasa Vaanara Maha Yuddha followed yet Angada crushed Vajradamshra to death

Sargas Fifty Five and Fifty Six: As Angada pulled down Vajradamshra to death, Senapati Akampana volunteered to attack the shatru sena but Veeranjana despatched the Senapati and many Raashasas to Yama Loka

Sargas Fifty Seven and Fifty Eight: As even Akampana too was crumbled to death by Hanuman, Ravana hesitated but Senapati Prahasta consented but Maha Vaanara Senapati Neela succeeded to crush the Rakshasa Senapati to death

Sarga Fifty Nine: Ravana's entry with a wallop and exit with a whimper by subduing Sugriva, Lakshmana, Hanuman, Neela Yoddhas but exited as Shri Rama disgraced him!.

Sarga Sixty: Having left battle with disgrace as defeated by Shri Rama, Ravana instructed that Kumbhakarna be awoken from long slumber; once awoken with food and drink reached Ravana as Vaanaras were scared

Sargas Sixty One and Sixty Two: Vibhishana traces Kumbhakarna's origin, maha bala and spells of 'deerghanidra' - Ravanaasura literally begs of full scale attack on Rama Sugriva Vaanaras to save his prestige at the stake.

Sarga Sixty Three: Initially having reprimanded Ravana not to have followed the basic principles of dharmika jeevana, pacified the elder brother later and asserted killings of Rama Lakshmana Sugriva Hanuman Vaanaras.

Sarga Sixty Four: As Kumbhakarna boasted off his certain victory, Mahodara warned of Rama's invincibility but the latter was infuriated, demanded Sita's surrender and proceeded against Rama with four more Rakshasa Veeras.

Sarga Sixty: Kumbhakarna 'Rana Yatra', notwithstanding spates of 'dusshakunas'

Sarga Sixty Six: As many Vaanaras were dazed at Kumbhakarna ran way despite Angada's appeals as either death with veera swarga, then Maha Vanaras like Neela, Gavaksha, Hanuman then dedided to confront the enemy

Sarga Sixty Seven: Displaying initial 'prataapa' against Angada, Sugriva and Hanuman, Kumbhakarna calling Lakshmana as 'baalaka' attacks Rama who had systematically slashed off his right and left shoulders and finally his head and body to Vanara's thrill and the dismay of Ravana !

Sarga Sixty Eight: On hearing the unbelievable and tragic end of Kumbhakarna, Ravana was stunned and as his sons/ cousins broke down; he realised the retributive impact of his criminal deeds but now too late!

Sarga Sixty Nine: As Ravana felt the never dreamt of Kumbhakarna's fall, Trishira cooled down his anguish while Ravana Putras /cousin kumaras readied yet Narakantaka too resisted much as Angada removed him dead- [Vishleshana on a) Shambarasura- Indra and b) Narakasura and Vishnu]

Sarga Seventy: Hanuman shattered Devantaka and Trishira, Neela demolished Mahodara and Rishabha smashed Mahapaarshva

Sarga Seventy One: Atikaya the Kubera Putra whom Ravana considered as his own son; Brahma gifted an impregnable Kavacha to Atikaya; after a bhayankara yuddha, Lakshmana finally killed him by brahmastra itself

Sarga Seventy Two: Totally smashed to smithereens, Ravanaasura reviewed several Maha Rakshasa Veeras had sacrificed lives for him so far and instructed safety of Lankapuri, specially where Devi Sita resided

Sarga Seventy Three: Indrajit devastated Vanara Veeras being invisible on skies and by using brahmastra made Rama Lakshmana too victimised as Ravana was thrilled and so were Rakshasas and Lankapura

Sarga Seventy Four: As Vaanara Veeras wondered with 'kam kartavya' as Rama Lakshmana collapsed senseless, Jambavan advised of fetching Mrita Sanjivini off Himalayas which Hanuman did the glorious act successfully.

Sarga Seventy Five: Sugriva being relieved of Rama Lakshmana's revival, ordered Vanaras to break into Lankapuri and terrorise Rakshasas with flames- Ravana instructed Kumbhakarna Putras, Kumbha Nikumbhas, to attack.

Sarga Seventy Six: As Angada destroyed Rakshas Kampana and Prajaghata, Dvidida killed Shonitaakshaka, Mainda uprooted Yupaksha and Sugriva's 'mushti ghaatas' demolished Kumbhaasura

Sarga Seventy Seven: As his dear brother Kumbhaasura was killed by Sugriva, Nikumbha attacked Hanuman and got killed by him

Sargas Seventy Eight and Seventy Nine: As per Ravana's instructions, Makaraaksha challenged Rama with baana varshas for long, but Rama smashed the charioteer, as the asura took to a Shiva shula, yet Rama with his Vayavyastra killed the asura.

Sarga Eighty: As instructed by Ravana, Indrajit invoked abhichaara yajna and with antardhana shakti tormented Rama Lakshmanas, but Rama warned Lakshmana of brahmastra prayoga yet the latter made a 'shapatha' to kill Indrajit.

Sarga Eighty One: Despite repeated warnings of 'stree hatya' as a 'maha paataka', Indrajit drove off Maya Sita Devi by his chariot and stabbed her as rakshasas were insane with joy as Vanara Sena was got demoralised

Sarga Eight Two: As Hanuman witnessed Sita Devi killed, Vanara sena was ghastr and Humuman had initially pacified the vanara sena and take revenge but later agreed for temporary withdrawal and to inform Rama Sugrivaas

Sarga Eighty Three: As as he heard of Devi Sita's killing, Rama swooned down and Lakshmana did extensive vishleshana of dharmaadharma and sought to revive him, asserting Indrajit's justified killing too soon.

Sarga Eighty Four: Vibhishana spelt out Ravana's insane desire for Devi Sita that he could ever imagine her being killed and Indrajit fooled Hanuman and vanaras of Maya Sita but attack Indrajit's abhichara yajna instantly.

Sarga Eighty Five: Following repeated exhortations of Vibhishana, Shri Rama finally dismissing Indrajit's 'maaya Sita's vyavahara' instructed Lakshmana to proceed to Nikumbhila Mandira with Vibhishana and Vanara sena

Sarga Eighty Six: On arrival at the Nikumbhila, Vanara Rakshasa battle followed - Hanuman challenged Indrajit for malla yuddha, Indrajit raised his dhanur banaas against Hanuman, but Lakshmana raised his dhanush instead.

Sarga Eighty Seven: Indrajit heckles Vibhishana for discarding his 'swadhama' to join Rama but Vibhishana details of his Poulastya ancestry, highlights Ravana's 'duraacharas' and to get ready to be soon killed by Lakshmana!

[Visheshana on Bhuta Bali]

Sarga Eighty Eight: Lakshmana-Indrajit exchange of hot words followed by fierce battle mutually yet physically hurting each other on and on but never tired despite blisters and flows of blood as Vibhishana attacked Indrajit.

[Visheshana on Panchaagnis]

Sarga Eighty Nine: Vibhishana boosted Vanara Veeras morale listing about the Rakshasas smashed up already and inspired them to fight further as Lakshmana-Indrajit battle followed while the latter's chariot etc was shattered

Sarga Ninety: The sequel of Lakshmana -Indrajit maha samgrama concluded with Lakshmana's domination, the celestial world felt relieved with the vindication of dharma and nyaaya

Sarga Ninety One: Lakshmana accompanied by Vibhishana, Sugriva and Vanara Bhalluka Veeras reached Rama who was immensely impressed and praised Lakshmana with intimate affection and recoup from his injuries soon.

Sarga Ninety Two: Totally forlorn with Indrajit's end by Lakshmana, Ravana desired to kill Devi Sita the root cause of the yuddha, but Mantri Suparshva appealed not to kill Sita but instead kill Rama Lakshmanas instead.

Sarga Ninety Three: Having been demoralised with Indrajit's loss, Ravana directed the combined senas of the Mantris as led by them, but Rama utilised gandharvastra which created a spell devastating lakhs of Rakshasas

Sarga Ninety Four: As many families heroes were dead, affected Rakshasa strees cursed Ravana recalling that Brahma varaas excluded manavas of invincibility while Shiva predicted Devi Sita to be born for Rakshasa vinaashana

Sarga Ninety Five: Noting the 'arta naadaas' of Lanka's fallen Rakshasas by Rama, Ravana himself attacked vanaras along with senapatis Mahodara, Mahaparshva and Virupaksha

Sarga Ninety Six: As Ravana was razing Vanaraas they approached Rama Sugriva, as Sugriva attacked Virupaksha, killed his elephant, angry rakshasa slashed Sugriva who got recovered and destroyed Virupaksha

Sarga Ninety Seven: Ravana having been upset by the fall of Virupaksha, asked Mahodara to regain the success of Rakshasaas; but Sugriva after prolonged one to one encounter could severe 'Mahodara mastaka'

Sarga Ninety Eight: Mahaparshva got furious at the deaths of Virupaksha and Mahodara and demolished numberless vaanaras, but Angada with his mighty 'mushti ghaatas' tore off Mahodara's chest and heart with fatality

Sarga Ninety Nine: Furious Ravana re-entered the battle, released 'Taamasastra' killing vaanaras, resisted Lakshmana, attacked Rama, got hurt by his roudrastra, as his asurastra which was realiated by Rama's agneyastra!

Sarga Hundred: As Rama Ravana yuddha was intensified, Lakshmana intervened and the infuriated Ravana released his Mayaasura's Shakti aayudha by which Lakshmana was swooned and Rama asserted his 'prateekara'

Sarga Hundred One: Shri Rama 'vilaapa' for Lakshmana's fainting away, but Vaanara Sushena applied Sanjeevani brought earlier by Hanuman and Lakshmana got revived again and the latter reminds of Rama's 'satya pratigjna'

Sarga Hundred Two: Indra sent Matali with chariot, Rama initiated baana varsha but Ravana destroyed the chariot, hurled his Shakti aayudha but Rama attacked with arrows and Indra's 'Shakti' too which severely hit Ravana's body

Sargas Hundred Three and Four: In the course of the dwandva baana praharaas, Ravana boasted off and Rama listed his shameless Sitaapa-harana and such adharmas; Ravana hit Rama and the latter smashed off so much as Ravana's sarathi ran back yet returned later

Sarga Hundred and Five: Agastya Muni's eminent ADITYA HRIDAYA with invocations of Viniyoga - Rishi- Karanyasa- Hridayanga Nyaasa Vidhi Mantras

Sarga Hundred and Six: As Shri Rama was delighted as seated on Indra's Chariot encouraging Matali the celestial charioteer, there were a spate of 'asubha soochanas' for Ravana just ahead of the epic battle of Rama Ravanaas

Sarga Hundred and Seven: As Rama Ravana Yuddha got anti climaxed as Ravana's heads sprang up again and again, but neither Shri Rama nor Ravana got tired and continued the battle overnight and the next day too

Sarga Hundred and Eight: As Matali reminded of the Brahmastra which Agastya Muni bestowed to Rama, he recalled its universal impact and released on Ravana as his notorious life was closed, vindicating dharma and nyaaya again.

Sarga Hundred Nine : As his elder brother Ravanaasura was killed by Shri Rama's brahmastra, Vibhishana broke down, yet Rama declared that Ravana fought like a fearless hero and advised that the antyeshta karma be done soon

Sarga Hundred and Ten: Having heard about and seen of the dead Ravana, the antahpura streees were heart broken crying away in general, but some sensible ones wished of Ravana's release of Sita should have reversed the swing to normalcy

Sarga Hundred and Eleven: Devi Mandodari having placed the dead body of Ravanaasura on her laps, kept on crying away recalling his glories and her excellent marital experiences- Vibhishana performed the dahanaadi antya karmaas.

Sarga Hundred and Twelve: As the joyful Celestials returned to their lokas from their sky high assembly after Rama Vijaya, Shri Rama thanked Matalii, Indra- Sugrivadi Vanaras, and celebrated Vibhishana Pattaabhisheka

Sarga Hundred and Thirteen: Hanuman reached Ashoka Vaatika for Sita darshana- talked at length - she complemented him a lot yet desired not to kill the rakshasis who were after all instructed by Ravana - both proceeded to Rama.

[Vishleshana on Ashtanga Gunas]; [Vishleshana on Hunter-Tiger-Bhalluka reference by Devi Sita to Hanuman as the latter asked her permission to destroy rakshasis threatening her for months].

Sarga Hundred and Fourteen: Hanuman accompanied Devi Sita for Shri Rama

Shri Rama Darshana- Rama chides Vibhishana not to make a big scene, then Devi Sita sights her glorious husband after long miseries at Ravana's directives

Sarga Hundred and Fifteen: Rama asserted that he underwent several issues to resurrect Dharma although Sita's freedom now was only incidental - as she stayed under Ravana's care for long, he would free her seeking her own comfort

[Visleshana on Agastya and Daitya brothers Vaataapi and Ilvala as sourced from Matsya Purana]

Sarga Hundred and Sixteen: Devi Sita explaining and asserting her origin of

'ayonijatva', upbringing and paativratya to Rama and the assembly of public had finally entered into the agni jwaalaas as celestials and the public witnessed.

Sarga Hundred and Seventeen: As Devi Sita entered 'agni jwaalaas' set by

Lakshmana with Rama's implicit awareness, sarva deva mandali headed by Brahma praised Rama as of Vishnu avatara and Sita as Maha Lakshmi [Vishleshana of Ashta Vasus, Ekaadasha Rudras, Saadhaka Devataas, and Ashvini Kumaraas][Brief Vihleshana on select Purusha Sukta's select stanzas].

Sarga Hundred and Eighteen: Reacting to Brahma's declarations, Agni Deva emerged in public view and presented Devi Sita asserting her purity even being in Ravana's 'antahpura' for long as Rama desired to test her so to convince public.

Sarga Hundred and Nineteen: Maha Deva complemented Rama and pointed out at Dasharadha's Soul from Swarga as the latter blessed Rama stating that he redeemed his soul as Ashtavakra did to his father and assured Kingship with glory.

[Vishleshana on Ashtavarka and his father Kahola].

Sarga Hundred and Twenty: As Rama requested to Indra to revive the lives of countless dead vaanara-bhallukaas at the yuddha, the latter having realised that it was unprecedented yet granted as dead ones came alive as from deep sleep!

Sarga Hundred and Twenty One: Vibhishana requested Shri Rama to stay back for a few days and enjoy his hospitality, but Rama displayed his anxiety to return the soonest as he was yearning to return to Ayodhya

Sarga Hundred Twenty Two: As Shri Rama alighted the Kubera's Pushpaka Vimana

with Sita Lakshmanas, Vibhishana requested Rama to accompany with Sugriva Vaanara sena too, and the celestial vimana had taken off proceedings after the latter's earlier darshana of Shri Rama-Sita-Lakshmanas, till their much awaited Ayodhya Darshana.

Sarga Hundred Twenty Seven: As Sita Rama Lakshmanas were arriving, Bharata

Shatrugmas made elaborate arrangements at Ayodhya- the much excited Bharata hands over the Kingdom as of a deposit to Rama after a public announcement

Final Sarga Hundred Twenty Eight : Bharata's handing over Ayodhya Rajya-

Sita Rama Nagara Yatra-Rajyabhisheka- [Brief Vishleshana on Rama Rajya from Agni Purana]

Valmiki Ramayana Phala Shruti-

Introduction:

Brahmarshi Narada taught Brahmana Vidyaarshi Pracheta the 'two golden principles of not preaching what he himself would not practise and take to the name and thought of Rama till his death'. The boy learnt the Mantra 'Mara' or to Kill- kill 'ahamkara', 'shadvarga shatrus' of excessive desires, anger, selfishness and avarice, infatuation, ego and jealousy. Constant repetition of 'Mara' turned as 'Rama' gradually developed 'valmikaas' or anthills till his 'atma saakshaatkaara' or Self Realisation and eventually came to be reputed as Valmiki Maharshi. Once when he was bathing in the clear waters of Ganges he sighted two doves while mating but were shot to death by a hunter and the Maharshi cried :maa nishaada pratishthaa tvamagamah shasshvatih samaah, yat krouncha mithunaa -dekam avadheeh kaama mohitam/ Nishaada! There could never be rest for long years till eternity, for you killed the mating birds unsuspectingly! This is the 'prerepana' or the inspiration of the illustrious scripting of Valmiki Ramayana! Maharshi Valmiki asked Brahmarshi Narada: Konyasmin saampratam loke gunavaan kascha veeryavaan, dharmagjnascha kritagjnascha veeryavaan, dharmagjnascha kritagjnascha Satyavaakyo dhridhavitatah as to who indeed was the Guna- Veerya-Dharmagjna- Kritagjna- Satya Vaadi- Dhridha Sankalpa or of the superior traited- brave- virtuous-ever grateful - truthful and decisive on Earth during the Treta Yuga! Ramayana is relevant now as much as in the past -present and for ever as narrated in Six Khandas or sugar cane stems viz. Baala Khanda-Ayodhya Khanda- Aranya Khanda-Kishkinda Khanda-Sundara Khanda-Yuddha Khanda. Baala Khanda comprises seventy seven Sargas- Ayodhya Khanda one hundred nineteen Sargas-Aranya Khanda has seventy three Sargas-Kishkinda Khanda has sixty seven Sargas-Sundara Khanda comprises of sixty eight Sargas- Yuddha Khanda has one twenty eight Sargas. Additionally Uttara Khanda has one hundred eleven Sargas.

Retrospective :

Baala Khanda

The overview of Ramayana by Maharshi in his trance- Valmiki Ramayana of 24000 stanzas was sung by Lava- Kusha kumars of 'Shri Rama -Devi Sita' at a Conference of Muni Mandali before Shri Rama- ----- From the Vaivaswa Manvantara to the Ikshvaku Vamsha at Ayodhya till King Dasharatha to Shri Rama- King Dasharatha-Vasishta- Ministers plan to perform Ashvamedha Yagna and despatch Sumantra the Charioteer request to request Maharshi Rishyashringa- Historic Arrival of Rishyashringa heralding the season to rains- There after Vasishtas gave to the King 'yagjna diksha'- removed evil influences - made arrangements of the yagjna like architecture, construction and maintenance; groups of jyotishadi vedangas; workforce; nata- naatya -nartaka groups,cooking, culinary,construction of colonies, conference Halls etc.Ashvamedha Yagna executed gloriously- Putra Kaamekshi Yagjna- Celestials preparing for arrival of Maha Purusha-Devas and Indra approached Vishnu to desrtroy Ravasnasura as Vishnu said only in human form Rama, Dasharatha's son could to so. At the Yagjna, a Maha Purusha emerged from the flames and handed over a 'payasa patra' to Dasharatha to distribute to his three queens as instructed.As Rama-Lakshmana-Bharata-Shatrugnas were born thus, Indra and Devas manifested 'Vaanaraas' including Hanuman with Ashta Siddhis. Dasharatha distributes 'payasa' to queens Koushalya-Sumitra- Kaikeyi -Samskararas to Ramaadi Kumaras; Arrival of Brahmarshi Vishvamitra at Ayodhya to King Dasharatha. Vasishta assured Dasharatha about Shri Rama's safety in safeguarding the Vishvamitra Yagjna as the satisfied King allowed Rama Lakshmanas and teach Bala-Atibala. The trio reached Angamuni Ashram-Sarayu-Ganga confluence at Malada- Kurusha Villages where Indra hi d-the reason was that Indra killed brahmana Vritraasura.-They enter 'Tataka Vana'-Rama Lakshmanas encounter Tataka and Vishmamitra prevails on stree hatya-Vishvamitra teaches most of archery mantras to Rama Lakshmanas-Vishvamitra takes Rama brothers to the 'Vamana Ashrama' -Yagjnas spoilt in other ashramas by Maricha Subahus punished by Rama-'Ashramavashis' conveyed about Janaka's

Yajna and Shiva Dhanush- Vishvamitra seeks take heros to Siddhashrama by difficult terrain and explains about adjacent Kusha Desha, King Kushanabha, Apsara daughters and Vayu Deva-By boat from Shonabhadra to Ganges, Vishvamitra explains about flows of Ganges - birth of Skanda- King Sagara's tapasya for sons- queen Sumati begets 60,000 strong sons while Keshini just only Asamanjasa. Sagara planned Ashvamesha yagna, Indra stole the Sacrificial horse- Sumati's strong sons searched bhuloka-and patalas with pomp and noise-Kapila Muni curses the sons in patala to become stones-Asamanjasa goes in search and conveys the result to Sagara who dies- King Asamanjasa gave up hopes and so does his son Amshuman and the latter's son Dilip. But Bhagiradha takes up the thread and prays to Ganga from skies at Gokarna Tirtha. Bhagiratha standing by foot fingers, invoked Maha Deva-Crossing Ganga, Rama approaching Vaishali asked about Deva Danavas-Having failed to secure Amrit, Diti- daitya mother-seeks to destroy Indra- Diti fell asleep unconsciously, Indra entered her Garbha with his 'Vajraayudha', saw the fully grown up boy inside ,cajoled him saying 'don't cry, don't cry' and sliced the child into seven parts and further to forty nine sub-parts-Vishvamitra stated that they were at that very place where above instances had occurred when there was an Ikshvaku King Kakutstha- Sumati and then proceed to Mithila the kingdom of Janaka Raja! Sumati showed the way to Gautama Ashram en route Mithila.- Entering King Janaka's Yagnyashaala, Vishvamitra introduces Rama Lakshmanas and their acts of glory so far to King Janaka and his Purohita 'Shataananda'-Having congratulated Rama Lakshmanas, Shataananda makes a detailed coverage on the lifestory of Vishvamitra who as a Kshatriya King through tapsyas became a Brahmarshi! King Vishvamitra sighted Shabali Kamadhenu and demands it but was refused; in a battle Shabala smashed the army but the latter took to severe tapasya. Brahma blesses Vishvamitra be the status of Maharshi-Trishanku desires to reach swarga being mortal and Vishvamitra creates a mid- sky swarga with his tapo bala; -Ambarisha performs Yajna at Pushkara but as sacrifice animal was stolen, a 'nara pashu boy' was arranged - Vishvamitra took pity but to no avail; got entangled instead by co-Munis.-Vishvamitra disturbed by 'Menaka' at Pushkara, then shifted to heights of himalayas when 'Rambha' disturbed too-Ultimately even as Indra ever stole his food, Maharshi stopped his breathing but kept on his tapsya on Brahma, and the latter conferred the title of 'Brahmarshi'! Vishvamitra conveys Rama's desire to show Shiva Dhanush and Janaka gives the background of the - Dhanush ; King Nimi was gifted Shiva Dhanush at his son Devarata's wedding; Devi Sita as 'Ayonija' as Janaka tills bhuyagjna.-Rama lifted up the Shiva Dhanush as if it were a toy, straightened it with great ease, held the middle part, and as though of a child play broke into two pieces. That breaking resulted in earthshaking like reverberations. King Janaka said: Once wedded to Shri Rama, my daughter ought to be proud to his life partner and bring in glory to Janaka vamsha! Brahmarshi said: tathaastu!- King Janaka sent a messenger to King Dasharatha to state: Shri Rama in the midst of all of us had managed the control and breaking of the age old Shiva Dhanush and as per my repeated announcements would like to propose my daughter Devi Sita to Shri Rama in a wedding ceremony and therefore request you to attend the same along with your queens and the entire retinue. Besides Rama and Devi Sita, may we also propose the wedding of Lakshmana with my younger daughter Urmila too- Dasharadha was pleased and addressed Vasishtha and Ministers to leave next morning -Accompanied by Gurus, wives and intimate and other relatives and friends, King Dasharatha was happy and blissful and instructed Sumantra to let the royal treasurer carry surplus funds of cash, jewellery, nine gems ahead and for their safety there ought to be fool proof defence arrangements. A four day procession with needed halts on way moved on with plentiful food and drinks. On their arrival at the outskirts of the Kingdom, King Janaka made elaborate reception with music, song, dance and ecstatic welcome showers of flowers-In an open Janaka Sabha, Vasishtha narrated the glory of Ikshvaku Vamsha: Brahma Deva the Swayambhu manifested Marichi, from the latter was born Kashyapa whose son was Vivisvaan as the latter gave birth to Vaivasvata Manu. Manu was the foremost Prajapati and from Manu was born Ikshvaku the first King of Ayodhya. Then were highlighted: Pruthu-Mandhata-Sagara- Bhagiratha- Ambareesha-Nahusha-Yayati-Naabhaga- Aja- and Dasharatha- King Janaka explained about his vamsha from renowned King Nimi ,whose son named Mithi being the ever first Janaka as the ‘vamsha’ known as of Janakas. Then he introduced Kushadhvaja his younger brother desirous of getting his two daughters to Bharata and Shatrughna and declared Mandaveeka and Shutakeerti as their respective wives. respectively.- Public Declarations were made in the presence of Kings, Maharshis, and the public and hectic preparations were made; The vivahika vedika was got ready befitting the status and magnificence of two great Kings. Then Janaka welcomed the brides and bridegrooms.-- After the festivities concluded, guests were showered with precious gifts, the groom’s party moved back on the return journey but a terrible sand storm was faced. Parashu Rama arrived shouting ‘Rama Rama’ with terrible anger as the Shiva Dhanush was broken. Dasharatha tried to pacify but with anger, handed over Vishnu Dhanush and challenging Rama to break it if at all possible. An angry Rama not only lifted the dhanush as though Vishnu did against Madhukaitabha daityas but stated that with that very dhanush he could as well demolish Parashu Rama too! An utterly humiliated Parashu Rama was then instructed to return to Mahendra Mountain for ever!- As the return procession finally reached the city of Ayodhya , it was ready with dhvaja-patakas, welcome sounds of drums and music, dances and decorations. Dasharatha along with his sons and new daughters-in-law along with the Queens made an auspicious entry. Later, Raja Kumaras shared royal responsibilities. Rama and Sita became famed as Vishnu and Lakshmi.

Ayodhya Khanda

Considering Shri Rama’s eligibility for Ayodhya’s Yuvarajatva, King Dasharatha convenes a durbar meeting -King Dasharatha secures public approval for Rama’s Yuvarajatva-Dasharatha discusses the details of Rama’s Rajyabhisheka with Vasishtha and asks Rama to attend the Rajya sabha- Rama seeks his mother Devi Koushlya’s blessings and endears Lakshmana-Dasharatha and Vasishtha ask Rama and Sita to observe fasting before the celebrations of Yuvarajatva- Ayodhya public’s joy and pre-celebrations- Villianous Manthara gets upset on Rama’s Yuvarajatva and reaches Kaikeyi and provokes and poisons Kaikeyi’s mindset suggesting Rama’s Vana Vaasa and Bharata’s elevation as Yuvaraja- Fully poisoned by Mandhara, Kaikeyi enters ‘Kopa griha’- the symbolic Anger Chamber-King Dasharatha seeks to pacify her beloved queen Kaikeyi-Kaikeyi seeks to remind of Dasharatha’s promise of granting her of two boons at a battle as she saved him, demands Rama’s ‘vana vaasa’/ Bharata’s Rajyabhisheka-Dasharatha’s remorse at Kaikeyi’s undue demands even having admitted the boons and pleads with Kaikeyi not to insist but in vain - Dasharatha’s intense cryings and persistent pleadings with Kaikeyi but she argued in the name of dharma citing the tradition of truthfulness of Ikshvaku ancestors- Kaikeyi’s stubbornness to relent - Vashishta Maharshi’s intervention fails and Charioteer Sumantra asked for Rama’s arrival at the King’s Palace-Sumantra arrives at Rama’s palace while Rama and Lakshmana on the way to King’s Palace enjoying public’s joy at Rama’s elevation-Excellent preparations in the city for the celebrations by the following day- Rama witnessing heart broken Dasharatha and Kaikeyi’s rude intervention demanding Rama’s Vana Vaasa for fourteen years in prescribed dress code and of Bharat’s Kingship-Rama agrees to her terms and proceeds to Koushalya to break the news - Koushalya’s sudden and of tragic news leads to agony and standstill senselessness as Rama seeks to pacify-Lakshmana gets agitated at the turn of the events and so did Kousalya but Rama assuages their badly hurt as Rama explains that ‘pitru vaakya paripaalana’ ought to be his life’s motto and dharma.Rama asked Lakshmana to remove all the

preparatory materials like the vessels etc. meant for his Rajyabhisheka since that would be unwanted then-Reacting to remove the material for Rajyabhisheka, Lakshmana argued whether the decision was correct, but Rama once again reiterated as irrevocable - Devi Kousalya, reacting sharply about Rama's decisiveness to undergo vana vaasa resolves to follow him, and Rama invoked the argument of her preserving Pativrata and should not desert her husband-With great difficulty, Rama finally convinces Kousalya to let him leave for 'vana vaasa'and she relented finally.- As Rama left Kousalya with mutual anguish, the Public too was unaware of the tragic development, much less Devi Sita who was horrified- Devi pleads her accompanying Rama for the forest life -Rama dissuades Sita to accompany him for Vana Vaasa-Sita invokes her 'Paativrata Dharma' and insists- Devi Sita sobs heavily and Rama had to finally concede-Lakshmana too insists on accompanying Rama- latter agrees; Rama desires of offering charities- Sita Rama's charity to Vasishtha Kumara Sujyagjna and wife, brahmanas, brahmacharis, servants- Sita Rama Lakshmanas visit Kaikeyi's palace to meet Dasharatha as Nagara vaasis weep away -Sita Rama Lakshmanas approach Dasharatha with queens before vana vaasa; the latter swoons and recovers and embraces them and swoons again-Sumantra criticizes Kaikeyi as the latter justifies- Dasharatha instructs treasure to be sent along with Sumatra for initial phase of vana vaasa; Rama Lakshmanas dressed up in valkals as Vishtha rejects Sita wearing that dress- Dasharatha too rejects Sita wearing Valkava vastras even as Kaikeyi was unhappy, but Rama approves--Dasharatha breaks into cryings, Sumantra arrives with the chariot, Sita receives 'pati seva upadesha' from Kousalya, Rama Sita Lakshmanas bid farewell to all - Sita Rama Lakshmanas perform pradakshinas to Dasharatha and the mothers, Sita Rama Lakshmanas alight the chariot and the crowds get terribly agitated-As the unruly crowd was interrupting the Chariot several times, the citizens were crying away aloud shattering the skies, especially the women folk-King Dasharatha cries and swoons for Rama, distances from Kaikeyi's palace and shifts to Kousalya's-Maha Rani Kousalya's agony asDevi Sumitra assuages Kousalya's tormented psyche-Rama appeals to the Ayodhya public not to hurt Dasaratha or Bharata- the elders of the public insist on following Rama upto Tamasa river banks- Rama Sita Lakshmana's over night stay at Tamasa banks- they leave earliest unnoticed- public felt bad-Ayodhya elders and women got disturbed inability to see off Rama to the deeper forests crossing Tamasa- Ayodhya woman folk cry away Rama Sita Lakshmanas for further 'vana vaasa'- Public of Kosala Janapada throng at the Chariot carrying Ramas whoalso cross Veda shruti-Gomati-Skandika rivers- Ramas arrive at Shringavera pura on the banks of Ganga- stay overnight and Nishada Raja Guha welcomes them-Lakshmana - Guha feel and exchange expressions of sadness-Guha navigates Sita Rama Lakshmanas across Ganga- Rama bids farewell to the reluctant Sumantra- Sita's intense prayers to the Sacred Ganga- after crossing Ganga reach Vatsa desha for night halt- As Rama asks Lakshmana to return back to Ayodhya at least now but Lakshmana protests-Ramas reach Bharadvaja ashram and the Maharshi advises them to settle at Chitrakoota mountain - while they cross Yamuna from Prayaga- Sita prays to Yamuna- their overnight stay at otherside of Yamuna-Ramas reach Chitrakoota-Maharshi Valmiki at ashram- Maharshi teaches Lakshmana Vaastu Shastra- Sumantra reaches Ayodhya- 'aarta naadaas' by public and Dasharatha and queens-Sumantra conveys Shri Rama- Lakshmanas's messages to the parents-Condition of the Ayodhya public and at the state of Rama's distresses Dasharatha extremely- Anguish of Devi Kousalya sought to be assuaged by Sumatra-Kousalya's crying protests against Dasharatha-Regretful Dasharatha with folded hands and prostrations seeks pardon from Kousalya-Dasharatha's confession to Kousalya about his youthful blunder of killing a Muni Kumara -Having revealed details of the Muni hatya, the helpless cryings of his blind parents - Vriddha Muni's curse that Dasaratha would die in son's absence- Dasharatha -Pursuant to Dasharatha's death, his queens cried out, deathwise-praises and music followed-

Queens, Ministers and staff- and public vision the body as retained in oil vessels-Maharshis assemble with Purohita Vasishtha to decide on the successor Kingship-Vasishtha despatches messengers to Kaikeya kingdom to bring Bharata along with Shatrughna.- As messengers arrive at Bharata's place, the latter felt 'dussvapnas' early morning-Ayodhya's messengers arrive at Bharat's maternal uncle's palace, bring gifts and message to return-Bharata Shatrughnas arrive at Ayodhya and found the city as silent and listless!- Bharata reaches Kaikeyi palace and hears the news of his father's demise and Rama Sita Lakshmana 'vana vaasa' and Bharata's rajyaabhisheka!- The rattled up Bharata protests violently and detests- Kaikeyi's evil mindedness-Bharata's open protests against Kaikeyi-Bharata's 'shapatha' / swearing in the presence of Kousalya-Raja Dasharatha's 'antyeshti' / 'dahana samskaara'-Bharatha performs Dashartha's 'shraaddha karma' and 'maha daanaas'- collection of ashes and 'nimajjana'- 'daaha samskaara'-Shatrugna attacks the villainess Kujja, the servant maid of Kaikeyi, to senselessness and spares her death!Ministers propose Bharata's 'rajyabhisheka'- but the latter proposes only temporary authority as Shri Rama ought to be the real King-Bharata initiates the construction of comfortable 'Raja Marga' from Rivers Sarayu to banks of Ganga-As 'mangala vaadyas' were heard on a morning, Bharata felt uneasy and asked Vasishtha to come to Rajya sabha with Ministers and officials- Bharata disagrees with Vasishtha that kingship was Rama's birth right and only a passing solution now-Bharata's vana yatra and night halt at Shringaverapura -Nishaada Raja hosts Bharata's overnight stay before crossing Ganga the next day- Bharata and Nishada Raja exchange views of Rama's magnanimity-Nishada Raja extols about the nobility and devotion to Rama of Lakshmana-On hearing details of Rama Sita Lakshmanas, Bharata swooned down, Shatrugna and the mothers cried away, and persisted on the details of the threesome regarding their food and sleeping patterns-Guha showed the bed of 'kusha grass' by which Sita Ramas slept on that night and the 'valkala vastras' left behind-Bharata accompanied by sena, mothers, Munis and public arrives at Bharadvaja ashram-Bharata visits Bharadvaja 'ashram'- The Maharshi bestows Bharata and entire entourage including vast army a heavenly hospitality-Bharata introduces his three mothers and Bharadvaja blesses them and indicates the way to Chitrakoota- Bharata's Chitrakoota yatra described-Shri Rama shows the beauty and grandeur of Chitrakoota to Sita-Shri Rama displays the exquisiteness of River Mandakini to Sita-As the wild beasts and birds running astray of Chitrakoota, Lakshmana went up atop a shaala tree as an army was nearing and Lakshmana was angered-As Lakshmana saw Bharata approaching, he got angry but Rama cooled him down-Bharata and advance party located Rama's 'kuteera' and visited the details inside -Bharata Shatrughnas locate Rama, prostrate and crying- Shri Rama having enquired Bharata's welfare gave elaborate lessons of Kshatra Dharmas on his own- Rama asks Bharata the reason of his arrival as Bharata requests him to return and accept Kingship; but Rama refuses-Bharata requests Rama to reconsider Kingship and informs King Dasharath's sad demise-Rama-Sita-Lakshmanas cry away at father's death-offerings of tarpana and pinda daana - With Vasishtha ahead the three Devis arrive, all the sons prostrate the mothers and Vasishtha too- Bharata broaches about Rama's return & kingship -Bharata again pesters Rama to assume kingship-Shri Rama instructs Bharata to return to Ayodhya at once-Muni Jaabali supports Bharata and his argument that sounded spread of 'nastikata'-Rama asserts that karma and rebirth are the corner stones of 'Astikata'- Vasishtha traces the geneology of Ikshvaku Vamsha and asks to uphold its fame and assume Kingship as the eldest son of Dasharatha-Shri Rama reiterates that 'Pitru Agna' was paramount yet doubled edged that he should undergo vana vaasa and Bharata should rule for that period ! -As Bharata was not ready yet to return to Ayodhya, Shri Rama grants his 'charana paadukaas' and finally bid farewell to Bharata and the entourage-Bharata and the entourage reach back to Maharshi Bharadvaja's ashram and return to Ayodhya-On return to Ayodhyam Bharata realises the sad state of the city of Ayodhya-Bharata instals

Shri Rama 'Paadukaas' at Nandigrama and administers Ayodhya from there-All the Rishis of Chitra koota commenced leaving the place due to problems of Rakshasas-Sita Rama Lakshmanas too decided to leave Chitrakoota and proceeded to Maharshi Ashram of Atri and Maha Pativrata Anasuya-Devis Anasuya and Sita exchange views- Anasuya gives gifts to Sita- Sita describes her 'swayamvara'-Thus Devi Sita having accepted the gifts from Devi Anasuya reaches Shri Rama for overnight stay at Atri Maharshi Ashram for further journey.

and wedded to Sita ,Ravanaasura once again approaches Mareecha once again to seek the latter's help- Ravanaasura once again seeks the help of Mareecha to kidnap Devi Sita-'The self shaken up Mareecha appeals to Ravana to very kindly withdraw the plan in view of Rama's extraordinary mental acumen and physical energy-Mareecha explains his erstwhile experience of Vayavyastra and requests Ravana to pardon him-Mareecha seeks to further convince Ravanaasura as Mareecha entered having assumed the form of a Maya Harina or a feigned deer-Ravanaasura resents Mareecha's argumentative pattern and commands Mareecha to get involved in the mission of 'Sitaapaharana' while detailing the plan of abduction-Mareecha issues ultimate warning to the doom of Ravana and disaster of Lanka Kingdom-Rakshasa Mareecha forced by Ravanaasura to assume the deer form of glitter and attract Sita's attention-Even as Lakshmana doubted about the Maya Mriga, Sita was bent to secure it alive or dead and Rama had to yield to her intense wish proceeded with the chase, while entrusting responsibility to Lakshmana. chase.-Shri Rama kills Mareecha, no doubt, but the latter shouts for help in Rama's tone causing gitters to Sita-As expected, Lakshmana was taken aback by Sita's insinuations against him who was pressurised to reach Shri Rama-Ravanaasura approaches Devi Sita under Sadhu's garb , familiarises and mesmerises her-Devi Sita introduces herself as the daughter of King Janaka and the husband of the valiant Shri Rama and the cause of their arrival; Ravana proposes to Devi Sita as a co-wife and the latter reacts haughtily-Ravanaasura explains his own background and valor and Devi Sita ignores and discounts-Ravanaasura forcibly abducts Devi Sita who cries away helplessly but Maha Jataayu grudhra tries to intervene and seeks to help-Jataayu warns Ravanaasura to withdraw from the evil act of 'Sitaapaharana' - and otherwise be ready for encounter-Fierce battle between Jataayu and Ravanaasura but Ravana kills Jatayu-Thus Ravanaasura finally concludes 'Sitaapaharana' as Devi Sita was kept under vigilant custody-Rattled and shocked Devi Sita shouts being highly critical of Ravana and his heinous actions- As Devi Sita sought to drop down her jewellery and dress to notify Rama Lakshmanas, Ravana kept vigil by five monkeys, and at Lanka in antahpura by eight rakshasis -Ravanaasura takes Devi Sita to his antahpura and seeks to pressurise her to become his queen-Having suffered Ravana's entreaties, Sita intensified her thoughts on Shri Rama and praised him while angry Ravana instructed rakshasis to take Sita away to Ashoka Vatika and frighten her to surrender-Shri Rama having killed Mareecha returns while noticing bad omens gets concerned about Devi Sita- On a run back to the Ashram, Rama Lakshmanas were subject to innumerable kinds of doubts and reaching there were not able to see Devi Sita and got stunned and terrified- Rama Lakshmanas recalled the events before the latter left for Rama at the false shouts of the dying Mareecha and Rama was truly upset by Lakshmana's grave indiscretion-Shri Rama's deep distress at Devi Sita's disappearance- desperate search for her even addressing animals and vegetation around the ashram in frustration-Shri Rama and Lakshmanas got intensely frustrated with their extensive search for Devi Sita-Rama's anguish - his sustained efforts with Lakshmana- following Maya Mriga's southern direction- recognising fallen Sita's dried up flowers and ornaments- and signs of a recently fought battle!-Lakshmana seeks to cool down the unbelievable rage and anger and recounts the fundamenatal features of self restraint while getting ready to display his outstanding bravery in human like and Gods like battle!-Rama Lakshmanas witnessed the grievously hurt Maha Grudhra Jataayu who fought for Devi Sita being kidnapped Mahaasura Ravana the Lankeshwara-Shri Rama performs the 'dahana samskaara' of Jatayu -Nasty encounter with Athomukha and blind Rakshasi Kabandha who caught Rama Lakshmanas by its long and surrounding arms within a huge embrace seeking to eat their flesh-By the enormous force of their sheer grit and decisiveness and of mutual consultations, Rama Lakshmanas severed both the mighty shoulders of Kabandha-Tormented by Sthula Rishi, Karbandha got 'vikrita rupa' but he performed tapsya to Brahma for deerghaayu, attacked Indra and vajraayudha's hit raised his stomach over body, now relieved by Rama Lakshmanas - As Kabandha Rakshas's mortal remains secured 'daah samskara' by Rama Lakshmanas, his celestial form reveals details of Ravana vs Sita and advises Rama's friendship with the exiled Vaanara King Sugriva -Kabandha in his celestial form showed the way to Rishyamooka Parvata and Pampa Sarovara, as also of Matanga Muni Ashrama-Rama Lakshmanas proceed towards Matanga Vana and meet Tapasvini Shabari awaiting Shri Rama Lakshmanas all along her life with indefinable devotion.-Having witnessed the glorious departure of Maha Yogini to Bliss, Rama Lakshmanas proceeded along with Pampasarovara in their 'Sitaanveshana'towards Gandhamanana Mountain and meet Sugriva.

Kishkindha:

On reaching Pampa Sarovara Rama was excited at its natural grandeur especially Sita's absence,Lakshmana solaces- as they approached Rishyamooka, Vanaras and Sugriva. As Sugriva and follower vaanaraas were still wondering, Hanuman felt convinced and confident and directed Shri Rama Lakshmanas to approach their head Sugriva the fugitive King of Vaanaras.Hanuman reached Rama Lakshmanas in a Tapasvi form, complemented Rama Lakshmanaas by their appearance as Hanuman was pleased; Lakshmana briefed Hanuman about their purpose of 'Sitaanveshana' and seeking Sugriva's close friendship and active assistance- Hanuman's assurance for unswerving and dutiful cooperation. Firm establishment of Agni Saakshi Friendship of Shri Rama and Sugriva and Shri Rama vows to kill Vaali to pave the way to Sugriva for unopposed Kingship of Vaanara Rajya .As Sugriva showed golden ornaments secured by his followers as Devi Sita threw away down from Ravana's donkey's chariot vimana, Rama readily recognised, cried away and got intensified up with anguish. As Shri Rama expressed his anguish and anger too, Sugriva seeks to assuage Rama's inner feelings and assures 'karya siddhi' finally; reciprocatively Rama assures Sugriva to regain his kingdom and wife too! Rama assures help in killing Vaali and enquires of Sugriva about the details of their mutual enmity.Sugriva then provides an account of the root causes of his antagonism with his elder brother. As Sugriva recounted as to how Vaali displayed his vengeance against him,Sugriva describes Vaali's invincibility, his extermination of Daitya Dundhubhi,throwing off his dead body off to Matanaga Muni, curse of barring entry of Rishyamooka-Rama's test of throwing off Dundubhi's skeleton. Shri Rama's feat of destroying Seven Taala Trees in a row- Sugriva's challenge to Vaali but gets beaten as Sugriva runs to Rishyamooka- Sugriva vilaapa- Rama explains the problem of Vaali Sugriva identity.Much unlike Sugriva got thrashed by Vaali last time, the party of Rama-Sugriva party proceeded again, enjoyed Prakriti Soundarya back to Kishkindha and secures blessings from Sapta Janaashrama Muni.Fully backed by Shri Rama's confident assurances of victory, Sugriva challenged Vaali for a repeat encounter of 'dwandva yuddha' amid thunderous shoutings.Enraged by the repetitive challenges echoing the 'Rani Vaasa', Vaali got ready for the battle but Tara Devi entreated Vaali for a truce of mutual peace, friendship with Rama and 'yuva rajatva' to Sugriva.Ignoring away Devi Tara's earnest appeals for amity with Sugrivas-Ramas, haughty Vaali resorts to battle with Sugriva, gets grievously hurt by Rama baana and succumbs to earth.Falling before death, Vaali heavily criticizes Rama for his stealthiness, undeserved glory, falsity, and sheer selfishness colliding with Sugriva only to recover Devi Sita, which he too could have with bravery. Shri Rama, having let Vaali steam off his anguish from his deadly fall, replies point by point and fully justifying action in releasing his frightful arrow, yet with sympathy.Vaali calls Devi Tara and Angada Kumara near to his death bed cryingly and Devi Tara's 'vilaapa'.Hanuman seeks to assuage Devi Tara's extreme distress while the latter declared her intention of 'Sati Saha Gamana'. Vaali terminates his life after conveying his death bed wishes about Sugriva and Angada.With Tara's the unbearable distress, Vaali laid down his life. Realising anguish of Tara Devi, Sugriva reacts severely and requests Shri Rama to allow him to die while Tara too requests so- Rama seeks to assuage them. Rama Lakshmanas pacify Sugriva, Tara, and Angada- Vaali's 'dahana samskara/ jalaanjali' by Angada. Hanuman requests Rama Lakshmanas to witness Rajyaabhishekas of Sugriva and Angada, Rama assents and blesses but not by entering Kishkindha. Rama Lakshmana's dialogues at their of Prasavana Giri Cave. Shri Rama describes to Lakshmana about the features of Varsha Ritu. Hanuman prevails on Sugriva to initiate action for Sitaanveshana even before Rama's reminder and instruct Neela Vaanara to assemble the Vanara soldiers to group together. Sharad Ritu Varnana- Shri Rama instructs Lakshmana to reach King Sugriva. Lakshmana proceeds to Sugriva's Rajya Bhavana at Kishkindha with anger yet restrained by Rama's convincing, meets Angada who in turn seeks Sugriva to somehow pacify. Hanuman sincerely advises Sugriva to withstand Lakshmana's anger besides consolidate action towards 'Sitaanveshana'. Even admiring Kishkindha's beauty, Lakshmana seeks to enter Sugriva's Inner Chamber by resounding his dhanush and the frightened Sugriva advises Tara's help to cool him down convincingly even before his appearance. Sugriva faces the wrath of Lakshmana and Tara continues to soothe Lakshmana by her tactical talks. Thus Tara managed the anger of Lakshmana convincingly and praised of Rama and his stature vis-à-vis that of Sugriva- Sugriva expresses of Rama's magnificence and his mere supplementary assistance. Sugriva instructs consolidating Vanara Sena and proceeds to Kishkindha and inform compliance to him. Lakshmana returns to Rama as accompanied by Sugriva as he was despatched to ascertain as to why Sugriva did not action for Sitanveshana yet! As Shri Rama had sincerely thanked the efforts in mobilising an ocean like Vanara Sena to fight his battle against Ravana, the grateful Sugriva returns back for further action. Now that the full backing of Vanara Sena along with enthused dedication of 'Swami Karya', Rama instructed Sugriva to take off the efforts of 'Sitaanveshana' in the eastern direction. Sugriva as totally absorbed in the singular task of 'Sitanveshana' and having already despatched one force of Vanaraas to 'purva disha' now forwards another batch to 'dakshina disha'. Sugriva who despatched another strong contingent of Vanara Warriors to the southern direction, now commissions a batch to the Western Side along with Sushena explaining probable areas for 'Sitanveshana'. Sugriva explains the significance of the northern direction for Sitanveshana under the leadership of Shatabali of several 'vaanara veeras'. As Sugriva despatches the Vanara Sena to the Southern direction, under the command of Yuva Raja Angada, Shri Rama gives his ring to Hanuman to possibly show to Sita Devi to recognise and trust him. While despatching the four directional Vaanara Sena, the text of Sugriva's encouraging remarks were as follows- King Sugriva explains to Shri Rama of his own escapades of 'Bhu Bhramana' and hence his vast knowledge and memories of destinations, parvatas, oceans, rivers and the geographical detailings! Vaanara Sena as that Sugriva organised to the north-west and eastern sectors for 'Sitanveshana' had returned disappointed with negative results; but from the southern sector were awaited still. Angada seeks to revive the fallen hopes of 'Sitanveshana' of the dakshina vaanara sena, but soon after the tired hungry sena sights a celestial tree-sarovara and bhavana of a Tapasvini whom Hanuman contacts. As Hanuman enquires of the 'vridha tapasvini', she displays her 'bhavan', asks about Vanara Sena and their purpose, invites them for bhojan, reveals her identity, and facilitates them towards the Sea shores. As the prescribed time limit for return to Sugriva was over, Angada and other Vaanara Veeras got ready for 'praana tyaga' but clever Hanuman adopted 'bheda -neeti' or of divided opinion saving them all! Angada- having asserted of Sugriva's dubious nature and selfishness while the task of 'Sitaanveshana' was due to Lakshmana's anger- thus gets readied for 'praayopavesha' along with his fellow vaanaras. Gridhra Raja Sampati arrives and frightens Vanaras initially but on hearing about the noble deed of 'Sitaanveshana' makes friends - Sampati then hears of Ravana's killing of Jatayu, his younger brother. Angada places the badly hurt body of Sampati from the mountain top and describes the details of Jatayu as killed by Ravanaasura- Rama Sugriva friendship- Vaali's death- and his 'aamarana upavaasa'. Sampati informs the Vanara Veeras as to how his wings were burnt, confirms Ravana-Sita's place details-and performs jalanjali to his brother Jatayu since known from Vanaras of his passing away. Sampati conveys to the Vanara Sena Yoddhas of what his son Supaarshvya informed of Devi Sita and Ravana at Lanka. Sampati's interacts with his preceptor 'Nishakara Rishi' and explains as to how the wings of both his and his brother Jatayu's wings were burnt in a competition with Surya in the latter's triloka parikrama! Nishakara Muni readily sympathises and wishes recovery to Sampati but instructs him to contribute in the context of Shri Rama Vijaya Karya all his life. Sampati eventually recovers fresh wings and enthuses Vanara Veeras to proceed to the farther South and step forward to Lanka. With great excitement and drive, especially fired up by Sampati, the vast vaanara sena pushed forward to the Sea bed; then Angada asked the select Yoddhas to express their individual abilities to cross the Sea. As Angada asked select Vanara yoddhas of their ability to cross and return, individual responses were heard- then Jambavan recommends Veera Hanuman for this impossible and daring act. Jambavan along with Angada approaches Anjaneya, recalls the background of the latter's birth and past glories, glorifying him up with extraordinary capabilities, while preparing him to cross the Maha Samudra. As Hanuman was enthused and readied to cross the Maha Sagara, he dashed forward to Mahendra Parvata and climbed it with ease.

Sundara

Veera Hanuman leaps off the Ocean towards Ravana's Lanka, gets welcomed on way by Mainaka, encounters Surasa and subdues, kills Simhika, and enjoys the aerial view of Lanka-Description of Lankapuri's beauty, thoughts about the size in which he should enter the interiors of the city and on the description Chandrodaya-Hanuman sought to enter, Rakshasi Nishachari is encountered, he subdues her seriously; she recalls Brahma's warning that once a Vanara gives a hit to her, then Lanka gets its doom and lets him in! Then Hanuman enters Ravana's 'antahpura' comprising many palaces but gets disappointed. Hanuman then enters the 'antahpura' or the interior palaces of Ravana'sura systematically but gets disappointed with no sign and indication of Devi Sita. Hanuman then extended the scope of search for Devi Sita in Ravana's own palace, besides at the houses of his follower Rakshasas. Description of Ravana Bhavana viz. Pushpaka Vimana- Hanuman witnesses the inside out of the Pushpaka Vimana - indeed it was surfeit with Sundara Kanyas- In the process of 'Devi Sitaanveshana' in the Pushpaka Vimana in Ravana's residence, Hanuman witnessed countless 'strees' of youthful charm being playful inside; why had Ravana forcefully abducted Sita, despite his reputation of never forcing a woman but willingly married! In the process of searching for Devi Sita, Hanuman was confused by seeing Devi Mandodari to Devi Sita! Hanuman on seeing Mandori, took time self assure about Devi Sita, continued the search even while self introspecting of his own honesty in the atmosphere of food-dance and lust; yet dismissed such thoughts- Hanuman in his remote thoughts wondered and was even concerned of Devi - Sita's very existence but quickly recovered from such apprehensions resumed 'Sitanveshana' yet again with confidence and belief! Despite his sincere efforts of finding Devi Sita, the indications were slimmed and might even return disappointed. Yet, Sampati assured and visited 'Ashoka Vaatika' - While admiring Ashoka Vaatika's prakriti soundarya, Hanuman mused as to how Devi Sita would be happy as she was stated to be an admirer of Prakriti Soundarya- Hanuman yet in his miniature form finally visioned Devi Sita near a 'Chaitya Praasaada Mandira' and identified her and felt ecstatic- Hanuman having finally ensured that Devi Sita was visioned, felt that as to why she, an outstanding Pativrata, why and how Ravana has been disgusting, yet sad.- Hanuman was no doubt happy to see Devi Sita most closely with sympathy, yet contrarily was repulsed with hatred at the sight of the

Rakshasa stree encircling her- Ravana'sura along with his beloved females enters Ashoka Vatika and the spot where Devi Sita was being guarded as seen by Anjaneya in his miniature form-Even with a single nasty and desolate glance of the detestable Ravana'sura, Devi Sita was drowned in gloom-fear-and apprehension as noticed by Hanuman-Ravana then addresses Devi Sita opening his heart fancying her, praises her origin, charm and conduct, and seeks to convince her to discard fear complex, to be sympathetic to him, and wait for her consent- Sita emboldens herself and replies highlighting Ravana's wretched manner of abducting her and of his features of cruelty, selfishness, and ego; mocks his ability and readiness to face hero Rama-As Sita heckled Ravana's claim of heroism and his stealthy timidity, asserted her 'pativratya', and challenged him to face Rama- as Ravana threatened her granting three months to change or get killed-Select Rakshasis of learning like Ekajata-Harijata-Vikata and Durmukhi extoll the qualities of bravery of Ravana'sura while seeking to convincingly pressurise Devi Sita to accept the offer of Prime Queenship-While a few of enlightened Rakshasis sought to convince Devi Sita to wed Ravana, the rest of the cruel lot threatened her to death and fancy to taste her flesh,cook it with spices, and eat with wine and dance! Totally rattled by the perilous intimidation of the Rakshasis to nearly kill her and celebrate, Devi Sita nearly resorted to 'praana tyaga' especially cursing her fate still disabling her from Shri Rama darshana- Even as the cruelmost Rakshasis surrounded Devi Sita to attack, the eldest of them named Trijata screamed from her ominous dream and described tragic forebodes of 'Lanka Vinaashana' too soon-Despite Trijata's 'dussvapna' foreboding shouts of disasters about Ravana and Lanka Rajya, Devi Sita continued to cry shell shocked; however gradually recovered due to her own forevisions of auspiciousness-Hanuman witnessed series of Ravana's sweet offers to wed Sita, her no-nonsense reaction, his three month notice, violent threats of Rakshasis, Trijata's forebodings, now desires to appear before her, but how!Veera Hanuman sings Shri Rama Katha exclusively for Devi Sita but she wonders its genuineness!Then Hanuman appears before Devi Sita in his own form and conveys about Shri Rama's welfare, his arrival here, and assures Rama's arrival soon-Devi Sita still unconvinced fully about Hanuman's genuineness, he describes Rama's physical features and mental acumen and bravery, pleading his own authenticity-Devi Sita finally concedes Hanuman's genuineness- then he describes 'guna ganaas', how Rama missed her, Sugriva's help repaying Rama's help by killing Vaali- Sampati's guidance to reach her-Hanuman bestows Shri Rama's finger ring toDevi Sita as a memory refresher- the highly excited Devi Sita falls back to her memory screen, as Hanuman assures Rama's arrival too soon!As Devi Sita seeks Hanuman to hasten Shri Rama's arrival at Lanka, Hanuman suggests carrying her and reach Rama swiftly, but she declines giving reasons, especially stressing Rama's invincibility- Before handing over her 'choodaamani' to Hanuman, Devi Sita recalled how Rama expressed his concern by using 'brahmaastra' on a crow- Indra's son- pestered her; the crow went from pillar to post and fell at Rama's feet; though Rama pardoned, still had to block any crows's vision of left eye ever since!Having taken the possession of precious Sita 'Choodaamani' as a proof of meeting her, Hanuman felt elated to display his grit, devotion and resolution to all concerned, especially for the delight of Rama!Devi Sita reiterated what Anjaneya should convey to Rama about her life's threats while handing over hair clip to Shri Rama; Hanuman reiterates his reaching Rama's soonest.-Veera Hanuman devastates Ashoka Vaatika- on witnessing this, the frightened Rakshasis surrounding Devi Sita ran away to Ravana'sura stating some Celestial Being had reached at the Ashoka Vaatika to destroy it- Ravana'sura on learning of a stranger devastating Pramadaavana,despatches a strong regiment of his army of well trained eight thousand rakshasa force named Kinkaras-Mahabali Vayu Putra then devastates 'Chityapraasada'- the Rakshasa Kuladevatashtana and the rakshasas around it- Veeranjaneya smashes the expertise of 'baana-prayoga' of the Maha Rakshasa Jambumali, as Ravana'sura decided to utilise the extraordinary skills of archery of the Prahasta Putra to pull down the enemy-As Hanuman successfully killed Kinkaras and Jambumali and demolished Pramadaavana and Chatya Praasada along with inmates,enraged Ravana instructed the mighty sons of his Ministers to face Hanuman- With successive deaths of his select Rakshasa Veeras, Ravana'sura had wondered that even one Vanara of Hanuman demoralised him as a wake up call and despatched his five Senapatis who too were killed!Anxiously awaiting Hanuman's destruction by the Five Senapatis and army forces, Ravana got negative messages.As he was dismayed, his son Akshaya Kumara, well versed in war tactics, then too his turn-Shattered with putra shoka and humiliation, Ravana finally asked Indrajit to use his brahmastra to end up the menace of Hanuman and save the Rakshasa Samrajya and his personal prestige and fame at stake!Veera Hanuman was no doubt impressed by Ravasasura's accomplishments and his own personalised feelings-Pretending as bounded by Indrajit's Brahmastra, though Brahma granted his boon, Human faced Ravana whose Minister asked him why he visited Lanka; he confirmed, he was Shri Rama's messenger-Addressing Ravana,Veera Hanuman detailed Shri Rama's 'Prabhava' and warned that if Devi Sita were in any way hurt, that would be the instant final doom of Ravana and Lanka; Ravana went mad with fury-Infuriated by Hanuman's insinuations of Ravana's record of failures and praising Rama's successes, Ravana orders the vanara be killed-Vibhishana pleads against killing a messenger, as Ravana heeds-As Vibhishana appealed, Ravana consents to burn Hanuman's tail to display the blazings to Lanka's public. As Rakshasis conveyed,Sita prays to Agni to lessen the heat.Hanuman starts the revenge-Hanuman's vengeful 'Lanka Dahana and Vidhvamasha' as the Rakshasas were shocked wonderstruck whether he was of Rudra Swarupa or Rama Bhakta!Veera Anjaneya's successful 'Lanka Dahana' but concerned of Devi Sita's safety- her 'punardarshana'-Hanuman reassuring Devi Sita of soonest arrival of Rama Lakshmanas, jumped off from Arishta Parvata to cross the Maha Sagara as vanara pramukhas were waiting anxiously-As Vayu Putra dashed through thick sky high clouds to return to the ever awaiting Vanara yoddhas, the latter were ever concerned, but his return overjoyed them especially Angada and Jambavan-On his victorious return from Ravana's Lankapuri, Hanuman briefly detailed the happenings, especially Devi Sita darshana, killing spree of Rakshasas, challenge to Ravana, burning his tail and Lanka dhvamsa-Veeranjaneya makes a fervent appeal Vaanaraveeraslike Jambavaan-Angada-Neela- or Ashvini Kumara Putras Mainda- Dvididaas to relieve Devi Sita from Ravana's clutches for her inhuman harassment- As Hanuman returned successfully, Angada suggested another collective attack, destroy Ravana and others, bring Devi Sita back, but Jambavan advised to return and report back only!On return to Kishkindha vaanara veeras plundred Madhuvana of fresh sweet fruits and destroyed it. The incharge Vanara Dadhimukha - Sugriva's uncle - was beaten in return-Dadhimukha and staff ran away to Sugriva for protection; he wondered if south bound Vanara Sena with Angada and Hanuman was returning with success!On Sugriva's instruction, dakshina sena reached reporting success-and of Devi Sita's safety-Virananjaneya details the actual status of Devi Sita's physical and psychological condition to Shri Rama in the presence of Lakshmana Sugrivas- Reacting to Hanuman's handing over Devi Sita's 'choodaamani' Shgri Rama got worked up with his sweet memories, showing anxiety to hear what was her message to him-Hanuman detailed her actual status and parting appeal still concerned of urgent action to save her very life!

As Shri Rama heard Hanuman's Report of Devi Sita's darshana, her desperation, killings of rakshasa veeras and Lanka dahana, he hugged him at the success and got concerned of reaching Lanka for action.

As Shri Rama heard about Vira Hanuma's memorable success as he was truly impressed and affirmed that none indeed of none could have ever possibly achieved this kind of achievement on earth, excepting Garuda and Vayu Deva. He has accomplished a duty for his master in this manner and with thunderous success being of the prime rank. Further, a follower who is no doubt faithful and trustworthy is stated as a sincere achiever of medium range while those sevakas who no doubt are disciplined and sincere are the third rank ordinary followers. Now I am not in a position to a gift worthy of awarding yet he had truly to him yet truly worthy of offering him yet bestowed to me a life extender and anguish pacifier.I can only offer him an invaluable and heart to heart embrace. Then Shti Rama addressed the Vanara Sena and prominent personalities of distinction: dear comrades! Doubtless, Hero Hanuman had accomplished 'karya siddhi' just for my sake, but my enthusiasm is getting blunted right now as to how -- best to cross the Maha Samudra and reach the other side of the shores and Devi Sita's vey life breathing! What indeed could really be the parctical wayforward and reach the other side! Thus Shri Rama became terribly penitent for reaching the other side of the hundred yojana distance of the Maha Sagara!

As Shri Rama was concerned about the ways and means of crossing the Maha Sumudra, Sugriva addressed Shri Rama thus: ‘Veeravara! Why are you getting worked up like normal humans being an extraordinary personality of name and fame. Kindly do not get concerned for normal hurdles. Persons of ingratitude are certainly not with you and as such it is for them to worry about and seek solutions. Now the gigantic task of ‘Sitanveshana’ had been accomplished and we are now only to find solution for reaching Lanka to release Devi Sita. Raghu kulabhushana! You are a ‘buddhiman- shastra jnaana vichaara kushala’, and being such an outstanding personality of your achievements should not be a prey to ‘prakrita buddhi’ as of a common human being. Rest assured that my soldiers with their sharp and long nail and teeth of grit, would doubtless cross the ‘maha sagara’ and attack the rakshasas. nirutsāhasya dīnasya śokaparyākulātmanah, sarvārthā vyavasīdanti vyasanam cādhigacchati/ Those Males who lack interest, keenness, and initiative invariably end up in failures and would have to face further obstacles. Contrarily, our Vaanara sena has the inborn passion and fervor. They are ever prepared to jump into flames and most assuredly cross the ocean, demolish Ravana and Lanka with all its mighty and ‘mayaavi rakshasis’ and return with laurels along with Devi Sita. This should truly please you. Let us therefore plan to build a bridge right across the ‘varuna sthaana’ samudra and cross over with you in the lead like Indra followed by Devas to demolish Ravana like asuras and declare freedom from asuras once for all. setubaddhaḥ samudre ca yāval laṅkā samīpataḥ, sarvaṁ tīrṇam ca vai sainyaṁ jitam ity upadhāryatām ime hi samare śūrā harayaḥ kāmārūpiṇaḥ/ Let us therefore construct a bridge right across the maha samudra to reach near Lankapuri and assure success as the Vanara sena is gifted to change their svarupas as they please and attack any number of asuras by displaying their valour and speed. tad alaṁ viklavā buddhī rājan sarvārthanāśanī, puruṣasya hi loke ’smiñ śokaḥ śauryāpakarṣanaḥ/ yat tu kāryaṁ manuṣyeṇa sauṇḍīryam avalambatā, śūrāṇāṁ hi manuṣyāṇāṁ tvadvidhānām mahātmanām, vinaṣṭe vā pranaṣṭe vā śokaḥ sarvārthanāśanaḥ/ Shri Rama Maha Raja! Prithvi Nadha! Now, as the action for advancing is getting materialised it would be wasteful to worry about but now is the time to get fuming with anger against the enemies. As you are well aware, kshatriyas as a race once confronted against enemies break in to frenzy and they always succeed. Now, kindly be associated with us and help us as to how to cross the ocean as you indeed have a sharp intellect. As 'buddhimaan' Sugriva thus addressed Shri Rama never to get concerned with the task of setu bandhana but trust his own unchallenged valor and encourage him with his own 'marga darshaka pratibha' as his outstanding vanara sena are ever ready to bear the brunt with uncommon gusto and zest, Shri Rama addressed Veera Hanuman thus: Vanara Veera! you had already visited Lanka and are fully aware of the details; tell me what was the distance from one dwara durga to another. Then Hanuman detailed as follows: 'Bhagavan Shri Rama! I shall give you the details as to how Lankapuri's safety was ensured, how the rakshasa sena's safety was ensured, what kind of rakshasa sena was the impact of the love and admiration for Ravana's dedication and devotion from them, what kind of prosperity that the public of Lankapuri enjoyed, how dreadful was the Maha Samudra and its shores, how many foot soldiers were posted there on the shores, how many vahanas were engaged of those foot soldiers on the shores, etc. Then Hanuman started the detailing: Rama prabho! Lankapuri is fully contented with pleasures of life, several elephants, chariots, and each and every citizen lives with longevity as they do not understand what are physical illnesses and threats to life. The city has huge, strong, four entry gates, with sturdy windows yet impossible to break mountain boulders or mantrik arrows even by invoking Indradi Devas and even Brahma. The purpose of outside vision from the wonderfully trained foot soldiers, calvary, elephantry, charioteers and so on, while the ably flying soldiers send signals of even far distant approaches of the enemies and are thus truly impregnable. The ‘dwaraas’ as constructed by raakshasa veeras and rakshasa architects apart, there are thousands of ‘shataghniyaas’ or of ‘loha gadaas’ or iron maces of four feet breadth ever ready to fire enemy attacks fully loaded to resist and bring it down to ashes in a ‘truti’ of time almost instantly. Each of the ‘dwaaraas’ or the exit-entry high gates, there are ‘kandakaas’ or of bottomless deep waters with ‘maha matsyas’ like whales, sharks and huge crocodiles floating and instantly disappearing. At the same time there are four entry-exit gates equipped with massive wooden bridges of automatic provision to be hoisted and folded down to enter and exit. As and when ‘shatrusena’ seeks to attack and enter, countless precautions are thus ready to defend and reattack by throwing back in to the deep waters. Swayam prakṛtisampanno yuyutsū rāma rāvaṇaḥ, utthitāś cāpramattaś ca balānām anudarśane/ laṅkā purī nirālambā devadurgā bhayāvahā, nādeyaṁ pārvataṁ vanyaṁ kṛtrimaṁ ca caturvidham/ sthitā pāre samudrasya dūrapārasya rāghava, naupathāś cāpi nāsty atra nirādeśāś ca sarvataḥ/ Raghunadha! Ravanaasura himself keeps his poise while defending or attacking as he keeps reviewing the readiness of his sena always. Thus as of now, Lanka is just not possible to attack even by Devas; having been protected naturally too by mountains and the maha dakshina samudra Ravanaasura had made it impregnable further. ayutaṁ rakṣasām atra paścimadvāram āśritaṁ, śūlahastā durādharṣāḥ sarve khaḍgāgrayodhinaḥ/ niyutaṁ rakṣasām atra dakṣiṇadvāram āśritaṁ, caturaṅgeṇa sainyena yodhās tatrāpy anuttamāḥ/ prayutaṁ rakṣasām atra pūrvadvāram samāśritaṁ, carmakhaḍgadharāḥ sarve tathā sarvāstrakovidāḥ/ Behind Lanapuri’s eastern gate there is ten thousand rakshasa ‘nivaasa’, each of them are ready to defend and attack. On the southern gate there is a ‘chaturanga sena’ of a lakh strength. On the western front the strength is ten times more. arbudaṁ rakṣasām atra uttaradvāram āśritaṁ, rathinaś cāśvavāhāś ca kulaputrāḥ supūjitāḥ/ śataṁ śatasahasrāṇām madhyamaṁ gulmaṁ āśritaṁ, yātudhānā durādharṣāḥ sāgrakoṭīś ca rakṣasām/ te mayā samkramā bhagnāḥ parikhāś cāvapūritāḥ, dagdhā ca nagarī laṅkā prākārāś cāvasāditāḥ/ yena kena tu mārgeṇa tarāma varuṇālayam, hateti nagarī laṅkāṁ vānarair avadhāryatām/ Now the northern dwaara is truly impenetrable as being safeguarded by an arbuda or ten crore rakshasa yoddhas either mounted by excellently trained horses or chariots. Moreover the central Lanapuri is the stronghold of Maha Rakshasa Sena with countless Rakshasa Sena of over a crore in reserve. But, I was still able to overcome the obstacles while appropriately adjusting my physical form from diminutive to gigantic stature, smashed the ‘praanganaas’ and burnt off some one quarter of Lanapuri. We among the ‘maha vaanara sena’ too do possess the skill and wherewithall to smash down likewise some how. aṅgado dvivido maindo jāmbavān panaso nalaḥ, nīlaḥ senāpatiś caiva balaśeṣeṇa kiṁ tava/ plavamānā hi gatvā tām rāvaṇasya mahāpurīm, saprakārām sabhavanām ānayaṣyanti maithilīm/ evam ājñāpaya kṣiprām balānām sarvasaṁgraham, muhūrtena tu yuktena prasthānam abhirocaya/ Shatru bhayankara Shri Rama! The vaanara sena under the commande of King Sugriva is blessed with maha veeraas like Angada, Dvividha, Mainda, Jambavan, Panasa, Nala, and Senapati Neela would suffice to bring you laurels as mere illustrations, apart from the ‘apaara vaanara sena. Raghu Nandana! Angadaadi maha vaanaras could fly and on reaching Lanapuri could smash down the protective hills, forests, Lanka dwaras, living residences and the so called Rakshasa veeraas and their kith and kin, and finally rescue Devi Sita safe. In view of all these facts and figures may I assure you that soon enough, let an auspicious time be declared to initiate the duty of ‘Setu bandhana’ and soon thereafter cross the bridge and attack.

As Veera Anjanaputra narrated the detailed description of the pramukha dwaaraass, how best they are safeguarded by the maha rakshasas and the kind direct and constant supervision of Ravama himself and the ever preparedness of Lanka, Shri Rama realised the mental acumen and sharp memory to readily digest the details and exclaimed: Hanuman! The way in which the details were rolled off was amazing and now you have prepared me arousing my emotions to destroy Lankapuri, Ravana and associates. Sugriva! You may even right away decide and declare the auspicious departure at this very midday time as Surya Deva is at his peak; Ravana had kidnapped Devi Sita and indeed where and whither he could evade my uprooting him any farther! Now the Utaaraphalgunā Nakshatra is prevalent and tomorrow Chandra and Hasta Nakshatra would be in union; abhijit muhurta at noon is assured for our digvijaya yatra should be announced now. I am confident that our travel now as per the 'shubha suuchanas' and positive forebodings is excellent for 'Sitaavimochana' and 'Ravana vadha'. Besides, my right eye vision is repetitively trembling and shaking and this is yet another indication of my strong conviction and confidence. On hearing Shri Rama's declaration, Sugriva having respectfully looked at Rama and Lakshmanas and instructed his Senapati Neela who to lead the Maha Vaanara Sena forthwith with speed to the Madhu Vana replete with fragrant flowers and sweet fruits to enjoy but taking care of the trees in an orderly manner; he further instructed to ensure that no enemy elements of Ravana'sura spying the proceedings as they might not be following and the vanara sena to be safeguarded from the enemy attacks from the rear side too. Another precautionary note that King Sugriva alerted to Neela Senapati was to ensure that only youthful vanaras with proven bravery ready even to sacrifice their lives but certainly not baala- vriddha-durbala-vanaras be eliminated as Vanara Rakshasa samgrama was ferocious and no vanara soldier should run back as any such retreats be killed by the co vanara veeras. Sugriva further instructed Neela to lead the ocean like Mahabali Kapisena, while Mahabali 'Gavaya' with his mountainous physique and 'Gavaaksha' with his bull like physique and ferocity too should be in the lead too. May Vaanara shiromani ' Gandhamaadana' be on the left side, he himself in the center seated on Hanuman's shoulder and Lakshmana on the shoulders of Vaanara Yuvaraja; Riksha Raja 'Jambavan', and Vanara pramukhas 'Sushena' and 'Vegadarsha' on the rear side'. Thereafter Rama Lakshmana Sugriva having finalised the order of placement emerged out of the Royal Cave of Sugriva. Then Sugriva led Rama Lakshmana to the southern side of the kishkindha Mountain with Shri Rama in the lead as per the placement of the maha vaanarsa sena as instructed by the Supreme commander Shri Rama. Then, thousands, lakhs and crores of Maha Vaanara Sena moved ahead with Shri Rama himself in the lead. The over excited Sena had on the way made a halt with the kind approval of the Leaders concerned at the Madhuvana jostling, jumping, embracing each other with exuberant spirits had a hearty break meal and drink of festival excitement of sweet fruits and juices. As this was all being experienced before Shri Rama Himself, they made 'simha garjanas' with resounding animated exhilaration: Ravano no nihantavyah sarvecha rajaneecharaah! Or 'Ravana ought to be killed, all Nishacharas be destroyed'! Ahead of the Vanara mighty Procession, Rishabha- Neela- Kumuda were setting the pathway for the crores of Vanara Veeras to pass by. In the central lead were Sugriva, Rama-Lakshmana as encircled by huge and mighty body guards. Shatabali naamaka Maha Vaanara Yoddha with ten crore vanaraas was protecting the leaders. There behind were the leaders Kesari and Panasa were moving forward in the southern portion, as Gaja and Arka in the left side western portion. Sushena and Jambavan in the southern side were surrounded by crores of Vanara Veeras too. Further Darimukha-Prasagjna, Jambha and Rabhasa were moving all around alerting the Maha Vanara Sena Samudra. On the way, the Maha Sena passed through several sarovaras full of lotuses in full bloom but under instructions from Rama refrained to enter therein, even as the thunderous reverberations of sloganeering was unstoppable. Then as Angada on whose shoulders Lakshmana was seated noted several 'shubha sanketass' addressed Shri Rama in rather low voice: ' Raghunandana! I notice several auspicious 'shakunas' or foreboding signs on earth and sky as the fulfillment of your 'karyasiddhi'. Most certainly 'Ravana samhara, Devi Sita prapti and Samrudhha Ayodhya Punaraagamana' are round the corner. Kindly note how cool, mild, happy winds are in the air. All the directions are proactive. Surya Deva appears mild. Bhrgunandana Shukra too is looking bright behind you. Saptarshi Samudaya and Dhruvatara too are prominently visible as though these are all making a parikrama around you!

[Vishleshana on Surya- Chandra-Shukraadi Grahas-Sapta Rishi Mandala- Dhruvas

It is said that there might be thousands of rays of Sun, but the important ones are only seven, representing Seven Planets, Viz. Sun, Moon, Mars, Mercury, Jupiter, Venus, and Saturn. Moon travels faster than Sun. The distance between Sun and Moon is 100,000 yojanas (800,000 miles). In two lunar fortnights, Moon passes through a period of a Samvatsara or a year. In two and quarter days, Moon passes through a month of the Sun, or in one day, it passes through a fortnight of the Sun. Hence, the divergence of Solar and Lunar calculations and Calendars. As the Moon is waxing, it is a day for Gods and a night for Pitru Devatas. The waxing fortnight gradually diminishes the shine till the Moon-fall day (Amavasya) and the waning Moon picks up the shine day by day till Moon-rise day (Pournami). Moon is known as 'Jeeva' (life-provider), or 'Manomaya' (mind-alterer) or 'Annamaya' (potency provider from herbs and plants), 'Amritamaya' (source of life to all) and ' Sarvamaya' (all pervading). From Moon to the Group of Stars, the distance is 200,000 yojanas (16 00, 000 miles). Headed by Abhijit, there are twenty eight Stars revolving on their own axis. Above the Group of Stars is the Planet of Venus (Sukra) almost of the distance from the Moon to the Group of Stars. It is a benevolent planet, especially as a provider of good rains and prosperity and moves at the same pace as Sun God. Mercury (Budha), the son of Moon is situated from Venus (16,00,000 miles) or 72,00,000 miles from Earth and this Planet too is benevolent excepting when not moving along with Sun, thus causing cyclones, excess or no rainfall and dusty storms.

Equidistant from Mercury or 80,80,000 miles above Earth, is the Planet of Mars (Mangal), which is generally not considered favourable, travelling along with other planets every three fortnights and creates tensions. The Planet of Jupiter (Guru) is away from Earth by some 10,400,000 miles-again 16,00,000 miles away from the planet of Mars- is considered generally benevolent to Brahmins and Universe, unless takes a curved path in conjunction with other planets. Saturn, which is 12 million miles above Earth is also considered generally unhelpful. Normally, each planet is 16,00,000 miles apart from another planet, but the distance from Saturn to the Group of ‘Sapta Rishis’ or the Seven Sages is 8,800,000 miles from Saturn ie.20,800,000 miles from Earth. Indeed, the Seven Sages are always the great well wishers of the entire Universe. The Sapta Rishis, viz. Marichi, Angirasa, Atri, Pulsastya, Pulaha, Krathu, and Vasishtha born in Lord Brahma’s thoughts to help in the act of Creation. (Reference Maha Bharatha; Shanti Parva). The Seven Sage Constellation of the Great Bear (Ursa Major) is indeed the great well wisher of the entire Universe. The Sapta Rishis circambulate around the Pole Star, or Dhruva Tara, which is as good as the Abode of Supreme Lord Himself and is prayed to by religious mortals and Gods alike. (Maha Bhagavata Purana)]

Stanza 50 onward: Vimalecha prakaashete Vishakho nirupadrave, nakshatram paramasmaakam ikshvaakuunaam mahaatmanaam/ Nairrutam nairryutaanaamcha nakshatramati peedyate, muulo muulavataa spashto dhuupyate dhumaketunaa/ Sarvam chaitad vinaashaaya rakshasaanaamanupa - sthitam, kaale kaalagriheetaanaam nakshatram grahapeditam/ In respect of Ikshvaaku vamsha, Vishakamaama ugala nakshatra is very auspicious and ‘upadrava shunya’ as that is not subject to Mangala niyamaka dhumaketu is rid of it as that specific ‘samyoga’ or union leading to tragic consequences. On the other hand, that specific combination of ‘nairruta disha- moola nakshatra’ is most assertively bound to ‘kaala paasha’ leading to devasatation. Vyudhaani kapisainyaani prakaashanedhikam prabho, devaanaamiva sainyaani sangraame Taraakaamaye, ekamaarya samiksyaitān prīto bhavitum - arhasi/ Ramaprabho! Now the vaanra sena is well bound as a ‘Vyuha’ or specified pattern as being excellently formatted like Devas at the time of Tarakasura Samhara by Shanmukha.

[Vishleshana on Tarakasura Samhara by Skanda Deva:

Fully understanding the purpose of his birth which his parents had strived for after performing thousands of years of Tapasya as also to fulfill the singular ambition of his grand mother to destroy Indra and Devas, Tarakasura took a vow at a grand conference of Daityas and Danavas-the descendents of Diti and Danu- and proceeded to Paritraya Parvat (the western side of Aravali and Vindhya mountain range and observed strict Tapasya during hundred year time-slots by rotation by way of ‘Niraahaara’ (without food), Panchagni (in the midst of Five huge Fire bodies) in sizzling summers, ‘Jala madhya’ inside in chilled running water in the worst winter nights, eating only fallen dry leaves, etc. Brahma had no option but to present himself and ask for his boons. He bargained of absolute invincibility and deathlessness but finally agreed that only a seven days long boy could kill him, if at all! Not far from the day when Brahma bestowed the boons, Tarakasura redesigned and reformed his lines of Military Forces and attacked Indraloka. Having been defeated, Indra made an appeal to Vishnu and the latter realised that only Skanda, the unique son of Shiva Parvati. could kill the loka kantaka Tarakasura. Indra then made a detailed plan as an outstanding stage manager: Bringing together of the then virgin Devi Parvati- Manmatha’s pushpa baana prayoga to excite Parama Shiva who was in long tapasya -managing Himavan’s virgin daughter Parvati to engage in service to supply ‘puja dravyas’- seeking the help of Manmatha the God of love to intensify feelings of lust in Shiva’s mind by his pushpa baanas- Shiva’s opening his third eye with anger- eventual wedding of Shiva Parvati- agni deva carrying Shiva’s virility about to be wasted on earth to six Kritikas who drank the drops - Kartikeya’s birth and the euphoria of Indra and the Trilokas.

The Deities commenced preparations of war to kill Tarakasura but a Celestial Voice was heard that victory would be assured only under the Leadership of Kartikeya and hence all the Devas requested Skanda to become the Chief of the Army of Devas. Meanwhile, Devasena, the daughter of Mrityu Devata, became his wife and hence Skanda was known as Deva Senapati. Kartikeya led the army of Devas of the rank of Indra, Agni, Vayu, Kubera and Yama Dharma Raja and was seated on an elephant. Tarakasura arrived with a huge army of mighty warriors who dominated and controlled the opponents initially. Indra's 'Vajra' was overpowered by Tarakasura's weapon called Shakti and wounded Indra. King Muchukunda who fought for Devas and sought to stop the domination of Daityas but Tarakasura resisted; Muchukunda wanted to use the 'Brahmastra' but was restrained by Sage Narada as that weapon would no doubt create havoc but would be ineffective to destroy Tarakasura and hence Kartikeya would have to be warmed up gradually. Veerabhadra swung into action and slaughtered thousands of Demons; Tarakasura realised that Veerabhadra was not easy to control and thus used his 'Maya' and assumed a thousand arms. Lord Vishnu suggested that the time was ripe to kill the Big Demon before he became more powerful and asked Skanda to charge him. With his mighty weapon Shakti on hand, Kartikeya chased Tarakasura but the latter retaliated with his own 'Shakti' and even got Skanda unconscious for a while. After quickly recovering his poise, Kartikeya prayed to his parents and released the Maha Shakti which was fortified with the blessings of Bhagavan and Bhagavati and finally annihilated Tarakasura who incidentally was a Great Siva Bhakta! But Siva Himself was so pleased at the valour of the lad who was more than a match to the Greatest Demon of the times who sent shock waves across the Three Worlds! While Devas and Gandharvas were engaged in unending praises and noise of resounding musical notes, Rishis were engaged in Vedic Hymns to please Kartikeya and there was ecstasy across the Globe.]

As Sugriva was detailing the various 'shubha shakunas' addressing Shri Rama, Lakshmana was hearing intently being excited, while the Maha Vanara Sena was proceeding ahead, with Maha Jambavan and huge Rikshas and Vanaras were guarding the rear side. Their entire body especially their foot fingers and hands were heavily dusted. This was especially so as they were jumping high, often flying and landing as though there was a sand storm blinding normal vision. As the Vanara Sena was crossing water bodies and rivers there was chaos of the waves while the cheers and slogans were further adding pandemonium. The entire Vanara Sena jumping, leaping, running, chasing each other with speed, it seemed Vayu Deva too was cooperating by adjusting the speed and pace accordingly as the singular objective being 'Raghu-nadha Karyasiddhi'. As the Vanara Sena approaches forests and wild trees, roots and sweet fruits face are inevitable targets, simha nadaas, chaos and havoc are normal features. As they approach hills and mountains, their natural tendency would be to jump up to the tops and either slide down or leap down. Kananaani vichitraani nadeeprastravanaani cha, pashyannapi yathou Ramah sahyaasyah Malasyasyacha/ Shri Ramachandra too was immersed in thoughts, experiencing 'prakriti soundarya' especially as of Sahya and Malaya parvata shrenis and the unbelievable magnificence as the Lanka Yatra was truly fabulous. Paada paanavabhajanto vikarshantastathaah, vidhamanto girivaraan prayayuh plavagarshabhaah/ Thus the Maha Vanara Sena was advancing with hilarious shrieks and resounding thumping steps with speed and excitement. mahendram atha samprāpya rāmo rājīvalocanaḥ, adhyārohan mahābāhuḥ śikharam drumabhūṣitam/ tataḥ śikharam āruhya rāmo daśarathātmajaḥ, kūrmanīnasamākīrṇam apaśyat salilāśayam/ Kamalanayana Shri Rama then approached Mahendra Parvata and gracing the scenic beauty ascended the mountain. Then atop the shikhara visioned the Maha Samudra full of 'kurmas and matsyas'. te sahyaṁ samatikramya malayaṁ ca mahāgirim, āsedur ānupūrvyeṇa samudraṁ bhīmaniḥsvanam/ avaruḥya jagāmāsu velāvanam anuttamam, rāmo ramayatām śreṣṭhaḥ sasugrīvaḥ salakṣmaṇaḥ/ Thus having crossed Sahya and Malaya parvataas, reached Mahendra Parvata and the Maha Saagara with ear drum shattering and high tide roarings. Accompanied by Lakshmana and Sugriva, soon enough Shri Rama descended down to the seashores and entered a forest adjacent thereby. ete vayam anuprāptāḥ sugrīva varuṇālayam, ihedānīm vicintā sā yā na pūrvam samutthitā/ ataḥ paramatīro 'yaṁ sāgaraḥ saritām pati, na cāyam anupāyena śakyas taritum arṇavaḥ/ tad ihaiva niveśo 'stu mantrāḥ prastūyatām iha, yathedaṁ vānarabalaṁ param pāram avāpnuyāt/ Shri Rama then addressed Sugriva: King of Vanaras! Look, we have reached the 'Samudra Tata' alright. But in my mind the possibility of crossing the Maha Sagara is confronted now. How is this possible to assuage Samudra Deva! Without the help and cooperation of Samudra Swami, it should be impossible to cross the distance of hundred yojanas to reach Lankapuri. Thus we have all to introspect together especially by collective thinking. itīva sa mahābāhuḥ sītāharaṇakarśitaḥ, rāmaḥ sāgaram āsādyā vāsam ājñāpayat tadā/ samprāpto mantrakālo naḥ sāgarasyeha laṅghane, svām svām senām samutsṛjya mā ca kaś cit kuto vrajet, gacchantu vānarāḥ śūrā jñeyam channam bhayam ca naḥ/ As Rama who is already shattered by his Sita Viyoga in his mind asked Sugriva to settle down and even offer constructive suggestions. He emphasised that none of the Vanara Senapatis would now abstain from this important discussion and also enforce discipline right now among the respective squadrons. This is necessary as the nearby maayaavi rakshasaas present here possibly might tamper with the mindset of vaararas even. As Rama opined thus Sugriva's instructions were clear too. Lakshmana too intervened in the task of controlling the Maha Vaanara sena. Three categories of reech or bears- langur with long tails and Vanaras were seated. Meanwhile the roarings of the furious tides of the Maha Sumudra got intensified as 'pradosha kaala chadrodya' arrived. Samudra is then indeed the 'nivasa sthaana' of Deva shatru daitya- raakshaas and the Maha Sagara was akin to pataala loka; the entire scenario then was so queer and awe inspiring that the Vanara sena was rightly wonder struck, even as the roaring reverberations of the high tides were getting more and more awe generating further and further.

Vaanara Veera Nila responsible for safe stay of the Maha Vaanara sena made satisfactory arrangements of the night halt at the sea bed, while Mainda and Dvividha kept vigilance. Then Shri Rama confided in Lakshmana stating that even as his grief and distress as had been suppressed so far during the travel this far was tending to reappear again and again, day by day. He was unable to resist his tearful flows muttering as follows: 'My agony might not be that Devi Sita's continued absence from me but the criticality of the time limitation that the heartless Ravana had fixed. Lakshmana sought to alleviate feelings and both of them got busy with their respective Gayatri worship.

As Indratulya parakrami Hanuman alone created mayhem and devastation of Lankapuri putting him to shame, now learning that a maasive Vanara Sena had since reached the shores of Maha Sagara already, Ravana was apparently in a pensive frame of mind convened an emergency conference with his Ministers. He addressed the conference as follows: dharṣitā ca praviṣṭā ca laṅkā duṣprasahā purī, tena vānaramātreṇa dṛṣṭā sītā ca jānakī/ prasādo dharṣitaś caityaḥ pravarā rākṣasā hatāḥ, āvilā ca purī laṅkā sarvā hanumatā kṛtā/ kiṁ kariṣyāmi bhadram vaḥ kiṁ vā yuktam anantaram, ucyatām naḥ samartham yat kṛtaṁ ca sukṛtaṁ bhavet/ Nishaacharaas! Learned Vigjnaana vettaas are stated to have assured victories on battle fronts as per by the advices of able mantris and that is why I should be advised as to what should be done in respect of Shri Rama and hence my seeking your able suggestions. As you may be aware that in the present society, there are three types of advisors of the best, the medium and the worst categories. Now, the ‘Uttama Shreni’ Advisers seek to understand the possibilities or otherwise, capabilities or weaknesses, interests or rejections, and above all objective analyses from the outside expert advisors. Those who seek to analyse the pros and cons of a given situation and its context and finlise their own decision are of the medium category. A person even without understanding a given situation with least analysis takes a unilateral and conclusive decision is of course of the lowest classification. tasmāt sumantritaṃ sādhu bhavanto mantrisattamāḥ, kāryaṃ sampratipadyantāṃ etat kṛtyatamaṃ mama/ vānarāṇām hi vīrāṇām sahasraiḥ parivāritaḥ, rāmo ’bhyeti purīm laṅkāṃ asmākaṃ uparodhakaḥ/ Now happily in my ‘mantri mandali’, you are all ‘Parama buddhiman’ and as such I seek your expert advice and I should esteem it and follow the same dutifully. As Ravana'sura invited suggestions from his ministers, the reply to the King was that indeed Rakshasas were aware of Neeti Jnaana as much as the opponents. Hence the submission would be as follows: King of Asuras!! We are prepared to attack the enemy force with Parighas-Shakti- Shula-Pattisha as the Vaaras and Bears are quipped too then why worry! Maha Raja! you had even gone to Bhogavati Pura and devastated Maha Nagas; you had successfully defeated Yakshas and subdued Kubera and seized pushpaka vimana from Kailaasha Shikhara. Rakshasha shiromani! Danava Raja Maya was terrorised by you as he wished your lasting friendship and submitted his daughter Mandodari, your Patta Mahishi the Prime Queen, a Maha Pativrata! Mahabaaho! We recall that Maha Daanava Madhu surrendered to you in his battle against you and submitted accepting your sister Kumbhini as his wife. Shatru damana Rakshasa Raja! Daanavas were for immemorial times the established champions of bravery in battles, but you had the power of subduing them for ever and in turn wrested from them numberless powers of ‘Mayas’! Varuna Deva Putras too once attacked you with their chaturanga senas were smashed by you personally. Maha Raja! Yama swarupi Maha Saagara and Mrityu Rupī Rakshasa Sena are at your command. Further, in the remote past Kshatriya Kings of ‘Mahendra samaana’ heros were full on earth but now samara durjaya veeras are virtually non existent now and would it be a matter of anxiety for you! You may as well relax and a hero of Indrajit’s standing would teach a fitting lesson to the attacking Rama and his monkey brigade. Our Megha Naada had successfully performed Maheshwara Yagjna which is unparalleled. He had the reputation of imprisoned Indra and Our army is of the swarupa of ekaadasha Rudra gana and dwadasha Aditya ganas- Marud gana and Vasu gana. rājan nāpad ayukteyam āgatā prākṛtāj janāt, hṛdi naiva tvayā kāryā tvam vadhiṣyasi rāghavam/ Ravana Maharaja! Pursuant to the braggings of Nikumbhaadi Rakshasa Veeraas, Nikumbha, Rabhasa, Suryashatru, Suptagṇa, Yajñakopa, Mahapaarshva, Mahodara, Agniketu, Rashmiketū, Ravana kumara Indrajit, Prahasta, Virupaksha, Vajradamshtra, Dhūmraksha, Atikaaya, Durmukhaadi Rakshasa Maha Veeraas stood up in rage and lifted in their mighty hands and hefty shoulders various ‘aayudhaas’ like parigha, pattisha, shula, praasa, shkti, pharasa, dhanush baanaas, khadgas, and jumped declaring: adya rāmaṁ vadhiṣyāmaḥ sugrīvaṁ ca salakṣmaṇam, kṛpaṇam ca hanūmantaṁ laṅkā yena pradharṣitā/ We should at once destroy Rama-Lakshmana- Sugriva, and most cerainly Hanuman who had destroyed Lankapuri in flames. Then, dharmagjna Vibhishana intervened and addressed Ravana: Maha Raja! Neeti Shastra Vignanis proclaimed that one ought to follow the chaturvidha upaayas of saama-daana-bheda- and finally danda. As the enemy is unprepared and sudden attacks of the defending veeras would invariably bound to end up in ‘aadhi-daivika- adhyatmika taapatrayas’ and duly justified attacks only are justiable.

Tapatraya: Adhi Bhoudika or Ailments of Physical Nature; Adhyatmika or of Mental-Psychological Nature; and Adhi Daivika or of Natural Calamities like Earth quakes, floods, lightnings etc. beyond human control. In Vishnu Purana: Maharshi Parashara described about Tapatriayas or the Three Kinds of Difficulties that all human beings are subjected to as also the means of realising the Paramartha Swarupa. The Tapatriayas originate due to Adhyatmika, Aadhi Daavika and Adhi Bhoutika reasons. Adhyatmika based Tapaas are either due to ‘Shaaririka’(physical) ailments or ‘Manasika’ (psychological) imbalances. Shaaririka Tapaas include diseases related to head, digestive, heart, breathing, vision, limbs, skin, fevers and so on; related are the various physiological problems of blood-urinary-pelvic nature. Manasika Tapaas are related to Kama, Krodha, Bhaya, Dwesha, lobha, Moha, Vishada, Shoka, Asuya, Apamana, Irshya, Matsara etc. Adhi Bhoutika Tapaas are due to the difficulties attributed to animals, birds, Pishachaas, Serpents, Rakshasaas and poisonous related creatures like scorpions. The troubles on account of Adhidaivika nature are due to cold, heat, air, rains, drought, water, earthquakes, cyclones and so on. Additionally, the troubles are related to birth, childhood, youth, old age, ignorance, Avidya, loneliness, smell, lack of resources, poverty, immaturity, inexperience, lack of opportunity, fear of death, death itself and multiple kinds of experiences of Naraka. Maharshi Parashara emphasized that there are problems of excessive of opulence, excellent health, excessive youth, and such other excesses and some times ignorance is bliss. More so there could be Tapaas due to discriminations of sex, age, social status, experience, opportunity, family background; origin of birth viz. religion, Varnashrama and age. Disappoint -ments in life, more specifically relating to money and fame, including their earnings, perservation and its vinasha or destruction happen to be yet source of Tapatraya]

Shri Rama might nodoubt be ever ready as aftet all he had arrived with his decisivenees to counter such sudden attacks, but are we not capable of well pronounced attacks as that should truly be observed as the ‘yuddha dharma’. Nishachara Veeraas! Do you not realise the meaning of the vaanara sena arriving here after crossing the ‘maha saagra’ by air dashes and high wave jumpings: samudraṁ laṅghayitvā tu ghoram nadanadīpatim, kṛtaṁ hanumatā karma duṣkaram tarkayeta kaḥ/ balāny aparimeyāni vīryāni ca niśācarāḥ, pareṣām sahasāvajñā na kartavyā katham cana/ kim ca rākṣasarājasya rāmeṇāpakṛtaṁ purā, ājahāra janasthānād yasya bhāryām yaśasvinaḥ/ Can you imagine that a single Hanuman crossed this Maha Samudra by flying on the skies. Let us not underestimate the might, pluck and dashing desperation of the huge vaanara sene for a justified objective. First of all, tell me as to why Shri Rama is harassed and restless as his own wife was forcibly kidnapped away! That was why he himself wishes to take revenge. Would or not be justified that his wife be rescued! khara yady ativr̥ttas tu rāmeṇa nihato raṇe, avaśyam prāṇinām prāṇā rakṣitavyā yathā balam/ etannimittam vaidehī bhayam naḥ sumahad bhavet, āhṛtā sā parityājyā kalahārthe kṛte na kim/ na naḥ kṣamam vīryavatā tena dharmānuvartinā, vairam nirarthakam kartum dīyatām asya maithilī/ yāvan na sagajām sāsṁ bahuratnasamākulām, purīm dārayate bāṇair dīyatām asya maithilī/ If Rama killed Khara, was not to so since Khara attacked Rama in self defence. Now again Rama is perforce attacking as per action-reaction sequence! Hence the cause of ‘Sita harana’ is removed then the need for the effect would automatically gets erased! What is the use of prolonging the issue as the root is bound to spring up a plant and allow the emergence of a Maha Vriksha and as such the root cause be removed by duly and honourably releasing Sita. Why prolong the issue dragglingly to endless troubles. Rama is well known for his broad mindedness and undoubted dharmatma, even being a paraakrami. Why not then release Mithilesha Kumari and return her to nip the bud! yāvat sughorā mahatī durdharṣā harivāhinī, nāvaskandati no laṅkāṁ tāvat sītā pradīyatām/ vinaśyed dhi purī laṅkā śūrāḥ sarve ca rākṣasāḥ, rāmasya dayitā patnī na svayaṁ yadi dīyate/ prasādaye tvāṁ bandhutvāt kuruṣva vacanaṁ mama, hitaṁ pathyaṁ tv ahaṁ brūmi dīyatām asya maithilī/ Vibhishana further cautions his elder brother Ravana that even well before Rama's 'baana varsha' could destroy the peaceful Lankapuri with its present name and fame with its prosperity replete with chariots, cavalry, elephantry, and so on, he might simply return Maithli to her husband. Lankeshwara! You are my dear elder brother and this is my humble submission to you in the name of fraternal affection that do very kindly let Sita be returned back to her prana vallabha. purā śaratsūryamarīcisamībhān; navāgrapūṅkhān sudṛḍhān ṇṇpātmajaḥ, sṛjaty amoghān viśikhān vadhāya te; pradīyatām dāśarathāya maithilī/ tyajasva kopam sukhadharmanāśanam; bhajasva dharmam ratikīrtivardhanam, prasīda jīvema saputrabāndhavāḥ; pradīyatām dāśarathāya maithilī/ Well before Rajakumara Rama with his splendour of Shartkaalaa Surya's radiance release his first arrow, please let Dasharatha nandini be free. My dear most and highly esteemed elder brother, my repeated and reiterated submission with all my humility be lessen your anger and lessen my heart felt anxiety and anguish. Krodha led by ill justified kaama leads to dharma nashana and self destruction. Your nod of head with generocity would save generatoins of bandhu bandhavas. With your kind glances the glory of Lankapuri would be 'aachandraatmakam'! Having thus Vibhishana said with folded hands, King Ravana dismissed the Sabha and left for his 'rajamahala', with visible anger! .

Sarga Ten

As Vibhishana approached Ravana again in the latter's Rajamahala, he narrated 'ashubhas' in Lankapuri after Sita's entry, but Ravana was firm not to release her as Rama and Indra even would fail to do so!

Next morning, the Dharmardhajnaata Vibhishana visited Ravana's palatial Palace which was ever busy with the constant flows of ministers, rakshas veeras and royal soldiers. He refreshed himself with the grandeur of the Palace, the ever fascinating traffic of damsel groups reaching the Rani Vaasaas and so on. On his entry, Rakshasa soldiers of high rankings welcomed him and ushered him to the interiors of where the King Ravana was seated who was then surrounded by veda panditas reciting stanzas of praises appropriate to Maha Rajas such as 'Vijayi bhava, digvijayi bhava'. There after, when King Ravana was left free and alone, excepting his close and select Ministers, Vibhishana started his conversation; he initiated stating that of late there had been a number of 'apashakunas' or negative forebodings, especially ever since Devi Sita arrived here. Several reports were being received from the Lanka Public that among the household kitchens, cooking flames were gradually losing their normal cooking quality and ability as the flames were either disappearing suddenly or losing their property of heat timings. Very often the resultant smoke spreads fast as the kitchen ceilings get blackened too soon within hours and minutes. Among the kitchens, yajna shaalas, vedaadhyana sthaanas cobras appear entering and disappearing too often. Cows milk gets evaporating too soon. Gaja rajas no longer display their normal 'mada' or arrogance and assume timidity too often. Donkeys, camels, and such other domestic animals once seated tend to struggle to stand. Groups of crows keep flying crowing all over hovering the households even at the midnight hours disturbing the deep sleep of the residents. Worse still, tens and hundreds of owls attack the roofs and windows suddenly. These are but a few 'apashakunas' being presently faced by the Lankapuri public, ever since the arrival of Devi Sita here. Praapane chaasya mantrasya nivritaah sarva manrinah, avashyam cha mayaa vaachyam yadaa drushtamayaa shrutam sampradhaarya yatthaanyaayam tad bhavaan kartumarshasi/ Dear brother Ravana! Various Mantris, Senapatis and even 'goodhachaaris' very near to you personally are hesitating to provide the feedback information to you and as I am compelled to inform you personally as my truthful well wisher of your 'keerti pratishaas'. Now you may like to consider as you feel appropriate.' As Vibhishana heard the above 'chetaavani' or a fraternal warning signal, Ravana stood up in the midst of the ministers addressd Vibhishana as follows: Vibhishana! I am least afraid of any kind. Rest assured that Rama would never ever be able to secure Sita at any cost as this is my final resoluton. I am of the firm and most ultimate decisivenes. Even securing the active involvement and support of Devendra, Rama would be pulled down to dust most assertively and therefore, you may now leave me and disappear!

Ravana convenes a Public Sabha after tightening secutity, declares intense feelings for Sita- Kumbhakarna since woken up regrets Ravana's love affair yet challenges Rama's attacks all by himself

At the grand conference of the Rakshasa Pramukhas of Lankapuri, King Ravana enters with pomp and show. As he entered there were 'shankha ninaadaas' while senaadhipati led the procession while ministers were behind as per royal protocol with white 'chhatra chaamras', 'vandimadanan stuti paathas', and then he was seated on 'rathna khachita suvarna simhasana'. Well before the arrival of the King, Vibhishana was seated after King Ravana's having been seated. Then the Lankapuri prasiddha pramukha invitees were awaiting of the commanding voice of the King.

Having over viewed all the Pradhana pramukhas of Lankapuri invitees, King Ravana instructed Senapati Prahasta : 'Senapati! Do instruct your maha rakshasa sena so that the astra-shastravidya experts, soldiers of cavalry, elephantry and foot soldiers, be ever ready.' Prahasta who had even earlier tightened the pracautionary measures, replied: Maha Raja! Well in anticipation of your kind instruction, I have discharged my duties both within , around and the peripheries of Lankapuri which is truly impregnable. Now I would assuredly keep reviewing the enforcement on day to day basis.' Then the King addressed the Maha Sabha: 'Sabhasado! You are all fully aware of the Dharma-Artha-Kama vishayaaka vigjnaana and the situations arising from Priya-Apriya, Sukha - Duhkha, Laabha- Haani, Hita-ahitas, and of vicharana samardhata. What all you have had performed to upkeep my prestige have borne excellent fruits. Just as Indra Deva enjoys the taste of sweetness of fruits as rooted from plants and trees by the restless combined efforts of Chandra, Graha, Nakshatra, Marud Ganas, I too as your King keep rejoicing the Rajya Lakshmi sukhas; hence, this is my gratitude to you all for ever. Now: What all I have been able to do was always performed with your approval either earlier or as it followed. There was no exception except perhaps Kumbhakarna who has always been sleeping almost continuously. Just now he is perhaps peeping out of the slumber. Iyamcha dandakaaranyad Ramasya Mahishi priya, rakshobhischaritoddhe - shaadaaneeta janakarmajah/Saa me na shayyaamaarodhami -cchhatyalagaaminee, trishu lokesh chaanyaa me na Sitamadrushee tathaa/ I had kidnapped Devi Sita the wife of Shri Rama and the dear daughter of King Janaka from dandakaranya, the residence of Rakshasas. I got attracted to her as in my opinion there is none in trilokas in comparisin to her, what with her flimsy middle of body, heavy vakshojas, the face which puts Sharatkaala Chandra to shame, and an eloquent face and glances as if Mayasura himself created a prototype. But most unfortunately she had been consistently refusing me to get into my bed so far. Saa tu samvatsaram kaalam mama yaachita bhaamini, prateekshnamaana bhartaaram Raamamaayata lochanaa, tanmayaa chaarunetraayaah pratijnaatam vachah shubham/ Vishalanetra maananiya Sita had expressed by her sweet tongue entreated me to wait for a year awaiting her husband's arrival to pick her back and therefore I had to oblige.

(Indeed this was a white and misleading untruth as Aranya Khanda Valmiki Ranayana vide Sarga Fifty Six stanzas 24-25 are quoted for ready reference: As Devi Sita responded haughtily and screamingly, Ravana had rather softly reacted: śṛṇu maithili madvākyam māsān dvādaśa bhāmini, kālenānena nābhyeṣi yadi mām cāruhāsini, tatas tvām prātārāsārtham sūdāś chetsyanti leśaśah/ ' Oh, haasya bhamini! Mithileshwari! Your humorous action does impress your way of dodging me. But mind you, I am granting you adequate notice period of twelve months and in case to do still me weakened your psyche, then I should take you to the royal kitchen and mince your body to pieces!' Then Ravana shouted yelling to the surroundig rakshasis:śīghram evaṁ hi rākṣasyo vikṛtā ghoradarśanāḥ, darpam asyā vineṣyantu māṁsaśoṇita -bhojanāḥ/ You ferocious blood sucking flesh swallowing Maha Rakshasis! You better bring down the ego and arrogance of this woman soon! Then having moved forward by a few steps, returned and shouted: ‘ You better take her away and shift to ‘Ashoka vaatika’. Then Devi Sita got unnerved with fright and misery, fell down to earth crawling and crying remembering Rama Lakshmanas out of desperation and extreme depression, even as the ferocious Rakshasis forcibly dragged her to Ashoka vaatika).

Ravanasura further continued his address to the Maha Sabha of Lankapuri: ‘ Comrades! Right now I am like a weary horse on a long high roads tired of awaiting Sita’s affirmation to fall in my bed and am truly suffering the ‘kaama jvara’ for long time now. As you all know very well that none of enemies be they of celestial or bhuloka or adho lokas could ever dare to attack Lankapuri. Meanwhile one Vanara arrived and created some ruckus here with threats unfortunately as we all had witnessed. Rest assured that no human being like Rama the husband of my dear Sita could ever enter and attack our glorious Rakshasa Samrajya, even if his vanara sena had somehow crossed the Maha Samudra. All the same, I should hear reactions and comments if any! Then Kumbhakarna the Maha Kaaya since fresh from his long spells of deep slumber reacted in reverberating voice:

Brother Ravana: May I at the outset of your love for Sita and your kidnapping her; after all, our combined comment should be that if River Yamuna were to have landed from Yamunetri mountain top to earth then the ferocious speed could not be contained into a kundaka as the overflows would have to submerged into a Maha Sagara. In other words: if your onesided love affair had actually happened, then be prepared for the consequences also! You could have informed this Maha Sabha even far earlier well before extending a hand already burnt! Yah paschaat purvakaaryaani karmanyaabhichikeershatu, purvachaapara karyaani sa na ed nayaanayou/ Chapalasya tu krutyeshu prasemaakshyadhikam balam, cchidramanyo prapadyante krounchasya svamiva dwijaah/ Tvadeyam mahadaarabdhham karma hyapratitam paraih, aham sameekarishyami hatvaa shatrutavaanaghah/ Neeti Shastra underlines the need for prioritizing significant tasks of what to be handled foremost. The need for assessing the strength of enemies before flinging into attacks is the common sense as finding shortcomings and lapses in retrospection would be of wasteful endeavors; this is like the haste of Krouncha birds flying off in haste to the top of the Krouncha Mountain being unaware of the fact that the mountain itself would be broken down any time and then seek to hold the mountain boulders falling down to earth any way.[Before annihilating Tarakasura Skanda Kumara experimented his ‘shakti aayudha’ on the Krouncha Parvata; and hence the symbolic simile]. Maha Raja! Even without fore-visioning the consequences, you had taken up a ‘dushkarma’ of ‘Sitaapaharana’ like a hungry being consuming ‘vishanna’ as Rama should never leave you till your death. He has spared you so far but assuredly should hit you to death! Tasmaat tvayaa samaarabdhham karma hyaapratitam paraih, aham sameekarishyaami hatvaa shatrutavaanagha/ Ahamutsaadayishyaami shatrutava Nishaachara, yadi Shakravivasvantou yadi paavakamaarutou, taavaham yodhayishyaami kuberavarunaavapi/Punarmaa sa dwiteeyana sharen nihanishyati, tatoham tasya paasyami rudhiram kaamamaashvasa/ In any case, in the eventuality of attack by your enemies, please rest assured that out of my fraternal affection and admiration of the series of your erstwhile victories, I swear I should smother the shatru sena of Vanaras by lifting and gulping into my mouth as dead or alive. Nishachara Ravana! If your enemy be Indra- Surya-Agni-Vaayu- Kubera- or Varuna , they and their followers would all be but mere fallen heroes! As I take up my ‘parigha’ in the grip of my arms and roar ‘simha garjanas’, even Devendra would retreat and run away fast from me. Vadhena vai Daashashratheh skuhaavaham jayam tavaahartumaham yatishye, hatvaa cha Raamam saha Lakshmanena khaadaami sarvaan hariyuthamukhyaan/ Ramasva kaamam piba chaagraa vaaruneem kurushva karyaani hitaani vijjvarah, mayaa tu Raame gamito yamakshayam cxhiraaya Sita vashagaa bhavishyati/ Furthermore, Dasharadha nandana, Shri Rama were to attack me, I should be able to kill him too and pave the way to your victory; believe me!Lakshmana sahita Rama should to be despatched to yamapuri as having fallen dead to dust well beside devouring the Vanara Yodhaas dead or alive! My dearest brother Ravana! Relax and rejoice your victory round the corner with wine as most certainly Sita would surrender to your sweet embrace and to your bed.

Maha Bhagavata Purana explains that the Gate Keepers of Vaikunthapuri of Maha Vishnu named Jaya and Vijaya were cursed to mortality by Maharshis Sanaka-Sanandana-Sanaatana-Sanatkmara disallowed Vishnu Darshana. But after appealing to Vishnu for assistance, the latter agreed to reduce their sentence to just three lifetimes as his enemies before allowing them to return to Vaikuntha thus as Jaya and Vijaya were Ravana and Kumbhakarna , Kamsa and Shishupala in Krishnaavataara and Kartaveeryaarjuna and Haihava Kshatriyas in Parashu Ramaavataara. Despite his monstrous size and great appetite, he was described to be of good character, piety and great warrior having defeated Indra too, besides killing and devoured several Vanaras during Rama Ravana battle. Along with his brothers, Ravana and Vibhishana, Kumbhakarna performed a Maha Yajna and Brahma blessed with a boon that, his tongue was tied by Sarasvati, because of which, instead of asking 'Indraasana' or the seat of Indra, he asked for 'Nidraasana' or bed for sleeping. Again Brahma granted 'Nidravastham' instead of 'Nirdevatvam' of total annihilation of Devas, thus. Kumbhakarna slept for six months a year and when awoken, he ate everything in the vicinity. Kumbhakarna had two sons, Kumbha and Nikumbha from his wife Vajramala, who too fought in the war against Rama and were killed]

Sarga Thirteen.

As Rakshasa Mahapaarshva encourages Ravana to force Sita to bed having kidnapped her anyway, Ravana recalls Brahma 's curse to him never to force an unwilling woman to bed, especially after kidnapping

As Kumbhakarna had not reprimanded his elder brother for Ravana's kidnapping Devi Sita as the first mistake, yet as a closed chapter of having done so, the younger brother who admired Ravana's past achievements assured that he would provide support in destroying Vanara sena, and Rama Lakshmanas too and force Sita the very root of the trouble finally to fulfill his earnest desire. Then Rakshasa Veera Mahapaarshva made an appeal to King Ravana: An old adage explains that a Maha Purusha who entered Dandakaranya and having found an 'amrita kalasha' would not enjoy the divine juice be named as fool! Shatrumadhana Maha Raja! You are not only a parama bhakta of Ishvara but are Ishvara yourself; keep up your chin and keep your hands on the heads of enemies and drag Sita to your bed and enjoy her. Otherwise, when all these talks of yuddha would be wound up! For how long you would have you wait! You are just not concerned with past-present and future as these are all in your tight grip! Is there a personality who could defy your instructions in trilokas! We are truly blessed with gigantic Kumbhakarna and Indrajit who conquered the swarga swami Devendra himself under your mere glances and head nods! Therefore discard the so-called precepts of Saama-Daana-Bheda 'upaayas' which are applicable to normal or even sub-normal beings but certainly not meant for a 'saarvabhouma' of your stature who could comfortably skip and assume the 'danda' at once. If a 'shatru' is to be encountered then all these numberless veeraas are ever ready to smother him.' Thus Mahapaarshva sought to brainwash Ravana as above, King Ravana slowly whispered: Maha Paarshva nibodha tvam rahasyam kinchidaatmanah, chiravrittam sadaakhyasye yadvaptam puraamaya/ Pitaamahasya bhavanam gacchhanteem punjikasthaalaam, chachuryamaanaamadraakshamaa keshogni shikhaamiva/ Saa prahasya mayaa bhyuktaa kritaa vivasnaa tatah, Svayambhubhu bhavananam praaptaa lolitaa naninee yathaa/ Mahapaarshvaa! Long ago, a secretive incident occurred; once I was on way to Brahma's residence and found an apsara passing by. She was scared of me and tried to hide herself. I could not resist her figure and beauty. I dragged her, pulled off her vastras and suddenly dragged her and enjoyed her. Tacchha tasya manye jnaatamaaseen -

mahaatmanah, atha sankupito vedhaa maamidam vaakyam abraveet/ Adyaprabruti yaamanyaaam balaannaareem gamishyasi, tadaa te shatadhaa muurthaam phalishyati na samshayah/ Ityaham tasya shaapasya bheetah prasabhameva taam, narohaye balaan Sitaam Vaidheem shayane shubhe/ I felt that my misfortune was that Brahma noted the most unfortunate incident. I was then targetted to Lord Brahma's anger as he was terribly annoyed with me. He instructed me stating: 'From now onward, you should never draw a newly found woman to bed forcibly and if you do so, your heads would roll down to pieces. That is why I am mortally scared of doing the act with Sita forcibly. This background of my misfortune is not known to any body else, and certainly not Sita or Rama. Otherwise I am of the parallel of Samudra, a poisonous arrow released, a sure destroyer of Rama banaas, on the battle front the thousand eyed Indra or Varuna could ever survive and take to 'palaayana' displaying their backs!

Vibhishana appeals Ravana to release Devi Sita, praising Rama and his valour - Prahasta heckles Vibhishana- as the latter retorts that neither Ravana with 'vyasnaas' nor his followers could match Rama

Kumbhakarna stated that Ravana had no doubt committed an act of Adharma and was seeking public sympathy, yet despite the indiscretion and rashness having already been perpetrated could not be rolled back off the cause and effect syndrome which was inevitable. Yet present situation would have to be faced with a daring reversal. Considering his high admiration for King Ravana, his glory and his own intimate feelings of affection for his dear elder brother, Kumbhakarna asserted that what with his own individual and inborn physical stature and magnitude of bravery and decisiveness, he would devastate the Vanara Sena including Hanuman and Sugriva and smash down the so called skills of archery and heroism of Rama Lakshmanas to pieces to death. It was against this background, Vibhishana then addressed Ravana as follows. 'Maha Raja! why are you still carrying a poisonous Sitanaamaka vishaala maha sarpa as your glorious kireeta still! Looking attractively deceptive this five hooded 'maha naagini' Sita, should be thrown off from your famed visage. Even well before Maha Vaanaras of mountainous stature with their sharp teeth and nails attack Lanka, please hand over Sita Devi to Shri Rama. Well before the vajra tulya arrows released by Rama Lakshmanas pierce through the backbones of Raksha shiromanis, kindly return to Rama. Maha Raja! these so called Rakshas veers like Indrajit, Kumbhakarna, Maha Paarshva, Mahodara, Nikumbha, Kumbha, or Atikaaya should most decisively get pierced through by Rama baanaas. Jeevastu Ramasya na mokshase tvam guptah savinnaapyathavaa Marudbhih, na Vaasavyasyangkato na mrityornibho na paatalamanupavishthah/ Even Surya or Vaayu, or Indra or Yama might be helpless and bend down in self protection once Rama baanaas chase through the opponents to the high skies or pataala.' That was how Vibhishana threatened Ravana. Then Prahasta remarked: We are never concerned of Deva Danavas and get worried about, least of all 'manushyas'. Incidentally, Vibhishana! What is the meaning of the word named 'Fear' or 'Concern'? We had fought and humiliated Yaksha-Gandharva-Maha Naaga-Pakshi Rajas; what is Rama a mere 'manushya' and which kind of terror that we need to shiver from, anyway!' Vibhishana did not relish the way that Prahasta taunted him and addressed him: 'Prahasta! Maha Raja Ravana, or Mahodara, or you or Kumbhakarna are understandably not digestable just as paapaatmaas could avoid the experiences post death. Prahasta! Shri Rama is an able 'artha visharada' and is well equipped the 'karya saadhana'. Just as a huge ship only could cross the maha sagara, how could he ever imagine that his Rakshasa enemies be punished to destruction! Besides being a person with initiative and successful planning, Rama is also a dharmaatma being a product of Ikshvaku Vamsha; he is an exemplary 'karya sadhana samartha' having a record of Viratha vadha-Kabanbha hatya- Vaali's extermination, and the recent record of Khara Dushana termination; what are you in comparison to resort to 'apahasya'? Prahasta! You are truly not aware of the word named 'fear and fright' as you asked me with humor and hilarity. Yes, once Rama's 'baana ghaata' pierces through your intestines, you might not guess the meaning of the word of fear! But right now you are indulging in 'apahasya'! Mind you Prahasta! Na Ravano naatibalatrishiro na Kubhakarnasya suto Nkumbhah, na chendrajid Daasharthim pravordum tvam vaa rane Shakra samam samarthak/ Devaantako vaapi

Naraantako vaa tataatikaayotiratho mahatnmaa, Akampanaschaadi samaanasaarah sthaatum na shaktaa yudhi Raghavya/ Neither Ravana, Mahabali Trishira, Kumbhakarnakumara Nikumbha, Indravijaya Meghanaada could possibly face Dasharadha Nandana Shri Rama. Similarly, Devantaka, Narantaka, Atikaaya, Mahakaaya, Atiratha, Akanpana too could face Shri Rama with gusto. Incidentally, Maha Raja Ravana is ‘ Sapta Vyasana vasheebhuta’ and as such is disabled to think in correct perspective; besides his natural tendency is of egotism and self pride and lack of consideration objectively

[Vishleshana on Sapta Vyasanas of Kings:

Sarga 14 further: Vibhishana concluded his respectful appeal to the King and the ‘Sabhaasdaas’ finally emphatically that in the interest of the King and his kingdom as also the citizens besides the basic view point of ‘dharma and nyaaya’, Devi Sita be please handed over to Shri Rama and forestall the ‘Lankapuri Vinaashana’

Indrajit makes fun of Vibhishana- the latter retorts of immaturity of a youth- despite consitent appeals to release Sita, Ravana refuses finally- out of desperation Vibhishana leaves Lanka off for good!

Indrajit then addressed Vibhishana in a taunting tone: Dear uncle! I am a little surprised that you are talking rather loosely despite our family background! Then addressing the Rakshasa Raja, Indrajit said: Dear father! Uncle is now conversing rather funnily despite our heritage with the inborn natural characteristics of bala-veerya-parakrama-dhairya-shourya-tejas. After all, what is the worth of these two Raja Kumaras as mere human beings! Even a common Rakshasa could rattle them unnerved’ Then reverting his looks at Vibhishana again, Indrajit said: Of my timid uncle! Beware! Do you not recall that I forced Indra to come down to earth from swarga, as I need to refresh your memory; then the shivering Indra reached Pitaamaha Brahma for refuge and safety when the three crores of Heavenly Celebrities took to their heels. Don’t you recall that I had pulled out with my might I pulled off the tusks of Iravata with my mighty hands and threw them away from swarga to bhumi as the deva samuha hid themselves with fer and dismay! I forced Daitya samuha to surrender besides the Deva samuha too and of what worth could be two human beings named Rama and Lakshmana!’ As Meghanaada was bragging away on and on, Vibhishana cut short of it and said: Son Indrajit: you are still a lad and your understanding power is still immature and worthy of ignoring as indeed ignorance is blissful. Most unfortunately your absorptive capability appears minimal. That is why your bravado has neither a head or a tail and both appear to you as interchangeable. Ko brahma dandapratimaprakaashaanarchishmatah kaalnikaasha rupaan, satet baanaan yaadandakalpaan samakshamuktaana yudhi Raghavena/ Dhanaani tvaani subhushanaani vaasaamsi divyaani maneesca chatraan, Sitaamcha Raamaaya nivedya Deveem vasema rajannih veeta shokaanh/ The mighty arrows to be released by Shri Rama would indeed be like ‘brahma dandas’ and are of such luminosity as of kaala danda and Yama danda! Who indeed could dilute it or reverse it let alone demolish it. That is why Raja, we discard the splendour of dhana-dhaanya-ratna-aabhushanaas- divya vastras and wish to dedicate ourselves to Shri Rama henceforth!’

Then Ravana then suppressed his inner ego and anger gave parting shots to Vibhishana keeping the awareness of his followers in view as follows: ‘ Brother! They say that an enemy like a poisonous snake on head is bearable then you may stay back here but a so called ‘mitra’has to bear the ‘shatru seva’ then you may leave for mutual good. I am conscious of the jealous instincts of a brother to brother as when there is a risk element in the offing, then one's own brother tends to part ways rejoicing in the other's peril. As an elder brother on the principle of 'primo geniture' becomes a King and conducts himself on the path of great success the younger fraternity might bear it but once tough situations are in the offing, then relationships get diluted and departed from. The foundations of 'Sajaateyata' or of close family togetherness tend to get shaken and get terminated as hardships tend to smother to all the opportunitists. The old adage states that in a Padmavana a herd of elephants display their togetherness, but even the remote appearance of a hunter on the scene, the bonds of fraternity get severed also create scare precautioning the fellow elephants. Believe me, I am least disturbed even 'agni jwaalaas' surround me, but the back stabbings by one's own fraternity are to be safeguarded against. Upaayamete vakshyanti grahane naatra shashayah, kritnsaad bhayaajnaati bhayam kukushth vihitam cha nah/ Vidyate goshu sampannam vidyate jnatito bhaayam, vidyate streesha chapalatvam vidyatebraahmano tapah/ Tato neshtamidam Soumya yadaham loka satkritah, aishwaryamabhijaatscha ripunaam murdhichasthitah/ But a feeling of getting caught into risky situations due the spitting beans by one of one's kith and kin worries me most. (For instance, the flinging of arrows by Rama on Ravana would be futile and the key to his life is well known to Vibhishana well! Hence the adage that the household secrets are known well by one's own maternal uncle, better than by Ishvara even!) Ravana further continued his tirade against Vibhishana: 'Kula kalanka nishaachara Vibhishana! If ever you be the informer of my personal secrets, then that would be the betrayal leading to my life's termination!' As his own elder brother Ravana spoke rough and rude and offended him to the core, then Vibhishana was partly shaken down and mostly out of frustration and shame flew away up the sky along his close comrades. While on the sky he shouted : Rakshasa Raja! even now, you should realise that your 'vakra budhhi' is getting larger proportions. Dashaanana! My earnest most advice and honest appeal to hand over Devi Sita to return to the invincible Shri Rama even now. But you are refusing it as your distaster bound by 'maha kaala paasha' would uproot not only you but your dedicated rakshasa veeras, Lanka Puri, your own outstanding life accomplishments, your Shiva Bhakti and the entire Rakshas Kula naashana, merely due to your obsession for the parama pativrataa shiromani Devi Sita, who has been consistently asserting that she would rather enter into flames rather than your meanest and dirty offer of Prime Queenship!

As Vibhishana seeking asylum from Shri Rama, raises doubts of Vaanara Veeras like Surgiva, Angada and so on, Hanuman felt yet that it was genuine for apparent reasons and asks for Rama's instructions.

As having appealed desperately to Dashaanana Ravana, his elder brother to kindly release Devi Sita and hand over to her dearmost Shri Rama who had already arrived on the other side of the shores of the Maha Sagara and was planning to cross the Sagara to attack Lankapuri, Vibhishana's sincere fraternal advice fell on the arrogant Ravana's deaf ears. Ravana had rejected the appeal and the 'dharma baddha' Vibhishana had no alternative but to depart from Lankapuri to submit himself at Rama's feet. Vibhishana's body was gigantic as of meru parvara shikhara as a human being would normally see him with awe. Accompanying him were four Rakshasa Veeras. He was carrying his 'astra shastras' and was dressed in his 'loha kavacha' with sparkling 'aabhushanas'. As Vibhishana was approaching Shri Rama Lakshmana Sugrivas, Hanuman at his first sight saw him and felt and even expressed in a low tone: Look, this Rakshasa is perhaps approaching us to attack us.’ Reacting to Hanuman’s comment, Sugriva had atonce pulled out a Maha Saala Vriksha and a mountain boulder near by and was getting ready to attack the new arrival. Then Vibhishana addressed Sugriva and the co vanaras: rāvaṇo nāma durvyrtto rākṣaso rākṣaseśvaraḥ, tasyāham anujo bhrātā vibhīṣaṇa iti śrutāḥ/ tena sītā janasthānād dhṛtā hatvā jaṭāyuṣam, ruddhvā ca vivaśā dīnā rākṣasībhiḥ surakṣitā/ tam aham hetubhir vākyaair vividhais ca nyadarśayam, sādhu niryātyatām sītā rāmāyeti punaḥ punaḥ/ Friends! You are surely aware of Ravanaasura the cruel Rakshasa Raja and I am his younger brother Vibhishana seeking Shri Rama’s asylum and protection. The malicious and despicable Ravana kidnapped Devi Sita from the Janasthaana and as the helpless Devi Sita was flying towards Lankapuri by riding his donkey driven chariot, Mahatma Jatayu made all out efforts to save Devi Sita and got hurt and fell down on the Kishkindha Mountain top. Now the Maha Pativrata Devi Sita is right under the custody of Ravana with desperation ever crying away for Shri Rama. I had alerted Ravana that his vicious and despicable act was highly immoral by all standards of dharma and that even at this late stage, Ravana should return to Shri Rama and apologise and that Paramarma would surely pardon Ravana as he had the record of kindness to a true repentant. I made this appeal to the king repeatedly both face to face and in Public Maha Sabha as well. sa ca na pratijagrāha rāvaṇaḥ kālacoditāḥ, ucyamāno hitam vākyaṁ viparīta ivauśadham/ so ’ham paruṣitas tena dāsavac cāvamānitāḥ, tyaktvā putrāmś ca dārāmś ca rāghavam śaraṇam gataḥ/ As and when I had humbly submitted by supplications, his responded dismissing them always just like a ‘maranaasanna purusha’ on his death bedrefuses the life saving medicine! Not only this but he had reacted with harshness and that was how and why I have arrived here with my wife and sons seeking asylum of Mahatma Shri Rama. Reacting to Vibhishana’s arrival, Sugriva addressed Vanaras as follows: ‘Vaanara Veeras! Vibhishana the younger brother of the tyrannical dictator Ravanaasura had arrived for Shri Ramas protection’. Having sent the message to convince Vibhishana, Sugriva himself rushed to Rama Lakshmanas and shrieked as follows: ‘Ramaprabho! Kindly note a Rakshasa named Vibhishana has arrived here to join your Vanara Sena suddenly so that as time would permit threaten you and attack you as an owl reaches the group of crows. I assure you that he would state that he would be some use to inform you from time to time the details of how the Rakshasa Veeras would attack you, what should be the pattern of demolishing them, the ways and means of the Ravana’s guptacharas as also of our guptacharas, as per ‘neeti shastra’, that you are an outstanding samara veera and so on. Rama prabho! the pattern of Rakshasas is distinctive. They are expert ‘mayaavis’ transforming them selves like Vaanaras, bears or of any species like Mareecha who turned out as Maya Mriga facilitating ‘Devi Sitaaharana’ by Ravana. There are several chances of Rakshasaas as Vanaras and realise the know how of your followers. Prabho! You are aware that by their very nature, Rakshasas are mayavees. Surely Ravana himself planned this scheme of sending Vibhishana to you. rākṣaso jihmayā buddhyā samdiṣṭo ’yam upasthitāḥ, prahartum māyayā channo viśvaste tvayi rāghava/ badhyatām eṣa tīvreṇa daṇḍena sacivaiḥ saha, rāvaṇasya nṛśamsasya bhrātā hy eṣa vibhīṣaṇaḥ/ Nishpaapa Shri Rama! As directed by Ravana, Vibhishana is now seeking your protection for sure! He deserves to be killed along with his ministers. evam uktvā tu tam rāmaṁ samrabdho vāhinīpatiḥ, vākyaajño vākyaakuśalam tato maunam upāgamat/ sugrīvasya tu tad vākyaṁ śrutvā rāmo mahābalaḥ, samīpasthān uvācedaṁ hanūmatpramukhān harīn/ As thus Vaanara Raja expressed his mercurial imagination and kept silent, Shri Rama looked at Veera Anjaneya and the adjoining select Vanara Yoddhas. Then the collective reaction was: Agnātaṁ nāsti te kiṁ cit triṣu lokeṣu rāghava, ātmānam pūjayan rāma pṛchasy asmān suhṛttayā/ tvaṁ hi satyavrataḥ sūro dhārmiko dṛḍhavigrahāḥ, parīkṣya kārā smṛtimān niṣṣṭātmā suhṛtsu ca/ Raghunandana! There is nothing in trilokas that you are not aware and still with a view to encouraging us to submit our views. You are a known satyavrata, dharmatma, parakrami, smarana shaktiman with sharp mental intake; all the same, since you desired to test our thinking capacities. Then Shri Rama specifiacally asked Vanara Yuva Raja Angada. The latter stated that since Vibhishana had suddenly arrived with his followers, this is suspicion worthy. Any impromptu decision is not possible; therefore let our own gupachara be asked about the circumstances that might have compelled for Vibhishana’s sudden apparance here. Then maha buddhishaali with considerable experience in battles forwarded his comment: Rakshasa Raja Ravana is a well known sinner of great cunning and his own brother had approached suddenly and hence our eye brow risingness and certainly investigation worthy. Then the ‘neeti-aniti jnaata’ Mainda stated that we all should examine him with our sweet conversation foremost before taking a decision. Then Veera Hanuman prostrated to Shri Rama and stated: na bhavantam matiśreṣṭham samartham vadatām varam, atiśāyayitum śakto bṛhaspatir api bruvan/ na vādān nāpi saṁgharṣān nādhikyān na ca kāmataḥ, vakṣyāmi vacanam rājan yathārtham rāmagauravāt/arthānarthanimittam hi yad uktam sacivais tava, tatra doṣam prapaśyāmi kriyā na hy upapadyate/ Prabho! You yourself are a superior most buddiman; even Deva Guru Briahspati is not able to cross the unlimited limits of your sharp capability of desciveness. Whether Vibhishana is worthy of seeing your refuge or not is not a dbatable issue. There was a comment that Sugriva’s ‘manti mandali’ might investigate and report. Only investigations of persons far off are done, and that plea is ruled. adeśa kāle samprāpta ity ayaṁ yad vibhīṣaṇaḥ, vivakṣā cātra me ’stīyam tām nibodha yathā mati/ sa eṣa deśaḥ kālāś ca bhavatīha yathā tathā, puruṣāt puruṣam prāpya tathā doṣaguṇāv api/ daurātmyam rāvaṇe dṛṣṭvā vikramam ca tathā tvayi, yuktam āgamanam tasya sadṛśam tasya buddhitāḥ/ Another plea heard was that under this emergency period which is being faced, the sudden appearance of Vibhishana would be questionable; my comment would be that he would not do so by calculating the ‘desha kaala paristhitis’ any way. Now within the perepheries of my own understanding, considerations of the timely - ness of Vibhishanas appearance here are invalidated and I feel unconvinced; further I am sure that his arrival before a ‘maanavottama purusha’ and seek his refuge is justified. Maha Raja, another objection raised was that one should not entertain seeking refuge from Rama by an ‘aparichita purusha’. May I recall that during my visit to Lankapuri and was bound by Brahmastra, then Vibhishana convinced the villianous Ravana that a messenger should not killed but punished with ‘anga viheenata’ and thus my tail be put to flames. Further Vibhishana being a great admirer of Rama’s ‘ dharma tatva’ he never hesitated approachig him to take refuge from him. Have you not noticed the ‘swara bheda’ in his submission seeking Rama’s protection! Was that sounded artificial or geniune! Normally, if there were to be ‘durbhaava’ either his visage or presentation that get known to intellectuals like all. But Vibhishana was pleasant and cool. aśaṅkitamatiḥ svastho na śaṭhaḥ parisarpati, na cāsyā duṣṭā vāk cāpi tasmān nāstīha saṁśayaḥ/ākāraś chādyamāno ’pi na śakyo vinigūhitum, balād dhi vivṛṇoty eva bhāvam antargatam nṛṇām/ deśakālopapannaṁ ca kāryam kāryavidām vara, saphalam kurute kṣipram prayogeṇābhisamhitam/ Persons of sinful thoughts and manners would not dare to seek darshan of Shri Rama who is an ‘antaryaami’. Thus his sudden arrival here, Vibhishana’s seeking Shri Rama’s protection appears genuine and legitimate doubtlessly. A Rakhsha of ‘maayaavi swarupa’ is normally betrayed by his actions and ‘haavabhaavaas’ but the physical features need not be interpreted as lack of genuineness. Kaaryavetta Raghunandana! Vibhishanas appearance here need not be suspicion-worthy and hence my own feeling. He must have been impacted by ‘desha kaala paristhities’ and authenticity. udyogam tava samprekṣya mithyāvṛttam ca rāvaṇam, vālināś ca vadham śrutvā sugrīvam cābhiṣecitam/ rājyam prārthayamānaś ca buddhipūrvam ihāgataḥ, etāvat tu puraskṛtya yujyate tv asya saṁgrahaḥ/ yathāśakti mayoktam tu rākṣasasyārjavam prati, tvam pramāṇam tu śeṣasya śrutvā buddhimatām vara/ Shri Rama! Having been fully convinced of acts of glory like Vaali Vadha, Sugriva’s Rajya Pattabhishka, Ravana’s ‘duraachaaras, Sugriva’s seeking your protection is reasonable and well justified. You may even accept to Sugriva’s Rajyabhsheka subsequent your ‘Ravana Vadha’ and in response to ‘sanaatana dharma vetthas’ even among Asuras! Surely Vibhishana had arrived at your feet as you being a well known ‘sharanaagata’! Buddhimaan shreshtha Raghunaadha! Therefore the depenadabiliy of Vibhishana’s arrival here appears to be truthful as per my conscience. Yet you may like to react as per your directive.

On hearing the assurances of Hanuman, Shri Rama was pleased and addressed Sugriva and the rest of select Vanara Veeras as follows: No doubt the new attival Vibhishana is a maha raksasa of the very clant of Ravana'sura, yet as he had arrived at my refuge : mitrabhāvena saṁprāptam na tyajeyam katham cana, doṣo yady api tasya syāt satām etad agarhitam/As once, Vishishana had approached me in good faith and conviction, as a 'sharanaagata', I should oblige'. Sugriva reacted: " Rama Swami! This may not be a question of 'dushta or adushta', but indeed of rakshasa origin. The very fact that he could have left his own brother after enjoying all his life with him would sound proper!' Rama addressing Lakshmana smilingly replied: Sumitra nandana! What Sugriva asserts looks that he had digested 'shastra jnaana and gurujana seva'! And the addressed Sugriva: Vibhishana seems to have arrived as my refuge and as a co raksha king against his enemy rakshasa even the two are they being own brothers.and hence his protection for me. Once, Vibhishana was fully convinced that his elder brother was a proven 'adharmi', then he found reasonable to anchor himself to me. Let me assure you that even among rakshasas too there would be 'neeti shastravettas'! Hence, notwithstanding all other considerations of birth, upbringing, co existence, one might depart especially after a climactic and continous excessess of adharma and in any case the fundmental kshaatra dharma requires fulfillment of protecton to an enemy. Sugriva! In the Shrishti of Paramatma, all the brothers are not like Bharata for me as having outright rejected a glory of Ayodhya Samrajya nor a unique friendship with you!' Then instantly Sugriva touched Shri Rama's feet and said: Surely, that Maha Paapi Ravana appears to have sent Vibhishana to you Rama! He deserves 'mrityu danda'. Then Shri Rama replied still smilingy: Vanara Raja! whether Vibhishana is good or bad, but to my remotest inner feeling Vibhishana appears to be trustworthy. Sugriva! If only left to my conscience allows me, surely I might destroy all pishacha - daanava-yaksha-rakshasas by my little finger.

Then Sugriva said ‘Mahatma! I had also felt deep in my inner self like wise particularly since Veera Hanuman too felt like wise,; I have been so far seeking the views of other vanara veeras too merely. Well aware of your dharmika jnaana and self reliance that I am truly proud and ever secure in your hands. Surely, may the arrival of Vibhishana at this critical juncture be an auspicious omen!

[Brief Visleshana on Shibi Chakravarti and how Indra and Agni Deva sought to test his spirit of self sacrifice:

Agni assumed the form of a pigeon as Indra was chasing as a hawk, the pigeon landed on Shibi’s shoulder and took it on his lap providing protection but the hawk demanded the prey’s flesh in a human voice, Shibi agreed to provide as much flesh from his own body by a sensitive balance and offered to the hawk. Pleased of Shibi’s offer, Indra and Agni restored the body flesh of Shibi and declared his universal fame. Source Vishnu Purana.]

As Shri Rama got his 'abhaya mudra' conveyed to Vibhishana and followers, the latter instantly come down from the skies with great relief and at once fell at Shri Rama's feet out of gratitude. He submitted stating: ' Bhagavan! I am Vibhishana, the younger brother of King of Rakshasas Ravana, who had put me to shame and grief. Hence, I severed all connections with relatives, associates and life long friends besides my material benefits.' Then Shri Rama smiled pleased and replied affectionately and enquired: Vibhishana! Give me a precise idea of the 'Rakshasabala' of Ravana and in reply Vibhishana detailed as follows: 'Raja Kumara! Blessed by Brahma Deva with the boon of invincibility against all His creation like gandharvas, nagas , pakshis and all the rest but however purposively omitted human beings due to his arrogance. Ravana's immediate younger brother is Kumbhakarna, maha tejasvi and parakrami and on the battle field he is as equivalent to Indra Deva himself. Shri Rama, you might have heard of his senapati named Prahasta, who subdued Manibhadra the senapati of Kubera in their mutual battle atop Kailasha Parvata. He pleased Agni Deva with innumerable agni karyas under Daiya Guru Shukraachaarya and attained enormous shaktis to plan and execute 'vyuha vidya' and by hiding behind the clouds attack with 'shatru prahaaras' down on earth. Sarga Nineteen continued:

As Vibhishana thus provided the broad details of Ravana and his sena, Shri Rama reacted: ' Vibhishana! I am aware of Ravana's background, but let me assure you that even if Ravana and his raksasa veeras were to run away to Pataala lokas, or seek Brahma's raksha, I should chase them to 'vinasha' and finally swear as follows: Ahatvaa Ravanam samkhye sautra jana baandhavam, Ayodhyaam na pravekshyaami tribhistaibhraatribhiḥ shape/ I vow by the honour of my brothers, that in the Maha Sangrama I will devastate Ravana with all his Rakasa Veeras, bandhu bandhava parivaaraas, and then only enter Ayodhyapuri.' Then Vibhishana so delighted and assured : 'Prabho! I feel truly elated with exciting enthusiasm and assure you, that I too should most certainly join your 'sena' for this epic like 'dharma yuddha' against 'adharma' even at the cost of my very existence.' Having heard what Vishishana swore, Rama was pleased and embraced Vibhishana and then instructed Lakshmana: iti bruvāṇaṃ rāmas tu pariṣvajya vibhīṣaṇaṃ, abravīt lakṣmaṇaṃ prītaḥ samudrāj jalam ānaya/tena cemaṃ mahāprājñam abhīṣiṇca vibhīṣaṇaṃ, rājānaṃ rakṣasāṃ kṣipraṃ prasanne mayi mānada/ evaṃ uktas tu saumitrir abhyaṣiṇcad vibhīṣaṇaṃ, madhye vānaramukhyānāṃ rājānaṃ rāmaśāsanāt/ taṃ prasādaṃ tu rāmasya dṛṣṭvā sadyaḥ plavaṅgamāḥ, pracukruśur mahānādān sādhu sādhu iti cābruvan/ ' Sumitra nandana! Please fetch the sacred waters from this Maha Sagara, so that we should all celebrate Rajyabhisheka to Dharmajna Vibhishana. On hearing Rama's announcement, the surrounding Maha Veera Vanara Sena jumped up and down with dances and drumbeatings followed by Vibhishana's Rajyabhisheka by Rama-Lakshmana-Sugrivaas and Hanuman -Angada-Jambavan prabhrutis to the joyous samudra garjanas in the background. As the mood was cooled down somewhat, Vera Hanuman asked Vibhishana: ' Rakshasa Raja! Please enlighten us as to how now to cross this Maha Sagara by all the Maha Vaanara Sena led by Shri Rama Lakshana Sugrivas and us all. Then Dharmatma Vibhishana submitted: ' Raghu Vamsha Mahaparakrama Shri Rama may please like to invoke Samudra Deva. Shri Rama is of the very clan of Maha Sargara Raja and of the Surya Vamsha, and as such Samudra Deva should oblige Rama's invocations and appeals to him and become some what reduce his fury and cool down.' Then Sugriva too reacted that Vishishana's advice was truly laudable and suggested that let the arrangements of agni deva pratishtha in the seashores be made; there after, Shri Rama having settled on a 'darbhasana' initiated the invocations to Samudra Deva.

- a) Ravana's spy Shardula informed of the arrival of Maha Vanara Sena at the Samudra teera, Ravana asked Shuka as parrot to Sugriva and try 'bhedopaaya' who wished to kill him but for Rama!
b) Rama invoked Samudra Deva for three days long, lost patience and threatened by shooting arrows.

a) As Duratma Ravana despatched a guptachari named Shardula Rakshasa witnessed the proceedings of a huge vanarasa sena having arrived at the shores of the Maha Sagara and their enthusiastic screamings and reached back Ravana's Sabha and as in their midst were seated Maha Tejasvis Rama- Lakshmanas. Shardula said further: Maha Raja! As per your personal instruction, I have brought this update as soon as I arrive here and thus you may like to return Sita Devi or otherwise as per your kind instruction.' On hearing this provocative information, Ravana was infuriated and stood up like a thousand tiger leap from his throne, as the chief Economist Shuka Maha Rakshasa was summoned by Ravana and briefed him to reach the seashores urgently and approach Sugriva the King of Vanaras and tackle him to utilise the 'bhedopaaya' and having assumed a parrot form and whisper to him: 'King of Vanaras! You do belong to a superior and distinguished heritage of Vanaras who had defeated King Vaali himself to death and accomplished the throne. Then therefore as a king to king advice Ravana the King of Asuras would be to quietly return to Kishkindha and leave Rama Lakshmanas to their fate. We would then settle our mutual terms eventually to your entire satisfaction'. On hearing the message, Sugriva had at once caught the parrot's neck and tried to smother the bird's neck and threw it on the sandy ground; as the parrot screeched for help Rama raised his tone and said: Sugriva! Please do not kill a mere messenger!' At once, Sugriva then responded: ' Paramatma Shri Rama! This parrot is not a bird but a Maha Rakshasa turned into Parrot form and thus should be killed. Shri Rama regaining his characteristic composure stated: Sugriva! Whether being a rakshasa or in a parrot form, he is after all a messenger only! so leave him free.

So saying, the terribly upset Shri Rama raised his dhanush by his hands with decisiveness and released his fierce arrows as if Mahendra threw his vajrayudha. Then the rains of ‘Rama Banaas’ having forcefully entered the Maha Sagara Jalas, the instant reaction of multi hooded Maha Nagas jumped up the beyond limits sky high. So did the massive crocodiles and whales were shaken by the bana varshaas. Then as the Maha Samudra’s ever rising waves further and further, Maha Rakshasas underneath well settled for ages were rattled and rose sky high adding to further chaos and bedlam. Lakshmana restrained Rama who was getting further worked up and said: dearmost brother, please control and the breaking acme might lead to a universal catostrophy’. Then Nala Vanara agreed to the duty as well as his father taught him. tato niṣṣṭarāmeṇa sarvato hariyūthapāḥ, abhipetur mahāranyam hṛṣṭāḥ śatasahasraśaḥ/ te nagān nagasamkāsāḥ śākhāmṛgagaṇaśabhāḥ, babhañjur vānarās tatra pracakarṣuḥ ca sāgaram/ te sālaiś cāśvakarṇaiś ca dhavair vaṃśaiś ca vānarāḥ, kuṭajair arjunaiś tālaiś tikalaiś timiśair api/ As instructed directly by Shri Rama himself, having realised Nala's assuming the responsibility, Vanara Sena's excitement was truly evident even as they ran into the adjoining forests. Being of huge like body frames, the Maha Vanaras searched 'parvata shikharaas' for the tall and strong trees and having pulled them down dragged them as heaps on the 'samudra tata'. The maha vrikshas included Saala-Ashvakarna-Dhava-Kutaja- Arjuna-Taala-Tilaka-Tinisha-Bel-Chhitavana-Kanera-Ashokas. As the vrikshas were pulled out, some vanaras were entrusted with the duty of cutting off the roots. The tree trunks once spread as heaps the sounds of flinging them was getting more and more were intense. Once selected for floating, 'yantra sahaayata' or the help of appropriate machinery and machine tools was invented too. Simultaneously mountain stones and boulders too were rolled down. As the Vanara groups were entrusted the duty of dropping the boulders, there were huge alarming noises. On the other side some vanaras with their deft handiwork got busy in shapefully arranging and tying together the borders of the floating bridge. Vaanara veera Nala thus started off the wonderstriking task of bridge construction successfully. Sa nalena kṛtaḥ setuḥ sāgare makarālaye, śuśubhe subhagaḥ śrīmān svātīpatha ivāmbare/ tato devāḥ sagandharvāḥ siddhāś ca paramarṣayaḥ, āplavantaḥ plavantaś ca garjantaś ca plavaṃgamāḥ/ daśayojanavistīrṇam śatayojanam āyatam, nalaś cakre mahāsetuṃ madhye nadanadīpateḥ/ Thus Nala Vaanara constructed the unbelievable 'setu bandhana maha karya' under his auspices. At that time, Deva-Gandharva-Siddha-Maharshis collected as groups awe stricken with admiration and approbation. Nala's readied setu bandhana was of the length of hundred yojanas, width of ten yojanas. tāni koṭisahasrāṇi vānarāṇām mahaujasām, badhnantaḥ sāgare setuṃ jagmuḥ pāram mahodadheḥ/ viśālaḥ sukṛtaḥ śrīmān subhūmiḥ susamāhitaḥ, aśobhata mahāsetuḥ sīmanta iva sāgare/ tataḥ pare samudrasya gadāpāṇir vibhīṣaṇaḥ, pareṣām abhighatārtham atiṣṭhat sacivaiḥ saha/ In this manner, sahasra koti vaanara sena had truly succeeded in the none too precedented and none too futuristic 'epic karya'! The bridge is at once broad, huge, attractive, fantastic, even and amazingly well knit and engineered, awe striking and outstanding.

Shri Rama and Sugriva's arbuda strong Vanara Sena was dedicated to Rama Kaarya to attack the evil Ravanaasura in the objective of Setu Bandhana. The sena was totally engaged, as some pulled up mountain boulders, some uprooting maha vrikshas and throwing their heavy branches down to the Maha Samudra, some with collecting the dropped branches down into a floating bridge making skilled engineers and their work force, and the architects and their workers, and son literally labouring round the clock. Witnessing the full force of the Vanarasa sena, Shri Rama was so happy admiring the dedication and dynamism of the Vanara Sena, Shri Rama was overwhelmed with the 'bhaki'. During this course of action, Rama witnessed a small brown Squirrel, going up and down the Seashore with little pebbles in its small mouth and carrying them from the seashore and dropped them into the Maha Sagara. A huge Vanara was carrying a large mountain boulder on his shoulder as the squirrel came in his way. The Maha Vanara jumped back and thundered ‘ you litt le brat of a squirrel and stepped back; hopr you are alive as you could be a casualty, what are you doing here! The little squirrel looked up at the great Vanara: I am sorry , brother Maha Varara! As the small voice: Are you not able to see that in my own way am carrying on my duty with diligence and devotion in my own humble manner of the unique Swami Rarya! I ma also helpingShri Rama to build the bridge; I wish to work hard for him. ‘ As the squirrel screamed in its own hihg pitch of voice, the Maha Vanara carrying the boulder on his shoulder, tauned addressing the fellow Maha Vanara: ‘Did you hear that!; a squirrel is building a bridge with his pebbles. I have never heard a funnier story like this’. Then there was arourig response from the co Maha Vanaras. The squirrel never felt humiliated but took its ground angrily: ‘Look, I may not carry mountains or boulders, as Almighty granted only a little strength. I can only carry pebbles. But my heart mels out as how Bhagavan Shri Rama has been sufferng Maha Pativrata Devi Sita’s viyoga and had been crying away incesantly and hence I could do so to the best of my own capability’! Then one Vanara picked up the squirrel’s tail at a mere creatuure had been hindering the massive task ahead and threw it far away as the squirrel, crying out the name of Rama, fell into his hands; he held the squirrel close to him and stated: Maha Vanara’s! Please do not make fun of the weak and the small. Your strength or what you do is certainly invaluable. Yet what matter is this little squirrel’s has love in his heart. You are brave and strong and are doing a wonderful task og bringing all these huge boulders and stones from far and dropping them in the Maha Sagara. But do you not notice that it is the tiny pebbles and stones brought by this small squirrel and some of the other smaller creatures which are filling the small gaps left between the huge stones?Further, do you not realize that the tiny grains of sand brought by this squirrel are the ones which bind the whole structure and make it strong? Yet you scold this small creature and fling him away in anger!’Hearing this, the Vanaras were ashamed, and bowed down their heads.Rama continued, ‘Always remember, however small, every task is equally important. A project can never be completed by the main people alone. They need the support of all, and however small, an effort should always be appreciated!’ Having stated thus Shri Rama then turned to the squirrel and said softly, ‘My dear squirrel, I am sorry for the hurt caused to you by my army, and thank you for the help you have rendered to me. Please go and continue your work happily.’ Saying this, he gently stroked the back of the squirrel with his fingers, and three lines appeared where Bhavagan Rama’s fingers touched it and passed his fingers gently over the little squirrel’s back.

As put it him down there were three white stripes on his back. Indeed, no task and service to Sri Rama, however small, is unimportant! Every task should be looked upon as service to Rama as neither do big or small. In Bhagavad-gita 9.27 Krishna says:yat karoshi yad asnasi yaj juhoshi dadasi yat, yat tapasyasi kaunteya, tat kurushva mad-arpanam/ Whatever you do, whatever you eat, whatever you offer or give away, and whatever austerities you perform, do thatas an offering to Me’. Sources : Bhagavata Purana and Bhagavat Gita].

As the ‘setubandhana karya’ was concluded, Vibhishana along with his ministers picked up their maces, bows and arrows with ‘divyastraas’ on hands wearing ‘loha kavachas’ and select vaanara veeras moved forward to the other end of the bridge to face any possible attacks by the Mayavi Rakshasas. agratas tasya sainyasya śrīmān rāmaḥ salakṣmaṇaḥ, jagāma dhanvī dharmātmā sugrīveṇa samanvitaḥ/ anye madhyena gacchanti pārśvato ’nye plavaṅgamāḥ, salile prapatanty anye mārgam anye na lebhire, ke cid vaihāyasa gatāḥ suparṇā iva pupluvuḥ/ ghoṣeṇa mahatā ghoṣaṁ sāgarasya samucchritam, bhīmam antardadhe bhīmā tarantī harivāhinī/ Now, Dhanurdhara Shri Rama Lakshmanas as accompanied by the King of Vaanaras and the Maha Vaanara Pramukhas Sena moved forward in the Southern Side. The Vanara sena as moving ahead with discipline yet with hysterical ‘Ninaadaas of Jai Jai Shri Rama’appeared to have added to the ‘Maha Samudra Ghosha’! Slowly and well controlled Maha Vanara Sena this moved ahead with contolled regulation.*tad adbhutam rāghava karma duṣkaram; samīkṣya devāḥ saha siddhacāraṇaiḥ, upetya rāmaṁ sahita maharṣibhiḥ; samabhyāṣiṇcan suśubhair jalaiḥ prthak/ jayasva śatrūn naradeva medinīm; sasāgarām pālāya śāśvatīḥ samāḥ, itīva rāmaṁ naradevasatkṛtam; śubhair vacobhair vividhair apūjayan/*On visioning this miraculous act of ‘setu bandhana’ as concieved and executed by Shri Rama the ‘ Yuga Purusha’, Siddhha- Charana- Maharshis had duly performed their respective manasika abhishekaas’with sacred waters blessing the success of ‘Rama Karya’ of dharma yuddha’. They introspected within their respective hearts, stating : ‘Nara Deva! May you be exalted to unique and everlasting grandeur through Yugas as the one and only ‘Prithvi Paripaalaka’!

As Rama with Vanara Sena had finally crossed the Sagara, the flustered Ravana despatched Shukha-Saaranas as Vanaras, Vibhishana gets them caught, but the kind Rama releases yet with an alert message.

Literally flustered by Rama’s arrival along with the huge Vanara Sena at his door step, looked at his Ministers Shuka Saaranas that to the cross Maha Sagara should be indeed impossible and the miracle act of seta bandhaana should be dream work. Now that such a non reality had happened, it should now be essential to obtain some facts like what would be approximation of the size and strength of the Vanara Sena. Then he addressed the mantris: ‘ Both of you should now enter in a manner not to be recognised and get an idea of the number, magnitude and strength, who are all the prominent ones among them, like Sugriva, how had they succeeded the task of ‘setu bandhana’, what precisely is the objective of Rama Lakshmanas and how do they decide to execute it, what type of astra shastra jnana do they arec equipped with, who is the senapati of Sugriva, and such details and report back soon enough.’ As Ravana instructe thus Shuka Saaranas having assumed vanara swarupas entered the huge Vanara Sena. Then they had systematically sought to ascertain the count but failed as the vanara sena was beyond comprehension as some were on mountain tops, some in the fruit gardens, some racing up on the beaches, some being paraded by their respective squadrons and thus got scattered. As the Rakhsasa Mantris were lost in their very first issue of Ravana's questionnaire viz the count of Vanara Sena, Vibhishana noticed the suspicious movement of the two ministers of Ravana, caught them redhanded, subdued them and addressed Shri Rama: 'Shatru Nagara Vijaya Praati Utsuka' Shri Rama! These are Ravana's ministers named Shuka Saaranas' masquerading as Vanaras, who were despatched at Ravana's behest.' Then Shri Rama replied smilingly and addressed the Ravana Mantris: yadi dr̥ṣṭam balaṁ kṛtsnam vayanā vā susamīkṣitāḥ, yathoktam vā kṛtam kāryam chandataḥ pratigamyatām/ praviśya nagarīm lankām bhavadbhyāṁ dhanadānujaḥ, vaktavyo rakṣasām rājā yathoktam vacanam mama/ yad balaṁ ca samāśritya sītām me hṛtavān asi, tad darśaya yathākāmam sasainyaḥ sahabāndhavaḥ/ In case you have witnessed the scene of the Maha Vanara Sena yourselves and the volume and weight of the sena, you may now return safely and intimate Ravana and his curiosity. In case if you still wish to collect further details, then you may like to more intensely too as per your own capacity. You need not feel nervous that you might get caught and get punished unnecessarily and that you might be killed. We are not apprehensive on that count, since only 'shastra jnaana shunya' persons might do so.' 'Vibhishana! these two Rakshasas may now be let free'. Rama further advised the spies and said: 'Shuka Saaranas! As you reach back to Lanka, give my warning message to Ravana as follows: 'Ravana! As you are backed up with your Rakshasa Sena, you had forcefully kidnapped my dear wife. Now I am at your door step. Do try to display your personal might, and that of your kith and kin, your followers and your 'chaturanga balaas.' May you now taste the poisonous arrows of my self and see for your self how poisonous these are going to be by the Sun Rise next. Ravana! Do realise that like Vajraayudha Indra, I should release all my pent up anger on your followers and to you get unleashed!' Then on reaching King Ravana, the released Shuka Saaranas addressed the King! 'Rakshaseswara! We were caught by Vibhishana who in turn produced us before Rama amidst Lakshmana Sugrivas and the stalwarts of Vanara Sena. But Dharmatma Shri Rama allowed us to return back to Lanka. Dasharathanandana Shri Rama, Shriman Lakshmana, Vibhishana and Mahendragiri samana tejasvi Sugriva are like Loka palaka samana Dhuryashali, Maha Parakrami and more so 'astrashastra jnaataas'. It appears that their success on the battle front appears to be assured! The Vanara Sena's full preparedness, enthusiasm appears at its peak. It appears that left to themselves they should be able to break down Lankapuri lock, stock and barrel. Further, Shri Rama appeared as if he himself could smash down the Lankapuri all by himself even as the three some of the maha parakramis might as well relax. Rama Lakshmanaguptaasaa Sugrivena cha vaahini, babhuva durdharshataa sarvayrapi Suraasurair/ Prahashtha yodhaa dhvajini mahatmaanāṁ vanaikaseenaam samapti yoddhamicchataam, alam virodhena shamo vidheeyataam pradeeyataam Dashrathaaya Maithileem/ Maha Raja! Shri Rama, Lakshman and Sugriva and the well prepared Vanara Sena appears to be invincible even to the entirety of Deva and Asuras. Considering the pluck and readiness of the vanara sena, your all out effort might not end up as a futile exercise, and my humble request to you is to release Sita away.

As Saarana and Shukhas reported the proceedings of their visit on the shores of the Maha Sagara, Ravanaasura was incensed with the reportage and affirmed: yadi mām abhiyuñjīran devagandharvadānavāḥ, naiva sītām pradāsyāmi sarvalokabhayād api/ tvam tu saumya paritrasto haribhir nirjito bhṛśam, pratipradānam adyaiva sītāyāḥ sādhu manyase, ko hi nāma sapatno mām samare jetum arhati/ ‘Ravana then addressed the spies back to him with a parting advice that all their offensive efforts might be counter productive and hence the release of Sita might be considered, Ravana stood his ground with firmness and declared that even if Deva-Gandhrava- Danavaas too were to attack me and you seem to be frightening me of ‘nara vaanaraas’; who could in trilokas could challenge me.’ Having declared thus, Ravana having cooled down somewhat then asked Mantri Sarana: ‘ Who are the Vaanara Pramukhas any way! Who are the so called ‘Vanara Mukhyas’ jubilant to attack! Whose advices that normally King of Vanaras Sugriva would normally heed to. Sarana, tell me in detail who are the front line Vanaras.’ Then Saarana replied; Maha Raja! Besides, Sugriva, I esteem Maha Vanara Vaali Putra Yuva Raja Angada is comparable only with Vaali’s grandeur and intrepidity. Angada is Sugriva’s beloved and he always reciprocates his inner feelings of Sugriva’s sympathy like Indra and Varuna. As you are aware that Hanuman a peerless Rama bhakta, as also the Prime Minister of Sugriva, too has admiration for Angada Kumara with his youthful ebullience and driving energy. Behind Yuva Raja Angada is Nala the maha setu nirmana karta. Andgada who keeps on ever jumping and screaming ‘simhanaadaas’ even being seated, as is not only over enthusiastic but contrios some ten arab and ten lakhas of his own contingent of Maha Vanaras! The silver coloured, ever restless Vanata named Sweta the bhayankara parakrami, buddhi - maan, Shura Veera, Traiokhya Vikhyaata, who keeps on often coming and going King Sugriva, ever carrying the messages and instructions of Sugriva, and keeps vigil, and provides enthusiasm, gusto and zeal to the unit heads. Then there is Kumudanayak Yudhapati the garden chief of fruit- roots on 'Gomati Nadi Teera chaturvidha /parvata shreni' and with huge following of milloins of Vaanara Veeras under his single control. Then there is Vanaraagresara Chanda who with his giagantic physique with everflying hairs of red-yelloyish-white colours keeps the Vaanara Sena of lakhs under his personal care and control with their duty of alerting and ready to move forward always coordinating other vanara squadrons and battalions too. Ravana Raja! Then there is another Yudha Pati named Rambha Nayaka who possesses the Simha Parakrami who spreads his ears waverly, who is like Mrityunjaya Himself with megha garjanas ever jumping forward and is capable of tearing the enemy groups berserk like a wild flames along with equally ferocious groups spreading agni jwaalas around them against the enemy rakshasaas looking helpless except to surrender or die. Yudhapati Sharabha the picturesque Salvaka Parvata nivasi vaanara veeraas who are desperate in killing the enemy Rakshasaas as the latter used to often disturb them from their tranquility and were never spared from running back with their speed and tactics to disappear but wer never spared to return. Their 'sangina' or identification is ' Vihara' and their following is a lakh and forty thousand. Then Maharaja! Then there is Panasa Nayaka Yodhapati with a following of fifty lakhs of following like 'Bhairavas'.

[Vishleshana on Ashta Bhairavas:

Eight Manifestations of Maha Bhirava are Kaala Bhairava, Asitaanga Bhairava, Rudra Bhairava, Krodha Bhairava, Kapala Bhairava, Bhishana Bhairava, Unmatta Bhairava and Samhara Bhairava. In the context of Andhakaasura Samhara, Maha Deva then decided Devas and Ganas to withdraw excepting his Nandi Vahana. He assumed a mammoth Bhairava Swarupa with the extraordinary radiance and heat of crores of Suryas, wearing Tiger Skin, Sarpa-haraas, Ten Hands and Three Burning Eyes and pierced his Trishula right into the Asura's heart and hit his head with his mace and tossed his body up high in the air that got dropped on Earth with a thud. From all the sides of his huge body, there were streams of blood as Ashta Bhairavas were surfaced: from the Eastern direction emerged a Bhairava akin to Agni called 'Vidya Raaj' with his neck adorned with lotus flowers; from the Southern direction appeared 'Kala Raaj' Bhairava looking like a 'Preta' with dense black colour; from the Western direction was materialised a Bhirava named 'Kamaraj'; from the Northern direction was caused a fourth Bhairava named 'Soma Raaj'; a fifth Bhairava emerged from the wound near the demon's heart where Maha Deva pierced his Trishula and his name was 'Swacchanda Raja' with the resemblance of Indra Dhanush (Rainbow); the Sixth Bhairava was 'Lalit Raaj' who appeared from the gush of the Asura's blood on Earth; the Seventh Bhairava was 'Vighna Raaj' and including Maha Bhairava there were thus Ashta Bhairavas. Further Stanzas follow:

Then there is Krodhana named Maha Vanara ever jumping forward as though the Durdara Parvata swarupa is jumping forward and further on the shores, is the prasiddhaa yudhapati with sixty lakhs of maha sainika vaanaras. yas tu gairikavarṇābhaṁ vapuḥ puṣyati vānaraḥ, gavayo nāma tejasvī tvāṁ krodhād abhivartate/ enaṁ śatasahasrāṇi saptatiḥ paryupāsate, eṣa āśaṁsate laṅkāṁ svenāṅikena marditum/ ete duṣprasahā ghorā balinaḥ kāmarūpiṇaḥ, yūthapā yūthapaśreṣṭhā yeṣāṁ saṁkhyā na vidyate/ Tejasvi Vanara Gavaya is yet another self confident, even arrogant 'Goura varna' dhairya shali Maha Vanarara Yoddha commanded by seventy lakh like minded Maha Vaanara warriors being extremely anxious to look forward to bathe into the sands of Lankapuri and drown the Rakshasas in their own demoniac home land for a change instead of their constant attacks on Vanara nivaasaas frequently and unexpectedly. These are merely a very few select Vaanara Yoddhaas, Maha Raja, who are bein named as per my count and knowledge in the very quick reckoning, but these heros are whom we had witnessed, but surely the number of such Maha Vanara Yoddhas as had dispersed in fruit gardens or on the ‘parvata shreni’ relaxing getting readied for the announcement of the battle. Indeed these are but only illustrative of Vanara Yoddhas and is certainly not possible to count from other Yuthapati Groups.

Saarana further described as Ravana seemed interested further details. He said: Rakshasa Raja! as you are interested details of the Vanara Yoddhas I am giving other significant details. Besides the Vanara Yoddhas, the Maha Reeksha Maha Kaayas like Reeksha Raja Dhumra who is of mountainous physique, at once frightful and the resident ‘parvata shikharas. Then his younger brother the legendary Jambavan whose ‘svabhaava’ is no doubt cool and dignified yet is a Maha Parakrami. He is ever a follower of the directives and ‘seva’ of ‘Guru Jana’ yet on battle fronts his truly invincible. In the battle waged by Indra and Devas against Asuras, his valour and courage was amazing as his very grip with piercing nails was able to smash down numberless Asuras. His fellow followers with their black bushes like giant size bodies had always created havoc in the course of the battle. Once provoked the Riksha Maha Senna under Jambavan’s leadership was worse than that of Pishachas and Rakshasaas. They are of the thick black cloud physical statures and have least bother for ‘mrityu’ at any time.

‘Yuva Raja Angada then asked the Maha Vaanara Veeras by turn and named them as Gaja-Gavaaksha-Gavaya-Sharabha-Gandhamaadana- Mainda- Dvidida - Sushena-and Jambavan, about their respective abilities to cross the Maha Sagara. The replies were as follows: Maha Vanara Gaja said that he could jump off by ten yojanas- Gavaksha could cover twenty yojanas-Sharabha confirmed thirty yojanas-Rishabha assured forty yojanas-Gandhamaadana would cover fifty yojanas comfortably- Mainda quoted sixty with enthusiasm- Dvipada by seventy yojanas- and Sushena the dare devil upto eighty yojanas. Then Jambavan stated that in his youthful days and years he no doubt could have crossed the distance from here to the other shore, but now his present ability would now be restricted to some ninety yojanas but might not be more. Jambavan further confirmed: tāṁś ca sarvān hariśreṣṭhāñ jāmbavān punar abravīt, na khalv etāvad evāśid gamane me parākramah/ mayā mahābalaiś caiva yajñe viṣṇuḥ sanātanaḥ, pradakṣiṇīkṛtaḥ pūrvam kramamāṇas trivikramah/ In the years of yore when Bhagavan Vishnu assumed the incarnation of Vamana Deva, as Danava Bali Chakravarti bestowed mere three feet of land to Vamana, then the latter measured mere two feet as earth and urthva lokas and for the third foot was of the nether lokas with Bali down under too. That was the time, Jambavaan recalled he was able to perform full parikrama to the Virat swarupa! ---aham etad gamiṣyāmi yojanānām śataṁ mahat, nivartane tu me śaktiḥ syān na veti na niścitam/ Then buddhimaan Angada while addressing Jambavan with great respect for his age, valour and enormous ‘panditya’ said : ‘ I should no doubt be able to cover hundred yojanas of the Maha Sagara from here to Lanka dwipa, but do not have the confidence of possible return!’]

Stanza 15 continued: Maha Veera Jambavan the King of Bears such as Black bears-grizzly bears-panda bears-sloth bears-Sun bears-polar bears, which are symbolic of strength, stability and supportive ever has as yudhapati called Dambha who despatches his army and is a ‘maha upaasaka’ of Indra Deva: Maha Raja Lankeshwara! So much about Jambavan and his sena. Now you also please note another Vanara Veera Samnaadana popularly known as the Vaanara Pitaamaha who had ever been called by Indra Deva to assist him in Deva- Danava-Asura Yuddhas for assistance to Devas. Then Saarana described about Krathana the Vaanara Yuthapati who often was approached for assistance; this Vararottama was born of Agni Deva’s samyoga with a Gandharva Kanya and thus called as Agni Putra. Rakshasraja! Maha Vaanara Krathana is ever worshipped by Kinnaras, Maha Parvara Rajas and a friend of Kubera your cousin brother, as Kubera on his own garden reserves a place under a jambu tree. Maha Krathana never boasts of his bravery in battles yet he is stated to lead arabs of vanara veeras around him and is awaiting the great opportunity of demolish Lankapuri. Then there is a Pramaathi namaka Maha Vanara Yodhapati who is worthy of special mention. He has a following of ten crores of Maha Vanaras . Recalling the remote past rivalry of Maha Kesari the father of Veera Hanuman between Maha Vanaras and Gajendraas, Pramathi with his followers of ten crores and stationed himself atop Mandarachala and Usheerabeeja

Parvata where even Indra Deva's Airavata Elephant would not dare enter, let alone common elephants into the surrounding fruit and flower gardens nearby. Then the Vanara Sena headed by Gavaksha are of the classification of 'Golaangula' or popularly named 'langoors' with black faces and long tails who were famed as having assisted in the construction of 'setu bandhana'. They too are over enthusiastic to devastate Lanka puri. Then the name of Kesari is known worldwide as the father of Maha Veera Hanuman whose escapades are fresh in the memory of Lankapuri citizens. Kesari along with his maha vaanara sena is ever joyful in the fruit gardens of Meru Parvata which are ever green in the six seasons all through the years. Then there is Shatabali Senapati a 'Suryopasaka' who too is anxiously waiting for Shri Rama karuna and fulfill 'Lanka Vinashana' forthwith. gajo gavākṣo gavayo nalo nīlaś ca vānaraḥ, ekaika eva yūthānām koṭibhir daśabhir vṛtaḥ/ tathānye vānaraśreṣṭhā vindhyaparvatavāsinaḥ, na śakyante bahutvāt tu saṁkhyātum laghuvikramāḥ/ sarve mahārāja mahāprabhāvāḥ; sarve mahāśailanikāśakāyāḥ, sarve samarthāḥ pṛthivīm kṣaṇena; kartum pravidhvastavikīrṇaśailām/ Maha Raja! Gaja-Gavaksha-Gavaya-Nala-Neela Senapatīs with ten crores each of their Vaanaara Maha Senas are right now surrounded the Lankapuri about to attack; further the Maha Samudra Samana Vindiyachala Vaanara Sena is truly countless. In short, the totality of the attacking Sena is replete with 'parvata samaana shaktivaan' is right at your door step.

Shuka took the cue of Sharana and initiated the reflexes of Vanara Ministers, Mainda-Dvividās, Hanuman-Rama Laksmanas and of Sugrivas. He initiated: Rakshas Raja! the count of the MahaVaana Sena is approximated at 21 koti sahasras, sahasra ‘shanku’ and hundred ‘brindas’; these are all kishkindha vaasis. Their origin invariably includes the Deva-Gandharvas and possess the power of various forms as they would please. Rajan! Among these Maha Vanaras Yoddhas whom I could spot straightly are Mainda and Dvividā as of ‘Devata Samana’ whom Brahma Himself blessed for ‘amrita paana’ and are very eager to uproot Lankapuri. Then Maha Bali Veera Hanuman standing like an enraged elephant who crossed the Maha Sagara by one leap and succeeded in Sita darshaana creating havoc in Lankapuri by the flames of his tail. udyantam bhāskaram dṛṣtvā bālāḥ kila pipāsitaḥ, triyojanasahasram tu adhvānam avatūrya hi/ ādityam āharīṣyāmi na me kṣut pratiyāsyati, iti samcintya manasā puraiṣa baladarpitaḥ/ anādhṛṣyatamam devam api devarśidānavaiḥ, anāsādyaiḥ patito bhāskarodayane girau/ Once in the past when the Anjanaputra Anjaneya as a ‘baalak’ felt hungry and mistook Surya Deva as a ripe fruit on the sky and jumped up higher and higher on the udaya giri, but having unable to jump up to Surya rolled down the mountain and hurt his ‘hanu’ that is chin or jaw and hence called ‘Hanuman’ the popular name of Anjaneya the Anjana putra. satyam āgamayogena mamaiṣa vidito hariḥ, nāsyā śakyam balaṁ rūpam prabhāvo vānubhāṣitum/ eṣa āśamsate laṅkā eko marditum ojasā, yaś caiṣo ‘nantaraḥ śūrah śyāmāḥ padmanibhekṣaṇaḥ/ King Ravana! I had learnt from trustworthy sources, I had gathered the background of Hanuman; his ‘bala-rupa-prabhavaas’ appear to be unique. He alone desired to bring down Lanka Saamrajya; how indeed could we forget the recent escapade of his as his tail in flames had successfully burnt off the best part of Lankapuri! Backing Hanuman is the lotus eyed ‘shura veera’ of ‘Ikshvakaku Vamsha shiromani’ atirathi the ‘loka prakhyata’. yasmin na calate dharmo yo dharmaṁ nātivartate/ yo brāhman astraṁ vedānś ca veda vedavidāṁ varaḥ, yo bhindyād gaganam bānaiḥ parvatān cāpi dārayet/ yasya mṛtyor iva krodhaḥ śakrasyeva parākramaḥ, sa eṣa rāmas tvām yoddhum rājan samabhivartate/ He and Dharma appear indivisible as he never crosses the frontiers of virtue and justice. He is equipped with brahmastra and veda jnana too. His anger is like mṛtyu and parakrama is like of Indra. With his arrows as released with his might could hit and pierce through the high skies. Ravana Raja! as you had forcibly kidnaped his dear wife, now is at Lanka Dwaara. Now: yaś caiṣa dakṣiṇe pārśve śuddhajāmbūnadaprabhaḥ, viśālavakṣās tāmrākṣo nilakuñcitamūrdhajaḥ/ eṣo ‘sya lakṣmaṇo nāma bhrātā prāṇasamaḥ priyaḥ, naye yuddhe ca kuśalaḥ sarvaśāstraviśāradaḥ/ amarṣi durjaya jetā vikrānto buddhimān balī, rāmasya dakṣiṇo bāhur nityam prāṇo bahiṣcaraḥ/ Lankeshwara! To Rama’s right side, is Lakshmana; his body shine is of molten gold colour, with broad and robust chest with somewhat looks of redness with his long head hairs are twisted round as a nest, on his head. Like a shadow of Rama, he is never separated from him. He too is an expert advisor to Rama, and is repleted with ‘shastra jnana’ and ‘raja neeti’ as per the interpretation as per ‘desha-kaala-paristhitis’. This ‘amarsha sheela-durjaya-parakrami’ ever ready to destroy the enemy and guarding Rama ever standing to his right and is the alternate energy of Rama. To his left is Vibhishana with his rakshasa ministers behind. Shri Rama had already coronated him as the Lankesha having duly celebrated his ‘rajyaabhishaka’! He is right now in disgust, hatred for Ravana, and desperate for the upcoming battle. Then one could locate Sugriva the maha tejasvi the King of Maha Vaana Sena heading the Sena with his mighty mace on his broad shoulders. Bhagavan Shri Rama having successfully killed Maha Bali Vaali had since handed over Devi Taara and Vanara Rajya to him. imām mahārājasamīkṣya vāhinīm; upasthitām prajvalitagrahopamām, tataḥ prayatnaḥ paramo vidhīyatām; yathā jayaḥ syān na paraiḥ parājayaḥ/ Maha Raja, this Maha Sena ready to attack you and the Lanka Samrajya is ever ready with unprecedented speed, daring, desperation as if it is threatening the very existence and the traditional grandeur and magnificence, quite apart from your own individual accomplishments!

As his Ministers Shuka Saaranas had thus described the readiness of Shri Rama, Lakshmana on his right, Vibhishana to left, Sugriva backed by Maha Vaanara Sena, Angada the son of Indraputra Vaali, bala vikrama shali Hanuman, durjaya Jambavan, and Maha Vaanaras Sushena, Kumuda, Neela, Vaanara shreshthas Nala, Gaja, Gavaksha, Sharabha, Mainda-Dwivadaas Then King Ravana stood up with anger yet with anxiety. Shuka Saaranas stood up erect while trembling with fear of death. Ravana then addressed them as follows in suppressed anger in a rather hoarse and husky tone: Nishachara Mantris! A King could display his 'anugraha and aagraha' or kindness and cruelty alike. You the Ministers should not transgress your limitations and reveal your meanness. As your very existence is subjected to the very mindset of the king and present the factuality of a situation be presented suitably tailored. Further the interpretation of the facts is certainly tuned up to whom you are presenting to. ripūṇāṁ pratikūlānāṁ yuddhārtham abhivartatām, ubhābhyāṁ sadṛśaṁ nāma vaktum aprastave stavam/ ācāryā guravo vṛddhā vṛthā vām paryupāsītāḥ, sāraṁ yad rājaśāstrāṇāṁ anujīvyāṁ na grhyate/ grhīto vā na vijñāto bhāro jñānasya vochyate, īdṛśaiḥ sacivair yukto mūrkhair diṣṭyā dharāmy aham/Tell me Shuka Saaranas, as the shatru sena is confronting already, then to resort to praising them individually named and reporting to your own king is justified! It is clear that you had never digested what all your aachayas, gurus and elders had taught and trained and that was like flavored scents poured into heaps of burnt off ash! Indeed 'raja naati and rana neeti' got coggged down as mere futilities. Or you might have suddenly got erased off from your memory screen. With such impolite and disinforming Mantri Mandali, it appears that I have so far managing the Raja kartavyas all by myself despite being surrounded by incompetent and good for nothing ‘ Mantri Mandali’! kim nu mṛtyor bhayaṁ nāsti mām vaktum parusaṁ vacaḥ, yasya me śāsato jihvā prayacchati śubhāśubham/ apy eva dahanam spṛṣtvā vane tiṣṭhanti pādapāḥ, rājadoṣaparāmṛṣṭās tiṣṭhante nāparādhinaḥ/ Then Ravana asserted: ‘ I am the sole and undisputable King of the Lanka Rajya and the very twist or turn of my tongue becomes the law of the land. But still realising the same very well, how dare you praise the ‘shatru sena’ right before me! Are you venturing to do so, without fearing my ‘praana danadana’! It is possible that in a forest, ‘maha vrishaas’ are not easily scared of engulfing flames, but a supreme authority’s ‘avahelana’ is never tolerated, specially eulogising the enemy! I am shattered to such an extent that I could kill you at once. apadhvaṁsata gacchadhvaṁ saṁnikarṣād ito mama, na hi vām hantum icchāmi smarann upakṛtāni vām, hatāv eva kṛtaghnau tau mayi snehaparāṇmukhaḥ/ Yet, am sparing you with life yet with an instruction to banish from this ‘sabha’ never showing faces to me again.’ Having shouted and howled at Shuka Sharanas, Ravana paused for a while and then intructed Mahodara who was nearby to let in professionally trained ‘guptacharas’ and instructed them to keep reporting to him directly about the following: ito gacchata rāmasya vyavasāyam parikṣatha, mantreṣv abhyantarā ye ‘sya prītyā tena samāgatāḥ/ katham svapiti jāgarti kim anyac ca kariṣyati, vijñāya nipuṇaṁ sarvaṁ āgantavyam aśeṣataḥ/ cāreṇa viditaḥ śatruḥ paṇḍitair vasudhādhipaiḥ, yuddhe svalpena yatnena samāsādyā nirasyate/ You must intimate the movement of the Vavnara Sena as per Rama’s instructions, about his close associates, including his latest friends, how are they sleeping, or awaken and whar precisely are they doing etc. and return forthwith. As I become aware of these details then an intelligent king could even suppress them with surprising attacks.’ Then the ‘guptacharas’ witnessed ‘Lakshmana sahita Rama’ as Vibhishana spotted them at once. Then one the spies named Shardula was caught red handed and the Vanara soldiers started pounding him along the the co spies too, but due to the kindness of Shri Rama were spared and with great fear and scare of death fled to run back to Lanka to Ravana.

Sarga Thirty

Then Shardula the spy ran back, Ravana desired as to the origin of Pramukha Vanaras like Jambavan, Sushena, Kesari, Sushena, Dadhimukhi, Sumukha-Sveta-Mainda brothers, Nala-Vegashali and so on.

As Shardula along with his spies of Ravana as caught by Vibhishana and got the 'deha shuddhi' by the Vanaras, yet released due to Rama's compassion, met Ravana again. Ravana then asked Shardula as why was he not as aggressive and plucky as usual, then Shardula replied that the vanara veeraas were ever vigilant and Rama protects them all. Even an entry to 'Rama sannidhi' was impossible. Even so we did some how reach atop Suvela Parvata as there was suspicion all around but were finally identified by Vibhishana again and got the pounding of Vanaras, but the ever benign Rama let us free as we retuned to you, nevertheless. Lakshmana was keeping guard at the entrance. The parting warning was that either Sita be released or face the attack. Ravana repeated his assertion once again: even if devata-gandharva-daanava and trilokas get shattered by me, still Sita would nor be freed. Then he asked Shardula again: 'you had somehow penetrated into the Vanara warriors anyway: tell me, who are the mighty ones who seem to be rather risky among them'. The was : Maha Raja! Jambavan appeared to be risky and in a battle against him to be tough indeed. He is the Riksha Raja being the son of Gadgada, and the latter too would be difficult to win over. Gadgada has another son named Dhumna. Then there is Indra saamana yoddha Kesari the Indra Guru Brihaapati samaana and of course Hanuman the son of Kesari who could himself destroy and uproot the rakshasaas as race! Then Maha Raja! dharmtma and parakrami Sushena is the son of Dharma. Further Dadhimukha Vanara the son of Chandra Deva. Then Sumukha, Durmukha and Vega darshi are the sons of Mrityu Devata. Surely indeed, Brahma appears to have blessed Mrityu with these mighty sons! Then the mention worthy senapati Neela Vanara the son of Agni Deva like the famed Hanuman is Vayu Putra. Balavan Angada is the nephew of Indra, besides Mainda and Dwivida the sons of Ahshvini Kumaras. Then Gaja-Gavaksha-Gavaya-Sharabha and Gandhamaadana are the sons of Yama Dharna Raja being the Kaala and Antaka samana parakramis! This is how the vanaras of 'devaamsha sambhutas' are as many as ten crores, all being the dutiful performers of Shri Rama Karya! Maha Raja! the valour of Shri Rama is inestimable as he has the past record of devastating Khara-Dushana-Trishiras already. He had destroyed Viraadha and vikaraala Kabandha in the past and is indeed is invincible. Further at the janasthaana in the dandakaaranya, Rama had the fame of countless Rakshas Veeras. Dharmatma Lakshmana is surely of the paraakrama of Gaja Raja and his 'baana prayoga praveenata' has a record of 'never miss the targets'. There besides, Shveta and Jyotirmukha Vaanara Veeras are the ourasa putras of Surya Deva, while Hemakuta Vaanara Veera is stated as Varuna Putra. Besides, Veeravara Nala is stated as the son of Vishvakarma the celestial architect cum construction engineer while Vegashali named maha vaanara is stated to be the son of Vasu Devatas. Thus Shri Rama Lakshmanas are now in the company of Vibhishana Sugrivas are ever ready to jump in to the offensive. And Maha Raja! the rest is in your hands and command!

Sarga Thirty One

Having shattered by Rama's impending attack by his spies, Ravana sought to a cover up his vicarious pleasure and planned a trick by presenting a Maya Rama Mastaka to Sita to force her to submission.

Having convened an emergency meeting of his 'maha mantri mandali', Ravana instructed maha maayavi Vidyujjihva to create a replica of Shri Rama's head as having fallen on a mutual encounter with Ravana rolled down on the battle ground and bring to to him atonce. As Vidyujihva created the 'Maya Shri Rama Shiras' likewise with Rama's head with flows of blood still trickling, Ravana along with the minister headed to Ashoka Vaatika and saw Deva Sita who was already drowned in tears awaiting her dearest Shri Rama, and quite oblivious of the developments at the gates of Lankapuri. Surrounded by cruel most and grotesque Maha Rakshasis, Ravana reached Devi Sita and addressed her: sāntvyamānā mayā bhadre yam upāśritya valgase, khara hantā sa te bhartā rāghavaḥ samare hataḥ/ chinnaṁ te sarvato mūlaṁ darpas te nihato mayā, vyasanenātmanaḥ sīte mama bhāryā bhaviṣyasi/ alpapunye nivṛttārthe mūḍhe paṇḍitamānini, śṛṇu bhartṛbadhaṁ sīte ghoram vṛtravadhaṁ yathā/ Bhadre! I have been constanly approaching you again and again with my sincere requests to conceed and become my Prime Queenship but ignored asserting that your husband was a hero to have killed Khara and his associates. But alas! the hero is now lying with his severed head as smashed down by me. I have smashed your overbearing arrogance and self decietfulness. Yet, I have no doubt could consider your Prime Queenship. Now ignore your Shri Rama chintana for ever and for good. Your so called ‘punya’ as a pativrata has thus faded suddenly and at least now you must enjoy the hues of the rising Sun in your youth days ahead. In case you are interested as to how the erstwhile story of Vritraasura vadha had taken place, you may like to hear from me the circumstances leading to Rama’s sad termination of life. (Ref. Vishleshana on Vritrasura Vadha vide Sarga Twenty Five of Valmiki Ayodhya Ramayana originally from Maha Bhagavata and Devi Bhagavata)

Stanzas 18 on ward:

It is learnt that a Maha Vaavara Sena headed by Sugriva had recently arrived at the shores of the Saagara headed by Rama on the northen side of Lankapuri. At the midnight time, it appeared that the Vanara Sena was bodily tired and fell asleep. Then my ‘guptacharis’ visited the place. Then the detachment of the Rakshasa Sena led by Prahasta, where Rama Lakshmanas too were present, destroyed a good portion of the Vanara sena. Then my Rakshasa soldiers utilised pattishaas-parighas-chakras-shulas-musalas and so on and killed the vanaras. atha suptasya rāmasya prahastena pramāthinā, asaktam kṛtahastena śiraś chinnaṁ mahāsinā/ vibhīṣaṇaḥ samutpatya nighṛito yadṛcchayā, diśaḥ pravrajitaḥ sarvair lakṣmaṇaḥ plavagaiḥ saha/ sugrīvo grīvayā śete bhagnayā plavagādhipaḥ, nirastahanukaḥ śete hanūmān rākṣasair hataḥ/ Then Shatru Vinasahana Rakshasa Maha Senapati Prahasta whose staggering physical stature with long and mighty arms took up a sharp sword and severed your dear Shri Rama Mastaka as is presented to you now. Then suddenly caught hold of Vibhishana the ‘swami drohi’ being my own younger brother as also Lakshmana who was making all out efforts to run away were killed in moments of time. Then the demoralised Sugriva the King of Vanaras was beheaded by Prahasta even as Hanuman was already hurt with his ‘hanu’ or jaw was overpowered by a strong group of Maha Raakshaas and was killed mercilessly recalling the nasty memories of his erstwhile misadventure in his earlier visit to Lanka Puri as a proper retribution. Similarly Jambavan the King of Bhallukas as was leaping back and forth facing the Rakshasa Veeras was hurt by his ghutana or knees by the ‘pattisha prahaaraas’ of a handful Rakshasa Veeras! Similarly, Mainda-Dvividha Maha Vanara Yodhhas were despatched to Yama Puri. Similarly, Panasa-Andada and the so called Maha Vanara prabhritis were subjected to death.’ As Ravana then instructed his Minister Vudyujjihva to keep Rama Mastaka right before Devi Sita and asserted as follows rāvaṇaś cāpi cikṣepa bhāsvaram kārmukam mahat, triṣu lokeṣu vikhyātam sītām idam uvāca ha/ idam tat tava rāmasya kārmukam jyāsamanvitam, iha prahastenānītam hatvā tam niśi mānuṣam/ sa vidyujjihvena sahaiva tac chiro; dhanuś ca bhūmau vinikīrya rāvaṇaḥ, videharājasya sutām yaśasvinīm; tato ’bravīt tām bhava me vaśānugā/ Site! As Ravana showed the maya Rama mastaka to Devi Sita mischievously, she was totally lost her self awareness totally shattered and requested Ravana to kill her and place her body besides Rama’s too.

Having closely examined the head and the precise face cut of her dearest husband, his lotus like eyes, mukhaakriti, keshha, lalaata, choodaanani and so on again and again repeatedly, Devi Sita was totally shattered with a semi heart break down nearly senseless unconsciousness for quite sometime. On slight recovery of senses, she traced back past memories. She then gradually realised that the very root cause of the sordid drama of her distress of dandakaranya nivasa was indeed that wretched woman Kaikeyi! Then Devi Sita angrily twisted her eye brows and addressed Kaikeyi in fuming lividness in hushed up tone: ' Kaikeyi, now is your frustration and jealousy for Rama is fruitful with an anti climatic effect by killing my Pati Deva! You indeed are exemplary as the true symbol of evil as a shame to womanhood. For which 'aparaadha' had ever been perpetrated by him to you to change his silk robes that he was born with were forced by him with naara vastras! You are a notorious and the meanest ' kalahakarani' ever born!' Having said likewise Devi Sita fell down to earth with depression. After recovery, she cried out incessantly thus: 'Ha Maha baaho, I am shattered to near death. I am having to see at your last breath as am literally widowed. The age old adage states that early widowhood for a married woman is a curse and precursor of evel days ahead. Even as I have been strictly observing the precepts of 'paativratya', my sadaachari husband disappearing this way, is curse of the worst type. I am now encountering a 'maha sankata' drowned in 'shoka maha samudra' as the rays of my hopes and aspirations are erased for ever. Raghu nandana! My mother in law Devi Kousalya's state now should be like a holy cow in the absence of a dearmost calf's sudden disappearance with death is unimajinable! Raghu Veera! the Jyotisha Maha Panditas asserted repeatedly that your 'ayush' is for thousands of life but you have negated them so soon and so suddenly! Raghu nandana! You have now proved to be of an 'alpaayusha'! Even being a symbol of being a 'buddhiman' your high grasp of emerging situations seem to have faded away. What a tragedy that when you were asleep deeply you had the fate of your end. If only you were even slightly awaken even with flimsy consciousness this tragedy could have been averted. You are an outstanding 'Neeti Shastra Vidvaan' yet I am uable to yet realise that you could be no more in this age of yours. Kamala nayana! Bhishana Kaaala Ratri seems to have hugged you with force. Nishpaapa Raghunandana! Surely by now you have entered Swarga Loka and have since met Maha Dasharatha as he should be familiarising your ancestors of the glorious Ikshvaaku Vamsha! Maha Raja Shri Rama! You have left behind your 'dharma patni' and assuredly I should be your 'saha dharma charini' ever! Kindly rememer me and take me too aling with you! I keep always embrace your mangala maya vigrah, even the' maamsa bhakshi himsarmaka rakshasis' seek to drag me to death. You have been always dutifully performing agnihoshthamadi yaginas and invoke Yagina purusha regularly but the 'daaha samskaara kartas' are not responsive now! Ha Maha Raja Rama! You had undergone the untold miseries to cross the Maha Sumudra for the sake of rescuing this 'mandabhagya' and having deftly crossed the invariable hurdles of endearing Sugriva by killing Vaali, performed his rajyaabhisheka, searching for me in north-east-west to locate me finally beyond the southern Mahasagara, and the extraordinaty and sensational success of 'setu bandhana' and alas even without waging an opportunity of encounteing the ever hatred Ravana had succumbed to the fate in deep sleep! śīrasā me śīras cāśya kāyaṁ kāyena yojaya, rāvaṇānugamiṣyāmi gatiṁ bhartur mahātmanaḥ, muhūrtam api necchāmi jīvituṁ pāpajīvinā/ Ravana! Now do kindly let me too be placed along with the body of Shri Rama and kill me too along.' There after Ravana moved away and joined the 'mantri maha sabha' and instructed them to command the entire Maha Rakshasa Sena to gather all together and initiate trumpeting as a symbol of attack the Vanara Sena!
