As Devi Sita was thus subjected with Rakshasas Maya as the Shri Rama's head was shown to her, she felt splintered and heart broken as Rakshasi Sarama who was actually posted by Ravana to ensure her raksha from the co Rakshasis who were blood sucking and human flesh eating, sought to assuage Sita's desperation and distress from time to time. As Devi Sita was lying on the dusty ground crestfallen, she advanced towards the illustrious 'nara naari' in a sincere manner and slowly and softly addressed her: 'Videha nandini! Be brave now and your inner psyche need not be off the balance. I had hidden myself from Ravana and heard what all he had blabbered; don't you get alarmed by what he boasted as Shri Rama's head was a make believe 'maaya'. Have you noticed as to how he had left rushing back as he was getting nervous. na śakyam sauptikaṁ kartum rāmasya veditātmanaḥ, vadhaś ca puruṣavyāghre tasminn evopapadyate/ na caiva vānarā hantum śakyāḥ pādapayodhinaḥ, surā devaṣabheṇeva rāmeṇa hi surakṣitāḥ/ dīrghavṛttabhujāḥ śrīmān mahoraskaḥ pratāpavān, dhanvī saṁhananopeto dharmātmā bhuvi viśrutaḥ/ Bhagavan Shri Rama is a 'sarvagna' or omni-scient the all knowing. To be able to kill him in his deep sleep is unimaginable. It is beyond comprehension that his sixth sense gets diluted at any time, any place or any context. Further the Maha Vanaras who are playful and attack the enemies by maha vrikshas but are not possible to get subdued. Just as samasta devaas shield and protect Indra Deva, Vaanara Veeras, like Sugriva-Hanuman-Angada and Jambavan would never ever allow Rakshasas to disturb Rama's sleep and the possibility is just a hallucination. vikrānto rakṣitā nityam ātmanaś ca parasya ca, lakṣmaṇena saha bhrātrā kuśalī nayaśāstravit/ hantā parabalaughānām acintyabalapauruṣaḥ, na hato rāghavaḥ śrīmān sīte śatrunibarhaṇaḥ/ ayuktabuddhikṛtyena sarvabhūta -virodhinā, iyaṁ prayuktā raudreṇa māyā māyavidā tvayi/ śokas te vigataḥ sarvaḥ kalyāṇam tvām upasthitam, dhruvam tvām bhajate lakṣmīḥ priyam pṛitikaram śṛṇu/ Devi Sita! Shriman Rama with broad shoulders being 'aajaanabaahu', 'vishaala vakshasthala', 'prataapi', 'dhanurdhara', 'bhu mandala vikhyaata dharmatma' is a 'yuga purusha'. His dear brother Veera Lakshmana like Adi Shesha to Maha Vishnu is forever alert guarding Rama and there is no question of his having slipped in to deep sleep. He is a 'neeti shastra praveena' and of 'achintya purusha'. Ravana's 'buddhi and karma' or nature and deed are both dirty. He is negative and mean minded, 'samasta praani virodhi', and an alternative to cruelty, jealousy, and worse still a notorious 'maayaavi'. With his vicarious pleasure, he had teased you and had made this scene to an innocent 'maha parivrara'. Assuredly, the days of your agony and Shri Rama Viyoga are nearly over and the most auspicious moments of Lakshmi Sevan to you are just round the corner. uttīrya sāgaram rāmaḥ saha vānarasenayā, saṁniviṣṭaḥ samudrasya tīram āsādy dakṣiṇam/ dr̥ṣṭo me paripūrṇārthaḥ kākutsthaḥ sahalakṣmaṇaḥ, sahitaḥ sāgarāntasthair balais tiṣṭhati rakṣitaḥ/ anena preṣita ye ca rākṣasā laghuvikramaḥ, rāghavas tūrṇa ity evaṁ pravṛttis tair ihāhrtā/ sa tām śrutvā viśālākṣi pravṛttim rākṣasādhipaḥ, eṣa mantrayate sarvaiḥ sacivaiḥ saha rāvaṇaḥ/ Shri Rama along with his Maha Vaanara Sena is at the door steps of Lankapuri having spread over the entire ‘Samudra Teera’ and is ever safe and ready to attack Ravana as at a epic popular ‘dharma yuddha’. Vishala Lochani! As the several messages of his spies having reached Ravana, he too right now is attending a convention of his mantris, spies and senapatis. iti bruvāṇā saramā rākṣasī sītayā saha, sarvodyogena saīnyānām śabdaṁ śuśrāva bhairavam/ danḍanirghātavādīnyāḥ śrutvā bheryā mahāśvanam, uvāca saramā sītām idaṁ madhurabhāṣiṇī/ saṁnāhajananī hy eṣā bhairavā bhīru bherikā, bherīnādaṁ ca gambhīraṁ śṛṇu toyadanisvanam/ Thus Rakshasi Surama was assuring Devi Sita, she herself heard Ravana’s ‘yuddha bheris’ as a sure sign of attack against Shri Rama Sena. Surama then addressing Devi Sita gave a spectacle of Ravana sena: ‘do you see the charitors tied with mighty horses move ahead, the foot soldiers in defined dresses are moving fast like the gushes of the sea tides well equipped with astra-shastras, kavachas, and brigh armanents. Are you noticing the movement of cavalry, elephantry, towards the Lanaka Nagara ‘ashta dwaaras’ especially the ‘muhka dwaara’. But the foot soldiers, as also the chatioteers-horsemen, elephant riders all seem to be somewhat over shadowed by shades of concern and insecurity as they are normally very enthusiastic and daring otherwise. rāvaṇaṁ samare hatvā nacirād eva maithili, tvayā samagram priyayā sukhārha lapsyate sukham/ samāgatā tvam rāmeṇa modiṣyasi mahātmanā, suvarṣeṇa samāyuktā yathā sasyena medinī/ girivaram abhito ’nuvartamāno; haya iva maṇḍalam āśu yaḥ karoti, tam iha śaraṇam abhyupehi devi; divasakaram prabhavo hy ayaṁ prajānām/ Devi Sita! Remember, Kamala Nayana Shri Rama is indeed beyond the frontiers of anger and his parakrama is of invincibility. Like Mahendra who faces Daitya Sena with confidence and patience ever ready to face challenges, he has the trust and thrust to demolish Ravana and his bunch of criminals! Thus Rama would most certainly and pretty soon secure his ‘pativrata’. Like even and timely rains help prithvi to become with surfiet of ‘sasya shyaamala prakriti’, you too Devi Vaidehi!! You to ought to soon receive the cool showers of Shri Rama Seva pretty soonest. Devi! May the ‘Saptaashvas’ which daily perform pradakshina of Meru Parvata, by your Kula Devata of Pratyaksha Bhaskara, bless you to reach your dear darling Shri Rama the soonest!

[Vishleshana on a) the Saptaashvas and Surya Ratha - b) Meru Pradakshina by the Sun Chariot:

a) Description of Surya Ratha: This chariot has one wheel, ‘five aragajas’ or compartments, tri naabhis or three axes. Its chakra or wheel has ‘nemi’ or wheel’s rim with golden ‘patthis’ or frames. The chariot wheels are run by seven horses named Gayatri, Tristhup, Jagtati, Anushthup, Pankti, Brihati, and Ushnik which are the seven ‘chhandas’ of formal prosody and these or of the wind speed. In side the Surya Ratha, those accompanying illustrious personalities are described: These are Maharshis , Gandharvas, Apsaras, Villagers, famed Serpents and rakshasaas. Sets of these groups alternate bimonthly. Dhata and Aryama Deva, Prajapatis Pulastya Rishi and Pulaha Rishi, Vaasuki and Sankirna Nagas, Tumburu and Narada Gandharva Singers, Kritasthala and Punjakashala Apsaras; Rathakrita and Rathouja as gramani, Heti and Praheti Rakshasas are those chosen ones on the Surya Ratha in Chaitra Vaisakhas. During the Greeshma Rithus of Jyeshtha Ahaadhaas , Mitra and Varunas would be Devatas, Atri- Vashishhas as Rishis, Takshaka Rambhaka Nagas, Menaka and Sahajanyas as Apsaras, Haha and Huhu Gandharvas, Rathantara and Rathakrita Graminis, Purushad and Vadha Rakshasaas; in Shravana Bhadrapadas the Devas would be Indra and Vaivashwan, Angira and Bhrigu are the Rishis; Ilapatra and Shankhapaala as the Nagas, Vishvaavasu and Sushena as Gandharvas, Praatha and Ratha as the graaminas, Pralocha and Nimlochanti among the Apsaras, and Heti and Vyaghra as the Rakshasaas. In Sharadriti month of two months of Ashviyuja and Kartika, the Devatas would be Parjanya and Pusha, Rishis Bharadwaja and Goutama, Chitrasena and Suruchi as Gandhravas, Vishvaachi and Ghritaachi as Aprasas; Iravata and Dhananjaya as the Nagas, Senajita and Sena Kayaka are the chosen graaminaas; and Aapa and Vaata as Rakshasaas. In the Hemanta Ritu of Maargaseersha and Pousha, the Devatas are Amshu and Bhaga, Kashyapa and Kratu as Rishis, Mahapadma and Karkotaka as the Nagas, Chitrasena and Deergaavuyu as Gandharva Singers; Purvachiti and Urvashi as Apsaras, Takshava and Arishtanemi as Sana as Senapatis Gramani and Tricidhu and Surta as Rakshasaas. During the Shishira Ritu's Maagha and Phalguni, Tvashta and Vishnu are the Devatas, Jamadagni and Vishwamitra as Rishis, Kadru Putra Kambal and Ashwatara as Maha Sarpas, Dhritaraashtra and Suryavarcha as Gandharvas, Tilothama and Rambha as Apsaras, Ritajit and Satyajit as Graamanis, Brahmopeta and Yagnopaveta as Rakshasas. This was how, the 'Dwadasha Saptaka' or Deva-Rishi-Naaga-Gandharva-Aprasa- Graameena-Raakshasaas are distinguished in their own positions; Devatas enhance by their own presence; Rishis excel in rendering self scripted Surya Stutis; Gandharvas and Apsaras stand out in their singing and dances; Yaksha ganas take care of the needs and desires of the Saptashvas; Sarpas move around fast for law and order besides traffic regulation; and Rakshasas to follow the chariot for providing general backup and security. Balakhilya Rishis from morning to evening to mornings and so on cling to the Surya Radha always and for ever. Devatas lend and enhance their stock of celestial energies, tapobala, yoga bala, Dharma, Tatwa and such innate powers, transmit auspiciousness to all the Beings in the universe in the bhuta-vartamaa-bhavishya kaala maana irrespective of Twenty Manvantaras and so on. Likewise Surya Deva regulates seasons and sustains their individual characteristics, the shukla- krishna pakshas, havya-kavya karyas, swaha-swadha karmas, vrishti-poshana, anna- jala-kanti sustenances; in short the ever mobile yet stable Singular and Ever Perceivable Uniqueness!

b) To the east of Meru Parvata, atop the Manasarovara mountain, there exists Vasvaikasaara named Mahendra Nagara made of gold. Again to the south of Meru Parvata's back side, there is Manasapurvata and the Samyamani Pura where Lord Yama the illustrious son of Surya Deva resides. To the west of Meru parvata, on the west of Manasapurvata atop Sukha Pura where Varuna Deva resides. To the north of Meru Parvata atop the Mahendra parvata, Vibhavari Pura where Chandra Deva resides. Behind the Manasotara on the four sides, the Ashta Dik Loka Paalakas are placed to protect Dharma and in the dakshinaayana period, Surya Deva oversees the activities of the Ashta Palakas during his period. Now, about the dakshinaayana the travel of Surya; in the jyotishchakra in his pradakshina, He reaches Amaravati the capital of Indra Deva by the midday on earth; that would be when it coincides with Yama Raja's rising time, in Chandra's mid night time and so on. As Surya performs pradakshina or self-circumambulation, he also does the same to nakshatras too do likewise. Precisely at the 'udaya' and 'astama' timings he does exactly the same year in and year out. At the Sun Rise he gradually increases his radiance till the afternoon and gradually reduces his tejas till the dusk time. In this way, Surya Deva performs pradakshina or circumambulation of self and so do the nakshatra mandali too. These all travel southward and at the rise and setting timings are defined as also at the poorvaahna and aparaahna or pre noon and afternoon they pass through two each of Deva puris and at the noon time, one Devapuri. Thus Surya from the rise gains momentum of radiance till afternoon and gradually lessens the severity of the kiranas thereafter till Sun set. Surya has the constant awareness of his 'udaya' and 'astamaya' at the east and west directions; while radiating the eastern side, spreading the heat and illumination on the sidewise north and south and decreasing the severity till disappearance. Meru Parvata is stated to be situated in the north of the highest of all the mountains; Lokaaloka is situated in the southern direction and since Prithvi's shadows are spread over, those Beings situated on the other side of the hemisphere are unable to see Surya in the nights. Thus Surya Deva with a lakh of kiranas reaches the mid portion of 'Pushkaradwipa' by that time, despite his speed of one 'muhurta' or two ghadis at the rate of one thirty lakh and fifty thousand yojanas plus! Thus Surya Deva as he traverses southward for six months turns to uttarayana or northbound. At the time of Dakshinaayana, Surya would have reached the travel to the mid portion of Pushkara dwipa. This dwipa is as thrice as distant from Mru to Manasarovara! Now the distance on the southern course or Dakshinaayana is of nine crore fifty lakh yojanas. After the dakshinaayana, Surya reaches the Vishuva sthaana or the 'khagoleeya vishuvadvritta bindu' at the north of Ksheera sagara. Vishvan mandala parinama is three cores twenty one lakh yojanas. As Surya's course gets north bound or uttarayana entering 'shravana nakshatra', then his course would be towards gomoda dwipa in between the south and north parts and in between are located jaradrava - Iravata to the north and Vaishvanara to the south. Towards north is named Naaga veedhi and to the south is the Ajaveedhi. The nakshatras of Purvaashadha-Uttaraashadha-Mula are known as ‘ajvithis’ and abhijit, shravana and swaati are naagavithis. Ashvini, Bharani and Krittika are aslo naagavithis and so also Rohini-Ardra and Mrigashira. Pushya, Shlesha and Punarvasu ate called Iravati veethi. Purvaphalguni, Uttara phalguni and Magha are arshabhi veedhi. Purvabhadra, Uttataabhadra and Revati are of Goveedhi, while Shravana, Dhanishtha and Shatabhisha are of jagadveethi. Chitra and Swati are again of ajaveedhi, Jyrshta,Vishaka and Anuraadha are of Mriga veedhi again. During Uttarayana samaya, the speed of Surya is slower and the nights are of longer duration and vice versa. Source: Matsya Purana]

Dharmika Rakshasi Sarama was endeared by Devi Sita who despatched to learn the latests on Ravana’s front and returned that Ravana rejected his motherly mantrini’s advice to return Sita but to no avail!

As dharma buddhi Rakshasi Sarama pulled up Devi Sita’s ‘duhkha maha sagara’ once the evil minded Ravanaasura displayed ‘maya shiras’ of Shri Rama, the much relieved Devi endeared Sarama Rakshasi. The Rakshasi then suggested on her own to Devi Sita that she might as well reach Shri Rama and convey the happenings here in respect of his beloved by her own ‘maaya swarupa’ and convey of her safety. Then Devi Sita smiled and said” Sarama! I am aware of your capability of doing so as you could reach the high skies or even paatala lokaas. But give me the favour of Ravana’s action as he had left me; indeed, his vicious mind and action is unpredictable. That Maha Rakshasa is always used to frighten me, scare me to the core and had instructed his rakshasi gang being a bunch of criminals to threaten like wise. Therefore do very kindly do me the favor of intimating his each and every suspicious ‘duraatma’. As Devi Sita requested thus, Sarama Rakshasi responded with kindness and had returned back and said: jananyā rākṣasendro vai tvanmokṣārtham bṛhadvacaḥ, aviddhena ca vaidehi mantrivṛddhena bodhitāḥ/ dīyatām abhisatkr̥tya manujendrāya maithilī, nidarśanam te paryāptam janasthāne yad adbhutam/ laṅghanam ca samudrasya darśanam ca hanūmataḥ, vadham ca rakṣasām yuddhe kaḥ kuryān mānuṣo bhuvi/ ‘Videha nandini! The precise situation when I have seen Ravana was that a grandmother like figure of Ravana like one of his own ministers was then counselling him release Devi Sita and entrust her to Rama. She advised thus: ‘Rakshasa Raja! I strongly feel and advise you to respectfully entrust Devi Sita to Shri Rama. Indeed you are aware of what all happened at the Janasthana where the single handed Rama had exhibited as a an evidenc of his capability. Further Rama’s trustworthy Hanuman was able to cross the Maha Sagara, succeeded in Devi Sita darshana, destroyed series of Maha Rakshas Veeras, and such ‘maya karaayas’! Is that at all possible for ‘maanava maatraas’! evam sa mantrivṛddhaiś ca mātṛā ca bahu bhāṣitaḥ, na tvām utsahate moktum artahm arthaparo yathā/ notsahaty amṛto moktum yuddhe tvām iti maith, sāmātyasya nṛśamsasya niścayo hy eṣa vartate/ tad eṣā susthirā buddhir mṛtyulobhād upasthitā, bhayān na śaktas tvām moktum anirastas tu samyuge, rākṣasānām ca sarveṣām ātmanaś ca vadhena hi/ In this manner, the respectable old aged ‘mantrini’ of Ravana’sura ‘mantri mandali’ kept on goading on and on, but like a ‘dhana lobhi’ of personified being of avarice could never leave a chance, Ravana too is blinded with infatuation. Mithileshakumari! Without being crushed to death Ravana seems to have no compromise as he appears to be bent on yuddha as mṛtyu devata is dancing on his arrogant heads. Thus his final decision appears to be his certain death rather than compromise. Hence it is crystal clear that neither fright nor temptation would allow you release as of now. nihatya rāvanam saṁkhye sarvathā niṣitaiḥ śaraiḥ, pratineṣyati rāmas tvām ayodhyām asitekṣaṇe/ etasminn antare śabdo bherīśaṅkha - samākulaḥ, śruto vai sarvasainyānām kampayan dharaṇītalām/ śrutvā tu tam vānarasainyaśabdam; laṅkāgatā rākṣasarājabhṛtyāḥ, naṣtaujaso dainyaparītaḥ/ śreyo na paśyanti nṛpasya doṣaiḥ/ Devi Sita! Now the consequence of this ought be that Bhagavan Shri Rama would devastate Ravana and his blinded followers with his arrows and then proceed to Ayodhya along with you for certainty. Now right now ‘bheri naada bhishana simhanaada dhvani’ from both the sides appears like an earthquake or maha pralaya right here. Just due to the chain of occurings consequent on Ravana’s ‘arishad vargas’ of kaama-krodha-lobha-moha-mada-matsaryas or undue desire-anger- passion-arrogance-and meanmindedness only leading to irrevocable disaster!.

Maha Baahu Shri Rama then sounded his 'shankhaa naada' initiating the attack against Ravana Sena. Then Ravana waited for a minute or two and looked at his 'mantri mandali'. 'I have been hearing with patience about the bala parakrama of Rama Sena for good time now and looking at each other and glancing me sideyas too. Trust you too are satya parakramis too.' As Ravana's 'narmagarbha sandehas' havaning heard, then Maha Buddhiman Malyavan Rakshasa Veera got the cue and replied the King of Asuras: 'Maha Raja! Even a mighty chakravarti who is fully conversant with fourteen vidyas, and the principles of Neeti Shastra is liable to get 'shatruvashaas.'

[Brief Vishneshana on Fourteen Maha Vidyas and Principles of Neeti Shastra]

Maha Vidyas: of chatur vedas, four upavedas of Artha shastra of State Craft Economic Policy, dhanur veda, gandhanrva veda of performing arts and ayurveda, besides six vedangas of shiksha of phonetics, kalpa or rituals, vyakarana or grammar, jyotisha or astronomy, nirulta or etymology and chhandas.,

Six 'Neeti Chandrikas' viz. Sandhi-Vigraha-Yaana-Aasana-Dwidhi bhaava-and samaashraya. Sandhi denotes the Principle of Truce, Tolerance and Coexistene. Vigraha refers to conflict of similar forces leading to balance of power. Yaana suggests travel or momement of forces for attaack-aasana or tishtha the waiting period-dwividha of bheda bhaava or break up of friendship by similar forces of the enemies and finally 'samashraya' or the celebrations of victory of togetherness.]

Brahma’s one raatri-divas or night and day comprise of Four Yugas of Krita-Treta-Dwapara-Kali Yugas. Krita yuga is of four thousand years reckoned as 360 days for humans and one Deva day; its sandhya or the yuga’s terminal period is for 400 years and Sandhyaamsha is an additional 400 years totalling 4800 divine years or 1728000 human years. On similar analysis, Tretaayuga is for 3600 divine years or 1287000 human years; Dwapara yuga is of 2400 divine years or 664000 human years and Kali Yuga divine 1200 years or 432000 human years. The total of Four Yugas is 12000 divine years or 42420000 human years. Deva’s one thousand years are accounted for Brahma Deva’s single day time and another thousand divine years are of Brahma’s one night. Thus Brahma’s ‘ahoraatra’ or day and night comprises of 120,00,000 of divine years or 432,00,00,000 human years. Thus ,after one thousand yugas, Brahma rests for the day and night and then resumes ‘punah srishti’ or revival of creation process again.(Manu Smriti Achaara Khanda)

As per Divya calculations, the total count of Four Yugas is twelve thousand years, the Satya Yuga comprising four thousand years, Treta Yuga three thousand Divya Years, Dwapara Yuga two thousand years and Kaliyuga of one Divya thousand years; the rest of two thousand years of the twelve thousand Divine Years is accounted for additional four hundred of Divine years of ‘Sandhya’ and an equivalent period additionally for ‘Sandhyamsha’ for Satya Yuga; three hundred years each for these periods in respect of Treta Yuga; two hundred years each of Dwapar Yuga and one hundred years each of Kali Yuga. In Lord Brahma’s life span of hundred Divya Years, each day comprises fourteen Manvantaras and each Manvantara consists of one thousand ‘Kalpas’. At each change of Manvantara, there is a fresh stock of Indras, Devas, and Sapta Rishis etc. There are seventy one Cycles of Four Yugas in each Manvantar. Viewed from the view point of human years, one Manvantara has three crore sixty six lakh two thousand years; by Divine Years, one Manvantara has one lakh fifty two thousand years. If this Period is multiplied four times, it would then equate Brahma’s one day, that is, one million nineteen lakh twenty seven thousand Divya years; or, four twenty nine crores forty lakh (429, 40, 00,000) human years! After each day-night of Brahma, there occurs a ‘Naimittika’ Pralaya. (Markandeya Purana)

About the Cycle of Time and Kalpas and Manvantaras: ‘If Brahma’s age is hundred years, a day and night of his is a Kalpa (stated to be 8.67 billion years) comprising 28 Manvantaras; each Manvantara has 71 Maha Yugas and each Maha Yuga has 4.3 million years.(Satya Yuga is stated to be of 40 percent of Maha Yuga, Treta Yuga 30 percent, Dwapara Yuga 20 percent and Kali Yuga is 10 percent) But between each Manvantara, there is stated to be a gap of four yugas called Yuga Sandhi, while the intermediate time between Kalpas is Prati Sandhi. Each Kalpa has two parts: Purvaartha and Parartha. We are now in Varaha Kalpa (there are stated to be of thirty such Kalpaas) and Vaivaswara Manvantara while Brahma’s age is calculated as 51 years and the first night!As Brahma spent his thousand Yugas long first night, he found water all around and resurrected Earth again -and on the broad lines of what Varaha Swarupa indicated- materialised formally the Chatur Lokaas, Sapta Dwipas and Sapta Samudras. He revived the Srishti of Antariksha, Sun, Moon and other Planets, Pitras, Time, Yugas, Purusharthas of Dharma-Artha-Kaama-and Mokshas. From his first face of the 'Chaturmukha', he created Gayatri, Ruks, Yagni related Agni shtoma etc; Veda Vangmaya, Veda Chhandas, and various Agni-Karyas; from his Southern Face were generated Yajur Veda, Traishthub Chhandas; Panchadasa Stomas and Brihat Stoma; from his western face emerged Saama Suktaas, Jagati Chhandas, Papta dasa Stoma; Atiraatra of Jyotishthoma etc; from Brahma's fourth Face emerged Atharva Veda, Anushtub and Vairaja Chhanda etc. Through out the Yuga Periods, there were countless species of Creation were materialised of 'Charaachara' or mobile and Immobile nature, defying description. (Brahmanda Purana)

Kalki Devi approached Narayana in the form of 'Vamana' who in turn enabled a Brahmana called Kama Sharma and his wife Devahuti on the banks of Yamuna River; he blessed that this couple would give birth to Bhoga Simha and Keli Simha. These two sons would stay in a Kreedavati Nagar and would carry out the wishes of Kali Yuga Devi, especially in the task of wide-spread 'Varna-sankara' or destroying the Rules of 'Varnashrama'. Over two thousand years, the established Regulations made by Lord Brahma and the successive Manus would get thinner and thinner and by the Second Paada of Kali Yuga, Kali Devata would be happy to witness that the old Vedic values would be obliterated, that the Daityamaya human beings (fully soaked in Daitya activities) would be of two-and-half feet height, that their life span would be forty years maximum (as against hundred years now) and that they would be free like birds without any 'Karmic regulations! At the end of the Kali's second half there would neither be the institutions of marriages, nor Kingships, nor any social reformer and not even a Karma Karta! The World would be full of the progeny of Bhogi Simha and Keli Simha and this kind of a situation devoid of customs and social norms would prevail for one and quarter lakh years!! In the Third Quarter of Kali Yuga, the average age of human beings would be twenty six years maximum; Bhringha Muni along with his wife Saurabhi would create Kaulakalpa-named beings who would not hesitate to eat human beings/ kinnaras. These new species of Kaulakalpas would resort to beastly affairs with mothers, sisters and daughters! They would be too sex-blinded and produce too many children and resort to affairs with co-males and animals! In the fourth phase of Kali Yuga the maximum age of humans would not exceed twenty years and live like water-beasts and animals; hells like Tamistra and worse kinds of frightening Places of Retribution would be over-populated. As Yama Dharma Raja found that the influx of dead Beings was assuming alarming proportions, he and Chitra Gupta approached Indra Deva and later on to Brahma Deva and the latter declared that soon enough there would be an 'Avatar' (Incarnation) of Vishnu Deva as Kalki Deva; he would be fully armed with 'Kahdga' (Long sword) whose reach would be unimaginably long and widespread as also with a 'Kavacha' (Body-Cover) and 'Dhaal' or Protective Shield, mounted on a huge horse, travelling on 'Yoga Marga' for sixteen thousand years and would turn the entire 'Srishti' to ash-laden devastation! At that time, there would be a cloud burst producing the Great Annihilation of the Universe under alarming and incessant rain called 'Pralaya'! That would be the fresh 'Srishti' heralding the new cycle of Yugas ab initio!! (Bhavishya Purana)]

Thus the Mantri Mandali looked at Ravana with hope and possible approval. Ravana then kept on and on into deep thoughts with his head down with deep introspection. .

As Malyavan Rakshasa Mantri of Ravana emboldened himself to advise him for ‘Sandhi’ at once especially citing innumerable ‘apashakunas’ being experienced by the public of Lankapuri, Rakshasa Raja replied was non reactory to the appeals and addressed Malyavan: ‘what ever you have so far blabbered as though stated on behalf the shatru paksha had not reached my ears. Does it not sound absurd! Let me assure you that even crores of vanaras and a couple of accidental heros of battle should be comfortably smasht down in a few days. Then instructions were issued to further tighten orderliness and safety of Lankapuri and left the ‘sabha’ in a huff and puff in a sulky temperament.

Then the general point of view as expressed in the ‘sabha’ was that no doubt, Lankapuri was impregnable even by asura-naaga-gadharva- deva pramukhas. Now mutual suggestions should be welcomed! Then Ravana bhrta Vibhishana expained thoughtfully: Vanara Mantris especially Anala, Panasa, Sapmtati and Pramati have gone around Lankapuri and since returned. They assumed the ‘pakshi swarupas’ and witnessed the preperations at the moment. Shri Rama! Let me now explain to you now. Senapati Prahasta is at purva dwaara, Maha paarshva and Mahodara are dakshina dwaara, Indrajit the Ravana Putra backed my a massive Rakshasa veeraas as well equipped with pattisha-khadga-dhanush-shula-mudgaraadi asrtr shastras at western dwaara and Ravana himself along with Shuka, Saarana aadi sahasra shatradhaari maha

Now in the central place of Lanka Nagara there is very massive Rakshasa Veeras headed by Virupaaksha all of them being well equipped with shula-dhaga-dhanushas. In this manner Ravana Sena was seen by me hurriedly at the placement as detailed. In the Ravana Sena, there are ten thousand strong diggajas, as many chariots, twenty thousand horses and a crore plus foot soldiers. Shri Rama! Behind each of these incharge Raksasa Veeras as were mentioned as the dwaara palakas as mentioned, there is a strong back up of ten lakh rakshasa yoddhas as their back up each! As Vibhishana detailed thus, he informed of the strength, valour and ever preparedness of the shatru sena of Maha Rakshasis. He further added: When Ravana encountered Kubera his first cousin the he took along with him some sixty lakh raksasaveeras along with him all of whom were ready to give up their lives. Now I suggest that it is high time that our Vanara Maha Veeras too are suitably compartmentalised as in differed 'vyuhaas' so that the chaturanga senas too and work and dedicate themselves for the single and supreme of Raavana Vinaashana.' Then on hearing what all Vibhishana had said and suggested, Shri Rama stated that kaphishreshtha Neela should encounter Prahasta with his vaanara sreshthas, Angada to attack Mahapaarshva and Mahodara at the dakshina dwaara, Pavana Kumara Hanuman at the paschima dwaara, and along with Lakshmana he himself face Ravana with his maha rakshasa veeras. Then Vanara Raja Sugriva and balavaan riksha raja Jambavan should straight on attack the strong hold central rakshasa maha yoddhas along with their own vanara heroes. Further Vaanara Bhallukas should not take to human forms. Only myself, Lakshmana, and Vishishana along with his ministers would only be the human forms totalling seven only. Then the totality of Shri Rama Sena reached the 'Suvela Parvata tata praanta' with the unique, singular and most decisive preparedness of Rama Karya Siddhi.

a) Shri Rama along Lakshmana and followers ascended the Suvela Parvata Shikharas, well known for dhaatu Sampada. b) The picturesque overview especially impressed Vanara Veeras who assumed various forms to wander in Lankapuri while Rama and followers too were overawed at its magnificence.

As Shri Rama decided to rest for the night before the 'maha sangraama' of 'Rama - Ravana' at the foothills of Suvela Parvata with great enthusiasm, excitement and decisiveness, the Maha Rama Sena moved off. Then Shri Rama addressed the dharma jnaata-mantra vetta, vidhijna, Rama Priya Vibhishana as also his colleagues: ‘ comrades! Parvata Raja Suvela is replete with thousands ‘dhatus’ or mineral deposits such as sodium, potassium, magnesium, calcium, radium, titanium, nickel, and silver. Let us therefore ascend the Suvela and rest for the night. We may also have an overview of Lankapuri in the glitter of the night. We may also oversee the Rakshasa nivaasa bhuta Lankapuri and even identify the devilish duraatma Ranasasura’s residential palace where my dearest Sitaapaharana had been committed awaiting his certain mrityu. That Rakshasaadhama is neither knows the rudiments of dharma and nyaaya, nor of Kula vichaara, and had since prepatrated his meanest and disgusting psychology typical of cruelty, utter selfishness and mean narrowmindedness. I am right now bent on destroying him and uprooting his blind followers. eko hi kurute pāpam kālapāśavaśam gataḥ, nīcenātmāpacāreṇa kulam tena vinaśyati/ evaṁ saṁmantrayann eva sakrodho rāvaṇam prati, rāmaḥ suvelam vāsāya citrasānum upāruhat/ Most decisively, ‘kaala paasha’ gets tightenend around his ‘dasha mukhas’ and even uproot the Ravana’s followers too.’ So stating vengefully Shri Rama ascended the Parvata Shikhira, closely followed by Lakshmana Prabhu with their mighty ‘dhanush baanaas’. Then so did Sugriva, Mantri sahita Vibhishana, Hanuman, Angada, Neela, Mainda-Dvididas, Gaja, Gavaksha, Gavaya, Sharabha, Gandhamaadana, Panasa, Kumuda, Hara, Yuthapati Rambha, Jambavan, Sushena, Mahamati Rishabha, maha tejasvi Durmukha, and Kapivara Shatabali with their respective Vanara Maha Senas. Then they all got dispersed and started staring at Lankapuri and its glitter in darkness while shouting and hooting simhanaadaas, even as Rama Lakshmana Sugriva Vibhishanas were noticing too at leisure and restfulness.

Vaanara Veeras were immensely delighted and even got excited at the prakriti soundarya atop Suvela parvata shikhara especially the abundance of maha vrishkas of champā, ashoka, vakula, shaala, taala, tamaala, naaga kesaris, quite apart from the overview Lankapuris vriksha sampha of hintala, arjuna, neepa, and the chhitavana, tilaka, kanera, paatalaadi maha vrikshas like that of Indra's Amaraavati. The Chaitraratha, Nandana vana samaana mamohara vanaas of Lankapuri shobha what with all the 'shad ritus' and the 'bhramara vyaapta ramaneeya shobha' was mind blowing to the vaanara sena. All the Vaanaras who could assume their own rupas like honey bees, or deers or swans or whatever having secured 'Sugriva aagjna' hurried down to Lankapuri 'udyaana vanaas and jalaashayas'. The rest of Vanara Veeraas continued the simha naadas as the Lankapuri pashu sampada, especially the local vaanaras, bhallukas, simha shardulas, elephants and horses, and pakshis especially mayura, hamsa and so on were frightened to their core. Now, the adjacent Trikuta Parvata Shikhara is very widespread with some hundred yojanas as if it touches swarga dwaara. None indeed ever possibly ascend the shikhara. In the Lankapuri proper were situated the Chiatya praasada was the jewel of Lankaapuri. tām samṛddhām samṛddhārtho lakṣmīvāml lakṣmaṇāgrajaḥ, rāvaṇasya purīm rāmo dadarśa saha vānaraiḥ/ tām ratnapūrṇām bahusamvidhānām; prāsādamālābhir alamṛtām ca, purīm mahāyantrakavāṭa -mukhyām; dadarśa rāmo mahatā balena/ Shri Rama and Lakshmana along with Vaanara Veeras then stared at the 'dhanadhaanya samriddhi yukta Lankapuri'. The City was replete with swarga tulya mansions and 'rahadaaris' as Rama and followers were truly awe stricken!

Sarga Forty

Suddenly Sugriva spotted Ravana at his residential roof, was unable to control his anger jumped down challenging him for 'malla yuddha' - as Ravana felt that Sugriva was too good and disappeared .

Vanara King Sugriva was casually looking down at Lankapuri even as Rama Lakshmanas too were getting impressed with its sumptuousness and affluence , Sugriva suddenly looked at the roof of Ravana at his palace seated comfortably under his vijaya chhatra with his body was smeared with rakta chandana and ornamented with red coloured 'aabhushanas'. Krodhavegena samyuktah satvena cha balena cha, achalaagraadathoyatyaaaya pupluve goparasthale/ Sthitvaa muhurtam samprakshya nirbayenantaraat -, maana trineekritya c tad rakshah sobravat parusham vachah/ Lokanaathasya Raamasya sakhaa daasosmi Rakshasa, na mayaa mokshsedya tvam paarthivendrasya tejasaa/ On seeing Ravana thus, Sugriva was unable to resist the temptation and extreme anger of seeing the Mahasura and suddenly jumped down from the Suvela Parvata shikhira and the gopura on the roof where Ravana was seated. He kept on staring the Dasha Mukha for a while and with 'nirbhaya chitta' and shouted at him as follows: 'Rakshasa! I am a close associate and admirer of Lokanaadha Bhagavan Shri Rama. Now, with all my body might you can never get my from my grip. Having thus jumped up high and kicked Ravana he attacked him. Then having realised that this was Sugriva the King of Vaanara Bhallukas, Ravana replied: 'Arre, so far you have not seen me, you have remained as Sugriva now do realise that your 'griva' or the neck is soon to disappear!' Having asserted thus, Ravana lifted up Sugriva and kicked him off the roof with might. Then Vaanara Raja Sugriva pulled the Dashakantha and lifted his body high on his broad shoulders and threw of Ravana's body to the same roof top under which Ravana was seated on a swing. Parasparam swedavidigha gaatrou parasparam shonita rakta dehou, parasparam shilashthiniridva cheshtou, parsaparan shalmalikimshukaaviva/ Then both Sugriva and Ravana kicked up each other high and higher as flows of sweat and blood in their mutual attacks as though they were like two maha palaasa vrikshas. Both the Rakshasa Raja and the Vaanara Rajas were of gigantic maha parakramis and were engaged in mutual fist fights, heavy and resounding slappings, and panja yuddha. This the 'malla yuddha' with heavy speed, mutual kickings. Paraspara aalingnas or severe embrace- releases frequently reciprocatively and forceful hurlings to the floor and roof looked interminable. Both Sugriva and Ravana were adepts in martial arts especially in the 'malla yuddha kala' were displaying mutual huggings and releases, 'paribhramanas' or rounded encirclings, 'baahu paashaas' and well timed jumpovers and kicks, 'simha naadaas' or resounding shoutings with krodha, malla yuddha abhyasa, with damshra - hasta-jangha- uru peedana- paada peedana and so on. Both Sugriva and Ravana were then like two Madonmatta Maha Gajas were thus encountering for long with speed, alacrity, and untiring energy. Mandalaani vichitraani sthaanaani vividhaanicha, gomutrakaani chitraani gatapratrygataanicha/ Both Sugriva and Ravana being outstanding experts of ‘malla yuddha’ were this jumping forward and backward with velocity and acceleration and of kicks and starts and mutual encirclings, displaying ‘vichitra mandalas’ and ‘sthaana pradarshanas’ in the pattern of ‘go mutra rekha samaana kutila gati’ or like the flows of cow’s urine pattern of forward and backward directions a there both get seldom tired with equal force and thrust!

[Vishleshana on ‘Malla Yuddha Chatur Mandala Prakaara and Shashtha Sthaana Vivarana’ by Bharata Muni.

Chatur Mandala: 1. Chaari Madala 2. Karana Mandala 3. Khanda Mandala and 4. Maha Mandala. The features of the Madalas respectively are jumping forward with a single foot self pradakshina and kick the opponent- self pradakshina by both the feet and kick the opponent- ‘vividha pradakshina’ and kick-and fourthly the Maha Mandala with aneka pradakshina.

Shashtha Sthaana : Vaishnava-Sama Paada-Vaishakha-Mandala-Pratyaalodha- Anaalodha or foot movements before the impending kicks as per placements of the foot steps forward or back ward before the start of kicks as of lions, tigers, bhallukas or leopards].

Futher stanzas as follows:

Then suddenly realising that Sugriva was an equal force in the art of malla yuddha, Ravana with his maha shakti and flew up the high skies. Sugriva followed suit by jumping higher and higher. Vaanara Raja then spotted flashes of Ravana no doubt but as the latter kept on dodging Sugriva since Ravana was looking rather tired, and as such reached back to his Vanara sena which was surrounded by Shri Rama. Iti sa Savitrusoonutastra tat karma kritvaa pananagatiraneekam praavishat samhrishthah, Raghuvaranripa soonorvardhayan yudha harsha tarumrigaganaabhi mukhaih puja maano Hareendrah/ Thus having the contentment of his memorable feat of alerting a lion like Ravana in his own den had reached with vayuvega the Suryaputra Sugriva with alacrity and entusiasm rejoined Shri Rama as was surrounded by Vanara stalvarts.

As Rama chided Sugriva’s undesirable malla yuddha, yet with safe rurtrn, ‘Maha Rama Sena’ marches for gate wise attack- Rama despatches Angada to reach Ravana with an ultimatum of Ravana’s doom.

Having noted the body scratches of blood and wounds as of having resorted to typical of a battle on Sugriva, Shri Rama said: Sugriva! Even without consulting me you seem to have routed to a bloody encounter! Saahasa Priya Veera, you have created a stir and concern in our minds of these vanara pramukhas, Vibhishana Lakshmanas and mine too as what had suddenly happened to you! Kindly do not repeat such 'dussaahasa' escapades once again. Maha Bali! If any untoward incident were to happen, what would happen to me, Sita, Lakshmana, and Bharata Shatrughnas and all the Vaanara Veeras. If any such eventuality were to take place, believe me that I would no doubt destroy Ravana, release Sita, perform Vibhishana's Rajya Pattaabhisheka but resort to my own 'atma samarpana'! As Shri Rama had stated thus, Sugriva replied: Tava bharyaapahartaaram drushtvaa Raghava Ravanam, marshayaami katham veera jaana vikramamaatnanah/ 'Veera Raghu Nandana! Even fully being realised your name and fame, and invincibility, dushta Ravana had perpetrated the meanest deed to his destruction; that was how lost my normal self and should never to be repeated again'. Then Shri Rama had thus sought to forget and forgive attitude wishing compliments to Sugriva and then had taken command of the situation on hand, addressed Lakshmana: 'Let us now be cool minded and then work out the idea formation of Maha Vaanara Sena into proper divisions as already planned to get ready to attack. Now there are 'bhayanaka apashkunas' being experienced that countless Vaanara Bhallukas besides Maha Rakshasas too would be in the corner. Prachanda Vayu is indicative of sand storms and earth quakes and parvata shikhara breakdowns besides 'diggaja chheet -kaaras', 'simha garjanas and rakta varshas'! Lakshmana! Surya Chara Nakshatras are dimming of their natural grandeur. kākaḥ śyenās tathā gr̥dhrā nīcāiḥ paripatanti ca, śivāś cāpy aśivā vācaḥ pravadanti mahāsvanāḥ/ kṣipram adya durādharṣam purīm rāvaṇapālītām, abhiyāma javenaiva sarvato haribhir vṛtāḥ/ ity evaṁ tu vadan vīro lakṣmaṇam lakṣmaṇāgrajāḥ, tasmād avātarac chīghram parvatāgrān mahābalaḥ/ Crows, dogs, owls are seated on earth in large assemblies making peculiar crowings, barkings and screeches. Vibhishana, Sugriva, Hanuman, Jambavan, Nala, Neela and Lakshmanas followed suit. Then bhallukas and vanaraas spread over marching behind Shri Rama as though the earth was over shadowed by them. They were carrying on their mighty shoulders mountain boulders and maha vrishas as their weaponry. Angada along with Rishabha, Gavaksha, Gaja and Gavayas with their respective vaanara yoddhas then stood firm at the dakshina dwaara. The vaanara lions and tigers are thus ready to attack with speed, force, enthusiasm, and fervor. Their long and mighty tails are shaking as though with anger and excitement while their strong dandshtras, and piercing nails are their weaponry. Some of the Maha Vaanaras are possessive of ten elephants each or even far more of ‘shakti’. Their hands and shoulders were busy carrying maha vrikshas as uprooted by them. As the Rakshasas were getting bewildered with the power of their throwings of the maha vrikshas as their weaponry. As the Maha Samudra with maha setu bandhana was divided and harassed by Vaanaras, it was appearing more frightening ever with roars the vanara senas get further more momentum in such a manner that the waves were hitting the interiors of Lanka puri might get merged with the ocean. rāmalakṣmaṇaguptā sā sugrīveṇa ca vāhinī, babhūva durdharṣatarā sarvair api surāsuraiḥ/ rāghavaḥ saṁniveśyaivam sainyaṁ svam rakṣasām vadhe, saṁmantrya mantribhiḥ sārddham niścitya ca punaḥ punaḥ/ ānantaryam abhiprepsuḥ kramayogārthatattvavit, vibhīṣaṇasyānumate rājadharmam anusmaran, aṅgadaṁ vālitanayam samāhūyedaṁ abravīt/ Rama Lakshmana Sugrivas were ever vigilant and sensitive to preserve the Vaanara vaahini in a manner that neither asuras or even Devas could tamper with them. Dashamukha Ravana had by now become a 'Rajya bhrashtha' as his aishvarya had since evaporated and is desperate to get killed as his 'chetana shakti' is sunk in the deep mud of arrogance and desperation. You may therefore fly to cross the strong barrier gates and convey my message to him as follows: 'Nishachara Rakshasa Raja! your 'mohavasha' selfishness and arrogance had blinded you as what all naharshis, deva, gandhrva, apsara, naaga, yaksha, maha rajas followed dutifully with 'dhaarmika vishvaasa'. You are a confirmed sinner anyway, and along with you your followers are blind and dimwitted stupid. That is why your saamrajya should crash down right now. Rakshasa! Now you should wage the battle like a genuine warrior with all your tricks of 'maya' yet with composure and seek peace of your 'antaraatma' by falling down by my 'baana praharana' as a 'praana shunya' and a 'shuddha nishpaapa' of blissful purity. Nishachara! I strongly feel that in your next birth if you become an ever flying bird as restlessly on the constant move on the sky but never on earth. Now I suggest that you should take to 'paraloka chintana' and as such you might as well initiate your 'shraddha karma' soon enough. Hence you may have a final look of Lanka Rajya as your life termination is round the corner.' Thus Shri Rama briefed Vaanara Yuva Raja Angada Kumara to fly up the main gate and address his message and return safe after compliance'. As per Shri Rama's instruction, Angada flew up and reached Ravana ready for the battle and having faced the 'mahaasura' and introduced himself that he was Angada the Yuva Raja of Vaanara Sena who might perhaps had heard about as I have a message of warning from the Raghukula Maha Veera Shri Rama as follows: 'Ravanaadhama! You are the confirmed enemy of deva, daanava, yaksha, gandharva, naaga, and rakshasa too, besides being a piercing thorn of Rishis too and such a prickling spike should be uprooted. Rakshasa - adharma Ravana, if only you fall at my feet and return back Sita respectfully, I might return from Lanka or else your viddvamsa is certain and so should be 'Vibhisana Pattaabhisheka' soon.' As Angada had thus conveyed Shri Rama's ultimatum to Ravana as ably conducted by Angada, Ravana was fumed with 'krodhaagni' and shouted at the Maha Rakshasaas around to catchhold the dirty vaanara atonce. Then Angada having allowed himself to be caught voluntarily to display his might to the co rakshasa veeras and like a mighty guruda deva, wriggled from their stronghold flew up the high and strong dome of Ravana's palace as the dome was shattered as a warning to Ravana. Then Angada Kumara flew up on the sky and reached at the feet of Rama as per the instruction, as the Vanara Sena initiated their attack .

Then Maha Rakshasaas informed King Ravana that the Maha Vanara Sena had surrounded attacking the mukhya dwaaras of Lankapuri as the furious Ravana yelled to double up the safety of Lankapuri at once. He stared at Rama with red eyes, as Rama was just then ruminating of Devi Sita and her possible state of happenings and specially of her heath. Then Rama recocovered soon enough from the thunderous simha naadaas of the ebullient Vaanara Sena seeking to break through the Lankapuri gates with mountain boulders and maha vrikshas. They seem to decisively enter either mounting up the high and strong walls or demolish the gates. Some of the Maha Vanara Veeras were of the ‘gaja raaja smaana vishala dehas’ or even of hill like body builds. In either manner they are passionately wedded with the single obsession of Shri Rama Karya. Then the vaanara veeras started shouting in high pitch: ‘Atyanta Bala Shaali Rama, jaya jaya-Maha Bali Lakshmana, jaya jaya-Raja Sugriva Jaya Jaya; thus the Vaanara Veeras assuming the rupas like parrots, doves, human beings, or even as rakshasaas and broken into the gates and barriers wantonly. Then, Maha Vaanara Shreshthas such as Veera Baahu, Subaahu, Nala, Panasa and such of them jumped of the ‘Praakaaras’ of Lanka Puri and speeded up the attacks. Balavaan Kumuda along with Ishaana / North East Kona and occupied the Eastern Gate with ten crores of sena behind while Maha Baahus Pahasa, Prapasa and seven more warriors steadied themselves for instant attacks. Now the placement vyaavya disha angle of north west near the dakshina dwaara were of in charge of Shatabali with twenty crores of vaanara veeras behind him. Then Tara Devis father Sushena was at nirruti disha of south west with crores and crores of Vaanara Sena overseeing paschima dwaara. Then, Sumitraa Kumara Lakshmana and Sugriva were guarding the Uttara Dwaara. Golaangula Bhalluka origin of Gavaksha with one crore of vaanara sena is behind Shri Rama on one side while Maha Bhalluka Dhumara with bhayanaka bhallukas of a crore strength on the other side of Rama well behind. Vibhishana and his ministers was near by Shri Rama. Gaja-Gavaksha-Gavaya-Sharabha and Gandhamaadana were mobile safeguarding the entire vaanara sena of several crores. Rakshasaas were encountering with maces, shulaas, and so on as Vanaras with mountain boulders and maha vikshas as uprooted. The vanara and bhalluka maha senas were physically assaulting the maha rakshasas by bending their heads and limbs in forcefully bringing into their hold and killing them. Such had been the proceedings of flood like flows of blood and flesh all over. Both the Rakshasa-Vaanara Veeras then took a temporary break at the ‘Suryaastastama’ for resuming by Chandra Nakshatra Darshana.

As Maha Rakshas got bewildered at the torrential inflows of the Vaanara Sena inside and outside of the Lankapuri Mukha Dwaaraas there were mutual hatred and arrogance. The Rakshasa Veeras were well equipped with glitteringly decorated Chariots, elephants, horses, military costumes and Ayudhas, body kavachas, trishulas, parighas, and so on with slogans of victory for King Ravana. On the other hand the Maha Vaanara Bhallukas heartily dedicated to Shri Rama Vijaya were forcefully attacking the Maha Rakshasaas and resorted to 'dwandva yuddha'. Vaali Putra Angada clashed with Ravana Putra Indrajit who too attacked for dwandva yuddha recalling Maha Deva Yuddha with Andhakaasura, with the Angada Vijaya.

Andhaka was the son of Daitya Hiranyaaksha of Varaaha Avataara fame of Vishnu Deva; the latter killed the Daitya as he sought to pull down Bhu Devi to Rasatala. In his own right, Andhaka was highly ill-famed having secured the boon of invincibility from Brahma, overthrew Indra and Devas from Swarga and made them shelterless besides tormenting Sages and the Virtuous. Devas, Brahma and Vishnu had all approached Maha Deva as the atrocities of Andhaka became unbearable. Shiva was present at the battle field and asked Devas to fight but Andhaka became too powerful to Indra and Devas. Playfully, Maha Deva lifted up the Daitya and dangled and suspended him by the Trishula exposing him to the heat and high temperature of Surya Deva on the Sky. The Daitya realised the Supremacy of Maha Deva and commenced his Prayers. Shiva was pleased as Andhaka said: Bhagavan Deva Devesha! Prajangha named Maha Rakshasa attacked Ranaveera Vaanara Mukhya Sampati and Jambumaali Rakshasa faced Veera Hanuman with similar outcome of Angada-Indrajits. Nishaachara Vidyunmaali seated on his golden chariot was furious with the successive defeats of Raksha Veeras and lashed at Sushena Vaanara with rains of arrows as Sushena was hurt badly and flew to a near by parvata shikhara in defence but pulled up a boulder, hurled on Vidyunmali as the latter’s chariot, horses and the Rakshasa were crushed to earth. evam tair vānaraiḥ śūrāiḥ śūrās te rajanīcarāḥ, dvandve vimṛditās tatra daityā iva divaukasaiḥ/ bhallaiḥ khaḍgair gadābhiś ca śaktitomara paṭṭasaiḥ, apaviddhaś ca bhinnas ca rathaiḥ sāmgrāmikair hayaiḥ/ nihataiḥ kuñjarair mattais tathā vānararākṣasaiḥ, cakrākṣayugadaṇḍaiś ca bhagnair dharaniśamśritaiḥ, babhūvāyodhanam ghoram gomāyugaṇasevitam/ kabandhāni samutpetur dikṣu vānararākṣasām, vimarḍe tumule tasmin devāsuraṇopame/ In this illustrative manner, the yuddha bhumi assumed a bhayaanaka swarupa, as bhalluka vaanara veeraas kept on resisting the Rakshasa prahaaras with lashes of arrow rains, Gada-Shakti-Tomara-Saayakas successfully retaliated by mountain rocks, maha vriksthas and well trained dwandva yudhhas. The frightening series of the day were reiterated as being similar to Rama Lashmana interface with Maha Kabanda of Valmiki Ramayana’s Aranya Khandha reference or of Deva Danava Yuddhas series. Thus Raksha Maha Diggajas, Chariots, Mahaashwas, not to mention of foot soldiers were all despatched to Yama Puri as at the devaasura samhara, much to the delight of owls, wild fox, dog and rat groups with the day fall and Sunset.

As the Suryastamaya was over and the night long battle was resumed. In the engulfing darkness, it was rather difficult who was a Rakshasa or otherwise. There were only the shoutings and screeches of kickings and feet thumpings with common yellings of 'kick him, kill him', 'cut him and slice him' and such brutalities. But the glitter of body kavachas and the ayudhas was a recognizable distinction. The anger and desperation of both the Maha Veeras was distinct. As heavy sounds of the chariots, horses and elephant force of maha Rakshasaas and the bare foot thumping and the hits of maha vrikshas and heavy of rocks was a distinctive signs of Maha Vanaras on their mighty shoulders and their rushed wallops were well realisable. lakṣmaṇaś cāpi rāmaś ca śarair āśīviṣomapaiḥ, dṛśyādṛśyāni rakṣāmsi pravarāṇi nijaghnatuḥ/ turaṁgakhuravidhvastaṁ rathanemisamuddhatam, rurodha karṇanetrāṇiṇyudhyatām dharaṇīrajah/ vartamāne tathā ghore saṁgrāme lomaharṣaṇe, rudhirodā mahāvegā nadyas tatra prasusruvuḥ/ While gigantic sized Rakshasaas resoted pratyaksha swarupas or getting invisible, Shri Rama Lakshmanas possess the art of viewing and identifying them distinctly and devastate the Rakshasaas. What with the haziness of the heaps of dust and sand by the chariots and horse thumpings, the warriors of Rakshasaas and Vaanara bhallukas alike, especially of the darkness of the 'kaala raatri', were literally blinded other wise. As the Maha Yuddhha was getting hitting the peak and pinnacle, there were 'rakta pravaahaas. tato bherīmṛdaṅgānām paṇavānām ca nisvanaḥ, śaṅkhavenusvanonmiśraḥ sambabhūvādbhutopamaḥ/ hatānām stanamānānām rākṣasānām ca nisvanaḥ, śastrāṇām vānarāṇām ca sambabhūvātidāruṇaḥ/ śastrapuṣpopahārā ca tatrāsīd yuddhamedinī, durjñeyā durniveśā ca śoṇitāsṛavakardamā/ sā babhūva niśā ghorā harirākṣasahārīṇī, kālarātrīva bhūtānām sarveṣām duratikramā/ Then the astounding sounds like 'megha garjanaas', drum soundings, and 'shankha naadaas' as further getting intensified by screams and 'artanaadaas' of the fallen heros either side were like of Pralaya Times. Several Vaanara Veeraas hit and fallen by the 'shakti-shula-gadaadi prahaaraas' as also of Parvaakaara Rakshasa veeraas too intensified their dusted yet of steaming hot mixes of Rakshaa-Vaanara Veeras as though they received pushpas showered from the 'Veera Swargas'! Thus as the night long maha yuddha of Rakshasa -Vaanara Bhallukas continued proving that as an unusual Kaala Ratri of 'samasta praani samhara' since became relentless and further. Suddenly then six Rakshasaas viz. Yagjna shatru, Mahapaashva, Mahodara, Maha Kaaya, Vajradamshttra and Shuka Saaranas hiding themselves in the utter darkness attacked Shri Rama who was already busy showering his ever potent baana prahara on Rakshasas in hundreds. In ready response to their aggression released six ‘bhayaanaka agni jwaalaa sahita visha purvaka mahaa baanas’ and they ran away for life. The Meanwhile Angada during the process of Maha Rakshasa Samhara, attacked Ravana Kumara Indrajit as the latter was hurt even as his chariot was smashed to pieces and the maaha ashvas reached Yamaloka too. Indrajit then became invisible. Prashamashaa yogya Vaali Kumara Angada, Deva Rishi gana and Rama Lakshmanas too congratulated him. Then Sugriva-Vibhishanas too gave their heart felt greetings to Angada. As Angada put Indrajit to disgrace and shame the latter displaced bhayankara krodha. Indeed Indra jit had long before accomplished a boon of Brahma himself but was truly stunned tha a mere vanara disillusioned him and thus resorted to arrow rains for long but to no validity against Angada. Raamam cha Lakshmanam chiva ghorainaagamayai sharai, vibheda samare kuddhah sarva gaatreshu Raakshasah/ Maayayaa samvritasta mohayan Raghavou yudhi, adrushyah sarva bhutaanaam kootayodhee nishasacharah, babandha sharabaddhena bhraatarou Rama Lakshmanou/ tao tena parusha vyaaghrou kruddhenaasheevishah sharai, sahasaabhihatou veerou tadaa prekshanta vaanaraah/ Prakaasha rupastu yadaa na shaktastou baadhitum Rakshasa raaja putrah, maayaam prayoktum samupaagajaama babandha tou Rajasutou duraatmaa/ As he was unable to retort with his baana varsha against Angada in his ‘antadhaana avastha’ or of the state of invisibility on Angada any way, he diverted his anger on Rama Lakshmanas and hurt them. Both Rama Lakshmanas were hurt with the invisible arrows out of amazing suddenness from no where. Then by the play of Maya Devata as the nishachara Indrajit did succeed in binding Rama Lakshmanaas by ‘sarpaakaara baana’ or what is normally named ‘naaga paasha’. Indeed in his ‘nija swarupa’, Indrajit could never ever face the Rama Lakshmanas but utilised the meanest and detestable ‘maayopaaya’ for the time being Consequent on this disaster of Indrajit's maya proyoga of Nagastra binding Shri Rama Lakshmanas, then Shri Rama instructed ten vaanara yudhapatis to ascertain the whereabouts of Indrajit. Then the two sons of Sushena, Angada, Sharabha, Dwivida, Hanuman, Saanuprastha, Rishabha and Rishabhaskandha were instructed thus. The ten some Maha Vanaras carrying maha vrikshas on their shoulders flew up the skies in search of Indrajit. But Indrajit being aware of the purpose of the Vaanara's tensome, rained his astras on them and tried to stall their movement. He then subjected Rama Lakshmanas to the 'baana varsha' now under duress intensively. It seemed that there were no body parts of Rama Lakshmanas thus were not hurt and spared. Thus all their body parts oozed out flows of blood and flesh particles from their broad chests and body parts. Then in his continued 'antardhana avastha' Indrajit hecked Rama Lakshmanas: yudhyamānam anālakṣyaṁ śakro 'pi tridaśeśvaraḥ, draṣṭum āsādituṁ vāpi na śaktaḥ kiṁ punar yuvām/ prāvṛtāv iṣujālena rāghavau kaṅkapatrinā, eṣa roṣaparītātmā nayāmi yamasādanam/ evaṁ uktvā tu dharmajñau bhrātarau rāmalakṣmaṇau, nirbibheda śitair bāṇaiḥ prajahaṛṣa nanāda ca/ evaṁ uktvā tu dharmajñau bhrātarau rāmalakṣmaṇau, nirbibheda śitair bāṇaiḥ prajahaṛṣa nanāda ca/ So called heros of 'dushta maanavas' you have been over arrogant and careless during the 'yuddha samaya'. Now you would not be ever think of Indra, thus be prepared as to soon reach Yama Loka. Having yelled at Rama Lakshmanas, Indrajit made 'vikataapahaasaas' or like loud and shameful hecklings as typical of Rakshasaas, then resumed 'baana varshas' on the 'marmashalas' of Rama Lakshmanas and attacked the vaanara sena again. tau saṁpracalitau vīrau marmabhedena karṣitau, nipetatur maheśvāsau jagatyām jagatīpatī/ tau vīraśayane vīrau śayānau rudhirokṣitau, śaraveṣṭitasarvāṅgāv ārtau paramapīḍitau/ na hy aviddham taylor gātraṁ babhūvāṅgulam antaram, nānirbhinnam na cāstabdham ā karāgrād ajihmagaiḥ/ Thus Rama Lakshmanas under duress were suffering the agony of the 'marmassthala bhedana' their bodies were looking like their 'marana shayyas' or their death body beds. This was a situation similar to Indra's defeat in the hands of Indrajit as the former too was hurt in the 'marma sthala' and swooned down to earth.

[Vishleshana on Indrajit]

Meghanada was an expert in magical warfare, sorcery and mantratantras besides Brahmaastra, Vaishnavaastra and pashupatastra by the boons of Brahma, married to Sulochana, the daughter of the Shesha Naaga. During the battle between the Devas and Ravana, Lord Indra, accompanied by Devas captured Ravana. To rescue his father, Meghanada attacked Indra and his elephant Airavat, defeated all the Devas, even Indra. Meghanada tied and mounted Indra onto his celestial chariot and dragged him to Ravana in Lanka. Ravana and Meghanada decided to kill Indra. At this juncture, Brahma intervened and asked Meghanada to free Indra. Meghanada obliged and was granted a boon from Brahma. Meghanada asked for immortality, but Brahma remarked that absolute immortality is against the law of the nature. Instead, he was then granted another boon that after the completion of the Yagna of Pratayangira or the 'Nikumbhila yagna' and get a celestial chariot, mounting on which, he could win over any enemy in war and become invulnerable. But Brahma also cautioned him that whosoever would destroy this yagna would also kill him. Brahma was highly impressed by Meghanada's valor in this war and it was he who gave him the name Indrajit, the conqueror of Indra. It is also believed that Meghanada was granted another boon by Brahma in which it was promised to him that he would only be killed by such a human who hadnot slept for twelve years. Indrajit was trained under the guidance of Daanava Rakshasa Guru Shukra and obtained several divine shastra astras. Shastras are weapon like sword, lance, mace or dics.

Astras include Mohana, Prahmaana, Krouncha, Varshana, Shoshana, Santaapana, Paishaacha, Naaga, Garuda, Agneya, Varuna, Vayavya, Mohini, Brahma, Brahmanda, Paashupata, Naraayanaadi.]

Further stanzas continued: nāracaīr ardhanārācāīr bhallaīr añjalikaīr api, vivyādha vatsadantaīś ca simhadamaṣṭraīh kṣuraīs tathā/Then Indrajit devastated the Vanara Bhalluka Sena gradually with his astras like Pankha, Naaraacha, Artha naaraacha, Bhalla, Anjalika; Vastyadanta, Kshura, and so on depending on the angles and forms of the arrows being released. As Rama Lakshmanas were then lying on their Maranaasana Shayyaas, Shri Rama who always solaces all of his devotees were lying, the totality of the Vanara Sena broke down in hysterics and frenzied panic. baddhau tu vīrau patitau śayānau; tau vānarāḥ saṁparivārya tasthuḥ, samāgatā vāyusutapramukhyā; viśadam ārtāḥ paramaṁ ca jagmuḥ/ As Rama Lakshmanas were thus subdued by the ‘naaga paasha’ Hanuman and such stalwart Rama Bhaktas were confounded senseless.

The Vaanara shreshthas like Hanuman, Nala, Dvidida, Mainda, Sushena, Kumuda and Angada returned back and witnessed Rama Lakshmanas in a far more miserable stage with blood oozing out from wounded body parts as all the Vaanaras were crying away surrounded the bodies as at the threshold of collapse yet breathing fast. Meanwhile Sugriva Vibhishanas returned from the battle front as they were intimidated of the most serious crisis of Rama Lakshmanas as Indrajit attacked Rama Lakshmanas with ‘Naaga Paasha Bandhana’ and were shocked and stilled. Then Vibhishana by his own maya swarupa looking for Indrajit and glanced his nephew as Indrajit was engaged with the happiness of subduing Rama Lakshmanas addressing the co rakshasa veeraas! dūṣaṇasya ca hantārau kharasya ca mahābalau, sāditaṁ māmakair bāṇair bhrātaraṁ rāmalakṣmaṇau/ nemau mokṣayitum śakyāv etasmād iṣubandhanāt, sarvair api samāgamya sarṣisaṅghaiḥ surāsuraiḥ/ yatkr̥te cintayānasya śokārtasya pitur mama, aspr̥ṣṭvā śayanam gātrais triyāmā yāti śarvatī/ ‘Rakshasa Veeraas! Are you friends seeing the retributory impact of Rama’s killing of Khara Dushanas, and now along with Lakshmana I have since subjected by my successful Naaga Bandhana Prayoga and placed them on their near death beds. Now the totality of Muni Samudaaya would not succeed in releasing them. In fact my dear father Maha Raja Ravana had been able to touch his bed for long as this ‘anartha’ of Rama’s threat to his maha samrajya of Lankapuri now should be reversed back to peace and prosperity. Rāmasya lakṣmaṇasyaiva sarveṣāṁ ca vanaukasām, vikramā niṣphalāḥ sarve yathā śaradi toyadāḥ/ evam uktvā tu tān sarvān rākṣasān paripārśvagān, yūthapān api tān sarvāms tādāyām āsa rāvaṇiḥ/ What a pity that what all the great efforts that Rama Lakshmanas had been systematically made like the ‘sharad ritu varshaas’ have since been made like fragrant scents in heap of ashes!’ So pronouncing his self praise bravados, Indrajit resumed his ‘baana prahaaraas’ on the vaanara bhalluka veeraas. Then his arrows hit resulting in severe body injuries to Nala by nine arrow hits, Mainda and Dvididas along with three each arrows were mortally hurt, Bhalluka Raja Janbavan’s chest was split by one unique astra; Veera Hanuman was stilled by ten mahaastras, Gavaksha and Sharabha too were impaired by two each of the ‘mantrikaastras’. In such great excited enthusiasm, along with his co rakshasa veeraas, Golaanguleshwara Gavaksha and Vaali Putra Angada too were subjected to body injuries. Then with perverted gusto Meghanaada started hysteric dances on skies with thunderous garjanas with the thrill and ecstasy returned to Lankapuri. Then Sugriva yet to recover from his daze started shivers and broke down shattered, as Vibhishana pacified stating him: Sugriva! Don’t you crumble down yet, wipe off your tears forthwith. We do sometimes get alarmed by such critical situations in battles as success and other wise are decided by Vidhaata. Let us pray and beseech that Rama Lakshmanas get relieved soon. paryavasthāpayātmānam anāthaṁ mām ca vānara, satyadharmānurak - tānām nāsti mṛtyukṛtaṁ bhayaṁ/ Those who keep on clinging to the fundamental precepts of Dharma and Nyaaya are neither afraid of mṛtyu nor of ultimate vindication of success. Having thus pacified Sugriva, Vibhisina then asked to ensure the safety of the bodies of Rama Lakshmanas till they are reawaken. Assuredly once having been revived the Maha Raghu Vamshis would take ample care of this passing situation. Further, you should at once pass on this message to the Vanara Veeraas be courageous at such critical and passing situations common in the battles of dharma and adharma always.’ Indrajit had by then having reached Lankapuri and King Ravana with this sensational news of Rama Lakshmana’s near death with his ‘NaagaastraPrayoga’ enabling their swoon down nearing death! Then he described in detail the circumstances leading to the crisis of Vaanaras getting demoralised. Then Ravana was truly exhilarated, embraced and earnestly congratulated at the unprecedented and unbelievable success!

As Vaanaras safeguarded Rama Lakshmanas from naaga bandhana, Ravana instructed Trijati Rakhasi to show Sita by Pushpaka Vimaana, as she broke out crying away at the scene.

As Indrajit returned to Ravana conveying his success, Maha Vaanara Yoddhas like Hanuman, Angada, Nila, Sushana, Kumuda, Nala, Gaja, Gavaaksha, Gavaya, Gandhamaadana, Jambavaan, Rishabha, Skandha, Rambha, Shatabali, and Pruthu kept constant vigil armed with vrikshas, even as Rakshasas were ready to somehow destroy the bodies of Rama Lakshmanas. Elsewhere in Lankapuri after the exit of Indrajit, Ravana called for the Rakshasis engaged around Sita, as Trijata and so on and instructed them to go and inform Devi Sita that Rama Lakshmana's were almost dying as bound by Indrajit's 'naaga paasha' and about the consequent joy of the Maha Rakshasa Sena. Further select Rakshasis might take pushpaka Vimana and show Sita the exact stage of their dying bodies of Rama Lakshmanas. 'Then hopefully Devi Sita might approach me with no hesitation of Rama Lakshmana's concern and fall on my feet having been better dressed and with 'aabharanaas'. As the pushpaka vimana arrived at the Ashoka Vana, Sita on hearing the shocking tragedy hurried up getting into the Vimana by which she witnessed the entire Lanka - puri public in festive mood at the victory of King Ravana and his famed son Indrajit. Further she herself witnessed how Shri Rama Lakshmanas were actually tied by the Nagastra with feeble breathing lying on earth while some of the Maha Vaanara Bhallukas were guarding the bodies. vidhvastakavacau vīrau vipraviddhaśarāsanau, sāyakaiś chinnaśarvāṅgau śarastambhamayau kṣitau/ tau dṛṣṭvā bhrātaraḥ tatra vīrau sā puruṣarṣabhau, duḥkhārtā subhṛṣaṃ sītā karuṇaṃ vilalāpa ha/ sā bāṣpaśokābhīhatā samīkṣya; tau bhrātaraḥ devasamaprabhāvau, vitarkayantī nidhanaṃ tayoḥ sā; duḥkhānvitā vākyam idaṃ jagāda/ Both the Maha Veeras were lying with their kavachas destroyed, separated of their 'dhanur baanaas' as surrounded by Vaanara Shreshthas were lying on a bed. As those Mahottama Purushas of Kamala Nayana Shri Rama and the ever trust worthy Lakshmana like the Agni Putras of Shaakha and Vishakha were lying bound my Maha Sarpas, Devi Sita was dazed and broke down in hysterical cryings. She was unable to control her screamings as both the heroic bodies were dusted in a ‘maranaasanna durvyavastha’ and was drowned in deep distress!

As Devi Sita was shocked and broke down in disbelief, she wondered whether Saamudrika Shastra -and Astrological Precepts were truthful as assuring final success, but Trijata assured so too yet with hurdles.

They also predicted that Shri Rama as accompanied by me he would keep on performing innumerable yagja kaaryaas along with me for several centuries and could that be proved wrong too! vaidhavyaṁ yānti yair nāryo 'lakṣaṇair bhāgyadurlabhāḥ, nātmanas tāni paśyāmi paśyantī hatalakṣaṇā/ satyānīmāni padmāni strīṇām uktvāni lakṣaṇe, tāny adya nihate rāme vitathāni bhavanti me/ What all ashubha lakshanas either in my body structure or mentality are none, yet what all shubha lakshanas are prescribed are clearly visible on my face and physique could the entire Samudrika Shasra be falsified by early widowhood!

[Vishleshana on Samudrika Shastra: on women in general: ‘Padmini, Chatrini, Shankhini and Hastini are four kinds of women. Padmini, or Lotus-woman has a pleasing face as the full moon; her body with soft flesh, head like mustard-flower; her skin is tender and fair as the yellow lotus, never dark-coloured, though resembling, in the effervescence and purple light of her youth, the cloud about to burst. Her eyes are bright and beautiful as the orbs of the fawn, well-cut, and with reddish corners. Her bosom is hard, full and high; her neck is goodly shaped as the conch-shell, so delicate that the saliva can be seen through it; her nose is straight and lovely, and three folds of wrinkles cross her middle, about the umbilical region. Her Yoni resembles the open lotus-bud, and her Love-seed (Kama-salila, the water of life) is perfumed like the lily which has newly burst. She walks with swanlike gait, and her voice is low and musical as the note of the Kokila-bird; she delights in white raiment, in fine jewels, and in rich dresses. She eats little, sleeps lightly and, being as respectable and religious, she is clever and courteous, she is ever anxious to worship the gods, and to enjoy the conversation of Brahmans. Such, then, is the Padmini, or Lotus-woman. Samudrika Shastra further prescribes the grace of a woman’s body as raised, smooth and soft as a lotus flower, without veins showing up and with no visible hair is the sign of a Queen. Veins showing up indicates that she will have to travel a lot. Hair on feet denotes servitude and if feet are lean, bony or without flesh, it is an indication that she is sexually undesirable. Even heels denote that she is good for companionship; Stout undesirable sexually; High loose in character and Long of misery. Legs (portion below knee) Even, smooth, without hair, without veins showing up, are signs of a girl destined to enjoy life fully. Knees Round, smooth, good looking knees are lucky indications. Loose knees indicate poverty. Bony knees without flesh connote loose character. Thighs: Fleshy, round, like an elephant’s trunk or the trunk of a plantain tree, spacing between thighs being very little, without hair, denote that she is good enough to be married by a King. Waist circumference not exceeding the width of 24 fingers (approx. 15 to 16") with well developed hips denote full happiness. Flat, long, without flesh, caved in or hairy waist forebodes widowhood and misery. Hips Raised fleshy hips (like water melon) and well spread indicate full happiness. Sexual Organ Hidden, pink coloured, curved like the back of tortoise or an elephant’s trunk and smooth is highly auspicious. If shaped like the feet or deer or furnace, with hard hair, indicates evil. If the left side is raised, she will beget more girl children while a raised right side denotes more boys. If the organ is shaped like a conch, she will be barren. Bottom of Stomach (portion below navel) is Soft, spread out and slightly raised is highly auspicious. Hairy, veins showing up and full of lines (folds or wrinkles) indicate misery. Navel Deep, with right turn is auspicious. Raised with left turn is inauspicious. Sides of Stomach Well spread indicates many sons. If sides resemble that of a frog’s, her son will become a King. Raised sides indicate childlessness. Fold/wrinkle denote slavish tendency. Long sides denote birth of a Sandow. Ribs Good luck will result if the portion covering ribs is smooth and fleshy. Chest even and without hair is lucky and auspicious. Breasts Of equal size, fleshy, round and firm but close together are lucky. Raised right breast indicates many sons; left breast, if raised, indicates more of girls. If the portion surrounding the partition is round and good looking, good luck. Pressed in or unusually small indicates bad luck. Shoulders: Even, well built and without the joints showing up are lucky signs. Armpits Soft, with small smooth hair is lucky; deep, full of perspiration and showing out veins in unlucky. Arms Fleshy, soft, round and with veins not showing is lucky. If thumbs take the shape of a lotus bud, she is fit to be married by a King. Bent or bony denotes bad luck. Palms Red, raised in the middle, fingers evenly spaced with few lines on palm is a very auspicious sign. Back of Hands Soft without hair, well-built is lucky]

Stanzas further: satyānīmāni padmāni strīṇām uktvāni lakṣaṇe, tāny adya nihate rāme vitathāni bhavanti me/ keśāḥ sūkṣmāḥ samā nīlā bhruvau cāsaṅgate mama, vṛtte cālomaśe jaṅghe dantāś cāviralā mama/ Shṅkhe netre karau pāḍau gulphāv ūrū ca me citau, anuvṛttā nakhāḥ snigdhāḥ samās cāṅgulayo mama/ stanau cāviralau pīṇau mamemau magnacūcukau, magnā cotsaṅginī nābhiḥ pārśvoraskam ca me citam/

To all the womanhood, the signs of hands and feet are distinctive lotus like and Maka Vidwans asserted as unique, and in case Shri Rama were be killed as a flash then the assertiveness of Vidwans would be falsified. My head hairs are thick black, uniform, and long and the shape of knees is round and hairless and the teeth are even and sparkling. My eyes, hands, feet, are well shaped and so are my hand fingers and nails too. My breasts are firm and well rounded yet subdued and ‘naabhi’ is deep as the surrounding areas are proportionately broad and well shaped. My anga ‘kaanti’ is akin to a prized ‘mani’, while body hairs are soft and foot fingers are nicely pressed down to the ground. As per Jyotisha Siddhanta, my dear husband along with me should be blessed with Rajyabhisheka soon and indeed that could not be falsified either. As my dear husband along with Lakshmana were away by the lure of chasing the maya mriga, I was kidnapped yet they traced me at Lankapuri, crossed the Maha Samudra and fighting an dharma yuddha to vindicate justice. But now Indrajit used a technique maaya prayoga of disappearance and utilised ‘naaga bandhanopaaya’ under which both the brothers are under duress facing death. nāhaṁ śocāmi bhartāraṁ nihataṁ na ca lakṣmaṇam, nātmānaṁ janānī cāpi yathā śvaśrūṁ tapasvinīm/ sā hi cintayate nityaṁ samāptavratam āgatam, kadā draṅsyāmi sītāṁ ca rāmaṁ ca sahalakṣmaṇam/ I am now therefore crying away not merely for my sake, but equally so for the sake of their mothers.’ As Devi Sita was crying away, Rakshasi Trijata then pacified Sita Devi thus: idaṁ vimānaṁ vaidehi puṣpakam nāma nāmataḥ, divyaṁ tvāṁ dhārayen nedaṁ yady etau gajājīvitau/ hatavīrapradhānā hi hatotsāhā nirudyamā, senā bhramati saṁkhyeṣu hatakarṇeva naur jale/ iyaṁ punar asaṁbhrāntā nirudvignā tarasvinī, senā rakṣati kākutsthau māyayā nirjītau raṇe/ sā tvaṁ bhava suvisrabdhā anumānaiḥ sukhodayaiḥ, ahatau paśya kākutsthau snehād etad bravīmi te/ anṛtaṁ noktapūrvam me na ca vakṣye kadā cana, cāritrasukhaśīlatvāt praviṣṭāsi mano mama/ ‘Videha nandini! Even this pushpaka vimana being a celestial gift too would not be able to tolerate your ‘vaidhavya’ in case of any untowardness to Rama the hero of popularity and to Lakshmana the most trusted brother. Besides, it is understandable as their Leader Shri Rama as also Lakshmana get controlled by naga paasha, his sena too would get upset without drive and enthusiasm like the prime boatsman gets gagged and controlled, the boat travellers get dispirited with anxiety and fear. Once the leader gets relieved the boat gets stabilized then it should be accelerated with full speed to reach the destination with success! Hence may I assure you that both the brothers of bravery and fame ought to be revived most certainly. Be thus be ready to soon await with a little patience. Mithileshwari, by your very physical perfection and mental make up of fortitude, tolerance and general nature, I do assert that your Rama Lakshmanas would finally accomplish their task on hand pretty soon.’ Then Devi Sita replied to Rakshasi Trijata with folded hands and said: ‘Sister may this dream materialise soon!, as the Pushpaka Vimana flew back to Ashoka Vaatika of Lankapuri.

Sarga Forty Nine

All of sudden Shri Rama with his physical and mental strength tore off the ‘naaga pasha’ but was distressed to see Lakshmana could not and kept on crying missing him and got readied even to retreat!

As Shri Rama Lakshmanas were tied together by the hissing visha purita maha naagas, the Sugrivaadi Maha Vaanara Yoddhas were sunk deep in distressful mournings. They screamed high crying as to what could now be the fate of Devi Sita as she too returned back to Lankapuri and as to what ever could happen her looking dazed and forlorn agitated. etasminn antere rāmaḥ pratyabudhyata vīryavān, sthīratvāt sattvayogāc ca śaraiḥ saṁdānito 'pi san/ tato dṛṣṭvā sarudhiraṁ viṣaṇṇam gādham arpitam, bhrātaram dīnavadanaṁ paryadevayad āturaḥ/ kim nu me sītayā kāryam kim kāryam jīvitena vā, śayānam yo 'dya paśyāmi bhrātaram yudhi nirjitam/ śakyā sītā samā nārī prāptum loke vicinvatā, na lakṣmaṇasamo bhrātā sacivaḥ sāmparāyikah/ Suddenly, Shri Rama severed the 'naaga paasha' and found that Lakshmana was not wriggle out of it. Then Rama cried out looking at Lakshmana with still tied down with hissing serpas, he cried out stating: 'It might be perhaps possible to locate a maha saadhvi pativrata like Devi Sita on the face earth and humanity, but is it ever feasible to locate a swami bhakta like Lakshmana my very shadow! Would it not be feasible if I were to resort to 'praana tyaga' to substitute the life of Lakshmana! kim nu vakṣyāmi kausalyām mātaram kim nu kaikayīm, katham ambām sumitrāmca putradarśanalālasām/ vivatsām vepamānām ca krośantīm kurarīm iva, katham āśvāsayiṣyāmi yadi yāsyāmi taṁ vinā/ katham vakṣyāmi śatrughnam bharataṁ ca yaśasvinam, mayā saha vanam yāto vinā tenāgataḥ punaḥ/ upālambham na śakṣyāmi soḍhum bata sumitrayā, ihaiva deham tyakṣyāmi na hi jīvitum utsahe/ How indeed could I ever return to Ayodhya without Lakshmana to my mothers Koushalya and Sumitra. What could be the condition of Bharata Shatrughnas. As Rama was still crying away thus as a cow bereft of a calf. Is it at all really possible for me keep sustained ever without Lakshmana! If this tragedy continues then my life is truly futile and aimless. Rama continued further thus: Lakshmana! As and when I had been losing my heart, you had always diluted my distressed feelings, but if your own life is at stake what way out for my survival and it should be impossible for me live any further. These poisoned arrows must have certainly disabled your 'marma sthalas' and thus not able to speak to me. Other wise he should by now displayed his roudra swarupa by now. Lakshmana could release with swiftness and extreme precision over five hundreds arrows in a bunch and thus in his dhanur vidya he could surpass Kartaveeryaarjuna too. Look at him now on bare dusty ground who could even put Indra to embarrassment and surprise! It is a shame that without Lakshmana beside me, I am a zero instead of being a hero, so Vibhisana's rajyabhisheka might not be possible and Vanara King Sugriva might retreat with his 'maha vaanara veeraas' while Ravana might heckle and disgrace my inability to face him in the absence of Lakshmana beside him.' Thus Shri Rama was truly distressed with the absence of Lakshmana still bound by the 'naaga paasha'.

Vaanara Raja Sugriva reacted and addressed the Vaanara-bhalluka sena, pursuant to the volatile situation of Lakshmana's non release of the 'naaga paasha' and Shri Rama 'Vilaapa' leading to the consequential crisis of Rama's proposed retreat from the maha sangrama in the absence of Lakshmana. Sugriva stated: Vaanaras, just as a boat might get readied to sink due to a vortex in the deep waters, our mission of Ravana Samhara seems to be in trouble. Then the quick witted Angada replied that was this crisis due it Rama's inability to proceed further as Lakshmana still needed to be recovered from the 'naaga paasha'! Sigriva replied: 'dear son Angada! Yes, there is undesirable confusion in the vaanara sena right now! Vibhishana then stood up having lifted his heavy mace up to his shoulders and approached Sugriva. Then the Vaanara sena was shocked to mistake Vibhishana as Indrajit, while Jaambavan corrected the Vaanaras not to confuse Vibhishana as Indrajit. As Vibhishana was nodoubt happy at Shri Rama's recovery but not of Lakshmana as yet. Sugriva then explained to Vibhishana the late arrival to the scene that as Rama who was able to tear off the naaga bandhana noticed that Lakshmana was still not do so, Rama felt that in the absence of Lakshmana would not fight without Lakshmana and suggested the retreat of Sugriva and his sena back to kishkindha. Then Vibhishana cried out then stating that shatru Ravan falsified his hopes of rajyabhisheka as he promised recovery of Devi Sita. Then Sugriva embraced Vibhishana and asserted: rājyaṁ prāpsyasi dharmajña laṅkāyām nātra saṁśayaḥ, rāvaṇaḥ saha putreṇa sa rājyaṁ neha lapsyate/ śarasampīḍitāv etāv ubhau rāghavalakṣmaṇau, tyaktvā moham vadhiṣyete saganam rāvaṇam raṇe/ Dharmajña Vibhishana! Be assured that your rajyabhisheka should be a reality. Along with Indrajit, Ravana ought to be devastated. Once Rama Lakshmanas are finally relieved of this 'naaga bandhana', then being seated on the back of garuda deva, they should destroy Ravana and his followers.' As Sugriva asserted thua and assured Vibhishana, Sugriva asked Vanara Sushena nearby and instructed him that let Rama Lakshmanas be returned to Kishkindha and he himself would destroy Ravana and his followers. Then Sushana replied: 'King of Kishkindha: 'In the ancient times when devaasura maha yuddhas took place, 'astra shastra vidya yukta danavaasuras' had badly hurt deva samuhas with ease and Deva Guru Brihaspati applied celestial herbal medicins for curing the wounds. Sampatti and such vaanaras do possess the vigjnaana of the herbal medicines. In that huge range of mountains, there is the most appropriate mountains named 'Sanjeeva karni and Vishalyakarani'. There two maha parvataas were specially manifested by Brahma Deva himself. Sugriva Raja! you would be aware that Lavana or Salt, Ikshurasa or Sugarcane juice, Sura or Wine, Ghrita or Classified Butter, Dahi or Curd, Ksheera or Milk and Suswada or Sweet Water, Ksheera Sagara is most famed and on its shores are Chandra and Drona named mountains where Deva Danavas performed ‘amrita mathana’ and it is on those mountains where the ‘divya aoushdhis’ are aplenty. te tatra nihite devaiḥ parvate paramauśadhī, ayaṁ vāyusuto rājan hanūmāms tatra gacchatu/ etasminn antare vāyur meghāms cāpi savidyutaḥ, paryasyan sāgare toyaṁ kampayann iva parvatān/ mahatā pakṣavātena sarve dvīpamahādrumāḥ, nipetur bhagnaviṭapāḥ samūlā lavaṇāmbhasi/ Vaanara Raja! My considered advice is that Vayuputra Hanuman be kindly commisioned to locate the ‘mahoushdhis’ even and Viranjaneya was getting ready to successfully accomplish the success. Meanwhile, ‘Vayu prachalana’ or the speed of winds got intensified, megha garjanas and lightnings followed, and sweeps of winds shook up samudras. Maha Garuda flew off and there were the consequent ‘samudra prabhanjana’ of the Maha Samudras ranging from the Lavana Samudra. abhavan pannagās trastā bhoginas tatravāsinaḥ, śīghraṁ sarvāṇi yādāmsi jagmuś ca lavaṇārṇavam/ tato muhūrtad garuḍaṁ vainateyaṁ mahābalaṁ, vānarā dadṛśuḥ sarve jvalantam iva pāvakaṁ/ tam āgatam abhiprekṣya nāgās te vipradudruvuḥ, yaś tau satpuruṣau baddhau śarabhūtair mahābalau/ As Maha Sarpas of the Maha Samudra were shaken up too with the fury and speed of Vayu Deva jumped up and got flustered running hither and thither even entering Lankapuri as its residents were alarmed. Their respective physiques then got rejuvenated with tejas, veerya, bala, oza, utsaaha, drishtishakti, buddhi, and ramaneeyatadi shaktis as got doubled.

Vinata and Kadru were among the two wives of Kashyapa Muni. Kadru hatched thousands of eggs creating snakes while Vinata hatched only two. Vinata broke one egg and found a child named Aruna but was deformed. Eventually Aruna became the charioteer of Surya Deva. In a mutual bet, Vinata and Kadru out of playfulness; the bet was as to which colour was of Ucchaishrava the celestial horse born during ksheera saagara mathana; Vinata replied that the horse was white but the bet was lost since the horse’s tail was black. Vinata lost the bet and became Kadru’s servant and served her as also the progeny of snakes. The second son of Vinata named Garuda too was born weak with a beak and wings like an eagle but with the features of a human. As Garuda grew up he noticed that his mother was a slave and did all the domestic work including looking after the snake children. The latter used to tauntingly address *Garuda as the son of Vinata and order him to give him rides on the sky. One day, Garuda was ordered by Kadru to take all her snake children to a near by island while Vinata should carry herself. In anger and disgust Garuda carried the snake children too high on the sky and the latter were half burnt by the heat of Surya Deva. Then as the snake kids screamed and Kadru prayed to Indra who instatantly saved them by rain showers. On landing back, Garuda told the serpent kids that he could keep on taking to many islands but on the condition that her mother be freed from the slavery. But Vinata disagreed and asked Garuda to strengthen his body by reaching Himalayas and lifting big tortoises and elephants to eat. Guruda did so and eventually made his body mighty and invincible. One day he found an elephant and tortoises and having lifted them, placed the preys on a strong branch of a huge tree to settle down and eat. But Vakalhilya Sages of miniature sizes hanging down the branch realised that the massive bird could fly them down to an island near by and befriended them by calling it as ‘Garuda’ or the one who could lift up massive loads. He helped them and they suggested to approach swarga on the high skies to secure amrit for longevity. As Garuda was nearing Swarga, Indra got concerned about the mighty sky and ran to Brihaspati. The latter, having realised the purpose of Garuda to lift amrita drops, alerted all the Devas including Vayu- Varuna- Agni-and so on and even the vajrayudha of Indra could not stop Garuda who finally did secure a pot of amrit and desired that his mother be freed from her slavery too. On way back, Vishnu appeared and smilingly offered that he could be his ‘vaahana’ for ever.!! [Repeat of Essence of Valmiki Ayodhya Ramayana]

As Ravana heard the tumultuous noises of drum beatings and screamings of the opponent ‘vaanara sena’, Ravana blissfully seated among the Ministers, wondered as what all had been happening at the enemy front since subdued despite Indrajit’s victorious ‘naaga bandhana’. He stood up with rage and commanded the Ministers to go and find out what was happening there. On ascertaining the ground position, they reported back to say that it appeared that Rama Lakshmanas were relieved of the ‘naga bandhana’ and hence their ‘jai jai ninaadaas’. Then suddenly the medium dark color of his ‘dashamukhas’ got darker and thought within himself: ghorair dattavarair baddhau śarair āśīviṣomapaiḥ, amoghaiḥ sūryasamkāśaiḥ pramathyendrajitā yudhi/ tam astrabandham āsādyā yadi muktau ripū mama, saṁśayastham idam sarvam anupaśyāmy aham balam/ niṣphalāḥ khalu saṁvṛttāḥ śarā vāsukitejasāḥ, ādattam yais tu saṁgrāme ripūṇām mama jīvitam/ What all my glorious son Indrajit ever hissing like a ‘maha naaga’ himself, being an unparalleled ‘mahaastra vidya praveena’ under the tutorship of Maha Danvava-Rakshasaas Guru Shukraachaarya himself, appears not to have succeeded in his ‘naaga bandhana astra prayoga’! This should be a matter of serious import requiring serious attention. Having pondered likewise addressed with partly anxious but outwardly with angry desperation, Ravana shouted on a commanding tone addressed Dhumaraaksha: balena mahatā yukto rakṣasām bhīmakarmaṇām, tvaṁ vadhyābhiniṛyāhi rāmasya saha vānaraiḥ evam uktas tu dhūmrākṣo rākṣasendreṇa dhīmatā, kṛtvā praṇāmam saṁhṛṣṭo nirjagāma nṛpālayāt/ abhiniṣkrāmya taddvāram balādhyakṣam uvāca ha, tvarayasva balam tūrṇam kim cireṇa yuyutsataḥ/ dhūmrākṣasya vacaḥ śrutvā balādhyakṣo balānugah, balam udyojayām āsa rāvaṇasyājñāyā drutam/ Bhayanaka Paraakrami Veera! go atonce as accompanied by Maha Rakshasa Veeras attack Rama who would be surrounded by Vaanara Pramukhas. As per the King’s command, Dhamrakha having dutifully performed a ‘parikrama’ of Ravana exited the Raja Bhavana and intructed his charioteer to reach the battle ground forthwith as his horsemen rakshasaas followed fittingly armed. The ‘bhayanaka balavan nishaachara’ in his mighty arms was carrying his ‘astra shastras’ as some of his warrior sena were mounted on well trained elephants besides very many on horse backs all of them equipped with ‘shuula-mudgara- gada pattusha-loha danda, musala, parigha, bhindapaala-bhaale-paashaadi maha bhayaaka ayudhaas’. The nishaachara shiromani was riding a chariot with a ‘survarna jaala’ or a golden net to catch the fishlike vaanara veeras! But indeed, the maha vaanara yoddhas instead being mere fish to be netted in were far worse than whales with gigantic physiques with maha vrikshasa and mountain boulders on their shoulders with which to crush to instant death.

Sarga Fifty Two

As Dhumraaksha entered the battle field with his great Rakshasa Sena admirably equipped military armoury, Vaha Vanaras now with Rama Lakshmanas freed from the naaga paasha refreshed with renewed vigour and excitement with uprooted maha vrishas and mountain rocks on their mighty shoulders the no less rakshasa veeraas began to utilize arrow downpours as quite a few vaanara veeras, as several ‘haa haakaaras’ were heard mainly from the vanaraas. Irritated by the cries of collapsed Maha Rakshasas on the defending side too, Dhumraaksha became more and more aggressive and encouraged the Maha Rakshaasa to quickly exhibit their military skills by utilizing their equipment of shula mudgara maha passhas which the opponents were neither possessive of the basic equipped of warfare nor of utilising them excepting the crude art of ‘vriksaadi praharana’. Having thus renewed the courage and confidence by Dhumraasha, the Rakshasaas became more and more aggressive. dhūmrākṣeṇārditaṁ sainyaṁ vyathitaṁ dṛśya mārutiḥ, abhyavartata saṁkruddhaḥ pragṛhya vipulāṁ śilāṁ/ krodhād dviguṇatām rākṣaḥ piṭṛtulyaparākramaḥ, śilāṁ tām pātayām āsa dhūmrākṣasya ratham prati/ āpatantīm śilāṁ dṛṣtvā gadām udyamya sambhramāt, rathād āplutya vegena vasudhāyām vyatiṣṭhata/ Then Dhumraaksha picked up his ‘dhanush baanaas’ and attacked the Vaanara Veeras into bits and pieces as several vaanarasa fell victimised, encouraging the co Rakshasaas and apparently enjoying himself. Pavana kumara Anjanaaputra found that a critical mode was appearing in the battle. His normal smile disappeared and his eyes got reddened. His physical speed and velocity was of the inheritance of Vayu Deva, his dear and respectable father. He jumped up to a near mountain top pulled of huge portion of it and hurled at Dhumraksha’s chariot which crashed along with his dhawaja, the iron wheels along with the dead horses, and forced the Senapati to get dragged down to the dusty ground. sā pramathya ratham tasya nipapāta śilābhūvi, sacakrakūbaram sāśvaṁ sadhvajaṁ saśarāsanam/ sa bhāṅktvā tu ratham tasya hanūmān mārutātmajaḥ, rākṣasāṁ kadanāṁ cakre saskandhaviṭapair drumaiḥ/ vibhinnaśirasō bhūtvā rākṣasāḥ śoṇitokṣitāḥ, drumaiḥ pramathitāś cānye nipetur dharaṇītale/ vidrāvya rākṣasāṁ sainyaṁ hanūmān mārutātmajaḥ, gireḥ śikharam ādāya dhūmrākṣam abhidudruve/ He jumped up to a near mountain top pulled of huge portion of it and hurled at Dhumraksha’s chariot which crashed along with his dhawaja, the iron wheels along with the dead horses, and forced the Senapati to get dragged down to the dusty ground. No doubt Anjaneya’s head was affected by the ‘gada prahara’ with scratches but ignoring the same, he with his ‘vaayu vega’ reached atop a mountain and instantly hurled at Dhumraaksha Mastaka with extreme precision. sa vihvalitasarvāṅgo giriśṛṅgeṇa tāditaḥ, papāta sahasā bhūmau vikīrṇa iva parvataḥ/ dhūmrākṣam nihataṁ dṛṣtvā hataśeṣā niśācarāḥ, trastāḥ praviviśur laṅkāṁ vadhyamānāḥ plavaṅgamaiḥ/ sa tu pavanasuto nihatya śatruṁ; kṣatajavahāḥ saritaś ca saṁvikīrya, ripuvadhaja - nitaśramo mahātmā; mudam agamat kapibhiś ca pūjyamānaḥ/ As the ‘parvata shikhara prahara’ of Viranjanya, Dhumraksha’s head and body parts were crumbled to the battle ground in bits and pieces, as his Rakshasa Sena ran back to Ravana in Lankapuri as Virajanajaneya was hailed by the ‘Vaanara Sena prashamsha’ with his gladdened heart.

Ravanaasura got furious that Dhumaakasha was killed by Hanuman, he instructed Vajradamshra to take revenge, as Rakshasa Vaanara Maha Yuddha followed yet Angada crushed Vajradamshta to death

As Rakshasa Raja went wild with rage on hearing the news of ‘Maha Rakshasa Dhumraksha’ death and like ‘maha visha sarpa’ would swing left and right with ‘phoophookaaras’, taking long and deep breathings commanded Nishachara Mahabali Vajradamshtra and raising his voice said: you should instantly attack Rama and Sugrivas. Then with Gaja-Ashva-Ratha-dhanush-tomara-musala-bhindipaala-shakti-pattisha-khadga-chakra-gadasahita aneka asrta-shastradhari Maha Rakshasaas proceeded ahead with megha garjanas typical of Varsha Kaala. He then devastated the Samudra samaana Vaanara Maha Vaanara Sena felt that they were experiencing a sand storm or a pralaya kaalagni. But the never shaken up Vaali Kumara Angada was hardly subdued. Taan raakshasa ganaan sarvaan vrikshamuddyumaya veeryavan, Angadaha krodhataamraakshah simhah kshuramrigaaniva, chakaara kadanam ghoram Shara tulya paraakramah/ Angadaabhihataastra raakshasaa bheema vikramaah vibhinna shirasah peturnikrittaa iva paaapaah/Angadasya cha veerena tad raajkshasasabalam mahat,praakampata tadaa tara pavanekaambudo yathaa/ His eyes were raging fury as indeed he was an Indratulya Paraakrami. Just as lion would jump and attack vanya pashus, he could uproot maha vrikshas, he carried on assaulting bhayanaka rakshasas as they were severed of their heads and bodies as fallen to dust. Their chariots and dhvajas were crashed, as their horses and elephants aside from their own dead body mutilations caused instant fountains of blood. Thus Angada’s very presence on the battle field sent shivers down the spines of the Rakshasaas.

On seeing the havoc created by Angada, Vajradamshtra fumed up and lifted his dhanush and initiating the bombardment with violent barrages of arrows nonstop, as the follower Rakshasas Maha Veeras took to extensive use of ‘ayudha prahaaraas’, while the Vanarara Pramukhas as inspired by Angada retaliated with similar varshpaata of maha vrikshas and huge mountain rocks. The mutual battle caused floods of ‘rakta - maamsa pravaahaas.’ The ‘atyanta krodha yukta’ Vajradamshta for each of his ‘dhanur prayogas’ were tied with bunches of arrows with five-seven- nine ‘gucchhas’ causing panic to the vaanara veeras and with deep wounds as pierced through by the ‘bana parampara’ ran to Angadas Kumara for his shelter and solace. The instant reaction of Angada was to sink Vajradamshtra with heavy boulders with speed and agility. The retaliatory Vajradamshtra hit the mammasthalas of Angada with a spree of a lakh poisonous arrows. Rudhurokshatasarvaango Vaalisoonur mahaabalaha, chikshepa Vajradamshtraaya vriksamm bheenaparaakramah/ Drushtvaa panantam tam vrikshamasmasambhraanascha Raakshasah, chicchhed bahudhaa sopi madhitah praapadat bhuvi// tam drushtvaa vajradamshtrsya vikramam plavagarbhashabhah, pragriha vipulam shailam chikshapa cha nanaadacha/ The baana prahaara in a lakh of number made such an impact that Angada crumbled yet with his ‘agni jwaala’ like revenge got up instantly and made a fast rise up and made the fastest prahara of a ‘parvata khanda’ as Vajradamshtra’s head and body parts crumbled to pieces, the blood flows stunned the Raksasa sena fled away back to Lankapuri in panic.

As approved by Ravana, Akampana proceeded along with 'maha rakshasa shreshthas' with megha garjanas. In his past adventures, even crores of Deva Sena was terrified to counter Akampana or nevereven shaken up shivers and hence his title was Akampana. As the horses carrying his chariot were looking sad with tears in their eyes as even he glanced some dusshakunas and surprisigly however even his tone are rather sudued. Even so the Maha Rakshasaveeras accompanying Akampana were in full excitement screaming away 'jai jai ninaadaass'. On the other side of the battle front, Vaanara Veeraas itching away with another confrontation heard battle shouts of victory but were hardly see as huge dusts were spread all over in the otherside and thus the dhvajas, chariots, horses and the approaching marches of the Rakshasa sena. Then came the rakshasa in crowds started attacking the vaanaraas all of a sudden with their maces, shaktis, praaaas, parighas and so on. Vaanaas too ataacked with maha vrikhas, heavy boulders and so on, besides resorting to dwandva yuddhas. etasminn antare vīrā harayaḥ kumudo nalaḥ, maindaś ca paramakruddhaś cakrur vegam anuttamam/ te tu vṛkṣair mahāvegā rākṣasānām camūmukhe, kadanam sumaha cakrur līlayā hariyūthapāḥ/It was at that very time, maha vaanara shreshthas like Kumuda, Nala, Mainda and Dvidida joined and with dashing speed and anger. The Vanara shreshthas then considering a play worthy game pounded Rakshasaas with 'mushti ghaataas' on their coounterparts.

As Akampana's 'baana parampara' on vaanara sena was frightening, Hanuman faced Akampana as the entire vaanara veeras were rejoiced. Instantly Akampana initiated his baana varshas as Indra was pouring 'varaha paataas' continuously. Then quite ignoring the Akampanas arrow series, Hanuman attacked the Rakshasa sena with anger like 'agni jwaalaas'. As he was not equipped with any 'aayudha' at that time, he pulled up a mountain and while making 'simha garjanaas'. Avoiding other vaanara veeras then, Akampana merely concentrated on Hanuman and shot at the parvata shikhara with an 'ardha chadraakaara mantra yokta baana' with his mighty pull. As the mountain collapsed in bits and pieces, Hanuman went into white fury with 'dwesha and darpa'. Jumping over to another 'parvata', Hanuman then found a maha vriksha named Ashwakarna at an adjoining mountain and uprooted it. Then he jumped down to where Akampana was standing while he was waving the maha vriksha and attacked Akampana who reacted by utilising fourteen mantra yukta arrows at Hanuman who was hurt instantaneously. As blood flows were flowing from his hurt body parts, Hamuman uprooted yet another maha vrisksha and threw off aiming at Akampana. sa vṛkṣeṇa hatas tena sakrodhena mahātmanā, rākṣaso vānarendreṇa papāta sa mamāra ca/ tam dṛṣṭvā nihataṁ bhūmau rākṣasendram akampanam, vyathitā rākṣasāḥ sarve kṣitikampa iva drumāḥ/ tyaktapraharanāḥ sarve rākṣasās te parājitāḥ, laṅkāṁ abhiyayus trastā vānarais tair abhidrutāḥ/ As a highly fumed up Veerananaya, the ‘maha vriksha prahara’ ended up Akampana Rakshasa Senapai to crumble to the ground with a thud, like a bhukampana gets terminated as the remaining rakshasa sena threw off the ‘astrashastras’ and ran back to Lankapuri. As the Rakshasa sena as still survived took their heels back to Lanka, as the Vanara sena survivors after the battle were rather amused and shouted ‘jaya jaya ninaadaas’ loudly congratulating Veera Hanuman.

On receiving the intimation about Akampana's death, Ravana got infuriated yet again and kept on thinking deep. Then he addressed 'yuddhakala kovida' Prahasta had said with 'samayasphuurti': Maha Rakshasa Veera: 'you are well aware that Lankapuri is now gloomy and the citizens are full of apprehension and nervousness. I am not able to decide as to who could redeem the situation. I might even instruct my brother Kumbhakarna, or my own son, or Nikumbha or you my able Senapati yourself. Therefore I suggest that you may get ready to return with glorious success where the vaanara sena is yearning for their death. You are aware that Vaanaras are basically of chanchala buddhi and are ever fearful and Rama Lakshmanas are entirely dependent on them. āpatsamśaśreya nātra niḥsamśayīkṛtā/ pratilomānulomaṁ vā yad vā no manyase hitam/ rāvaṇenaivam uktas tu prahasto vāhinīpatiḥ, rākṣasendram uvācedam asurendram ivośanā/ Prahasta! But we are not able to arrive at a common decision. My personal feeling would be that returning Sita Devi would be auspicious for all of us. But you had all along honoured me by daana-satkaaras from time to time. And how indeed could I ever heartily reciprocate my indebtedness to you. Trust me when I assure you that my life, wife, progeny and welfare certainly not at stake. I have least hesitation to assert that my very life be sacrificed in 'agni jwaalaas' for your sake.' Having stated thus, Prahasta instructed the his chief to get the Rakshasa Seva to be readied at once. Then having dressed up in his vajra kavacha and the battle worthy yudhaas alighted his chariot. Having crossed Lankapuri, the maha kaaya rakshasa pramukhas leading his chariot resorted to 'shankhaaraavaas' and 'megha garjana samaana ninaadaas' of victory shouts, as four of Prahasta's sachivass named Narantaka, Kumbha Hanu, Maha naada and Samutrata surrounded him on all the sides of his chariot by riding horses. As Prahasta appeared like pralaya kaala Yama Raja himself with anger and decisiveness. But there were some 'ashubha suchanas' like groups of owls and ulkaapata on the skies, even as Maha Kaaya Vaanara Yodhas were encountered with broad shoulders with huge trees and mountain boulders with resounding noises of excited with readiness to attack.

As Prahasta thus got into the thick battle against the ‘maha vaanara sena’ with desperation and confidence, Shri Rama smiled at Vibhishana and enquired about Prahasta’s background and the latter explained that Prahasta was a trusted Senapati of King Ravana, an ‘astra-shastra vigjnaana pramukha parakama shura veera’. Even as Vibhishana was explaining to Shri Rama, there were cloud burst like garjanas of both Raakshasa-and Vaanara Maha Senas with mutual attacks and the Rakshasa Veeras surrounded the Vaanara Shreshthas as Prahasta was proactivising the giant sized Rahshasaas to hit and smother the vaanaras. Inspired by Prahastas while closing in groups of Vanaraas started using their khadgas, shaktis, shulas, musalas, gadas, parighas, praasaas, and vichitra dhanush banaas at close and tight encounters leaving behind heaps of vanaras lying dead. Vanara shreshthas were retaliating with thrashing of maha vrikshas and mountain rocks of heavy weight-volume and height. As Vanaras of too of huge height and might smashing the Maha Rakshasas too with matching attacks and counterings the swings of balances were truly nonstop. There were frequent shrills and shrieks on both sides of despairs and spurts of overjoys turned the battle field into pandemonium. As Prahasta's sachivaas vix. Narantaka-Kumbhahanu-Maha Naada and Sumatrata were devastating the Vanara Sheshthas, Jambavan pulled up a massive mountain boulder as Mahanaada's robust chest bursted out and in the same sweep Sumatra too. Narantaka was similarly treated by Dvivida Vaanarasherestha by a parvata shikhira. Kumbhahanu Rakshasa was smashed with a treetop as uprooted by Taara namaka. mahatā hi śaraugheṇa prahasto yuddhakovidāḥ, ardayām āsa saṁkruddho vānarān paramāhave/ vānarāṇām śarīrais tu rākṣasānām ca medinī, babhūva nicitā ghorā patitair iva parvatāiḥ/ Revengefully burst out fuming anger and anxiety of his sachivas with the crumbling and slashing sweeps of mountain shikharas respectively with those of boulders and maha vrikshas as uprooted, Prahasta Maha Senapati attacked Vaanara Sena with his non stop 'baana parampara'. tataḥ sṛjantam bānaughān prahastam syandane sthitam, dadarśa tarasā nīlo vinighnantam plavaṅgamān/ sa tam paramadurdharṣam āpatantam mahākapiḥ, prahastam tādāyām āsa vṛkṣam utpātya vīryavān/ sa tenābhīhataḥ kruddho nadan rākṣasapuṅgavaḥ, vavarṣa śaravarṣāṇi plavagānām camūpatau/ Then Maha Vaanara Neela noticed creating havoc in the vaanara sena as several of them were getting grievously hurt on their shoulders, feet, and heads as there was a vast vaamara samhara. Prahasta's fiery arrows then attacked Neela too and was hurt and in return, the Maha Vaanara uprooted two maha vrikshas and hurled at Prahasta's body simultaneously. The sweep and speed with which Neela's vriksha dwandva had hurt Prahasta led to megha garjana like shrieks and on quick recovery had released 'baana parampara' on Maha Neela. apārāyan vārayitum pratyagrhnān nimīlitaḥ, yathaiva govṛṣo varṣam śāradaḥ śīghram āgatam/ evam eva prahastasya śaravarṣam durāsadam, nimīlītākṣaḥ sahasā nīlaḥ sehe sudāruṇam/ roṣitaḥ śaravarṣeṇa sālena mahatā mahān, prajaghāna hayān nīlaḥ prahastasya manojavān/ vidhanus tu kṛtas tena prahasto vāhinīpatiḥ, pragṛhya musalam ghoram syandanād avapupluve/ Even as he was not properly able to notice the impact of Prahasta's 'baana pravaaha', Neela had almost closed his eyes and withstood his sufferance, like a vrishabha or bull suffers the onslaught of 'sharad kaalaa varsha dhaaraas'! Then maha vaanara yoddha Neela pulled up with the might of his arms a 'saala vriksha' and hurled at the horses of Prahasta's chariot horses as also of his dhanush when the Rakshasa jumped off with his 'bhayanaka musala'. taavubhau vāhinīmukhyau jātaroṣau tarasvinau, sthitau kṣatajadigdḥāṅgau prabhinnāv iva kuñjarau/ ullikhantau sutikṣṇābhīr damṣṭrābhīr itaretaram, simhaśārdūlasadrṣau simhaśārdūlaceṣṭitau/ vikrāntavijayau vīrau samareṣv anivartinau, kāṅkṣamāṇau yaśaḥ prāptum vṛtravāsavayoḥ samau/ ājaghāna tadā nīlam lalāṭe musalena saḥ, prahastam paramāyastasya susrāva ṣoṇitam/ Both the Senapatis of Ravana-Sugrivas, both being a wind power like vega shaalis, were like madashaali elephants or like 'simha shaardulas' got readied for the encounter face to face. Despite the 'praahara', the bhayankara vegashaali Rakshasa Senapati attacked Neela Vaanara Veera yet again, but the equally veegashaali Neela pulled up a very colossal mountain boulder and tossed at the 'musala yoddhi nishachara senapati mastaka' was torn to pieces. Sa gataasurgatashriko gatasatvo gatendriyaḥ, papāta sahasā bhūmau chinna-mūla iva drumah/ vibhinnaśīrasas tasya bahu susrāvaṣoṇitam, śarīrād api susrāva gireḥ prasravaṇam yathā/ hate prahaste nīlena tad akampyam mahad balam, rākṣasām apraḥṣṭānām

Then the defeated rakshasa sena stood before King Ravana with their heads and chins down. On the other hand, the proud Neela hastened too with his victory 'ninaadaas' of the Maha Vaanaras to Shri Rama Lakshmana-Sugriva-Vibhushanas as in the midst of several other Vaanara Yoddhas.

No doubt having been readily fumed up with sad end of Maha Senapati Prahasta by Agni Putra Neela, Ravana'sura fell into introspection and felt that the perseverance, grit and resolve, of 'shatru sena' should neither ignored nor disdained with condemnation. After all, there have been a series of crumbings of giant like Rakshasa Yoddhas and our relief points have so far been very few and far between. so 'ham ripuvinaśāya vijayāyāvicārayan, svayam eva gamiṣyāmi raṇaśīrṣam tad adbhutam/ adya tad vānarāṇikam rāmaṁ ca sahalakṣmaṇam, nirdahiṣyāmi bāṇaughair vanaṁ dīptair ivāgnibhiḥ/ Now, I myself should be ready to attack and smother the Shatru sena, lock, stock and barrel, and return with ever renewed success and triumph. I ought to devastate the Vanaras and below par humans of Rama Lakshmanas and reinforce my glory by my 'prajjvalita agni yukta mantrika baana paramparas' and force out the 'rakta maha nadi dhaaraas' for 'prithvi tripti'! Having declared in his Maha Sabha, the King of Asuras, the deva shatru Ravana like agni himself alighted a decorated elephant as shankha, bheri, pranava and 'jai jai ninaadaas', while 'vaneejana stuti janaas' were ahead. Mountain like maamsaahaari Rakshasaas on their excellently devorated mahaashvaas and elephants too were ahead leading the splendorous King of Rakshasaas proceeded as Rudra himself descended from Kailasha with mahaagni jwaalaas. Having sighed from a distance, the Maha Vaanara Sena sighted forwarded a message to Shri Rama who was seated with Vibhishana as the latter noticed that Ravana himself was coming forward and explained that he mounted an elephant as followed by the chariot with Indrajit along with his 'dhanur baanas' as Indradhanush like flashes of his mighty arm swings. Then was Atikaaya Rakshasa with his mountainous physique like of vidhyachala, astaachala, mahendra giri samaanas was riding in his chariot. Then Mahodara named mounted on an elephant ghanta dhvani garjanas. Pishacaka named with his praasaayudha seated on a horse back was leading too. Trishira - not to be confused as he who was killed by Rama earlier at the Janashaana- was riding a 'vrishaba' too was in the lead. So was Kumbha- Nikumbha-Narantakas rakshasa yoddhas. Vibhishana continued further and then described Ravana in detail. asau kirīṭī calakuṇḍalāśyo; nāgendravindhyopa -mabhīmakāyaḥ, mahendravaivasvatadarpahantā; rakṣo 'dhipaḥ sūrya ivāvabhāti/ 'He is adorned with his kireeta and karna kundalas with such self confidence and of self belief that he could suppress Indra and Yamaraaja even. Then Shri Rama who had initially prefaced the name and fame of this nishachara raja, asserted: 'I am indeed fortunate to see Ravana the evil-incarnate myself. Be assured that I should never erase the blemish of Devi Sita's agony and the consequent impact on my very life and to day itself that injustice be truly repaid and reversed. Then dhanurdhara Shri Rama felt confident that dear Lakshmana too would be with me in the triumph of this Maha Karya.' Meanwhile,

Ravana instructed the Maha Rakshasaas: ‘Maha Rakshasa Veeraas! Do please most fearlessly guard the nagara dwaaras with alertness, considering that you are fortunate of attacking vaanara pramukhas’. Having thus alerted the draara paalaka raksasaas, Ravana then proceeded like a mata masya-‘timingala’- for ‘sumudra vikshobana.’ He started off the release of ‘baana parampara’ as Sugriva huled a mountain peak at Ravana and the latter like a ‘maha sarpa’ hissed and released an arrow which had such ‘bhayanaka shakti’ which made the parvata collapse just like Swami Kartikeya hit the Krouncha Parvata over which Sugriva stood up and no sooner, the King of Vaanaras tripped down rolling to earth being swooned shocked as Maha Rakshasa Sena roared with ‘ Jai Ravana, Jai Lankeshwara’! Then Maha Vaanaras named Gavaksha, Gavaya, Sushena, Rishabha, Jyotirmukha, and Nala having pulled up parvata shikharas attacked Ravana as he released thousandas of his ‘vichitra pankha banma praharas’ arrows in quick succession as thmighty Vaanaras fell down in dusts and crawled on earth and approached Rama for protection. Then Shri Rama moved forward to Ravana. Then Lakshmana intervened and requested Rama to please let him handle this encounter as that this privilege of Ravava naashana be allowed to him. Rama conceded no doubt but in this ‘sangrama’ let there be a concrete result. This should be so as Ravana is an in such ‘sangraamas’ Ravana is noted as an outstanding a known warrior and his speed and dexterity with which he could easily display is reputed everywhere. You may taste that by yourself and as such you should ensure your own ‘atma raksha’. Having duly noted this precautionary alert, Lakshmana proceeded to Ravana. Meanwhile, Hanuman flew across and faced Ravana: devadānavagandharvā yakṣās ca saha rākṣasaiḥ, avadhyatvāt tvayā bhagnā vānarebhyas tu te bhayam/ eṣa me dakṣiṇo bāhuḥ pañcaśākhāḥ samudyataḥ, vidhamiṣyati te dehād bhūtātmānam ciroṣitam/ śrutvā hanūmato vākyam rāvaṇo bhīmavikramaḥ, samraktanayanaḥ krodhād idam vacanam abravīt/ Nishachara! You seem to be fearless in attacking deva-danava-gandharva-yaksha-rakshasaas but not Vaanara Veeras. Do note this that my right hand with the grip of my five fingers are duly raised and that your life would not be secure any further.’ As Ravana was furious at Hanuman’s threat likewise, he stood up and shouted: Vanara! We are most welcome to use all your might and try your very best give me a blow and instantly you should fall dead surely.’ rāvaṇasya vacaḥ śrutvā vāyusūnur vaco ’bravīt, prahr̥tam hi mayā pūrvam akṣam smara sutam tava/ evam ukto mahātejā rāvaṇo rākṣaseśvaraḥ, ājaghānānilasutam talenorasi vīryavān/sa talābhihataḥ tena cacāla ca muhur muhuḥ, ājaghānābhisamkrudhas talenaivāmaradviṣam/ Hanuman replied: ‘Just now, I have despatched your dear son Akshaya to yamapuri, and do remember that.’ Ravana got furious and gave a sevre blow on Hanuman’s mighty and broad chest. The outcome was that Hanuman was almost fainted but having quickly recovered, gave a return blow severely true. tatas talenābhihato vānareṇa mahātmanā, daśagrīvaḥ samādhūto yathā bhūmicale ’calaḥ/ samgrāme tam tathā dṛṣṭva rāvaṇam talatādītam, ṛṣayo vānarāḥ siddhā nedur devāḥ sahāsurāḥ/ athāsṇasya mahātejā rāvaṇo vākyam abravīt, sādhu vānaravīryeṇa ślāghaniyo ’si me ripuḥ/rāvaṇenaivam uktas tu mārutir vākyam abravīt, dhig astu mama vīryam tu yat tvaṁ jīvasi rāvaṇa/ Dashamukha Ravana was then that was truly aghast shaken up like an earthquake would wobble a mountain. As Ravana fell down instantly with thud likewise, Rishi, vaanara, Siddha, Devatas as also the Asura Lokas too appeared to have been pleased and clapped with ‘harsha dhwanis’ There after Ravana recovered and replied to Hanuman saying: ‘well done Hanuman, you have proved thar you are a competent ‘prati dwandi’!’ Then Hanuman replied: ‘Durbuddhi Nishachara Ravana! Now I should not be spared with life any more and this is my vow!’ . As Ravana did not wish to suffer the over excited insinuations and threats of Hanumam, the ferocious Ravana emboldened himself and thumped a mighty punch with his right hand on the broad chest of Hanuman who crumbled down as Hanuman was shocked too dismayed. Soon thereafter he raised his grand bow at Maha Vaanara Senapati Neela nearby who was watching the scene and made instant ‘baana parampara’ which pierced through Neeas ‘marmaavayas’. Meanwhile Veera Hanuman was recovered somewhat by Ravana’s right hand punch and stated: ‘ Neecha Nishachara! You were already engaged with your baana parampara on Senapati Neela and thus felt it was inappropriate to interfere. Even as Hanuman was citing ‘nyaayaanyaayas’ of ‘dharma yuddha’, Neela jumped up to a mountain top with blood red rage and rained maha vrikshas like ‘ashvakarna-saala-amlā’-and such mahavrikshas just uprooted and kept on hurling with unusual speed and force. Ravana then having destroyed the hurled down maha vrikshas smashed down made renewed baana varsha on Neela as the latter retaliated with continued attack of vriksha varsha which made an impact in 'Ravana dhvaja shikhira' as Agni Putra Neela made simha garjanas. abhivṛṣṭaḥ śaraugheṇa megheneva mahācalah, hrasvaṁ kṛtvā tadā rūpaṁ dhvajāgre nipapāta ha/ pāvakātmajam ālokyā dhvajāgre samavasthitam, jayvāla rāvaṇaḥ krodhāt tato nīlo nanāda ha/ dhvajāgre dhanuṣaś cāgre kirītāgre ca taṁ harim, lakṣmaṇo 'tha hanūmāmś ca dṛṣṭvā rāmaś ca vismitāḥ/ rāvaṇo 'pi mahātejāḥ kapilāghavavismitaḥ, astraṁ āhārayām āsa dīptam āgneyam adbhutam/ The infuriated persisted with his maha baana varsha as on pravata shikhiras, then instantly having assumed a miniaturized form settled on Ravana dhvaja itself. Ravana with 'maha krodha' noticed the heckling vaanara Neela, and sought to release his agneyastra which should convert Neela to 'bhasma'. tatas te cukruṣur hrṣṭā labdhalakṣyāḥ plavaṅgamāḥ, nīlāghavasambhṛāntaṁ dṛṣṭvā rāvaṇam āhave/vānarāṇām ca nādena samrabdho rāvaṇas tadā, sambhramāviṣṭaḥ dayo na kiṁ cit pratyapadyata/ āgneyenātha saṁyuktaṁ gṛhītva rāvaṇaḥ śaram, dhvajaśīrṣasthitaṁ nīlam udaikṣata nīlācaraḥ/ tato 'bravīn mahātejā rāvaṇo rākṣaseśvaraḥ, kape lāghavayukto 'si māyayā parayānaya/ As Neela was changing his mini forms Jumping and changing his positions on Ravana's shoulders, or on his dhanush, or his makuta, even Rama Lakshmana Hanuman's too were surprised at Naala's agility which was a characteristic of 'vaanara chanchalatva'! But Ravana was certainly not amused and hence the agneyastra prayoga. jīvitam khalu rakṣasva yadi śaknoṣi vānara, tāni tāny ātmarūpāṇi sṛjase tvam anekāśaḥ/ tathāpi tvām mayā muktaḥ sāyako 'straprayojitaḥ, jīvitam parirakṣantaṁ jīvitād bhramāsayiṣyati/evam uktvā mahābāhū rāvaṇo rākṣaseśvaraḥ, saṁdhāya bāṇam astreṇa camūpatim atādayat/ Ravana then addressed Neela and shouted: Vaanara! Having assumed varied body forms too soon and too many times by high degrees of 'maya pradarshana', now if you truly assume that you are a great 'maayavi', now with this baana prayoga, get readied to get a body of ash! Then with the release of the agneyastra, Neela was indeed got burnt down to ashes. so 'strayuktena bāṇena nīlo vakṣasi tāḍitaḥ, nirdahyamānaḥ sahasā nipapāta mahītale/ pitṛmāhātmya saṁyogād ātmanaś cāpi tejasā, jānubhyām apatad bhūmau na ca prāṇair vyayujyata/ Ravana's agneyastra had no doubt burnt Neela's body down to ashes thus. Yet, even as Raavana carried himself Neela Kumara's dead body ashes to nearby waiting Lakshmana with dhanush thankaaras with excitement and happiness. Meanwhile, even as Ravana was hilarious thus, Agni Deva revived his own son's life and Neela Kumara opened his ashedupbody came alive. Even being unaware of Agni Putra Neela's revival back to life, the boisterous excitement of Ravana made him to display against Lakshmana as the latter asserted thus: 'Nishachara Raja! you may better be aware that I have now arrived here facing you.' Avana replied: 'Raghuvamshi Rajakumara! Indeed this is my fortune that I am encountering you face to face. Now soon enough you are losing hopes of your life and yamaloka yatra. Lakshmana was not concerned of Ravana's poisoned laced tongue any way and said: Jaanaami veeryam tava Rakshasendra, balam prataapam cha paraakramamcha, avasthiham sharachaapapaaniraagaccha kim mogha vivastyhanena/ Lakshmana taunted Ravana thus: 'Yes yes indeed! I am fully seized of your bala parakranas, veerya prataapaas Ravana! (since you have by maayaa prakatana, you are ill famed for 'nissahaaya Sitaapaharana' anyway). That is why I am here by person to person. Of which avail our 'vyartha pralaapas' now. Then the enraged Ravana forwarded seven mantrika baaas in a row as Lakshmana pieced them all. Ravana released another arrow but Lakshmana was never disturbed but repaid with baana varsha of ardhachandra-khura-uttamna karna- bhall jaati but Ravana cut them all. Lakshmana like Deva Raja Indra's vijrayutha samana baana meant for Ravana Vadha in mind, but Ravana retorted with 'brahmaastra samana kaalaagni maha baana' on Lakshmana's very face. The impact was too severe to bear and the alarmed Lakshmana had to sit down with the stroke yet having recovered hit a massive single arrow which broke Ravana's dhanush to two pieces. On realising this, the stunned Ravana took considerable time to gain back his normalcy while his body too was with blood. Even in that condition, Ravana had to release that very Astra which Brahma Himself had bestoyed with, as a result Ravana's maha yajna. sa tām vidhūmānalasaṁnikāśām; vitrāsanīm vānaravāhinīnām, cikṣepa śaktīm tarasā jvalantīm; saumitrāye rākṣasarāṣṭranāthaḥ/tām āpatantīm bharatānujo 'strair; jaghāna bāṇaiś ca hutāgnikalpaiḥ, tathāpi sā tasya viveśa śaktir; bhujāntaram dāśarather viśālam/ śaktyā brāmyā tu saumitris tāḍitas tu stanāntare, viṣṇor acintyaṁ svaṁ bhāgam ātmānam pratyānusmarat/ That 'maha shakti' with which the entire Vanaraas were shaken with awe and tremble was thrown off at Lakshmana piercing through right into his heart. Consequently Lakshmana fell down to earth as Ravana tried to lift him up; indeed Ravana did possess such ‘baahu bala’ as wah famed as of lift up himalayas, mandaraa - chala, meru giri and even trilokas but the punch of the Brahama’s own granted ‘maha baana’! As the Brahma Shakti pierced through , it seemed that even Maha Vishnu’s own ‘amsha’ failed. At the same time, Ravana too was disbled not only to lift up Lakshmana but in the process his own hand fingers got crushed too trying to lift Lakshmana creating anxiety among the rakshasa sena too. Tatah kjruddhho Vaayusoto raavam samamabhidravat, aajaghaanorasi kjruddhho vajrakalpena mushtinaa/ Tena mushtiprahaarena raavanorakshasseshwarah jaanbubhyaamagamad bhumou chachaala cha pataatcha/ That was the critical situation when Vaayu putra Veera Hanuman ran towards Ravana gave a mighty kick with his ‘vajrakalpana mushti’ or vajra like fist with all his might to Ravana who fell down crumbled to dust. Then Ravana’s face, eyes and ears was full of ‘rakta dhaaraas’ and on the yuddha bhumi dazed and mind reeling as he was some how lifted up seated on his chariot, even as devataasura vaanaraas felt berserk with ‘harsha ninaadaas’. Then Hanuman lifted up Lakshmana with his mighty arms and reached him to Shri Rama. After a while, however as though Bhagavan Vishnu Himself blessed Lakshmana, the latter gradually recovered consciousness. But Ravana too having the ‘mushighaata’ of Hanuman as seated by his chariot stood up erect with his ‘vishaala dhanush’ on his powerful hands alerting Shri Rama.

Whether you run to Indra, or Yama, or Brahma, or Agni, or even Shankara or to dasha dishaas even, your ‘samhara’ is definite and predestined. Rakshasa Raja! you had hurt Lakshmana with Brahma Shakti without senses and now seek to run away with that false ego. Let me take my opportunity now to take my revenge too. While Hanuman was nodoubt hurt but became more ferocious like a hurt ‘mriga raaja’, Rama too was far more alarmed. He attacked Ravana ratha chakraas, horses, dhawaja, cchatra, pataaka, saarathi, ashni, shula, khadga, and finally the chariot too. athendraśatruṁ tarasā jaghāna; bāṇena vajrāśanisam nibhena, bhujāntare vyūḍhasujātarūpe; vajreṇa merum bhagavān ivendraḥ/ yo vajrapātāśanisam nipātān; na cukṣubhe nāpi cacāla rājā, sa rāmabāṇābhihato bhṛṣārtaś; cacāla cāpam ca mumoca vīraḥ/ tam vihvalantam prasamīkṣya rāmaḥ; samādade dīptam athārdhacandram, tenārkavarṇam sahasā kirītam; ciccheda rakṣo’ dhipater mahātmāḥ/ Like Indra with his vajraaudha pierced through Meru parvata too, Pabhu Rama penetrated Ravana’s broad chest even through his kavacha. Even while Ravana was not concerned of ‘vajraaghata’, he got flustered by Rama baanaas and raised his ‘arthanaadaas’ with a shivering body and fell down to dust. Then as Shri Rama selected and picked up yet another fire like ardhachandraakaara baana and did the ‘prayoga’, Dashamukha Kireetaas too were shattered, as Ravana wasa hissing like a ‘visha heena sarpa’! taṁ nirviṣāśīviṣasaṁnikāśaṁ; śāntārciṣaṁ sūryaṁ ivāprakāśaṁ, gataśrīyaṁ kṛttakirīṭakūṭaṁ; uvāca rāmo yudhi rākṣasendram/ kṛtaṁ tvayā karma mahat subhīmaṁ; hatapravīraś ca kṛtas tvayāham, tasmāt pariśrānta iti vyavasya; na tvaṁ śarair mṛtyuvaśaṁ nayāmi/ Just at that time, Suryaasta kaala appeared in the horizon and Ravana without kireeta was hazily visible. Then Rama addressed Ravana: ‘ You have so far after arrival at the battle field, you have been harraasing my ‘maha vanara pramukhas’ nearly throwing them at the thresholds of death and that was not the main cause of your shameful disgrace. As Ravana fled way following his miserable defeat by Shri Rama like a lion pouncing on an elephant or Garuda on a poisonous and hissing snake, he addressed the Royal Court and confessed as follows: sarvam tat khalu me mogham yat taptam paramam tapaḥ, yat samāno mahendreṇa mānuṣeṇāsmi nirjitaḥ/ idaṁ tad brahmaṇo ghoram vākyam mām abhyupasthitam, mānuṣebhyo vijānīhi bhayaṁ tvam iti tat tathā/ devadānavagandharvair yakṣarākṣasapannagaiḥ, avadhyatvaṁ mayā prāptam mānuṣebhyo na yācitam/ I had in the past I performed considerable tapasya yet that appears to have gone futile since I had consciously ingored the value of human beings. Brahma no doubt warned me that only ‘manushyas’ might create problems for me, and now I am perhaps eaping the consequences. Then I had requested for invincibility from Deva, Daanava, Gandharva, Yaksha, Rakshasa and Sarpas but ignored manushyas. I recall a remote incident of my life as once I attacked Ikshvaaku vamsha Raja named Anranya and killed him, and while he was about to be killed he gave me a ‘shaap’ that not so far in the future there would be my very vamsha a personality there would be hero who should destroy me, progeny, mantri senapatis, sena, horses, and followeres. I also recall now that once a maha tapasvini named as Vedapati cursed me as I tried to molest her and while jumping into flames she had now perhaps appeared as Devi Sita. Like wise when I had lifted up Kailasa parvata since Sthaanu swarupa Paramashiva was not responsive to my ‘ghora tapasya’ for him’, I had received a spate of curses from Uma, Nandeshwara, Rambha and Vaaruna Kanyaas and indeed Rishi Vaakyas would not be futile. (Indeed, the retribution for lifing kailaasa, Nandeshwara cursed Ravana vamsha vinaasa). etad evābhyupāgamyā yatnam kartum ihārthatha, rākṣasāś cāpi tiṣṭhantu caryāgopuramūrdhasu/ sa cāpratimagambhīro devadānavadarpahā, brahmaśāpābhībhūtas tu kumbhakarṇo vibodhyatām/ sa parājitam ātmānam prahastam ca niṣūditam, jñātvā rakṣobalam bhīmam ādideśa mahābalaḥ/ dvāreṣu yatnaḥ kriyatām prākārāś cādhiruhyatām, nidrāvaśasamāviṣṭaḥ kumbhakarṇo vibodhyatām/ These ‘shaapaas’ have now initiated our bad days ahead, you may all thus face to consequences with forbearance and hence stay put to safeguard the hish roads, gopura shakhiras of Lankapuri. At the same time, you ought to be brave, vigilant, and ever ready to face critical situations as might be faced. nava ṣaṭ sapta cāṣṭau ca māsān svapiti rākṣasaḥ, tam tu bodhayata kṣipram kumbhakarṇam mahābalaḥ/ sa hi saṁkhye mahābāhuḥ kakudam sarvarakṣasām, vānarān rājaputrau ca kṣipram eva vadhiṣyati/ kumbhakarṇaḥ sadā śete mūdho grāmyasukhe rataḥ, rāmeṇābhinirastasya saṁgrāmo ’smin sudāruṇe/ bhaviṣyati na me śokaḥ kumbhakarṇe vibodhite, kim kariṣyāmy aham tena śakratulyabalena hi/ Now, I am having to instruct you all to wake up my dear brother Kumbhakarna as in the condition of being fast asleep happily for seven or sometimes ten or atleast eight months. Maha aahu Kumbhakana is indeed the ‘Rakshasa Shreshtha’. His sarvottham vijaya ought to turn the tables and usher in our days of glory back. But unfotunately this stupid of a Kumbhakarna is most difficult to be awaken. And of which avail is he at moments of anxiety and even a crisis. Then a big retinue of Maha Rakshasas reached Kumbhakarna’s residence. The rakta maamsa bhakshaka rakshasaas gor readied with considerable gandha-maalyas and aneka bhakshya bhojya paaneeyas and reached the ‘maha guha’ where Kumbhakarna was snoring with ‘deergha nidra’ in a state of slumber with long drawn breathings. His nasal partitions were looking fearful as his broad shoulders were like maha vrikshas. For his ‘aahaara’

were groups live mriga-mahisha-varaahas, and huge sea fishes readied, besides huge tubs and containers of fresh blood for rapid gulps down to wet his throat. Then groups of Rakshasas applied ‘sugandha lepanas’ all over his massive physique and dhupas too and initiated ‘vaadya brinda dhvanis’ reverberating sky high. Shankha-bheri ninaadas, simha naada, taala ghoshanas, hit the sky and fell down to earth, but Maha Kaya Kumbhakarna was still unwaken. Then the Maha Rakshasha Veeras then resorted to piercing his body parts on his vakshasthala with mountain boulders, ‘musala-gaha-mudgara-mushti praharas’. As Kambhakarna’s breathing of ‘ucchvaasha-nishvaasaas’ were like ‘mahavaayu pravaahaas’ and as such the Maha Rakshasaas seeking to wake him up were tending to sweep off then earest and the farthest. vāraṇānām sahasraṁ tu śarīre ’sya pradhāvitam kumbhakarṇas tato buddhaḥ sparśam param abudhya/ sa pātyamānair giriśṛṅgavykṣair; acintayāms tām vipulām prahārām, nidrākṣayāt kṣudbhayapīḍitaś ca; vijrmbhamāṇaḥ sahasotpapāta, sa nāgabhogācalaśṛṅgakalpau; vikṣipyā bāhū giriśṛṅgasārau/ As the various efforts had failed in awakening Kumbhakarna then thousands of elephants were made to run ‘aapaada mastakaas’ or from feet to heads, then only the sleeping ‘maha rakshasa parvata’ of Kumbhakarna got somewhat ‘semi-conscious’ and opened his eye flaps. Group prahaaraas of mountains boulders and pravahas of maha vrikshaas on his hands, shoulderes, stomach, feet and so on failed to wake him up but once awaken stood up. vivṛtya vaktram vaḍavāmukhābham; niśācaro ’sau vikṛtaṁ jajrmbhe/ tasya jājrmbhamāṇasya vaktram pātālasaṁnibham, dadṛṣe meruśṛṅgāgre divākara ivoditaḥ/ vijrmbhamāṇo ’tibalaḥ pratibuddho niśācaraḥ niśvāsaś cāsya saṁjajñe parvatād iva mārutaḥ/ rūpam uttiṣṭhataś tasya kumbhakarṇasya tad babhau, tapānte sabalākasya meghasyeva vivarṣataḥ/ Then he stretched his long and strong arms and feet and his ‘vikaraala mukha’s’ yawnings created thunderous sound reverberations was his face of ‘vikaraala mukha badabaalanaagni’. tasya dīptāgnisadṛṣe vidyutsadṛṣavarcaś, dadṛṣāte mahānetre dīptāva iva mahāgrahau/ ādad bubhukṣito māmsam śoṇitam tṛṣṭo ’pibat, medaḥ kumbham ca madyam ca papau śakraripus tadā/ tatas tṛpta iti jñātvā samutpetur niśācaraḥ, śirobhiś ca praṇamyainam sarvataḥ paryavārayan/ sa sarvān sāntvayām āsa nairṛtān nairṛtarābhāḥ, bodhanād vismitaś cāpi rākṣasān idam abravīt/ His ‘vishala netra dwayas’ were like ‘prajvalitaagni’ like of ‘navagrahas’. As soon as he was awaken, Maha Rakshasa felt hungry and thirsty and contented himself with ‘maamsa-rakta raashis’ all readied. As he was contented, the Rakshasa Shreashtas were waiting in obedience, as Kumbhakarna thundered: kimartham aham āhatya bhavadbhiḥ pratibodhitaḥ, kaccit sukuśalam rājño bhayam vā neha kiṁ cana/ atha vā dhruvam anyebhyo bhayam param upasthitam, yadartham eva tvaritair bhavadbhiḥ pratibodhitaḥ/ adya rākṣasarājasya bhayam utpātyāmy aham, pātayisye mahendraṁ vā śātayisye tathānalām/ na hy alpakāraṇe sūptam bodhayiṣyati mām bhr̥ṣam, tad ākhyātārthatattvena matprabodhanakāraṇam/ Fellow Rakshasaas! Right away, I am anxious to rejoice vanara ‘mamsa bhakshana’ and ‘rakta paana’, besides that of Rama Lakshmanas too’. Then Yupaaksha with folded hands submitted to Kumbhakarna: Maha Baaho! Further that situation was like Indra was approaching Brahma Deva. He was looking like a mobile mountain was his head was like a ‘parvata shikhara’. Then the Vanara sena ran to ‘sharanaagata vatsala’ Shri Rama out of alarmed fright with ‘dikbhraanti’. Kumbhakarna was just like a true mountain with a glittering makuta as of reaching Surya Deva and the vaanaras were either running away hither and thither directionless or just got stilled falling off!

Shri Rama had instantly stood of readied with his ‘dhanur baanaas’ and sighted a mountain like Rakshasa approaching and asked Vibhishana about him as the vanara sena was truly alarmed and that he never heard of this walking Rakshasa Parvata earlier ever. Then Vishishana explained: Bhagavan Shri Rama! In any battle so far even Yama Dharma Raja and Mahendra too failed to harness this unique Maha Rakshasa. Indeed he always suppressed devata-daanava-yaksha-maha naaga-rakshasa-gandharva-vidyaadhara-kinnarsa as the attached thousands of times. Even his eyes are kike agni jwaalas if angered and when he piicks up his shula and stans firm on the battle he is of Kaala swarupa it should be difficult to even look at him let alone encounter him. His extraordinary might was owing to his ‘varadaana prapti’. Even by his very birth he was in thde habit of devouring his fedlly rakshasaas too, ler alone other beings in Brahma Srishti. Then Vajra dhaari Indra hurled his vajraayudha and he roured repetitively howled again and again and the ‘prajaavarga’ were shattered with utter dismay and helplessness. Then the balaka Kumbhakarna broke off the Iraavata Dantas were pulled out as a child’s play and hit Devendra’s chest with a prahaara. Indra’s heart was hurt with burning sensation as Devata, Brahmarshi, Danavas too were concerned. Indra and the Devatas reached Prajapati and said that unless the Baala Kumbhakarna continues prani bhakshana then the bhulolova vases of various species would start dwindling day by day. dhruvaṁ lokavināśāya paurastyenāsi nirmitaḥ, tasmāt tvam adya prabhṛti mṛtakalpaḥ śayiṣyasi, brahmaśāpābhibhūto 'tha nipapātāgrataḥ prabhoh/ tataḥ paramasambhrānto rāvaṇo vākyam abravīt, vivṛddhaḥ kāñcano vṛkṣaḥ phalakāle nikṛtyate/ na naptāraṁ svakaṁ nyāyāṁ śaptum evaṁ prajāpate, na mithyāvacanaś ca tvam svapsyaty eṣa na samśayaḥ,kālas tu kriyatām asya śayane jāgare tathā/ Then Prajapati in reply to Indra addressed Kumbhakarna as follows: Decidedly Vishrava had created you to destroy by and by; now I am giving a shaap: You should lie asleep like a dead body as long as Vidhata Brahma granted your life.’ As Prajapati declared thus, Ravana was badly perturbed and appealed to Prajapati: Mahatma! It appears that what had been created as a maha vriksha to yield a golden fruit is now being severed away and your curse too has similar result. Indeed your own blessing to create Kumbhakarna is thus being negated. Hence do very kindly indicate the timings when by dear brother be awaken or sleep off. Then Swayambhu Brahma decided that one day in every half year Kumbhakarna be awaken fully.’ Vibhishana further informed Shri Rama: ‘ Rama! This is the reason why the vanra sxena is frightened away helter skelter. Having heard this, Shri Rama then accosted Vaanara Senapati Neela: ‘ Agni Nandana! Get ready now to attack with maha vrikshas and mountain boulders on the Raja Marga of Lankapuri. Then Gavaksha,Sharbha, Hanuman, Angada, were alerted too with their vriksha parvata shikhara too.

As Kumbhakarna was approaching Ravana by raja marga, Lankapuravaasis were overjoyed and were resorting to 'pushpa varsha' all the way, even as earth was quaking on his way. Ravana welcomed the Maha Shaktimaan brother with embraces, as Kumbhakarna after initial enquiries, asked the elder brother as to what precisely was happening, and why was he alerted suddenly. Ravana replied: Maha Bali Veera! It was long time that you have been sleeping and meanwhile we are all meanwhile subjected to 'Rama bhaya'. In other words: if your onesided love affair had actually happened, then be prepared for the consequences also! You could have informed this Maha Sabha even far earlier well before extending a hand already burnt! Neeti Shastra underlines the need for prioritizing significant tasks of what to be handled foremost. The need for assessing the strength of enemies before flinging into attacks is the common sense as finding shortcomings and lapses in retrospection would be of wasteful endeavors; this is like the haste of Krouncha birds flying off in haste to the top of the Krouncha Mountain being unaware of the fact that the mountain itself would be broken down any time and then seek to hold the mountain boulders falling down to earth any way).

You have had the ‘aishvarya durabhimaana’ and ignored the ‘karana yogya neeti-aneeti karyas’. deśakālavihīnāni karmāṇi viparītavat, kriyamāṇāni duṣyanti havīmṣy aprayateṣviva/ trayāṇām pañcadhā yogaṁ karmaṇām yaḥ prapaśyati, sacivaiḥ samayaṁ kṛtvā sa sabhye vartate pathi/ yathāgamaṁ ca yo rājā samayaṁ vicikīṣati, budhyate sacivān buddhyā suhṛdaś cānupaśyati/ dharmam arthaṁ ca kāmam ca sarvān vā rakṣasām pate, bhajate puruṣaḥ kāle trīṇi dvandvāni vā punaḥ/ As one would ignore the ‘deshakaala vyavaharana’ and acts contrarily to it, then ‘samskara heena agni homa havishaanna’ leads to either ‘nisbhphalita’ or even ‘dushphalita’! A King should always seek the valued opinions of his mantri’s advices of pros and cons, as also of the consequences of ‘kshaya-vridhhi-sthaanarupaas’ and accordingly utilise the ‘Saama-Daana Bheda Danda chaturupaayaas’. Thus before initiating an issue which should be taken up at the ‘karyaaarambha’. five inputs are essential - Man power, affordability of money power, deshakaala paristithis, vipat nivarana upayaas, and karya siddhi or the certainty assurance of success. Thus a successful King truly follows the well established precepts of neeti shastra and takes a swim of cool waters instead a hasty plunge as per his own volition with the least consideration of ‘katavya-akartavya viveka vichakshana’ would invariably led to the doom. Rakshasa Raja! Neetigjna Purushas must be able to apply the purshardhas of dharma-artha-kaama-mokshas as per the situational exigencies like the combinations of dharma artha-artha dharma- kaama artha, just as praatahkala dharma-madhaahna kaala artha and raatri kaama vidhana. triṣu caiteṣu yac chreṣṭhaṁ śrutvā tan nāvabudhyate, rājā vā rājamātro vā vyartham tasya bahuśrutam/ upapradānam sāntvaṁ vā bhedaṁ kāle ca vikramam, yogaṁ ca rakṣasām śreṣṭha tāv ubhau ca nayānayaḥ/ kāle dharmārthakāmān yaḥ sammantrya sacivaiḥ saha, niṣevetātmaṁ loka na sa vyasanam āpnuyāt/ Indeed, of the three purusharthas, Dharma in any case is most desirable while in special applications the swing of balance might slightly tilt some times somewhat to artha and or kaama, but yet always on the dharma side. Rakshasa Shiromani! An ideal king must necessarily consult the mantri mandali in any case and use his own discretion apply daana-bheda-praakrama and apply the five folded criteria of Man power, affordability of money power, deshakaala paristithis, vipat nivarana upayaas, and karya siddhi, besides naya, anayaka upaayas ought not to lead to upadravasaa of this nature!. hitānubandham ālokya kāryākāryam ihātmanaḥ, rājā sahārthatattvajñaiḥ sacivaiḥ saha jīvati/ anabhijñāya śāstrārthān puruṣaḥ paśubuddhayaḥ, prāgalbhyād vaktum icchanti mantreṣv abhyantarikṛtāḥ/ aśāstraviduṣām teṣām na kāryam ahitaṁ vacaḥ, arthaśāstrānabhijñānām vipulām śriyam icchatām/ A King must realise ‘artha tatvagjna’ and ‘mantri parisheelana’ and success is then assured. But pashu samaana buddhi beyond consultations would very obviously lead to disasters. At the same time, ‘shastra jnaana shunya-artha shastra anabhigjna -ayogya mantris’ who are merely the ‘yes-men’ ministeres are bound to lead the King to disasters. tān bhartā mitrasamkāsān amitrān mantranirṇaye, vyavahāreṇa jāñīyāt sacivān upasamhitān/ capalasyeha kṛtyāni sahasānupradhāvataḥ, chidram anye prapadyante krauñcasya kham iva dvijāḥ/ Even as the king in the behavior pattern of excessive and untimely praises showering on the king could easily realise that the minister concerned is suspicion worthy and of less dependability either due to corruptive practices or hiding incompetence. Listen to me carefully. Please do not worry at all. I would soon reverse your agony to roaring and sensational triumph. Even as I am alive and kicking, your concern is my bounden duty and the difficulty now being faced should be kicked off. I am blessed with a mountainous body structure and my simha naadaas would scare off deva danavas. Having heard Kumbhakarna's yellings of victory shouts asking Ravana to initiate celebrations, Maha Rakshasa Mahodara addressed Mahakaaya Kumbhakarna: I am sorry to state that your body stature would not become of your mental sharpness which is of 'nimna shreni'. You have certainly used the expressions of purushardhaas of dharma-artha-kama-mokshas which our King too would be too conversant with. He is well aware of the expression of 'desha kaala paristhis' and of the capacity to adapt himself too while you being under long spells of slumber and sleep not have practical knowledge. karma caiva hi sarveṣāṃ kāraṇānāṃ prayojanam, śreyah pāpīyasāṃ cātra phalaṃ bhavati karmaṇām/ niḥśreyasa phalāṃ eva dharmārthāṃ itarāṃ api, adharmānarthayoḥ prāptiḥ phalaṃ ca pratyavāyikam/ aihalaupikapārātryaṃ karma pumbhir niṣevyate, karmāṇy api tu kalpyāni labhate kāmam āsthitaḥ/ The saadhana bhutas of comfortable living are indeed the practice of trivargas of dharma-artha-kaamas and accordingly the ‘shubhaashubha’ consequences. ‘Nishkaama bhava karmaachaana’ of japa-dhyana-yagjna are distinct from ‘kamya bhaavaacharana’. The jeevaas tend to practise dharmaadharma karyas and the resultant fruits are reaped either during one;s ongoing life itself or as carry forwards as ‘sanchita or praarabhdha’. tatra kṣiptam idaṃ rājñā hṛdi kāryaṃ mataṃ ca naḥ, śātrau hi sāhasaṃ yat syāt kim ivātrāpanīyate/ ekasyaivābhiyāne tu hetur yaḥ prakṛtas tvayā, tatrāpy anupapannaṃ te vakṣyāmi yad asādhu ca/ Now Ravana Raja’s ‘kaamarupi purushardha sevana’ is justified or not is the issue to be pondered over. May be that action could be due to the momentary ‘mano chanchalata’ that any praani in Brahma Shrishti would be prone to; no doubt that ‘mano chanchalata’ might not be justified by ‘adarsha vaadis’. But in practical life, despite the dharma paripaalana, even Maha Munis do have moments of ‘stree vaancha’. Hence King Ranava in a way would not be condemn-worthy downright. As King Ravana had decided once for all and the mantris too approved albeit with a few dissent voices; in which manner could Kumbhakarna decide unilaterally that what the king had done was the meanest downright? Kumbhakarna! Why do you not call for Sita and have her as she ought to obey you and surrender! As Mahodara gave his undesirable comments on his excited enthusiasm to encounter against Rama and followers, Kumbhakarna asserted himself and addressed King Ravana: ‘Raja! Now I would proceed against Rama and his vaanara sena and relieve you of your anxiety by viewing my ‘yuddha sthala paraakrama’. Then having asserted thus, Kumbhakarna addressed Mahodara thus: What all had blabbered to the King with stupidly, arrogance and one-uppish mischievousness, could the King himself be pleased with ! Having proved yourself of your timidity to face an encounter with herioc opposition, you had displayed your ‘yes, no’ kind of attitude and sought to apply brakes in my ‘vijaya yatra’. Now the King is bereft of active assistance and the treasury is getting emptied fast, while raksha veeraas are getting scarcer by the days while one wonders that personalities like you are ‘shatrus or mitras’!’ Then Ravana intervened and said: ‘ Brother Kumbhakarna! How indeed could ever be compared with you of my ‘atmeeyata’! Now, kindly proceed to the battle ground and return with sensational victory. Do proceed like Yamaraja with shula and like Suryasamaana tejas and get rid of both the Raja Kumaras and the Vaanara Peeda! Surely the Vaanaras with one look by them of your very form and looks of ferocity should fall off with ‘dikbhranti’ or runaway helter skelter with scare.’ Kumbhakarna was thrilled at what Ravana asserted and stepped off Lankapuri while asserting that there not be a Rakshasa Sena to be followed as he would proceed as such with a shula by his huge arms. His ‘deha kaanti’ was then like of Indra himself with vajraayudha, heavily garlanded. Ravana then asked the younger brother to allow select rakshasa veeraas as body guards too as circled around with their armoury. Then a ‘loha kavacha’ across his gigantic chest was shielded. Then Ravana embraced the brother with affection as Kumbhakarna bent his head down with admirable loyalty. As shankhaaraavaas and dundubhi naadaas were resounding, Rakshasa army followed from a distance as the foot soldiers were carrying poisonous snakes, besides armoured and trained men by camels, donkeys, lions, elephants, and even wild birds. Then Maha Kaaya Kumbhakarna addressed Rakshasa sena as follows: ‘adya vānaramukhyānām tāni yūthāni bhāgaśaḥ, nirdahiṣyāmi saṁkruddhaḥ śalabhān iva pāvakaḥ/ nāparādhyanti me kāmāni vānarā vanacāriṇaḥ, jātir asmadvidhānām sā purodyānavibhūṣaṇam/ purarodhasya mūlaṁ tu rāghavaḥ sahalakṣmaṇaḥ, hate tasmin hataṁ sarvaṁ taṁ vadhiṣyāmi samyuge/ Rakshasaas! How ever I feel sorry for devouring the hapless vanya vaanaras jumping in fruit gardens in the process. Actually the root causes for this disaster in Lankapuri are not these hapless vaanaraas, but Lakshmanasahita Shri Rama. In my offensive in this maha yuddha, I ought to smash them down as the vaanaras are the incidental casualties.’ Having addressed the Rakshasaas in this manner, Kumbhakarna proceeded with his ‘mahaa rana yatra’ with ‘maha garjanas’. tasya niṣpatatas tūrṇaṁ kumbhakarṇasya dhīmataḥ, babhūvur ghorarūpāṇi nimittāni samantataḥ/ ulkāśaniyutā meghā vineduś ca sudāruṇāḥ, sasāgaravanā caiva vasudhā samakampata/ ghorarūpāḥ śivā neduḥ sajvālakavalair mukhaiḥ, maṇḍalāny apasavyāni babandhuś ca vihaṁgamāḥ/ Even as the procession moved off and got momentum, crowds of ‘ulkaayukta megha amudaaya’ or intense dark cloud clusters with meteors appeared on the sky with lightnings followed severe earth quakes, and ‘samudra bhibhatsa’. As soon as Kumbhakarna left the portals of Lankapuri, Vaanara samuha was frightened to the core and as the mountain like Maha Rakshasi had even lodt their consciousness. As the Vanaras were aghast, Vaanara Jyeshtha Angada addressed Nala, Neela, Gavaksha, Kumudaadi Vanara Shereshtas: Vaanara Veeraas! You are all originated from excellent origin and upbringing but behaving like ordinary monkeys! If this were to be so you might as well get back to kishkinda at once ad try to save your lives. You should realise that these so called Maha Rakshasaas do look frightening and massive but without the grit and power of endurance as they have ‘mayaa swarupas’without the inner strength. Hence, be brave and get ready to fece the situation with robust and clenched fist and might. We the true vanara shreshtas with uprooted

maha vrikshas on shoulders and forceful flings or in the art of ‘dwandwa yuddha’ are simply amazing and are capable of mindless totally bereft of mental acumen, perseverance and resolve. As per the timely exhortation of Angada, the rest of the Vaanara Veeraas alerted their own vaanar soldiers pulled up maha vrikshas and mountain boulders and encountered with renewed resolve the mountain shaped Kumbhakarna. te nivṛtya tu saṁkruddhāḥ kumbhakarnaṁ vanaukasaḥ, nijaghnūḥ paramakruddhāḥ samadā iva kuñjarāḥ, prāṁsubhir giriśṛṅgaiś ca śilābhiś ca mahābalāḥ/ pādapaiḥ puṣpitāgraiś ca hanyamāno na kampate, tasya gātreṣu patitā bhidyante śataśaḥ śilāḥ, pādapāḥ puṣpitāgrāś ca bhagnāḥ petur mahītale/ As the Vanara Shershtas attacked Kumbhakarna was hardly affected and made further simha garjanas. His chest, thighs, and firm footings were least affected by the incessant rains of maha vrikshas and boulders proved ineffective as they rolled down to earth. Instead, he got further and further infuriated vengefully and kept on lifting and devouring vanaras as a feastful ‘swaad bhojana’ often gulping their blood. so ‘pi saṁkruddho vānarāṇām mahaujasām, mamantha paramāyatto vanāny agnir ivotthitah/ lohītārdrās tu bahavaḥ śerate vānararṣabhāḥ, nirastāḥ patitā bhūmau tāmrāpuṣpā iva drumāḥ/ laṅghayantaḥ pradhāvanto vānarā nāvalokayan, ke cit samudre patitāḥ ke cid gaganam āśritāḥ/ vadyamānās tu te vīrā rākṣasena balīyasā, sāgarāṁ yena te tīrṇāḥ pathā tenaiva dudruvuḥ/ The entire scene at that time was like ‘maha daavaanala’ was spreading the mahaaranya to ashes. Numberless Vaanaras were struggling with death as crushed down to earth as their rakta naadis were burst off drenching their blood streams. The surviving vaanaraas scaled the heaps of ‘parvata seshas’ and ran here and there for atma rakshana with scare and anxiety. Some ran to the sea shore either to drown in or fly off up the sky. As the Maha Raksasa was playfully mischievously some spill over vanaras had even run towards Lankapuri too and running back again. te sthālāni tathā nimnam viṣaṇṇavadanā bhayāt, ṛkṣā ṛkṣāṇ samārūḍhāḥ ke cit parvatam āśritāḥ/ mamajjur arṇave ke cid guhāḥ ke cit samāśritāḥ, niṣeduh plavagāḥ ke cit ke cin naivāvatasthire/ tān samikṣyāṅgado bhaṅgān vānarān idam abravīt, avatiṣṭhata yudhyāmo nivartadhvam plavaṅgamāḥ/ As the frightened vaanaras thus running for self defence were looking pale and pastel looking heads down running to tree tops and mountain heights. The frightening scene at that time was of countless vanara bhallukas swimming in the sea, some tottering on parvata shikharaas, and some like living corpses. Then Angada screamed at the running away vaanaras for ‘atma rakshana’ and shouted: wait wait vanaras! United we will win and divided we die! Your families would put you to shame and the house wives keep insulting life long: bhīrupravādāḥ śrūyante yas tu jīvati dhikṛtaḥ, mārgaḥ satpuruṣair juṣṭaḥ sevyatām tyajyatām bhayam/ śayāmahe vā nihataḥ prthivyām alpajīvitaḥ, duṣprāpaṁ brahmalokaṁ vā prāpnūmo yudhi sūditāḥ, samprāpnuyāmaḥ kīrtim vā nihatya śatrum āhave/ Those timid beings even of excellent family background are a dead loss on earth and try to follow the path of ‘sadpurushas’ of everlasting fame to the family. Timidity is worse than atmaarpana for the cause of vindication of dharma and nyaaya. Vaanaraas! When you fall down to earth, we should never be disgraced. Even as an ‘alpajeevi’ when fallen succumbed to death on a battle ground is directed to brahma loka for lasting happiness. Yet ‘yuddha paraanmukhas’ are distinctly denied access to either fame here or there but directed to naraka lokaas merely. etāvad uktvā vacanaṁ sarve te bhejire diśaḥ bhūmaḥ bhīmākṣam āyāntaḥ dṛṣtvā vānarayūthapāḥ/ dravamāṇās tu te vīrā aṅgadena valīmukhāḥ, sāntvaiś ca bahumānaiś ca tataḥ sarve nivartitāḥ/ ṛṣabhaśarabhamāindadhūmranīlāḥ; kumuda suṣeṇa gavākṣarambhatārā, dvividapanasavāyuputramukhyās; tvaritatarābhimukhaṁ raṇaṁ prayātāḥ/ As Vaanara Yuva Raja addressed the vaanara yoddhas who dispersed out of Kumbakarna’s fright and rallied them around him once again and waited for the instructions of Vanara King Sugriva. Then Vaanara Shresthas of superior ranking like Rishabha, Sharabha, Mainda, Dhumra, Neela, Kumuda, Sushena, Gavaaksha Rambha, Taara, Dwivida, Panasa, and Hanuman moved forward to face Maha Rakshasa Kumbhakarna.

As exhorted by Angada's clarion call of do or die, Maha Vanara Sena returned after their flight of Kumbhakarna's mountainous figure and their determination and attacked the Rakshasa with their maha vrikshas and mountain rocks. Even as they attacked, there were some eight thousand and seven

like agni jwaalaas and having made a maha garjana as if he was chasing vaanara veeraas earlier and sought to attack Rama. Shri Rama banaas were attacked with ‘mantrapurva’ peacock feathers pierced through Kumbhakarna’s chest and even holding his powerful mace in his hands fell down to dust. sa bānair atividdhāṅgaḥ kṣatajena samukṣitaḥ, rudhiram parisusrāva giriḥ prasravaṇān iva/ sa tīvrena ca kopena rudhireṇa ca mūrchitaḥ, vānarān rākṣasān ṛkṣān khādan viparidhāvati/ tasmin kāle sa dharmātmā lakṣmaṇo rāmam abravīt, kumbhakarṇavadhe yukto yogān parimṛśan bahūn/ naivāyam vānarān rājan na vijānāti rākṣasān, mattaḥ śoṇitagandhena svān parāṁś caiva khādati/ With Rama baana praharaas Kumbhakarna’s body parts were cracked up and flows of his blood emerged out instantly. Then having got up he ran hither and thither amuck with rage and chasing vaanara bhallukas and eating them away too. That was time when Lakshmana addressed Shri Rama expressed his views as to what could be the best and ideal pattern of killing Kumbhakarna. Maha Raja Shri Rama! This Maha Rakshasa appears to be fast losing his memory power and is unable to distinguish as to who are vaanaraas or rakshasaas and is killing and eating them away simultaneously. sādhv enam adhirohantu sarvato vānaraṣabhaḥ, yūthapās ca yathāmukhyās tiṣṭhantv asya samantataḥ/ apy ayam durmatih kāle gurubhāraprapīḍitaḥ, prapatan rākṣaso bhūmau nānyān hanyāt plavaṅgamān/ tasya tadvacanam śrutvā rājaputrasya dhīmataḥ, te samāruruhur hṛṣṭāḥ kumbhakarṇam plavaṅgamāḥ/ kumbhakarṇas tu samkrudhaḥ samārūḍhaḥ plavaṅgamaiḥ, vyadhūnayat tān vegena duṣṭahastīva hastipān/ Meanwhile several shreshtha vaanara veeraas were attacking him and were even seated on his shoulders and as such could Kumbhakarna then bear it! As Lakshmana was making interesting remarks on then the Maha Rakshasa, the vaanara veeraa were delighted and immensely relieved away with relief. But, suddenly Kumbhakarna broke into rage, shook of his body as vaanaras clinging to his body fell down. tān dṛṣṭvā nirdhūtān rāmo ruṣṭo ’yam iti rākṣasaḥ, samutpapāta vegena dhanur uttamam ādade/ sa cāpam ādāya bhujaṅgakalpaḥ, dṛḍhajyam ugraṁ tapanīyacitram, harīn samāśvāsya samutpapāta; rāmo nibaddhottamatūṇabāṇaḥ/ sa vānaragaṇais tais tu vṛtaḥ paramadurjayaḥ, lakṣmaṇānucaro rāmaḥ sampratathe mahābalaḥ/ As the Maharakshasa did so, Shri Rama understood that Kumbhakarna was now ready to attack again and lifted his ‘dhanush baanaas’ readied. The Rakshasa gave such a nasty and ferocious look as if he were to burn him down to ashes. Then witnessing the on going development, the vanara sena took to clapping and harsha nadaas to encourage Shri Rama. The durjaya vaanara samuha headed by Lakshmana followed him. sa dadarśa mahātmānam kirīṭinam ariṇḍamam, śoṇitāplutasarvāṅgam kumbhakarṇam mahābalaḥ/ sarvān samabhidhāvantaṁ yathāruṣṭam diśā gajam, mārgamāṇam harīn krudhaṁ rākṣasaiḥ parivāritam/ vindhyamandarasaṁkāśam kāñcanāṅgadabhūṣaṇam, sravantaṁ rudhiram vaktrād varṣamegham ivotthitam/ Kumbhakarna then wearing his glittering kireeta was then getting ready to attack Shri Rama as he was looking for vanaras nearby angrily. Even as his damaged physical parts were dripping with blood streams, the Rakshasa was looking like Vindhya Mandharaachalaas and was ornamented with glittering bhuja keerti ornaments as though ‘varsha kaala megha jala varshas’ with lightnings would. jihvayā parilihyantaṁ śoṇitam śoṇitokṣitam, mṛdnantaṁ vānarānīkam kālāntakayamopamam/ taṁ dṛṣṭvā rākṣasaśreṣṭhaṁ pradīptānalavarcasam, visphārayām āsa tadā kārmukam puruṣarṣabhaḥ/ sa tasya cāpanirghoṣāt kupito nairṣṭarṣabhaḥ, amṛṣyamāṇas taṁ ghoṣam abhidudrāva rāghavam/ As Kumbhakarna’s tongue was emitting rakta dhaaraas, his cheeks were swollen like pralaya kaala yamaraja was ever seeking to hunt vaanaras. Then Shri Rama too like ‘prajjvalita agni’ sounded his ‘dhanush thankaara’ looking only at the Maha Rakshasa even while ran after Raghunadha.

[Additional Stanzas of Valmiki Ramayana in this very context appeared elsewhere about Kumbhakarna-Vibhishana samvaada and the essence as follows:

With a view to witness the Kumbhakarna’s disastrous end by Shri Rama, the Maha Rakshasa sighted his younger brother Vibhishana and conversed as follows: ‘Vatsa! You have discarded the elder brother Ravana and approached Shri Rama and aspire for the kingship of Lanka Samrajya!’ Vibhishana replied: ‘Brother, you too are from the same family of Rakshasaas; but my leanings to Dharma Nyaayas are apparently different. Despite my repeated prostrations to return to ‘sanmaarga’, Ravana did not relent to do so and hence sought for Shri Rama ‘sharana’ and hence in the other side of the fence!’ Then there were tears rolling Kumbhakarna’s cheeks.]

Further stanzas continued: tatas tu vātoddhatameghakalpaṃ; bhujaṃgarājottamabhogabāhum, tam āpatantaṃ dharaṇīdharābham; uvāca rāmo yudhi kumbhakarṇam/ āgaccha rakṣo’ dhipamā viśādam; avasthito ’haṃ pragrhītacāpaḥ, avehi mām śakrasapatna rāmam; ayaṃ muhūrtād bhavitā vicetāḥ/ rāmo ’yam iti vijñāya jahāsa vikṛtasvanam, pātayann iva sarveṣāṃ hṛdayāni vanauka./ prahasya vikṛtaṃ bhīmaṃ sa megha -svanitopamam, kumbhakarṇo mahātejā rāghavaṃ vākyam abravīt/ Subsequently, Kumbhakarna’s shoulders were broad like Vaasuki maha sarpa of Deva Danava Samudra Mathana fame and aiming at them Bhagavan Shri Rama like pavana prerita meghas seek to attack parvata shikhira like Kumbhakarna addressed Kumbhakarna as follows: ‘Rakshasa Raja! Come now; don’t you worry, I am ready with my dhanush baanaas. Do think deeply, I am here for Rakshasa Vamsha Vinaashana. Now within just a few minutes later should occur your senselessness’. In response, Kumbhakarna made a megha garjana and screamed in high pitch: RAMO ITI! ‘This is Rama’ while the vaanaraas were tuly scared running rattled. Then Kumbhakarna yelled at Rama: nāhaṃ virādho vijñeyo na kabandhaḥ kharo na ca, na vālī na ca mārīcaḥ kumbhakarṇo ’haṃ āgataḥ/ paśya me mudgaraṃ ghoram sarvakālāyasaṃ mahat, anena nirjitā devā dānavāś ca mayā purā/ vikarṇanāsa iti mām nāvajñātum tvam arhasi, svalpāpi hi na me pīḍā karṇanāśvināśanāt/ darśayekṣvākuśārdūla vīryaṃ gātreṣu me laghu, tatas tvām bhakṣayiṣyāmi dṛṣṭapauruṣavikramam/ Rama! Do not underestimate me as Viraatha, or Kabandha or Khara; not Maarichi or Vaali; remember that you are challenging Kumbhakarna! Look at my bhayankara-vishaala-mudgara! This was made of all the ‘lohas’ burnt into one wholesome. This was what was utilised by me to humble Deva Danavas in a series of encounters. No doubt my nose and ears were severed and that need not be considered as your great victory and the absence of there body parts need not be your great victory. Raghu nandana! It was those very similar arrows with which Saala Vriksha Range as pointed by Sugriva to test Rama’s ability as also of maha balik Vaali vatha was done way back had failed to harm Kumbhakarna! Indeed Deva Raja Indra Shatru Kumbhakarna was receiving baana paramara but kept on revolving his maha mudgara severely. tatas tu rakṣaḥ kṣatajānuliṭtaṃ; vitrāsanam devamahācamūnām, vyāvidhya taṃ mudgaraṃ ugravegam; vidrāvayām āsa camūm harīṇām/ vāyavyam ādāya tato varāstraṃ; rāmaḥ pracikṣepa niśācarāya, samudgaraṃ tena jahāra bāhum; sa kṛttabāhus tumulaṃ nanāda/ sa tasya bāhur giriśṛṅgakalpaḥ; samudgaro rāghavabāṇakṛttaḥ, papāta tasmin harirājasainye; jaghāna tām vānaravāhinīm ca/ te vānarā bhagnahatāvaśeṣāḥ; paryantam āśritya tadā viśannāḥ, pravepitāṅgā dadṛśuḥ sughoram; narendrarakṣo’ dhipasamnipātam/ With such alarming speed of the ‘mudgara praghata’ countless vanara soldiers too were either killed or severed of their body parts. On noticing the ineffectiveness of the erstwhile baana varasha, Rama utilised ‘vayavyastra’ by which Kumbhakarna’s right hand and shouder fell as severed, as the Rakshasa raised bhayanaka ‘cheetkaara’. This right hand that fell down looked as if maha parvaata shikhara along with the mudgara too secerely damaging the vaanara sena around as many of them were crushed to death, while those vanaras who were able to witness the fall of the rakshasa’s severed hand were saved of their lives. sa kumbhakarṇo ’stranikṛttabāhur; mahān nikṛttāgra ivācalendraḥ, utpātayām āsa kareṇa vṛkṣam; tato ’bhidudrāva raṇe narendram/ taṃ tasya bāhum saha sālavrṛkṣam; samudyatam pannagabhogakalpam, aindrāstrayuktena jahāra rāmo; bāṇena jāmbūnadaciritena/ sa kumbhakarṇasya bhujo nikṛttaḥ; papāta bhūmau girisamnikāśaḥ, viveṣtamāno nijaghāna vṛkṣāṇ; sailāṇ śilāvānararākṣasāmś ca/ taṃ chinna bāhum samavekṣya rāmaḥ; samāpatantaṃ sahasā nadantaṃ, dvāv ardha candrau niṣitau pragrhya; ciccheda pādaḥ yudhi rākṣasasya/ As the ‘vayavastra prayoga’ by Shri Rama fell down, Kumbhakarna still made a desperate attempt against Rama with his left handed pull out of a maha vriksha, but alas, Shri Rama having anticipated the Rakshasa's desperate move, performed the 'abhimantra' of Aindravaastra and Kumbharana's left hand too fell down with the maha vrisha too therewith. Forthwith, the Vaanaraas and Rakshasaas surrounding Kumbhakarna ran away to save their bodies and souls. As both the hands were severed the artanadaas of both vanarasa and rakshasas who were crushed, the remnant Rakshasaas had either run away or started a killing spree of vanaras. nikṛttabāhur vinikṛttapādo; vidārya vaktram vaḍavāmukhābham, dudrāva rāmaṁ sahasābhigarjan; rāhur yathā candram ivāntarikṣe/ apūrayat tasya mukhaṁ śitāgrai; rāmaḥ śarair hemapinaddhapuṅkhaiḥ, sa pūrṇavaktro na śasāka vaktum; cukūja kṛcchreṇa mumoha cāpi/ athādade sūryamarīcikalpam; sa brahmadaṇḍāntakakālakalpam, ariṣṭam aindraṁ niṣitaṁ supuṅkham; rāmaḥ śaraṁ mārutatulyavegam/ As both the hands and feet were severed by the Rama banaas, Maha Rakshasa Kumbhakarna expanded his badabaagni samaana vikaraala mukha like Rahu devoured Chandra Deva at the time of the Lunar Eclipse and managed to jump off attacking Shri Rama with helpless desperation. But Shri Rama pumped in his 'baana pravaha' right into the wide opened 'maha mukha' as the 'grand finale' while the totally helpless Kumbhakarna shrieked a 'mahaardanaada' and fainted. taṁ vajrajāmbūnadacārupuṅkham; pradīptasūryajvalanaprakāśam, mahendravajrāsanitulyavegam; rāmaḥ pracikṣepa niṣācarāya/ sa sāyako rāghavabāhucodito; diśaḥ svabhāśa daśa saṁprakāśayan, vidhūmavaiśvānaradīptadarśano; jagāma śakrāsanitulyavikramah/ sa tan mahāparvatakūṭasaṁnibham; vivṛttadamṣṭraṁ calacārukuṇḍalam, cakarta rakṣo'dhipateḥ śiras tadā; yathaiva vṛtrasya purā puraṁdaraḥ/ Then Sri Rama released a Kaala samaana bhayankara Vaayu-Indra vajraastra. The resplendency of this combination most potent astras was such as 'dasa dishas' were filled up smokeless fire balls most difficult to glance even by Devas. As in the days of yore Devaraja Indra attacked Vritraasura, Rama Baana impacted Kumbhakarna's 'parvata shikhara samana mastaka' was shattered and crashed down with a thud.

[Repeat Vishleshana on Indra's killing Vritraasura from Essence of Valmiki Kishkindha Ramayana:

Prajapati Visvakarma, the famed Architect of Devas, had a son named Trisira or the three headed Brahmana boy who used to practise ascetism with one head, drink wine with another and look around in all directions with the third. Being an ardent student of Vedas, he was always engaged in severe Tapasya, especially 'Panchagni Sadhana' hanging upside down a tree branch exposed to Summer Sun, winter cold and heavy rainy season without food conquering worldly desires. Being highly suspicious of the intentions of Trisira who might pose problem his own throne, Indra despatched Apsarasas to disturb Trisira's rigorous meditation but to no avail. Indra thus killed him even when he was in meditation, even as he knew that killing a pious Brahmana in meditation was the highest possible sin. Furious with Indra's dreadful deed, Visvakarma performed an inexorable Sacrifice by 'Abhichara' process (taking revenge) reciting Atharva Veda Mantras, created a mountain like and ferocious boy with the sole objective of killing Indra. The huge boy was named Vritra or who could save his father as Vrinjina. Visvakarma equipped him with all kinds of war tactics and divine armoury including a swift and sturdy Chariot, a 'Sudarshan' like Disc, and a 'Trisula' like spear. As Vritra grew, Indra was getting nervous and approached Deva Guru to prevent any risk from the Demon. Brihaspati warned Indra that he should better be prepared for a Big Battle as the forebodings were not conducive. He advised that he along with Devas might request Dadhichi Maha Muni to spare his backbone which meant the Muni's sacrificing his life to serve a deva karya; Dadhichi obliged and Devata's architect Vishvakarma made a thunderbolt like 'vajraayudha' with the help of which Vritrasura was killed]

Further Stanzas continued: tad rāmabāṇābhīhataṁ papāta; rakṣaḥśiraḥ parvatasāṁnikāśam, babhaṅja caryāgrhagopurāṇi; prākāram uccam tam apātayac ca/ tac cātikāyam himavatprakāśam; rakṣas tadā toyanidhau papāta, grāhān mahāmīnacayān bhujaṁgamān; mamarda bhūmim ca tathā viveśa/ tasmir hate brāhmaṇadevaśatrau; mahābale saṁyati kumbhakarṇe, cacāla bhūr bhūmidharāś ca sarve; harṣāc ca devās tumulaṁ praṇeduḥ/ Then the Maha Rakshasa Kumbhakarna's parvataakaara mastaka rolled off right into Lankapuri, its streets, houses, gates, praakaaraas and finally rested on the ground. His severed himalaya mountain like body too rolled off right into the Maha Samudra as foof festival for maha matsyas, crocodiles, maha sarpas. As Maha Bali Kumbhakarna the brahmana-deva gana mahashatru died, there were earth tremors, parvatas were shaken. tatas tu devarṣimahaṛṣipannagāḥ; surāś ca bhūtāni suparnaguhyakāḥ, sayakṣagandharvagaṇā nabhogatāḥ; praharṣitā rāma parākramaṇa/ praharṣam īyur bahavas tu vānarāḥ; prabuddhapadmapratimair ivānanaiḥ, apūjayan rāghavam iṣṭabhāginam; hate ripau bhīmabale durāsade/ Then there was a celestail vision of sky with the applauses of Devashi, Maharshi, Maha Sarpa, Devata, Bhutagana, Garuda, Guhyaka, Yaksha, Gandarvaganas looked at Rama with blessings. Bhayaanaka balashaali shatru's durmarana gave such immense relief and paramaananda to the vaanara sena whose 'ananda bashpaas' rolled down their rosy cheeks with unending gratitude to the Yuga Purusha Shri Rama.

Sarga Sixty Eight

On hearing the unbelievable and tragic end of Veera Kumbhakarna, Ravana was stunned and as his sons and their cousins broke down; he realised the retributive impact of his criminal deeds but now too late!

Rakshasas who returned from the battle grounds approached King Ravana'sasura and gave a detailed picture of the tragic conclusion of Kumbhakarna's glory. Maha Raja! In the bhayankara sangrama, Kaala samaana maha parakrami Kumbhakarna resorted to vaanara bhakshana but finally collapsed by 'Rama baana parampara'. For a couple of hours Kumbhakarna attacked Vaanara Veeraas but eventually Rama slashed off half of his body and his head separately. Ravana heard the details likewise and was drowned deep in the shoka samudra. So were the Ravana Putras named Devantaka, Narantaka, Trishira and Atikaya besides the cousin brothers Mahodara and Maha kaaya. They had collectively cried shouting hoarse: katham evaṁvidho vīro devadānavadarpahā, kālāgnipratimo hy adya rāghaveṇa raṇe hataḥ/ yasya te vajranispeṣo na kuryād vyasanam sadā, sa katham rāmabāṇāntaḥ prasupto 'si mahītale/ Then Ravana broke out and cried! How indeed the Maha Rakshasa Veera Kumbhakarna who suppressed Deva Danavas like kaalaagni had now got slain by Manava Shri Rama unbelievably now! And how indeed being a 'chiranjeevi' being a vajra kaaya is lying as 'nirjeevi'lyong on bare earth ! Surely now, Deva Rishis must be celebrating his deadly fall and surely again the 'harshollaasa' vaanaras must be shouting joyfully at Lankapuri dwaaraas! rājyena nāsti me kāryam kiṁ kariṣyāmi sītayā, kumbhakarnaṇavihīnasya jīvite nāsti me ratiḥ/ yady ahaṁ bhrātṛhantāraṁ na hanmi yudhi rāghavam, nanu me maraṇam śreyo na cedam vyarthajīvitam/ adyaiva taṁ gamiṣyāmi deśam yatrānujo mama, na hi bhrātṛn samutsṛjya kṣaṇam jīvitum utsahe/ Of which avail is this Maha Samraja; of which use even if Sita surrenders to me now without the dearest brother Kumbhakarna! Now if in this battle instead of Rama's killing by brother, he could have killed me instead! I should now go to the same place where by dear brother has gone to as I would not be alive at this place any further. devā hi mām hasiṣyanti dṛṣtvā pūrvāpakāriṇam, katham indram jayiṣyāmi kumbhakarnaṇahate tvayi/ tad idam mām anuprāptam vibhīṣaṇavacaḥ śubham, yad ajñānān mayā tasya na grhītaṁ mahātmanaḥ/ vibhīṣaṇavaco yāvat kumbhakarnaṇaprahastayoḥ, vināśo 'yam samutpanno mām vrīdayati dāruṇaḥ/ tasyāyam karmaṇaḥ prāto vipāko mama śokadaḥ, yan mayā dhārmikaḥ śrīmān sa nirasto vibhīṣaṇaḥ/ In the past I did torment Devas and now they would heckle at me. Ha Kumbhakarna! As you have since left me, how could indeed face Indra in a battle. I had never heeded the helpful 'hita bodha' of Mahatma Vibhishana and now facing this disaster now! Now I am ashamed of my arrogance and let Vibhishana go away to the protection of Rama and now the 'shoka parimana' after placing my hands in flames!' Thus Maha Ravana kept on crying too late but like an onslaught of flood!

As Ravana felt the never dreamt of Kumbhakarna's fall, Trishira cooled down his anguish while Ravana Putras and cousin kumaras readied yet Narakantaka too resisted so much as Angada removed him dead.

As Ravana was drowned in regretful sorrow thus, then Trishira addressed the Rakshasa King: Raja! you as our dear paternal uncle and ought not to breakdown with mourning in this manner. Your fame to have conquered trilokas is well known and as such this grief would not behove of you. You were bestowed by Brahma Himself with Shakti, Kacvacha, Dhanus and Baanas and a Ratha with thousand donkeys with megka garjanas. You were well trained in astra-shastras are capable of performing Shrirama Danda. Even so, Maha Raja! you please may consent my jumping into the fray myself and like Guruda would attack 'maha naagas' hissing right now, I should make Rama to sleep for ever. As Shambaraasura was killed by Indra and Vishnu annihilated Narakaasura, I should be able to send to his final destination. (Explanatory notes on Narakasira nama would be: Viprachiti naamaka daanava was born to Simhika the sons like Vaataapi, Namuchi, Ilvala, Sumara, Andhaka, Naraka and Kaala naathga. Bhagavan Shri Kroshma of dwaapara yuga killed bhumi putra Narakaasura but the Narakusura is different.)

[Vishleshana on a) Shambarasura and Indra and b) Narakasura and Vishnu:

a) Indra was stated to have killed Shambarashra in Trita Yuga's Ramayana and Dwapara Yuga's Indraavataara's Pradyumna the son of Shri Krishna and Devi Rukmini; the latter is as given follows: Pradyumna was born to Rukmini and Krishna and the son looked exactly like Krishna. When he was hardly ten days old, Demon Sambara kidnapped the child not knowing that he was the son of Krishna threw him in the Sea as a huge fish ate him but the child was safe in its belly. A fisherman caught hold of the big fish and presented it to the King Sambara who in turn gave it to Mayavati the head cook of the King's kitchen who cut the fish to find an attractive baby inside. At that very juncture, Brahmarshi Narada appeared in the kitchen and revealed the Story to Mayavati of Lord Rudra turning 'Manmadha' (Cupid) into ashes when he and Rati (Cupid's wife) aimed Floral Arrows. Lord Rudra gave boons that in their next birth, Cupid would be born as Lord Krishna's son Pradyumna and Mayavati as Rati. As Pradyumna grew as a youngman, Mayavati desired to marry him despite wide difference of age. Pradyumna was popularly known as 'Vyuha' as the Lord of Intelligence, along with three of His other names viz Vasudeva (Lord of Consciousness); Sankarshana (Lord of Individuality) and Aniruddha (Lord of Intelligence). Eventually Pradyumna killed Sambara, married Mayavati and stayed with Rukmini and Krishna at Dwaraka.

b) Narakasura (Bhaumika):

The end of notorious Bhaumika, the son of Bhumi (Demi-Goddess of Earth), is celebrated till date on the moon fall day preceding Kartika Month of every year as 'Deepavali' (The Festival of Lights). Krishna, accompanied by Satyabhama flew by Garuda to 'Pragjyotisha', Capital City of Bhaumasura [now in Assam], surrounded by mountains and ramparts defended by fire, water and unmanned automatic weapons as also protected by ‘Mura Pasha’ - thousand miles-long deadly and sturdy wires as designed by Demon Mura . Krishna shattered the defence fortresses and blew His Panchajanya (Conch shell) with deadening reverberation as Demon Mura’s frontal fortification was destroyed. When provoked, the Demon tossed his powerful club which was slashed by Krishna’s Sudarsana Chakra into pieces and devastated Mura. Seven deadly sons of Mura, who had the knowledge of weapons as fully as their father, pounced in a group but Krishna’s Supreme powers were no match and they too were cracked. Bhaumasura shot at his ‘Shataghi’ - the powerful disc with hundred blades- and later on with his mighty spear with which he defeated Indra too both of which proved futile. Finally Krishna gave His nod to Sudarsana Chakra (Wheel) to pull down the Demon and exterminate him. Thus Bhaumasura was sent to ‘Naraka’ and hence his ignominious title as Narakasura. [Another version is that the Demon was arrowed down by Satyabhama herself, as he secured a blessing from Lord Brahma that only his mother Goddess of Earth (Bhumi) could kill him; Satyabhama was the reincarnation of Goddess Earth. It was at Indra’s distress call that received Krishna’s attention was that the Asura appropriated Varuna Deva’s Royalty Insignia which was an Umbrella; the Ear- Rings of Aditi- the Mother- Figure of Devas; and ‘Mani Parvata’ (Mandara Mountain) where Demi-Gods resided were among the abominable acts of the Demon. As a gesture of good-will, Satyabhama’s desire to transfer the ‘Parijata’ Tree (which emerged in the churning process of Ocean) to her garden from the Heaven was obliged by Indra. Krishna on His part released sixteen thousand royal maidens of Kings defeated by Bhaumasura and consented to marry them, in addition to the eight principal wives. Goddess Prithvi sought her apology for her son’s sins and reiterated her own devotion to Krishna. She said : ‘I was blessed with a son (Bhaumika) and thus you gave me a son and now took him away too now! Please accept the Kundala and other possessions as he has died now but do kindly spare his progeny of any blames. Achyuta! You are the Creator-Protector and Terminator and the Unique Form of the Universe; how could I indeed acclaim and commend you; Do forgive your own son Narakasura for his misdeeds!]

Then having taken the lead from Trishira, Devantaka, Narantaka and Tejasvi Atikaaya too got readied for jumping into the battle. They all were gifted with ‘akaasha vicharana, maayaa vishaaradas, rana durmadhas and deva dapa nirmulakas’ They are all also ‘bala sampannas, and yuddha vishaaradaas’ even with the experience of successfully encountering gandharva, kinnara, maha naagaas and devaaganaas too, being ‘astravettaas and yuddha nipunaas’. sa putrān sampariṣvajya bhūṣayitvā ca bhūṣaṇaiḥ, āśīrbhiś ca praśastābhiḥ preṣayām āsa samyuge/ Ravana had then embraced them all, readied them with ‘aabharanas, kavacha aayudhas and astrashastraas’ and blessed them to face the enemy with ready ttask. mahodaramahāpārśvau bhrātaraū cāpi rāvaṇaḥ, rakṣaṇārthaṁ kumārāṇāṁ preṣayām āsa samyuge/ te 'bhivādya mahātmānam rāvaṇaṁ ripurāvaṇam, kṛtvā pradakṣiṇam caiva mahākāyāḥ prastathire/ sarvaśādhībhir gandhaiś ca samālabhya mahābalāḥ, nirjagmur nairṛtaśreṣṭhāḥ ṣaḍ ete yuddhakāṅkṣiṇaḥ/ Then Ravana also sent his brothers Mahaparshvya the ‘yuddhonmatta’ and equally ‘unmatta’ Mahodara for raksha of the Raja Kumaras. tataḥ sudarśanaṁ nāma nīlajīmūta - saṁnibham, airāvatakule jātam āruroha mahodaraḥ/ sarvāyudhasamāyuktaṁ tūṇībhiś ca svalamkṛtam, rarāja gajam āsthāya savitevāstamūrdhani/ hayottamasamāyuktaṁ sarvāyudhasamākulam, āruroha rathaśreṣṭhaṁ triśirā rāvaṇātmajaḥ/ Then Mahodara alighted Iraavata like Maha Gaja as he was fully equipped with sarvaayudhas as Surya Deva ascended on ‘agastyaachala shikhira’. Atikaya Ravana putra the ‘dhanurdhara shreshtha’ too was seated on chariot drawn by excellent ‘jaati ashvaas’. Ravana Kumara Narantaka was seated on ‘ucchvaushrava samaana ashva’. Devantaka was seated on an gaja raaja too as though Vishnu himself with a golden parigha in his hands. Maha Parshva with a maha gada on his shoulders like Kubera himself and so did Mahakaaya too. Thus making maha ‘megha garjans’ of Ravanaasura’s victories proceeded to attack the maha vaanara sena while the latter too with gusto as puffed up and fortified with the recently concluded ‘mahadaananda’ of ‘Kumbhakarna Vadha’ .simhanādān vineduś ca raṇe rākṣasavānarāḥ, śilābhiś cūrṇayām āsur yātudhānān plavaṅgamāḥ/ nijaghnūḥ saṃyuge kruddhāḥ kavacābharaṇāvṛtān, ke cid rathagatān vīrān gajavājigatān api/ nijaghnūḥ sahasāplutya yātudhānān plavaṅgamāḥ, śailaśṛṅganipātaiś ca muṣṭibhir vāntalocanāḥ, celuḥ petuś ca neduś ca tatra rākṣasapuṅgavāḥ/ Both the Rakshasa Veera Kumaras and the Maha vaanara pramukhas resorted to earth shaking like ‘harsha ninaadaas’. The gritty and angered vaanaras pounced the Rakshasa Veera Kumaras seated on elephants, horses and chariots with maha vrikshasa and heavy mountain rocks and by their ‘maha mushti ghaataas’ too. The nishaachraas too with their potent ‘ayudhas’ sought to either smash down or fall down to earth. nijaghnūḥ śailaśūlāstrair vibhiduś ca paraspāram, simhanādān vineduś ca raṇe vānararākṣasāḥ/ chinnavarmatanutrāṇā rākṣasā vānarair hatāḥ, rudhiram prasrutās tatra rasasāram iva drumāḥ/ rathena ca ratham cāpi vāraṇena ca vāraṇam, hayena ca hayam ke cin nijaghnur vānarā raṇe/ kṣuraprair ardhaacandraiś ca bhallaiś ca niṣitaiḥ śaraiḥ, rākṣasā vānarendrāṇām cicchiduḥ pādapāṇī śilāḥ/ In this manner, rakshasaas and vaanaraas kept on making all out efforts of offensive and defensive tactics of the historic Rama Ravana Sangraama. As Rakshasa Veeraas were well protected by their kavacha and ‘astra shastraas’, Maha Vaanaraas with their bare bodies yet armed with mountain rocks and huge trees either on shoulders or on laps were carefree ‘do or die’ spree and bravery. How many vaanaraas indeed were crushed to death by the elephantry, horse back and chariot drawn Rakshasa Veeras especially by the Ravana Kumaaraas! They were successfully destroying to pieces the ‘vriksha-parvata prahaaraas’ with their ‘ardha chandra-kshurpra-bhalla naamaka baanaas’. Then Naraantaka entered the ‘maha sangraama’ and made havoc to the vaanana veeras. Mahamanasvi vaanara veera then took to offense and joined Sugriva who in turn asked Angada: gacchainam rākṣasam vīra yo ’sau turagam āsthitaḥ, kṣobhayantam haribalam kṣipram prāṇair viyojaya/ sa bhartur vacanam śrutvā niṣpapātāṅgadas tadā, anikān meghasamkāśān meghānikād ivāṃśumān/ ‘Son Angada! This Narantaka is right now creating a terror against the veera veeraas and would need to be controlled some how’. Then Angada faced Narantaka: tiṣṭha kiṃ prākṛtair ebhir haribhis tvaṃ kariṣyasi, asmin vajrasamasparśe prāsam kṣipa mamorasi/ aṅgadasya vacaḥ śrutvā pracukrodha narāntakaḥ, saṁdaśya daśanair oṣṭham niśvasya ca bhujaṅgavat/ sa prāsam āvidhya tadāṅgadāya; samujjvalantam sahasotsasarja, sa vālīputrorasi vajrakalpe; babhūva bhagno nyapatac ca bhūmau/ Wait wait Nishachara! Of which avail your displaying your prataapa on ‘saamanaya vaanaras’! My broad chest is ‘vajra samaana’ do please hit the same if you dare!’ As Angada challenged thus, Narantaka got truly infuriated and hissed like a deadly maha sarpa took a long breath and stood before Angada and having taken to a forceful and fast self- rounded kick and hit hard on Angada’s vajra samaana vakshasthala and soon enough Narakantaka’s forehead like a maha garuda snatches and hits a ‘visha maha sarpa’. There after, Angada made a high jump and hit hard Narakantaka’s horse. Having fallen down from the dead horse, Narakantaka had no bounds of his wrath and kicked hard on Angada’s head as the Vanara Veera’s head got damaged and ‘rakta dhaaraas’ flowed off as Angada wondered at the Rakshas’s might. Yet, recovering fast enough, Angada stood up and thumped a reverberating gusty bluster on Narantaka’s loha samaana trunk like chest with which Narantaka fell down dead as vaanara veeraas went berserk with unbounded craze. athāṅgado rāmamanah praharṣaṇam; suduṣkaram tam kṛtavān hi vikramam, viśiṣṭiye so ’py ativīrya vikramah; punaś ca yuddhe sa babhūva harṣitaḥ/ Angada had thus performed a truly heroic adventure against Narantaka for the delight and even a great surprise of Shri Rama and Angada was readied for further escapades ahead!

As Narantaka was killed by Angada, Pulastyanandandana Trishira and Mahodara made ‘ha ha kaaraas’ and instantly enough Mahodara attacked Angada and his own brother Narantaka was killed Devantaka armed with a maha parigha too ran towards Angada. Trishira too jumped up a horse drawn chariot and ran after Angada. Understanding the gravity of the threesome attack Angada uprooted huge vriksa parampara and mountain rocks had flown up the sky and made a torrential rain against Trishira but the latter having anticipated this released ‘baana varshaas’ which smashed them all as a provoked ‘visha sarpa’. Meanwhile Mahodara too attacked with his loha parigha and hit the vajra samaana Angada’s broad chest but cleverly enough the latter escaped the deadly hits. On the other hand with ‘samaya sphurti’ or alacrity of well-timed offensive killed the gaja raaja of Mahodara. Then Vaali Kumara Angada ran towards Devantaka and hit hard with vaayu vega as Devantaka who was unaware fell down yet having recovered though partially raised his parigha and having revolved it with ‘maha vega’ at Angada. The angry Angada fell down hurt but got up soon enough jumped up high but Trishira aiming exactly on Angada’s bhrukuti hit hard by threesome ‘teevra baana prayoga’ and the vivasha Angada Kumara’s forehead was hurt deeply and asked for the help of Hanuman and Neela. Neela at once hurled parvata shikhara but Ravana putra Trishira broke off the parvata shikhara to shambles. Devantaka having complemented Trishira’s speed and skill hit Hanuman nearby. Hanuman made a dash to Trishira who was mounted on a horse and Veeraajaneya tore off the horse by his mere nail hits. Ravana Kumara Trishira pulled up his ‘Shakti Aayudha’ and made a desperate ‘prahaara’. divi kṣiptām ivolkām tām śaktim kṣiptām asaṃgatām, grhītvā hariśārdūlo babhaṇja ca nanāda ca/tām drṣṭvā ghorasamkāśām śaktim bhagnām hanūmatā, prahrṣṭā vānaragaṇā vinedur jaladā iva/ tataḥ khaḍgaṃ samudyamya triśirā rākṣasottamaḥ, nicakhāna tadā roṣād vānarendrasya vakṣasi. The Shaki Ayudha like an ulka or meteor the falling nakshatra was firmly gripped in Hanuman’s fist and smashed up to pieces as Trishira was wonder struck while the vaanara brinda made sky reverberating ‘harshollaasaas’. Trishira then raised his khaḍga and hurt Hanuman’s broad chest. khaḍgaprahārābhīhato hanūmān mārutātmajaḥ, ājaghāna trimūrdhānam talenorasi vīryavān/ sa talabhihata tena srastahastāmbaro bhuvi, nīpapāta mahātejās triśirās tyaktacetanaḥ/ sa tasya patataḥ khaḍgaṃ samācchidya mahākapiḥ, nanāda girisamkāśas trāsayan sarvanairṛtān/ amṛṣyamāṇas tam ghoṣam utpapāta niśācaraḥ, utpatya ca hanūmantam tāḍayām āsa muṣṭinā/ Pavana kumaara gave back a forceful kick back and the maha tejasvi Trishira lost his consciousness and fell down to earth as ‘rakasha ganaas’ were alarmed. tena muṣṭiprahāreṇa saṃcukopa mahākapiḥ, kupitaś ca nijagrāha kirīṭe rākṣasarṣabham/ sa tasya śīrṣāṇy asinā śitena; kirīṭājuṣṭāni saṃkṣāḍāni, krudhāḥ praciccheda suto ’nilasya; tvaṣṭuḥ sutasyeva śīrṣāṃśi śakraḥ/ tāny āyatākṣāṇy agasānibhāni; pradīptavaiśvānaralocanāni, petuḥ śīrṣāṃśīndraripor dharāṇyām; jyotīṃśi muktāni yathārkaṃgāt/ tasmin hate devaripau triśīrṣe; hanūmata śakraparākrameṇa, neduḥ plavaṅgāḥ pracacāla bhūmī; rakṣāṃsy atho dudruvire samantāt/ The rakshasa then recovered got up and took a leap and gave back a jerky thrust on Hanuman’s chest, but the latter held the rakshasa’s glittering kireeta and his fat head and neck and just as Indra held the son of Tvashtha Putra Vishvarupa’s Tri Mastakas with vajraayudha, Hanuman smashed the three headed Trishira to death. As Trishira and Mahodara were killed by Hanuman and Angada earlier, and Devantaka Narakantakaas too, Mahaparshva was in irretrievable anguish and anger as the gold like sons were lost forever and raised his heavy mace up his shoulders in readiness like ‘pralaya kaalaagni’ even as Vanara shiromani Rishabha was the victim to have his chest pounded as flows of blood gushed out. The incensed Vaanara Raja Rishabha of the parvataakaara hit back the rakshasa with his iron fist on Mahaparshva’s strongbox upperbody. But having made a simha garjana took up by his weighty strong hold of mace and attacked varuna putra Maha Vaanara Rishabha hit a massive blow and Rishabha fell down unconscious but soon enough got up with ‘varunadeva prabhava’ and having turned around a couple of times pulled out the same mace of Mahaparshva’s itself who fell down dead with a thud. As the brother of King Ravana viz. Mahaparshva was lost, the Rakshasasena took to heels having thrown off their arms and ran back amazed.

Atikaya having realised that his maha paraakrami brothers and uncles had all fallen to death even by vaanaraas, got hurt and enraged especially by the yuddhahonmatta brothers Mahodara and Mahapaarshva who were blessed by 'Brahma varadaana prapti'. Atikaya was of parvata samaana vishaala kaaya and was a sworn enemy of 'Deva Daanava darpa haari' and Indra shatru. As he initiated his 'dhanushthankaara' and rushed forward, the vaanara sena having seen him from a distance, got bewildered that another Kumbhakarna had arrived for their food and drink from their flesh and blood! Shri Rama too wondered on sighting 'Atkaaya' from a distance and asked Vibhishana: 'Thousands of horses are being drawn that huge chariot and seated therein is a parvata swarupa bhayankara maha Rakshasa with a maha dhanush; who indeed that could be! The rathadhwaaja shikhira is a pataaka with 'Rahu graha chinha'. On his maha ratha there are twenty arrow cases, ten bhayankara dhanushes, and numberless maha baanaas, besides khadgas. Then Vibhishana explained that he was Kubera's younger brother, the maha tejasvi Maha Kaya who was a veda shastra jnaata and paripurna astra vidya praveena. He was an expert on elephant-horse riding, shatra vidya praveena, dhnush baana sandhaana nipuna, lakshya bhdana vidya paarangata, saama daanapbheda dandaa praveena, nyaaya yukta manrana vetta. He was the Ravana patni Dhaanyamaalini putra, popular as Maha Kaaya. He was for long many 'Brahmaaraadhana yukta.' Brahma gave him the 'varadaana' of invincibility against 'deva asuras'. Brahma also gifted him a 'divya kavacha', 'Surya samaana tejasvi maha ratha' and 'aneka divyaastraas'. Maha Ati Kaaya had the fame of deva-daanavas in thousands. In the past, with his baana prahaaraas, Atikaaya with his baana prahaaraas blunted Indra's vijraayudha prahaaraas repeatedly, let alone, 'deva daanava darpa samhaari'. tad asmin kriyatām yatnaḥ kṣipram puruṣapuṅgava, purā vānarasainyāni kṣayam nayati sāyakaiḥ/ tato 'tikāyo balavān praviśya harivāhinīm, viśphārayām āsa dhanur nanāda ca punaḥ punaḥ/ tam bhīmavapuṣam dṛṣṭvā rathastham rathinām varam, abhipetur mahātmāno ye pradhānāḥ plavaṅgamāḥ/ Having explained about Atikaaya, Vibhishana then alerted Shri Rama: 'Purushottama! Now do now at once alert your helpers immediately well before the Maha Rakshasa should start off smashing down the vaanara sena most ruthlessly.' Even as Vibhisana was alerting Shri Rama, balavaan Atikaaya started off vaanara samhaara with maha garjana., Then he sighted even as he was seated comfortably sighted some vaanara veeraas distinctly: kumudo dvivido maindo nīlaḥ śarabha eva ca, pādapair giriśṛṅgaiś ca yugapat samabhidraavan/ teṣām vṛkṣāṁś ca śailāṁś ca śaraiḥ kāñcanabhūṣaṇaiḥ, atikāyo mahātejās cicchedāstravidām varah/ tāmś caiva sarān sa harīṁ śaraiḥ sarvāyasair balī, vivyādhābhīmukhaḥ samkhye bhīmākāyo niśācaraḥ/ His attention was drawn to some pradhana vaanaraas ready with maha vrikshaas and boulders, named Kumuda, Dwivida, Mainda, Neela, Sharabhaadi. Instantly Atikaya released his arrows and shattered the vrisshas and rocks. At the sametime he rounded the vaanaras with 'loha baanaas' and got them bundled up. The baana varshaas were such as the vaanara veeras could wriggle out from. Yet they shouted challenging the Maha Rakshasa to face Rama the maanava hero if he could. Lakshmana took the cue and jumped off with alertness smilingly. kruddhaḥ saumitir utpatya tūṇād ākṣipya sāyakam, purastād atikāyasya vicakarṣa mahad dhanuḥ/ pūrayan sa mahīm śailān ākāśam sāgaram diśaḥ, jyāśabdo lakṣmaṇasyogras trāsayan rajanīcarān/ saumitreś cāpanirghoṣam śrutvā pratibhayaṁ tadā, viśiṣṁye mahātejā rākṣasendrātmajo balī/ Then Lakshmana got his dhanush baanaas readied and his 'dhanush pratyanchaka dhvani' was of

Be ever vigilant with all your strength and preparedness especially where Devi Sita had been kept at the Ashoka Vaatika especially. Be watchful of entry and exit points of that specific area. Nishacharas! Be extra careful of the entry-exits especially at the pradosh kaalaas, midnights, and early mornings most certainly of the tricky vaanaraas. Having alerted the Rakshasaas, then Ravana decided of his further plans of wriggling out of the situation of his kingdom and of the fast dwindling status his own.

Indrajit devastated Vanara Veeraas being invisible on skies and by using brahmaastra made Rama Lakshmaas too victimised as Ravana was thrilled and so were Rakshasaas and Lankapura

As rapid flashes of the tragic news of a series of deaths of Maha Rakshas stalwarts like of the stature of Devantaka, Trishira and now of Atikaya, Ravana's tears rolled down as never ever before especially of sons, brothers and the close kith and kin. Then he looked at his elder son Indrajit. The latter at once took the cue and asserted: 'Dear most father the Rakshasa Raja! As long as Indrajit were alive, never ever you should get concerned as the son could not only attack most successfully but also self defend and more significantly revive your glory. To day, I should most certainly ensure the destruction of the body parts of Rama Lakshmanas and assure their permanent sleep. imām pratijñām śṛṇu śakraśatroḥ; suniścītām pauruṣadaivayuktām, adyaiva rāmaṁ sahalakṣmaṇena; saṁtāpayiṣyāmi śarair amoghaiḥ/ adyendravaivasvataviṣnumitra; sādhyāśvivaiśvānaracandrasūryāḥ, drakṣyanti me vikramam aprameyam; viṣṇor ivograhāṁ baliyajñavāte/ Hereby Indrashatru the Ravana Putra should swear by my honour and life and by the virtue of Brahma Bala asserting to attack Rama Lakshmanas with my amogha baanaas to death and thus their yuddha vishayaka pipaasha to get put off for ever. To day, You should witness such 'bhayankara drishyaas' of the valour and fortitude of Indra, Yama, Vishnu, Rudra, Saandhya, Agni, Surya and Chanda's 'apaara paraakrama' most certainly.' Having asserted thus, Indrajit having received Ravana's blessings jumped on to his donkey drawn chariot with speed and determination for the attack and reached the very arena for facing the enemy. Shankha ninaadaas and dundhubhi swaraas were resounded as Indradrohi was reaching the ranabhumi. On the way, Indrajit made a conscious stop for sometime, got down the chariot, performed agni sthaapana, agni deva puja, havish ahuti in the flames and made the due aavaahana od brahmaastra, even as Surya Chandras, Graha Nakshtraas and antariksha pranis were alerted. Having made the ahutis to Agni duly, set up his dhanush baanaas, radha, khadga, saaradhi duly the diappeared on to the skies. Then the Rakshasa Sena made a mercurial entry on to the battle grounds with 'suvarnabhushita, vichitra baanaaneka dhanushas', and 'shastraaneekaas' freely killing vaanara senaas with their armoury. Indrajit too commenced his mighty prahaaras with gadaa musalaas and astra shastraas besides shaila shikhiraas and vriksha varshasas targetted to the vaanara yodhaas who were killed, or with broken body parts as flows of blood gathered momentum. As the morale booster of Rakshasa Veeraas, Indrajit setting each of the release of baanaas with five five, seven seven, nine nine groups succeeded in smasing down dozens of vaanaaraas by each such shots of baana gucchhas. He then attacked select vaanara veeraas and as their bodies were torn and sliced there were flows of blood and ran amuck. Many of the Vanaras cried out yelling the name of Shri Rama and laid down their lives while several of them stayed back unnerved hurling boulders and huge trees. But the strong willed Ravana Kumara kept on 'vaanara videerna' with his 'baana pravaahaas'. Then he commenced releasing ‘vishadhara sarpa samaana bhayankara agni tulya shakti shali baana varsha’ was in high momentum. He released eighteen arrows like agni jvaalaas and hit Gandamadana vaanara mahaa veera who got deeply hurt while nine of far fiercer arrows hurt Nala. Indrajit then utilised ‘marma bhedi visha baanaas’ in attacking Mainda Vaanara Veera and simultaneously five more such prahaaraas on Gaja Vanara who was too bound tight crumbling down yet with life. Indrajit got further enthused and hit with ten arrows on Jambavaan and thirty arrows on Neela who too were hurt grievously. Then Ingrajit resorted to ‘bahusankhyaka baana paramapara’ on Sugriva, Rishabha, Angad and Dvidida as all of them were victimised almost senseless. Thus having devastated the vaanaras and their pramukhas, Indrajit had suddenly disappeared by his maaya yet the bana varshaas were pouring from there or here or nowhere and anywhere as he was flying all over the skies by his ‘maaya bhramana’ as groups of vaanaraas were scattered all over the battle ground. He was also hurling shulas, khadgas and parighas as from no where and every where. hanūmantam ca sugrīvam aṅgadaṁ gandhamādanam, jāmbavantam suṣeṇam ca vegadarśinam eva ca/ maindam ca dvididam nīlam gavākṣam gajagomukhau, kesariṁ harilomānam vidyuddaṁṣṭram ca vānaram/ sūryānanam jyotimukham tathā dadhimukham harim, pāvakākṣam nalam caiva kumudam caiva vānaram/prāsaiḥ sūlaiḥ śitair bāṇair indrajinmantrasamhitaiḥ, vivyādha hariśārdūlān sarvāms tān rākṣasottamaḥ/ Once such aayudhas was shot down by him were further used having been laced with abhichaarika mantras too outstanding Vaanara veeraas like Hanuman, Sugriva, Angada, Gandhamaanana, Jambavan, Sushena, Vegadarsha, Mainda Dvidida, Neela, Gavaaksha, Gavaya, Kesari, Hariloma, Vidyudamshttra, Suryaananana, Jyotimukha, Dadhimukha, Paavakaaksha, Nala, Kumudaadi Maha Vanara Yoddhaas fell down hurt. sa bāṇavarṣair abhivarṣyamāṇo; dhārānīpātān iva tān vicintya, samīkṣamāṇaḥ paramādbhutaśrī; rāmas tadā lakṣmaṇam ity uvāca/ Having thus succeeded hurting maha vaanara warriors, Indrajit from somewhere on the skies roared megha garjana with ‘vikata haasya avahelana’ on Rama Lakshmanas and poured lightning like baana varsha and Rama then addressed Lakshmana: asau punar lakṣmaṇa rākṣasendro; brahmāstram āśritya surendraśatruḥ, nīpātayitvā harisainyam ugram; asmāñ śarair ardayati prasaktam/svayambhuvā dattavarō mahātmā; kham āsthito ’ntarhitabhīmākāyaḥ, katham nu śakyo yudhi naṣṭadeho; nihantum adyendrajid udyatāstrah/ manye svayambhūr bhagavān acintyo; yasyaitad astraṁ prabhavaś ca yo ’sya, bāṇāvapātāms tvam ihādya dhīman; mayā sahāvyagramanāḥ sahasva/ Lakshmana! As both Rama Lakshmanas were tied together senseless by Indrajit's brahmastra, the Vaanara Bhalluka yoddhaas like Sugriva, Neela, Angada, and Jambavaan were huddled together puzzled with 'kim kartavya'! Then Vibhishana broke the silence stating that that after all was not the end of the world any way and assured them all: 'Vaanara Veeraas! Never get disheartened in this manner and this is such a critical moment that one would need to face with determination and resolve. After all, Rama Lakshmanas are in a senseless condition but happily alive. Swayambhu Brahma did provide Indrajit the potent most brahmaastra which got the maha purushas temporarily senseless and one would need to negate its temporary spell by seeking and exporing means to negate.' Then Hanuman addressed Vibhishana: 'Rakshasa Raja! I do heartily endorse and appreciate your sense of determination instead exploring ways and means and share our assurances too'. That was the time of nightfall dusk when there was no rakshasa sanchaara as they ought to be celebrating victory. Hence Vaanara Veeraas though physically hurt somewhat could fortify themselves with mental resolve. Then Vibhishana and Hanuman witnessed Sugriva, Angada, Neela, Sharabha, Gandamaadana, Jambavaan, Sushena, Vegadarshi, Mainda, Nala, Jyotirmukha and Dvidida were in their respective conditions of being rather badly hurt. Vibhishana in that sandhaakaala's dim light recognised Jambavan and said: Arya! Hope you are not so grievously hurt! Jambavan replied: 'Rakshasa Raja, I am able to recognise you only my your voice and my eyes also not enabling to see you due to pain; hope veera Anjaana Vaayu Putra Hanuman is alright! Then Hanuman reached and touched him tenderly and with renewed vigour Jambaan fondled Hanumaan with reciprocative gesture and stated: Vaanara Simha! This precisely is the perfect time to save the prestige of we vaanara bhallukaas which even devatas too are unaware of. This is the most critical mode of this crisis as caused by Rama Lakshmanas are to be saved by removing the bragmastra baana. gatvā paramam̐ adhvānam̐ upary upari sāgaram̐, himavantam̐ nagaśreṣṭham̐ hanūman gantum̐ arhasi/ tataḥ kāñcanam̐ atyugram̐ ṛṣabham̐ parvatottamam̐, kailāśaśikharam̐ cāpi drakṣyasy arinīśūdana/ tayoḥ śikharayor̐ madhye pradīptam̐ atulaprabham̐, sarvauśadhiyutam̐ vīra drakṣyasy auśadhiparvatam̐/ Veera Hanuman! Try to secure these mahoshadhis at the earliest and fly back to this very spot and promise the praana daana to assert the pride and indelible glory of Vaanaras for generations now and forever. No sooner that Veeraanjaneya heard this that the most experienced bhallula pitaamaha Jambavan detailed than he crossed the mahaa saagara and got dropped on earth as mahaa vrikshas were shattered, parvata shikharaas crumbled and mountains too quaked. Parvataakara Pavana Kumara Hanuman then reached Malaya parvata shikhara. Then there were huge vrishkas, maha sarovaraas where Deva Gandharvas visit often as that was of the area of about sixty yojanaas. Vidyaadhara- Rishi Muni Apsaras reside there with comfort with mriga samuhas in the mountain caves. Pavana kumara Hanuman witnessed groups of Yaksha, Gandharva, Kinnaraas were upset by his gigantic vaanara's sudden appearance. From there, he extended his hands and shoulders like Garuda Deva pushing down dasha dishas and flew up in the high skies towards Himalaya ranges with alarming speed even as the jala jantu samuhas of the Maha Samudra were alarmed. sa parvatān vṛkṣagaṇān sarāṁsi; nadīs taṭākāni purottamāni, sphītāñjanāms tān api samprapaśyañ; jagāma vegāt pitṛtulyavegaḥ/ ādityapatham āśritya jagāma sa gataśramah, sa dadarśa hariśreṣṭho himavantam nagottamam/ nānāprasavaṇopetaṁ bahukamdarānirjharam, śvetābhracayasaṁkāśaiḥ śikharaiś cārudaśanaiḥ/ Veeraanjaneya's momentum and velocity was truly like his inheritance from his father Vayu Deva, swiftly crossing parvatas, birds, sarovaraas, rivers, nagaris, samruddha jaanapadas, and so on. Veera Hanuman was also like of his father's parakrama vegashaali followed Surya maarga and like Surya Vayus never tired too. Remembering the valuable words of Jambavan; he got quick glimpses of Himalaya ranges, deep caves, shikharas shrouded by clouds, the prakrita soundarya of green tall vrishas and bushes and reached there comfortably. sa tam samāsādyā mahānagendram; atipravṛddhottamaghoraśṛṅgam, dadarśa puṇyāni mahāśramāni; surarṣisaṁghottamasevitāni/ sa brahmakośam rajatālayam ca; śakrālayam rudraśarapramokṣam,/ hayānanam brahmaśiraś ca dīptam; dadarśa vaivasvata kimkarāms ca/ vajrālayam vaiśvaraṇālayam ca; sūryaprabham sūryanibandhanam ca, brahmāsanam śaṁkarakārmukam ca; dadarśa nābhim ca vasumdhārāyāḥ/ kailāsam agryam himavacchilām ca; tatharṣabham kāñcanaśailam agryam/ This Maha Pravata Raja shikharas were glittering like gold and Anjaneya notices parama pavitra ashramas where devarshi samudaayaas reside with rising flames of homa prakriyas. It was on that sprawling mountain range is stated as that of Hiranyagarbha Brahma Bhagavan's 'nivasa sthaana' as his alternate 'rajatanaabhi sthaana' and Indra bhavana too. It was also believed as the very place from where Rudra Deva released his mighty arrow against Tripuraasuraas, also the vaasa sthaana of Bhagavan Hayagriva abd Yama Raja Sevaka nivasa too. Hanuman also witnessed passingly the glimpses of the nivaasa sthaanaas of Agni Deva, Kubera, Dwaadsha Suryas too as also of the places of Chaturmukha Brahma, Shiva Dhanush, Vasundhara naabhi sthaanaas too. Then Veeraanjaneya was able to spot out Kailaasha Parvata, Himalaya Shila, Shiva vaahana vrishasha and suvarnamaya Rishabha Parvata. sa dīptasarvauśadhisampradīptam; dadarśa sarvauśadhiparvatendram/ sa tam samīkṣyānalaraśmidīptam; viśiṣṭiye vāsavadūtasūnuḥ, āplutya tam cauśadhiparvatendram; tatrauśadhīnām vicayam cakāra/ sa yojanasahasrāṇi samatītya mahākapiḥ, divyauśadhidharam śailam vyacaran mārutātmajaḥ/ sa parvatān vṛkṣagaṇān sarāṁsi; nadīs taṭākāni purottamāni, sphītāñjanāms tān api samprapaśyañ; jagāma vegāt pitṛtulyavegaḥ/ Then Maha - Kapi readily spotted the flashes of dazzle and sparkle of mahoshadhis. 'Nagendra! You seem not to cooperate for the revivl of Shri Rama Lakshmanas who are indeed the yuga purushas. Now get ready to test my ‘baahu bala’. Having asserted so, Veera Hanuman held the Maha Parvata Shikhara along with all the dhaatus intact yet with maha vrikshas, elephants and so on and pulled it out with his unimaginable physical grit and grip as the samasta loka vaasis were frightened having been taken aback bewildered and flew off like Garuda Deva as all the celestial beings showered praises on the Vayu putra’s daring escapade. sa bhāskarādhvānam anuprapannas; tad bhāskarābham śikharam praghyā, babhau tadā bhāskarasaṁnikāśo; raveḥ samīpe pratibhāskarābhaḥ/Following the Surya Marga, like Surya Himself, Pavana Putra lifted the Sanjeevani Parvata right on his massive shoulders. Then they had all got collected the ‘murchita dehas’ of Rama Lakshmanas and applied the ‘sugandha vilepana’ and in seconds and minutes, Rama Lakshmanas stood up erect and soon enough, the ‘maantrika baanaas’ were removed as of normal physiques. Then Prachanda Pavana Kumaara Hanuman gave a massive thrust and lashed off the Mahoshadhi Parvata to reach back to the Himaalayan Range.

Then the enormously excited Vaanara Raja Sugriva at the unbelievable act of rescuscitating Rama Lakshmanas by the 'mahoushadhis' fetched by the gallantry and the grit of Veeranjanyeya, asked the latter as to what should be the next forward step. He said: 'Kumbhakarna was dead, Ravana Putras were eliminated, yet Lankapuri raksha is still pending. Hence Vanara Veeras should now attack forthwith. Thus as per the directive of Sugriva, Vaanara Yoddhas took up their weapons like Dwadasha Adiyas and Ekaaditya Rudras at the pradasha kaala of the day fall. They attacked thousands of the houses of Lankapuri indiscriminately and devastated the doors, windows, raaja margaas while the residents were raising hue and cry responses which had gladdened the vaanaras with jumping joys and vicarious shouts and further by throwings of fire balls which had burnt off valuable jewellery, silks, precious clothings, comfortable beds and various luxuries of happy livings to heaps of ash. So were the aabhushanas of horses, elephants, chariots, kavachas, khadga, dhanush, pratyancha, ankusha, shakti, vyagracharmasanaas, mani bhushana, and various types of astra shastras as the ready targets of agni deva. In the course of the attacks, elephants, horses, donkeys were all killed with heavy rocks and huge trees and the 'mahaakrandanaas' of the frightened Lankapuri citizens, especially the houswives, broke out helter skelter in dasha dishaas. Vaanara garjanas and the akrandanaas of the citizens far surpassed the samudra taranga mahaaghosha. But then the Rakshasa warriors had then received the alert signals from their respective senapatis and the initial vaanara sena's wanton provocations led to an open battle. Then the rejuvenated Shri Rama Lakshmanas sounded his 'dhanushthankara' just as Shankara was enraged while attacking Tripuraasiras. [Refer Vishleshana vide Sarga 52 of Essence of Valmiki Sundara Ramayana] Vaanara garjanas and Rakshasa kolaahala was indeed more profound in Shri Rama 'dhanusthankaara' as overheard in dasa dishas. Rama baanaas fell right at the nagara dwaara like kailaasa shikhara crashed on 'bhutala'. On noticing this, Rakshasa Veeraas hurried up readied for a great battle ahead as they were facing a kaala raatri. Then Sugriva alerted his maha vaanara veeraas to reach the entry doors of Lankapuri. Accordingly Vaanara veeraas made strong holds of lit up handles of huge flames and were readied to break in the gates and on knowing about these developments, Ravana got truly infuriated and instructed Kumbhakarna Putras named Kumbha and Nikumbha and yelled : ' Veera Nishaacharaas! Right through this 'kaala raatri' get ready for the big battle.' As par Ravana's instructions Maha Rakshasaas Yupaaksha, Shonitaaksha, Prajangha and Kampana too were despatched. Rakshasa Maha bhayankara Sena with glittering ayudhas and dhanur baanaas attacked seated on horses and chariots with elevated dhwas while Vanaraas were well equipped with vrishas and heavy stones. Some of mountain sized Vanara Shreshtas utilised 'mushti ghaatas' truly negating 'aayudha ghaataas'. teṣāṃ bhujaaparāmarśa - vyāmṛṣṭaparighāsani, rākṣasānām balaṃ śreṣṭhaṃ bhūyastaram aśobhata/ As Rakasa soldiers were reviving their parighas and ashanis, vaanaras were responding with tossings of trees and rocks besides mushti ghaataas. dehīty anye dadāty anyo dadāmiṭy aparāḥ punaḥ, kiṃ kleśayasi tiṣṭheti tatrānyonyam babhāṣire/ samudyatamahāprāsaṃ muṣṭiśūlāsisaṃkulam, prāvartata mahāraudraṃ yuddhaṃ vānararakṣasām/ vānarān daśa sapteti rākṣasā abhyapātayan, rākṣasān daśasapteti vānarā jaghnur āhave/ visrastakeśarasanāṃ vimuktakavaca -dhvajam, balaṃ rākṣasam ālambya vānarāḥ paryavārayan/ As one demands asserting 'fight with me', another challenges too and the third one says ' don't you worry, I should take care of him'! Like wise they keep displaying mutual upmanship. Thus nishaacharaas with doubled up egos keep flinging astra shastras as vaanaraas defend and offend outsmarting each other leading to survivals or deaths. At the end of the night, rakshasas found their dresses torn off, kavachas were broken into and radha dwajas crumbled down as vaanaraas surrounded them and pounded the rakshasas and forced them to retreat or expose themselves with 'praana haani'.

As Rakshasa-Vaanara warriors were engaged in maha sangraama, Angada faced Kampana as the latter readily made a gada prahara at once while Angada tried to retaliate but failed and fell down unconscious but soon enough recovered and lifted a parvata shikhara and banged Kampana and the latter was hurt with blood was flowing and eventually collapsed and succumbed to death. Noticing that Kampana was dead, Shonitaaksaha seated on his chariot attacked Angada with fierce 'kalaagni samaana baana parampara' named 'kshura' with upper nail, 'kshurapra' the 'ardhachandraakaara baana'm 'naaraacha' complete iron from top to bottom, 'vastadanta' or like of calf teeth, 'shili mukha' or goat head, 'karni' or of like the earshaped top, 'Shalya' like the forehead shaped astra and 'vipaatha' of the shape of kaner tree leaf. With such potent arrows, Angada was hurt severely. Meanwhile nishaachara Shonitaaksha jumped off from his chariot and attacked with his sword, while kapikunjara Angada seized that very sword hit the rakshasa's shoulder and hurt him. But Rakshasas Prjanghaka and Upaaksha attacked Valiputra Angada. Shonikaksha too after recovery joined the rakshasa veeraas. Between Shonitaaksha and Prajangha was looking bright like full Moon among the nakshatras fightly desperately Meanwhile however, Vanara Pramukhas Mainda and Dvivida appeared to help Angada as they too were seeking to located worthy Raksasaas to fight against. The threesome vaanara yodhdhas of Angada-Mainda-Dvivida attacked Prajangha Rakshasa. Angada hurled Ashvakarna vriksha and also simultaneously smashes a fistful kick by which Prajangha fell down dead. As he found his uncle dead on the battle field, Yupaksha shed tears yet having been enraged attacked Dvidida and the latter with great presence of time kicked the Rakshasa Yupaksha and held him tight. Now both Yukaksha and Shonitaaksha fought with Mainda and Dvidida. Parakrami Dvidida pierced through the face of Shonikaksha who fell down to the earth and Mainda with his parakrani hastas made Yupaksha downed likewise. Then the Raksha sena was alarmed as Angada destroyed by Kampana and Prajanghaka, Dvidida killed Shonitaaksha, Mainda finished off Yupaaksha in quick succession and too to heels. But Kumbhakarna Putra Kumbha halted the retreat of Rakshasaas by inspiring them to face the enemy with gusto. He raised his dhanush baanaas and released astra varshas and hit Dvidida Vaanara Veera who fell down grievously injured. Then as Trikutaparvata samana vishalakaaya Dvidida fell down with stretched legs, his brother Mainda had instantly raised a maha shila and chased Kumbha Rakshasa who with his arrows broke the boulder to pieces. Even as Kumbha sought to set a vishadhara sarpa type of arrow and released on Mainda, whose chest was injured deeply and fell down unconscious. Mainda and Dvidida were Angada's uncle and the latter attacked Kumbha Rakshasa. But Kumbha released three high potency mantra poorva baanaas and got Angada shareera encircled tightly. But Vaaliputra Angada was not shaken off his high morale and getting released from the grip of the Kumbha Rakshasa baanaas, had initiated maha vriksha varsha although Kumbha made pieces of the vrikshas and resorted back to his baana varsha on Angada who fell senseless. aṅgadaṁ vyathitaṁ dṛṣṭvā sīdantaṁ iva sāgare, durāsadaṁ hariśreṣṭhā rāghavāya nyavedayan/ rāmas tu vyathitaṁ śrutvā vālīputraṁ mahāhave, vyādideśa hariśreṣṭhāñ jāmbavatpramukhāṁs tataḥ/ te tu vānaraśārdūlāḥ śrutvā rāmasya śāsanam, abhipetuḥ saṁkrudhāḥ kumbham udyatakārmukam/ As durjaya veera Angada was sinking like earth rolling down in a maha samudra with unconsciousness, Shri Rama suggested Jambavan and such vaanara veeraas to intervene. tato drumasīlāstāḥ kopasamraktalocanāḥ, rirakṣiṣanto 'bhyapatann aṅgadaṁ vānaraśabhāḥ/ jāmbavāṁs ca suṣeṇaś ca vegadarśī ca vānaraḥ, kumbha - karṇātmajaṁ vīraṁ krudhāḥ samabhidudruvuh/ Then pramukha vaanaraas like Jambavan, Sushena and Vegadarshani uprooted huge boulders and attacked Kumbha. Then Sugriva realising that his own brother's son assisted by Ashwakarna and other vaanara yoddhas initiated maha vriksha prahaasaas unendingly while Sugriva jumped right into the chariot of Kumbha Rakshasa and pulled off the latter's dhanush baanaas to pieces. He shouted on Kumbha saying: 'your 'hasta laaghava' in releasing baana varshaas is no doubt appreciable like Indra, Varuna, Prahlada, and Bali. Yet, you may also like you to sample my bala paraakrama in a dwandwa yuddha too.' Then Kumbha was incensed like agni jwaala and held Sugriva's maha bhujas, while their 'padaabhigaatas' and seeking to bend each other's gigantic bodies were like two agni jwaalaas against each other. tataḥ kumbhaḥ samutpatya sugrīvaṁ abhipadya ca, ājaghānorasi krudho vajravegena muṣṭinā/ Then suddenly Sugriva lifted up the mountain like physique adroitly with extreme precision and ingenuity and tossed right in to the roaring maha samudra. As Kumbha was hurled likewise, the jala raashis in the Maha Samudra rose up high like a vindhya samaana or of mandaraachalas were sunk into the depths of the Samudra. sa tatrābhihataḥ tena sugrīvo vānaraśabhaḥ, muṣṭiṁ saṁvartayām āsa vajrakalpaṁ mahābalaḥ/ arciḥsahasravikacāṁ ravimaṇḍalasaprabham, sa muṣṭiṁ pātayām āsa kumbhasyorasi vīryavān/ Sa tu tna prahaarena vikvala bhrusha peeditaḥ, nipataata tadaa Kumbho gataarchiriva paavakah/ Even so Kumbha jumped high and out of the Samudra and hit a hard 'mushti ghaata' which tore off Sugriva's body kavacha to pieces and his vajra like chest was torn off and rakta dhaaraas were flowing while his heart beat was speeded up. But Maha Parakrami Sugriva hit such a massive death blow to Kumbha's chest and thus Sugriva was shining like the shasra kirana Surya Deva. Muṣṭinābhihataḥ tena nipapātāśu rākṣasaḥ, lohitaṅga ivākāśād dīptaraśmir yadṛcchayā/ tasmin hate bhīmaparākramaṇa; plavaṅgamānām ṛṣabheṇa yuddhe, mahī saśailā savanā cacāla; bhayaṁ ca rakṣāṁsy adhikaṁ viveśa/ Sugriva's colossal bluster on Kumbha's chest was such as he was rapidly crumbling wooden sticks in agni jwaalaas turning into ash. Thus bhayankara parakrami Vaanara Raja Sugriva had achieved the glory of destroying Kumbhasura while the Rakshasa warriors took their heels back to Lankapuri at once.

As Sugriva killed his brother Kumbha, Nikumbha looked at Sugriva as if his rage would bring the vaarara king to burnt ashes. Nikumbha's parigha was like yama danda and the rakshasa bhaya naashaka, and he revolved his parigha making resounding simha garjana with 'bhayaanaka mukha'. His vakshasthala is decorated with a golden padaka, hands with glittering wrist ornaments, his kundalas with gold studded with vajras and his vichitra maala of unusual Surya prabha. As Nikumbha's parigha was circling all around it was like the paribhramana of Vitapaavati Nagari or Alkapuri of Kubera, Gandharva bhavanaas, Nakshatra Chanda Navagraha paribhramana. It was only Veera Hanuman who could stand and challenge the Maha Rakshasa with his open and broad chest. Recalling what all tormentations were perpetrated by Hanuman against Rakshasa Maha Veeraas with vengeance, Nikumbha was anxious to repay to Hanuman and hit his parigha on Hanuman's chest with all his grit and might. sthire tasyorasi vyūḍhe pariḥah śatadhā kṛtaḥ, viśīryamāṇah sahasā ulkā śatam ivāmbare/ sa tu tena prahāreṇa cacāla ca mahākapiḥ, pariḥeṇa samādhūto yathā bhūmicale 'calaḥ/ sa tathābhihataḥ tena hanūmān plavagottamaḥ, muṣṭim saṁvartayām āsa balenātimahābalaḥ/ tam udyamya mahātejā nikumbhorasi vīryavān, abhicikṣepa vegena vegavān vāyuvikramah/ Hanumana's chest was indeed enormous and robust and the parigha hurled by Nikumbha was broken into pieces like hundreds of ulkas or meteors hit the earth. As per Ravana's instructions, Makaraaksha challenged Rama with baana varshas for long, but Rama smashed the charioteer, as the asura took to a Shiva shula, yet Rama with his Vayavyastra killed the asura.

Enraged by the unfortunate herioc deaths of Kumbha Nikumbha instructed Khara Putra Makharaksha to attack Rama Lakshmanas. Racalling most vengefully how Rama forwarded his heroic father to veera swarga, Makaraksha had readily appreciated the golden opportunity of getting rid of the menace of Rama Lakshmanas and instructed his Senapati to get ready for the great battle. Then he addressed his sena as follows: 'comrades! aham rākṣasarājena rāvaṇena mahātmanā, ājñaptaḥ samare hantum tāv ubhau rāmalakṣmaṇau/ adya rāmaḥ vadhiṣyāmi lakṣmaṇam ca niśācarāḥ, śākhāmṛgaḥ ca sugrīvaḥ vānarāmś ca śarottamaiḥ/ adya sūlanipātaiś ca vānarāṇām mahācamūm, pradahiṣyāmi samprāptām śuṣkendhanam ivānalaḥ/ I have been instructed by King Ravana to attack Rama Lakshmanas. ordered the rakshasa sena to charge ahead and create havoc by mercilessly destroying vaanara bhallukas. At that time, there were ‘shankhaaraavaas’ and drum beatings across the ‘dasha dishas’ in thousands and there was alround ‘utsaaha kolaahalaas’. Then suddenly there was an ‘apashakuna’ or a negative foreboding that the Makaraksha Radha Saradhi’s handholding cane slipped, the horses became directionless and the radha dhvaja crashed down. pravāti pavanas tasya sapāmsuḥ kharadāruṇaḥ, niryāṇe tasya raudrasya makarākṣasya durmateḥ/ tāni dṛṣṭvā nimittāni rākṣasā vīryavattamāḥ, acintyanirgatāḥ sarve yatra tau rāmalakṣmaṇau/ Added to this at the very start of Makaraaksha’s ‘yuddha yatraa samaya’, there were fierce winds of sand became stronger and stronger. Despite the ‘apashakunaas’, Makaraksha and the rakshasa sena forged ahead with anxiety and excitement while Makarakshasa approached where Rama Lakshmans were seated.

Vaanara Veeraas were meanwhile ready with vriksha, shula, gada, parighas pushing and jottling each other, while nishacharas too were fully armed with shaki, shula, bhaalaa, tomara, pattishas, bhindipaala, baana prahara, paasha, mudgara, dandas to butcher vaararaas. Khara putra Makaraaksha started off ‘vanara vinaashana’ as groups of them scattered and dazed running here and there, due to rakshasa ‘darpa’ and show off. Then Makhraaksha yelled at Shri Rama! tiṣṭha rāma mayā sārddham dvandvayuddham dadāmi te, tyājyaishyāmi te prāṇān dhanurmuktaiḥ śitaiḥ śaraiḥ/ yat tadā dandakārāṇye pitaraṁ hatavān mama, madagrataḥ svakarmasthaṁ smṛtvā roṣo 'bhivardhate/ dahyante bhṛśam aṅgāni durātman mama rāghava, yan mayāsi na dṛṣṭas tvam tasmin kāle mahāvane/ Wait Rama, be there itself as both of us should have ‘dwandva yuddha’ and face to face as my ‘baana prahaaras’ are going to sweep off your breathings. Ever since you had taken off my dearest father’s life force, since then I had been waiting for this unmissable opportunity of avenging and here I am right before you and am extremely anxious to get rid of you once and for all while avenging and awakening his ‘atma shaanti’ and my relief. diṣṭyāsi darśanam rāma mama tvam prāptavān iha, kāṅkṣito 'si kṣudhārtasya simhasyevetaro mṛgaḥ/ adya madbāṇavegena pretarād viṣayam gataḥ, ye tvayā nihataḥ śūrāḥ saha tais tvam sameṣyasi/ bahunātra kim uktena śṛṇu rāma vaco mama, paśyantu sakalā lokās tvām mām caiva raṇājire/ astrair vā gadayā vāpi bāhubhyām vā mahāhave, abhyastam yena vā rāma tena vā vartatām yudhi/ Duratma Raghava! At that time in dandakaranya, you were perhaps not to notice me adequately as even thereafter my entire body had been enraged ever since with the fires of vengeance. But Rama, right now, I am able to see you clearly, your affected show off of bravery and so on and now I stand before you like a hungry lion seeking a tasty prey! To day, You should taste be blast of my arrows and reach that yamaloka where you might have to keep company with other vanara rakshasa pramukhas too. Rama! Of which avail of my anxiety now any way. It should of the ‘prekshakas’ or the onlookers to witness the thrill of mutual battle. Rama! You may like to fight by which ever means like with astras, or gadaa like shatras, or by ‘dwandva yuddha’ as the choice is yours as I am prepared by any means.’ Shri Rama heard the ‘pragalbhas’ of Makaraksha and laughed loud and replied: ‘Nishaachara! Why are you boasting away as these words hurled at my face are truly disgraceful. Remember that in dandakaranya, fourteen thousand and odd Rakshasas including your father Khara, Trishira and Dushana were devastated by me. Now with your death too should feed several owls, crows and dogs should soon satiate with your huge dead body flesh and quench their thirst too.’ As Shri Rama ridiculed likewise, the Maha Rakshasa hastened to attack Rama with ‘baana varsha’, but the ever alert Shri Rama made pieces of Makaraksha’s arrows. The mutual releases of the arrow rains became so severe in the course of the day that Deva-Danava-Gandharva-Kinara- Maha Naagas were noticing with awe. The mantrika baanas released by Rama were negated by the Rakshasas, while the reverse was occurring too day long. Tatah kruddho mahabaahurdhanusccheda samyuja, ashtaabhiratha naaraachaiḥ suoramam vivuaagha Raghavaḥ/ Bhitvaa Ratham sharai Raamo hatvaa ashwaanpaayatata, viratho vasudhaasthaḥ sa makaraksho nishaasharah/Tattisṭhad vasudhaam rakshah shulam janbaaha paaninaa, traasanam srava bhutaanaam yugaanitikaagni samaprabham/ Then maha baahu Shri Ramachandra got fed up with the nagging exchanges of ‘baana varshas’, and with eight ardhachandraakaara baanaas killed the saaradhi of the Rakshasaa’s chariot. Following later, Rama killed the horses too . As he became a ratha heena, Makaraaksha was forced down to earth like a pralaya kaala Rudra and started with his maha shula.duravaapam mahacchulam Rudradattham bhayankaram, jaajjalyamaanamaakaashe samhaaraastrabhi -vaaparam/ Tamaapanantam jvalitam Kharaputrakaraacchyutam,baanaischaturbhiraakaashe shulam chicchheda raaghavah/ Sa bhinnonaikadhaa shulo divyahaatakamanditah, vyashheyat mahollekeva raamabaanaardito bhuvi/ That Parama durlabha shula was the gift of Shankara himself and was truly astonishing even to look at as it was glittering like parama samhaaraastra. By even looking at the Shiva Shula, Deva samuhas were bewildered direction less. The Nishachara then circled the shula and with enormous anger shot it at Shri Rama. Then Shri Rama with adriotness and unusaul presence of mind tore off the shula to pieces and fell down to earth.Tacchhulam nihatam drushtaa raamenaa kishtakarmanaa saadhu saadviti bhutaana vyaaharanti nabhogataah/ Tam drushtavaa nikatam shulam makaraaksho nishaacharaah mushtimudyunmy kaakutstham tishtha tishthoti chaabraveet/ sa tam drushtaa patantam tu prahasya Raghunandanah, paavakaastram tato Raamah sandhagdhe tu sharaasane/ Then the sky bound devaasa appreciated with astonishing precision. Then the Rakshasa Veera shouted on Rama!: ‘Arre, Rama! Wait and stand!’ Shri Rama smilingly aimed at his dhanush and set it with ‘agneyaastra mantra’ and released as Makaraaksha’s heart which was hit into bits and pieces.tenaastreana hatam rakshah kaakusthena sadaa rane, sancchhinna hridayam tatra papaatacha mamaracha/ drushtaa te raaksasaah sarve makaraakshya paatanam, lankaameva pradhaavanta Raamabaanabhayaarditaah/ There after the Rakshasa hero fell down dead and the Rakshasaas fled away back to Lankapuri. That indeed was the death of Khara Putra Makaraaksha which made Daasharatha putra Rama’s yet another smile of relief.

As instructed by Ravana, Indrajit invoked abhichaara yagjna and with antardhana shakti tormented Rama Lakshmanas, but Rama warned Lakshmana of brahmastra yet the latter made a ‘shapatha’ to kill Indrajit.

As having heard that Shri Rama killed Maha Rakshasa Makaraksha too, Ravana was enraged grinding his teeth and called for his famed son Indrajit as the latter under his father's instructions to some how destroy Shri Rama proceeded to the yajna shaala and performed agni sthaapana and initiated a maha yajna, apparently of 'abhicharika' nature. As Indrajit wore blood red vastras while performing the 'havan', even the rakshasa streees were frightened. Wearing his shastra astras too, he sat in kushaagraas with big sized 'samidhas' or wooden sticks, wearing blood red clothes he initiated igniting the homaagni as he felt vijaya sanketas. pradakṣiṇāvartaśikhas taptahātakasaṁnibhaḥ, havis tat pratijagrāha pāvakaḥ svayam utthitah/ hutvāgniṁ tarpayitvātha devadānavarākṣasāṇ, āruroha rathaśreṣṭhaṁ antardhānagataṁ śubham/ sa vājibhiś caturbhis tu bāṇaiś ca niśitair yutaḥ, āropitamahācāpaḥ śuśubhe syandanottame/ After performing pradakshinas, Indrajit then offered the havishaanna to Agni Deva who himself accepted the same. As he attained the power of the aahuti to Agni, the abhichaarika sambandhi Devata- Daabava- Rakshasaas were contented and then he alighted his chariot. The radha dhwaaja was the looking like the 'prajjvalita agni jvaalaas'. Then having left he proceeded to the Nirruti Devataa and reciting sambandhi mantraas performed aahutis to agni to refresen his antardhahana shakti and decided to exterminate Rama Lakshmanas and dispppeared. Then as inspired by Ravana he rached the battle ground with his dhanur baanaas and rained baana varsha on them as from nowhere. Then both Rama Lakshmanas quickly noticing the directions from where the arrows were originated, had responded instantaneously. Then Indrajit released his arrows from all the directions as the skyline havingh been filled up in dasa dishas got darker and darker. Then Dasharadha Kumaras were hurt as the ingress of the baana varshas became invisible. nāśya veda gatiṁ kaś cin na ca rūpaṁ dhanuḥ śarāṇ, na cānyad viditaṁ kiṁ cit sūryasyevābhraṣaṁplave/ tena viddhāś ca harayo nihatāś ca gatāśavaḥ, babhūvuḥ śataśas tatra patitā dharaṇītale/ lakṣmaṇas tu saṁkruddho bhrātaraṁ vākyaṁ abravīt, brāhmaṇaṁ astraṁ prayokṣyāmi vadhārthaṁ sarvaraḥśaśaṁ/ Indrajit's vegapurva gati, rupa, dhanush and baana was indeed perplexing. Then in the process thousands of vaanaras were getting hurt and killed. Then Lakashmana suggested Sri Rama to utilise his brahmastra and kill all the rakshasaas in one shot, but then Rama disagreed as that would be against the very principle of rakshasa nirmulana all together. Rama stated further to Lakshmana as follows: ayudhyamānaṁ pracchannaṁ prāṇjalim śaraṇāgatam, palāyantaṁ pramattaṁ vā na tvaṁ hantum ihārhasi/ asyaiva tu vadhe yatnaṁ kariṣyāvo mahābala., ādeḥśyāvo mahāvegāṇ astraṇ āśīviṣopamāṇ/ tam enaṁ māyinaṁ kṣudraṁ antarahitaṛathaṁ balāt, rākṣasaṁ nihaṇiṣyanti dṛṣṭvā vānarayūthapāḥ/ Maha bahu Lakshmana! Dharma shastras had repeatedly pronounced that in any battle when somebody hided himself, or not prepared for a fight, or would seek 'sharanya', then such a warrior ought not be worthy of being killed. But don't you get worried. I should certainly devastate Indrajit all by my self. Let us therefore explore other powerful astras. This maayaavi rakshasa is a ‘neecha duratma’ hiding himself in a maya ratha and with mayashakti and indeed he ought to be killed some how by our astra prayogas. yady eṣa bhūmim viśate divaṁ vā; rasātalaṁ vāpi nabhastalaṁ vā, evaṁ nigūḍho 'pi mamāstradagdhah; patiṣyate bhūmitale gatāsuḥ/ity evaṁ uktvā vacanaṁ mahātmā; raghupravīraḥ plavagarṣabhair vṛtaḥ, vadhāya raudrasya nṛśamsakarmanas; tadā mahātmā tvaritaṁ nirīkṣate/ May prithvi me destroyed, swarga be swept off, rasatala be sunk or akaasha be disappered yet I should most certainly have Indrajit dropped to dust. Thus Shri Rama made a veera pratigjna before the entire vaanara bhallukaas.

Having realised why Shri Rama prevented Lakshmana not to resort to brahmasatra to destroy entire Rakshasa generation and of his unique pratigjna to kill him come what at any cost, Indrajit retreated to Lankapuri. On hearing what all transpired after Indrajit's maya yuddha on Rama Lakshmanas and its sequel, Ranasura got furious and as such Indrajit along with considerable rakshasa sena went back to the battle ground once again. Then he created a Maya Sita Devi and made her seated in the chariot. Vaanara veeraas headed by Hanuman along with a huge parvata shikhara which was most difficult to lift. Hanuman then noticed the Maya Sita Devi with the same kind of 'malina vastras' and kept on staring at her and truly felt that indeed she was Devi Sita herself seated being 'shoka peedita, maha deena and ananda shunya'. Then Hanuman wondered as to what indeed was Indrajit's objective might be. Then realising that Hanuman was staring at her, Indrajit pulled off her long 'sheersha keshas' in to his mighty hands as she was shouting 'haa Rama, haa Rama' repeatedly. Hanuman was moved at the scene and shouted at Indrajit: 'Duratma! You are really worthy of killing mercilessly as your retarded mentality demands quick retribution. [Stree hatya, Bhruna / Shishu hatya, Brahmana hatya, Go hatya and Guru hatya / Guru Bharya Gamana are stated to be the top of the list of Pancha Maha Patakas] As Hanuman stated likewise in disgust and desperation, Indrajit never bothered to what all Hanuman shouted at and proceeded right into the thickness of the vaanara sena who were all alarmed and addressed Hanuman tauntingly: sugrīvas tvaṁ ca rāmaś ca yannimittam ihāgatāḥ, tām haniṣyāmi vaidehīm adyaiva tava paśyataḥ/ imām hatvā tato rāmaṁ lakṣmaṇaṁ tvām ca vānara, sugrīvaṁ ca vadhiṣyāmi taṁ cānāryaṁ vibhīṣaṇaṁ/ na hantavyāḥ striyaś ceti yad bravīṣi plavaṅgama, pīḍā karam amitrāṇām yat syāt kartavyam eta tat/ Vaanara! As Hanuman witnessed Sita Devi killed, Vanara sena was ghastr and Humuman had intitially pacified the vanara sena and take ro revenge but later agreed for temporary withdrawal and to inform Rama Sugrivaas.

All the same the rakshasas jumped off yet with enormous fear. Then the vaanara yoddhhas too commenced hurling parvata boulderess on Indrajit as a frightful follow up the example of Hanuman. In return the infuriated Indrajit took to 'baana varsha' on those very vanara sreshthas. Then inspired by Indrajit, Rakshasaas too retaliated with their astra shastras. The tempo of the mutual battle became too severe that countless vaanara yoddhhas were getting severely killed. Then Hanuman realised that the severity of vaanara sena was losing their grip as Indrajit became too severe and aggressive as he showed off the false euphoria of having killed Devi among the jubilated rakshasaas. tyaktvā prāṇān viceṣṭanto rāma priyacikīrṣavaḥ, yannimittam hi yudhyāmo hatā sā janakātmajā/ imam artham hi vijñāpya rāmaṁ sugrīvam eva ca, tau yat pratividhāsyete tat kariṣyāmahe vayam/ ity uktvā vānaraśreṣṭho vāraṇa sarvavānarān, śanaiḥ śanair asaṁtrastaḥ sabalaḥ sa nyavartata / Then Hanuman suggested to call off the attack for the time being and stated: Brother Vanarasa! As as he heard of Devi Sita's killing, Rama swooned down and Lakshmana did extensive vishleshana of dharmaadharma and sought to revive him, asserting Indrajit's justified killing too soon.

As I had left for the battle ground along with several vaanara veeraas, then we encounterd Ravana Kumara Indrajit and by his chariot Devi Sita too was seen and the duratma smashed her to death with his sword even as we were all witnessing the horror. It is in that terrible context, we were all truly perplexed and baffled and are hence returning to you. No sooner Rama heard the news than he swooned down senseless. Devatulya Raghunadha collapsed unconscious, the entire Vaanara sena surrounded Shri Rama and started 'sprinkling sugandha jala' on his body as if dahana karma was being initiated! Noticing as his elder brother's situation, Lakshmana broke out crying away truly non plussed. He started weeping as seated with his shoulders knelt down: 'Arya! You are always lifelong true 'jitendriya' yet your 'dharmaatva' and undreamt of bravery would appear wasteful. It appears that the fruitfulness of happy living of sthaavara jangamas including human beings or pashu pakshis seems certainly not to 'dharmaacharana.' In other words dharma appears irrelevant to happy living! This as now amply proved that dharma of Shri Rama's present state of affairs is inspite of dharma. After all Ravana is ever happy and joyful in life notwithstanding his open 'adharmaacharana' and hence only those who keep dharma suffer most. If only contentment of happy life appears to be irrelevant dharma adharmaas. But in normal like it is amply proven that persons of blatant and irresponsible daily life are successful while those who are always stuck to principles are absolute failures in life.' Then Lakshmana addressed Shri Rama: vadhyante pāpakarmāṇo yady adharmeṇa rāghava, vadhakarmahato dharmah sa hataḥ kam vadhiṣyati/ Raghunandana! If a paapaachari purusha practices blatant adharma, then out of three fourths of his life he or she should be happy and if the end of life might get uptooted, but common sense states that one is dead in the long run any how! Otherwise, if a 'jeeva' gets killed my karma vishesha, then that killing should be due to that very jeeva had perpetrated in this or previous life. If there is no angle of 'prateekara', then how a wanton killing is possible. Thus my confirmed view states that only a timid, asamartha, and despicable person could ever had done this kind of atrocity. Arthasamśrito

Vibhishana spelt out Ravana's insane desire for Devi Sita that he could ever imagine her being killed and Indrajit fooled Hanuman and vaanaras of Maya Sita but attack Indrajit's abhichhara yagna instantly.

As Lakshmana having made a detailed assessment of ‘dhadmaadharma vichakshana’ and sought to retrieve Rama from his senselessness by asserting Indrajit’s killing all by himself, Vibhishana having got the vaanara yoddhaas in readiness had arrived. He saw that a big group of vanara shreshthas were surrounding Lakshmana while Rama was lying senseless. Lakshmana was on a state of assuaging Rama and stating dharmaadharma crying away. That was the time when Rama appeared to have regained consciousness, got up and said as to what had happened. Then Lakshmana looked at Vibhishana and Sugriva too and replied: ‘Soumya! Hanuman informed you that Indrajit slashed Devi Sita and on hearing that you fell down unconscious thereafter. Then Vibhishana intervened and said: Maha Raja! As Hanuman had thus informed I still feel that it could never be so. I am indeed aware that Ravana was no doubt head over heels obsessed with Devi Sita but could never allow Indrajit could ever dared to have done so. I had on several occasions requested Ravana to leave Devi Sita but never agreed. Indeed no purusha could ever win over a maha pativrata like Devi Sita by ‘saama- daana- bheda prayatnas’ but only by a unique battle like this. Maha Baaho Shri Rama! Rakshasa Indrajit must have taken advantage of Vaanara Sammoha, and must have presented a Maya Sita and killed her and most certainly but never otherwise. Right now, Indrajit had gone to Nikumbhila Mandira and would be preparing for an ‘abhichaara homaagjana’ and along with Ravana’s ‘samyoga’ would soon become truly invincible even my Devas and Devendra too. Indrajit must have realised that if his attention might get diverted to attacks by vaanaraas and hence left off suddenly disappeared and retreated to the Nikumbhila. Nara shreshtha, do therefore get rid of this most unrealistic image of Indrajit’s having killed Maya Sita. But right now instruct Lakshmana accompanied by me and competent vaanara shreshthas to attack Indrajit disallowing him to perform the abhichaarika homa. Lakshmana’s ‘baana teevrata’ and unimaginable precision should prove to severe Indrajit’s blood cells and suck off his hot and arrogant blood flows. Maha Baho Shri Rama! Now kindly instruct the shubha lakshmana Lakshmana to lead us like Mahendra the Vajradhari atonce.

As Vibhishana hastened Shri Rama to instruct Lakshmana to attack Indrajit at Nikumbhila Mandira, the latter was yet to recover from the shock of Sita's killing. Hanuman then intervened and asked Vibhishana to please annotate what he had meant. Vibhishana then again stressed once again to Shri Rama : Kindly never get upset this make believe Maya Sita but am re-emphasising again repeatedly to instruct Lakshmana as suggested. raghunandana vakṣyāmi śrūyatām me hitam vacaḥ, sādhu ayam yātu saumitrir balena mahatā vṛtaḥ, nikumbhilāyām saṁprāpya hantum rāvaṇim āhave/ dhanurmaṇḍalanirmuktair āśviṣaviṣopamaiḥ, śarair hantum maheṣvāso rāvaṇim samitiṁjayaḥ/ tena vīreṇa tapasā varadānāt svayambhutaḥ, astram brahmaśiraḥ prāptam kāmagāś ca turamgamāḥ/ Raghunandana! Kindly take my words carefully as I am asserting repeatedly in our own interest; as Indrajit had nearly approached Nikumbhila Mandira, Sumitra Kumara be accompanied by vanara veeraas and attack Ravana putra at once. Let Maha dhanurdhara Lakshmana with his mandalaakaara dhanush release 'visha purita sarpatulya bhayanaka baana varshas' and devastate Indrajit but this action be taken up well before the ' kratu samapta'. nikumbhilām asaṁprāptam ahutāgniṁ ca yo ripuḥ, tvām ātatāyinaṁ hanyād indraśatro sa te vadhaḥ, ity evam vihito rājan vadhas tasyaiva dhīmataḥ/ vadhāyendrajito rāma taṁ diśasva mahābalaṁ, hate tasmin hataṁ viddhi rāvaṇam sasuhṛjjanam/ Brahma blessed Indrajit asserting that under the 'nikubkha naamaka vata vriksha' he should complete the 'havana sambandhi karya krama', lest there would be the certain killing by his opponent. That is why Shri Rama: I am once again requesting you to let Lakshmana kill Indrajit most uegently' As Vibhishana reasserted repeatedly Shri Rama replied! ' Satyaparakrami Vibhishana! I am now realising that bhayankaara rakshas's 'maaya sita prayoga' by now. He is a Brahmastra jnaata, maayaavi and maha balavan who made devaas like varuna too flustered'. Then Rama instructed Lakshmana to let the vanara pramukha sena of Sugriva too including Hanuman, Riksha Raja Jambavan and such others and kill mayavi Indrajit for ever'. He further advised Vibhishana to let Lakshmana be constantly advised regarding the maya pravritti of Indrajit and be with Lakshmana along with his faithful ministers. Then Lakshmana touched Shri Rama's feet and proceeded towards the Nishkumbhila Mandira along with Vibhishana and followed by Hamuman Jambavan Vaanara bhalluka veeraas..

On arrival at the Nikumbhila, Vaanara Rakshasa battle followed -Hanuman challenged Indrajit for malla yuddha, Indrajit raised his dhanur banaas against Hanuman, but Lakshmana raised his dhanush instead.

Having arrived at the Nikumbhila Mandir, Vibhishana pointed at the mayavi Indrajit to Lakshmana and asked him to quickly release his arrows well before the havana sampurnata and so did Lakshmana as Indrajit was truly taken aback and so were the Rakshasas. Vanara yoddhas started hurling vrikshas and boulderes as rakshasaas relipied with their 'ayudhas'. Ravana Kumars was highly enraged since the attack was just at the close of the homa karya and even with the clothes meant for purpose had to perforce alight in his chariot with his bhayankara dhanush baanaas with red eyes like agni jwaalaas. Menwhile Hanuman had swifly attacked the rakshasas who too were hurling their arrows and ayudhas like shulas, shaktis, pattishas, parighas and so on. Hanuman then came into his true form chasing the rakshasaas and devastating by his jumpings and flyings. Then realising this, Indrajit instructed his saradhi to reach him to Hanuman and launched heavy tosses of arrows, parighas and shulaas. Then Panana Kumara challenged Indrajit: tāni śastrāṇi ghorāṇi pratigrhya sa mārutiḥ, roṣeṇa mahatāviṣo vākyam cedam uvāca ha/ yudhyasva yadi śūro 'si rāvaṇātmaja durmate, vāyuputraṁ samāsādyā na jīvan pratiyāsyasi/ bāhubhyām samprayudhyasva yadi me dvandvam āhave, vegam sahasva durbuddhe tatas tvaṃ rakṣasāṃ varaḥ/He roared at Indrajit asserting: ‘Durbuddhi Ravana Kumara! If you imagine yourself as a ‘shura veera’ do try me for a ‘malla yuddha’ and make sure if you might survive from this Vayu Putra. Durmati! If you could survive still, then you might be considered as a true raakshasa veera. hanūmantam jighāmsantam samudyataśarāsanam, rāvaṇātmajam ācaṣṭe lakṣmaṇāya vibhīṣaṇaḥ/ yas tu vāsavanirjetā rāvaṇasyātmasaṃbhavaḥ, sa eṣa ratham āsthāya hanūmantam jighāmsati/ tam apratima - saṃsthānaiḥ śaraiḥ śatruvidāraṇaiḥ, jīvitāntakarair ghoraiḥ saumitre rāvaṇim jahi/ ity evam uktas tu tadā mahātmā; vibhīṣaṇenārivibhīṣaṇena, dadarśa tam parvatasaṃnikāśam; rathasthitam bhīmabalam durāsadam/Then Indrajit desired to eliminate Vaayu Putra and raised his dhanur baanaas. That precisely the time when Vibhishana addressed Lakshmana : Sumitra Kumara! Are you noting that instead of accepting Hanuman’s challenge for malla yuddha Indrajit raised his ‘dhanur baanaas’. This is the time when you should divert Indrajit’s course of his arrows against Hanuman to you. Thus counselled, Lakshmana noticed what Indrajit was up to.

Indrajit heckles Vibhishana for discarding his ‘swadhama’ to join Rama but Vibhishana details of his Poulastya ancestry, highlights Ravana’s ‘duraachaaras’ and to get ready to be soon killed by Lakshmana!

Vibhishana then showed the Maha Barakata Vriksha or the massive Arjun Tree under which Indrajit regularly performed his ‘karmanushthaana’ and should all the worship material ‘puja saamagri’ there, and did ‘bhuta bali’ before attacking the enemies. That is why Rakshasaas create hallucinations by the ‘abhichaarika homa prakriyas’. Thus by disappearing effects rakshasaas could comfortably devastate the vaanara sena.

As Indrajit felt rather ashamed by what all Vibhishana explained point by point as to why he left his father essentially highlighting Ravana's evil mentality of para dhana-para stree vyaamoha, he was speechless for a while, yet having recovered alerted rakshasas and got ready himself to attack. He addressed vaanara veeras and Lakshmana Vibhishanas too; he pronounced: ' Shatru sena! Now I am ready to display my true image of 'baana varsha', and 'shastra nipunata' of shula-shakti-rushti-tomaras and have arrived all of you for Yama loka yatra. Lakshmana! Do recall as to how I made you and Rama got fainted by naagastra, even as I had made a veera samhara of the title holder so called maha vaanara champions! Yet again both you and Rama were fainted off and Hanuman had to fetch herbal medicines to revive. Now, get ready for yama loka darshana!' Then Lakshmana replied: ' Nishaachara! Indeed you might have succeeded by your maaya yuddha in the past but your tricks should not surely be trusted once again as you seem to be in your own make believe hallucination right now as the 'taskaraacharita maana vidhaana' or of the evil way that robbers and bandits follow. Now pull up your courage to face to face battle as now I am in the 'vana varsha maarga' right now. Yet the non stop forceful rains of arrows as released by Indrajit were like of fully poisoned cobras and hissed at the time hitting Lakshmana's body Parts were wounded. Then Indrajit shouted at Lakshmana: 'Sumitra kumara! These arrows are samples such as could destroy several groups of kites, owls and other various birds. But Kshatraadhama-parama durbuddhi Rama and anaarya Rama bhakta you are surely killed by me today. You would be able to see for your self as to how Rama would be killed by me'. As Indrajit bragged on and on, Lakshmana replied: ' Cruel and evil minded Rakshasa! Put a stop to your blabberings and indiscreet chatters . Do it if you could and prove it in action as you seem to love your self praises.' So saying, Lakshmana cracked five arrows in a sequel by drawing them right up to his ears and released them as the Rakshasa's chest was hurt grievously as the latter was stumbled and tottered. Indrajit after a while sought to give it back and a 'maha sangrama' was initiated. Both were no doubt, veera paraakramis, bala sampannaas, vikrama shalis, parama durjaya tejasvis. Just as nava grahas were released and pralaya kaala was initiated, and like Indra and Vritrasura were hitting each other, both Lakshmana and Indrajit were facing each other like two ferocious 'simha dwandva'. tataḥ śramaṁ dāśarathih saṁdhāyāmitrakarṣanaḥ, sasarja rākṣasendrāya kruddhaḥ sarpa iva śvasan/ tasya jyātalanirghoṣaṁ sa śrutvā rāvaṇātmajaḥ, vivarṇavadano bhūtvā lakṣmaṇam samudaikṣata/ taṁ viṣaṇṇamukhaṁ dṛṣtvā rākṣasaṁ rāvaṇātmajam, saumitriṁ yuddhasamaktaṁ pratyuvāca vibhīṣaṇaḥ/ Then Dasharatha Nandana Lakshmana hissing like a 'maha sarpa' fixed numberless arrows in his might dhanush and released on Indrajit. As the 'dhanus thankaara dhvani' of Lakshmana was truly reverberating, Indrajit's face was rather looking lost and stared at the face of Lakshmana. Then Vibhishana alerted Lakshmana and addressed him: nimittāny anupaśyāmi yāny asmin rāvaṇātmaje, tvaya tena mahābāho bhagna eṣa na saṁśayaḥ/ tataḥ saṁdhāya saumitriḥ śarāṇ agnīśikhopamān, mumoca niśitāms tasmai sarvān iva viṣolbaṇān/ śakrāśanisamasparśair lakṣmaṇenāhataḥ śaraiḥ, muhūrtam abhavan mūḍhaḥ sarvasamkṣubhitendriyaḥ/ ' Maha baaho Lakshmana! Right now Indrajit's face cut appears rather stale and with lesser enthusiasm and this should be the opportune time to finish him off. Then Sumitrakumara like a 'visha dhara sarpa' smashed a Maha Vihvala Baana'. That arrow was like a 'vajra ghaata' hurt Indrajit and fell down swooned for a while but recovered soon enough. upalabhya muhūrtena samjñāṁ pratyāgatendriyaḥ, dadarśāvasthitam vīraṁ vīro daśarathātmajam/ so 'bhicakrāma saumitriṁ roṣāt samraktalocanaḥ, abravīc cainam āsādyā punaḥ sa paruṣaṁ vacaḥ/ kiṁ na smarasi tad yuddhe prathame matparākramam, nibaddhas tvaṁ saha bhrātrā yadā yudhi viceṣṭase/ As Indrajit stood up firm again, he addressed Lakshmana: ‘ Sumitra Kumara! You are seeking to display your parakrama now, but what happened when both you and Rama were tied together with senselessness for days and nights! Now are you planning a permanent residence in yamaloka!’ So asserting the Rakshasa released seven potent arrows and hurt Lakshmana and simultaneously attacked on Hanumt nearby. Then Lakshmana smiled and said ‘ this is nothing’. Then Lakshmana addressed Indrajit: ‘ Nishaachara! You are not attacking on the ‘rana bhumi’ like a shura veera. Your baana prahasas are rather weak and listless. These are mild and casual. Having stated thus, Lakshmana released fierce ‘baana parampara’ when Indrajit’s kavacha gave way as though the sparkling nakshatra mandali fell down to earth as the Rakshas’s blood from his chest dripped down. In turn, the Rakshasa released thousand arrows like a gushing stream and Lakshmana too was hurt with wounds. Then followed both the Veeras continued reciting astra mantras and releasing mutual ups and downs for very long time yet never tired as both were vying together for victory. vyapetadoṣam asyantau laghucitraṁ ca suṣṭhu ca, ubhau tu tumulaṁ ghoram cakratur nararākṣasau/ tayoḥ prṭhakprṭhag bhīmaḥ śūśruve talanisvanah, sughorayor niṣṭanator gagane meghayor iva/ te gātrayor nipatitā rukmapuṅkhāḥ śarā yudhi, asṛgdigdā viniṣpetur viviśur dharaṇītalam/ The manushya- rakshasa duo were mutually attacking with dexterity, long standing experience and valour with faultless precision and tirelessness. As they release the arrows, each time there were ear piercing dhvani-pratidhwanis as the shrota chakshsha vaanara-rakshasaas were getting flustered and unnerved. As both the ranottama veeraas were attacking each other each time, the white and blue combine of the clouds on the high sky were looking wavery. As the golden coloured arrow flashes of mutual ‘baana pravaahhas’ were often compared to be resulting in ‘rakta pravaahaas’. sa babhūva raṇe ghoras tayoḥ bāṇamayaś cayaḥ, agnibhyām iva dīptābhyām satre kuśamayaś cayaḥ/ Thus was the bhayankara yuddha as the mutual baana pravaahaas were resulting in jwaalaas of garhapathya aahananeeyaadi panchaagnis.

[Vishleshana on Panchaagnis:

The Panchagnis are Garhyapatya Agni for cooking in homes-Aavahaniya to invoke Surya Deva- Dakshinagni or Atmospheric Agni in the form of Lightnings or that which is invoked in Dakshina disha, Saabya and Avaastya for Vedic Purposes; Agnis various Synonyms include Anala, Bhuriteja, Chitra bhanu, Havya vahana, Hutaashana, Jaateveda, Jwala, Parthiva, Paavaka, Plavanga, Rudra garva, Hiranya krita, Shikhee, Vaishwanara, Vibhavas and so on; Sapta Jihvas or tongues of Agni are stated to be Hiranya, Kanaka, Rakta, Arakta, Suprabha, Bahurupa, Sattee; another version is Vishwa murti, Sphalini, Dhumavarna, Manojava, Lohitasya, Karaalasya and Kaali; the Agni Swarupas for performing offerings are as follows viz. for Nitya Karma the type of Agni is called Prabha-Pushpa homa / Bahurupa-Anna and Kheera homa / Krishna Agni- Ikshu homa/ Paraaga-Padm homa/ Suvarna or Lohita-Bilwa homa /Shweta-Tila homa/ Dhumni-Kaashtha or wooden pieces of various trees / Karaalika-Pitru homa/Lohitasya and Deva homa /Manojava; (Narada-Markandeya-Bhavishya Puranas)

Katha Upanishad while detailing the Five Fires emphasises the deeds of virtue, need for control of body organs and senses to seek the identity of inner Consciousness and the Supreme. Ritam pibantau sukrutasya lokeguhaam pravishtau parame paraadhye, Chaayaa tapau brahmavido vadanti panchaagnayo ye chatrinaachiketaah/ (Both the Self and the Supreme are stated to be encased in the secret cavity of one’s own heart as the two shades of illumination: one who enjoys of good ‘Karma’ or the fruits of acts of virtue and another the Supreme himself! Those seekers worship the Panchaagnis or Five Fires viz. Garhapatya, Aahavaneeya, Dakshinaagni, Sabhya and Aavasatya representing Heaven, Cloud, Earth, Man and Woman, as also perform the Naachiketa Sacrifice thrice; they also enjoy the resultant fruits of deeds. These two kinds of entities who do or do not do so are well defined: those who drink the juice of Truth as flown from ‘Sukruta’ or works of virtue and the others who do not; these are the ‘chhatraiah yaanti’ or those distinguished under the regal symbols of Umbrellas! Now, the Supreme is encased in the heart’s cavity as also as Omnipresent all over the length and breadth of the Universe; that is ‘Parame paraardhe’ or the Uniqueness Beyond!]

They both were engaged with hit-rehit and hit again and again bhayankara maha yuddha yet never showing any sign of being tired yet with the decisiveness of one-upmanship. atha samarapariśramaṁ nihantum; samaramukheṣv ajitasya lakṣmaṇasya, priyahitam upapādayan mahaujāḥ; samaram upetya vibhīṣaṇo ‘vatasthe/ As Indrajit-Lakshmana battle of mutual determination was still inconclusive, Vibhishana appeared in front of the maha yoddhas and stood firm.

As Indrajit and Lakshmanas were engaged in an never ending warfare like two mad and enraged elephant kings , Vibhishana with his massive dhanush appeared on the scene and initiated arrow rains on the rakshasa opponents. Vibhishana's four followers too entered the attack. Then he addressed vanara veeraas and asserted : 'You may leave Indrajit for me and do concentrate on the rakshasa opponents. You are aware that gigantic rakshasaas like Prahasta, Nikumbha, Kumbhakarna, Kumbha Nishachara, Dhumraaksa were all killed. Jambumali, Mahamaali, Teekshna vega, Ashaniprabha, Suptajhna, Yagnakopa, Vajradamshttra, Samhlaadi, Vikara, Arighna, Tapan, Manda, Praghosa, Prajangha, Jangha, Agniketu, Rashmikutu, Vidhujjihva, Dvijihva, Suryashatru, Akampanba, Supaarshva, Nishachara Chakramaali, Kampana and the maha rakshasa veeraas Devantaka and Narantaka were all killed by vaanara yoddhas like you. Now rather insignificant rakshasaas are here and there and therefore you may quickly pull them down too to dust. Now, Ravana Putra is here but worry not, as I am his father's brother and for the sake of Ramachandra I am prepared to perform 'tilanjali' for the nephew. My attempt to kill the nephew needs to suppress my tears, and Vera Lakshmana would take care of that duraachari any way. Vaanara Veeras, now my appeal to you would me to straighten your tails and devastate the remnant rakshasaas too to make a clean slate as it were. Then the vaanara bhalluka soldiers got readied with boulders and nakha dantas started attacking the already demoralised rakshasas who too however taken to astra shastraayudhas especially the pattishas, parighas, dandaas and tomaras. So far Hanuman was hitherto carrying Lakshmana on his shoulders but now having got him down, joined the Vanara sena resorted to rakshasa samhara with rage and vengeance. In course of time, Indrajit by his chariot confronted Lakshmana as both resumed electrified 'baana varsha' mutually. tau prayuddhau tadā vīrau mṛdhe lakṣmaṇarākṣasau, śaraughān abhivarṣantau jaghnatus tau parasparam/ abhīkṣṇam antardadhatuḥ śarajālair mahābalau, candrādityāv ivoṣṇānte yathā meghais tarasvinau/ na hy ādānaṁ na saṁdhānaṁ dhanuṣo vā parigrahaḥ, na vipramokṣo bāṇānāṁ na vikarṣo na vighrahaḥ/ na muṣṭipratisaṁdhānaṁ na lakṣyapratipādanam, adrīyata tayos tatra yudhyatoḥ pāṇilāghavāt/ Lakshmana and Indrajit had then speeded up hitting at each other and both were getting hit on their body parts bruising them mutually. Both were getting severe with velocity as though a fisherman would spread fast his net wide to catch the prized fish, and like a monsoon time Surya Chandras are covered by black clouds. Their rapid movements of both the mighty hands and their tight grips of pulling up arrows from their bows , fixing them into the grooves by their mighty hands and fingers, holding them in their grips, drawing the arrows right up to their ears, divisioning the arrows for release, aiming them at the targets with precision and accuracy, and the speed and might in releasing them in rapid flows are of scientific art of outstanding ability and courage which are neither imagined, let alone even visible. cāpavegapramuktaiś ca bāṇajālaiḥ samantataḥ, antarikṣe 'bhisamchanne na rūpāṇi cakāṣire, tamasā pihitaṁ sarvaṁ āsīd bhīmatarāṁ mahat/ na tadānīm vavau vāyur na jajvāla ca pāvakaḥ, svastyas tu lokebhya iti jajalpaś ca maharṣayaḥ, saṁpetuś cātra saṁprāptā gandharvāḥ saha cāraṇaiḥ/ atha rākṣasasimhasya kṛṣṇān kanakabhūṣaṇān, śaraiś caturbhiḥ saumitrir vivyādha caturo hayān/ As the baana varsha would get released with speed and acceleration the 'lakshaya vedhana' or the penetration on to the target would get totally invisible and imperceptible. At that time, the sky was filled up with the ‘baanaa praavaahaas’ and frightening darkness was noticed all over. That was also the Sunset time and ‘maamsa bhashi bhayankara jantu akrodanaas’ added to the mystification when ‘vaayu chalana and agni prajjvalana’ appeared to have been disabled. That was the time when Lakshmana released four piercing arrows which instantly hit and shattered the horses of Indrajit’s chariot. tato 'pareṇa bhallena sūtasya vicariṣyataḥ, lāghavād rāghavaḥ śrīmāñ śiraḥ kāyād apāharat/ nihataṃ sārathīm dṛṣtvā samare rāvaṇātmajaḥ, prajahau samaroddharṣaṃ viṣaṇṇaḥ sa babhūva ha/ viṣaṇṇavadanaṃ dṛṣtvā rākṣasaṃ hariyūthapāḥ, tataḥ paramasaṃhṛṣṭo lakṣmaṇaṃ cābhyapūjayan/ Then Lakshmana quickly released one more well winged and piercing ‘vajra samaana baana’ which hit the charioteer’s head. Then Indrajit got disillusioned and his face was darkened sans that massive enthusiasm and gustow that he displayed that far. All the same, Mandodari Kumara Indrajit kept the horses controlled and pitched his arrows, as the onlookers were highly appreciative of his steadfastness. Yet Indrajit’s determination was merely a passive show while Vaanara Veeraas had openly praised Lakshmana’s grit. tataḥ pramāthī śarabho rabhaso gandhamādanaḥ, amṛṣyamānās catvāraś cakrur vegam hariśvarāḥ/ te cāsya hayamukhyeṣu tūrṇam utpatya vānarāḥ, caturṣu sumahāvīryā nipetur bhīmavikramāḥ/ Then four vaanara veeras viz. Neither with the chariot, nor the chrioteer and not even the horses, Indrajit was fuming furiously and got readied to attack Lakshmana with 'vijaya kaanksha'. They attacked again as both kept on inflicting mutual injuries. Then Indrajit addressed Rakashaas stating that he would like to withdraw from the battle as there was darkness already and would not be able to see properly but would most certainly attack again, yet rakshasa veeraas should continue the battle all the same. Having thus excused himself returned to Lankapuri. But having gone back, the fraud Indrajit returned back soon enough having alighted in a fresh chariot, charioteer and set of robust horses. On noticing the return of Indrajit, Lakshmana-Vibhishana and the vaanara shreshtas were amazed and shocked at the return of the trickster Indrajit soon enough. Then even while entering the battle field, the Rakshasa commenced his 'baana varsha' killing vaanara sena as they all sought 'sharan' from Lakshmana. Raghu kula nandana Lakshmana then initiated his baana maha varsha fearlessly and decisiveness. He then started three each of arrows each time and lashed numberless rakshasas down to dust never to face again as either were dead or ran away. The same kind of three each of arrow lashings was accorded to Ravana Kumara too who was wounded gruesomely. But, having soon recovered, Lakshmana lashed at the head of the charioteer of Indrajit blown up yet the horses were so trained that they were least disturbed. The insistent Lakshmana kept on teasing the horses with further arrows and on learning of Lakshmana's intention, Indrajit released ten 'vajra tulya' arrows at Lakshmana which hit on Lakshmana's chest kavacha little realising that it was abhedya or indestructible. On recalling this, Indrajit released three ‘mantrika baanaas’ on Lakshmana’s forehead yet like having more or less having escaped their major impact, yet realising that the Rakshasa was seeking to keep tormenting first on his kavacha and now on his forehead, had atonce set his dhanush in perfect position and angle, let off five arrows which impaired the Rakshasaas ‘mukha mandala’. Thus both Lakshmana and Indrajit kept on releasing their respective ‘baana parampara’ hurting and damaging each other’s body parts, yet with their mental resolve and fortitude mutually. tau parasparam abhyetya sarvagātreṣu dhanvinau, ghorair vivyadhatur bāṇaiḥ kṛtabhāvāv ubhau jaye/ tasmai dṛḍhataram kruddho hatāśvāya vibhīṣaṇaḥ, vajrasparśasamān pañca sasarjorasi mārgaṇān/ te tasya kāyaṁ nirbhidyā rukmapuṅkhā nimittagāḥ, babhūvur lohitādighdā raktā iva mahoragāḥ/ Thus as both Lakshmana and Indrajit were battling like two ‘maha palaasha vrikshas’ causing mutual ‘anga bhangas’ with ‘bhayankara baana prahaaraas’, the Ravana Kumara released three ‘baana prahaaraas’ on Vibhishana standing beside Lakshmana and one each to select Vaanara Yuthapatis beside Lakshmana. The enraged Vibhishana lifted his ‘maha gada’ and killed the four horses still alive despite the erstwhile charioteer’s death my Lakshmana. As both the horses too were smashed down, the immobile Indrajit jumped off and made a daring attack on Vibhishana with his shaki aayudha but smartly enough the latter who was carrying his dhanush baanaas and released five arrows in a row in Indrajit’s broad chest as flows of blood emerged. sa piṭṛvyasya samkruddha indrajic charam ādade, uttamaṁ rakṣasāṁ madhye yamadattaṁ mahābalaḥ/ taṁ samīkṣya mahātejā maheṣuṁ tena saṁhitam, lakṣmaṇo ‘py ādade bāṇam anyam bhīmaparākramaḥ/ kubereṇa svayaṁ svapne yad dattam amitātmanā, durjayaṁ durviśahyaṁ ca sendrair api surāsuraiḥ/ tābhyāṁ tau dhanuṣi śreṣṭhe saṁhitau sāyakottamau, vikṛsyamāṇau vīrābhyāṁ bhṛśaṁ jajvalatuḥ śriyā/ On realising that his uncle got annoyed and got worked up in his ‘shakti prahara’, Indrajit picked up like Yama Raja and pulled out an irretrievable arrow while imultaneosly Lakshmana too fixed up another arrow which Digdevata Kubera himself blessed in a swapna to him as that specific baana was given by Kubera to Indra at a time of devaasura yuddha. Thus both Indrajit and Lakshmana chose their respective arrows of proven distinction as were released emitted agni jwaalas. tau bhāsayantāv ākāśam dhanurbhyāṁ viśikhau cyutau, mukhena mukham āhatya saṁnipetatur ojasā/ tau mahāgrahasamkāśāv anyonyaṁ saṁnipatya ca, saṁgrāme śatadhā yātau medinyāṁ vinipetatuḥ/ śarau pratihatau dṛṣṭvā tāv ubhau raṇamūrdhani, vrīḍito jātaroṣau ca lakṣmaṇendrajitāv ubhau/ susaṁrabdhas tu saumitir astraṁ vāruṇam ādade, raudraṁ mahedrajid yuddhe vyasṛjad yudhi viṣṭhitau/ As both the Veearas of Lakshmana and Indrajit shot off their respective ‘mahaastras’ there were flames of packed energy as the sky was extraordinarily luminous and their mutual interaction emitted repeated blasts as if two planets of the ‘navagraha shaktis’ were at logger heads thus releasing heavy smoke with all around suffocations on the battle ground. Eventually Sumitranandana Lakshmana was infuriated and fixed up ‘Vaarunastra’ and simultaneously Indrajit the ‘Roudrastra’ as both got pacified each other. tayoḥ sutumulaṁ yuddhaṁ sambabhūvādbhutopamam, gaganasthāni bhūtāni lakṣmaṇaṁ paryavārayan/ bhairavābhirute bhīme yuddhe vānararākṣasāṁ, bhūtair bahubhir ākāśam vismitair āvṛtaṁ babhau/ ṛṣayaḥ pitaro devā gandharvā garuḇoragāḥ, śatakratuṁ puraskṛtya rarakṣur lakṣmaṇaṁ raṇe/ athānyaṁ mārgaṇaśreṣṭhaṁ saṁdadhe rāvaṇānujaḥ, hutāśanasamasparśaṁ rāvaṇātmajadāruṇam/ Such was the ‘romaanchaka yuddha’ while all the sky borne celestial beings appeared to have got collected around Lakshmana for protection. At the same time, there were bhairava garjanas of both Vaanaras and Rakshasaas as the sky borne ‘praanis’ were staring amazed with awe and delght. Rishi- Pitra-Deva-Gandharva-Garuda-Naaga --- and Indra had all assembled to protect and Lakshmana at the yuddha bhumi with their respective energeies. There after, Lakshmana fixed another arrow on the dhanush which had the energy of ‘Ravanakumara videerna’. supatram anuvṛttāṅgaṁ suparvāṇaṁ saṁsthitam, suvarṇavikṛtaṁ vīraḥ śarīrāntakaraṁ śaram/ durāvāraṁ durviśahaṁ rākṣasānāṁ bhayāvaham, āśīviṣaviṣaprakhyāṁ devasaṁghaiḥ samarcitam/ yena śakro mahātejā dānavān ajayat prabhuḥ, purā devāsure yuddhe vīryavān harivāhanaḥ/ tad aindram astraṁ saumitriḥ saṁyugeṣv aparājitam, śaraśreṣṭhaṁ dhanuḥ śreṣṭhe naraśreṣṭho ‘bhisamdadhe/ saṁdhāyāmitradalanam vicakarṣa śarāsanam, sajyam āyamyā durdharśaḥ kālo lokakṣaye yathā/ saṁdhāya dhanuṣi śreṣṭhe vikarṣann idam abravīt, lakṣmīvāṁl lakṣmaṇo vākyam arthasādhakam ātmanaḥ/ dharmātmā satyasamdhaś ca rāmo dāśarathir yadi, pauruṣe cāpratidvandas tad enaṁ jahi rāvaṇim/ That outstanding ‘mantra suvarna baana’ was well rounded and excellently shaped, sturdy and potent with the capability of mincing body parts of the opponent, like the ‘vishadhara naaga raja’ which is always venerated by Deva Samuhaas. That historic ‘maha baana’ was once in the remote past utilised by the shakti shaali-maha tejasvi Mahendra to uproot the ‘vishala daanava veera maha samuha’. That historic arrow was named ‘Aindraastra’ which never before failed to yield the desired fruit of success of everlasting glory. While fixing the Aindrastra, Lakshmana declared: ‘ If only in the Trilokas there is a Maha Purusha of dharmatma, satya pratigya, purushardha samaana drishtidhara, Shri Rama’s stature, then I assert that this ‘Aindraastra’ should pierce to death of this Ravana Putra.

No sooner that the astra was released than Indrajit’s ‘shirastraana sahita deeptamaana mastaka viccheda shabda’ was resounded again and again. Thus Rakshasa Putra Indrajit’s shoulders were detached from his swollen head and crumbled with a reverberating sound, even as his blood flows were making fairly audible sounds. hata tu nipapātāsu dharanyām rāvaṇātmajaḥ, kavacī saśirastrāṇo vidhvastaḥ saśarāsanaḥ/ cukruṣus te tataḥ sarve vānarāḥ savibhīṣaṇāḥ, hṛṣyanto nihate tasmin devā vṛtravadhe yathā/ athāntarikṣe bhūtānām ṛṣṇām ca mahātmanām, abhijajñe ca saṁnādo gandharvāpsarasām api// Thus fell the massive body of Indrajit with his kavacha, shirastraana, dhanurbaana sahita. Like Vritrasura vadha was concluded by Devendra with his Vajraadha made of Maharshi Dadheeti’s backbone, Lakshmana had indeed succeeded Indrajit Vadha by the Aindraastra. Instantaneously, the harshanaadaas of Deva-Maharshi-Gandharva- Apsaraas were resounded repetitively. On learning of Indrajit’s death, Rakshasaas ran helter skelter leaving behind their astra shastras, pattisha-khadgaadis. The real vaanara chitta was unusually relieved of the loka kantaka rakshasas kumara and started off group singings and dances of Shri Rama Charita with blissful hearts and minds, especially in special reference as to how Indrajit was shattered.

As Lakshmana became a victorious hero in demolishing Indrajit, he along with Hanuman, Jambavan, Vibhishana and vaanarasheshtas ran to Shri Rama Sugrivaas. Facing his elder brother, Lakshmana touched Rama's feet as Indra would have done to Vamana Murti and stood with bent head. Then Vibhishana was overjoyed and declared with excitement: Shri Rama! Our hero Lakshmana destroyed Indrajit! Rama replied: Well done Lakshmana! Heartly congratulations as you had indeed preformed a very complicated task successfully. This is a very happy augury and surely indeed our victory is quite nearby. Then as Shri Rama complemented him thus, Lakshmana became bashful as Rama forced to be seated on his lap and embraced him with affectionate admiration. As Rama had drawn him rather forcefully, Lakshmana's body wounds were no doubt painful but that pain was indeed overcome with blissful encouragement. Shri Rama then addressed Lakshmana: kṛtam paramakalyāṇam karma duṣkarakāriṇā, niramitraḥ kṛto 'smy adya niryāsyati hi rāvaṇaḥ balavyūhena mahatā śrutvā putram nipātitaṁ/ tam putravadhasam̐taptam̐ niryāntam̐ rākṣasādhipam, balenāvṛtya mahatā nihaṇīṣyāmi durjayam/ Veera! You had indeed executed an impossible and praiseworthy feat successfully and truly trust that Ravana too would have been dead by this act of glory. As that duratma Indrajit was killed, Ravana's right hand should have been mutilated as he had always and literally been dependent on his support always. In this 'maha karya' the role of Viishana and Hanuman would appear to be substantial. Now the rattled up Ravana should necessarily be eager to forward all his sena and arrive at the battle. As being unable to bear the crisis of putra vadha when he would arrive here, it is my turn to devastate all of them. tvayā lakṣmaṇa nāthena sītā ca pṛthivī ca me., na duṣprāpā hate tv adya śakrajetari cāhave/ sa tam bhrātaram āśvāsya pāriṣvajya ca rāghavaḥ, rāmaḥ suṣeṇam muditaḥ samābhāṣyedam abravīt/ saśalyo 'yam mahāprājñāḥ saumitrir mitravatsalaḥ, yathā bhavati susvasthas tathā tvaṁ samupācara, viśalyaḥ kriyatām kṣipram saumitriḥ savibhīṣaṇaḥ/ kṛṣa vānarasainyānām śūrāṇām drumayodhinām, ye cānye 'tra ca yudhyantaḥ saśalyā vraṇinas tathā, te 'pi sarve prayatnena kriyantaṁ sukhinas tvayā/ Lakshmana! Indrajit had flustered even Indra and you have excelled Indrajit. As a rakshaka and sahayaka like you are with me, surely I should not only accomplish my darling Devi Sita anyway but the 'bhumandala maha saamrajya' too! Thus asserting to Lakshmana, Shri Rama called for Sushena the physician of Vaanaras and asked to remove the remains of arrows as also seek to apply herbal medicines on Lakshmana's body parts. Accordingly Sushana treated Lakshmana to heal as soon as possible. In fact Vishishana and other vaanaraas too assisted for the quickest healing of Lakshmana's body. Then Shri Rama, Vibhishana, Vanara Raja Sugriva, Riksha Raja Jambavan, Veera Hanuman, Angadaadi Vaanara Maha Veeraas gave a standing ovation and continued applause to Veera Sumitrakumara.

Totally forlorn with Indrajit's end by Lakshmana, Ravana'sura desired to kill Devi Sita the root cause of the yuddha, but Mantri Suparshva appealed not to kill Sita but instead kill Rama Lakshmanas instead.

After verifying the details of Lakshmana's action of killing Indrajit, the mantri mandali had conveyed the sad news to King Ravana stating that this was done with the help of Vibhishana. Recalling the unique distinction of Meghanaada as having subdued Mahendra himself, Indrajit was subjected to Lakshmana's arrows and reached 'uttama lokas'. Instantly Ravana lost his consciousness and on recovery was affected by 'putra shoka vyakulata' and broke down crying: 'Ha putra! Ha rakshasa sena mahabali karnadhara! You had conquered Mahendra himself but how you were caught by Lakshmana! Dear son, once you were angry you were able to frighten away even Kaala or Antaka too, could devastate even mandaraachala shikhiras too, and what an insignificant issue to demolish Lakshmana! Maha baaho! To day, Surya Putra Yama Raja appeared to have asserted and had to abide by 'kaala dharma'! This indeed the assertive regulation by with samasta deva mandali too should follow as when some one from among them attain veera swarga! Today, the deva-maharshi-lokapaalakas must be heaving a sigh of relief with this eventuality! For me, today the trilokas including oceans, mountains and mahaaranyaas too must be missing the presence of Indrajit. Like a Gaja Raja would be killed, entire elephants get baffled and so would be the state of loud cryings of the 'antahpura kanyas' with this irreplaceable disaster of the loss of Indrajit. Shatru santaapa daaya keertimaan putra! How indeed you have left off your yuvaraajyatva, Lankapuri, samasta rakshasaas, your mothers, wives and me too! Veera! The normal pattern of a putra to perform the pitru pretakarya, but now this is quite contrary to the law of Nature and only the paraloka vaasis would have to perform my own pretakarya as my dear son is missing himself! Ha! Rama Lakshmana Sugrivaas are still alive, and still suffering the piercing pricks of my heart, how indeed you had left me as a singleton'. Thus Ravana kept on crying and eventually assumed 'krodhaavatha'. ghoram prakṛtyā rūpam tat tasya krodhāgnimūrchitam, babhūva rūpam rudrasya kruddhasyeva durāsadam/ tasya kruddhasya netrābhyām prāpatann asrabindavaḥ, dīptābhyām iva dīpābhyām sārciṣaḥ snehabindavaḥ/ dantān vidaśatas tasya śrūyate daśanasvanah, yantrasyāveṣṭyamānasya mahato dānavair iva/ By his very nature, Ravana was a 'krodha swarupa' and now the flames of his anger got redoubled by the anguish of purar shoka; thus the greeshma ritu Surya would understandably get worse. In his remote thoughts, Ravana even felt that the very root cause of this tragedy was Devi Sita and that she might as well be finished off. As his face and mind is truly filled up the retaliatory retribution, the nishachara Ravana's eyes got wet the hot tears like agni jwaalas emerging from oil tend to shed its drops. Then Ravana was grinding his teeth as that sound was being heard too as though at the 'deva daanava samudra madhana kaala madhana yantra swarupa mandaraachala dhwani'! kālāgnir iva saṁkruddho yām yām diśam avaiḥṣata, tasyām tasyām bhayatrastā rākṣasāḥ saṁnililyire/ tam antakam iva kruddham carācaracikhādiṣum, vīkṣamāṇam diśaḥ sarvā rākṣasā nopacakramuḥ/ tataḥ paramasaṁkruddho rāvaṇo rākṣasādhipaḥ, abravīt rakṣasām madhye saṁstambhayiṣur āhave/ mayā varṣasahasrāṇi caritvā duṣcaram tapaḥ, teṣu teṣv avakāśeṣu svayambhūḥ paritoṣitaḥ/ Ravana was then like kaalaagni like anger looking 'dasha dishas' as the rakshasaas nar by were suppressing their fear by tightening their lips with eyes down. Then Ramana having decided to get ready for a mighty battle addressed the ‘rakshasa veeras’: tasyaiva tapaso vyūṣṭyā prasādāc ca svayambhuvaḥ, nāsurebhyo na devebhyo bhayaṁ mama kadā cana/kavacaṁ brahmadattaṁ me yad ādityasamaprabham, devāsura vimardeṣu na bhinnāṁ vajraśaktibhiḥ/Nishaacharo! I had performed deep tapsyas for thousands of years and pleased Swayambh Brahma and thus due to His blessings the totality of rakshasaas for several generations had been enjoying their lives with contentment and comfort. I was also blessed by Brahma with a ‘kavacha’ with is resplendent like Surya Himself. As and when I attacked Deva Daanavaasuraas even vajraprahaaras by Indra were ineffective. Therefore if and when I am seated on my chariot and stand in the battle grounds, even Indra would not be able to face me. yat tadābhiprasannena saśaraṁ karmukam maha, devāsura vimardeṣu tān uvāca niśācarān/ During that very time Brahma also gifted me a ‘dhanush’ and with the very dhanush, once I were to be seated with ‘mangala vaadhyaas’, I had decided to attack Rama Lashmanas.

 Ravana further asserted: māyayā mama vatsena vañcanārthaṁ vanaukasām, kiṁ cid eva hataṁ tatra

vimalāmbharavarcasaṁ, niṣpapāta sa vegena sabhāyāḥ sacivair vṛtaḥ/ My dear son Indrajit confounded Vaanaras like even Hanuman showed off Maya Sita and killed her then and there on his chariot. Now I should actually show the real Sita and stab her. Having declared thus Ravana picked up his khadga and ran out of desperation and affliction of Indrajit’s death towards the place where Devi Sita was. That was the time when Sati saadhvi was surrounded by the krura rakshasis. As Ravana was approaching her with his khadga and felt that this durbuddhi rakshasa was actually coming for me and kill this ‘anaadha’. Devi Sita then introspected: ‘ Indeed I would surely abide my dear husband’s love and affection, come what may. Ravana kept on pressurising me innumerable times to agree me to his wife. Once again he must be arriving here for that pressurisation. so ‘yaṁ mām anupasthānād vyaktaṁ nairāśyam āgataḥ, could be reaching here to kill me with his sword. Or else, this neechaatma might have ruthlessly sacrificed the Pususha Simhas of Rama Lakshmanas and arriving in that joy. I had just a while ago heard a bhayankara garjana resounding the sky. Aho! If I am the root cause of the end of Rajakumaras, then my very existence should be futile. Or Ravana himself might be arriving here to kill me too after his glory of their end. I should have agreed to the proposal of Hanuman to fly off from Lanka by clinging to his back

Ravana having resisted the momentary decision of killing Devi Sita as ignited by the mental torture of Indrajit's assassination by Lakshmana, but for the timely hita bodha by the Minister Suparshva, was truly looking lost in his inner psyche and as seated in the Raja Sabha made an ardent appeal to all in the Sabha with folded hands. Maha Veeras! Do atonce leave off for the battle field with your elephants, horses, chariots and foot soldiers equipped with armoury, kavachas, and dhanurbaanaas and make all out efforts to destroy Rama and his sena. As directed, Nishachara Yodhas and their respective soldiers moved off with their parighas, pattishas, and shareera naashaka astra shastras while vaararaas too were ready with vriksha parvata shilaas and thus the suryodaya maha samgrama gathered rapid momentum. Despite their blood stream flows by the severe onslaught of Rakshasaas with their parvataakaaraas and their aayudhas,, the vaanaraas jumped up and down and devastated rakshasa ratha dhvjas, kavachas, rathas, horses partly with vriksha prahaadaas and mainly by their sharp teeth and long finger nails were hitting the lalaata-kesha- hasta- paadaas destroying countless rakshasaas. Since the Rakshasaas having assumed their true aggressiveness, the vaanaraas ran towards Shri Rama for defence. tato rāmo mahātejā dhanur ādāya vīryavān, praviśya rākṣasām sainyaṁ śaravarṣaṁ vavarṣa ha/ praviṣṭam tu tadā rāmaṁ meghāḥ sūryam ivāmbare, nābhijagmur mahāghoraṁ nirdahantam śarāgninā/ kṛtāny eva sughorāṇi rāmeṇa rajanīcarāḥ, raṇe rāmasya dadṛśuḥ karmāṇy asukarāṇi ca/ Then Rama the maha paraakrami initiated his 'baana varsha'. Like the clouds on the sky could never attack the blistering Surya Deva, the baana swarupi Shri Rama released agni varsha on the Nishacharas as the latter were merely gazing forlorn but never be able to interfere with. cālayantam mahānīkaṁ vidhamantam mahārathān, dadṛśus te na vai rāmaṁ vātam vanagatam yathā/ chinnaṁ bhinnaṁ śarair dagdham prabhagnaṁ śastrapīḍitam, balaṁ rāmeṇa dadṛśur na ramaṁ śīghrakāriṇam/ praharantam śarīreṣu na te paśyanti rāghavam, indriyārtheṣu tiṣṭhantam bhūtātmānam iva prajāḥ/ eṣa hanti gajānīkam eṣa hanti mahārathān, eṣa hanti śarais tīkṣṇaiḥ padātin vājibhiḥ saha/ One might be able to see the disaster of falling of the maha vrikshas but at the most feel the fury of the winds but never measure the severity of Ramabaanaas. Those adversary rakshasaas who only realise the damages done by Rama baanaas into shambles , but never see either Rama nor his ferocity. Likewise, the jeevaatmas of the numberless rakshasa veeraas raised to the skies might never be realised but only the ever repeated 'thud' sounds of their parvataakaata shareeraas while falling down. All the rakshas veeras were wondering as to who is Rama who simultaneously destroyed the elephants, or the horses, or the chariots, or the maharakshas attacking with their astra shastras, or the foot soldiers; often they were even entering mutual controversies. na te dadṛśire rāmaṁ dahantam arivāhinīm, mohitāḥ paramāstreṇa gāndharveṇa mahātmanā/ te tu rāmasahasrāṇi raṇe paśyanti rākṣasāḥ, punaḥ paśyanti kākutstham ekam eva mahāhave/ bhramantīm kāñcanīm koṭīm karmukasya mahātmanah, alātacakrapratimām dadṛśus te na rāghavam/ As Rama was destroying several rakshasaas, the rest of them were getting furious and fiercer; noticing this Rama activated gandharva naamaka astra as all of them would have only Rama darshana and nothing else. Then the angular kaleidoscopic view of Rama and Rama only was seen by them till the spell of the gandharvastra would be lost! śarīranābhi sattvārciḥ śarīram nemikārmukam, jyāghoṣatalanirghoṣam tejobuddhiguṇaprabham/ divyāstraguṇaparyantaṁ nighnantam yudhi rākṣasān, dadṛśū rāmacakram tat kālacakram iva prajāḥ/ anīkaṁ daśasāhasraṁ rathānām vātaramhasām, aṣṭādaśasahasrāṇi kuñjarāṇām tarasvinām/ caturdaśasahasrāṇi sārohāṇām ca vājinām, pūrṇe śatasahasre dve rākṣasānām padātinām/ Thus the 'yuddha kaala raakshasa samhara' was facilitated for him thus as they fell into the revolving spell on the rakshasas; their shareera naabhi was as the chakra naabhi, their physical strength was the agni jvaala, Rama baana was ‘arre’ or the ray of light or of illumination, dhanush as ‘nemi sthaana’ and dhanush thankaara as the ‘taaladhwini’. Thus Rama all by himself within a matter of an hour and half with his ‘agni jvaala samana tejasvi baana prahara’ could devastate lakhs of rakshasaas, ten thousand chariots, eighteen thousand elephants, fourteen thousand horses and ten lakh foot soldiers of rakshasas by the gandharvastra prayoga. te hatāśvā hatarathāḥ śrāntā vimathitadhvajāḥ, abhipetuḥ purīm laṅkāṁ hataśeṣā niśācarāḥ/ hatair gajapadāty aśvais tad babhūva raṇājiram, ākrīḍabhūmī rudrasya krudhdhasyeva pinākinah/ As the horses and chariots were burnt off as the dwijas too, while lakhs of soldiers too, the remnant rakshasaa were somehow baw to Lankapuri. tato devāḥ sagandharvāḥ siddhāś ca paramarṣayaḥ, sādhu sādhu iti rāmasya tat karma samapūjayan/ abravīc ca tadā rāmaḥ sugrīvaṁ pratyānantaram, etad astrabalaṁ divyaṁ mama vā tryambakasya vā/ nihatyā tām rākṣasavāhinīm tu; rāmas tadā śakrasamo mahātmā, astreṣu śastreṣu jitaḥ kamaś ca; saṁstūyate devagaṇaiḥ prahr̥ṣtaiḥ/ Then devata-gandharva-siddha maharshis were elated showering prashamsaas to Shri Rama. Then Sugriva, Vibhishana, Hanuman, Jambavan, Mainda, Dwividaadi vaanara shreshthas acclaimed Rama, as the latter himself was wonder struck whether this shakti was with him or of Bhagavan Shankara! Indeed, Mahatma Shri Rama would never be tired while Deva samudaaya was never tired in complementing Rama too.

As Shri Rama had vitually shattered Rakhasa sena by his gandharvaastra, the families of the dead soldiers lost their husbands, sons, brothers and relatives turned out to be 'anaadhas' and cried out . Some wept in high tones as to why the old woman Surpanakha approached Rama with her amorous proposal to Rama ! Her body strength was weakened, her head hairs were whitened yet still desired Rama to her bed and her arrogant insistence necessitated Lakshmana to spare her life as being a female yet punished by cutting her nose and ears. As she reported to her brother Ravana he initiated Rama's enmity, Khara Dushanaadis were destroyed by Rama, and the vicious circle got activated with Ravana's kidnapping Devi Sita. na ca sītāṁ daśagrīvaḥ prāpnoti janakātmajāṁ, addhaṁ balavatā vairam akṣayaṁ rāghaveṇa ha/ vaidehīm prārthayānaṁ taṁ virādhaṁ prekṣya rākṣasaṁ, hatam ekena rāmeṇa paryāptaṁ tannidarśanam/ caturdaśasahasrāṇi rakṣasāṁ bhīmakarmaṇāṁ, nihatāni janasthāne śarair agniśikhopamaiḥ/ Dashamukha Ravana could never ever succeed to secure Devi Sita as Rama baanaas are irretrievable and hence this crisis now. Vibhishana had tried his very best to get rid of Devi Sita Vyaamoha by citing 'dharma yukta vachanas' which were never heeded as today Lankapuri had now turned to be a smashaana bhumi! Maha Bali Kumbhakarna was dead by Rama baanaas. Dusshaha veera Atikaya was smashed down by Lakshmana who also destroyed the outstanding Maayaavi Rakshasa Indrajit too as the dearest son of the king. How is it that still even now, Ravana continued to be blind folded and still making our husbands, fathers, dear sons and close relatives the yagjna pashus even now in each and every family! 'Ha, my son is dead, my brother is gone, and on the rana bhumi my husband is gone': such were the desperate yellings from the homes of Lanka puri. The citizens of Lanka puri were truly convinced that on the samaraanga, shura veera Shri Rama who had devastated wherever there were rakshasa veeraas on chariots, horses, elephants, foot soldiers, thus proving he might be a Rudra, Bhagavan Vishnu, Shatakrati Indra or swayam Yama Raja. No doubt Dashamukha Ravana too was a famed Rakshasa king as possessive of Brahma Devas blessings aplenty but then turned out to be too arrogant. Thus the Lankapuri citizens getting more and more were getting convinced that there had been several prognostics and foresights Ravana Vinasha by Shri Rama. pitāmahena prītena devadānavarākṣasaiḥ, rāvaṇasyābhayaṁ dattaṁ mānuṣebhyo na yācitam/ tad idaṁ mānuṣān manye prāptaṁ niḥsamiśayaṁ bhayaṁ, jīvitāntakaraṁ ghoram rakṣasām rāvaṇasya ca/ pīḍyamānās tu balinā varadānena rakṣasā, dīptais tapobhir vibudhāḥ pitāmahaṁ apūjayan/ Some of the citizens of ‘dharmika chintana’ of Lankapuri recalled that King Ravana who performed deep tapasya to Brahma Deva for several years as the Jagat Pitamaha was delighted and blessed the tapasvi who sought invincibility from deva-danava-rakshasaas but ignored maanavaas. Thus it was very evident that Ravana would have to be alert with manushyas. Then Indaadi Devatas approached Tripura naashaka Vrishabha dhvaja Maha Deva with nirantara tapasya. Maha Shiva was pleased and stated that a ‘divya nari aavirbhava’ would happen and the samata raaksha vinaashana would then occur! eṣā devaiḥ prayuktā tu kṣud yathā dānavān purā, bhakṣayiṣyati naḥ sītā rākṣasaghnī sarāvaṇān/ rāvaṇasyāpanītena durvinītasya durmateḥ, ayaṁ niṣṭānako ghoraḥ śokena samabhiplutaḥ/ taṁ na paśyāmahe loke yo naḥ śaraṇado bhavet, rāghaveṇopasṛṣṭānām kāleneva yugakṣaye/ itīva sarvā rajanīcarastriyaḥ, parasparaṁ samparirabhya bāhubhiḥ, viṣedur ārtātibhayābhipīḍitā; vinedur uccaiś ca tadā sudūruṇam/ Just as in the purva kalpa kaala, devata’s hunger and thirst was assuaged, in the same manner the ‘nishaachara naashani’ Sita Devi would certainly assuage the hunger and thirst of savava lokaas very soon. Uddanda Ravana with his durbuddhi would thus get all of us Rakshasaas too soon. In this entire universe, we could never ever have the divya darshana of a human like Shri Rama whom alone we could seek ‘sharan’ from him’. In this manner the enlightened Nishaachara strees especially those who lost their husbands, sons, and relatives were frightened to their core.

Ravana having heard the 'artaa ninaadaas' from various houses of Lankapuri from where countless rakashasaas were killed by Rama banaas especially by his 'gandharvaashtra', he drew long heaves of breathings and got introspective for long. All of a sudden, he was enraged, biting his lips with teeth like a pralya murti and started muttering with his looks were like agnijsaalaas. Then he raised his voice and ordered his rakshasaas in attendance nearby and shouted: 'nishacharaas! You rush at once to Mahodara, Mahaparshva and Virupaaksha and convey my instruction to attack the shatru sena with their respective soldiers at once. As the three maha rakshasaas reached Ravana, he assreted like a pralaya kaala Surya to face Rama Lakshmanas and despatch them to yamaloka and avenge their acts of the killings of Kumbhakarna, Prahastha and Indrajit. My arrows should then on usher in darkness all over the anrariksha, ashta dishas, high skies and samudras should obliterated light. The Vaanara rupa opponents are like sarovaras of lotuses and my arrows like huge elephants should trample off the lotuses in the sarovaras. The tonnes of flesh and blood of the vanara koti would then be contrented as the bhojana of crows, owls, and the rest of maamsa bhaksha animals of the forests and mountains nearby. Therefore attack at once'. As Ravana made simha garjanaas likewise, the three senapatis of Mahodara, Mahapashva and Virupaaksha with their rakshasa battalions jumped into the fray with talvaaras, patishas, shulas, gadas, musalas, halas, shaktis, kutamudgaras, chakras, bhindipaalaas, shataghnis and astra shastras. The four senapatis were equipped with a lakh and over chariots, three lakhs elephants, sixty crores of horses, as many donkeys and camels and numberless foot soldiers. As thus the senaadhyakshas were readied, there was another saarathi rushed in another super chariot too was rushed in being fully equipped with divyastras and glitteringly dressed up sahasra kalashas. On seeing this prize chariot, the rakshasaas themselves were wonder stricken. Then Rakshasa Maha Raja Ravana stood up as eight outstanding horses were shining bright. Then all the vaadya ninaadaass were sounded sky high. With these drum, shehnai and other high sounds were reverberating, Vanara sena realised that the Devi Sitaapaharana durachari, deva kantaka rupa Rakshasa Ravana had sinc arrived. Then as per Ravana's intructions the tree senapatis of Mahaparshva, Mahodara, and Virupakshas too were in position. tato niṣpatato yuddhe

As Ravana was slashing off the heads of the vaanaraas, the latter rallied round Shri Rama, Sugriva along with Sushena as the latter pulled off huge trees and mountain boulders. In turn the praharas of vriksha parvata prahaaras of vanaraas alarmed the Rakshasa sena as Maha Rakshasa Virupaksha attacked vanaras severely. Virupaksha then concentrated on Sugriva the Vaanara Raja with baana varshaas. Then Sugriva decided to destroy Virupaksha who was seated on a huge elephant and having uprooted a mammoth tree and hit the elephant making resounding artanaadaas fell down. Virupaksha having jumped down the dead elephant sought to attack with his sword as a measure of atma raksha and hurt Sugriva fatally as the Vaanara Rajafell down unconsciously. On quickly recovering soon enough, folded his fist tight and hit the rakshasa who in turn with this sword tore off Sugriva's body kavacha as that fell down on Sugriva's feet which were wounded. On a flash recovery, Sugriva jumped up high and provided a vajra samaana thump on the chest which was repaid atonce similarly. Then the vanara raja lost his patience and got infuriated; tato nyapātayat krodhāc chaṅkhadeśe mahātalam, mahendrāśanikalpena talenābhīhataḥ kṣītau, papāta rudhiraklinnaḥ śoṇitaṁ sa samudvaman/ viyṛttanayanāṁ krodhāt saphenarudhirāplutam, dadṛśus te virūpākṣaṁ virūpākṣataraṁ kṛtam/ sphurantaṁ parivarjantaṁ pārśvena rudhirokṣitam, karuṇāṁ ca vinardāntaṁ dadṛśuḥ kapayo ripum/ There after, he thumped such deadly punch on Virupaksha's forehead like the vajraayudha of Mahendra as the rakshasa was crushed to the ground as his physical parts were shattered and flows of blood gushed out even as his eye lids were gazing at nothingness truly justifying his name as Virupaksha at the time of his life's conclusion made screeching noises of yellings. Thus Vaanara Raja Sugriva did the Virupaksha vadha as rakshasaas were confounded and the vaanaraas were elated.

As Virupaksha was killed my Sugriva, Ravana had redoubled his anger, and addressed Mahodara stating that his success of the battle would depend on his mighty hands. Mahodara then intensified his spree of vaanara samhaara. Then noticing the disaster posed on vaanaras, Sugriva attacked Mahodara by hurling a mountain boulder but the rakshasa made pieces of the same. Sugriva tossed then a Saala Vriksha which too was destroyed. Further the rakshasa released a ‘baana varsha’ which made a furious impact on Sugriva having fallen down to earth. Sugriva hen having noticed a ‘prarighaayudha’ in the vicinity had hurled at the rakshasa’s potent horses drawing the chariot on which Mahodara was seated on. Having jumped off from the chariot, the rakshasa veera lifted his grand mace by one hand and another his parigha. This both Sugriva and Mahodara like two powered bulls. The rakshasa hurled his mace as Sugriva flinged off his parigha. Then Sugriva having looked again on the battle front tossed off a musalaayudha. The gada-musala parasparaayudhas both fell down as pieces. tato bhagnapraharaṇau muṣṭibhyām tau samīyatuh, tejobalasamāviṣṭau dīptāv iva hutāśanau/ jaghnatus tau tadānyonyam nedatuś ca punaḥ punaḥ, talaiś cānyonyam āhatya petatur dharaṇītale/ utpetatus tatas tūrṇaṁ jaghnatus ca parasparam, bhujaiś cikṣepatur vīrāv anyonyam aparājitau/ ājahāra tadā khaḍgam adūraparivartinam, rākṣasaś carmaṇā sārḍham mahāvego mahodarah/ Thus with thir respective ayudhas they were either seeking or actually hurting each other by inflicting injuries mutually for long time. Then they resorted to ‘hasta prahaaraas’ and in the process were falling down to earth and rising thereagain. The sustained and naggingly prolonged dwandwa baahu yuddha was mutually tiring with end result either way. tathaiva ca mahākhaḍgam carmaṇā patitaṁ saha, jagrāha vānaraśreṣṭhaḥ sugrīvo vegavattarah/ tau tu roṣaparītāṅgau nardantāv abhyadhāvatām, udyatāsī raṇe hr̥ṣṭau yudhi śastraviśāradau/ dakṣiṇaṁ maṇḍalaṁ cobhau tau tūrṇaṁ saṁparīyatuh, anyonyam abhisamkruddhau jaye praṇihitāv ubhau/ sa tu śūro mahāvego vīryaślāghī mahodarah, mahācarmaṇi taṁ khaḍgam pātayām āsa durmatih/ Then after a while having withdrawn for a while, Mahodara sprang a surprise by attacking with his khadaga with its cover with another hand. Precisely the same way, Sugriva too responded. Indeed both Mahodara and Sugriva were proving themselves with balancing ‘vijaya kaanksha.’ They were rapidly changing their directions from south to north and so on. Then puffed up by his own arrogance of shourya veerata, the highhanded Mahodara dared to tear off Sugriva kavacha. lagnaṁ utkarṣataḥ khaḍgam khaḍgena kapikuñjarah, jahāra saśiras trāṇaṁ kuṇḍalopahitaṁ śirah/ nikṛttaśirasas tasya patitasya mahītale, tad balaṁ rākṣasendrasya dṛṣṭvā tatra na tiṣṭhati/ hatvā taṁ vānaraiḥ sārḍham nanāda mudito hariḥ, cukrodha ca daśagrīvo babhau hr̥ṣṭas ca rāghavaḥ/ As Mahodara had hit and tore off Sugriva’s kavacha with his sword, then Sugriva raised his khadga and seved off the the rakshasa’s head with ‘shirastraana sahita kundalas’ too. As Mahodara mastaka fell down, Vanara Raja Sugriva made a vijaya garjana, as Rama was pleased yet, Ravana was terribly enraged!

As Sugriva was killed albeit after a prolonged fight, Mahapaarshva displayed his anger, even while Angada and his sena of vaanaras were anxious to attack him. Then the mighty Rakshasa lost no time to slash off the vanara sena. Angada too like the Pournami Chandra Samudra was over enthusiastic to attack the rakshasa with parigha on his forceful hand grip and hit him. Meanwhile Jambava the bhalluka raja pulled off a huge mountain slab and hurled off Mahaparshva's chariot and the horses too. Balavan veera Angada's parigha prahara with unusual speed hit at Mahaparshva's dhanush and headgear. Then Vaali putra Angada reached the rakshasa with speed and thumped a punch as the latter's ears and kundalas were hit and bruised. Equally veega shali rakshasa picked up parasaayudha. Thi weapon pharasa made of steel was already cleansed with oil and was extremely sharp and was hurled by Mahapaarshva but the alertmost Angada escaped the prarasha prahaara . Then Angada folded mighty his 'mushti' or tight fist and smacked a batter on the rakshasa's breastful wide and enormous chest as of Indra's vajra prahaara as Mahaparshva's heart cracked up and floods of blood got streamed down his body which fell down to earth. Vaanara Sena shrieked with howlings of victory, but Ravana with enflamed frenzy at the disastrous fall of Mahaparshva stood up in vengeance and retaliation.

Furious Ravana re-entered the battle, released 'Taamasaashtra' killing vaanaras, resisted Lakshmana, attacked Rama, got hurt by his roudrastra, as his asuraashtra which was realiated by Rama's agneyastra!

Ravana was astonished that stalwarts like Virupaksha, Mahodara and Mahapaarshvas were killed by mere vaanaraas backed by humans, he was incensed making his blood boiled up and asked his saarathi to attack with the firm decisiveness of uprooting Rama Lakshmanas. As the Kiing of Rakshasaas moved ahead, the unusual speed of the chariot as the earth passing through as pakshi samudaaya were frightened flying in directions. Then Ravana raised his dhanur baanaas and released 'taamasa astra' signifying Tamograha Rahu which was actually blessed him with by Brahma himself as the vaanaraas on his way turned off as heaps of ash. On readily noticing this catastrophe from a distance, Shri Rama stood up realising the hazards ahead while Lakshmana like Indra with Vishnu Deva. Then Rama held his dhanush ready with a mighty 'thankara' as several rakshasaas were frightened and collapsed dead. tam icchan prathamam yoddhum lakṣmaṇo niśitaiḥ śaraiḥ, mumoca dhanur āyamyā śarān agnisikhopamān/ tān muktamātrān ākāśe lakṣmaṇena dhanuṣmatā, bāṇān bāṇair mahātejā rāvaṇaḥ pratyavārayat/ ekam ekena bāṇena tribhis trīn daśabhir daśa, lakṣmaṇasya praciccheda darśayan pāṇilāghavam/ Lakshmana was desirous of attacking Ravana with his arrows forthwith and released agni jvaajaas like ‘baanaas’. Yet Ravana cooled down the water falls like Lakshmana jwaala baanas. With his unusual mastery skill of archery, Lakshmana kept on releasing single, double, treble and multiple arrows but samara vijayi Ravana kept in wiping off the releases consistently. abhyatikramya saumitriṃ rāvaṇaḥ samitiṃjayāḥ, āsāsāda tato rāmaṃ sthitaṃ śailam ivācalam/ sa saṃkhye rāmam āsādyā krodhasamraktalocanaḥ, vyasṛjac charavarṣāni rāvaṇo rāghavopari/ śaradhārās tato rāmo rāvaṇasya dhanuścyutāḥ, dṛṣṭvaivāpatitāḥ śīghraṃ bhallaṇ jagrāha satvaram/tāṇ śaraughāms tato bhallais tīkṣṇaiś ciccheda rāghavaḥ, dīpyamānān mahāvegān kruddhān āśīviṣān iva/ Then having sidelined Sumitrakumara, Ravana as crossing off one parvata to another parvata, approached Shri Rama. Then Raghunaatha had reddened his looks with his vengeful eyes, and released non stop ‘baana vrishti’. As Rama having noticed that Ravana’s hand slipped off his grip then Rama took up the handling of ‘bhalla baanaas’. rāghavo rāvaṇam tūrṇam rāvaṇo rāghavam tathā, anyonyam vividhais tīkṣṇaiḥ śarair abhivavarṣatuḥ/ ceratuś ca ciraṃ citraṃ maṇḍalam savyadakṣiṇam, bāṇavegān samudīkṣya samareṣv aparājitaḥ/ Then Raghava and Ravana by rapid turns released baana varshas. The baana samuhaas in opposing directions were such that in the ‘varsha ritu’, the black clouds would get wide spread the skies all over with repetitive lightnings. The mighty baana praharaas from the opposing sides did then reveal a picture of the frightening flappings of successive swarms of owls crossing the lower skies as frightened by the incessant ‘varsha paata’ of the arrow exchanges. babhūva tumulam yuddham anyonyavadhakāṅkṣiṇoḥ, anāsādyam acintyam ca vṛtravāsavayor iva/ ubhau hi parameśvāsāv ubhau śastraviśāradau, ubhau cāstravidāṃ mukhyāv ubhau yuddhe viceratuḥ/ ubhau hi yena vrajatas tena tena śarormayaḥ, ūrmayo vāyunā viddhā jagmuḥ sāgarayor iva/ Both Rama Raavanas were anxious and exited mutually to demolish each other like Indra and Vritraasura. [See Essence of Valmiki Kishkinbha Ramayana vide Sarga Twenty Four of that] Both the ‘maha dhanurdharaas’ were of ‘yuddha kalaa nipunaas’ and ‘astravetta nipunaas’ dominating the battle grounds. Just as per the sweep and speed of their ‘baana gati dishas’, it then appeared the wind direction and velocity was similar and the waves of the maha samudra too were of the same magnitude. atha mantrān api japan raudram astram udīrayan, śarān bhūyaḥ samādāya rāmaḥ krodhasamanvitaḥ/ mumoca ca mahātejās cāpam āyamyā vīryavān, tāṇ śarān rākṣasendrāya cikṣepācchinnaśāyakaḥ/ Eventually the highly enraged Shri Rama picked up a number of arrows together and utilised the ‘mantra purvaka roudrastra prayoga’ and having forcibly elongated right up to his ears released on Ravanaasura with dexterity. te mahāmeghasamkāśe kavace patitāḥ śarāḥ, avadhye rākṣasendrasya na vyathām janayāms tadā/ punar evātha taṃ rāmo rathastham rākṣasādhipam, lalāte paramāstreṇa sarvāstrakuśalo ‘bhinat/ te bhittvā bāṇarūpāni pañcaśīrṣā ivoragāḥ, śvasanto viviśur bhūmiṃ rāvaṇapratikūlatāḥ/ nihatya rāghavasyāstram rāvaṇaḥ krodhamūrchitaḥ, āsuram sumahāghoram anyad astram samādade/ Then the roudrastra since released was so effective as to ripped off the black clouds like Ravana’s body kavacha. Again Rama released yet again mighty Rama bana hit Ravana’s fore head even as he was seated on his chariot. As his ‘lalaata’ was injured with wounds, Ravana like a fuming and hissing five hooded and venomous ‘maha sarpa raaja’ descended down from his chariot. Then Raghunaadhaastra roudraastrsa damaged Ravana’s forehead, the rakshas raja selected a bhayankara ‘Asura naamaka astra’. As his 'tamasa' and 'asurastras' were made ineffective and retarded as a waste, Ravana became terribly frustrated and angry and decided to release another bhayankaraastra on Rama which was prepared by Mayasura. This frightful 'Mayaastra' would release innumerable vaayu swarupas of shastras like shula-gada-musala, mudgara, kutapaasha, ashani and so on of swarupas. But that Mayaastra was silenced by Gandharvastra'. The enraged Ravana then released Suryastra as from that astra emerged chandra suryaadi navagraha maha shaktis and the entire sky and ashta diks of north-east and so on were quietened. But Rama was unnerved as the frightening shastras like parighas, maces, shulas and so on were all methodically destroyed. Then frustrated further, Ravana aimed at Rama's marma sthaanas with a series of ten all powerful arrows. Yet Rama was not some how able to contain himself. On the other hand, Raghuveera retaliated and his arrows did precisely the same impact on Ravanaasuraas marma sthaanaas. Meanwhile Ramanuja Lakshmana attacked Ravana with seven arrows on hand and destroyed Ravana radha dhvaja being the mastaka of the maha ratha of Ravana. Methodically, Lakshmana further severed the ratha saradhi's head. Further, Lakshmana hit Ravana's maha dhanush too as that was cut to pieces. Vibhishana standing aside of Lakshmana jumped high and with his mighty mace and killed the 'parvataakaara rathaashwaas'. The much infuriated Ravana aimed at raja drohi Vibhishana and hurled a vajrasamaana prajjvalita weapon of 'Shakti'. Even as that shakti as hurled on Vibhishana, Lakshmana veera smashed of the Shaktiyayudha with three of his arrows as the onlooking vaanara veeraas raised harsha ninaadaas. That Maha Shakti of Ravana which was decorated by 'swarna maalaas' got divided in three parts on earth as though an ulka or a meteor fallen on earth. But further vengeful Ravana lifted yet another ayudha of yet mightier Shakti ayudha on Vibhishana. Once again Lakshmana intervened and released yet another 'baana parampara' which once again saved Vibhishana. Then Ravanaasura felt as follows: mokṣitaṁ bhrātaraṁ drṣṭvā lakṣmaṇena sa rāvaṇaḥ, lakṣmaṇābhimukhas tiṣṭhann idam vacanam abravīt/ mokṣitas te balaślāghin yasmād evaṁ vibhīṣaṇaḥ, vimucya rakṣasaṁ śaktiḥ tvayīyaṁ vinipātyate/ eṣā te hṛdayaṁ bhittvā śaktir lohitalakṣaṇā, madbāhuparihotsṛṣṭā prāṇān ādāya yāsyati/ Lakshmana had been consistently seeking to save my brother the ever ungrateful brother of mine. Ravana then yelled at Lakshmana as follows: Lakshmana! you appear to be a shura veera and seeking to protect Vibhishana, my ungrateful brother always. Therefore I would like to spare him for the time being and seek to teach you a good lesson and hurl off my potent Shakti ayudha right on you. Indeed this Shakti

Ayudha once hurled on you should bathe you with your own hot blood too soon by piercing and breaking your heart. ity evam uktvā tām śaktim aṣṭaghaṇṭām mahāsvanām, mayena māvāvihitām amoghām śatrughātinīm/ lakṣmaṇāya samuddiśya jvalantīm iva tejasā, rāvaṇaḥ paramakruddhaś cikṣepa ca nanāda ca/ sā kṣiptā bhīmavegena śakrāśanisamasvanā, śaktir abhyapatad vegāl lakṣmaṇam raṇamūrdhani/ So saying the extremely enraged Ravana held on his forceful fist the Shatrughati Shakyayudha which was Mayasura nirmita, the eight belled ‘ashtadasha videerana’, and tossed aiming right at Lakshmana whose velocity had gradually got accelerated and made a simha garjana. That Maha Shakti making earthshaking sounds with ‘bhayaanaka teevrata’ was hurled thus, the stunned Shri Rama felt in his own heart: ‘may Lakshmana be saved now or too soon and may this ayudha become futile soon enough. nyapatat sā mahāvegā lakṣmaṇasya mahorasi, jihvevoragarājasya dīpyamānā mahādyutiḥ/ tato rāvaṇavegena sudūram avagāḍhayā, śaktyā nirbhinnahṛdayaḥ papāta bhuvi lakṣmaṇaḥ/ tadavasthaṁ samīpastho lakṣmaṇam prekṣya rāghavaḥ, bhrāṭṛsnehān mahātejā viṣaṇṇahṛdayo ‘bhavat/ sa muhūrtam anudhyāya bāṣpavyākulalocanaḥ, babhūva samrabdhataro yugānta iva pāvakaḥ/ This Shakti ayudha as released by Ravana was hissing like a poisonous maha sarpa had then sunk deep in the heart of Lakshmana. Then like the Naga Raja Vaasuki’s poisonous tongue’s lash made Lakshmana fall on earth senseless. Then Rama was just adjacent and on seeing this avastha of Lakshmana was literally nonplussed and stumped at a loss due to excessive feeling of intimate ‘bhraatru prema’. sa dadarśa tato rāmaḥ śaktyā bhinnam mahāhave, lakṣmaṇam rudhirādigdham sapannagam ivācalam/ tām api prahitām śaktim rāvaṇena balīyasā, yatnatas te hariśreṣṭhā na śekur avamarditum/ Then Rama kept on gazing the situation of Lakshmana’s severe flows of blood like a maha parvata downed to earth. As Rama was thus removing the ayudha, Ravana made baana varsha on Rama’s ‘marmaavayas, but even so Rama still went ahead all the same and addressed the kapiveeraas. parākramasya kālō ‘yam samprāpto me cirepsitaḥ, pāpāmāyam daśagrīvo vadhyatām pāpaniścayaḥ, kāṅkṣitaḥ stokakasyeva ghamānte meghadarśanam/ asmin muhūrte nacirāt satyam pratiśṛṇomi vaḥ, arāvaṇam arāmaṁ vā jagad draṅsyatha vānarāḥ/ rājyanāśam vane vāsam daṇḍake paridhāvanam, vaidehyāś ca parāmarśam rakṣobhiś ca samāgamam/ prāptam duḥkham mahad ghoram kleśam ca nirayopamam, adya sarvam aham tyakṣye hatvā tam rāvaṇam raṇe/ kapivaraas, you are merely gazing surrounding Lakshmana, but do you not realise that this is the time for your asserting the respective paraakramaas! Let me take a vow as my satya pratigjna that in this samsaara, soon enough there should be a Ravana or Rama. Today, Deva-gandharva-siddha-rishi chaaranaa and the tri lokaas would truly realise the Ramatva of Rama as has been truly reformed. To day, I should truly vindicate my 'parakrama' so that Prithvi should be revived, and the charaachara jagat and deva lokaas should talk about me. Thus asserting, Shri Rama continued his spree of baana varsha on Ravana as the latter too was retaliating with his 'musala varsha'. tayor jyāṭalanirghoṣo rāmarāvaṇayor mahān, trāsaṇaḥ sarvabūtānām sa babhūvādbhutopamaḥ/ sa kīryamāṇaḥ śarajālavṛṣṭibhir; mahātmanā dīptadhanuṣmatārditaḥ, bhayāt pradudrāva sametya rāvaṇo; yathānīlenābhīhato balāhakaḥ/ As the fearful sounds of 'Rama Ravana dhanush thankaaraas' as followed were such that the 'pranakoti' around were kept on getting frightened. Then as Rama baana vrarsha with such terrifying velocity of vaayu vega was experienced by Ravana and quietly withdrawn from the battle.

As Lakshmana fainted by Ravana's Shaktyaayudha prahara, Vaanara Sushena reacted and addressed Shri Rama: 'I have a special admiration for Lakshmana as he is not only famed as a 'maha dhanunush baana veeryavaan' but an inimitable Rama Bhakta; indeed how could he be a prey to Ravana's Shakti prahara! As Sushena stated thus, Rama who was already aggrieved added fuel to fire. He then addressed Lakshmana lying in that state: 'Shura veera Lakshmana! Even if I were to accomplish success in this maha samgrama, I would not be contented; could a blind person ever vision the beauty of full moon! Now in this kind of occasion what indeed is the purpose of prolonging this battle now and even if there might be success now. As I had experienced that Lakshmana had followed me while heading for 'vana vaasa' and now it is my turn to follow him even if he were to head for yama loka! Alas! the cruel now nishaacharaas had landed me in this desperate situation. In any and every country one could accomplish excellent women of attachment and dutifulness, but never again in the history of humanity could ever secure like Lakshmana ever! Without 'durdharsha sahodara' like Lakshmana, what indeed could I do with my Kingship of Ayodhya in his absence. Then how could I face and initiate my talk to the putra vatsala mother Devi Sumitra! How could I recoup from the implicit safety protection by me to his mother. Can you please urgently reach Mahodaya parvata and as Jambavan suggested earlier, on the southern parvata shikhara, seek to fetch the mahoushadhis named 'vishalya kaarani' to bridge up the gap of filling up the hole by pulling off the aayudha, 'Saavanyakarani' to cement up to the original position of the hole, 'Sanjeevakarani' which resuscitates the life movement to its original position and even freshens for betterment, and 'sandhaani' to bridge up the gaps. This treatment ought to provide a fresh life to Lakshmana'. Then as at a similar situation earlier, Hanuman failed to identify the precise herbal medicines concerned yet pulled off the Mahodaya giri shikhara and quickly reached back to the yuddha bhumi. oṣadhīr nāvagachāmi tā ahaṁ haripuṅgava, tad idaṁ śikharaṁ kṛtsnaṁ gires tasyāhṛtaṁ mayā/ evaṁ kathayamānaṁ taṁ praśasya pavanātmajam, suṣeṇo vānaraśreṣṭho jagrāhotpātya cauṣadhīḥ/ tataḥ samkṣodayitvā tām oṣadhim vānarottamaḥ, lakṣmaṇasya dadau nastat suṣeṇaḥ sumahādyutiḥ/ saśalyaḥ sa samāghrāya lakṣmaṇaḥ paravīrahā, viśalyo virujaḥ śīghraṁ udatiṣṭhan mahītalāt/ Hanuman having returned addressed Sushena: 'Kapishrestha Sushena: I was not able to identify the concerned herbal medicines and therefore pulled off the parvata shikhara here'. Sushena as also the surrounding onlookers complimented Hanuman and started treatment soon and Lakshmana was soon resuscitated and reactivated and stood up refreshed again. Shri Rama had atonce embraced Lakshmana and said as follows. abravīc ca pariṣvajya saumitriṁ rāghavas tadā, diṣṭyā tvām vīra paśyāmi maraṇāt punar āgatam/ na hi me jīvitenaṛthaḥ sītayā ca jayena vā, ko hi me jīvitenaṛthas tvayi pañcatvam āgate/ ity evaṁ vadatas tasya rāghavasya mahātmanaḥ, khinnaḥ śithilayā vācā lakṣmaṇo vākyam abravīt/ tām pratijñām pratijñāya purā satyaparākrama, laghuḥ kaś cid ivāsattvo naivaṁ vaktum ihārhasi/ Veera! Kindly therefore fulfill your Satya Pratigjna of destroying Ravana right now. On recovery from the stage of collapsed blackout, Lakshmana alerted provocatively and Shri Rama picked up his maha dhanush and initiated his baana varsha on Dashagriva like Surya on Rahu graha. Shri Rama was standing firm on earth as Ravana on a fresh set of 'radhaashva sarathis'. It seemed that Deva Gandharva Kinnars were then pointing out that it was unfair Rama standing on earth and Ravana by a chariot! Then Indra was alerted and called for 'Maatali' the charioteer of Indra and asked Maatali to reach Shri Rama to utilise his services as per Indra's instructions. Maatali further stated that Indra Deva had also instructed him to provide Indra's dhanush too. Indeed Rama was an outstanding 'astra jnaani' and having been blessed with the dhanush of Indra too alighted on the celestial chariot initiated flinging off the baana varsha. As Ravana released gandharvastra, Rama too released another gandharvastra and similarly as Ravana tossed off a devaasta ama too balanced off with a counter Devaasta. Then Ravana hurled off a powerful sarpasta replete with thick layers of poison. The prajjvlita agnimukha sarpasta was approaching Rama with alarming velocity it was like the Vaasuki Sarpa Mukha darkening 'dasha dishas', then in reply Shri Rama with uncommon alacrity and precision released 'Garudaasta'. By then Ravana was infuriated and kept on hurling continuous and nonstop 'astra saadhana' which impaired Indra Radha Saaradhi Maatali himself. Then Ravana desrtroyed the Indra Radha Dhwa and eventually hurt the ashvaas too. On visioning this Deva Gandharva Chaarana Daanavaas too were stunned while Siddha Maharshis too were disheartened. Then Shri Rama rupi Chandra and Ravana swarupi Rahu graha appeared to have attacked each other. Surya kiranaas then appeared to have got shaded as Dhumaketu naamaka uppaata graha was seen on the horizon. Then Dashagriva Ravana holding his dhanush was like Mainaka Parvata in the Maha Samudra. daśagrīvaṁ jayety āhur asurāḥ samavasthitāḥ, devā rāmam athocus te tvaṁ jayeti punaḥ punaḥ/ etasminn antare krodhād rāghavasya sa rāvaṇaḥ, prahartukāmo duṣṭātmā spr̥śan praharaṇam mahat/ vajrasāraṁ mahānādam sarvaśatrunibarhaṇam, śailaśṛṅganibhaiḥ kūtaiś citam dṛṣṭibhayāvaham/Then Shri Rama tauntingly hailed Ravana stating ‘ Ravana! Victory for you!’ Then Ravana too teased Rama mockingly and said: ‘ Rama! Victory for you too. Then Ravana had furiously picked up a deadly ‘shulaayudha’ which indeed was like a ‘ pralaya kaala dhuma yukta gni raashi’ and made a ‘simha naada’. śūlo ‘yam vajrasāras te rāma roṣān mayodyataḥ, tava bhrātṛsahāyasya sadyaḥ prāṇān hariṣyati/ rakṣasām adya śūrāṇām nihātānām camūmukhe, tvām nihatya raṇasālaghni karomi tarasā samam/ tiṣṭhedānīm nihanmi tvām eṣa śūlena rāghava, evam uktvā sa cikṣepa tac chūlam rākṣasādhipaḥ/As that Shulaayudha was being handled by Ravana, he addressed Rama that it was like of vajra samana shakti; you appear to be too anxious to destroy rakshasaas and indeed countless rakshasa veeraas were smashed by you already, but now, wait Raghukula Raja Kumara, it is high time that you and Lakshmana are sent to Yama ghat. No sooner Ravana hurled the ‘Shaktimaan maha shula’ than Rama released mantrika baanaas. By the Raghunadha bana varshas cooled off the Shula Prahara which fell off in pieces. Then the highly infuriated Shri Rama wished to pay back to Ravana revengefully. Then he took up the Maha Shakti which Indra handed over to Matali the charioteer of Indra. That Shakti ayudha of Indra was like the ‘pralaya kaala prajjvalita ulkaa samana’ or the meteor witnessed on the high skies shot down to earth. As Rama hurled Shakti on the shula, Ravana’s horses were killed while his robust chest was pierced through Rama’s mighty arrows simultaneously. sa śarair bhinnasarvāṅgo gātraprasruta - ṣoṇitaḥ, rākṣasendraḥ samūhasthaḥ phullāśoka ivābabhau/ sa rāmabāṇair atividdhagātṛo; niśācarendraḥ kṣatajārdragātṛaḥ, jagāma khedaṁ ca samājamadhye; krodhaṁ ca cakre subhṛśam tadānīm/ Further Rama bana varshaas caused Ravana’s all the physical parts were pierced through and his blood streams flowed off the areas all around as he fell down totally incapacitated as he was indeed angered and ashamed too.

You indeed are a shura veera, bala sampanna, sakshaat Kubera’s degenerate brother and that is how you were able to resort to the ‘famed and memorable’ deed of ‘Sitaapaharana’ shamelessly! Evil minded nishaachara! How come you go around and publicise of your greatness, but now you surely deserve to reach your dear brother Khara right away. diṣṭyāsi mama duṣṭātmamś cakṣurviṣayam āgataḥ, adya tvām sāyakais tīkṣṇair nayāmi yamasādanam/ adya te maccharaiś chinnaṁ śiro jvalitakuṇḍalam, kravyādā vyapakarṣantu vikīrṇam raṇapāmsuḥ/ nipatyorasi gḍhrās te kṣitau kṣiptasya rāvaṇa pibantu rudhiram tarṣād bāṇasālyāntarothitam/ adya madbāṇābhinnasya gatāsoḥ patitasya te, karṣantv antrāṇi patagā garutmanta ivoragān/ Manda buddhi Ravana! This indeed is my ‘soubhagya’ the great fortune that you are right before me. Now you surely deserve to reach yama loka by my arrows. Now, by the sharpness and precision of my arrows you should fall down to dust as your glittering ‘kundala yukta mastaka’ would soon be a satisfying meal of ‘maamsa bhakshi jeeva jantus’ as they should lap up with contentment. Ravana! as your corpse thrown off soon, several kites on the skies should at once swoop down at the numberless cuts and the streams of your fresh and hot blood and quench their thirst.’ Having addressed Ravana as above, Shri Rama started off the release of relentless ‘baana varsha’. harīṇām cāśmanikaraiḥ śaravarṣaiś ca rāghavāt, hanyamāno daśagrīvo vighūrṇaḥ dayo bhavat/ yadā ca śastraṁ nārebhe na vyakarṣac charāsanam, nāsyā pratyakarod vīryam viklavenāntarātmanā/ kṣiptāś cāpi śarās tena śastrāṇi vividhāni ca, na raṇārthāya vartante mrtyukālē bhivartataḥ/ sūtas tu rathanetāsyā tadavastham nirīkṣya tam, śanair yuddhād asaṁbhānto ratham tasyāpavāhayat/ Added to this, Vaanara sena too complemented their rocketing of maha vrishas and mountain boulders on Ravana, his chariot and the rathaasvaas too as Ravana got flabbergasted as of ‘hridaya vyaakula vibhanta’. As each time he was seeking to raise his bow and arrows, and release the baanaas he was simply disabled to do so astonished with Rama Vaanara praharas and essentially owing to the guilt complex of Rama’s erstwhile exhortations, truly realising that the ‘mrityu kaalaa’ was in the vicinity. Realising the criticality of the situation, the radha chaalaka sarathi of Ravana, had quietly withdrawn from the ‘maha sangrama.’

As the saaradhi of Ravana radha had quietly with drawn on his own volition, Ravana got furious and shouted on the sarathi: ‘Durbuddhi Saradhi! Have you decided that I am a paraakramashunya, asamartha, purushartha shunya, timid, dhairya heena, nisteja, maayaa rahita, and astra jnaana vanchita! Yiu had suddenly ran back and withdran from this battle on your own decision. Thus you have ruined my long earned fame, bravery, luminosity and reliability to deep muddy waters and had exposed me as a nervous and hesitant nervous wreck! You are not my worthy upholder of my trust and reliability but indeed my enemy.’ As the King yelled on him thus, the Saradhi with extraordinary politeness and courtesy replied in a rather convincing manner as follows: na bhīto smi na mūḍho smi nopajapto smi śatrubhiḥ, na pramatto na niḥsneho vismṛtā na ca satkriyā/ mayā tu hitakāmena yaśaś ca parirakṣatā, snehapraskannamanasā priyam ity apriyam kṛtam/ nāsminn arthe mahārāja tvam mām priyahite ratam, kaś cil laghur ivānāryo doṣato gantum arhasi/ Maha Raja! Neither I was terrified nor lost my senses nor rattled by the enemies.; the great trust and confidence that you have has showered me with is unforgettable and unusual. I admire you and always seek to ensure your success and universal fame. How indeed could I ever harm your worldwide reputation as your ever devoted welfare seeker and promoter. Kindly never ever make a ‘doshaaropana’ on me as a faithless, ungrateful and nervous being. śrūyatām abhidhāsyāmi yannimittam mayā rathaḥ, nadīvega ivāmbhobhiḥ saṁyuge vinivartitaḥ/ śramam tavāvagacchāmi mahatā raṇakarmaṇā, na hi te vīra saumukhyam praharṣam vopadhāraye/ rathodvahanakhinnāś ca ta ime rathavājinaḥ, dīnā gharmapariśrāntā gāvo varṣahatā iva/ nimittāni ca bhūyiṣṭhaṁ yāni prādurbhavantī naḥ, teṣu teṣu abhipanneṣu lakṣayāmy apradakṣiṇam/ We all realize that as as one sees chandrodaya on the horizon, Samudra jalaas too recede for a while; may I now explain why

I had receded from the battle front. At that particular time, I realised that you were overworked and got too tired physically as you kept on thinking and planning on and on yet never due to the pressure of the enemies which indeed was not an issue at all. But my horses were rather tired by dragging the chariot and their own feet too on and on with thirst typical of groups of cows with long spell of rainlessness and over work under a severe Sun. More over, very many ‘amangala suchanas’ or inauspicious omen were prevalent too. deśakālau ca vijñeyau lakṣaṇānīṅgitāni ca, dainyaṁ harṣaś ca khedaś ca rathinaś ca balābalaṁ/ sthalaanimnāni bhūmeś ca samāni viṣamāni ca, yuddhakālaś ca vijñeyaḥ parasyāntara - darśanam/ upayānāpayāne ca sthānam pratyapasarpaṇam, sarvaṁ etad rathasthena jñeyaṁ rathakuṭumbinā/ tava viśrāmahetos tu tathaiśāṁ rathavājinām, raudraṁ varjayatā khedaṁ kṣamaṁ kṛtam idam mayā/ It is asserted that a mature minded charioteer should need to critically analyse the prevalent desha-kaala-parishithis, shubhaashubha lakshanaas, ratha-ashva-rathika cheshtas or their ongoing enthusiasm or the lacking of it, besides of course the swings of ‘balaabalaas’ are all to be critically analysed. Maha Raja! it is the bounden responsibility of a charioteer to face the enemy from close quarters, or with draw, or stay put with confidence or if need be to withdraw for a while. It would be always prudent to provide some occasional rest for the horses/ swacchha yaa na mayaa vīra ratho 'yam apavāhitaḥ, bhartṛsnehaparītena mayedaṁ yatkr̥taṁ vibho/ ājñāpaya yathātattvaṁ vakṣyasy ariniśūdana, tat kariṣyāmy ahaṁ vīraṁ gatānṛṇyena cetasā/ saṁtuṣṭas tena vākyaena rāvaṇas tasya sārathēḥ, praśasyainaṁ bahuvidhaṁ yuddhalubdhō 'bravīd idam/ rathaṁ śīghraṁ imaṁ sūta rāghavābhīmukhaṁ kuru, nāhatvā samare śatrūn nivartīṣyati rāvaṇaḥ/ Veera Prabho! It is just not my intention to hurt your feelings but on the other hand that only out of consideration and even admiration for you that I had temporarily withdrawn the chariot for a while. Shatru sudana Veera, now kindly instruct me to act as per your decision as I am ever obliged and indebted to you for ever.’ Then King Ravana was pleased with the elaborate and sincere explanation of his saarathi and replied as follows: ‘ Suta! Now forthwith take the chariot right before Rama and precisely as per the directice, the chariot was kept right before Shri Rama..

(As Lord Shri Rama was engrossed in deep thoughts at the battle field while facing the Maha Veera Ravanaasura who was challenging Rama with provocative and thunderous laughter, even as a host of Devas on the antarisha were waiting to watch the proceedings of Rama-Ravana Battle, Maharshi Agastya addressed Rama and advised that there was a very confidential and effective Prayer which would certainly fulfill victory in the battle as follows: This Sacred Hymn ‘Adithya Hridayam’ dedicated to Sun God is highly propitious, extinguishes all enemies, ushers Glorious Victory and is worthy of reciting always ensuring eternal bliss. This Holy Prayer is a guarantee to achieve Prosperity; destroys sins, anxieties and wavering thoughts as also secures long life with contentment. We pray to Sun God as He has fully risen on the sky and is revered by Devas for the high splendour providing to the entire Universe. He embodies the totality of Celestial Deities and is self-radiant nourished by His own rays and heat, energising the whole world with its inhabitants including all the Objects of God’s creation. He is Brahma, Vishnu, Siva, Skanda, Prajapathi, Mahendra, Kubera, Kala, Soma, and Varuna. He is Pitras, Vasus, Sadhyas, Asvini Kumars (Physicians of Gods), Marud Ganas responsible for breeze, Manu, Vayu, Agni, Prana, the Season Maker and Prabhakara, the Provider of radiance. He is the son of Aditi, Savitha, Surya, Traverser of Sky, the Energy to perform various things, the cause for rains, the One to create shining Golden rays and the Maker of the Day. He has propitiously green horses, emits innumerable rays, rides seven horses, dispels darkness, destroys life, enables rebirth and provides unending effulgence. He is the Sourcer of Gold, imparts coolness, provides heat, causes illumination, has fire within, praised by one and all, melts off snow and enjoys sky-wide rides. He is the Lord of the Sky; Master of Rig, Yajur and Sama Vedas; causes of heavy rains, friend of water and rapid traveller over Vindhya Mountains. He originates heat, causes death, provides shape to the Universe, assumes colour of gold, heats up everything, connoisseur of knowledge, loved universally, Manager of the Universe and Great Organiser. Our Salutations to Him who has Twelve Forms, is the Chief of Stars, Planets and Zodiac and the Great Illuminator. Our reverences to Him who rises from the East and sinks in the West, the Master of Jyotirganas, the Sovereign of the Days and the Lord of Objects that shines. Our veneration to Him the embodiment and basis of Victories and Eternal Rider of the memorable Green Horses, the immortal personality of Thousand Rays and the Illustrious Son of Aditi Devi. Greetings to Him, who is a terror to the Vicious, a hero to the admirers, a prompt and fast voyager of the Sky, an efficient opener of Lotus and an efficient Energiser of lives. Our worship to Brahma, Vishnu and ShIva as also Surya who is blessed with Aditi; He is ever shining, consumes everything and has a formidable form of Rudra! He destroys darkness, snow and enemies; has a huge body, devastates the ungrateful and the Lord of everything that shines. Our Salutations to Him who is yellow like molten gold, has the form of Fire, is the Creator of the World and the demolisher of ignorance; He endears one and all, and the ready witness to all! This God facilitates everything to grow and also demolishes; with His powerful rays, He generates extreme heat and also causes heavy rains! He is ever awoken and active when everybody is fast asleep without even our knowing about it; He is the Fire Sacrifice Himself and also the one who performs the Sacrifice too. All the pious tasks carried on in the Universe related to Vedas, Yagnas and Yagas are Lord Surya Himself.

Hey Raghava, any one who recites this Hymn in praise of Adithya in times of danger or suffering or in wild forests, and in times of fear shall indeed cross over the problems for sure. Do worship this Lord of the Universe with single minded devotion and faith thrice and indeed the Victory shall be yours. Sri Rama, the Her of Heros, you shall annihilate the Demon Ravana in a second, thus said Sage Agasthya and left his way. On hearing this, Lord Rama became free from any sorrow and prepared Himself to execute the Prayer with utmost devotion; He cleaned Himself, did 'Achamana' thrice, lifted the bow towards Sun God and was excited with happiness to commence the Battle. He faced Ravana with the firm resolve to destroy the Demon. The Lord of the Sky Bhaskara Deva asked Raghu nandana to hurry up and destroy Ravana.

As Ravana'sura asked his ratha saarathi to return to the battle back facing Shri Rama, then the latter addressed Maatali, the Indra's charioteer and stated" 'Matali! Ravana's chariot had once again entered with tremendous enthusiasm and gusto as if hr were too anxious to get finished. But, you should proceed with self control and skillfully as I desire to destroy Ravana's chariot. Indeed you are Indra Deva's own charioteer and I do not have to advise you any way. I am thus reminding you as of now but not to teach you noe instruct you in any case'. Then Maatali was too happy at the maneer in which Shri Rama was alerting him and skillfully take the chariot in a manner Ravana's attention be drawn against Shri Rama. Then Dashamukha Ravana flipped his red looks at Rama and initiated his baana varsha. The angry Rama yet keeping his composure picked up Indra's dhanush to hand and replied Ravana's baana prahas with increased momentum. Then Devata-Siddha-Gandharva Maharshis gathered in groups ever wishing the 'loka kantaka Ravana vidhvamsa'. Then in that battle, a number of forebodings were noticed of Ravana vinaashana and Shri Rama abhydayaas. vavarṣa rudhiraṁ devo rāvaṇasya rathopari, vātā maṇḍalinas tīvrā apasavyaṁ pracakramuḥ/ mahad gr̥dhrakulaṁ cāśya bhramamāṇaṁ nabhastale, yena yena ratho yāti tena pradhāvati/ saṁdhyayā cāvṛtā laṅkā japāpuṣpanikāśayā, dṛśyate saṁpradīteva divase 'pi vasum̐dharā/ Clouds frm the high skies poured on Ravana's chariot, especially by the very path of its movement and groups of kites kept on hitting the Ravana radha dhwaḥ again and again as also the very path of the chariot's movement. sanirghātā maholkāś ca saṁpracetur mahāśvanāḥ, viśādayantyo rakṣāṁsi rāvaṇasya tadāhitāḥ/ rāvaṇaś ca yatas tatra pracacāla vasum̐dharā, rakṣasāṁ ca praharatām gr̥hītā iva bāhavaḥ/ tāmrāḥ pītāḥ sitāḥ śvetāḥ patitāḥ sūryaraśmayāḥ, dṛśyante rāvaṇasyāṅge parvatasyeva dhātavaḥ/ gr̥dhrair anugatāś cāśya vamantyo jvalanaṁ mukhaiḥ, praṇedur mukham īkṣantyaḥ saṁrabdham aśivaṁ śivāḥ/ Right ahead of Ravana radha, there were 'vajra paata dhwanis' resoundings and 'ulkapaataas' or meteor falls repeatedly. As Ravana radha chakras were moving fast, there itself there were swings of earth, and the rakshasaa's accompsnying Ravana ratha were often losing the grip holds of their weapons. As Ravana's angry looks as of agni jvaalaas kept on generating owls in swarms with screeches as of typical 'amanagala dhwanis' pratikūlaṁ vavau vāyū raṇe pāṁsūn samutkiran, tasya rākṣasarājasya kurvan dṛṣṭivilopanam/ nipetur indrāśanayaḥ sainye cāśya samantataḥ, durviśahya svanā ghorā vinā jaladharasvanam/ diśaś ca pradīśaḥ sarvā babhūvus timirāvṛtāḥ, pāṁsuvarṣeṇa mahatā durdarśaṁ ca nabho 'bhavat/ On the 'rana bhumi', as Ravana's eyes were covered fully with strong dusty winds his face was frequently distorted and his looks were often impaired. He felt that he was disabled to vision the directions and sub directions and the entire sky was overcast with dust and darkness all over. Ravana's 'radhaashvaas' in their thigh portions were hurt too thus disabling their free movements. evaṁ prakārā bahavaḥ samutpātā bhayāvahāḥ, rāvaṇasya vināśāya

Then Shri Rama initiated the climactic Ravana Samhaara Maha Yuddha which baffled and puzzled samasta lokaas. Both Vaanaras and Rakshasaas were merely gazing at the 'maha sangrama' even standing still unmindful of mutual skirmishes. Rakhasas were staring at Ravana, while Vanaras fixed their looks on Shri Rama. Ramachandra was confident of Ravana Vadha as Ravana too seeking to perform his very best. Then Dashaanana with his decisiveness aimed at Rama radha dhwaaja and hit with a mighty arrow but the fixed wooden base of the dhwaaja got cracked yet the dhwaaja was intact. In turn, Maha bali Shri Rama was enraged and lashed a 'teevra baana' as a far better 'quid pro quo' aiming at the Ravana radha dwaja which fell down straight. Ravana got terribly annoyed as Rama radha dwavajawas intact but his radha dhwaaja fell down broken and with frustrated ferocity, Ravanaasura showered off a baana parampara on Rama radhaashvas but the celestial horses felt no impact nt the Ravana banaas as though of 'neela kamala prahaaraas' from the Maha Rakshasa. teṣām asaṁbhramam dṛṣtvā vājinām rāvaṇas tadā, bhūya eva susaṁkruddhaḥ śaravarṣam mumoca ha/ gadāś ca pariḥhāṁś caiva cakrāṇi musalāni ca, giriśṛṅgāṇi vṛkṣāṁś ca tathā śūlaparaśvadhān/ māyāvihitam etat tu śastravarṣam apātayat, sahasraśas tato bāṇān āśrāntaḥ dayodiyamah/ tumulaṁ trāsajananaṁ bhīmaṁ bhīmapratishvanam, durdharṣam abhavad yuddhe naikaśastramayam mahat/ As Ravana having realised that the Indra Radha was not easy to destroy the dhwaaja and the horses, then released baana varshas and the shastra praharana of gada-chakra-parigha-musala-parvata shikhara-vriksha-shula aadi maaya nirmita aayudha paramparas, while the entire battle area was immersed with astra-shastra bhayaanaka ghoshaas. vimucya rāghavaratham samantād vānare bale, sāyakair antarikṣam ca cakārāśu niranteram, mumoca ca daśagrīvo niḥsaṅgenāntarātmanā/ vyāyacchamānam tam dṛṣtvā tatparam rāvaṇam raṇe/ prahasann iva kākutsthaḥ saṁdadhe sāyakāṇi śītān/ sa mumoca tato bāṇān raṇe śatasahasraśaḥ, tān dṛṣtvā rāvaṇaś cakre svaśaraiḥ kham niranteram/ Then leaving aside the Rama Radha, Ravana kept on releasing his baana prahaaraas rather indiscriminately against the shatru sena and the entire sky was replete with Rakshasa baanaas. Shri Rama smiled at the desperation of Ravanaasura and aimed at the rakshasa with hundreds and thousands of raama baanaas. rāvaṇasya hayān rāmo hayān rāmasya rāvaṇah, jaghnatus tau tadānyonyam kṛtānukṛta

Dashamukha Ravana was visibly annoyed and released rains of arrows on Rama. He further released piercing and ‘vajra samaana’ arrows in Matali too which hit and pained him. tayā dharṣaṇayā krodhō mātaler na tathātmanah, cakāra śarajālena rāghavo vimukhaṁ ripum/ vimśatiṁ trimśataṁ śaṣṭiṁ śataśo ’tha sahasraśaḥ, mumoca rāghavo vīraḥ sāyakān syandane ripoh/ gadānām musalānām ca parighāṇām ca nisvanaiḥ, śarāṇām punḥhavātaiḥ ca kṣubhitāḥ saptasāgarāḥ/ kṣubdhānām sāgarāṇām ca pātālatalavāsinaḥ, vyathitāḥ pannagāḥ sarve dānavāḥ ca sahasraśaḥ/ As Ravana attacked Maatali, Shri Rama released twenties, thirties, sixties, hundreds, and several thousands of baana vrishti. But Ravana hurled off gadaas, musalaas, parighas and many such shastras. On witnessing this astonishing Maha Rama-Ravana sangrama, samudraas, pataala nivaasis, danava-naagaas besides deva-gandharva-siddhha-maharshi-kinnaraas too were breathing fast and heated up. Tatah krudhaan maha bahu Raghunaam keetivardhanah, samdhaaya dhanushaa Raamah sharamaasheevisheshopamam/Raavanasyachirochhindrachhremujjvalitakundalam, tacchiram patitam bhumou drushtam lokastribhistadaa/ Threafter, Maha baahu Ramachandra aimed his dhanush with highly poisoned ‘sarpa samaana’ arrows and finally succeeded in slashig off one of Dashagriva mastakaas. Then that single head of his ten heads once fallen on earth with his glittering karna kundalaas, emboldened Rama to hit with yet another similar arrow, but the in original place of the earlier head had meanwhile sprung another head with the glittering karna kundalas once again. Thus hundreds of Ravana mastakaas fell on the ground endlessly. tataḥ sarvāstravid vīraḥ kausalyānandivardhanah, mārgaṇair bahubhir yuktaś cintayām āsa rāghavaḥ/ mārīco nihato yais tu kharo yais tu sudūṣaṇah, krañcāranye virādhas tu kabandho daṇḍakā vane/ ta ime sāyakāḥ sarve yuddhe pratyayikā mama, kiṁ nu tat kāraṇam yena rāvaṇe mandatejasah/ Finally, Shri Rama, the beloved son of Devi Kausalya, the sampurna aastra jnata was not only shocked but concened. Then the indignated Ravana attacked Shri Rama by hurling a spree of gada-musalaas. Then this historic Rama Ravana sangrama seemed endless as deva daanava yaksha pishacha naaga rakshasaas kept on staring night long and yet continued to the day following too.

As Matali reminded of the Brahmastra which Agastya Muni bestowed to Rama, he recalled its universal impact and released on Ravana as his notorious life was closed, vindicating dharma and nyaaya again.

In the remote past, Devendra utilised the astra to control and regulate trilokas. That Brahmastra was faster than Vayu, more intense than Agni or Surya, in its volume and weight it was as of Meru Mandaraachala partataas. It was more magnificent than that of Pancha Maha Bhutas of ‘Prithivi, Aapas, Tejas, Vaayu, Aakaashas’, emerging from Surya with that kind of luminosity, ornamented with gold, along with attractive wings, with jaajjvala samaana swarupa, pralaya kaala dhuma yukta bhayankara, deeptimaana, vishadhara sarpa samaana vishayila, manushya-gajaaashva videerna and sheeghra bhedana karma aayukta. That Bramastra would smash off doors and windows, parighaadi aayudhas, parvataas besides being vajra samaana kathora, maha

As his elder brother Ravanaasura was killed by Shri Rama’s brahmastra, Vibhishana broke down, yet Rama declared that Ravana fought like a fearless hero and advised that the antyeshta karma be done soon

Bhrataram nihataṁ drushta shayanam nirjitam rane, sholavegaparitatmaa vilalaapa Vibhishanah/ As paraajitha elder brother was killed on the rana bhumi, Vibhishana with hridayashoka was affected and got broken down, recalling Ravana's paraakrama, kaarya kushalata, and of fundamental and family tradition of 'dharma and neeti'. Tadidam veeya sampraaptam yanmayaa poorvameeritam, kaama moha pareetasya yat tatra ruchitam tava/ Yatra darpaat prahasto vaa nendrijinnapare janaah, na kumbhakarnoti ratho naatikaayo naraantakah, na svayam bahu manyetaathastasyodakroyamaagatah/ Veera vara! Today you have had to face this 'durdasha' as you fell into the trap of extreme infatuation and never heeded the good counselling of you well wishers. Due to your durahaankaara and the victimisation of your inflexible ego, you had totally ignored the several alerts rendered by Prahasta, nor Indrajit., nor Atirathi Kumbhakarna, nor Atikaaya., nor Narantaka, nor even myself were ignored and now you are indeed reaping the consequences. Kim shasamihalekaya gatasatvaasya samprati, rane raakshasa shardule prasupta ivapaamshushu/ Dhritipravaalah prasabhaagyapushpastapobalah shourya nibaddha mulh/ rane mahaan rakshasa raaja vrikshah sammadihato Raghava maarutena/ What would remain now as the raakshasa shiromani Ravana would take to permanent sleep as the 'lokaadhaara bala sampanna Mahaasura'. Indeed the Rakshasa Raja Ravana Rupī Maha Vriksha with dhairya as its leaves, pride and conceit as the fragrant flowers, tapasya or dhridha sankalpa with decisiveness as the root, (albeit with a mirage like fruit of achieving Devi Sita) was swept away today on the 'rana bhumi' by the maha prachana vaayu praghaata!' As Vibhishana was crying away in this manner, Shri Rama addressed Vibhishana: Maha Veera! Your dear elder brother Ravana was not killed as a timid 'asamartha' but had all along displayed 'prachanda paraakrama' as at each step of the 'maha samgrama' his enthusiasm and passionate fervor for vijaya kaanksha was truly unparalleled as he never ever cared for 'mrityu' but kept his dedication aloft . Naivam vinishtaah shochante khatradharma vyavasthaah, vridhdhimaashamsamaanaa ye nipatanti ranaajire/ Those heros of progressive determination following the essence of 'kshaatra dharma' fallen off, ought not be cried away with. In any battle on the universe, none ever could resort to wishful thinking of vijaya after vijaya ever repeatedly without ups and downs. Iyam hi purvaih samdishthaa gatih khatriya sammataa, kshatriyo nihatah samkhena na shocya iti nishchayah/ Today if Ravana has fallen thus, was on the times immemorial was pronounced as of 'uttama gati' and indeed to those fallen heros dedicated to the 'kshaatra dharma' should not be worthy of crying away as the eternal kshaatra- shastra siddhanta indeed for ever'. Having assuaged the feelings of Vibhishana, Shri Rama stated further: Tadevam nishchayam drishta tadvamaasthaaya vijjvarah, yadihaananataram kaaryam kappayam tadanuchintaya/ sa tasya vaakyaih karunairmahaatmaa sambhiditah saadhu vibhishanena, aagjnyaapamaasa narendrasuunuh swargaayamaadhaanamadeenasatvah/ 'Shastraanusara nishchaya vichaara' would assert that Vibhishana should get readied to fulfill the pursuant kaaryaas like the preta samskaaraadi kaaryaas.' Vibhishana then having heard the 'karunaa janaka vachanaas' of Mahatma Shri Rama, had proceeded for the antyeshta karma karana to the departed Soul of Ravanaasura.

Having heard about and seen of the dead Ravana, the antahpura stree were heart broken crying away in general, but some sensible ones wished of Ravana's release of Sita should have reversed the swing to normalcy

As Ravana'sura fell dead by Raghu Rama, the antahpura stree's were truly rattled and despite the efforts of the citizens of Lankapuri yelled out as some had fallen to dust, some with haphazard and open long hairs, as though of the raucous brayings of goshaalaas, desperately shoutings away of, 'haa arya putra, haa praana naadha' Their eyes were swollen with ' karunaakrandanaas' of desperation and distress. The agitated stree's were either embracing away, or holding their hands mutually, or falling away at their feet of each other. Some were taking the fallen head of their 'praana naadha' on their laps and some got swooned down my holding his hands, feet, or massaging his heart for a miraculous revival. They cried away in 'gadgada swaraas': ha! Where is our praana naadha, who had frightened away Yama Raja, or Indra who were hiding away from his angry looks! Indeed he had forcefully occupied Kubera's pushpaka vimaana, gandharva, rishi, deva ganaas had ever hidden themselves with shivering fear, but having fought with fortitude and 'dhairya sahasaas' for days together had fallen away in the samaraanga, and is resting for ever. ha! As asura-devata-naagas were truly shuddered with fright, what a tragedy had fallen by a mere 'maanava' who put to permanent rest.!' As the 'antahpura stree's' kept on crying away, some of them made some sensible and prudent remarks thus: aśṛṇvatā tu suhr̥dām satataḥ hitavādinām, etāḥ samam idānīm te vayam ātmā ca pātitaḥ/ bruvāṇo 'pi hitam vākyam iṣṭo bhrātā vibhīṣaṇaḥ, dhṛṣṭam paruṣito mohāt tvayātmavadhakāṅkṣiṇā/ yadi niryātītā te syāt sītā rāmāya maithilī, na naḥ syād vyasanam ghoram idaṁ mūlaharam mahat/ vṛttakāmo bhaved bhrātā rāmo mitrakulam bhavet, vayam cāvidhavāḥ sarvāḥ sakāmā na ca śatravaḥ/ 'Praana naadha! If only you had heeded to the 'hitavaadi vachanaas' for the release of Sita Deva, then this ugly situation of the sad and miserable extermination of countless rakshasaas would have not occurred, nor you your self could have been saved. Thus we the antahpura stree's are having to face this frightening condition. Your dear younger brother Vibhishana had counselled you in right earnestness and finally got seperated from you and now we are all seeing the sad and rather cruel consequence. If only Mithileshwari Kumari Sita were retuned back to Rama then we would not have been literally uptooted thus. Once thus vibhishana's advice were heeded, Shri Rama should have become our friend and was the antahpura stree's would never have been subjected to this widowhood and this entire drama of life would tuned out as a comedy but not like this irretrievable tragedy! tvayā punar nṛśamsena sītām samrundhatā balāt, rākṣasā vayam ātmā ca trayam tulam nipātitaḥ/ na kāmakāraḥ kāmam vā tava rākṣasapuṅgava, daivam ceṣṭayate sarvam hataḥ daivena hanyate/ vānarāṇām vināśo 'yam rākṣasānām ca te raṇe, tava caiva mahābāho daivayogād upāgataḥ/ naivārthena na kāmena vikrameṇa na cājñayā, śakyā daivagatir loke nivartayitum udyatā/ vilepur evam dīnās tā rākṣasādhipayoṣitaḥ, kurarya iva duḥkhārtā bāṣpaparyākulekṣaṇāḥ/ Now prananaadha! You remained non compromising and non conciliatory and detained Sita for months and let the rakshasaas, we the anahpura stree's, and you yourself thus all the three parties down and have brought to this screeching dead end! Rakshasa Shiromani! Your free and unfretted single misdeed had ruined us no doubt as it us amply proven the one's fate ought to decide one's own termination and our extermination too. Maha Baho! In this just concluded maha yuddha, millions of vaanaraas and rakshasas too were massacred and that too is the impact of 'daivika nirnaya'. This amply proves reiteratingly that in the samsaara, the fruits of dhana-kaamana-paakrama-keerti pratishthas could be reversed totally by the 'daivika nirnayaas' and nothing else really.' This the antahpura strees got literally frustrated out of sorrow verging on vexation and frustration.

As the 'antahpura stree' had cried off in desperation as King Ravana'sura was dead down, the 'patta mahishi' or the prime queen Mandodari too was aggrieved to her core and wept addressing her dearest husband as follows: 'Maha Baahu Rakshasa Raja! when you were angry, even Indra would get concerned and Maharshi-Gandharva- Charanas too hide themselves. Yet a mere maanava had defeated you, was this not shameful! You could as per your own volition could do what wanted, where you desired to travel, by virtue of your maya prayoga, is this not ridiculous and unbelievable that Rama as a kaala swarupa had done this to you! May be Rama a Maha Yogi but not a Sanaatana Paramatma without adi madhyaantaras, with shankha chakra gada dhari with a srivatsa emblem on his vakshsthala, whom Devi Lakshmi would reside forever! Natha! You had already succeeded supremacy on Indra. May be at the janasthaana, Rama killed several Rakshasa Veeraas including you brother Khara proving that he was not an ordinary human! When this impregnable Lankapuri, one Hanuman Vaanara had some how entered and then itself I suspected that Rama must have had swami bhaktas. And then and there I pleaded with you to get rid of this Sita but you never allowed me to nip this bud of a headache from becoming a maha vriksha of truly poisonous nature and now this is the tragic result. Rakshasa Raja! Why indeed at the cost of your name and fame, prosperity and peace of mind, your health and care for swajanaas that you got suddenly got infatuated with this Sita! Were you not aware that she is comparable to Devis Arundhati and Rohini as pativratas. She is a Vasudha for a Vasudha and a Shri for a Shri. Indeed you had committed a great misdemeanor of treating her despite my repeated appeals to let her free. Praana naatha! I am aware that that the sarvaanga sundari shubha lakshana Sita was in the nirjana vana nivaasa but you had suddenly decided to land her under your custody by force causing physical and mental torture. Doubtless that Devi's paramount tapasya mahima had burnt you off as ashes now! In fact this should have been done even earlier but for the inability of Indra and Agni to face you so far. Pranavallabha! There is no doubt indeed that one's own past deeds of evil be paid back. In our own household there are countless women of beauty and enticement but your infatuation for Sita is ill justified. na kulena na rūpeṇa na dākṣiṇyena maithilī, mayādhikā vā tulyā vā tvaṁ tu mohān na budhyase/ sarvathā sarvabhūtānām nāsti mṛtyur alakṣaṇaḥ, tava tāvad ayaṁ mṛtyur maithilīkṛtalakṣaṇaḥ/ maithilī saha rāmeṇa viśokā vihariṣyati, alpapuṇyā tv ahaṁ ghore patitā śokasāgare/ Neither in the 'kula' the family background nor in soundarya, nor youthfulness, Sita is superior to me and why such infatuation for her! Then as her 'ananda bashpaas' overflowed replied to Hanuman in a 'gadgada vaani' or subdued tone said that she was imagining her 'swami's sundaraakara' and hence was speechless. She then addressed Hanuman: 'Vaanara Veera! as you have conveyed this truly unimaginable message from my dearest, you do most certainly deserve a very valuable and most precious gift but my misfortune is such as being not visualisable. Soumya Vaanara Veera! On this bhumandala I would not be able to perceive that could please you with any kind of gift.' As Hanuman facilitated Devi Sita for Shri Rama darshana, he addressed Rama to allow ‘shoka santapta Mithileshwari Kumari darshana’. He said: ‘She is crying away ceaselessly and is ever anxious to meet her’. Then Shri Rama closed his eyes with overflowins tears drawing heavy and hot breathings for long time and asked King Vibhishana to arrange for ‘snaana, vastra, aabhushanas’ and return. Vibhishana had himself welcomed her and conveyed Shri Rama’s instructions but Devi Sita desired to let him see her as she was in the same state. As Vibhishana had again scored ‘Raamaagjna’, she agreed to do so. Thereafter after her reentry, Vibhishana then was seeking the onlookers to clear the way. kimartham mām anādṛtya kṛśyate 'yam tvayā janaḥ, nivartayainam udyogaṁ jano 'yam svajano mama/ na gṛhāṇi na vastrāṇi na prākārās tiraskriyāḥ, nedṛśā rājasatkārā vṛttam āvaraṇam striyaḥ/ vyasaneṣu na kṛcchreṣu na yuddhe na svayamvare, na kratau no vivāhe ca darśanam duṣyate striyaḥ/ But Rama got suddenly got flared up at Vibhishana and raised his voice angrily: why are you pushing away these persons, as after all my own beloved persons. Neither a house, a dress or jewellery are significant for a woman but her conduct and mental purity should be essential to reach her husband. When there are times of obstacles and difficulties, be these be in battles, swayamvaraas, or yaginas or weddings, strees are naturally get concerned to reach her husbands. saiśā yuddhagatā caiva kṛcchre mahati ca sthitā, darśane 'syā na doṣaḥ syān matsamīpe viśeṣataḥ/ tad ānaya samīpaṁ me śīghram enām vibhīṣaṇa, sītā paśyatu mām eṣā suhṛdgaṇavṛtaṁ sthitam/ evam uktas tu rāmeṇa savimarśo vibhīṣaṇaḥ, rāmasyopānayat sītām saṁnikarṣaṁ vinītavat/ Indeed, Sita at this time of confusion is physically, mentally and psychologically is weakened to approach me. She has come by walk all the way from Asoka Vaatika to see me. Then Vibhishana realised the rather odd behaviour of Shri Rama at that critical moment. tato lakṣmaṇasugrīvau hanūmānś ca plavaṅgamaḥ, niśamya vākyaṁ rāmasya babhūvur vyathitā bhṛṣam/ kalatranirapekṣaiś ca iṅgitair asya dāruṇaiḥ, aprītaṁ iva sītāyām tarkayanti sma rāghavam/ And so did Lakshmana, Sugriva and Vibhishanaas too at the somewhat abnormal as being of Rama’s ‘manastatva’ then. As Shri Rama’s ‘bhayankara cheshtas’, one might even feel that his uncharacteristic mood was strange. lajjayā tv avalīyantī sveṣu gātreṣu maithilī, vibhīṣaṇenānugatā bhartāraṁ sābhyavartata/ sā vastrasaṁruddha mukhī lajjayā janasaṁsadi, rurodāsādya bhartāraṁ āryaputreti bhāṣiṇī/ Slowly and slowly, then Devi Sita was getting nervous and bashful seeking to suppress her emotions of anxiety, affection and admiration of her husband and then glanced as of a dream come true. atha samapanudan manaḥklamam sā; suciram adṛṣtam udīkṣya vai priyasya, vadanam uditapūrṇacandrakāntam; vimalaśaśāṅkanibhānanā tadāsīt/ Then Devi Sita felt shy like the stardom as distressed for long time was finally able to witness the visage of Purna Chandra as of Rama Chandra!

Rama asserted that he underwent insurmountable issues to resurrect Dharma and Sita’s freedom now was only incidental - as she stayed under Ravana’s care for long, he would free her seeking her own comfort

As Mithileshwari Kumari Sita was standing before her 'vinaya purvaka nayana', Shri Rama addressed her as follows: 'Bhadre! I have succeeded in the samara bhumi and uprooted the enemy and got you relieved no doubt as every body have since witnessed, thus my long standing 'maanava saadhya purushartha' undoubtedly. But the 'purusha praapta apamaana' or the the doubts of commonality continue still persistently. What could 'manda buddi maanavas' could appreciate the true intent of the accomplishment of 'purushartha'! Veera Hanuman was able to cross over the hundred yojana maha samudra. Sena sahita Sugriva had truly displayed his paraakrama. Vibhishana had left off his 'durbuddhi jyeshtha bhraata' and reached me, yet all these unbelievable developments and maha karya siddhis till date had proved futile . ity evam bruvatas tasya sītā rāmasya tadvacaḥ, mṛgīvotphullanayanā babhūvāśrupariplutā/ paśyatas tām tu rāmasya bhūyaḥ krodho 'bhyavartata, prabhūtājyāvasiktasya pāvakasyeva dīpyataḥ/ sa baddhvā bhrukuṭīm vaktre tiryakprekṣitalocanaḥ, abravīt paruṣam sītām madhye vānararakṣasām/ As Shri Rama stated this in desperation and depression, mriga nayani Devi Sita was disconcerted and shed tears spontaneously. She realised that her Swami Praana Vallabha was dazing shocked looking right at him seriously as his 'lokaapavaada bhaya' was looming large. Then Shri Rama stated aloud as if it were an announcement in the midst of Vaanara Rakshasaas. yat kartavyam manuṣyeṇa dharṣaṇām parimārjatā, tat kṛtam sakalam sīte śatruhastād amarṣaṇāt/ nirjitā jīvalokasya tapasā bhāvitātmanā, agastyena durādharṣā muninā dakṣiṇeva dik/ viditāś cāstu bhadram te yo 'yam raṇapariśramah, sa tīrṇaḥ suhṛdām vīryān na tvadartham mayā kṛtaḥ/ As manushyas were intimidated and bullied, I have indeed kept up their promises and the basic 'manavatva and maana raksha' by destroying the all time evil of Ravana. This was like what Maharshi Agastya saved from the fright of Vaataapi and Ilvava facing the dakshina disha. I have had laboured all along by re-establishing and reviving dharma and my endeavour of 'Sitaanveshana' was an excuse and a bye product but most certainly not the 'be all and end all!

[Visleshana on Agastya Maharshi and Daitya brothers Vaataapi and Ilvala as sourced from Matsya Purana]

Agastya absorbed the entire Ocean in his Kamandulu to isolate the Danavas to enable Indra to kill the notorious Danavas and released it later as his urine and was thus stated to be salty!; he also razed down the ego of Vindhya Mountain by making him bend for ever thus banning the Mountain to stoop for ever till the Sage's return which never happened as he continued to stay down the Vindhyas. There was also the legend attributed to Agastya about the Daitya brothers Ilvala and Vatapi, who knew the Mrita Sanjeevani Mantra; they would assume the forms of Brahmanas and seek the passers by to tempt them to a feast of goat-meat, and after consuming the meal ask Vatapi to come out and Vapati would come out piercing through the tummy of the stranger and the brothers would enjoy his meat. But Agastya Muni was too clever to bless the good food saying 'Vatapi! Jeerno bhava' and Vatapi was fully digested even before Ilvala was able to recite the Mrita Sanjeevani Mantra!]

that he had performed all these activities most essentially for sadaachaara raksha, and most certainly for desrtroying the all-spreading 'apavaadaas' or the baseless allegations. Devi Sita! In your charitra now, there are all types of comments, but even so I have been shielding very resolutely and firmly. This indeed like the blind person is disabled to see the light and its radiance. Even so Janaka Kumari! If you wish, you may discard me and I would whole heartedly approve of your decision. Could there be a aristocratic and affection for you had some how been dwindled and therefore I let you free to go where you wish!

At once terrified and humiliated in public by Rama, Devi Sita sat crumbled with unremitting tears and said: 'Veera! It is indeed unbecoming of a person of your stature to announce in the open public such 'karna kathora- anuchita- rushta vachanas' as to a severely and irrevocably fallen woman of my upbringing and status. Maha Baaho! I am not such a woman as you feel and treat me in public. Kindly keep trust in me as I would take a pledge in the name of 'sadaachaara' and 'parama pavitrata' and am indeed never trustworthy. As you consider me among the lowest ranking woman do please never allow your lowest thoughts. Prabho! As my body and that of Ravana did touch each other only due to my accidental helplessness but never as of volition and of my fate. Maha Raja! you had instructed Hanuman to bring me before you, and why did you not ignore me at that very time I would have decided to make my praana tyaga then and there itself. But I had been accosted me specially for this public humiliation. tvayā tu naraśārdūla krodham evānuvartatā, laghuneva manuṣyeṇa strītvam eva puraskṛtam/apadeśena janakān notpattir vasudhātālāt, mama vṛttam ca vṛttajña bahu te na puraskṛtam/ na pramāṇīkṛtaḥ pāṇir bālye bālena pīḍitaḥ, mama bhaktiś ca śīlam ca sarvaṁ te pṛṣṭhataḥ kṛtam/ Nripa shreshtha! Why indeed you are disconcerted like a fired up person despite your nature of equanimity and criticising my debased demeanour as of a fallen lowly woman. You are saturated with the pluses and minuses of sadaachaara marmas! As I was given birth to Janaka Raja's yajna bhumi and hence named Jaanaki! In fact Janaka was not my actual father born to him literally as I was 'bhu prakatita' as such not of naturally born but of celestial origin called 'Ayonija'. Like wise my background of Vidya and upbringing was also never known to the ordinary but I never made it public as of women of inferiority complex. I was married off even as of an early teen age without even being aware of its implications. I had never even made these facts to the public sans bravado and complex of either superiority or inferiority!' Having thus given vent to some basics of her origin and of celestial characteristics, Devi Sita requested Lakshmana as a 'baashpa gadgada bhaashini' as follows: citām me kuru saumitre vyasanasyāsyā bheṣajam, mithyāpavāḍopahatā nāhaṁ jīvitum utsahe/ aprītasya guṇair bhartus tyaktayā janasaṁsadi/ yā kṣamā me gatir gantum pravekṣye havyavāhanam/ evam uktas tu vaidehyā lakṣmaṇaḥ paravīrahā, amarṣavaśam āpanno rāghavānanam aikṣata/ Sumitra nandana! Can you please prepare a 'chita' of agni for me as the remedy for my distress to clean up ‘midhya kalanka’ as I am no longer be able to alive any further. My Life Master is unhappy with my ‘guna pravritti’ and declared so publicly and in this condition it should ne proper for me to resort to ‘agni pravesha’. Then Lakshmana looked at Shri Rama as Devi Sita was unable to bear her slur any further. sa vijñāya manaschandaṁ rāmasyākārasūcitam, citāṁ cakāra saumitrir mate rāmasya vīryavān/ adhomukhaṁ tato rāmaṁ śanaiḥ kṛtvā pradakṣiṇam, upāsarpata vaidehī dīpyamānam hutāśanam/ prañamya devatābhyaś ca brāhmaṇebhyaś ca maithilī, baddhāñjalipuṭā cedam uvācāgnisamīpataḥ/ Well realising Rama’s mind, Lakshmana then prepared the ‘chita’ as Shri Rama stood still beside the agni jwaalaas like Dharma Yama Raja in his well preparedness to sacrifice a praani with his head down as Devi Sita faced the ruthlessness of the flames. She then prayed to Devata Maharshis and also to the viprottamaas nearby and declared as follows: yathā me hṛdayaṁ nityaṁ nāpasarpati rāghavā, tathā lokasya sākṣī mām sarvataḥ pātu pāvakaḥ/ Karmanaa manasaa vaachaa yathaa naaticharaamyaham/ Be it known that if my hearty attachment to Shri Rama were to be truthful then Agni Deva should liberate me to safety. If my charitra is transparent and clean as Rama would doubt, then Agni Deva be kind for my safety. In case my mind, utteringsand deeds are pure and blemishless, and beyond the suspicion of Rama then may Agni Deva sustain me to safety. evam uktvā tu vaidehī parikramya hutāśanam, viveśa jvalanaṁ dīptaṁ nihsaṅgenāntarātmanā/janaḥ sa sumahāms tatra bālavyḍdhasamākulaḥ, dadarśa maithilīm tatra praviśantīm hutāśanam/ tasyām agniṁ viśantyām tu hāheti vipulaḥ svanaḥ, rakṣasām vānarāṇām ca sambabhūvādbhutopamaḥ/ So stating Devi Sita jumped into the flames. As she did so, the children and the elderly witnessed the proceedings. Rishi Devata Gandharvaadis too were able to vision the scene and so did Samasta Rakshasa Vaanaraas raised ‘hahakaaraas and artanadaas’ sky high.

Dharmatma Shri Rama was stunned in silence as Devi Sita entered the flames against the background of ‘haahaakaaraas’ of the public as witnessed by the Celestials too. Then Vishraavaputra Yaksha Kubera, Yama Dharma Raja accompanied by Pitru Denatas, Deva Raja Indra, Jalaadhipati Varuna Deva and Trinetradhara Vrishabhdeva Maha Deva, and Jagadsrashta Brahma landed on Lankapuri. Shri Rama then prostrated to them all and addressed Shri Rama as follows: kartā sarvasya lokasya śreṣṭho jñānavatām varaḥ, upekṣase katham sītām patantīmavyavāhane, katham devagaṇaśreṣṭham ātmānam nāvabudhyase/ rtadhāmā vasuḥ pūrvam vasūnām ca prajāpatiḥ, tvam trayāṇām hi lokānām ādikartā svayamprabhuḥ/ rudrāṇām aṣṭamo rudraḥ sādhyānām api pañcamah, aśvinau cāpi te karṇau candrasūryau ca cakṣuṣī/ Shri Rama! You were the swarupas of Ashta Vasus, Ekaadasha Rudras, Saadhaka Devataas, and Ashvini Kumaraas. ‘Shatru santaapa karta Shri Rama! how is this that you being the ‘Shrishtyaadi Madhyamaantaka’ are behaving like an ordinary human being in respect of Devi Sita!

Reacting to Brahma's declarations, Agni Deva emerged in public view and presented Devi Sita asserting her purity even being in Ravana's 'antahpura' for long as Rama desired to test her so to convince public.

This outstanding stree when forcefully kidnapped by that arrogant Ravana with his bala paraakramaas in your absence she was helpless no doubt but were never yielding out of fear but was indeed well composed. Ravana brought her and imprisoned her with security around as the bhayanaka Rakshasis yet with ever steady mindedness, supreme faith and unparalleled devotion for you had suffered the worst manner but was trully dedicated to you never even in dreams ot reality thought of yielding. Therafter, endless measures of coercion, intimidation and of offers of attractiv temptations were applied by Ravana but he had always received hopeless rejections. Devi Sita's conduct was pure, sinless and ever of shining heart like that of oft-molten gold. Shri Rama! Do accept her now and for ever. You may even consider this request as my considered instruction'. As having asserted thus, Shri Rama had politely as follows: ' Bhagavan, I had acted in this heartless manner to let the commonality trust my rigorous test about Janaka nandini's purity as they might tend to carry way the normal tendency that she lived for long in Ravana's antahpura. Am I not aware that both me and Devi Sita are inseparable being dedicated to each other by 'manasaa-vaachaa- karmanaa-and dharmanaa too. That was how, Sita too was never hesitant being ever ready to jump into your fierce flames, Agni Deva! Janaki is parama pavitra in trilokaas!' As Shri Rama emphasized like wise, Agni Deva blessed both the couple and disappeared.

Maha Deva complemented Rama and pointed out at Dasharadha's Soul from Swarga as the latter blessed Rama stating that he redeemed his soul as Ashtavakra did to his father and assured Kingship with glory.

As Shri Rama addressed Agni Deva as above that only to ensure public awareness that he agreed to let Devi Sita to offer to sgni jwaalaas, Maha Deva was impressed, pleased and addressed Shri Rama to state that now that the fright of Ravana was rid off it should be time for returning to Ayodhya to assuage the feelings of the grief and gloom of Bharata Shatrughnas, Devis Kousalya-Sumitra and Kaikeyis, accomplish back the Kingship, make Ayodhya public elated, strengthen the stronghold of Ikshvaaku Vamsha, gladden Brahmanas with dhana dhanyas, and thus vindicate dharma and fortify praja paripaalana. He further alerted Shri Rama that he should vision King Dasharatha as seated in a vimaana from Indra loka blessing Sita-Rama-Lakshmanas as the latter had respectfully prostrated to the Maha

Rathi Dasharatha. Then the latter asserted that without Rama not being with him, he was truly feeling that the swarga sukhas were truly futile. Dasharatha asserted that having most dutifully and successfully attained, Rama's return to Ayodhya as its rightful King should vindicate his heroism. He further stated that that was the very moment to see Rama Sita Lakshmanas with pride and their respective glories. He recalled the inhuman statements made by Devi Kaikeyi still piercing in his heart. Dasharatha further stressed: tārīto 'haṁ tvayā putra suputreṇa mahātmanā, aṣṭāvakraṇa dharmātmā tārīto brāhmaṇo yathā/ My dearest son! You have redeemed me in my post death life like Ashtavakra had in the case of his father Kahola brahmana'

[Vishleshana on Ashtavarka and his father Kahola: Maharshi Aruni taught Vedas as highlighted in Chaandogya Upanishad in his ashram. Kahoda was one of his students, along with Aruni's daughter Sujata. Aruni's daughter married Kahoda. She got pregnant, and during her pregnancy, the male child heard the chanting of the Vedas by his father and corrected the recitation as the father got angry and cursed him as eight deformities of the and was thus named as 'Ashtavakra. Maharshi Ashtavakra was the author of Ashtavakra Samhita underlining human nature and essence individual freedom vis a vis the Supreme Reality and their mutual interaction the Self and the Supreme. He underscored Atmajnaana as Almighty Brahman enters each and every Being from Brahma to a piece of grass as the Antaratma or the Self- Conscience. The easiest yet the most difficult question ever is Kah ayam atmaa or which is that Self worship worthy! The reply would be the Antaratma or the Inner Consciousness: the expressions such as 'Samjnaanam' or the emotive sentience being the state of consciousness, 'vigjnaanam' or worldly awareness or knowledge, 'pragjnaanam' or instant mental responsiveness, 'medha' or brain power and retention capacity, 'drishti' or discernment and perception through senses, 'mathih' or capacity to think pros and cons, 'manisha' or mastertminded skill of planning, 'juutih' or capacity of forbearance, smriti or memory power, 'sankalpa' or ability to initiate and decide, 'kratuh' or tenacity and dedication, 'asuh' or calculated sustenance, 'kaamah' or craving obsession all ending up in 'Vashah' or forceful possession; all these are rolled into one word viz. Conscience or the super imposition of the totality of senses viz. speech, vision, touch, taste and generation. It is indeed that kind of ascent of self consciousness that submerges karta-karma-kriya into Brahman, once mortals attain at least of intervals of Immortality]

Accordingly, Vibhishana distributed the valuables and complemented the gusto and the utmost sense of loyalty, commitment and dedication, besides parama swami bhakti. Thereafter Shri Rama settled down as the shyful Devi Sita on his laps and Lakshmana behind. As having benignly glanced the Vaanara Warriors with affection and admiration, Rama addressed Vaanara Raja Sugriva and his followers said: ‘ Now that Vibhishana’s ‘mitrochita sanmaanaas kaarya kalaapaas’ are concluded formally, you may witness this memorable ‘pushpaka vimaana’. Sakha Sugriva, you had already performed all the ‘hita-prema-mitra kaaryas’ as expected of you with perfection and commitment as your truly possessive the qualms of ‘adharma and anyaaya’ and thus organised the ‘maha vaanara sena’ in an ever memorable, prudent, tactical and commitmental manner. Vaanara raja! now you may like to return to kishkindha along with the ‘apaara vaanara sena’. Vishishana! May you be blessed to get wonderfully settled down in your Lanka samraajya and even Indraadi Devataas too would ever support you. Now this indeed high time to leave for my glorious and dearmost father’s Ayodhyaapuri as I seek you all my memoryful pranaamaas to you all.’ As Rama concluded his farewell like thanksgiving, Vibhishana stated: ‘ Bhagavan! May witness your ‘raajyaabhisheka samaya mantra poorva jaala prokshana bhagya’, receive the fortune of carrying the banner of Shri Vighraha, and prostrate at the feet of Devi Kauslya and then return to Lankapuri.’ Having so stated, Rama was pleased to address Vibhishana, Sugriva and all the Vanara veeraas as follows: priyāt priyataram labdham yad aham sasuhṛjjanaḥ, sarvair bhavadbhiḥ sahitaḥ prītim lapsye purīm gataḥ/ kṣipram āroha sugrīva vimānam vānaraiḥ saha, tvam adhyāroha sāmātyo rākṣasendravibhīṣaṇa/ ‘ Dear friends! Mighty pleased Shri Rama addressed Devi Sita : ‘ Videharaja nandini! Do you not get amazed at this mammoth pushpaka vimana of Kubera dikpati consructed by Vishvakarma! Is this not like Trikuta parvata vishaala! Now from this, you may witness the yuddha bhumi abounding rakta maamsaas as rakshasa-vaanaara sangrama had just over. Ravana had since converted as a field of ashes as unbelievable ‘himsakanda’ as per Brahma Deva’s ‘varadaana prapta’ of the devilish Ravana since destroyed but only for your sake! It was on these very battle fields, Kumbhakarana was devastated, nishachara Prahasta was destroyed while Veera Hanuman did the deed of Dhumraaksha’s doom. Rakshasas Sushena and Vidyunmaalīs were sent to graves by Lakshmana who also had the fame of Indrajit samhaara. Angada the Yuvaraja Vaali putra did the feat of throwing Vikata Rakshas to his fate besides the bhayankaraakaara Virupaksha-Mahapaashva-Mahodaras. Rakshasa yoddhas Akampana was yet another balavan rakshasa who was despatched to the ‘mtityu ghaata’, apart from Trishira-Mahakaaya-Devaantaka- Naraantakas too. The yuddhonmatta rakshasas of Kumbha Nikumbhas who were Kumbhakarnas gigantic rakshasaas too had their mrityu praatta here o this very abhorable ‘samgrama kshetra’. Vajradamshttra and Damshttra besides countless rakshasaas too were felled down on these very frightening grounds, and so were Makaraksha, Akampana, Shonikaaksha, Yupaaksha, Prajangha, Vidyujjihva, Yagijnashatru and Suptaghna. It was Ravana’s ‘pattamahishi’ - Devi Mandodari- who wept on and on at the killings of Suryashatru and Brahmarshatrus. Apart from these renowned Rakshasaagrasas were forwarded as interminable flows to the crowded Yama loka. Sumukhi! Now, you may divert your attention to the ‘maha setu bandhana’ as being famed as ‘Nala Setu’ by which crores of Vanara bhalluka veeraas facilitated to cross from shore to shore with extraordinary discipline. Mithileshwarakumai! Do note this distinct ‘ samudra madhya kukshi- aakaara’ parvata’ in the middle of the ‘maha saagara’ which Maha Deva blessed me with. That indeed was the starting point of this ‘ Maha Setu bandhana’ which might look to haven been anchored to! This ‘ punyasthala setu nirmaana kaarana moola sthala tirtha’ is venerated by trilokaas. It was at this tirtha, Vibhishana had met me. eṣā sā dṛśyate sīte kiṣkindhā citrakānanā, sugrīvasya purī ramyā yatra vālī mayā hataḥ/ dṛśyate 'sau mahān sīte savidyud iva toyadaḥ ṛśyamūko giriśreṣṭhaḥ kāñcanair dhātubhir vṛtaḥ/ atrāhaṁ vānarendreṇa sugrīveṇa samāgataḥ, samayaś ca kṛtaḥ sīte vadhārtham vālino mayā/ Site! This disinct and rather strange mountainous place is kishkinindha the place of Vaanara Raja Sugriva where I had killed Maha Bali Vaali’. As she noted that place, Sita Devi said: Maha Raja, why would we not let the strees of Kishkindha too like Tara Devi and his dear wives too. As she hinted like that, the pushpaka vimana was halted, Sugriva having rushed to his raani vaasa, hurried up his dear wives who too alighted the vimana almost too very soon. As the vimana further moved forward Rama alerted about the ‘Rishyamooka’ replete with maha dhatus and narrated that he and Lakshmana foremost met the then fugitive vaanara king Sugriva where he had made a pratigjna to kill Vaali. eṣā sā dr̥śyate pampā nalinī citrakānanā, tvayā vihīno yatrāhaṁ vilalāpa suduḥkhiṭaḥ/ asyās tīre mayā dr̥ṣṭā śabarī dharmacārīṇī, atra yojanabāhuś ca kabandho nihato mayā/ dr̥śyate ‘sau janasthāne sīte śrīmān vanaspatīḥ, yatra yuddhaṁ mahad vṛttaṁ tava hetor vilāsini, rāvaṇasya nṛśaṁsasya jaṭāyoś ca mahātmanaḥ/ Devi! what you see now is the Pampaa named Pushkarini, in the banks of which I had broken down before Lakshmana bitterly with my heart out with your viyoga. It was at this very place had the darshana of Shabari Devi where after we had a horrible encounter with the Kabandhaka asura with neither face- eyes- nor legs but a yojana long hand reach to draw with fierce speed with which he could drag animals and any other victims right into his mouth studded in his stomach, but Lakshmana and myself were able to cut his hands well before we could be devoured and killed him thus. Vilaasa shalini Site! Do you now see the vishala vriksha under which balavan PakshirajaJatayu who made all out efforts to save you from Ravanaasura but was most unfortunately killed. There after when out of sheer desperation you managed to drop down your vastraabharanaas which our vaanara veeraas had then picked up and we tried to guess the direction by which the dirty donkey chariot of Ravana was driven to. kharaś ca nihataś saṁkhye dūṣaṇaś ca nipātitaḥ, triśirāś ca mahāvīro mayā bāṇair ajihmagaiḥ/ parṇaśālā tathā citrā dr̥śyate śubhadarśanā, yatra tvaṁ rākṣasendreṇa rāvaṇena hṛtā balāt/ eṣā godāvarī ramyā prasannasālilā śivā, agastyasyāśramo hy eṣa dr̥śyate paśya maithili/ Maithili! You may now recognise the janasthaana where Khara was downed by my severe baanaas and Dushana became ‘dharaashraya’, while maha paraakrami Trishira too was bespatched to ‘shmashaana’. Vara vnini! Shubha darshane ! That indeed was the ‘parna shaala’ where we had peaceful and contented life from where the everforgetful accident of Sitaapaharana by the force of fate in the form of force of dushta Ravanaasura the historical villian! While wiping tat experience away from our memory screens, Devi! let is now witness this ‘swacchha jalaraasi’ of Godavari. On the vishala teeraas of the Sacred River be sighted the ashram of Maharshi Agastya- and the Maha Parivrata Lopamudra. vaidehi dr̥śyate cātra śarabhaṅgāśramo mahān, upayātaḥ sahasrākṣo yatra śakraḥ purāṇdarah/ ete te tāpasāvāsā dr̥śyante tanumadhyame, atriḥ kulapatir yatra sūryavaiśvānara -prabhah/ atra sīte tvayā dr̥ṣṭā tāpasī dharmacārīṇī, asmin deśe mahākāyo virādho nihato mayā/ asau sutanuśailendraś citrakūṭaḥ prakāśate, yatra mām kaikayīputraḥ prasādayitum āgataḥ/ Videhanandini! Now do note the Sharbhanga Maha Muni which is often visited Shasra netradhaari Puranadarendra! Further you may recall our nasty incident of Viratha who was killed by me. There appears now the hermitage of Maharshi Atri and the tapasvini Anasuya Devi. Sutanu devi! This Chitrakuta is resplendent as ever before. Could you recall that Kaikeyi Putra Bharata was contented with my ‘hita bodha’ and had withdrawn from accompanying me further! eṣā sā yamunā dūrād dr̥śyate citrakānanā, bharadvājāśramo yatra śrīmān eṣa prakāśate/ eṣā tripathagā gaṅgā dr̥śyate varavarṇini, śṛṅgavera -purāṇ caitya guho yatra samāgataḥ/ eṣā sā dr̥śyate ‘yodhyā rājadhānī pitur mama, ayodhyāṁ kuru vaidehi praṇāmaṁ punar āgatā/ Mithilesha Kumaari! Do see the ramaneeya yamuna river with an ever attractive setting of rich forests in the midst of which is Maha Muni Bharadwaja ashrama! Further, do see the punya Ganga Nadi and the dwija brindas seated around agni homa kundas or profound with deep tapasyaas, while the phala pushpa raajita vrishaas abound. Now you may see Shingaverapura where my dear friend Guha the memorable boatsman who dared to decline your valuable golden ring on finger on the plea of same profession should not accept gifts as he was a boatsman of Ganga but Sita Ramas were of ‘bhava saagara’! Devi Site, now look at the Sarayu River on whose banks is situated my dear father Maha Raja Dasharadha’s Ayodhya. Now take a long delightful sigh of breathing that after fourteen long years of enduring Vana Vaasa, we have the dream like return to Ayodhya to which we should prostrate to with extreme veneration. tatas te vānarāḥ sarve rākṣasaś ca vibhīṣaṇaḥ, utpatyotpatya dadṛśus tāṁ purīm śubhadarśanām/ tatas tu tāṁ pāṇḍuraharmyamālīṇīm; viśālakakṣyām gajavājisamkulām, purīm ayodhyāṁ dadṛśuḥ plavaṅgamālī; purīm mahendrasya yathāmarāvātīm/ Then Vibhishana sahita raakshasa vaanaraas knew no bounds of happiness jumping with unparalleled jubilation. Further, Vaanara rakshasaas began staring at the ‘vishala Ayodhyaapuri’ crowded with ‘gajaasva yukta prajaa samuhaas’ similar to Indra’s Amaravati!

Rama approached Muni Bharadwaaja to enquire of the yoga kshemaas of his mothers, Bharata and Ayodhy in general, and the all knowing Muni blessed Rama for his glorious return and blessed.

As the fourteen years of vana vaasa concluded by the panchami tithi, Shri Rama reached Bharadwaja ashrama and with extreme self restraint greeted the Maha Muni and asked him: 'Bhagavan! Have you recently had any significant news of welfare of Ayodhyapuri as everything has been auspicious, Bharata's administration has been comfortable, and my mothers have been of good health!' Then the Muni replied: 'Raghu nadana! Bharata has been under your regulation ever awaiting your return as keeping your paadukaas on the throne. Besides your mothers and ayodhya vaasis are normal and safe. Raghu veera! I recall that you left Ayodhya for vana vaasa as per the 'pitru agna' with cheera vastraas by foot with Sita Lakshmanas under the instruction of Kaikeyi Devi by phala moolaahaara and I had then felt extremely pained but now as you are back just as the fourteen years are over am truly delighted. Surely your stay at the jansthaana and the aftermath was pathetic especially after Ravana's cruel deeds. mārgaṇam caiva vaidehyāḥ karma vātātmaṁjasya ca, viditāyāṁ ca vaidehyāṁ nalasetur yathā kṛtaḥ, yathā ca dīpitā laṅkā prahr̥ṣṭair hariyūthapaiḥ/ saputrabāndhavāmātyaḥ sabalaḥ saha vāhanaḥ, yathā ca nihataḥ saṁkhye rāvaṇo devakaṇṭakaḥ/As you had killed Mareecha as the maya mriga and Sitapaharana by Ravana, I am aware of your Kabandha hatya followed by his divya darshana, pampasarovara yatra, Sugriva mairi, Vaali vadha, Sitaanveshana, Nala nirmita setu bandhana, Lanka dahana, putra-bandhu-mantri-sena yuta Ravana vadha as Deva ganas descended and given you blessings. I am aware of all these facts as one of my sishyas named Pravritti had been always on the move keeping track of these developments. Now I am delighted to give a boon which you may like to avail as per your wish. Then Shri Rama desired that on his travel ahead on the way there must be excellent vriksha sampada with sweet fruits and sugandha pushpas so that the vaanara rakshasas be delighted as the Maha Muni granted the wish instantly!

Even before Rama visited Muni Bharadwaaja’s ashram, he asked Hanuman to urgently ascertain the what abouts of Raja bhavan of Ayodhya Puri to know the welfare there as also visit Shringverapura and meet Nishada Raja Guha and convey to him as to how to reach Ayodhya as Guha would give the samaachaara of Bharata. Further reach Bharata and convey that Rama Lakshmana Sitas would be arriving Ayodhya soon. Hanuman! Do also brief Bharata about Sitapaharana-Sugriva maitri-Vaali vadha-Sitaanveshana-your samudra yaana- Sita darshana-our reaching the shores of the Maha Sagara-setu bandhana- Ravana Vadha-appearance of Indra-Brahma-Varunaadi and their blessings- Pitra Dasharatha darshana from swarga loka and so on. Please also sensitize Bharata about the roles and contributions of Sugriva and Vibishana and of our arrival soon enough. While you narrate these details, Hanuman! You may also not as well the sensitive reactions of Bharata too although he regretted his mother Kaikeyi's vicious planning anyway. jñeyāḥ sarve ca vṛttāntā bharatasyeṅgitāni ca, tattvena mukhavarṇena dṛṣṭyā vyābhāṣaṇena ca/ sarvakāmasamṛddhaṁ hi hastyasvarathasaṁkulam, piṭṭpaitāmahaṁ rājyaṁ kasya nāvartayen manaḥ/ saṁgatya bharataḥ śrīmān rājyenārthī svayaṁ bhavet, praśāstu vasudhām sarvām akhilām raghunandanahyayau/ tasya buddhiṁ ca vijñāya vyavasāyaṁ ca vānara, yāvan na dūraṁ yātāḥ smaḥ kṣipram āgantum arhasi/ Having heard of the narration of my accomplishments, please note Bharata's mukha mudras and possibly his inner feelings by his bodily reactions carefully. I only feel that his outlook might not give out feelings that my successful return have upset the scheme of getting the traditional kingship away! Even if he were to still supportive of Devi Kaikeyi's mindset even remotely, I should support him to continue his kingship forever.' That was how, Shri Rama briefed Anjaneya and proceeded to Ayodhya. There after, Hanuman left for Shringaverapura to meet Nishada Raja Guha to convey the happy news of Sita Rams Lakshmana's return successfully after the fourteen year vana vaasa and that he wished to convey this news to you personally but had to visit Muni Bharadwaaja for his blessings. Having conveyed this happy news to Guha inviting him to meet Shri Rama, Hanuman proceeded to Bharata at his ashrama situated a few miles away from Ayodhyapuri which was crowded with his near and dears, dharmika prajaaneeka of stree purushaas, and soldiers with their respective duties as horsemen, charioteers, and elephantry. Bharata was physically weak with repetitive upavaasaas, robed in valkava mrigacharmas like a Brahmarshi himself, ever meditating and repetitively performing Yaama Pujas to Shri Rama Padukas placed on a 'ratna khachita swarna simhasana' which were full of flower garlands and nitya naivedya padaardhaas, as always immersed in Shri Rama Dhyana ever awaiting for His return to Ayodhya. Then Hanuman donning the dress of a huma being was highly impressed at the 'Nitya Rama Paduka Pattaabhishekas'. Having approached Bharata, he stated as follows: vasantam danḍakāranyaṁ yaṁ tvam cīrajaṭādharam, anuśocasi kākutstham sa tvā kuśalam abravīt/ priyam ākhyāmi te deva śokaṁ tyakṣyasi dāruṇam, asmin muhūrte bhrātrā tvam rāmeṇa saha saṁgataḥ/ nihatya rāvaṇam rāmaḥ pratilabhya ca maithilīm, upayāti samṛddhārthaḥ saha mitrair mahābalaiḥ/ lakṣmaṇaś ca mahātejā vaidehī ca yaśasvinī, sītā samagrā rāmeṇa mahendreṇa śacī yathā/ Mahanubhava Bharata! As you are robed in 'dandakaaranya cheera vastra jataa dharana yukta nirantara Rama Paduka Puja nimagnas'! Now kindly leave this 'nirantara shokaaveshaas' as I have the honour of giving you this sensational news of 'Rama Sita Lakshmana Punaraagamana'! Bhagavan Shri Rama having demolished the 'loka kantaka' Ravanaasura, is returning to Ayodhya as Lakshmana sameta Devi Sita, along with his associates and admirers'. As Hanuman broke this announcement, Bharata was dazed and swooned with such unbelievable announcement with his 'ananda bashpaas' flowing away with thrilled body, mind and senses. Having gradually recovered, Bharata held Hanuman's both hands tight and embraced him repeatedly with paramaanada and replied with excitement: devo vā mānuṣo vā tvam anukrośād ihāgataḥ, priyākhyānasya te saumya dadāmi bruvataḥ priyam/ gavām śatasahasraṁ ca grāmāṇām ca śatām param, sakunḍalāḥ śubhācārā bhāryāḥ kanyāś ca ṣoḍaśa/ hemavarṇāḥ sunāsorūḥ śaśisaumyānanāḥ striyaḥ, sarvābharāṇasaṁpannā saṁpannāḥ kulajātibhiḥ/ Dear brother! Are you a devata or a manushya having arrived here to convey this unbelievable announcement well deserving plentiful rewards of lakshaadhika go-vastu- dhana-kanaka-kaantaas'. So raised his voice in high tone of exhilaration and animation.

Hanuman then had briefly narrated to Bharata of the proceedings after the latter's earlier darshana of Shri Rama-Sita-Lakshmanas, till their much awaited Ayodhya Darshana.

As Bharata was overwhelmed with excited joy at the news of the soonest 'punaraaganana' of Sita Lakshmana Sahita Shri Rama after fourteen long year 'vana vaasa', he expressed to Hanuman: kalyāṇī bata gātheyaṁ laukikī pratibhāti me, eti jīvantam ānando naraṁ varṣaśatād api/ rāghavasya harīṇāṁ ca katham āsīt samāgamah, kasmin deśe kim āsṛitya tat tvam ākhyāhi prēcchataḥ/ sa prṣṭo rājaputreṇa

bṛsyām samupaveśitaḥ, ācacakṣe tataḥ sarvaṁ rāmasya caritaṁ vane/ ‘ Hanuman! To day I see that the old adage appears to be truthful which states: ‘ Any human being in one’s lifetime should certainly receive a truly happy time, even after having to wait for hundred years of existence. Soumya Hanuman! Kindly explain to me as to how Shri Rama got intimate with Vaanaraas, where and how! This is a matter of great curiosity for me!’ Then Hanuman gave a lucid and fairly detailed reply as follows: ‘ Bharata Prabho! You are fully aware as to how and why Ramachandra vanavaasa had happened, how Devi Kaikeyi secured two boons from King Dasharatha, how due to putra shoka the dear father died, how from the Raja Griha were summoned and Rama obeyed pitru vaakya paripaalana, how Rama Lakshmana Sitas reached Chirakuta parvata, how Bharata begged of Rama to agree for kingship and how Rama convinced you to return to Ayodhya. Now, let me continue as to what had happened. Sita Rama Lashmanas had then to face the exit of Munis from Chitrakuta due to Rakshasa’s harassment, and moved forward to encounter Viradha Rakshasa who was killed by Rama banaas. Further three more elephant sized Rakshasaas who too were killed. As the ever frighened Sita devi as the evening approached the threesome reached the ashram of the Muni Sharabhanga for a night shelter. While the Muni in the presence of Ramas reached swarga loka later, the threesome of Ramaas move on further to Jana sthaana and made a ‘parna kuteera’ on the neighbourhood of muni ashramas. There then entered an ugly Rakshasi named Shurpanakha and desired to marry Shri Rama and kept on pestering him as out of consideration for her being a women asked Lakshmana to severe her ears and nose. Then some fourteen thousand rakshasaas attacked Rama Lakshmanas as there were all killed by Rama banaas. Revengefully further rakshasaas named Khara Dushanas and Trishira too attacked who too were devastated and tried to get rid of the rakshasa problem for good. Meanwhile the rakshasi approached Ravana the King of Lanka saamraajya who in turn hatched a plan with another maayaavi rakshasa named Mareecha who tempted Devi Sita as a maya mriga. Then Sita requested Rama to catch the glittering golden deer. Rama chased the deer with his dhanush baanaas and killed it. To ascertain as to what had happened as Mareecha kept made false shoutings as ‘ha Sita ha Lakshmana’, then Devi Sita pressurised Lakshmana to leave her alone. Then Ravanaasura had at once entered the parna kuteera at the janasthaana and forcefully kidnapped Devi Sita and brought her to Lankapuri by his vimaana. On way, grudhra raaja jataayu tried to save her by his all out efforts but got crashed down. He kept on pestering Devi Sita to marry him even by tempting her with the offers of Prime Queenship. Meanwhile Rama Lashmanas returned and got bewildered at the absence of Devi Sita. Having tirelessly searched for on and on saw Jatayu the gridhra raja a friend of King Dasharatha having fallen down and made the antya kriyas of the dead Jatayu. Thereafter, Rama Lakshmanas out of sheer helplessness and aimlessly wandered Godavari’s pushpavanaas. During their drifting meanderings, they encountered a rakshasa named Kabandha who was killed but his relieved Soul from high skies directed Rama Lakshmanas to reach Rishyamooka parvata for possible help from the fugitive King of Vaanaras named Sugriva. Rama helped Sugriva to kill Vaali as a gesture of avowed friendship as Sugriva the new King of Vanaras arranged ten crores of vaanaraas to search for Devi Sita in various directions. As the north-east and west bound vaanaraas returned futile the south bound vaanaraas including me by the name of Hanuman lost our way in the Vindhya Parvata Guhas could return to Kishkindha within the time schedule of three months as vanaras of other directions had honoured. Then we saw the fallen and sickly Sampaati, another gidhraraja being the brother of Jatayu, who guided us to the way of Lankapuri of Ravana who had indeed kidnapped Devi Sita and retained in his antahpura as he saw her from the skies. Then I, Hanuman, had crossed the hundred yojana distance of the Maha Samudra and was able to succeed locating Devi Sita at the Ashoka Vana Vaatika under a huge and sprawling shadow of a tree with unclean clothing with continuous cryings as surrounded by cruel and ugly rakshasis. I had in my minatured body form conversed with her as from Shri Rama as a parama bhakta of his and convinced her with a finger ring of Rama himself and assured her that Rama would soon arrive to liberate her. In turn, she gave her ‘Choodaamani’ as a return memory to Rama. mayā ca punar āgamyā rāmasyākliṣṭakarmanāḥ, abhijñānaṁ mayā dattam arcīsmān sa mahāmaṇiḥ/ śrutvā tām maithilīm hr̥ṣṭas tv āśāsaṁse sa jīvitam, jīvitāntam anuprāptaḥ pītvaṁṛtam ivāturalḥ/ tataḥ samudram āsādyā nalam setum akārayat, atarat kapivīrāṇām vāhinī tena setunā/ As I was highly excited to have finally succeeded in ‘Devi Sita darshana’ and having destroyed the best part of Lankapuri, had speeded up with ‘vaayu manovega', reached Shri Rama and conveyed to him of the welfare of Devi Sita while handing over her 'choodaa -mani'. Shri Rama having felt immensely relieved of Devi Sita's safety, like a 'maranaasanna rogi' would secure 'amrita'. Then like pralaya kaala 'Samvarka naamaagni', Shri Rama made all out efforts to devastate Ravana's Lankapuri. Subsequently, Rama as having led the ten crore strong maha vaanara sena reached the shores of the Samudra, encouraged Nala named Vaanara Shreshtha for setu bandhana the ever memorable bridge across the hundred yojana's distance to cross the maha sagara, and destroyed rakshasa veeraas. Neela Vanara killed Pahasta, Lakshma destroyed Ravana Putra Indrajit, and Raghunandana himself devastated Kumbhakarna the younger brother of Ravana and finally Ravanaasura himself. Then arrived at the Yuddha bhumi the Deva brinda of Indra-Yama-Varuna-Maha Deva-and Brahma Deva ho facilitated the darshana of Maha Raja Dasharatha from swargaloka. Further then arrived Rishi-Devashis and blessed Shri Rama. Subsequently Rama arrived at Kishkindha, Prayaga of Triveni Nadi Sangama for Bharadwaaja Muni darshana and tomorrow at the 'shubha pushya nakshatra yoga kaala' should occur Devi Sita Lakshmana sahita Shri ama darshana prapi' should be facilitated'. As thus Hanuman with his 'madhura vaani' made the proclamation, the ever elated Bharata declared: ' Here and now, my 'chira kaala manoratha praptii' is indeed about to be fulfilled, by the grace of Shri Rama Chandra!'

As Sita Rama Lakshmanas were arriving, Bharata Shatrugmas made elaborate arrangements at Ayodhya- the much excited Bharata hands over the Kingdom as of a deposit to Rama after a public announcement.

Bharata having been excited at the grand news of Shri Ramachandra's victorious return to Ayodhya, asked Shatrughna to get ready as the latter instructed respective agents and personalities concerned to organise pujas on temples with sugandha pushpas, stuti purana shravanaas; veda- itihasa-subhashita pravachanaas, naada swaraas, vaadya brinda pradarshanaas, skyhigh sounding dhamaraka mrigana bhedanas, utsaaha poorvaka naatya-nritya- madhura geeta pradarshanas, and so on in market places, street corners, high road junctions, udyana vanaas, besides gorgeous lightings of bhavana, maarga, praja grihas. May the Mantriganas, Senaadhyakshas, Sainikas, Strees, brahmana-kshatrya-vanikaadi chatur varnas be all notified of the 'Sita Lakshmana yukta Ayodhya Ramaagamana.' Then let the ups and downs of rahadaaris, lanes and by lanes with spick and span cleanliness be done forthwith. Be all the highroads, and so on be decorated with fresh flowers, sugandha dravyaas, and vijaya toranaas'. As per Shatrughna's instructions, the eight mantris named Dhrushti, Jayanta, Vijaya, Siddhardha, Arthasaadhaka, Ashoka, Mantrapaala, and Sumantra alighted dhvaja bhushana Gaja Rajas had taken rounds of Ayodhyapuri to supervise and ensure that the various instructions of the local authorities were followed. Then the senaadhakshaas too settled in chariots ensuring readiness of safety, orderliness and the respective battalions of horsemen, charioteers, gajaa rohas, and foot soldiers. Then the antahpura strees headed by Devis Kousalya, Sumitra and Kaikeyi headed to Nandigrama. Dharmatma Bharata along with Shatrughna, as surrounded by Mantri ganas, mukhya brahmana ganas, chaturvarna pradhaanaas, then lifted Shri Rama Pavitra Padukas onto his head as Shatrughna handled white 'chaamaras' as the procession moved on as 'Vandeejana' sang Ramayana geetas, while shankha bheri gambhira dhwanis were activated in full swing. upavāsakṛṣo dīnaś cīrakṣṇājīnāmbaraḥ, bhrātur āgamaṇaṁ śrutvā tat pūrvaṁ harṣam āgataḥ, pratyudyayau tadā rāmaṁ mahātmā sacivaiḥ saha/ On account of repetitive 'upavaasaas', Bharata was physically weak and thinned down as wearing krishnacharma and cheera vastraas yet awaiting Rama darshana bhagya with tremendous enthusiasm and eagerness. As a huge crowd of Ayodhyapurivaasis had gathered there at Nandigrama, Bharata remarked that among the crowd, he could not spot vaanaras as there are by nature of chanchala buddhi, and in their absence would this announcement of Shri Rama's arrival here might nor be misleading! Hanuman smiled and replied: Mahatma Bharata! Earlier to this Rama visited Bharadwaja Maha Muni and gave the boon to Rama that the surroundings of his ashram were barren hitherto would now be full of sweet fruit gardens and surely our vaaraara veeras should be enjoying the fresh fruits in those gardens but it now would appear that they had already left the gardens on the Gomati River and should be arriving here and time; indeed I now hear the ‘kolaahala’ of their arrival here!’ Even as Hanuman was explaining like wise, the Pushpaka Vimana was sighted like the ‘ushakaala bhaskara deva’ as that was that of Dikpati Kubera created by Vishvakama’s ‘mano sankalpa siddhi’! Anjaneya further explained: ‘Bharat Prabho! It is right within this Pushpaka Vimana would soon arrive Raghuvamsha veeras Rama Lakshmanas along with Devi Sita accompanied by Sureeva Vibhishanaas!’ Then there was a huge tumultuous furore and pandemonium of the crowds with shrieks of excitement: ‘aho! Shri Ramachandra is arriving’. Shri Rama sighted Bharata foremost, as the latter bent down making ‘viveetabhaba pranaama’. As soon as the Pushpaka Vimana had landed, Bharata ascended up with anxiety and blissfulness and made a ‘saashtaanga pranaama’ while Rama hugged Bharata with affection. Later, Bharata hugged Lakshmana too and pada pranaama to Videha Raja Kumari while pronouncing his own name. Bharata embraced Sugriva, Jambavan Andada, aindaa, Dwivida, Neella, Rishabha, Sushena, Nala, Gavaksha, Gandhamaadana, Sharabha and Panas as Hanuman kept on announcing there introductions. Then Bharata saluted Sugriva and remarked: now you are our fifth brother as a true mitra is a real brother. Further Bharata addressed Vibhishana as follows: ‘Rakshasa Raja! Indeed this is our great fortune that having attained his friendship that Shri Rama got facilitated success of a ‘maha dushkara kaarya saadhana’! Meanwhile, Shatrughna prostrated to Rama Sita Lakshmanas. Shri Rama approached his mother Devi Koushalya who since had become weak, lean and faded; as he prostrated with ‘ananda bashpaas’ she embraced him with great relief. Then he made dada pranaamaas to Devis Sumitra and Kaikeyi. Meanwhile, samasta Ayodhya prajaaneeka addressed in a well tutored chorus: ‘svāgatam te mahābāho kausalyānandavardhana, iti prāñjalayah sarve nāgarā rāmam abruvan/’ Welcome, Welcome and Welcome again, Maha Baahu Rama the most affectionate son of Devi Kousalya!’ Subsequently, Bharata having lifted, placed on his head and brought Shri Rama Paada Paadukaas made an announcement publicly with bent knees and folded hands: abravīc ca tadā rāmam bharataḥ sa kṛtāñjaliḥ, etat te rakṣitam rājan rājyam niryātitaṁ mayā/ adya janma kṛtārthaṁ me samivṛttaḥ ca manorathaḥ, yas tvām paśyāmi rājānam ayodhyāṁ punar āgatam/ avekṣatām bhavān koṣaṁ koṣṭhāgāraṁ puram balam, bhavatas tejasā sarvaṁ kṛtaṁ daśaguṇam mayā/ ‘Rama Prabho! This Ayodhya Samrajya of yours had been kept as a ‘dharoha’ or deposit for all these fourteen long years of your absence in the form of ‘Shri Rama Paadukaas’ now being returned safe . Your kingdom is being returned herewith along with praja, properties and the senaas too while your treasury and ‘charaastis’ have since been doubled!’ As bhraatru vatsala Bharata made this heart rending public announcement, Rakshasa Raja Vibhishana had tears in his eyes. Thereafter, Shri Rama placed Bharata on his right lap and proceeded to Bharataashrama while thanking the Pushpaka vimana chaalakas to convey his gratitude to Dikpati Kubera. Further, Shri Rama remembered his friend Suyagjna the Vasishtha Putra, honoured him as to Vasishtha himself and requested him to convey of his arrival to Rajya Purohita Maharshi Vasishtha.

Bharata then having folded his hands and raised them on to his head assured Shri Rama as follows: 'Mahatma! Now by accepting Kingship of this 'Saamraajya' you have not only preserved my mother's prestige by honouring me to retain it till your return, but enhanced my status too! Like an 'asaamartha vrishabha' As an animal suffered the heavy burden imposed by its master for long not being able to lift up even its own kid too any further, I had so far suffered by holding like a dam or a barrier seeking to resist the torrential flows of an ocean, but have reached by now a breaking point in managing this 'maha saamraajya' any further! Shatru damana veera! could any body imitate for long to bray like a donkey or 'coo coo' like a cuckoo bird for ever! Maha Baaho Narendra ! There may also an analogy of planting in one's garden which had eventually become a maha vriksha, it would be very difficult to ascend it and even to properly look at the luscious fruits, let alone eat and enjoy their sweetness! And having been increasingly burdened by the weight of the fruits, the tree might drop off the rotten fruits and eventually break down with its own burden. Likewise a 'maha saamraajya' might not even pay off the wages of the workers if this situation might persist any further. This indeed why is that Ayodhya 'prajaaneeka' and most certainly myself are anxious to celebrate your raajyaabhisheka at once and in the most befitting manner! May now the 'vaadya madhura dhwanis', 'khaanchi nrupura jjankaaraas', 'manohara geeta nissvanaas' hence be initiated at once!' As Bharata made his inaugural remarks, the entire public roared with repeated 'tathaastu vachanaas' and Shri Rama too in his sonorous voice repeated the 'tathastu vachana' of the public! Then as instructed by Shatrughna, a select group of expert 'mundana' kartas' surrounded Shri Rama with 'hatsa shlaaghana nipunata'. Then foremost Bharata was bathed with 'sugandhita jalaas', then Lakshmana, followed by Vaanara Raja Sugriva and Rakshasa Raja Vibhishana. Then after the removal of the earlier cladding, Shri Rama was bathed again formally with refreshing waters with 'sugandha anulepana, where after decorated with 'pushpa haaraas, bahu mulya peetaambara vastraas, aabhushanaas' as appropriate for the rajyaabhisheka and was requested to be seated on the 'Rajya Simhasana' of gold glittering with 'navaratnas' like 'vajra maanikya vaidurya manis' studded in. Shatrughna then made the 'shringaara dharana yukta alankaaraas' to Shri Rama. King Dasharatha's manasvini Ranis of Kausalya-Sumitra-Kaikeyis initiated the 'alankaara kaaryakrama' to Videha Nandini Devi Sita. Further as per the instructions of Shatrughna, Saradhi Sumantra brought the divya radha as Maha Bahu Shri Rama was seated. Sugriva and Hanuman with 'swarna karna kundalas' with divya vastras had followed. Sugriva's antahpura strees gave finishing touches to what the queen mothers had done essentially to Devi Sita. Ayodhya's Mantris had discussed the finer points with Raja Purohita Maharshi Vasishtha as the latter had since arrived. The three Ministers named Ashoka, Vijaya, and Siddhardha were engaged in the 'nagara samridhi' in the face of Shri Rama's taking over the reins of the Rajyaanga. Now, the Shri Rama Ratha moved ahead as Bharata was the saarathi, Shatrughna with 'Chhatra' and Lakshmana with 'Chaamara' behind. It was that time when Deva Marudgana Rishis were engaged to Rama stuti uccharanas from the skies even as the vedavetta's mantroccharanas were resounding. Maha tejasvi Sugriva mounted the Shatrughna naamaka gajendra as followed by the distinguished Vaanara yoddhas too on their respective elephants. Maha Vaanaraas who had assumed maanava swarupas joined as the foot soldiers. Vibhishana too along with his mantris was seated in another mountain like elephant as the visiting onlooker prajaaneeka wondered whether one mountain was placed on another mountain! Purusha Simha Shri Rama, in the midst of shankha dhvanis- dundubha bheris had then reached the Ayodhapuri which was decorated like Indra Bhavana. Pura jyeshthaas then mingled the praja samudra with 'hardika ahvaanaas'. Just as nakshatras in mandalis surrounded Purna Chanda, it was in that very formulations, the mantri manadalis, veda vetta brahmana mandalis, and prajaaniikas were sparkling all around. sa purogāmibhis tūryais tālasvastikapāṇibhiḥ, pravyāharadbhir muditair maṅgalāni yayau vṛtaḥ/ akṣataṁ jātarūpaṁ ca gāvaḥ kanyās tathā dvijāḥ, narā modakahastās ca rāmasya purato yayuh/ With 'vaadya brindaas' in the lead with 'karataala swastika mangala geetaas of nagara vaasis in tunes, Shri Rama chandra faced by 'akshata suvarna yukta paatraas', 'go brahmana kanya hasta yukta madhus' was welcomed my aneka prajaanneka ayodhya pura vaasis with blissful cheers. sakhyam ca rāmaḥ sugrīve prabhāvaṁ cānilātmaje, vānarāṇām ca tat karma vyācacakṣe 'tha mantriṇām, śrutvā ca vismayam jagmur ayodhyāpuravāsinaḥ/ dyutimān etad ākhyāya rāmo vānaramvṛtaḥ, hr̥ṣṭapuṣṭajanākīrṇām ayodhyām praviveśa ha/ The puravaasis were engrossed with discussions about Shri Rama's parama mitrata of Sugriva, Hanuman's veera prataapa, Vaanara veeraas adbhuta yuddha karya kramas and so on. In the course of the endless mutual exchanges of information, the ayodhya pura vaasis were truly thrilled and ecstatic. As such discussions of Shri Rama Vijaya, the Epic Hero entered Ayodhya Puri and reached the King's palace which was already shimmering to glory with vijaya pataakaas. As he entered the three mothers welcomed him with ananda pashpaas as he had instantly touched their feet dutifully and addressed Bharata to offer the 'mukta vaidurya mani jatila vishala bhavana' nearby and accordingly Bharata held both the hands of Sugriva to enter it as Sugriva requested Bharata that 'Ramaabhisheka ninitta pavitra jala kumbhas' be instructed to be kept safe and four of the vaanaras placed four ratna yukta swarna chaturkumbhas were fetched. Sugriva then accosted select maha vaanaras to reach four maha samudras early morning and bring the sacred waters from there. Then four Vanara jyeshthas named Jambavan, Hanuma, Vegadarshi Gavaya and Rishabha flew off with the swarna kumbhas each atonce to bring back with waters from four samudras and five maha nadis. Jambavan the bhalluka raja filled up with the swarna kumbha from 'purva samudra', Rishabha from 'dakshina samudra', Gavaya from 'paschima samudra' and Hanuman from the utara vartii 'maha saagara' well beyond the himalayas. abhiṣekāya rāmasya śatrughnaḥ sacivaiḥ saha, purohitāya śreṣṭhāya suhr̥dbhyaś ca nyavedayat/ tataḥ sa prayato vṛddho vasiṣṭho brāhmaṇaiḥ saha, rāmaṁ ratnamayo pīṭhe sahasitam nyaveśayat/ vasiṣṭho vāmadevaś ca jābālir atha kāśyapaḥ, kātyāyanah suvarjñās ca gautamo vijayas tathā/As the four Abhisheka Purvna Kumbhas as secured from four maha samudras and twelve maha nadis, thus brought by four maha vaanara shreshthas, Purohita Vasishtha Maharshi invited Sita sahita Shri Ramachandra to be seated on a ratna peetha. Following this on the pattern of Indra how dutifully oergrnised the performance of abhishekaas to ‘ashtaavasus’ viz. ‘Aapa, Dhruva, Soma, Dhara, Anila, Anala, Pratyusha and Prabhasa, Shri Rama along with Devi Sita too had devotedly organised the performance of ‘sugandha purvaka abhishekaas’ to Vasishta-Vaama Deva-Jaabaali-Kashyapa-Katsyaayana-Suyagjna.Goutama and Vijaya Maharshis. The abhishekaas were actually performed by Ritvik Brahmanas, sixteen kanyaakumaaris, while chatur lokapaalaas viz Kubera-Yama-Indra and Varuna of North-South-East-West repectively. sarvausadhirasais cāpi daivatair nabhasi sthitaiḥ, caturhir lokapālaiś ca sarvair devaiś ca saṁgataiḥ/ chatraṁ tasya ca jagrāha śatrughnaḥ pāṇḍuraṁ śubham, śvetam ca vālavayajanaṁ sugrīvo vānareśvaraḥ, aparaṁ candrasaṁkāśaṁ rākṣasendra vibhīṣaṇaḥ/ There after was the climatic Shri Rama’s Mahaabhisheka in the presence of all the invited guests and Ayodhya vaasis was performed gloriously as all the Celestials including Dikpalakas were enraptured. Then Purohita Vasishthadi Maharshis lifted the ‘Brama deva prasaada siddha- ratna shobhita divya dedeepyamaana swarna kireeta’ and placed it on Shri Ramna Mastaka as the asheervachanas of the ritvika-panditas with veda mantras. At that very time, Shatrughma hoisted a shveta chhatra, Vaanara raja Sugriva and Rakshasa Raja Vibhishana had activised cool sweeps of chaamaraas. mālām jvalantīm vapuṣā kāñcanīm śatapuṣkarām, rāghavāya dadau vāyur vāsavena pracoditaiḥ/ sarvaratnasamāyuktam maṇiratnavibhūṣitam, muktāhāraṁ narendrāya dadau śakrapracoditaiḥ/ prajagur devagandharvā nanṭuś cāpsaro gaṇāḥ, abhiṣeke tad arhasya tadā rāmasya dhīmataḥ/ Deva Raja Indra prerita Vayu Deva had then gifted a ‘suvarnamaya deeptimati ratna yukta mani mukta maala’ to Shri Rama. Coinciding with Rama Rajyaabhisheka, Deva Gandharva Gaana yukta- Apsarasa nritya sammaananas were offered. At the Rajyaabhisheka muhurta, Prithvi Devata was full of greenery in the dhaanya pradeshaas, vrikshas were replete with sugandha pushpaas and madhura phalas and mayura hamsa nrityas were graced. Maha Raja Shri Rama made ‘daana pushkalas’ of lakhs of go-ashva-gaja- ‘bahu mulya vastra- mani suvarnaabharanas’ to ‘brahmana-pandita- muni pungavaas’ besides to taditara prajaaneekas too. Shri Rama then gifted to Sugriva a priceless and lustrous ‘suvarna haara’ studded with divya Pushparaga, Neela, Vaidurya,, Vidruma, Muktha, Marakatha, Vajra, Gomedha, Manikyas. Vaali Putra Angada gifted suvarna bhuja keertis as similarny studded with nava ratnas. Subsequently Shri Rama gifted the ‘muktaahaara’ which Vayu Deva had gifted to him to Janaka nandini. Devi Sita then kept on thinking of a suitable souvenir to offer to Hanuman and gazed at Shri Rama as the latter exclaimed whether she was not contented with the celestial presentation by Vayu Deva himself. She had truly kept Rama in suspense for a while and finally presented the ‘muktaahara’ to Hunuman as being the symbol of tejas- dhriti-yasha-chaturata-shakti- vinayata-neeti-purushartha- paraakrama- uttama buddhi- to the sadguna sampanna and vidyaamaan to Vayu Putra! Later on Shri Rama presented appopriate souvenirs to the various other vanara pramukhas and also requested Angada to hand over his suitable mementos all the Vanaras. Then the never tired Shri Rama embraced Rakshasa Raja Vibhishana for his outstanding services both during the ‘maha samgrama’ as a true friend, philosopher and guide and thereafter too as an everlasting his closest associate for times to come. Further on he endeared the Riksha Raja Jambavan like wise for this and subequent yugaas as well. There after Dvividha-Mainda- Neelaadi maha vaanara yoddhas for their unimaginaire contributions rendered to the cause of ‘dharma vijaya’. Subsequently Sugriva and Vibhishana returned back to their respective Kingdoms. Shri Rama then announced Bharata as the Yuva Raja and repeated his celebrations too albeit with lesser pomp.rājyaṁ daśasahasrāṇi prāpya varṣāṇi rāghavaḥ, śatāśvamedhān ājahre sadaśvān bhūridakṣiṇān/ ājānulambibāhuś ca mahāskandhaḥ pratāpavān, lakṣmaṇānucaro rāmaḥ pṛthivīm anvapālayat/Shri Raghunatha having thus accomplished the Kingdom had occupied the simhasana for eleven thousand years and performed hundred ashamedha yagjnaas, besides Poundareeka- Vaajapeyaadi yagjnaas too. Shri Rama was an adviteeya ajaanu bahu shareera, with vishaala vakshasthala and along with Lakshmana too with similar physical and mental faculties. During his everlong sovereignty , Rama’s prajaaneka was even contented, with ‘sasya shyamalas’, with timely rains, with quietude and tranquility, with none of jantu-sarpa-chora baadhas or of ‘adyaatmika- aadhi bhoutika- and aadhi daivika taapatrayas. During his sovereignty there was the predominance of dharma-nyaaya paraayanata and of sahasra varsha jeevana- sahasra putra poutra praapti, with little awareness of diseases or cryings. Ramo Ramo Rama iti prajaanaama bhavan kathaah, Ramabhutam jagadbhyud Rameraajyam prashaasati/ All during Shri Rama's shashana kaala, all across the prajaavarga, only Rama-Rama- Rama naama-charcha-chintana as SARVAM RAMA MAYAM!

[Brief Vishleshana on Rama Rajya from Agni Purana :Rama Rajya: The perception, as to how a King should govern his Kingdom and the Subjects, was illustrated by Lord Rama to Lakshmana. Agni Purana has described Rama's Percepts of an Ideal King: A King has to create wealth, increase it, protect it, and donate it. He should be humble-the humility arising out of victory, essentially after defeating the human senses of revenge, anger and retribution. He should be strong, magnanimous and forgiving, kind and protective. His support to the inferior and the needy is as significant as to punish and uproot the wicked and harmful. The human vices of greed, lust, dishonesty are but the reflections of a sick mind, which has no conviction or courage or helpfulness to the needy. Rama also advised considerable patience to deal with the timid, haughty and hurtful as these are indeed the traits of a villain. Once there is no ray of remorse and there is no trace of recovery from the pent-up senses of ego, impoliteness and audacity, then the time to end the culprit has arrived.]

As this glorious Epic of Ramaayana is heard of or read through, one would to be purged and exonerated of sinfulness. By hearing of the Shri Rama Rajyabhisheka Prasakti, one's own desire of 'suputra-dhana-kanaka-vastu prapti' gets fortified. Prithvi Vijaya and Shatru adheenata too become realities, as longevity and noble mindedness, anchored to virtue and justice too. As Devi Kousalya was blessed with Shri Rama-Sumitra with Lakshmana-Kaikeyi with Bharata. Those who devotedly perform the 'pathana-shravana-nidhidhyaasas' of this Adi Kavya are assured of the keerti of contentment of life and of 'vamsha paaramparya'. This is the Ramaneeya Adi Kavya which was scripted by Maharshi Valmiki, yugas ago, delineating the unbelievable and sensational triumph of a Monarch bestowing the enhancement of name and fame of suputra-poutra- praputraas with unique fulfillment of 'saardhaka janma'. Sampurna Ramayana Kavya 'shravana pathanas' of Shri Rama Vijaya Kathaarupa would extend the 'ayurdaaya' by year after year extension till the life time adds up till 'karma saaphalyata' readied for admission to swarga loka. Indeed, Saakshaat Shriman Narayana manifested Himself as Shri Rama, Devi Sita as Maha Lakshmi and Lahshmana as the Adi Sheshu. Shrota Prajaas! May you all be blessed. Do read this Maha Kavya with 'manasphurti bhakti vishvaasa' for the Realisation of the Supreme.

ANNEXTURE : VISLESHANA SAMHITA OF ESSENCE OF VALMIKI RAMAYANA

PREFACE

Essence of Valmiki Ramayana hereby concludes covering Baala-Ayodhya-Aranya- Kishkindha- Sundara- Yuddha Khandas of Sugar Cane Juice, topped up by this Uttara Ramayana. This prabandha kaavya is a gateway to longevity and prosperity besides being a sin destroyer.

Ramayana is as good as Veda Pathana as vidwan purushas do always read, hear and retrospect about. Its pathana assures 'suputras for putra heenaas' and 'soubhagya to dharma heenaas'. If just one 'shloka pathana' a day or even of one 'charana' would ensure 'paapa naashana'. Indeed this Ramayana Prabandha Kavya yields 'ayurvridhi' as 'prati dina pathana' would bestow 'paraloka sanmaana'. He or she with seriousness and concentration could read either at 'praatahkala, or madhyaahna or sayam kaala', would remain ever contented. 'Shri Raghu naadha charitra sampurma pathana-shrotra-niddhidhyaasana' ought to bestow Vishnu dhaama .Raghavendra Charitra is the easy passage for accomplishing 'chaturvidha dharmarthas kaama mokshas' in one's own iha janmaa too.

Uttara Ramayana is a recall of the highlights of all the happenings the Sampurana Ramayana depicting Shri Rama as an ideal human being with the maximum forbearance, should and could ever display starting from his ability to learn- practice austerities- utilise the skills aptly in the challenging situations, even to the extent of prolonged sessions of endurance against 'sarva praani vyanasas' of desire-anger- narrow mindness-eruptions of jealousy, and selfishness and the ever elusive challenge of victory against evil.

Indeed one would have to necessarily sink into the honey pot to really taste the jar as Ramakrishna Parama Hamsa asserted. Similarly even merely viewing the Ramayana Kavya should sensitize and tempt to tasting the Juices of the Sugarcane Khandas

Blessed by the time of approval and constant encouragement of Kanchi Swami, HH Vijayendra Saraswati who emboldened me to try the Essence of Valmiki Ramayana translation in English with possible vishleshmas of the relevant situations or the personalities of the yore. Indeed it was his instruction to venture the task which kept me totally occupied for months together. I do confess my shortcomings but his inspiration has been the keystone like the squirrel at the proverbial massive task of 'setu bandhana'. Recalling the memories of Maha Swami and HH Jayendra Saraswati, may we have the privilege of dedicating this 'Ramayana Pushpa Guccha' to HH Vijayendra Saraswati as indeed has been the guide and unique source of motivation.

An Annexure on the ' Vishleshana Samhita' of the Seven Khandas including this Essence of Uttara Ramayana is attached too.

Introduction:

Brahmarshi Narada taught Brahmana Vidyaarshi Pracheta the ‘two golden principles of not preaching what he himself would not practise and take to the name and thought of Rama till his death’. The boy learnt the Mantra ‘Mara’ or to Kill- kill ‘ahamkara’, ‘shadvarga shatrus’ of excessive desires, anger, selfishness and avarice, infatuation, ego and jealousy. Constant repetition of ‘Mara’ turned as ‘Rama’ gradually developed ‘valmikaas’ or anthills till his ‘atma saakshaatkaara’ or Self Realisation and eventually came to be reputed as Valmiki Maharshi. Once when he was bathing in the clear waters of Ganges he sighted two doves while mating but were shot to death by a hunter and the Maharshi cried :maa nishaada pratishthaa tvamagamah shasshvatih samaah, yat krouncha mithunaa -dekam avadheeh kaama mohitam/ Nishaada! There could never be rest for long years till eternity, for you killed the mating birds unsuspectingly! This is the ‘prerepana’ or the inspiration of the illustrious scripting of Valmiki Ramayana! Maharshi Valmiki asked Brahmarshi Narada: Konyasmin saampratam loke gunavaan kascha veeryavaan, dharmagjnascha kritagjnascha veeryavaan, dharmagjnascha kritagjnascha Satyavaakyo dhridhavitatah’ as to who indeed was the Guna- Veerya-Dharmagjna- Kritagjna- Satya Vaadi- Dhridha Sankalpa or of the superior traited- brave- virtuous-ever grateful - truthful and decisive on Earth during the Treta Yuga! Ramayana is relevant now as much as in the past -present and for ever as narrated in Six Khandas or sugar cane stems viz. Baala Khanda-Ayodhya Khanda- Aranya Khanda-Kishkinda Khanda-Sundara Khanda-Yuddha Khanda. Baala Khanda comprises seventy seven Sargas- Ayodhya Khanda one hundred nineteen Sargas-Aranya Khanda has seventy three Sargas-Kishkinda Khanda has sixty seven Sargas-Sundara Khanda comprises of sixty eight Sargas- Yuddha Khanda has one twenty eight Sargas. Additionally Uttara Khanda has one hundred eleven Sargas.

Kishkindha Khanda:

On reaching Pampa Sarovara Rama was excited at its natural grandeur especially Sita's absence,Lakashmana solaces- as they approached Rishyamooka, Vanaras and Sugriva. As Sugriva and follower vaanaraas were still wondering, Hanuman felt convinced and confident and directed Shri Rama Lakshmanas to approach their head Sugriva the fugitive King of Vaanaras.Hanuman reached Rama Lakshmanas in a Tapasvi form, complemented Rama Lakshmanas by their appearance as Hanuman was pleased; Lakshmana briefed Hanuman about their purpose of 'Sitaanveshana' and seeking Sugriva's close friendship and active assistance- Hanuman's assurance for unswerving and dutiful cooperation. Firm establishment of Agni Saakshi Friendship of Shri Rama and Sugriva and Shri Rama vows to kill Vaali to pave the way to Sugriva for unopposed Kingship of Vaanara Rajya .As Sugriva showed golden ornaments secured by his followers as Devi Sita threw away down from Ravana's donkey's chariot vimana, Rama readily recognised, cried away and got intensified up with anguish. As Shri Rama expressed his anguish and anger too, Sugriva seeks to assuage Rama's inner feelings and assures 'karya siddhi' finally; reciprocatively Rama assures Sugriva to regain his kingdom and wife too! Rama assures help in killing Vaali and enquires of Sugriva about the details of their mutual enmity.Sugriva then provides an account of the root causes of his antagonism with his elder brother. As Sugriva recounted as to how Vaali displayed his vengeance against him,Sugriva describes Vaali's invincibility, his extermination of Daitya Dundhubhi,throwing off his dead body off to Matanaga Muni, curse of barring entry of Rishyamooka-Rama's test of throwing off Dundubhi's skeleton. Shri Rama's feat of destroying Seven Taala Trees in a row- Sugriva's challenge to Vaali but gets beaten as Sugriva runs to Rishyamooka- Sugriva vilaapa-Rama explains the problem of Vaali Sugriva identity.Much unlike Sugriva got thrashed by Vaali last time, the party of Rama-Sugriva party proceeded again, enjoyed Prakriti Soundarya back to Kishkindha and secures blessings from Sapta Janaashrama Muni.Fully backed by Shri Rama's confident assurances of victory, Sugriva challenged Vaali for a repeat encounter of 'dwandva yuddha' amid thunderous shoutings.Enraged by the repetitive challenges echoing the 'Rani Vaasa', Vaali got ready for the battle but Tara Devi entreated Vaali for a truce of mutual peace, friendship with Rama and 'yuva rajatva' to Sugriva.Ignoring away Devi Tara's earnest appeals for amity with Sugrivas-Ramas, haughty Vaali resorts to battle with Sugriva, gets grievously hurt by Rama baana and succumbs to earth.Falling before death, Vaali heavily criticizes Rama for his stealthiness, undeserved glory, falsity, and sheer selfishness colliding with Sugriva only to recover Devi Sita, which he too could have with bravery. Shri Rama, having let Vaali steam off his anguish from his deadly fall, replies point by point and fully justifying action in releasing his frightful arrow, yet with sympathy. Vaali calls Devi Tara and Angada Kumara near to his death bed cryingly and Devi Tara's 'vilaapa'. Hanuman seeks to assuage Devi Tara's extreme distress while the latter declared her intention of 'Sati Saha Gamana'. Vaali terminates his life after conveying his death bed wishes about Sugriva and Angada. With Tara's the unbearable distress, Vaali laid down his life. Realising anguish of Tara Devi, Sugriva reacts severely and requests Shri Rama to allow him to die while Tara too requests so- Rama seeks to assuage them. Rama Lakshmanas pacify Sugriva, Tara, and Angada- Vaali's 'dahana samskara/ jalaanjali' by Angada. Hanuman requests Rama Lakshmanas to witness Rajyaabhishekas of Sugriva and Angada, Rama assents and blesses but not by entering Kishkindha. Rama Lakshmana's dialogues at their of Prasavana Giri Cave. Shri Rama describes to Lakshmana about the features of Varsha Ritu. Hanuman prevails on Sugriva to initiate action for Sitaanveshana even before Rama's reminder and instruct Neela Vaanara to assemble the Vanara soldiers to group together. Sharad Ritu Varnana- Shri Rama instructs Lakshmana to reach King Sugriva. Lakshmana proceeds to Sugriva's Rajya Bhavana at Kishkindha with anger yet restrained by Rama's convincing, meets Angada who in turn seeks Sugriva to some how pacify. Hanuman sincerely advises Sugriva to withstand Lakshmana's anger besides consolidate action towards 'Sitaanveshana'. Even admiring Kishkindha's beauty, Lakshmana seeks to enter Sugriva's Inner Chamber by resounding his dhanush and the frightened Sugriva advises Tara's help to cool him down convincingly even before his appearance. Sugriva faces the wrath of Lakshmana and Tara continues to soothen Lakshmana by her tactical talks. Thus Tara managed the anger of Lakshmana convincingly and praised of Rama and his stature vis-à-vis that of Sugriva- Sugriva expresses of Rama's magnificence and his mere supplementary assistance. Sugriva instructs consolidating Vanara Sena and proceeds to Kishkindha and inform compliance to him. Lakshmana returns to Rama as accompanied by Sugriva as he was despatched to ascertain as to why Sugriva did not action for Sitanveshana yet! As Shri Rama had sincerely thanked the efforts in mobilising an ocean like Vanara Sena to fight his battle against Ravanaasura, the grateful Sugriva returns back for further action. Now that the full backing of Vanara Sena along with enthused dedication of 'Swami Karya', Rama instructed Sugriva to take off the efforts of 'Sitaanveshana' in the eastern direction. Sugriva as totally absorbed in the singular task of 'Sitanveshana' and having already despatched one force of Vanaraas to 'purva disha' now forwards another batch to 'dakshina disha'. Sugriva who despatched another strong contingent of Vanara Warriors to the southern direction, now commissions a batch to the Western Side along with Sushena explaining probable areas for 'Sitanveshana'. Sugriva explains the significance of the northern direction for Sitanveshana under the leadership of Shatabali of several 'vaanara veeraas'. As Sugriva despatches the Vanara Sena to the Southern direction, under the command of Yuva Raja Angada, Shri Rama gives his ring to Hanuman to possibly show to Sita Devi to recognise and trust him. While despatching the four directional Vanara Sena, the text of Sugriva's encouraging remarks were as follows- King Sugriva explains to Shri Rama of his own escapades of 'Bhu Bhramana' and hence his vast knowledge and memories of destinations, parvatas, oceans, rives and the geographical detailings! Vanara Senaas that Sugriva organised to the north-west-and eastern sectors for 'Sitanveshana' had returned disappointed with negative results; but from the southern sector were awaited still. Angada seeks to revive the fallen hopes of 'Sitanveshana' of the dakshina vaanara sena, but soon after the tired hungry sena sights a celestial tree-sarovara-and bhavana of a Tapasvini whom Hanuman contacts. As Hanuman enquires of the 'vridha tapasvini', she displays her 'bhavan', asks about Vanara Sena and their purpose, invites them for bhojan, reveals her identity, and facilitates them towards the Sea shores. As the prescribed time limit for return to Sugriva was over, Angada and other Vaanara Veeras got ready for 'praana tyaga' but clever Hanuman adopted 'bheda -neeti' or of divided opinion saving them all! Angada- having asserted of Sugriva's dubious nature and selfishness while the task of 'Sitaanveshana' was due to Lakshmana's anger- thus gets readied for 'praayopavesha' along with his fellow vaanaras. Nishakara Muni readily sympathises and wishes recovery to Sampati but instructs him to contribute in the context of Shri Rama Vijaya Karya all his life. Sampati eventually recovers fresh wings and enthuses Vanara Veeras to proceed to the farther South and step forward to Lanka. With great excitement and drive, especially fired up by Sampati, the vast vaanara sena pushed forward to the Sea bed; then Angada asked the select Yoddhas to express their individual abilities to cross the Sea. As Angada asked select Vanara yoddhas of their ability to cross and return, individual responses were heard- then Jambavan recommends Veera Hanuman for this impossible and daring act. Jambavan along with Angada approaches Anjaneya, recalls the background of the latter's birth and past glories, glorifying him up with extraordinary capabilities, while preparing him to cross the Maha Samudra. As Hanuman was enthused and readied to cross the Maha Sagara, he dashed forward to Mahendra Parvata and climbed it with ease.

but Sugriva after prolonged one to one encounter could severe 'Mahodara mastaka'-Mahaparshva got furious at the deaths of Virupaksha and Mahodara and demolished numberless Vanaras, but Angada with his mighty 'mushti ghaatas' tore off Mahodara's chest and heart with fatality-Furious Ravana re-entered the battle, released 'Taamasastra' killing vaanaras, resisted Lakshmana, attacked Rama, got hurt by his roudrastra, as his asuraastra which was realiated by Rama's agneyastra! -As Rama Ravana yuddha was intensified, Lakshmana intervened and the infuriated Ravana released his Mayaasura's Shakti aayudha by which Lakshmana was swooned and Rama asserted his 'prateekara'- Shri Rama 'vilaapa' for Lakshmana's fainting away, but Vaanara Sushena applied Sanjeevani brought earlier by Hanuman and Lakshmana got revived again and the latter reminds of Rama's 'satya pratigjna'- Indra sent Matali with chariot, Rama initiated baana varsha but Ravana destroyed the chariot, hurled his Shakti aayudha but Rama attacked with arrows and Indra's 'Shakti' too which severely hit Ravana's body- In the course of the dwandva baana praharaas, Ravana boasted off and Rama listed his shameless Sitaapa-harana and such adharmas; Ravana hit Rama and the latter smashed off so much as Ravana's sarathi ran back yet returned later-Agastya Muni's eminent ADITYA HRIDAYA with invocations of Viniyoga - Rishi- Karanyasa- Hridayanga Nyaasa Vidhi Mantras-As Shri Rama was delighted as seated on Indra's Chariot encouraging Matali the celestial charioteer, there were a spate of 'asubha soochanas' for Ravana just ahead of the epic battle of Rama Ravanaas- As Rama Ravana Yuddha got anti climaxed as Ravana's heads sprang up again and again, but neither Shri Rama nor Ravana got tired and continued the battle overnight and the next day too-As Matali reminded of the Brahmastra which Agastya Muni bestowed to Rama, he recalled its universal impact and released on Ravana as his notorious life was closed, vindicating dharma and nyaaya again-As his elder brother Ravanaasura was killed by Shri Rama's brahmastra, Vibhishana broke down, yet Rama declared that Ravana fought like a fearless hero and advised that the antyeshta karma be done soon-Having heard about and seen of the dead Ravana, the antahpura strees were heart broken crying away in general, but some sensible ones wished of Ravana's release of Sita should have reversed the swing to normalcy-Devi Mandodari having placed the dead body of Ravanaasura on her laps, kept on crying away recalling his glories and her excellent marital experiences- Vibhishana performed the dahanaadi antya karmaas-As the joyful Celestials returned to their lokas from their sky high assembly after Rama Vijaya, Shri Rama thanked Matalii, Indra- Sugrivadi Vanaras, and celebrated Vibhishana Pattaabhisheka-Hanuman reached Ashoka Vaatika for Sita darshana-talked at length - she complemented him a lot yet desired not to kill the rakshasis who were after all instructed by Ravana - both proceeded to Rama -Hanuman accompanied Devi Sita for Shri Rama Shri Rama Darshana- Rama chides Vibhishana not to make a big scene, then Devi Sita sights her glorious husband after long miseries at Ravana's directives-Rama asserted that he underwent several issues to resurrect Dharma although Sita's freedom now was only incidental - as she stayed under Ravana's care for long, he would free her seeking her own comfort--Devi Sita explaining and asserting her origin of 'ayonijatva', upbringing and paativratya to Rama and the assembly of public had finally entered into the agni jwaalaas as celestials and the public witnessed-As Devi Sita entered 'agni jwaalaas'set by Lakshmana with Rama's implicit awareness, sarva deva mandali headed by Brahma praised Rama as of Vishnu avatara and Sita as Maha Lakshmi -Reacting to Brahma's declarations, Agni Deva emerged in public view and presented Devi Sita asserting her purity even being in Ravana's 'antahpura' for long as Rama desired to test her so to convince public-Maha Deva complemented Rama and pointed out at Dasharadha's Soul from Swarga as the latter blessed Rama stating that he redeemed his soul as Ashtavakra did to his father and assured Kingship with glory-As Rama requested to Indra to revive the lives of countless dead vaanara-bhallukaas at the yuddha, the latter having realised that it was unprecedented yet granted as dead ones came alive as from deep sleep!-Vibhishana requested Shri Rama to stay back for a few days and enjoy his hospitality, but Rama displayed his anxiety to return the soonest as he was yearning to return to Ayodhya- As Shri Rama alighted the Kubera's Pushpaka Vimana 257 with Sita Lakshmanas, Vibhishana requested Rama to accompany with Sugriva Vaanara sena too, and the celestial vimana had taken off- Enroute Ayodhya, Rama highlighted to Sita of Yuddha bhumi- Setu bandhana vidhana- kishkindha pick up of strees- drishyas of Janasthaana- their crossings of maha nadis-Muni ashramas and Ayodhya finally!-Rama approached Muni Bharadwaaja to enquire of the yoga kshemaas of his mothers, Bharata and Ayodhy in general, and the all knowing Muni blessed Rama for his glorious return and blessed-Rama with his sharp mindedness instructed Hanuman to visit Nishada Guha about their 'punaagamana' and to Bharata,who was worshipping Rama Padukas, was specially elated.-Hanuman then had briefly narrated to Bharata of the proceedings after the latter's earlier darshana of Shri Rama-Sita-Lakshmanas, till their much awaited Ayodhya Darshana.-As Sita Rama Lakshmanas were arriving, Bharata Shatrugmas made elaborate arrangements at Ayodhya- the much excited Bharata hands over the Kingdom as of a deposit to Rama after a public announcement- Bharata's handing over Ayodhya Rajya- Sita Rama Nagara Yatra-Rajyabhisheka- Valmiki Ramayana Phala Shruti.

Maharshis of fame arrived from chaturdishes to Ayodhya and congratulated Shri Rama who in humility thanked them- yet wondered apart from Ravana and Kumbhakarna , Indrajit was not that distinguished.

Pursuant to Shri Rama Samrajya Pattabhikheka at Ayodhya, Rishi Maharshis approached Shri Rama such as Koushika, Yavakreeta, Gargya, Gaalava, Medhatika Putra Kanva from Ayodhya's Eastern side along with Agastya Maharshi. From the Southern direction arrived Swastatreyas, Namuchi, Pramuchi, Agastya, Bhagavan Atri, Sumukha and Vimukha. From the western direction arrived Nrushunga, Kavasha, Dhomya, and Kousheya along with shishyas. From the Northern direction had arrived Atri, Bharadwaja, Gautama, Jamadagni, Kashyapa, Vasishtha who was being a Nitya Nivasi of Ayodhya as the Raja Purohita as also in an alternate form of Sapta Rishi Mandali, besides Atri, Bharadvaja, Gautama, Jamadagni, Kashyapa, and Vishwamitra. As those Maharshis had thus arrived along with their respective ‘shishyaa brindaas’ too, Shri Rama welcomed them all. As and when the Maharshis arrived, Shri Rama performed Vinaya purva saadara namaskaaraas, had them seated comfortably after paadya-argya- ‘mahaadara sanmaanaas, and them all about their kushalatwa or well being. Then the Maharshis addressed Shri Rama as follows: kuśalaṁ no mahābāho sarvatra raghunandana, tvāṁ tu diṣṭyā kuśalinaṁ paśyāmo hataśātravam/ na hi bhāraḥ sa te rāma rāvaṇo rākṣaseśvaraḥ, sadhanus tvāṁ hi lokāṁs trīṇ vijayethā na saṁśayaḥ/ diṣṭyā tvayā hato rāma rāvaṇaḥ putrapautravān, diṣṭyā vijayinaṁ tvādyā paśyāmaḥ saha bhāryayā/Maha baahu Raghunandana! We are always ever contented and delighted to call on you. We are proud to see you safe having conquered all the enemies especially the ‘loka kantaka’ Ravanaasura which indeed is outstanding news of the times valid for ever. Shri Rama! Indeed, your unprecedented victory in destroying ‘putra poutra sahita’ Ravana had made all of us proud with your unique ‘dhanush baanaas’ vindicating your inimitable victory. Raghu nandana! How blissful we all are to vision you along with Devi Sita now! Dharmatma Naresha! Your dear brother Lakshmana has ever been with you as a shadow, and to see you with Bharata Shatrughnas and your proud mothers too are presen here! One could even look at might get frightened to senselessness, the Kumbhakarna’s sons Kumbha Nikumbhas too were killed by one’s fortune. Yagnakopa and Dhumraksha Rakshasas were despatched as the guests of Yama Loka. That Indrajit was killed should be a matter of great surprise indeed. ! Kakutsa nandana, shatrusudana Shri Rama, we all are truly self-righteous and proud of your glorious triumph and accomplishment’. As the Maharshis complemented Shri Rama, he pointed out to them as follows: ‘ Pujoyapaada Maharshis! ‘ Indeed, Ravana Kubhakarnas might no doubt be ‘bala paraakrama sampannas’, but there beyond why would need you to praise Indrajit sky high? Mahodara, Prahasta, Virupaksha, Matta, Unmatta, Durdharsha, Devantaka, Narantakas, or for that matter, Atikaya, Trishira or Nishachara Dhumraksa too were devastated but why are you distinguishing Indrajit the mayaavi of timidity! What indeed his dissimilarity and why are you categorising him individually! Munishvaras! Do pardon my disrespect, but could you distinguish Indrajit in this manner!

As Shri Rama wondered as to what was the heroism of Indrajit, Agastya Maha Muni replied that the achievements of Indrajit were worth recalling. But before doing so it might be worthwhile to dwell on Ravana's background too. Raghu nandana! Ravana's 'kula-janma-varadaana prapti' might be refreshed. In the Satya Yugaway back, Prjapati Brahma was blessed with a son named Brahmarshi Pulastya. Once Pulastya Muneeshwara reached the Ashram of Rajarshi Trinabindu in the outskirts of Meru Parvata as the latter was ever engaged in Svaadhyaya of Vedas and tapasya. But some kanyas of Apsarasa- Nagas were playful in the salubrious ashrama's surroundings with music and dances. One day, Pulastya Brahma was annoyed much too much and cursed the playful kanyas that from the next day onward if the dance music should repeat again the kanyas would become garbhinis. Then having become aware of the Brahmarshis' curse, next day onward there were neither dance nor music parties. But the kanya of Rajarshi Trinabindu was as usual practising dance and music all by herself. Then as Pulastya was deeply absorbed on Vedaadhyayana, reacting to the vedaadhyana, Trinabindu kanya approached Pulastya but she had suddenly got some odd symptoms of her body and ran up the father Trinabindu out of fright and complained of her sudden body symptoms. Then the Rajarshi too was in deep tapasya and as his daughter started sobbing aloud realised in his trance that was in the follow up of Pusastya Maha Muni's shaapa mahima. Then the Rajarshi approached the Brahmarshi at whose shapa mahima that his kanya's conception had happened. Brahmarshi smiled and accepted while addressing the kanya: parituṣṭo 'smi bhadraṁ te guṇānām saṁpadā bhṛśam, tasmāt te viramāmy adya putram ātmasamaṁ guṇaiḥ, ubhayor vaṁśakartāraṁ paulastya iti viśrutam/ yasmāt tu viśruto vedas tvayehābhyasyato mama, tasmāt sa viśravā nāma bhaviṣyati na saṁśayaḥ/ 'Sundari! I am pleased with your 'sadaachaara guna vaibhava' and hence you should soon be blessed with a son who would be named 'Poulastya' with pratishta. As I have been ever practising vedaadhyayana, you have been keenly absorbed in 'Vishesha Shrivana' and hence the son would be called 'Vishravana' or 'Vishrava'. evam uktā tu sā kanyā prahr̥ṣṭenāntarātmanā, acireṇaiva kālena sūtā viśravasaṁ sutam/ sa tu lokatraye khyātaḥ śaucadharmasamanvitaḥ, piteva tapasā yukto viśravā munipuṁgavaḥ / As blessed likewise, Vishrava Muni had thus become popular as 'Veda Vidvaan, Samadarshi, Vrataachaara paalana Tapasvi' like his own father.

Pulastya putra Vishrava too was like his father turned out a 'satyavaadi, sheelavaan, jitendriya, swaadhya paraayana and dharmashaali' and having noted his dharma tatparata, Maha Muni Bharadwaaja offered his daughter to Vishrava and in course of time his son gave birth to a boy whom his grand father Pulastya Muni with his divya drishti had forecast that the new arrival would eventually be too should excel his father with tapasya for several thousands and performed his naama karana and named him as Vaishravana besides forecasting that eventually he should be a dhanaadhyaksha! Kumara Vaishravana then having grown up in constant homa-yajna kaaryaas was himself turned like 'prajjvalita agni' in ashramaas, decided to dedicated himself for tapsya for thousands of years. By the turn of each thousand years of the kathora tapasya, he kept on absorbing newer and ever newer 'tapasya vidhi grahana' some times by' jala grahana- vaayu bhakshana' - and eventually 'sampurna niraahaara'. atha prīto mahātejāḥ sendraiḥ suragaṇaiḥ saha, gatvā tasyāśramapadaṁ brahmedaṁ vākyam abravīt/ parituṣṭo 'smi te vatsa karmanānena suvrata, varaṁ vṛṇīṣva bhadraṁ te varārhas tvaṁ hi me mataḥ/ athābravīd vaiśravaṇaḥ pitāmahaṁ upasthitam, bhagavaṁl lokapālatvaṁ iccheyāṁ vittarakṣaṇam/ Then after thousands of unprecedented 'maha ghora tapasya', Maha tejasvi Brahma Deva along with Indraadi Devataas appeared at the Vaishraavana's ashram asserting that they were indeed impressed by his tapasya and asked for a 'vara' or a boon. The tapasvi narrated the happenings further as he replied: 'Brahma Deva! my life long desire is to execute 'loka raksha' and hence be a 'loka paalaka'. Brahma explained: dear son, the Universe had already been bestowed this honour by Yama-Indra-and Varuna and now, you now be imparted as the fourth one along with them with akshaya 'nidhis swami'! etac ca puṣpakaṁ nāma vimānaṁ sūryasaṁnibham, pratigṛhṇīṣva yānārthaṁ tridaśaiḥ samatāṁ vraja/ svasti te 'stu gamiṣyāmaḥ sarva eva yathāgatam, kṛtakṛtyā vayaṁ tāta dattvā tava mahāvaram/bhagavaṁl labdhavān asmi varaṁ kamalayonitaḥ, nivāsaṁ na tu me devo vidadhe sa prajāpatiḥ/ Brahma was further pleased to gift me a 'Surya tulya pushpaka vimana' as in the case of other dikpalakas too. Then Brahma Deva replied that in the southern direction and its samudra teera' a Trikuta naamaka mountain and adjacent thereto there would be a fantastic place like Indrapuri Amaravati itself which was created by Rakshasa Vishwarama. tvaṁ tatra nivāsāya rocayasva matim svakām, nirdoṣas tatra te vāso na ca bādhāsti kasya cit/ etac chrutvā tu dharmātmā dharmiṣṭhaṁ vacanaṁ pituḥ, niveśayām āsa tadā laṅkāṁ parvatamūrdhani/ nairṛtānāṁ sahasrais tu hr̥ṣṭaiḥ pramuditaiḥ sadā, acireṇaikakālena saṁpūrṇā tasya śāsanāt/ atha tatrāvasat prīto dharmātmā nairṛtādhipaḥ, samudraparidhānāyām laṅkāyām viśravātmajaḥ/ Brahma further asserted that Vaishravana should as Kubera settle down at that place as several Rakshasaas had left that place out of the fear of Bhagavan Vishnu in the remote past. The rakshasaas then shifted off Rasaatala of the nether lokas. After Kubera settled down for innumerable years, Rakshasaas had gradually reached there once again and yet lived comfortably.

The narration of Agastya Maha Muni about the origin of Kubera, Shri Rama was truly astonished about Vaishtravana having been renamed as Kubera by Brahma and the latter commanded Kubera to settle at Lankapuri since that picturesque place was vacated by Rakshasaas who ran awy to Rasatala due to the pressure of Maha Vishnu some ages ago. Then Shri Rama expressed as follows: ‘Bhagavan Agastya! This is the very first time that I am learning that Kubera was the occupant of Lankapuri well before Ravanaasura. I have all along been believing that rakshasaas were the progeny of Pulastya Kula. Rāvaṇāt kumbhakarnāc ca prahastād vikaṭād api, rāvaṇasya ca putrebhyaḥ kim nu te balavattarāḥ/ ka eṣāṁ pūrvako brahman kimnāmā kimtapobalaḥ, aparādham ca kaṁ prāpya viṣṇunā drāvitāḥ purā/ etad vistarataḥ sarvaṁ kathayasva mamānagha, kautūhalaṁ kṛtaṁ mahyaṁ nuda bhānur yathā tamaḥ/ Then, Shri Rama got more and more inquisitive: ‘Were Ravana-Kumbhakarna-Prahasta-Vikataadi Rakshasaas mightier than the later settlers of Raksasaas too! Mahatma! You had stated that Bhagavan Vishnu forced the earlier Rakshasa settlers at Lankapuri; what kind of misdemeanors were perpetrated by those Rakshasaas!’ Then Agastya replied: ‘Raghunandana! Brahma as Prajapati as emerged from the lotus floated on fathomless waters, created oceanic waters and further for the perpetuations of the waters thus created ‘jala chara jantus’. As the ‘jala charaas’ had in turn suffered from hunger and thirst, they approached Brahma again, he replied smilingly: rakṣāma iti tatrānyair yakṣāmeti tathāparaiḥ, bhuṅkṣitābhuṅkṣitair uktas tatas tān āha bhūtakṛt/ rakṣāma iti yair uktaṁ rākṣasās te bhavantu vaḥ, yakṣāma iti yair uktaṁ te vai yakṣā bhavantu vaḥ/ tatra hetih prahetiś ca bhrātarau rākṣasasrabhau, madhukaitabhasamkāśau babhūvatur arimdamau/ Jala Jantus! Do you not get agitated but your safety in these oceanic waters should be assured. These ‘jala samriddhis’ would by themselves provide safety to themselves; (like: Dharmo rakshati rakshitah: dharma is protected by the followers of dharma just as the samudra jalaas are protected by themselves!). Brahma continued: ‘Those jala jantus suffering from hunger and thirst for ‘rakshana’ should also perform ‘yakshana’ or devoted pujana’. Thus the Jala jantus resorted to the double edged seeking and doing acts hand in hand simultaneously. Then the solution of ‘raksha and yaksha’ or of ‘rakshasaas and Yakshas’ pleased Brahma created the combine of Prasiddha Rakshasa- Yakshas named Heti and Praheti who were both of the ‘damana and saamarthya’ of the age old popularity of ‘Madhu Kaitabha brothers who were finally killed by Maha Vishnu Himself!’

[Vishleshana on Madhu Kaitabhas from Devi Bhagavata Purana]

Vishnu destroys Madhu Kaitabha brothers : When Maha Vishnu was in Yoga Nidra in a comfortable posture of lying on the bed of Ananta Naga, two Demon brothers named Madhu and Kaitabha were born from the wax of Maha Vishnu’s ears. Their birth was a mystery and unknown as felt by the brothers themselves whose physical forms grew fast and strong day by day, even as they were playing in the ocean surroundings, killing various kinds of aquatic species for food or play. Coming of age in course of time, the Demon brothers with huge bodies and proportionate common sense too, realised that there must have been a Massive Force which alone could have given birth to them. From the air, they heard a sound ‘Vagbija’ the Seed Mantra (Seed ‘Bija’ and ‘Vak’ the Speech of Goddess Sarasvati). To start with fun, but later on with maturity, they kept on practising the sound for years together, little realising the impact of the Mantra’s repetition. In fact, they became so obsessed with the Mantra that they neither had food nor sleep, but with full concentration and utmost sincerity. ‘The Parashakti’s Voice emerged from the Skies that the Danava brothers would be invincible in the entire Universe provided they were united and fight two-some. Blessed by Maha Devi, the two brothers became swollen with pride and eventually attacked Lord Brahma Himself. On realising that they were unconquerable, Brahma who was seated on the lotus-head sprouting from Maha Vishnu’s navel, tried the age-old four means. He tried to use ‘Sama (Counselling) ‘Dana’ (Gifting or bribing), ‘Bheda’ (put one against another) and finally ‘Danda’(Punish), but neither of these media appeared feasible; he ran away to Vaikuntha for protection but Maha Vishnu was in Yoga Nidra. Brahma had thus prayed to Yoga Nidra Devi to prompt Maha Vishnu to wake up. It was actually Maha Maya’s discretion which mattered as Vishnu Himself could not regain consciousness on His own. The concentrate of ‘Tamo Guna’ - Maha Maya - was earnestly prayed to by Brahma, as this was a prestige issue for him and the entire domain of Gods! Maha Maya left Vishnu free and He was fully woken up to face the challenge of the hour, viz. to either manipulate or massacre the brothers, Madhu and Kaitabha. Lord Vishnu invited the brothers to fight with Himself. The fight continued for five thousand years but without a tangible result. As the Demons were clashing one after another and Lord Vishnu was in duel singly, the latter asked the brothers to give a break as it was against Justice that they took alternate positions while He was alone. During the break, Vishnu prayed to Maha Shakti and complained that the fight was unfair and that they were also given by Her the boon of voluntary death or ‘Svacchanda Maranam’. Maha Shakti realised the lacuna in the duel and advised Vishnu to give boons to the brothers so that a way out would automatically open up. Meanwhile, Maha Sakti agreed to be present at the fight in physical form and disturb the concentration of the Demon brothers by casting Her fake amorous looks. This encouraged Vishnu to convey the Demons that their duel with Him was of great quality and thus He was ready to give boons to them. They got into the trap as they boasted that they were prepared to give boons to Him instead of the other way around. Vishnu grabbed the opportunity and said that He be given the boon of their death by killing each other! The brothers gave an excuse that the boon could be given only provided there was no water or wetness in the Ocean. Vishnu expanded his thighs manifold so that there could be adequate space for the killings. The Demons expanded their bodies too and thus the thighs of Vishnu and the body sizes of the brothers kept on increasing horizontally and vertically proportionately. Finally, the illusion created by Vishnu proved stronger and the brothers had to yield to their own killings. Thus Maha Shakti who assumed human physique and paved the way to the killings of the Danava brothers without breaking the Rules of ‘Dharma Yuddha’, partly by trickery and partly by Maya or Illusion.]

Agastya further detailed to Shri Rama of the births of other Rakshasaas : Sukesha of the previous sarga had married Devavati the daughter of Gramani named Gandharva. In course of time Devavati gave birth to three sons named Malyavan-Sumali- and Mali who were of the tejās of the three agnis of 'garhapatya-aahavaneeya and dakshaneeya' and Sukesha was immensely pleased at the birth. The boys had in course of time were of the triloka susthira or of stability, tri shaktis of tri vedas of rik-yajur-samaas, and of the 'nirogas' of their physiques viz. 'vaata-pitta-kapha'. As the three sons thus grew as 'dina dina-varsha varsha vardhamanas' they proceeded for tapasya towards Meru Parvata. After a very long and rigorous tapasya, Brahma Deva arrived and the three tapasvis requested for their fraternal affection, long life and of invincible courage and 'shatru vijaya'. Fortified with the boons of Brahma, the nishaaharaas then started off frightening and despairing Deva-Rishi- Chaarana samudayaas, let alone manushyaas. Raghu vamsha Shri Rama! They approached Vishvakarma the Maha Shilpi and requested him to construct a Maha Nagari which should put Devendra's Amaraavati to disgrace. They explained that at the foot steps of Trikuta and Suvela Parvataas at the shores of Dakshina Maha Sagara and requested him to build a thirty yojanas width and hundred yojanas of length with gold like glittering 'rahadaaris' which the impenetrability with an air of mystery and impeccable perfection. As Vishvakarma had thus constructed Lankapuri even excelling Amaravati, the three rakshasa veeraas commenced to live in there in Maha Bhavanaas and wedded three 'apurupa sundari gandharva kanyas' viz. Hree- Shree-Keerti. Malyavan and his wife Anurupa had eventually given birth to Vajramushti, Virupaaksha, Durmukha, Suptagṇa, Yajñakopa, Matta, Unmatta. Sumali and his wife Ketumati gave birth to Prahasta, Akampana, Vikata, Kaalikaamukha, Dhūmrāksha, Danda, Supaarshva, Samhlaadi, Prathasa, and Bhaasakarna. Sumali's putris were Raaka, Pushpotkata, Kaikaśī, and Kumbheenāsī. Maali and his wife Vasudā's putras were Anala, Anila, Hara and Sampaati who were also the mantris of Vibhishana even now. Further, the grandsons of Manlavan-Sumali and Maali had further attained enormous ability and bravery in their ebullient youthfulness.

Agastya Maha Muni addressing Shri Rama informed that Devas approached 'Trinetri the Kaama naashaka, Tripura naashaka Parama Shiva' that Brahmas's varadaana emboldened the Sukesha Putras to hurt us and had been freely visiting Swarga Loka asserting that they were themselves the tri murtis of Vishnu-Rudra and Brahma, let alone Indra-Yama Raja-Varuna, Chandra, Suryas and had been bragging with ‘ahamkaara’ . Then Bhagavan Shankara explained to the Deva ganaas stating that He and Devi Parvati saved Sukesha once before and as such they might like to approach Bhagavan Vishnu. There after the Deva Maharshi ganaas reached Vaikuntha and repeated their request with redoubled emphasis. Vishnu replied: ‘yes, I am aware of Sukesha Rakshasa who was blessed by Shiva Parvatis, and of his sons like Malyavan and brothers who had been tormenting you by breaching the principles of dharma out of arrogance, bravado and selfishness. Don’t you worry, I should destroy them and you might return with peace of mind’. Then Malyavan addressed Rakshasaas explaining: ‘Rakshasa shiromanis! As the frightened Devas headed by Indra approached Narayana who assured that he would destroy all the rakshasas. Now we should consider this development seriously. We are aware that Hiranyakashipu and his daitya followers were forwarded to mrityu. Namuchi, Kalanemi, Samhlada, Radheya, Yamalaarjuna, Hradikya, Shumbha Nikumbhaaddi mahasuras were devastated by Bhagavan Vishnu and thus indeed we should realise the implication involved in Vishnu’s assurance to Devatas now.’ Reacting to what stated, Sumali and Mali replied just as what Ashvini Kumars addressed Indra: Brother! We had all undergone the process of swaadhyaya, daana karmas, and yagjnaas. We have had aishvarya and its consequences too like ‘arogya and ayu prapti’ and the ‘kartavya maarga uttama karma siddhi’. Further, we by the virtue of ‘shastra bala’ had successefully entered maha samudras and devastated enemies being truly have no mrityu bhaya at all. nārāyaṇas ca rudras ca śakras cāpi yamas tathā, asmākaṁ pramukhe sthātum sarva eva hi bibhyati/ viṣṇor doṣas ca nāsty atra kāraṇaṁ rākṣaseśvara, devānāṁ eva doṣeṇa viṣṇoḥ pracalitaṁ manaḥ/ tasmād adya samudyuktāḥ sarvasainyasamāvṛtāḥ, devān eva jighāṁsāmo yebhyo doṣaḥ samutthitāḥ/ Trust us brother, even Narayana, Rudra, Indra and Yama Raja might hesitate to face us. In fact Vishnu should have no reason at all to attach us as we never had made any kind of misdeed against him but might have promised rakshasa vadha in a casual manner but not seriously reacting to Deva’s ‘ha ha kaaraas’! Thus Sumali and Mali having self assured themselves moved out fast to attack Deva samuhas with overconfidence.’ Agastha Muni continued: ‘Shri Rama! Thus the arrogant rakshasaas were equipped with chariots, horses, elephants, oxen, donkeys, camels, poisonous snakes, crocodiles, simha-shardulaadi vahanaas. laṅkālayāny atha, bhūtāni bhayadarśīni vīmanaskāni sarvaśaḥ/ bhaumās tathāntarikṣās ca kālājñaptā bhayāvahāḥ, utpātā rākṣasendrāṇāṁ abhāvāyotthitā drutam/ Lankapuri citizens and even ‘graama devataas’ were worried in their own psyche as ‘apashakunas’ were experienced by them. As though Kaala Devata was provoked, there were bhayankara utpaadaas indicating rakshasa vinaasha. asthīni meghā varṣanti uṣṇaṁ śoṇitam eva ca, velāṁ samudro ’py utkrāntas calante cācalottamāḥ/ aṭṭahāsān vimuñcanto ghananādasamasvanān, bhūtāḥ paripatanti sma nṛtyamānāḥ sahasraśaḥ/ From the clouds above, there were rains of blood and bones as parvatatas too were swinging, besides, ‘Megha samana dhanis’, owl crying screeches, and such horribly frightening omens. Malyavan-Sumali- and Maali proceeded to attack devaganas like groups of red flames. Then Narayana too decided to participate in the onslaught. Bhagavan Maha Vishnu had positioned on his body as of thousands of Suryas, adorned with shankha-chakra-gadasharanga dhanush alighted on Garuda deva, as followed by Indraadi Deva samuhas, as Siddhha-Devarshi- Maha Naaga-Gandharva-Yakshadi celestials were praising his ever memorable glories.

Bhagavan Vishnu's hand- released arrows had pierced through the elephant like bodies of the Nishacharas. 'Shri Hari divya maha chakra' penetrated the rakshasa 'vishala dehas' flooding 'rakta dhaaraas' like gushes of mountain waters . The over awing shankha raaja dhwani, sharanga dhanush

thankaara and Bhagavan's garjanaas were drops of waters as compared to the tumultuous and chaotic 'kokaahala' of the multitudes rakshaas. The 'parvataakaara rakshasaas' were virtually exploded with their heads, ayudhas, ratha dhvajās, chariots, saraadhis, horses, donkeys and simha shardula sarpaas. tathā bānā vinirmuktāḥ śārṅgān narāyaṇeritāḥ, nirdhāvantiṣavas tūrṇam śataśo 'tha sahasraśaḥ/ śarabheṇa yathā simhāḥ simhena dviradā yathā, dviradena yathā vyāghrā vyāghreṇa dvīpino yathā/ dvīpinā ca yathā śvānaḥ śunā mārjārakā yathā, mārjāreṇa yathā sarpāḥ sarpeṇa ca yathākhavaḥ/ tathā te rākṣasā yuddhe viṣṇunā prabhaviṣṇunā, dravanti drāvitāś caiva śāyitāś ca mahītale/ Bhagavan Narayana's arrows as released from his sharanga dhanush in 'pravaahaas' were hitting the rakshasaas here, there and every where as they too were running in panic and pandemonium shock, even while the sharabhas were flocked with lions, lions with elephants, elephants with tigers, cheetahs with wild dogs, while dogs were crying, serpents were hissing everywhere as frogs were rattled my groups of mice. Thus Rakshasaas were laid to grounds for ever. rākṣasānām sahasrāṇi nihatya madhusūdanaḥ, vārijaṁ nādayām āsa toyadaṁ surarād iva/ nārāyaṇaśaragrastaṁ śaṅkhanādasuvihvalam, yayau laṅkāṁ abhimukhaṁ prabhagnaṁ rākṣasaṁ balam/ prabhagne rākṣasabale nārāyaṇaśarāḥ, sumālī śaravarṣeṇa āvavāra raṇe harim/ As Bhagavan Madhusudana sounded his 'shankha paanchajanya', Indra appeared to have rained his megha jalaas on earth. His baana prahaaraas and shankha naadas made the rakshasa sena to run back to Lankapuri. Yet Sumali prevented the rakshasaas to run back. He then sought to pump in confidence and having been pacified the rakshasas. Once again there was another severe attack on Narayana. Maha Vishnu then hit with his severe baana prahaaraas the Sumaali's ratha chaalaka's head and further the horses too. Maali rakshasa took over the attack Narayana as the rakshasa's arrows in thousands had perforated Vishnu shareera. But there was a hardly any impact on Narayana. atha maurvī svanaṁ kṛtvā bhagavān bhūtabhāvanāḥ, mālinam prati bāṇaughān sasarjāsigaḍādharaḥ/ te mālideham āsādy vajravidyutprabhāḥ śarāḥ, pibanti rudhiram tasya nāgā iva purāṁṛtam/ mālinam vimukhaṁ kṛtvā mālimaulim harir balāt, ratham ca sadhvajaṁ cāpaṁ vājinaś ca nyapātayat/ Subsequently Bhagavan Vishnu with his 'chaturbahu' with shankha chakra gadas, raised his fourth hand with dhanusthankaara and released his 'baana samuhas' which pierced through the rakshasa's body parts as blood spilled out as though maha sarpaas were enjoying 'amrita paana'. Then Maali Rakshasa sought to retreat and run back, then Shri Hari severed his kireeta, dhvajā, and dhanush. virathas tu gadām grhya mālī naktamcarottamaḥ, āpupluve gadāpānir giryagrād iva keśarī/ sa tayā garuḍam saṁkhye īśānam iva cāntakaḥ, lalāṭadeśe 'bhyahanad vajreṇendro yathācalam/ gadayābhīhataś tena mālinā garuḍo bhṛśam, raṇāt parāṇmukhaṁ devaṁ kṛtavān vedanāturaḥ/ parāṇmukhe kṛte deve mālinā garuḍena vai, udatiṣṭhan mahānādo rākṣasām abhinardatām/ Ratha heena Maali rakshasa lept forward with his 'gadaa' against Narayana Vahana the Maha Garuda like a ferocious lion sought to jump up high to a mountain top and fell down and further on the analogy of Yama Raja tried his best to hit Shiva with his yama paasha, or Indra tried to smack his vajra prahara on 'meru parvata'. rākṣasām nadatām nādam śrutvā harihayānujaḥ, parāṇmukho 'py utsasarja cakram mālījighāṁsayā/ tat sūryamaṇḍalābhāsam svabhāśā bhāsayan nabhaḥ, kālacakranibhaṁ cakram māleḥ śīrṣam apātayat/ tacchiro rākṣasendrasya cakrotkṛttam vibhīṣaṇam, papāta rudhirodgāri purā rāhuśiro yathā/ Garuda was hurt severely with his wings swinging left and right and recovered gradually while rakshasaas felt elated jumping with joy. Narayana then frowned his eyebrows and decided to swing his ckara like the kaala chakra as its hit snapped the raksha mastaka from which came out rakta pravaahaas and got dropped down to earth like that of Rahu graha. As Maali died thus Sumali and Maali too were frightened away and ran back to Lankapuri with the rest of the rakshasa sena, while Deva gana extolled Narayana. Meanwhile Garuda got recouped of the pain of his wings and made minced meat of the rakshasas fleeing back with vengeance even as the retreating Vishnu chakra too were traced and crushed to earth. Sumali then fled away to Rasaatala and his putra poutras too remained settled down there.

Agastya Maha Muni continued to Shri Rama further. As both Garuda and Vishnu kept on chasing the rakshasas who were fleeing back to Lankapuri, Malyavan the eldest son of Sukesha desired to attack Narayana and heckled him saying that on the pretext of chasing rakshasas, he should not leave the yuddha bumi and that would not be called kshaatra dharma, any way. Then he shouted on Narayana: ‘stay back and face me if you can! Let me see how much of bravery do you possess.’ Maha Vishnu replied: ‘You stupid Rakshasa! I am chasing rakshasas to uproot them only to return as I had made a pratigjna to destroy you all Rakshasas. Either you all rakshasas are got rid of, or run to Rasatala.’ Then the furious Malyavan had hurriedly tossed his shakti ayudha on Vishnu and hurt his chest. tatas tām eva cotkṛṣya śaktiṁ śaktidharapriyaḥ, mālyavantam samuddiṣya cikṣepāmburuheḡṣaṇaḥ/ skandotsṛṣṭeva sā śaktir govindakaraniḡṣṭā, kāṅkṣantī rākṣasaṁ prāyān maholkevāñjanācalam/ sā tasyorasi viṣṭīrṇe hārabhāsāvabhāsīte, apatad rākṣasendrasya girikūṭa ivāśaniḥ/ Then with the same Shakti Ayudha looked to have assumed the form of Kartikeya the Maha Shakti dhaari was hurled back by Vishnu right back the rakshasa as though a mighty ‘ulka’ or a meteor had hit anjanagiri. As the Shakti Ayudha was forcefully tossed back, Malyavan’s loha kavacha was destroyed as Malyavan was distressed and shocked for a while. tataḥ kārṣṇāyasaṁ śūlaṁ kaṇṭakair bahubhiś citam, pragṛhyābhyahanad devam stanayor antare dṛḡdham/ tathaiva raṇaraktas tu muṣṭinā vāsavānujam, tāḡdayitvā dhanurmātram apakrānto niśācaraḥ/ tato 'mbare mahāñ śabdaḥ sādhu sādhu iti cotthitaḥ, āhatya rākṣaso viṣṇuṁ garuḡam cāpy atāḡdayat/ Then the rakshasa pitched a mighty shula with sharp iron nails studded thereinto at Bhagavan as the latter too was hurt. Agastya Mahamuni then continued his narration: ‘Kamala nayana Shri Rama! In this manner in each and every battle against Vishnu, all the principal maha rakshasaas were getting destroyed or running away ashamed. This is a proven factuality that none indeed could negate his invincibility. This was how the nishacharaas had been making a bee line to Patala along with wives and progeny. Raghu shreshtha! Only Bhagavan Narayana himself was necessitated to extinguish them. At the same time, Shri Rama! In due course Rakshasa Sumali who had long ago settled in rasaatala had left for matya loka for a kind of a journey and while touring saw 'dhaneshvara' Kubera well settled in Lankapuri although he was in charge of Northern side as the loka palaka, but blessed by Brahma with a pushpaka vimana to reach wherever he wished to; Kubera was in fact visiting his father Vishrava, the son of Pulastya, as the latter was in rasatala itself. It got struck in Sumali's head that he had a marriageable daughter and suggested that rakshasa Kubera was actually visiting his father by his pushpaka vimana. He approached his daughter, Kaikasi and made the proposal who felt shy nodded her head. Agastya Maha Muni then explained to Shri Rama that eventually, Vishrava was concluding his sayankala agni hotra, Kaikasi crossed and and falteringly faced Pulastyanandana brahmana Vishrava and stood still seeing Vishrava's feet and rubbed her foot fingers out of shyness. Vishrava had noticed this happening and asked her: 'Bhadre! Whose kanya are you! Why have you come here and for which purpose!' Then Sumali kanya Kaikasi replied in a bashful tone and with folded hands replied: 'Munivara! You by your own celestial vision would be able to become aware of my 'manobhava'; yet I am here at my father's behest and my name is Kaikasi and the rest should be clear my your 'divya drishti'. sa tu gatvā munir dhyānam vākyam etad uvāca ha, vijñātam te mayā bhadre kāraṇam yan manogatam/ dāruṇāyām tu velāyām yasmāt tvam mām upasthitā, śṛṇu tasmāt sutān bhadre yādṛśāṁ janayiṣyasi/ dāruṇān dāruṇākārān dāruṇābhijana -priyān, prasaviṣyasi suśroṇi rākṣasān krūrakarmaṇaḥ/ As Devi Kaikasi said so, Vishrava Muni thought at length and replied: 'Bhadre! I have now fully understand what all that you have in mind. Surely you wish to secure 'santaana' from me at this 'sayamkaala daarunatva'. Any how, listen to me carefully. Your children would be of cruelty and of frightful physiques. You are a genuine Brahmaavaadi Mahatma, please help me! I should certainly not wish to be the mother of such cruel and despicable children. As the raksha kanya Kaikasi was alarmed in this manner, as Purna Chandra to Devi Rohini, Vishrava Muni assured that the youngest son should undoubtedly be an 'anurupa dharmatma' !evam uktā tu sā kanyā rāma kālena kena cit, janayām āsa bībhatsam rakṣorūpaṁ sudāruṇam/ daśaśīrṣam mahādamṣṭram nīlāñjanacayopamam, tāmrauṣṭham vimśatibhujam mahāsyam dīptamūrdhajam/ jātāmātre tatas tasmin sajvālakavalāḥ śivāḥ, kravyādāś cāpasavyāni maṇḍalāni pracakrire/ vavarṣa rudhiram devo meghās ca kharanisvanāḥ, prababhau na ca khe sūryo maholkās cāpatan bhuvi/ Maha Muni Agastya explained further to Shri Rama that not very far away, Devi Kaikasi gave birth to 'atyanta bhayaanaka- krura swabhava rakshasa' with 'dasha mastakaas- maha damshtas- taamroshtam-vimshati bhujam-vishaala mukham and deepta muurdhijam' or ten heads-frightening teeth-copperish lips-twenty hands, huge face and flashing head hairs. As he was born, flames like owls, nara maamsa bhakshi kites, and several other screeching birds were hovering all around the newly born boy in circles. Thus Kumbhakarna performed rigorous tapasya for ten thousand years irrespective of seasons of summer, winter or rains. Now Vibhishana th Dharmatma performed pure 'aachaara-vichaara palana yukta tapasya' with both the hands and head raised to the skies for five thousand years, as Apsaraas danced followed by 'swaadhyana' of veda-shastra pathana for an additional five more years duly excuting Suryaaraadhana. daśavarṣasahasram tu nirāhāro daśānanah, pūrṇe varṣasahasre tu śiraś cāgnau juhāva saḥ/ evam varṣasahasrāṇi nava tasyāticakramuḥ, śīrāmsi nava cāpy asya praviṣṭāni hutāśanam/ atha varṣasahasre tu daśame daśamam śiraḥ, chettukāmaḥ sa dharmātmā prāptaś cātra pitāmahaḥ/ pitāmahas tu supṛitaḥ sārddham devair upasthiṭaḥ, vatsa vatsa daśagrīva prīto 'smīty abhyabhāṣata/ Dashamukha Ravana had performed continuous 'upavaasa' for ten thousand years. At the end of each year, he severed one of his heads and performed naivedya to the homaagni. As the tenth head was about to be sliced off, Brahma Deva appeared and appreciated his intense capacity of endurance. He stated that of Ravana were to bless him with a boon, he might do so as his tapasya ought not to be either desired for or deserved of. tato 'bravīt daśagrīvaḥ prahr̥ṣṭenāntarātmanā, praṇamya śirasā devam harṣagadgadayā girā/ bhagavan prāñinām nityam nānyatra maraṇād bhayam, nāsti mṛtyusamah śatrur amaratvam ato vṛṇe/ suparṇanāgayaḥ kṣāṇām daityadānavarakṣasām, avadhyah syām prajādhyaḥ devatānām ca śāśvatam/ na hi cintā mamānyeṣu prāṇiṣv amarapūjita, tṛṇabhūtā hi me sarve prāṇino mānuṣādayaḥ/ As Brahma Deva stated thus, Dashagriva prostrated to Brahma Deva and stated in almost hush hushed tone said: Bhagavan! None of the Pranis in Srishti if free from the fear of death and one were to request for that type of amara jeevata! Brahma replied that barring amaratva, Ravana could request of any other boon. Ravana then requested that he should be free from death by Garuda-Naaga-Yaksha-Daitya-Daanava-Rakshasa -Devatas. Bhagavan !I am least concerned of death from all other pranis like human beings.*evam uktas tu dharmātmā daśagrīveṇa rakṣasā, uvāca vacanam rāma saha devaiḥ pitāmahaḥ/ bhaviṣyaty evam evaitat tava rākṣasapuṅgava, śṛṇu cāpi vaco bhūyaḥ prītasyeha śubham mama/ hutāni yāni śīrṣāni pūrvam agnau tvayānagha, punas tāni bhaviṣyanti tathaiva tava rākṣasa/*As Ravana asked for the boons as requested Brahma Deva, the latter granted as Ravana asked for. He further agreed to restore the nine head which Ravana sacrificed at each of the heads at each of the thousand years to Agni jvaalaas at the formal homa kaaryaas. There after Brahma appeared before Vibhishana and asked for the boons that he would like to wish for, as Vibhishana prostrated and stated: bhagavan kṛtakṛtyo 'ham yan me lokaguruḥ svayam, prīto yadi tvam dātavyam varam me śṛṇu suvrata/ yā yā me jāyate buddhir yeṣu yeṣv āśrameṣv iha, sā sā bhavatu dharmiṣṭhā tam tam dharmam ca pālaye/ eṣa me paramodāra varaḥ paramako mataḥ, na hi dharmābhiraktānām loke kiṁ cana durlabham/'Bhagavan! What all that you wish intensely with your ever sustained 'dharmatva' be fortified. Even born as a rakshasa, it is amazing that you support and adhere gripped up to 'dharma and nyaaya'; quite apart from granting the boons that you sought, I am als pleased to award you with 'amaratva'!' Then Deva samuhas at that very juncture appeared and appealed to Brahma Deva not to make any 'varadaana' to Kumbhakarna as Brahama granted to Ravanaasura already. They explained to Brahma that Kumbhakarna in the past had ready harassed and eaten up too ten close attendants of Indra, sven Apsaras of Nandana vana of swarga and countless Rishis an manushyas too. If only Brahma were to give away any boons to the maha rakshasa now, then all th pranis in srishti would be cruelly eaten off with no compunction as the lives of the triloka jeevas would be at stake. As Devas had made a sincere appeal to Brahma, the srishti karta asked for Devi Saraswari who appeared was instructed Vak Devi to be everpresent on the tongue of Rakshasa Kumbhakarna and follow the advices of all the Devas accordingly'. Then Brahma Deva granted his darshan to Kumbhakarna who performed thousand years of the rakshsa's tapasya. kumbhakarṇas tu tad vākyam śrutvā vacanam abravīt, svapṭum varṣāṇy anekāni devadeva mamepsitam/ evam astv iti tam coktvā saha devaiḥ pitāmahaḥ, devī sarasvatī caiva muktva tam prayayau divam/ kumbhakarṇas tu duṣṭātmā cintayām āsa duḥkhitāḥ, kīrḍṣam kiṁ nv idam vākyam mamādya vadanāc cyutam/ evam labdhavarāḥ sarve bhrātaro dīptatejasaḥ, śleṣmātakavanam gatvā tatra te nyavasan sukham/ Kumbhakarna then requested Brahma Deva to rest and sleep for many many years and Brahma having granted the wish disappeared. Subsequently, Devi Sarasvati left Kumbhakarna's tongue and disappeared, but the rakshasa realised his mistake and felt that devaas must have deliberately influenced Brahma Deva to make him utter such a misleading request!

As Ravana brothers had returned from their ten thousand years long tapasya after attaining Brahma darshana and the respective boons, Sumali Rakshasa desired to leave fo rasaatala and along with him Maaricha-Prahasta-Virupaksha and Mahodaras being Sumali's mantris. They had so decided to leave back to Rasatala since the possibility of the pressure of Vishnu's attack had since ceased too. While leaving for Rasaatala, Sumali embraced Ravana and brothers and explained: asmadīyā ca lankeyaṁ nagarī rākṣasoṣitā, niveṣitā tava bhrātrā dhanādhyakṣeṇa dhīmatā/ yadi nāmātra śakyaṁ syāt sāmṇā dānena vānagha, tarasā vā mahābāho pratyānetuṁ kṛtaṁ bhavet/ tvaṁ ca lankeśvaras tāta bhaviṣyasi na saṁśayaḥ, sarveṣāṁ naḥ prabhuś caiva bhaviṣyasi mahābala/ athābravīd daśagrīvo mātāmaham upasthitam, viteśo gurur asmākaṁ nārhasy evaṁ prabhāṣitum/ Originally this Lankapuri was actually ours only where your cousin brother Kubera had been staying; we could no doubt use the saama-daana-balaprayogaas but did not wish to use them on Kubera. But now, Ravana! do become the king here and also resuscitate Rasatala as we both could thus enjoy our partnership for ever'. Then Ravana had politely replied to his maternal grand father Sumali: ‘ Dhanaadhyaksa Kubera is after all my elder brother and you should not advise me in this manner.’ As Ravana said likewise, Sumali no doubt kept silent for a while, but Rakshasa Prahasta of Sumali’s mantri mandali intervened to say: daśagrīva mahābāho nārhas tvam vaktum īdr̥śam, saubhrātram nāsti śūrāṇām śṛṇu cedam vaco mama/ aditiś ca ditiś caiva bhaginyau sahite kila, bhārye paramarūpinyau kaśyapasya prajāpateḥ/ aditir janayām āsa devāms tribhuvane - śvarān, ditiś tv ajanayad daityān kaśyapasyātmasambhavān/ Maha bahu Dashagriva! We have all to respect what your maternal grand father had just explained and should indeed be respected; it might not be always befitting for Veera dheera personalities like you! Let me explain a little more about your own ancestry and lineage: ‘Aditi and Diti were both co wives of Pajapati Kashyapa Muni. Aditi gave birth to Devaas the present tribhuvana swaamis while Devi Diti gave birth to Daityas. daityānām kila dharmajña pureyam savanārṇavā, saparvatā mahī vīra te ’bhavan prabhaviṣṇavaḥ/ nihatya tāms tu samare viṣṇunā prabhaviṣṇunā, devānām vaśam ānītam trailokyam idam avyayam/ naitad eko bhavān eva kariṣyati viparyayam, surair ācaritam pūrvam kuruṣvaitad vaco mama/ Veera Ravana! In the past, all the mountains, aranyas, samudras and in fact the entire earth was under the exclusive control of Daityas. But Vishnu had in a series of battles devastated daityas and bestowed the same to deva ganaas. In that manner the same situation prevails now too between devaas and asuraas; therefore you may like to either follow the advice of your maternal grand father or not is your own choice.

Kashyapa married thirteen of Daksha's daughters. Their names were Aditi, Diti, Danu, Arishta, Surasa, Khasa, Surabhi, Vinata. Tamra, Krodhavasha, Ila, Kadru and Muni. Aditi's sons were the twelve gods known as the adityas. Their names were Vishnu, Shakra, Aryama, Dhata, Vidhata, Tvashta, Pusha, Vivasvana, Savita, MitraVaruna, Amsa and Bhaga. Diti's sons were the daityas (demons). They were named Hiranyaksha and Hiranyakashipu, and amongst their descendants were several other powerful daityas liked Bali and Banasura. Diti also had a daughter named Simhika who was married to a danava named Viprachitti. Their offspring's were terrible demons like Vatapi, Namuchi, Ilvala, Maricha and the Nivatakavachas. The hundred sons of Danu came to be known as danavas. The danavas were thus cousins to the daityas and also to the adityas. In the danava line were born demons like the Poulamas and Kalakeyas. Arishta's sons were the Gandharvas (singers of heaven). Surasa gave birth to sarpas , the snakes. Khasa's children were the Yakshas (demi-gods who were the companions of Kubera, the god of Wealth) and the Rakshasas. Surabhi's descendants were cows and buffaloes. Vinata had two sons named Aruna and Garuda. Garuda became the king of the birds. Tamra has six daughters. From these daughters were born owls, eagles, vultures, crows, water-fowl, horses, camels and donkeys. Krodhavasha had fourteen thousand children known as nagas (snakes). Ila gave birth to trees, creepers, shrubs and bushes. Kadru's sons were also known as nagas or snakes. Among the more important of Kadru's sons were Ananta, Vasuki, Takshaka and Nahusha. Muni gave birth to the Apsaras (dancers of heaven). Diti's children (daityas) and Aditi's children (Adityas) continually fought amongst themselves. On one particular occasion, Devas succeeded in killing many of the demons. Thirsting for revenge, Diti began to pray to her husband, Kashyapa that she be given birth to a son who would kill Indra, the king of the Devas. Kashyapa found it difficult to refuse his wife outright but gave a condition that she would have to bear the son in your womb for a hundred years. Diti resolved to do so but Indra came to know about Diti's resolve and was waiting for an opportunity to save himself. There was an occasion when, tired after her prayers, Diti went to sleep without first washing her feet. This was an unclean act and it gave Indra the required opportunity. He adopted a miniscule form and entered Diti's womb. With his weapon vajra, he sliced up the baby inside the womb into seven parts. The baby naturally began to cry at the pain. Indra kept on saying, ‘ma ruda’ that is, ‘don't cry.’ But the baby, or rather its seven parts, would not listen. Indra thereupon sliced up each of the seven parts into seven more sections, so that there were forty-nine sections in all. When these forty-nine sections were born, they came to be known as the Maruts, from the words - ma ruda- that Indra had addressed them. Since Diti had not been able to adhere to the conditions her husband had set, the Maruts did not kill Indra. They instead became Indra's followers or companions, and were treated as Devas.]

evam ukto daśagrīvaḥ prahastena durātmanā, cintayitvā muhūrtaṁ vai bādham ity eva so 'bravīt/ sa tu tenaiva harṣeṇa tasminn ahaṇi vīryavān, vanaṁ gato daśagrīvaḥ saha taiḥ kṣaṇadācaraiḥ/ trikūṭasthaḥ sa tu tadā daśagrīvo niśācaraḥ, preṣayām āsa dautyena prahastaṁ vākyakovidam/ On hearing what all Prahasta explained, Ravana was glad to hear his manner of convincing and felt that he should act accordingly. Then Ravana and his trustworthy nishaacharaas entered the nearby surrounding gardens and further to trikuta parvata and asked Prahasta to approach Kubera. prahasta śīghraṁ gatvā tvaṁ brūhi nairṣṭapuṁgavam, vacanān mama vittaśaṁ sāmāpūrvam idaṁ vacaḥ/ iyaṁ laṅkā purī rājan rākṣasānām mahātmanām, tvayā niveśitā saumya naitad yuktam tavānagha/ tad bhavān yadi sāmnavitāṁ dadyād atulavikrama, kṛtā bhaven mama prītir dharmas caivānupālitaḥ/ He said: 'Prahasta! Now you may approach Kubera in your characteristic manner and explain to him of the proposal coolly. You may explain that rakshasas had all along been residing here and it may not proper to be here any further. Dheneshwara, as such you may like to leave Lankapuri now as you are fully aware of the rudiments of 'dharma and nyaaya'. Your brother Dashagriva had asked me therefore to vacate this Lankapuri as soon as possible.' Then Kubera replied: 'Nishachara! This Lankapuri was totally free as there were no rakshasas were living here as they had long ago left for Rasatala and hence as per my father's directive I had let in families versatile with 'daana-maanaadi guna sampanna prajas'. You are now welcome to utilise you too since my 'rajya and dhana vastuus' have not been partitioned after all!' So saying Kubera had left to meet his father Vishrava Muni. eṣa tāta daśagrīvo dūtaṁ preṣitavān mama, dīyatām nagarī laṅkā pūrvam rakṣogaṇoṣitā, mayātra yad anuṣṭheyaṁ tan mamācakṣva suvrata/ brahmarṣis tv evam ukto 'sau viśravā munipuṁgavaḥ, uvāca dhanadaṁ vākyam śṛṇu putra vaco mama/ daśagrīvo mahābāhur uktavān mama samnidhau, mayā nirbhartsitaś cāsīd bahudhoktaḥ sudurmatih/ He explained that Dashagriva had sent his messenger and asserted that in the past Lankapuri had been under rakshasaas and as such be returned back to them. Now you should kindly advise me as to what to do. Then Brahmarshi stood up with folded hands and said: 'listen to me son carefully. Ravana had made the demand even as he had hardly entered here. He made this kind of demand to me also, and he was apparently enraged he shouted at me too in a manner that then we would all be ruined. Therefore, son! Listen to me in earnestness. Ravana's durbuddhi is ever risky as his psyche is cruel and vengeful. Hence it would be advisable to leave Lanka and shift to Kailasa parvata with your followers. tatra mandākinī ramyā nadīnām pravaraṇā nadī, kāñcanaiḥ sūryasamkāśaiḥ pañkajaiḥ samvṛtodakā/ na hi kṣamaṁ tvayā tena vairaṁ dhanadarakṣasā, jānīṣe hi yathānena labdhaḥ paramako varaḥ/ evam ukto grhītvā tu tad vacaḥ piṭṙgauravāt, sadāra pauraḥ sāmātyaḥ savāhanadhano gataḥ/ evam ukto grhītvā tu tad vacaḥ piṭṙgauravāt, sadāra pauraḥ sāmātyaḥ savāhanadhano gataḥ/ There the most sancrosant of the rivers named Mandakini would be everflourishing with 'vriksha pushpa sugandhas'. Vishrava Muni further convinced Kubera that on the Kailasa Parvata, deva, gandharva, apsara, naaga, kinnara like celestial beings would be fond of touring the parvata and it should be better not to conflict with these rakshasaas, especially keeping in view the Brahma's varaprapti now.' As the Muni advised, Kubera shifted off to Kailasa Parvata with stree-putra-mantri-vahanas too for good. Then prahastas tu daśagrīvaṁ gatvā sarvaṁ nyavedayat, śūnyā sā nagarī laṅkā trimśadyojanam āyatā, praviśya tām sahāsmābhiḥ svadharmam tatra pālāya/ evam uktaḥ prahastena rāvaṇo rākṣasas tadā, viveśa nagarīm laṅkāṁ sabhrātā sabalānugaḥ/ Prahasta was delighted that Kubera had already left with family and followers and reached Ravana of the news with happiness, and that he might take over the sovereignty of Lanka samrajya. Then Dashagriva along with his family members, followers, and rakshasa sena entered the Lankapuri. sa cābhiṣiktaḥ kṣaṇadācarais tadā; niveśayām āsa purīm daśānanāḥ, nikāmapūrnā ca babhūva sā purī; niśācarair nīlabalāhakopamaiḥ/ dhaneśvaras tv atha piṭṙvākyagauravān; nyaveśayac chaśivimale girau purīm, svalamkṛtair bhavanavarair vibhūṣitām; puraṁdarasyeva tadāmarāvātīm/

Then the nishaacharaas had duly celebrated Ravana's rajyabhisheka and in no time rakshasas from all over got gradually yet most contentedly settled at Lanka samrajya. Meanwhile, as per his respected father's instructions, Kubera settled down at the Kailasa prarvata atop and created Alkapuri on the lined of Indra's Amaravati.

Maha Muni Agastya further addressed Shri Rama intimating that after Ravana's rajyabhisheka of Lankapuri, he was concerned of his only sister Shurpanakha. While taking a joy ride in one 'udyanavana' in the outskirts of Lankapuri where only pashu- manushayas move about, Ravana had casually seen Diti Putra Maya Danava and asked him about his background. 'In the distant past, there was an apsrara kanya of swarga loka Hema who was married to me and for some thousand years comfortably having built a Swarna Nagari by 'maaya' but she went away suddenly on some duty of Indra Karya and was yet to return leaving me alone for the last 14 years now leaving me with a daughter and two sons named Mayavi and Dundubhi'. Then Ravana introduced the danava putra about himself as the Lankapui's King Ravana as the Pulastya poutra Vishrava's putra Ravana now proposing his sister Shurpanakha to Danava putra Maayavi. That was how Lankeshvara Ravana performed his sister's wedding. Further, Danava Maya proposed his daughter Mandodari to Ravana by holding her hands and said: ‘Raja! This is my daughter Mandodari, do kindly accept her as your queen’. Thus the ‘panigrahana’ was duly performed as agni saakshi.’ Then Agastya Muni annotated to Shri Rama that nodoubt Maya Danava was fully aware of Ravana’s ‘krura pravritti’ yet being the descendent of Pulastya and Brahma had taken the risk. Then having successfully executed his sister’s and his own weddings returned back to Lankapuri and performed the weddings of his brothers Kumbhakarna and Vibhishana; Virochanakumara Bali Chakravarti’s daughter named ‘Vajrajivaala’ to Kumbhakarna and Gandharva Raja Shailusha’s daughter ‘Sarama’ the ‘dharma tatva jnaani’ to Vibhishana. Devi Sarama was born on the banks of the famed Manasarovara as her mother cried out : ‘Saro maa vardhasya’ ; in the confusion of prasava kaala, the mother’s expression was Sarah maa! And thus the name of Sarama! In due course Devi Mandodari was blessed with a son Megha naada since Lankapuri was resounded my megha garjanaas and hence Ravana himself named the son as ‘Meghanaada’ who eventually turned be as Indrajit or who defeated Indra himself.

Maha Muni Agastya continued addressing Shri Rama about Kumbhakarna and his deep sleep as per Brahma Vara- and Sarasvati's interversion of the rakshasa's twisted tongue. Being unable to resist his deep sleep pursuant his wedding, Kumbhakarna requested Ravana to get a suitable bed to sleep on and in turn Ravana requested the maha shilpi Vishvakarma to get a cosy bed of two yojanas of length and one yojana of width [one yojana being of 15 km + approx.] embellished with sphatika mani golden 'sthambhas' or pillars fixed on four sides. The bed was to be into a 'meru parvata samaana' huge guha or cave which too was constructed almost instantly. tatra nidrām samāviṣṭaḥ kumbhakarṇo niśācaraḥ, bahūny abdasahasrāṇi śayāno nāvabudhyate/ nidrābhibhūte tu tadā kumbhakarṇe daśānanaḥ, devaṛṣiyakṣagandharvān bādhate sma sa nityaśaḥ/ Mahabali Kumbhakarna who had so far resisted his deep sleep having some how entered his house and then into the huge bed set inside his cave like room and slept long for a time of thousand years. Ravana being desirous of ensuring his brother's profound sleep entered the cave like bed room had noticed deva-rishi-yaksha-gandharva samuhas were tormenting Kumbhakarna. He witnessed the situation as though devaas were freely moving about in the nandana vanaas, or like what rakshasas seeking to play with elephants in sarovaras or ferocious winds uproot maha vrikshaas. He was so much irritated and caught hold of his mighty twenty hands a sizeable groups of gandharvas and kept on hammering the gandharvas to death as their resounding desperate cryings. tathā vṛttaṁ tu vijñāya daśagrīvaṁ dhaneśvaraḥ, kulānurūpaṁ dharmajña vṛttaṁ saṁsmṛtya cātmanaḥ/ saubhrātradarśanārthaṁ tu dūtaṁ vaiśvaraṇas tadā, laṅkāṁ saṁpreṣayām āsa daśagrīvasya vai hitam/ As Kubera came to learn of Dashagriva's unbridled behavior of cruelty and the resultant misdeeds, he sent an emissary to Ravana and explain of his brother's affection and to kindly abstain from his instant rage on his gandharvas. Initially the emissary called on Vibhishana who welcomed him and asked him as to why he wished to visit Lankapuri and he replied to call on King Ravana with a message. Then he saw Ravana who sent the this message from Kubera: rājan vadāmi te sarvaṁ bhrātā tava yad abravīt, ubhayoḥ sadṛśaṁ saumya vṛttasya ca kulasya ca/ sādhu paryāptam etāvat kṛtaś cāritrasaṁgrahaḥ, sādhu dharme vyavasthānaṁ kriyatām yadi śakyate/ dṛṣṭaṁ me nandanam bhagnam ṛṣayo nihataḥ śrutāḥ, devānāṁ tu samudyogas tvatto rājaṁ śrutaś ca me/ Maha Raja! Having killed Kubera's messenger, the highly infuriated Ravana then got readied to attack Kubera, along with his six ministers named Mahodara-Prahasta-Maaricha- Shuka- Saarana- and Dhumraaksha. The Ravana sena crossed cities, villages, rivers, mountains, forests and so on and reached Kailasa Parvata on which Kubera and the yakshas. As the Yaksha sena and the Rakshasa sena got confronted each other, the Ravana mantri sena even of six each of them confronted each of thousand strong yaksha sena. Both the sides of yaksha-rakshasa veera sainikaas exchanged gada-musala-shakthi- tomaras in a manner that the surroundings of the parvata as though Kailasa itself was trembling with vibration. Ravana sena attacked Yakshaas as though agni jwalaas reinforced with 'maha vaayu pravaahaas' blazed forth berserk. tais tu tasya mṛdhe 'mātyair mahodaraśukādibhiḥ, alpāvaśiṣṭās te yakṣāḥ kṛtā vātair ivāmbudāḥ/ ke cit tv āyudhabhagnāṅgāḥ patitāḥ samarakṣitau, oṣṭhān svadaśanaḥ tīkṣṇair daṁśanto bhuvi pātītāḥ/ As the wild winds shatter off even thick black clouds, Mahodara-Shukaaadi maha mantri senaas had systematically destroyed the ever defensive yaksha left overs. Having thus tossed down the Parvata, Maaricha took some rest returned and started confronting 'Samyodhakanataka' once again as the latter ran away and stood frightened. Meanwhile Dashagriva sought entry in the Kubera dwaara and was resisted by the dwaarapalala Suryabhaanu and punched the Mahasura Ravana by forcefully lifting the gates of the gate and smashed Ravana as the latter's blood flowed out nodoubt yet in tune with Brahma vara to Ravana was the least affected smacked back the dwaarapalaka as he was frightened and ran away. Thus, being totally unable to resist Ravana, yaksha sena found that they were neither able to resist nor defeat Rakshasaas nor save themselves.

As thousands of Yaksha Veeraas fled away, leaving behind countless yakshas were smashed to death, one Maha Yaksha named Manibhadra encountered Ravana and having led four thousand Yaksha Veeras as per Kubera's instruction. They were fully readied with gada-musala-praasa-shakti-tomara-mudgaraas and assaulted as they encouraged each other asserting that they should never leave a single rakshasa from death or while exchanging their ayudhas from each other. In fact while witnessing the killing sprees of rakshaaas, even Brahmavaad Rishis too were taken aback with surprise. But alas! Rakshasa Prahasta killed one thousand yakshas, Maareecha made two thousand yakshas downed to dust. Indeed! This easy way of fighting at ease irritated Dhumraksha and having got into vehement cruelty assaulted with his 'maayaa maya' methodology and threw his 'musala' at the chest of Manibhadra. In turn, Manibhadra lifted his mace and having revolved it a few times battered at the head of Dhumraksha who fell down while 'rakta pravaahaas' were resulted. Dashaaana on seeing this got enraged and hit three shakti ayudhaas simultaneously at the headgear of Manibhara who was also reputed as Paarshvamoulika fled away by Ravana's prahaara, realising that the latter was invincible any way. It was at that time that Kubera himself was visible from a distance along with two of his mantris named Shukra and Prousthapada. A little while later, Kubera addressed his first cousin Ravana as follows: mayā tvam vāryamāṇo 'pi nāvagacchasi durmate, paścād asya phalaṁ prāpya jñāsyase nirayaṁ gataḥ/ yo hi mohād viṣaṁ pītvā nāvagacchati mānavaḥ, pariṇāme sa vi mūḍho jānīte karmaṇaḥ phalam/ daivatāni hi nandanti dharmayuktena kena cit, yena tvam īdṛśaṁ bhāvaṁ nītas tac ca na budhyase/Durbuddhi

Dashagriva! Even after my sending across my considered advice, you have shamelessly attacked your co-brother and as you should finally had dropped in the hell, then only you would learn of that advice. Could those evil minded personalities like you having been puffed up with poisonous avarice ever absorb the purport of karma phala jnaana! Even after attaining success by such ways and means, if were not abided by dharma which devas abhor about, such success is merely sporadic and truly transient. But most unfortunately right now this everlasting truism being the nature of incomprehensibility and a mystery. yo hi mātṛḥ pitṛṇ bhrātṛṇ ācāryāṁś cāvamanyate, sa paśyati phalaṁ tasya pretarājaśaṁ gataḥ/ adhruve hi śarīre yo na karoti tapo 'rjanam, sa paścāt tapyate mūḍho mṛto dṛṣṭvātmano gatim/ kasya cin na hi durbudheś chandato jāyate matiḥ, yādṛśaṁ kurute karma tādṛśaṁ phalaṁ aśnute/ buddhiṁ rūpaṁ balaṁ vittaṁ putrān mātṛmāmyam eva ca, prapnuvanti narāḥ sarvaṁ svaḥkṛtāḥ pūrvakarmabhiḥ/ He who betrays mothers and fathers, brahmanas and gurus of maturity and wisdom would be the natural preys of 'paapa bhogata' and thus of dishonoured victims of Yama dharma raja. This body of ours is truly transient and once being ignorantly or well knowingly commit duraacharaas post death then there could be no retrievability ever possible. Paapaphala is merely the root of 'duhkha maha vriksha' and is certainly not transferable. Mudhatva and Papatva are the such two branches of a Vriksha as would poison hastening its destruction. Karma and phala lead each other as being the nature of existence, since as one sows so is reaped. All the Beings on earth get bestowed with 'samriddhi- sundara rupa-bala-vaibhava-veerata-yukta santaana trupti only by 'punya karma anushthaana'. As Kubera concluded his explanation thus, he hit his gada ayudha on Ravana's head and thus led to mutual 'ayudha prahaaraas'. Kubera released his 'agneyastra' which was equalised with Ravana's 'vaarunastra'. Then Ravana revealed his numerous forms of tigers, wild boars, clouds, mountains, seas, maha vrikshas, daityas and so on. Then Ravana upheld his mighty 'gada' and thumped on Kubera's head as the latter like a maha ashoka vriksha fell down on to earth. tato nirjitya taṁ rāma dhanadaṁ rākṣasādhipaḥ, puṣpakaṁ tasya jagrāha vimānaṁ jayalakṣaṇam/ kāñcanastambhasaṁvītaṁ vaidūryamaṇitoraṇam, muktājālapraticchannaṁ sarvakāmaphaladrumam/ tat tu rājā samāruhya kāmagaṁ vīryanirjitam, jītvā vaiśravaṇaṁ devaṁ kailāśād avarohataḥ/ Thus Ravana was puffed up with triumph against Yaksha Raja Kubera the Dhanaadhyaksha- Dikpati- Dhrama dhvaja and seized the Pushpaka Vimana right under his unique control. That Pushpaka is decorated its interiors with golden pillars with vaidurya mani toranas and pearl laced net works of magnificence while its exteriors with rich vriksha sampada which would yield sweetest fruits and of a plethora of fragrant flowers all the seasons, be it summer or winter or rains. Thus Ravana with all his followers flew down the Kailasha shikharas on to Lankapuri with sensational victory.

Dashagriva visited 'Sharavana Sarkandavana' as the pushpaka vimana was halted by Nandeshwara- the angry Rakshasa lifted up the mountain, delighting Mahesha, named him as Ravana and gifted a khadga!

Agasyta then continued to Shri Rama that Ravana having accomplished victory against Kubera and seized Pushpaka vimana, flew across ' Sharavana named sarakanda vana' where Kartikeya was born.

[Vishleshana on Sarkanda Vana and Kartikeya Janma vide a) Padma and b) Skanda Puranas respectively:

a) For a number of years, Shiva and Parvati were in a joyful mood after their marriage and there was little news for Indras and Devas about the possible arrival of Kartikeya who alone could terminate Tatakasura. Agni Deva took the form of a parrot and entered the Palace of Shiva and Parvati who found that Parvati was enjoying a bath in a Sarovar playing with lotus flowers and Lord Shiva was resting in his bed. She found six Krittikas in the Sarovar and told them that she was desirous of seeing the water drops inside the lotus bulbs; the Kritthikas replied in fun that they would show the water drops provided they allow them also to share the joy of a child in her 'garbha'! The Krittikas further said that they should allow them too to own the child as their own as much as that of Devi Parvati and she agreed to the mutual deal; Krittikas showed the water drops inside the lotus bulb and drank them. As soon as she drank the water drops, there emerged a handsome and healthy boy from Devi Parvati's right abdomen with Sun-like luster and a powerful Physique wearing a 'Shula' and 'Ankush' in both of his hands. He was called 'Kumar' as many entities claimed parentage mainly of course by Lord Shiva and Devi Parvati but also the Krittikas and even Agni. The boy had six brilliant faces and was popularly called by several names viz. Vishakha, Shanmukha, Skanda, Shadaanana and Kartikeya.

b) After wedding, Maha Deva and Devi Parvathi moved on to Mountain Gandhamadan to a luxurious and lonely place for their honeymoon. As Bhagavan's virility was so potent that parts of humanity were getting destroyed and Vishnu asked Agni Deva to take the form of a Hermit and asked Parvati to donate it and extended his hand which was immediately consumed by Agni even before Her eyes. Parvati got angry and cursed Agni to become 'Sarva Bhakshak' or he who consumes everything. Agni could not bear the brunt of the virility of Maha Siva and begged Him to show a way to pass it on to someone; Shiva advised that the same be planted into virtuous women and Sage Narada annotated that such women of high merit taking bath on an early morning in the instant month of Magha would be attracted to Agni and his hot flames and they would be the best choice for the transfer of the virility in particles. As advised by Narada, Krittikas approached Agni seeking warmth from the cold morning and Agni transferred some drops of virility to the ladies through their skin pores. Kritthikas got pregnant and their angry husbands gave a curse to them to roam on the Sky. They became Stars in a constellation and aborted their pregnancies. The major portion of the virility got left however on top of the Himalayas which was lifted by a crane and pushed into Ganges and the drops which were radiant like fire sparks got meshed up in the river bed plants (Sarkhand) of Ganges, who carried the foetus to a secluded place in the bushes thus emerging a Six Headed Child Kartikeya! As soon as the boy of highly chiselled face and limbs was born with extraordinary splendour, there was such illumination that travelled all over the Three Worlds instantly. Shiva Deva and Devi Parvati appeared at once on their Vrishaba carrier and were overwhelmed with parental love and affection.]

Further stanzas to follow: parvataṁ sa samāsādyā kiṁ cid ramyavanāntaram, apaśyat puṣpakam tatra rāma viṣṭambhitam divi/ viṣṭabdhāṁ puṣpakam dṛṣṭvā kāmagaṁ hy agamaṁ kṛtam, rākṣasaś cintayām āsa sacivaiṣ taiḥ samāvyūtaḥ/ kiṁ idam yannimittam me na ca gacchati puṣpakam, parvatasyoparisthasya kasya karma tv idam bhavet/ After crossing the Sharvana-Sarkhanda jungle, Ravana and his party saw many mountains were crossed and the ‘vanasthali’ was indeed picturesque. But suddenly the Pushpaka Vimana slowed down and stopped mid air high on the lower skies. Ravana enquired of his mantris as to why the vimana stopped suddenly as it should normally proceed as per our wishes. Would it be that somebody might be staying down there and possibly was stopped all of a sudden! tato ’bravīd daśagrīvam mārīco buddhikovidāḥ, naitan niṣkāraṇam rājan puṣpako ’yam na gacchati/ Then buddhi kushala Ravana Mantri Mareecha remarked: Rakshasa Raja! would it be possible that there might be some intervention of Yaksha Raja Kubera! tataḥ pārśvam upāgamyā bhavasyānucaro balī, nandīśvara uvācedaṁ rākṣasendram aśaṅkitāḥ/ nivartasva daśagrīva śaile krīḍati śaṅkarah, suparṇanāgayakṣāṇām daiṭyadānavarakṣasām, prāṇinām eva sarveṣām agamyāḥ parvataḥ kṛtaḥ/ Even as Maarecha remarked of Kubera’s intervention, Nandiswara the ‘sannihita of Bhagavan Shankara’ peeped in; he was looking frightening, loathsome, with dark figure yet mixed with red color as of pingala varna, shaven head and of short hands with unbelievable body strength; Nandiswara shouted on Ravana: ‘Dashagriva! Get back and clear off your vimana at once. This is a prohibited area for Naaga, Suvarna, Yaksha, Devata, Gandharva Rakshasaas and is not a thoroughfare.

[Vishleshana on the Origin and Glory of Nandeshwara from a) Linga and b) Varaha Puranas:

a) Maharshi Shilada approached Indra Deva to bless him to a highly renowned and virtuous son who would be ‘Ayonijam’ and ‘Mrityuheenam’ or unborn to a woman and deathless. Indra Deva expressed his inability and said: Na durlabho Mrityuheenastwa Putro hyayonijah, Mayaa cha Vishnunaa chaiva Brahmanaa cha Mahatmanaa/ (It is not possible for Brahma or Vishnu to grant a son who would be unborn to a woman and would not die). Maharshi Shilada then performed severe Tapasya for thousands of years and his body got degenerated to such an extent that it became a skeleton full of worms. Finally, Maha Deva granted his vision and Shilada’s wish: Tava Putro bhavishyaami Nandi naamnaa twayonijah, Pitaa bhavishyaasi mama Piturvey Jagataam Muney/ (I shall grant you a son with the name of Nandi and he would be my son and would be popular like wise). Then Nandi was born at Yagna Bhumi with the features of Maha Deva himself with Trinetras, Chaturbhjas and as Jataa mukuta and Vajra-Sarpa dhaari when Devatas rained fragrant flowers, Apsaraas danced and Gandharvaas sang tuneless hymns in praise of Shiva and Nandi. Vasus, Rudras and Indra prayed respectfully and Devis like Lakshmi, Jyeshtha, Diti, Aditi, Nanda, Shachi, Bhadra and others rendered ‘Stutis’ to Nandi. Shailada Muni commended Maha Deva as well as Nandeswara and expressed his total satisfaction and gratitude. As Nandeswara was taken into the ‘Parnashala’ or thatched home of Shailada, Nandi assumed a human Rupa instead of Deva Swarupa. Shailada Muni was overjoyed, performed the child’s Jaata Karma and other Vedic Tasks and on the son’s attaining seven years performed his Yagnopaveeta dharana and ‘Upaasana’ of Gayatri and tendered him to the Ashram of Maharshi Mitraavaruna. The Guru taught Veda Vidya, Shastras and other Scriptures, besides Dhanur Vidya, Ayur Veda and Mantra Vidyas, Chatushashti Kaalas, Ashrama Dharmas and so on. Mitraavaruna was very proud of the student and so was Muni Shilada; the Guru then blurted at that time of Nandi’s exit from Ashram that doubtless Bala Nandi displayed extra-ordinary brilliance as a fulfilled Scholar and accomplishment but was shortlived! Shilada fainted at this disclosure for long and after regaining normalcy took to extreme Tapasya again to Maha Deva; even as Shilada was engaged in Tapasya, Shiva appeared, fondled Nandi, assured him not to get disturbed from what was stated by his Guru. He said that actually he sent messengers that Nandi's life was almost over since his human birth would anyway be of Tapatrayas and hence he was terminating the Manava Janma to bestow Everlasting Life; by so saying, Maha Deva touched Nandi so that his physical body would fall down with his Jataa Mukuta etc and secure a permanent Rudra Rupa. The Place where the human form of Nandi's 'Jatajuta' fell on Earth was materialised into a Sacred River called Jatodaka and Nandi's new Form was of a 'Vrishabha'; Parama Shiva himself performed 'Abhisheka' on the new Form of Nandi and that Place came to be called Vrishadhwani, Jambunada or Panchanada and Vishwakarma gifted a Golden Mukuta or Headgear and Kundalaas or Ear Rings. Thereafter Nandeswara familiarised with his mother Devi Girija and also the Ganaas, whom he was empowered as their Chief. Devi Parvati endeared the son who prostrated before her with veneration. Maha Deva declared to the Tri Lokas that Nandeswara was the son of Shiva and Parvati. Devas headed by Indra, Brahma, Vishnu, Dikpalakas, Maharshis, besides Yaksha-Gandharva-Muni and Yogi ganaas were all invited to a huge event where Nandeswara's unique name was fame were known all over, where ever Maha Deva was known and indeed Maha Deva was acclaimed as the Supreme Lord of the Universe. Parama Shiva granted a boon to Nandeswara that He would be in the 'Sannithi' (Presence) of Shiva always and any kind of worship to himself would be incomplete without any Service to Nandi ! Even great sins of the magnitude of Brahma hatya could be nullified by Shiva Puja but at first, Nande -swara should be propitiated without fail; Aadow kuryaanamaskaaram tadantey Shivataam Vrajat/

b) The Northern Peak of Mandarachal Mountain known as Munjavan is picturesque where a Nandana Garden existed with most alluring surroundings of glittering precious stones and heaven-like ambience of streams, flowers and fruits where Devas made their temporary resting places and so did Celestial Beings like Kinnaras who sang their sweetest tunes and performed their dances. Most significantly, Maha Deva used to often grace the Place in the form of 'Sthanu Parameswara'. In the subsequent Treta Yuga, a Maha Muni called Nandi carried out a rigorous Tapasya for thousand years experiencing icy cold and extreme heat and Parameswara having tested his steadfast fortitude and unnerving faith finally gave 'Sakshatkar' and asked boons to bestow; but Nandi never yielded for 'Prabhutva, Amaratva, Indratva, Brahmatva, Lokapaalatva -Royalty, Immortality, the position of Indra, Brahma, Lokapaala –but his Bhakti should be eternal, or else there should not be Bhakti at all! Very gladly, Shankara awarded the World's highest windfall that Nandi would be unique like Shiva Himself, that he would be the conduit between all Devas and Danavas, Indra and Brahma and all the Highest Powers that be as Shiva's own conscience! Thus Nandi the Head of Nandi Ganas became Trinetra, with Trishul, Danad, Pinaki, etc. like Second Shankara! In course of time, none could ever witness Shankara's physical form as He had turned Himself as a Deer in the Sleshmatak Forest, a fact not known to Nandi even! Led by Nandi, all the Deities including Indra made vigorous searches the World over but to no avail. Lord Brahma in His inner vision over Tapasya discovered Parameswara as a Deer in the Sleshmatak Forest not far from the renowned Pasupathinath Temple in Nepal. Indra, Brahma and Narayana reached the Forest and found the uni-horn Deer, chased it and nearly caught hold of the horn – Indra the top portion, Brahma the middle and Vishnu the lower portion. Unfortunately for them, the horn gave way into their hands as three parts and all the three cursed their own helplessness. A voice was then heard that the three of them were able to catch only the horn and that too in three pieces. If only the entire body were caught and installed then Dharma Dhenu (the Cow of Virtue) would have been on all four legs. Anyway, they should install their respective pieces of the horn – the upper portion as Uttar Gokarneswar, the middle portion as Dakshina Gokarneswar and the lower portion at Slesheswar. Lord Shiva further said that on the foot hills of Himalayas called Nepal, He would in any case emerge on His own with four resplendent faces in four directions which would be famous as 'Sariresh' (Pashupathinath); It is at this Illustrious Place where the Sacred Bagamati River originating from Himalayas flows that Slesheshvar Param Guha or the Sancrosant Cave had surfaced. There are any numbers of streams flowing where even a touch of the waters would destroy sins. To the South of Slesheswar is situated the 'Anashak' Tirtha which allows firm steps towards Mukti. Another Tirtha called 'Bhrigu Prapatan' destroys 'Arishat Vargas' (Six Enemies) viz. Kama (Desire) and Krodha (Anger);

Groups of ‘Apsaras’ (Celestial Dansueses) take off by Vimans from this Place to ‘Swarga’. Lord Brahma Himself established ‘Brahmodabhed’ Tirtha which has the reputation of abolishing ‘Rajo guna’ if a devotee takes bath with Indriya-Nigraha or limb control for a year to qualify him to ascend to Brahma Loka. There is also a ‘Gorakshak’ Tirtha a visit of which would bestow the benefit of ‘Sahasra-Daan’ or Charity of Thousand Cows. A Climb of Gauri Shikhar provides Devi- Sayujya. Down under the Mountain a bath in Baghmata River at ‘Ratna Kund’ blesses attainment of Skandalok. Even a simple bath at ‘Panchanadi Tirtha’ bestows the Punya of performing ‘Agnishtoma’. To North of Slesheswar is ‘Pranthakapaniya’ Tirtha where Gandharvas were renowned to worship Shiva. To North West, a sincere bath in ‘Brahmodaya Tirtha’ along with ‘Sandhyopasana’ would assure that there would be no visit to ‘Mrityu loka’ and that there would not be any difficulties for the rest of life. The devotees who perform Pitra Tarpana and Shraddha in the Sangam Place of Bhagmati and Manivati Rivers would most certainly accomplish the best of Shiva Devas’ blessings! Lord Indra situated the top portion of the ‘Shringa’ at Swarga itself. Brahma set up the middle portion of the Deer Horn at Gokarna and Lord Vishnu set it up at Shringeshwar. But Bhagavan’s body without the Horn has infinite forms! For example, Ravanaasura secured one linga which got entrenched in Earth because of the trickstery of Ganesha and tried to pull it tight and gave up! (Gokarna in North Karnataka is a Siddha Linga at Mahabaleswar Temple; the coverings of the Atma Linga sought to have been brought by Ravana fell at Dharieswar, Gunavantheswar, Murudeswar and Sajjeswar Temples, as popularly believed).

Tamil Purana Tiruvallada mentions another story in which Nandi took the form of a whale as Devi Parvati lost her concentration while Shiva was explaining the meaning of Vedas to her. Parvati incarnated as a fisherwoman for the atone. To unite his master and his beloved wife, Nandi took the form of a whale and started to trouble the people. Fisherwoman Parvati's father told that anyone who killed the whale would marry his daughter. Later Lord Shiva took the form of a fisherman, killed the whale and got Parvati in her previous form.]

As the Beings on earth felt that ‘ maha pralaya kaala’ had arrived, Indraadi devataas too were unable to find the way out.’ Agastya Muni then continued his naration further: Dashagriva then duly eulogised Vrishabhadhwaja who was seated atop the Kailasa for some thousand years in that very manner. Then Maha Deva was pleased with Ravana Stuti.

physically and mentally and descended from the pushpaka and introduced himself and asked for his parentage , her husband, her like-dislike for him and the married life if any. I have briefly conveyed to to you; ‘Narayana , and Narayana’ only should be my husband and none else. Having cursed Ravana, Devi Vedavati offered herself to agni jwaalaas, as celestial flowers were rained down from the high skies. In the following birth , he got into the following birth as ‘an ayonija’ Devi Sita as from as an ‘halaa - avirbhaava’.

[Vishleshana on Devi Vedavati from Brahma Vaivarta Purana:

In the lineage of Manu Daksha Savarni were born Brahma Savarni-Dharma Savarni-Rudra Savarni-Deva Savarni and Indra Savarni who were all Parama Bhaktas of Bhagavan Vishnu. The son of Indra Savarni viz. King Vrishabhadhwaja was a great devotee of Parama Shiva and the latter considered the King even more important than his own sons Ganesha and Kumara. Somehow the King never followed the Vaishnava Dharma and even discouraged Vishnu Puja and Lakshmi Puja. An infuriated Surya Deva cursed the King that his Rajya Lakshmi would abandon him. Shiva in turn lifted his Trishul and ran behind Surya Deva and the latter sought refuge from his father Kashyapa Muni and Brahma. The three some of Surya, Kasyapa and Brahma sought protection from Vishnu Deva. Shiva too reached there and told Vishnu that Vrishabhadhwaja was his personal Bhakta and Surya cursed the King. Vishnu replied that by the time Shiva reached Vaikuntha, lot of time elapsed and not only Vrishabhadhwaja lost his Empire and died but also his son Rathadhwaja passed away and the latter's sons Dharmadhwaja and Kushadhwaja became intense Bhaktas of Vishnu and were performing Tapasya to Lakshmi Devi; Vishnu further said that an 'Amsa' of Maha Lakshmi would be soon born to Malavati, the blessed wife of Kushadhwaja. As soon as the baby was born, she recited Vedas and was thus named Vedavati. In course of time, Vedavati took to severe Tapasya. There was an Akaasha Vani (Celestial Voice) which pronounced that Vedavati in her next birth would be Vishnu's wife. On hearing this, Vedavati left for Gandhamadana Mountain and intensified her Tapasya further. The demon Ravana spotted Vedavati in Tapasya and made advances to her; she cursed Ravana at his misbehaviour, declared that she would sacrifice her life by jumping into Agni Kunda and in her next birth would become responsible for his death as Devi Sita, the wife of a human Avatara of Vishnu to be called Shri Rama. Devi Sita was wedded to Shri Rama in the next birth. To keep up the word of his father Dasharatha, Rama along with Sita and Lakshmana moved on to the forests and Agni Deva approached Rama as a Brahmana and conveyed that since the time for Sita's abduction by Ravana was imminent, he (Agni) should replace Devi Sita with Maya Sita and after the episode of Ravana's killing was over, he would replace real Sita with the shadow Sita after the 'Agni Pariksha' time. Vedavati alias Chhaya Sita proceeded to perform Tapasya at Pushkara Kshetra and in Dwapara Yuga became Draupadi as the daughter of Drupada Raja and further as the wife of Pandavas. Thus Vedavati was blessed as a Trihaayani born in Satya, Treta and Dwapara yugas].

Thus Vedavati of Kritayuga had thus manifested as Devi Sita in Treta Yuga. Subsequently, Ravanaasura in his subsequent 'pushupaka vimana bhramana' reached Usheera beeja Desha where Raja Marut was executing a 'dharma yajna' along with Devas where Brahmarshi Samvarta too was present. But keeping in view of Brahma's boons to Ravana, the yajna got terminated as Indra- Dharma Raja, Varuna and Kubera changed their swarupas as a peacock, crow, swan and chameleon respectively. Other devatas too changed their forms as Ravana descended from the pushpaka. Then Ravana entered the yajna shaala and saw Raja Marut and shouted like a dog having entered the pavitra yajna shaala and barked. Raja Marut asked Ravana as to who was he! Ravana howled in laughter and replied that he was the younger brother of Kubera; yet he found the King of Marut was complacent and unnerved. Then Ravana declared: 'Could there be any other King on earth who would not be aware that there was a King who defeated and disgraced Kubera the Yaksha Raja and forcibly taken away this pushpaka vimana! Yes, I am that Ravana!' Raja Marut replied: Ravana! you are a dhanya rakshasa indeed. Surely you should have practised 'shuddha dharmacharana' indeed. I have never had an opportunity of encountering ever! Durbddhi Ravana! keep standing erect as you should be receiving a befitting reply now! Then Raja Marut picked up his dhanush baanaas but Samvataka Maharshi stopped Marut and said that it would not be proper to attack as yajna bhumi should not be converted as yuddha bhumi for a yajna diksha purusha, besides do get warned that the rakshas raja would be able to uproot the Marud Vamsha; Thus my appeal is not to get violent at this juncture. Then Ravana vindicated his victory as rakshasa sena present in the vimana raised victory ninaadaas and enjoyed 'mamsa bhakshana' of the onlooker brahmanas present at the yajna. As Ravana and the followers alighted back the pushpaka, Indra-Dharma Raja-Varuna Deva got back to their nija swarupas and revived the lives of the bodies of the victimised brahmanas and onlookers of the Yajna. Further, the peacock swarupa Indra blessed the King of Marud ganas that his kingdom should never be subjected to sarpa bhaya and my megha swarupa should always be happy with 'sakaala varshas' thereafter. The crow swarupa Yama dharma raja blessed the Marud King that all the Beings in creation are subject to various bhoutika-maanasika-daivika-badhaa trayas, yet your praja should never be cursed with 'akaala mṛtyu baadhaas'! Then Varuna Deva in hamsa swarupa granted that the King of Marud and all his subjects that they would ever enjoy coolness of body and mind for ever as of cool flows of water; indeed that was how swans had thence onward had assumed spotless white from the erstwhile combination of blue and yellow. Then Kubera as a chameleone assured the King of Maruds assured gold from time to time. Thus Indraadi Devatas bestowed boons to the King of Maruds.

Agastya Maha Muni continued his explanation about duratma Ravanaasura and his escapades as he was fired up with his intense ambition to subdue or win over celestial or earthly kings. Thus in his repetitive jaunts enabled by the pushpaka vimana, he visited various kingdoms threatening the Kings to either endorse their defeats or be prepared for attacks. Then he landed at the Kingdom of Ayodhya where King Anaranya and repeated the swan song of either surrender or be ready for an attack. Ravana stated further: indeed invariably the Ayodhya kings were all humbled as Dushyanta, Suradha, Gaadhi, Gaya, Pururavaadi Rajas raised their truce flags. Then Anaranya said : 'Nishaahara pati! May I take an opportunity of dwandwa yuddha!'. Then some ten thousand elephants, one lakh horsemen, several charioteers and innumerable foot soldiers were on the attack. But then Anaranya's army was devastated by the rakshasaas as dried up grass in agni jwaalaas. Anaranya was stunned at the destruction yet due to his personal prowess sought to re-attack. He then like a lion ran after deer subdued raksha yoddhas the like of whom included Mareecha, Shuka, Saarana Rakshasas who ran away. Then the Ikshvaku Raja assaulted Ravana's dasha mastakas flinging with eight hundred arrows. But like varsha paata on parvatashikhara, the baana varsha of the Ayodhya King did not have much impact. In turn, Ravana gave a hard slap on the king as the latter fell down from his chariot and stated shivering with acute pain, as Ravana had a boisterous laughter shouting: 'oh miserable king of Ayodhya! None indeed in trilokas there might be a hero who could subdue me!' Even his 'praana shakti' was gradually dwindling away, King Anaranya in subdued tone stated: na hy aham nirjito rakṣas tvayā cātmapraśamsinā, kāleneha vipanno 'ham hetubhūtas tu me bhavān/ kiṃ tv idānīm mayā śakyaṃ kartuṃ prāṇaparikṣaye, ikṣvākuparibhāvitvād vaco vakṣyāmi rākṣasa/ yadi dattaṃ yadi hutaṃ yadi me sukṛtaṃ tapaḥ, yadi guptāḥ prajāḥ samyak tathā satyaṃ vaco 'stu me/ Rakshasa! I am happy however that I had dared to attack but neither surrendered meekly nor ran away being frightened, but got defeated in my eventual death. 'But, Rakshasa! You heckled about my ancestry that the erstwhile Kings Ayodhya surrendered to you meekly and hence I should give you a 'shaap' with the curse as follows: If only I have had performed daana-punya-homa-tapa- dharmaanusara praja paalanas, may my words turn to be truthful. utpatsyate kule hy asminn ikṣvākūṇām mahātmanām, rājā paramatejasvī yas te prāṇān hariṣyati/ tato jaladharodagras tāḍito devadundubhiḥ, tasminn udāhṛte śāpe puṣpavṛṣṭiś ca khāc cyutā/ tataḥ sa rājā rājendra gataḥ sthānaṃ triviṣṭapam, svargate ca nṛpe rāma rākṣasaḥ sa nyavartata/ My forthcoming generation of Ishvaku King Dasharatha be blessed to give birth to Shri Rama who would destroy you and usher in loka kalyana.' As Anaranya sad thus deva dudubhis were sounded and 'aakaasa pushpa varshaas' got initiated'. Then Ravana, quite unmindful of the 'shaapa', proceeded to swarga loka.

Thus having firmly established his supremacy of bhuloka, Ravana while proceeding to swarga loka, had stumbled upon Brahmarshi Narada as the latter addressed Ravana conveying his hearty congratulations about the series of victories on the earth. Narada provoked Ravana thus: ' Yet, you appear to have been contented with the normal victories. Just as Vishnu was satisfied in controlling daitya, gandharva-naagas you too seem to be contented. They keep absorbed in the thoughts of ‘maata-pita-putra- bhrata-bandhu- snehas’ only . Such kind of ‘mohagrasta kleshaas pranis’ are finally destined from martya loka to Yama loka under the supreme and never challengeable Yama Raja!’.

Ravana having indirectly got the hint of Brahmarshi, the highly intelligent Ravana smiled and replied: maharṣe devagandharvavihāra samarapriya, ahaṁ khalūdyato gantuṁ vijayārthī rasātalam/ tato lokatrayaṁ jtvā sthāpya nāgān surān vaśe, samudram amṛtārthaṁ vai mathiśyāmi rasālayam/ Maharshi! I am truly excited that I should appear at rasatala and the yama loka where Surya Putra Yama Raja should stay. Narada Prabho! I do now wish to make my ‘ dharma pratigjna’ that besides Yama Raja the rest of the Loka Paalakas too should be vanquished. For the time being I am resolved that Yama the ‘ praana ghata Surya putra’ should soon be a ‘praana viheena’ himself!’ Thus declaring Ravana along with his mantris and rakshasa sena proceeded southward. nāradas tu mahātejā muhūrtaṁ dhyānam āsthitāḥ, cintayām āsa viprendro vidhūma iva pāvakaḥ/ yena lokāḥ trayaḥ sendrāḥ kliśyante sacarācarāḥ, kṣiṇe cāyusi dharme ca sa kālo himsyate katham/ yasya nityaṁ trayo lokā vidravanti bhayārditāḥ, tam katham rākṣasendro ’sau svayam evābhigacchati/ As Ravana thus having left, Brahmarshi Narada wondered within himself: Yama Raja who always declares himself as ‘ayuh ksheena pranis’ of trilokas would have to obey his knifelike decisiveness as Kaala Swarupa could bear the brunt of Ravana with his Brahma Varaas of invincibility even by celestial entities! Indeed Yama dharmaraja decides on the evidence of his celestial vision of what all of the triloka praanis, inclusive of the mortals, perform as per their own ‘karma phalas’ on the supreme principle of ‘as one sows so is reaped’. But now in the outstanding example of Ravana with all the support of Brahma Varaas, how indeed would be the outcome of the illustration of Ravana!’ So wondering about ‘Yama-Ravana samasya parikshana kutuhala Narada’ had himself followed suit to Rasatala.

[Vishleshana on Narada in brief: Brahmarshi Narada is replete with references in Hindu Mythology; he is described in various Puranas as an agent provocateur in a dharmic way to mislead purposively the evil doer towards a rosy path and at the end either teach, correct and reform or totally destroy the evil at its termination. Thus Narada is a legendary bridge between excessive arrogance and selfishness on the one hand and a virtuous way of exemplary life on the other! In the normal parlour, the image of Narada reminds one of a singing bard carrying a musical string instrument named ‘veena’ in his arms, decorated with jasmine flowers on his wrists, neck, shoulders and head hairs, while jay walking on clouds as a ‘trailoka sanchari’ in the sky from one part of the Universe to another as a globe trotter. He is the Sage who anticipates with his uncanny foresight and seeks to avert impending dangers and more often than nought prevent even by creating and hastening critical situations to teach lessons to the wrong doers, thus save embarrassments and negative situations to the hapless; he does not spare any body, -be it human beings or even Gods - barring the Adi Deva Narayana, whose name is at the tip of his tongue every moment and by each and every utterance by his breath! Indeed he is the Celestial Messenger of Peace and Universal Togetherness. No wonder Narada is a synonym of Kalaha priya or mischief monger but he is a unique fund of knowledge, robust commonsense and uncanny wit and wisdom that shapes destinies of Beings in the Supreme Lord's Creation! In Hindu Mythology, Brahmarshi Narada occupies a pride of place. In Puranas one could find innumerable references about his multi-magnificent personality for his knowledge, tact, wit, profound common sense and timely interventions where ever tough situations arise and ready solutions, sometimes even unpalatable, are offered. But all kinds of puzzles are untied by him most eminently in the glorious frame-work of Dharma and Nyaya. The finesse of Narada's way out even in tough situations is attracted by the most ruthless evil practitioners of very high intensity. Could a Ravana but yield to the temptation of bringing Maha Deva's Atma Linga home in his Puja Mandir! Would Kamsa the unquestionable tyrant of Mathura be made to believe years ahead with a warning signal that a child even yet to be born as Krishna would ensure his death! Should a gullible boy Dhruva be emboldened to leave a Kingdom to forests in search of Narayana! Might a Devi Savitri have the courage to run after Yama Raja on a firm prophesy of untimely death of her husband and made Yama's own position compromising! Was Devi Satyabhama the zealous and beloved spouse of Lord Krishna as smitten by jealousy of Devi Rukmini was able to hatch a plan to weigh Krishna's body weight against the Kingdom's gold and jewellery in a sensitive balance and turn Krishna as Narada's slave, but for Devi Rukmini's intervention to place a Tulasi Leaf against the gold reserves! Was indeed Devi Satyabhama who longed for Parijata Tree from Swarga in her backyard helped Indra to terminate Narakasura in Krishna's company and be responsible for entire Bharata to observe 'Deepavali' year after year till date! Such intelligent quotient coupled with eloquent knowledge is but a rudimentary component of Narada's renown! He defied no less than a Brahma whose instruction was to become a house holder to procreate progeny while he stood his ground firmly being ready for punishment to become a house holder again and again. This was backed up by his faith, devotion and total surrender to Narayana!]

As provoked by Narada, Ravana visited Yamaloka, released select pretaatmaas, Yama Dootas attacked the pushpaka vimana damaging it, and Ravana by his paashupataasra destroyed Yama dootaas!

Agastya Maha Muni continued addressing Shri Rama that pursuant to Brahmamarshi Narada's advice, Ravanaasura had left for Yama Loka to conquer Yama Deva himself. Yama Dharma Raja was then seated on a 'simhasana' as an alternate form of Agni Himself conducting the arriving Souls from various Beings, essentially from earth. Brahmamarshi Narada on his arrival Yama Raja addressed him: 'Deva Gandharva sevita Devarshi! Welcome to you. Trust that dharma and the related affairs are all being preserved well! How is it that I now have the 'soubhagya' of your kind arrival here! Then Narada replied: 'Pitru Raja! I have arrived here on an urgent issue and am also suggesting the manner of its prateekaara or the way of its reversal too. This problem is arriving soon in the form of Dashagriva Ravana and his rakshasa sena too and being aware of it, I have arrived here earlier. Indeed you are the possessor of 'kaala dandaayudha' no doubt!' Even as Narada was about to brief, Ravana's pushpaka vimana was just sighted. Ravana saw Yama Raja and yama dootas from far. Ravana also witnessed how countless Yamaanucharaas in action. Despite the total darkness all around, he was able to see how various Pranis were divisioned in lanes s per their own karma phalas of punya paapaas. Thn Ravana witnessed Yama Dootaas and the 'yama yaatana drishyas' too. 'Ghora rupadhari -ugra prakriti bhayanaka yama dootaas' were reprimanding and executing the beatings of the Pranis as they were screaming aloud incessantly and helplessly. Some were being bitten by scorpions, snakes and other poisonous creatures, some were chased and caught by mad dogs eating their body parts which were getting back again and again. Some were not able to wade through the ferocious floods of blistering blood of Vaitarani river while some were made to walk barefooted through agni jwaalaas or unending hot burnt charcoal fields. Some were thrown ferociously into 'asipatra forests' with razor this thorns and nails and forced to walk through for prescribed days, months or years. Some were thown into Rourava Naraka. Numberless pranis get exhausted out of thirst and hunger as the deena-durbala-anga viheena pranis were thus undergoing what one would express as 'Naraka Yaatana' on its naked sense.!

[Vishleshana on Narakas and possibility of retribution from a) Brahma Purana and b) Parashara Smriti]

a) Narakas are: Rourava, Shoukara, Rodha, Taana, Vishasana, Mahajjwaala, Tapta kumbha, Mahalobha, Vimohana, Rutiraandha, Vasaatapta, Kurmeesha, Krumibhojana, Asipatravana, Laalaabhaksdhya, Puyavbaha, Vahnijjwala, Adhahshira, Samdamsha, Krishna sutra, tama, Swabhojana, Apratishta, Avichi and so on. All these are under the control of Yama Dharna Raja and these hells are highly frightening as they administer sharp weapons, fire and poison and send shivers in the veins of the targeted sinners. Providing false evidences, speaking with partiality and blatant lies are liable to reach Rourava Naraka. Bhruna Hatya (killing an unborn child while in Garbha), Guru Hatya (killing one's own Preacher), killing a cow and terminating a person by obstructing breathing would attract 'Ghora Rourava Naraka'; drunkards, Brahma hatya, stealing gold, and keeping company of such sinners are consigned to Shoukara Naraka. Murdering Kshatriyas and Vyashyas, and killing Rajaduta or Messenger of royalty would attract Tapta kumbha Naraka; selling contraband like hot drinks and intoxicants and deserting ones' own followers would consign the sinners to Saptaloha Naraka. A person who insults or uses harsh language the Guru or Gurujana, insulting and criticizing Vedas, or selling Vedas and Scriptures, enticing and taking advantage of destitutes, the helpless or the mentally unsound are banished to Shabala Naraka; thieves and those who perform character-assassination of others are destined to Vimoha Naraka; those who display dislike to Devas, Brahmanas and parents are directed to Kumbhibhakshya Naraka; Persons who consume food even before Naivedya to Devas, Pitras and Guests are shunted to Lalabhakshya; those who manufacture arrows and devices to kill are destined to Vedha Naraka, while who produce Khadgas and Ayudhas (swords and weaponry) are sent away to Vishaana; Brahmanas who accept daanaas in connection with evil-oriented tasks, say to appease 'Kshudra Devatas' or those who encourage ineligible persons to perform and those who make a profession of misleading astrology to cheat gullible persons go straight to Adhomukha Naraka. Brahmanas by birth practice dealing in the trade of meat, lac, 'til' or black sesame seed, salt and intoxicants are sent to Krumipuya; also those Brahmanas in the trade of cats, chicken, goats, dogs, birds and pigs are banished to the same Krumipuya naraka. Such Brahmanas who are in the profession of theater / acting / drama / dance; boating; eat the food of fallen women; carriers of contraband material, accept bribes; maintain cows, buffalos and similar animals to eke livelihood; go to bed with wives especially on Sacred days; put other's houses on fire and involve in the murders of friends are all diverted to Rudhirandha Naraka. Those human beings who resort to the murder of brothers are thrown into Vaitarini River.

b) In case, prayaschittas are not already executed in one's life time in lieu of Maha Patakas and Upa patakas perpetrated on earth in the previous birth, the accumulated sins of dreadful nature would entail much more severe penalties and retributions. The retributions are on account of non-performance of 'Vihita Karmas' or prescribed duties and perpetrating 'nishiddha karmas' or prohibited acts. For example, avoiding Garahana Snanas involves attacks of leprosy for seven births. Committing 'Brahma hatya paataka' and such grave sins and not resorting to prayaschitta would definitely lead to payback reprisal like being pushed down from mountains of high altitudes or being consigned to engulfing poisonous flames mercilessly. Persons who are normally susceptible to continuous attacks by 'Arishad Vargas' viz. Kama-Krodha-Lobha-Moha- Mada-Matsaras viz. Deep desires, terrible anger, passionate possessiveness, excessive attachments, incorrigible arrogance and unpardonable jealousy; one's misdoings of serious nature are therefore sure to lead them to Ati Pataka, Maha Pataka, Anupataka Upa, Paataka, Upa pataka, Jaati bhramsha types of retributions as also Sankarikarana, Apaatri karana, Malaavaha, and so on. Matru - Putrika-Swashru-Sunsha gamana are considered as Atipatakas and Brahma Hatya-Suraapaaa-Brahmana Dhana harana- steya or stealing-guru bharya gamana are Maha patakas. Rajaswala-Garbhini-Asphuta baala gamana and Sharanaagata Shatru vadha are as dreadful as Brahma hatya; providing wrong or misleading evidences and murder of friends are as heinous as Suraa Paana; Para daaraa gamana especially with closely related women is stated to be as appalling as Guru Bharya gamana; 'Sharanaagata stree gamana' is stated as Anupataka or as deplorable as Maha Pataka. Go Vadha, Para Stree vikraya, Matru/Pitru dushana and bahishkarana, Brahmana Vidhi parityajana, Vrata parityaga, Kanya dushana and nastikyata are of the rank of Upapaata dosha. Para ninda, Madyaadi vikraya, Neecha sahavaasa and such other traits demand Jaati bhramsha. Pashu samhara and Heena vritti demand sankarikarana. Asatya sambhaashana, nishkarana nindaropana, kriki keeta pakshi jalachara vadha are considered as Malaa vaha; heena jaati seva, nindita dhanaarjana and such acts of depravity including Urbandhana maranas or forced deaths and anti-social activities are called prakeerna-avikeerna paapas. Among the Atipatakas are listed Matru-Putrika-Sahodari gamana or with such other blood relations both knowingly or ignorantly, the Prayaschitta is Shishna-chedana and three Kruccha prayaschitta and three chandrayana vratas. Para stree gamana demands a series of Chandrayana Vratas like Rishi Chandrayana-eating three fistful havishaanna a day for a month]

there were also a few sprinklings of the departed pranis who treaded dharma maargas as having executed godaanaadi sukritas, anna daanaas, and such philanthropic acts. Then Ravana on by his own descretion freed such marginal sinners thus arrogating himself of his own responsibility. Temporarily such sinners who were freed by Ravana were understandably were elated, while the Yama dootaaas whose responsibility devolved on Preta raksha were fumed up and there prevailed utter confusion as rakshasaas and yama dootaaas were encountered. sa sūlāni gadāḥ prāsāṇ śaktitomasāyakān, musalāni śilāvṛkṣān mumocāstra -balād balī/ tāms tu sarvān samākṣipyā tad astraṁ apahatya ca, jaghnus te rākṣasāṁ ghoram ekaṁ śatasahasrakāḥ/ parivārya ca taṁ sarve śailān meghotkarā iva, bhindipālāis ca sūlāis ca nirucchvāsam akārayan/ Yama dootaaas in thousands of yamadootas ascended the pushpaka vimana and attached rakshasas with ‘parigha-praasa-shula-musala-shatki- tomaras’ and destroyed the chairs, windows, doors, vedis, praasaadaas, and the pathways. As Yama dootaaas went berserk, the ministers of Ravana with their rakshasa sena and he himself fought relentlessly. vimuktakavacaḥ kruddho siktaḥ śoṇitavisravaiḥ, sa puṣpakam parityajya pṛthivyām avatiṣṭhata/ tataḥ sa kārmukī bāṇī pṛthivyām rākṣasādhipaḥ, labdhasamjñō muhūrtena kruddhas tasthau yathāntakaḥ/ Then Ravana’s ‘kavacha’ was broken out and his body was wet with flows of blood as he fell off from the pushpaka vimana. For a while, Ravana too got nervous but soon enough he steadied himself and held up his bow and arrows. tataḥ pāśupatām divyam astraṁ samdhāya kārmuke, tiṣṭha tiṣṭheti tāt uktvā tac cāpam vyapakarṣata/ jvālāmālī sa tu śaraḥ kravyādānugato raṇe, mukto gulmān drumāṁś caiva bhasmakṛtvā pradhāvati/ He then released the most potent Paashupata- astra. On the battle front, the divyaastra assumed the form of agnijvaalaas as of dried up grass in a ‘maharanya’ and the furious flames converted yama dootaaas like heaps of ash. te tasya tejasā dagdhāḥ sainyā vaivasvatasya tu, raṇe tasmin nipatitā dāvadagdhā nagā iva/ tataḥ sa sacivaiḥ sārddham rākṣaso bhīmavikramaḥ, nanāda sumahānādaṁ kampayann iva medinīm/ Thus in the maha samgrama of Ravana and the rakshasaas, the Yama Raja’s ‘Indradhwaja’ like banner fell down smashed up, as Ramana and the mantri senas raised bhayanaka simha naadaas as the severest earthquakes occurred repetitively.

Yamadharma Raja having realised that the yama dootaas were ashed off by Ravana's 'pashupataastra', called for his chariot along with his 'kaala danda' which was already got ignited. Kala danda then assumed a 'swarupa' whose 'mahaayudha' that emitted pralaya kaalaagni. tato lokās trayas trastāḥ kampante ca divaukasaḥ, kālam kruddham tadā dṛṣṭvā lokatrayabhayāvaham/ dṛṣṭvā tu te taṁ vikṛtaṁ rathaṁ mṛtyusamanvitam, sacivā rākṣasendrasya sarvalokabhayāvaham/ laghusattvatayā sarve naṣṭasamjñā bhayārditāḥ, nātra yoddhum samarthāḥ sma ity uktvā vipradudruvuḥ/ Loka trayas of bhu-bhuva-swaras would shiver as saakshaat Kala Deva would get enraged as Devatas stood up alarmed shivering. sa tu taṁ tādṛśam dṛṣṭvā rathaṁ lokabhayāvaham, nākṣubhyata tadā rakṣo vyathā caivāsya nābhavat/ sa tu rāvaṇam āsādy viśṛjaṇ śaktitomarān, yamo marmāṇi saṁkruddho rākṣasasya nyakṛntata/ rāvaṇas tu sthitaḥ svasthaḥ śaravarṣam mumoca ha, tasmin vaivasvatarathe toyavarṣam ivāmbudaḥ/ tato mahāśaktisataiḥ pātyamānair mahorasi, pratikartuṁ sa nāśaknod rākṣasaḥ śalyapīḍitaḥ/ Yet even the 'chaturdasa bhuvanas' were shaken up with Kala Devata being personified and fumed up as Yama Raja's chariot had arrived, Ravana was the least concerned even as the Rakshasa Mantris were alarmed too. As Yama Raja arrived, he lashed out Ravana with his shakti-tomara aayudhas at the marma sthaanaas of Ravana. Yet Ravana was nodoubt hurt but having recovered released baana varshas on Yama Raja. Both the Rakshasa Raja and Yama Raja were equally desirous of success which kept dodging the both. Meanwhile Deva-gandharva-siddha-maharshi ganaas pushed Prajapati ahead and joined the attack. The Devata asserted: Yama Raja! This is my 'swabhava' or the natural mind set and this Rakshasa too should go by the earlier instances of Hiranyakashipu, Namuchi, Shambara Nisinda, Dhumaketu Virochana Kumara Bali, Shambu daitya, Vritraasura, Banaasura and why not Ravana now! I had already bestowed a boon to Ravana to be invincible against Devas; some how, at that weak moment I had granted that boon to Ravana, but now you should not infringe that by killing Ravana and have me untruthful. Once any Devata or a human would prove me that am being untruthful, then surely he or she should be blameworthy of me. This 'Kala danda' is of a 'bhayankara rudra swarupa'. Once released by you, it would never consider the positive and negative considerations, but terminate in devastation. I myself invented this and once flung off, it becomes irreversible and irresistible. Therefore, do not use it on Ravana in any case. In such an ugly situation, my word of honour would be dishonoured. evam uktas tu dharmātmā pratyuvāca yamas tadā, eṣa vyāvartito daṇḍaḥ prabhaviṣṇur bhavān hi naḥ/ kiṁ tv idānīm mayā śakyaṁ kartuṁ raṇagatena hi, yaṁ mayā yaṁ na hantavyo rākṣaso varadarpitāḥ/ As Brahma warned Yama Raja thus he had kept up the honour of Brahma Deva and affirmed that he could never disobey Brahma's considered instruction. Then felt as to which avail in confronting Ravana any way and disappeared with his chariot and horses. daśagrīvas tu taṁ jīvā nāma viśrāvya cātmanaḥ, puṣpakeṇa tu saṁhṛṣṭo niṣkrānto yamasādanāt/ tato vaivasvato devaiḥ saha brahmapurogamaiḥ, jagāma tridivam hṛṣṭo nāradaś ca mahāmuniḥ/ Thus Ravana pronounced his victory against Yama Dootas and Yama Dharma Raja himself and flew back by his illgotten Pushpaka while Vaivasvata and Brahma Putra Narada left for swarga loka.

Agastya Maha Muni continued about Ravana's further escapades and jaunts of victories and then wished to Rasatala full of daityas and naagaas and well managed by Varuna Deva underneath the samudras. Then he entered Bhogavati Puri, brought Nagas under his control and then left for Manimayi puri where a daitya named Nivatakavacha to whom Brahma bestowed boons. Ravana then challenged the daitya. Then Rakshasaas and danavas had the encounter, they exchanged quick exchange of shula- trishula-vajra-pattisha-khadga- pharasaas yet to the break of monsoon and excessive rains, no finality of the battle was established. Then Brahma Deva made his sacred darshan and asserted: ' Danavas! Neither Deva ganaas nor asuras had not and would not be able to surpass Ravanaasura in the series of your mutual battles. Hence my suggestion would be to enter a truce with him.' As Brahma advised thus both Nivatakavacha and Rakshasa Raja entered a mutual truce as agni sakshi. Then the daitya veera hosted Ravana and his entourage for a year long and exchanged their ‘maayopaayas’ and both enjoyed touring the rasatala loka from nagara to nagara and visited ‘ashmanaamaka nagara’, where Kalakeya daanava, a renowned yoddha was living. As Kalakeya was hostile to Ravana, they encountered each other in the course of which Ravana sliced off the head of Ravana’s sister Shurpanakha’s husband Vidyujjihva of army of Kalakeya. The furious Ravana within hardly a few minutes of time had thus killed four hundred daityas and proceeded to Varuna bhavan which was radiant like white and clear clouds hitting Kailasa parvata. There stood the Surabhi naamaka celestial dhenu by whose ksheera dhaaraas ksheera saagara was replete with its milk. Ravana then had the darshan of Maha Deva’s Vrishabha Vahana maata Surabhi’s darshana prapti. Surabhi was infact responsible for the flows of ‘ksheera saagara’ over which had been the ‘Ksheera Samudra’s Purna Chandropatti Kaarana’. It was from the ‘sudha’ and ‘swadha’ that deva-pitru tarpanas are made in the universe. Then Ravanaadi Rakshasa Danavas had sincerely made pradakshinas dutifully and then entered the maha bhayankara Varunaalaya and instructed the messengers there to let Varuna to appear asserting that Maha Ravana had arrived and that Varuna might surrender or take to encounter. This curt message infuriated Varuna Putras and Poutras who got prepared for an attack with Ravana. Varuna putra poutras were accompanied by the senaadyakshaas of Varuna deva named ‘Gou’ and ‘Pushkara’. But Ravana’s rakshasa sena killed the senapatis and the Varuna sena and humiliated Varuna putra poutras who had temporarily stopped the attack. But soon enough they saw Ravana seated on the Pushpaka vimana smiling away when they heckled Ravana with their ‘simha naadaas’. Having noticed this, raksha veera Mahodara got furious. He found Varuna Putras were flying in winds by their chariot and smashed his mace on the ‘radhaashvaas’ as the crumbled down dead along with the charioteer too. On finding Varuna putras still flying on the skies yet unruffled. They straightened their respective ‘dhanush baanaas’ and released on Mahodara who was hurt fatally and surrounded Ravana’s pushpaka vimana and rained baana varsha on Ravana. tataḥ kruddho daśagrīvaḥ kālāgnir iva viṣṭhitaḥ, śaravarṣaṁ mahāvegāṁ teṣāṁ marmasv apātayat/ musalāni vicitrāṇi tato bhallaśatāni ca, paṭṭasāmś caiva śaktīś ca śataghñīś tomarāṁś tathā/ pātayām āsa durdharṣas teṣāṁ upari viṣṭhitaḥ, atha viddhāś tu te vīrā viniṣpetuḥ padātayaḥ/ Then Ravana got furious like ‘agni jwaalas’ and released ‘baana varshas’ aiming the ‘marma sthaanaas’ of the Varuna putras, who in turn retaliated by flings on Ravana with vichitra musalaas-bhallas-pattishas-shaktis and shataghnaas. tato rakṣo mahānādaṁ muktivā hanti sma vāruṇān, nānāpraharaṇair ghorair dhārāpātair ivāmbudāḥ/ tatas te vimukhāḥ sarve patitā dharanītale, raṇāt svapurūṣaiḥ śīghraṁ gṛhāṇy eva praveśitāḥ/ tān abravīt tato rakṣo varuṇāya nivedyatām, rāvaṇaṁ cābravīn mantrī prabhāso nāma vāruṇaḥ/ Then amid the high pitched shouts, Ravana had systematically hit the feet of the Varuna Kumaaraas as the latter fell down into the slush on earth like elephants were caught in the sludge and fell down. As the rakshasaas raised resounding victory shouts, they kept on hurling their ‘ayudhaas’, Varuna putra poutras ran back to their respective abodes and hid themselves. Then the rakshasas chased them and asked where was Varuna Deva! gataḥ khalu mahātejā brahmalokaṁ jaleśvaraḥ, gāndharvaṁ varuṇaḥ śrotuṁ yaṁ tvam āhvayase yudhi/ tat kiṁ tava vṛthā vīra pariśrāmya gate nṛpe, ye tu saṁnihitā vīrāḥ kumārās te parājitāḥ/ rākṣasendras tu tac chrutvā nāma viśrāvya cātmanaḥ, harṣān nādaṁ vimuñcan vai niṣkrānto varuṇālayāt/ āgatas tu pathā yena tenaiva vinivṛtya saḥ, laṅkāṁ abhimukho rakṣo nabhastalagato yayau/ They got the reply that Maha Raja Varuna had left to attend a ‘sangeeta sabha’ in Brahma Loka!’ Then the rakshasaas approached Ravana who asserted that it would be futile to wait indefinitely and the pushpaka vimaana returned back to earth and further to Lankapuri.

[Vishlesanas on Urthva Lokas and Atho Lokas from Brahmanda Purana]

Urthwa Lokas: As a part of the Cosmic Egg beyond the Lokaloka, Suta Muni described as follows:(All the Lokas which possess illumination are within the ambit of knowledge and the rest are all unknown and full of darkness; that portion which is circumscribed all around by water was within the Golden Egg and is stated to contain the Bhur-Bhuvar- Swar-Mahar-Jana-Satya-Tapo Lokas. Knowledge of those Lokas is not clear. One could only guess that these Lokas were lit up by Chandra at the beginning of Shukla Paksha in the West in the shape of a Pot just as Brahmanda was also surmised as an Egg.)

The Brahmanda was stated to have surrounded by solidified water called ‘Ghanodadhi’ which was held by ‘Vanoda’ or a mass of solidified water and was encircled by Illumination all round in the shape of a Fiery Iron Ball, and Akasha or Ether grasps the Ganodadhi. The Bhutaadi or The Cosmic Ego or Maha Ahamkara or simply stated as Ghana Vaata or Solidified Air supported by Akaashaa was called the Infinite Principle or Mahaan; it was that Ayvakta or Unknown, Ananta or Endless, Aghora or Uncontaminated, Niraadhara or Unsupported, Avikara (Featureless), Sukshma (Subtle) and Avikarana (Unchanged and Undistorted).

Adholokas: As Bhu Devi the Divine Goddess is the Mother of all Living Beings, ‘Aapas’ or water is stated to be endless and so are Vayu, Agni and Akasha. Underneath Bhumi are the Nether Worlds viz. Atala, Vitala, Sutala, Talaatala, Rasatala, Mahatala and Patala. The soil in Atala is stated to be of black soil, of Vitala the ground was of palewhite, Sutala of blue, Talatala of yellow colour, Rasatala of gravel covered ground, Mahatala of Rocky Ground and of Patala of Gold. The Palaces of Asuras of Namuchi the enemy of Mahendra, besides of other demons like Mahananda, Kabandha, Bhima, Suladanta, Dhanjaya, Nagendra were all glittering examples of opulence and material happiness in Atala and other Lokas. In Sutala were the noted Daitya-Rakshasa-Serpent Kings like Mahajambha, Karbandha, Hayagriva, Nikumbha, Bhima, Suladanta, Dhananjaya, Nagendra, Kalia and so on. Shankha, Gomukha, Kakutpada, Asvatara, Kambala, Takshaka stayed at Vitala; Prahlada, Taraka, Puranjana etc were in Rasatala; Kalanemi, Gajakarna were in Mahatala; and among other illustrious serpents Maha Sesha was in Patala. Sesha Deva with his mighty and huge physique with thousand hoods ornamented with outstanding diamonds emitting unprecedented effulgence is stated to bear the brunt of the Entire Universe from Urthva Lokas, Bhumi and the Nether worlds and worshipped by Devas, Danavas, Siddhas and all other celestial beings alike! The Adholokas are called Bilwa Swarga which provided unparalleled physical and material happiness unavailable in Swarga even. The invaluable ‘Manis’ (diamonds) like those worn on the hoods of the huge serpents provided such illumination to all Nether Lokas. The population of these Lokas are stated to lead such unbelievable luxuries and joy that Maharshi Narada who visited these Lokas were totally impressed. He stated that the most powerful Surya Deva bestowed only radiance and not his heat while Chandra gave only brightness but not chilliness. The inhabitants of Bilwa Swarga always revelled in delicacies of food and wine with sophistication and style of living as they were least concerned of day-to-day difficulties; they spent long spells of time in bathing swimming in scented Sarovaras and Ponds and Narada stated that Vishnu’s Tamoguna was in full display at the Bilwa Swarga!]

Ravana was extremely delighted with his vijaya yatra to rasaatala, more so as he had forcibly grabbed innumerable kanyas on his way back from the adholokas and urdhva lokaas too like naresha putris, rishi-deva-danava-naaga-rakshasa-asura-manushya-yaksha-gandharvaas too. The pushpaka vimana was full of heart rending cryings of desperation, hoarse raspings of helplessness, and mouthful curses of harassments. The pushpaka vimana was thus filled of moans and high pitch sobbings and curses on Ravana who was laughing away as loud as th hysteric wailings. In this way as the naaga-gandharva-maharshi-daitya-daanava kanyas in thousands, Ravana was grabbing the long and shining head hairs, tender vakshshtalas, slim waists, and slender feet. As the 'sundara madhyabhaaga' sundaris with chiselled faces as selected by Ravana were frightened with fear and vulnerability, he kept on merry making to match their howlings. Such youthful women were forced out leaving their parents, brothers and even in some cases her husbands too would indeed be alarmed as some of them might even be of some sweet sixteen years only. Some were even frightened that this rakshasa might even devour them. They kept on yelling : Ha! How could I leave my husband; mrityu deva , how could I ever live with my tender children as some would be even new born! evam vilapamānāsu rāvaṇo rākṣasādhipaḥ, praviveśa purīm laṅkāṁ pūjyamāno niśācaraiḥ/ tato rākṣasarājasya svasā paramaduḥkhitā, pādayoḥ patitā tasya vaktum evopacakrame/ tataḥ svasāram utthāpya rāvaṇaḥ parisāntvayan, abravīt kim idam bhadre vaktum arhasi me drutam/ As the forcefully kidnapped young women were crying away in hysterics, his pushpaka vimana descended at Lankapuri, while Ravana's sister Shurnanakha along with a group of rakshasis appeared and fell down with anguish, as Ravana asked her to state what all should she desire too quickly. enemy! Raja! It is unbelievable that your own sister's husband had been killed by you with your own hands! Are you not ashamed of yourself! So screaming Surpanakha and wailing away, Ravana with seeming pleasantness took to dramatics and replied affectionately: Dear sister! What is the point of your hoarse weeping away now; kindly do not feel neglected now; be assured that I should treat you with 'maana-daana-sanmaanaas' now with my heart and soul. As I get furious in my battles, the 'vichakshana jnaana' would get dimmed off as the single objective would be of success alone. Having sent off Shurpanahka to dandakaranya under the care of his cousin Khara Rakshasa and visited Nikumbhila Vana of Lankapuri for peace of mind and tranquility. There he saw that his son Meghanada was performing a sacrerd yajna karya under the guidance of the dwija shreshta danava guru Shukra - acharya . The acharya explained what all Meghanaada had been performing with 'nishtha' a series of yajna karyas: agniṣṭomo 'śvamedhaś ca yajño bahusuvārnakaḥ, rājasūyas tathā yajño gomēdho vaiṣṇavas tathā/ māheśvare pravṛtte tu yajñe pumbhiḥ sudurlabhe, varāṁś te labdhavān putraḥ sākṣāt paśupater iha/ kāmagaṁ syandanam divyam antarikṣacaram dhruvam, māyām ca tāmasīm nāma yayā sampadyate tamaḥ/ He explained: 'Rakshasa Raja! Your son Meghanada with 'nishtha pratishtha' and with wholehearted purity of mind had so far executed Agnishtoma-Ashmamedha-Bahusuvārnika-Rajasooya-Gomedha-Vaishnava yajinas so far- to be further followed up Maheshwara Yajna which is climactic and the hardest whose anushtana is challenging. Once initiated Bhagavan Pashupati would himself appear with his nija darshana. Hence Rakshasa Raja, your son would be bestowed with 'divya radha' besides Taamasiki maya to create and control 'andhakara' or total darkness. etayā kila samgrāme māyayā rākṣaseśvara, prayuddhasya gatiḥ śakyā na hi jñātum surāsuraiḥ/ akṣayāv iṣudhī bānaiś cāpam cāpi sudurjayam, astram ca balavat saumya śatruvidhvāṁsanam raṇe/ etān sarvān varāṁś labdhvā putras te 'yam daśānana, adya yajñasamāptau ca tvatpratīkṣaḥ sthito aham/ Rakshaseshwara! Further, the recipient of the boon would secure a 'tuneera yukta dhanush baanaas' to devastate the enemies. Dashaanana! That is why I am waiting while standing here restlessly fot your son's accomplishment as also for your apperance here.' On hearing this, Ravana addressed his son: 'dear son! Why are you getting attracted to these yajna karyaas involving pujas to my enemies Indraadi Devataas. Anyway, leave all these yajnas and homa karyas. Let us go!' Then as Meghanaada and Vibhishana followed Ravana to ascend the pushpaka vimana, the artanaadaas of the kidnapped yuvatis renewed their desperations. Vibhishana was not able to keep his restraint and addressed the elder brother: īdṛśais taiḥ samācārair yaśo 'rthakulanāśanaiḥ, dharṣaṇam prāñinām dattvā

Don’t you realise what all had in the past that the demon Madhu had forcibly kidnapped our cousin sister Kumbhini. Ravana then asked Vibhishana as to who indeed was Madhu! Vibhishana replied with anger and replied: listen to me. Paapa karma haunts demanding retribution always: Our maternal grand father Sumali who was well known as the elder brother of Malyavan who was a buddhimaan nishachara. Then as per his instructions, four thousand akshohini rakshasa sena armed wit astra shastras attacked with Meghanaada in the lead as Kumbhakarna too followed Ravana. Please understand that viadhavya for any women becomes unbearable. Rajendra! You are a satyavaadi and as such I request you to be truthful in your promise. As such I seek your help as I am seeking my husband’s ‘jeeva daana’. You gave me the assurance asserting: ‘not to get frightened’! Then Ravana got cooled down and asked as to where was her husband.

Then she approached Madhu Rakshasa and assured his sneha bandhavya. Madhu then reached rather timidly as both Kumbhini-Madhu couple hosted a feastful food and rest to Ravana and followers proceeded in that evening itself to Kailasa parvata

Provoked by Prakriti Soundarya, Ravana encountered Apsarasa Rambha and forced 'atyaachaara' as her lover Nalakubara, Kubera's son, cursed Ravana never to coerce unwilling woman attracting instant death.

As Ravana and the rakshasa followers reached by the early night, Chandra Deva was in bloom at the Kailasa Parvata as all the rakshasas had taken to sound sleep. But nishaachara Ravana was awake enjoying the prakriti soundarya in the moon light as various flowers of vrikshas like champā, ashoka, naaga kesara, mandara, choota, paatala, priyangu, arjuna, ketaka, tagara, naarikela, panasaadi vrikshaas. That was the time when kinnara-vidyadhara-gandharva-apsara vanitas were singing sonorous songs and group and solo dances swaying their youthful anga bhangimas. were twisted and unwinded, she was ashamed with fear and shiver she had straightaway fallen sobbing at the feet of Nalakubara who had made his expected appearance. He wondered as to why could have ever happened to this ever smart , vivacious sprightly and youthful woman all of a sudden. Rambha kept on sobbing with hurt feelings, facial twists and gadgada swaraas: ‘Deva! Ravana had just now molested me physically, mentally and psychologically. He is not only a mighty rakshasa without qualms of conscience but also of incincerity in trilokas. I begged him that I am your putra vadhu, kindly spare me and prostrated to him but still he did the ‘atyaachaara’! Then Kubera Kumara Nalakubara reddened his eyes, drawing hot breathings was restless. He addressed Ravana thus: ‘ You dirty old Rakshasa. Yes, am aware that apsarasas do entice Maharshis for defined goals of ‘daivika karyas’. But you had raped Rambha for fun and kamaaturata. I am ashamed that you were born to illustrious family heritage. Rambha was helpless and was never yielding yet you performed the gruesome act and hence you ought be punished’! So saying , Nalakubara drew mantrajalaas into his palms and gave a ‘bhayankara shaapa’ akāmā tena yasmāt tvam balād bhadre pradharṣitā, tasmāt sa yuvatīm anyām nākāmām upayāsyati/ yadā tv akāmām kāmārto dharṣayiṣyati yoṣitam, mūrdhā tu saptadhā tasya śakalībhavitā tadā/ Bhadre Rambha! Prajapati and Deva-Rishi- Pitru ganaas were exhilarated as thereafter, Ravana was indeed afraid of committing ‘atyaachaaraas’ without consent of the victimised women ever thereafter!.

Having been humiliated by the curse of Nalakubara in saving the womanhood from ‘atyaacharaas’, Ravana decided to attack Indraloka as the pushpaka vimana got diverted from kailasa. As having realised of Ravana’s attack, Indra alerted Adityas-Vasus-Rudras-Sandhyas and Marudganaas to get readied for the attack. Indra got nervous and approached Vishnu Deva and bemoaned that Brahma Deva varaas to Ravana had caused that interminable problems. Indra stated that in the past too there were severe difficulties faced the celestial worlds as from Namuchi-Vritrasura-Bali- Narkas ura- Shambara and the like. Thus these issues had been faced by him and devas and as such this problem of Ravana got intensified once again, albeit in a much larger manner. Devaadhi Deva, now this latest issue appears to have been revived, in fact assuming a much larger proportion.’ As Indra got nervous, Vishnu replied coolly: ‘Deva Raja! don’t you get excited and nervous in this manner. First of all, devaasuras together would not be able to face Ravana due to the boons, and further the brothers and sons do have been getting encouraged. I suggest this that you along with the devaas might battle them first as at this particular stage I am not inclined to interfere. Yet , Devendra at the appropriate time, I must be the one to interfere and vindicate victory. My present advice therefore would be to face the enemy with all your dedication and firm decisiveness as of now.’ Thereafter, rudras-adityas-vasus -marud ganaas and ashvini kumaaraas, besides the anya deva ganaas srood out the portals of amaraavati benig readied for defence. As the day had passed, at the next morning there occurred the deva-rakshasa samgrama. Maricha, Prahasta, Maha paarshva, Mahodara, Akampana, Nikumbha, Shuka, Saarana, Samhlaada, Dhumaktu, Maha damshta, Ghatodara, Jambumaali, Mahaahlaada, Virurupaksha, Supaghna- Yagjnakopa, Durmukha, Dushana, Khara, Trishira, Karaveeraaksha, Suryashatru, Mahakaaya, Atikaaya, Devantaka, Naraantaka had already got readied for the attack in enormous intrepidity and unreserved self onfidence. Then eighth of the Ashta Vasu named Savitra entered the battle grounds. Thereafter the Aditi Putras Twashta and Pusha with their respective followers entered the battle. Then ensued Deva-Rakshasa yuddha. Sumali named rakshasa then got infuriated and made use of ‘naana prakara ayudhas’ and had the devaas bewildereed. As Sumali made use of several ayudhas, Savitra Deva blasted Sumali mastaka and with his further lightning like hard hits Sumali body flesh came out and exhibited itself and that group of Sumali’s following fled away frightened.

As Rakshasa Sumali was killed by Saavitra Vasu Deva and the rakshasaas were running away from the battle, Meghanaada got furious and having recalled and regrouped the rakshasa sena got readied to challenge the Deva Sena. As some of the Devas saw that Meghanada was facing them, some of his own Devaas got apprehensive and retarded their pace with hesitation and some had even receded. Indra addressed them not to be afraid and to face Meghanaada. Ravana Kumara then initiated rains of his arrows on Jayanta the Matali putra as the charioteer of Indra. Jayanta was hurt severely as being ‘angakshata vikshata’ Then Meghanaada having become furious released thousands of arrows on the deva sena. Further, he released hurlings of shataghnis-musalas- praasas, gadaas, khadgas and pharashrayas, besides parvata shikhiras. In fact the darkness so created made it difficult to identify as to who was a rakshasa or deva. It was in that situation that daitya raja Puloma entered into the battle. He was the maternal grand father of Meghanada- the father of Ravana’s wife Shachi Devi - to help his grandson Meghanaada. On learning of the late arrivals to help Meghanaada, deva samuhas were further felt as the confusion of darkness was further got confounded and retorted back. Encouraged by the new arrivals., Meghanaada went berserk and deva samuhas were flustered further, Deva sena was in shock waves. That was at that extremely critical time when Indra asked Matali the charioteer to bring his divya ratha. As Indra moved on, ‘prachanda vaayu teekshanata’ was intensified. Rudra- Vasu-Aditya- Marudgana- Ashvini Kumaras too accompanied in their respective full forces. Even as darkness prevailed, Deva Rakshasaas continued their 'paraspara yuddha'. There however appeared that only ten percent of rakshasa sena survived on the battlefield as apparently the rest disappeared as were despatched to yama loka! In fact neither of the opponents was able to recognise each other properly. Only Indra, Ravana and Ravana putra appeared unaffected despite the darkness all over. Ravana realised that hardly a part of his sena remained existing. Then he asked his charioteer to position his ratha in the midst of what ever rakshasaas were present. He asserted then that he sure should destroy Indra-Kubera-Varuna and Yama. Accordingly, the Ravana ratha sarathi followed his instruction. Then Indra addressed the deva ganaas: surāḥ śṛṇuta madvākyam yat tāvan mama rocate, jīvaṁ eva daśagrīvaḥ sādhu rakṣo nigrhyatām/ eṣa hy atibalaḥ sainye rathena pavanaujasā, gamiṣyati pravṛddhormiḥ samudra iva parvaṇi/ na hy eṣa hantuṁ śakyo 'dya varadānāt sunirbhayaḥ, tad grahīṣyāmahe rakṣo yattā bhavata

That was the plan suggested to Devatas by Indra. Thus Indra stopped his attack on Ravana but intensified his attack on the rest of the rakshasaa. As Ravana appeared to have understood Indra’s diverting tactics, Ravana from the northern side of the battle entered the deva sena and initiated an extremely harsh attack on the Deva Sena. tataḥ sa yojanaśataṁ praviṣṭo rākṣasādhipaḥ, devatānām balaṁ kṛtsnaṁ śaravarṣair avākirat/ tataḥ śakro nirīkṣyātha praviṣṭaṁ taṁ balaṁ svakam, nyavartayad asaṁbhrāntaḥ samāvṛtya daśānanam/ etasminn antare nādo mukto dānavarākṣasaiḥ, hā hatāḥ smeti taṁ drṣṭvā grastaṁ śakreṇa rāvaṇam/ Deva sena was spread over some hundred yojanas and initiated his severe attack on them. He would then be taken to the tapo vanaas and relieve your being a rock form and have your physical form purified and later on you could join me for good.’ As Brahma Deva addressed Indra thus reminding him of Indra thus said: Tenatwam grahanam shatroryaato naanyena Vaasava, sheeghram vai yaja yagñam tvam Vaishnavam susamaahitaḥ/putraś ca tava devendra na vinaṣṭo mahāraṇe, nītaḥ saṁnihitāś caiva aryakeṇa mahodadhau/ etac chrutvā mahendras tu yajñam iṣṭvā ca vaiṣṇavam, punas tridivam ākrāmad anvaśāsac ca devatāḥ/ etad indrajito rāma balaṁ yat kīrtitaṁ mayā, nirjitas tena devendraḥ prāṇino ’nye ca kiṁ punaḥ/ Vaasava! That imprisinment of you by Indrajit was therefore was due to that retributory background and hence you may perform Vaishnava yagjna dutifully for relief and get your Indratva restored afresh. Having ben directed by Brahma thus, Deva Raja Indra did the ‘Vaishtava Yagjna anushtana’ for his restoration to Indratva.

[Refreshed Vishleshana on Indra’s misconduct with Ahalya an exemplary Paivrata vide Sarga Forty Eight of Valmiki Baala Ramayana- and Ganesha Purana.

In the city of Mithila, there was an ‘ashram ‘ about which Maharshi Vishvamitra explained to Rama Lakshmanas; the ashram was of Maharshi Gautama and his wife Devi Ahalya a famed Parivrata in the days of yore. It was at this Ashram that Gautama cursed Indra as the latter masqueraded as Gautama; the Maya Gautama in the absence of real Gautama stated to Ahalya Devi: Ritukālaṁ pratikṣante nārthinaḥ susamāhite, saṁgamaṁ tv aham icchāmi tvayā saha sumadhyame/ ‘Normally, males approach their wives to bed till their menses period is over, but today, I would like you to lie with me’. But Ahalya sensed the presence of Indra in the form of Gautama but still yeilded and asked Indra to disappear at once. Maharshi Vishvamitra continued to Rama Lakshmanas: Having sensed what had just happened between Maya Gautama and Ahalya, Gautama appeared at the ashram by his mystic powers and intercepted Indra at once at the ashram with ‘samidhaas and tirtha’ viz. wooden chips and water for igniting fire and sprinkling water readied for announcing a ‘shaapa’. Deva Raja Indra got shaken up with fright at the anger of the Maharshi as the latter announced: Mama rūpaṁ samāsthāya kṛtavān asi durmate, akartavyam idaṁ yasmād viphalas tvāṁ bhaviṣyati/ gautamenaivam uktasya saroṣeṇa mahātmanā, petatur vṛṣaṇau bhūmau sahasrākṣasya tatkṣaṇāt/ Durmati! You have had the audacity of assuming my form and lured my wife to bed; therefore you would be as being ‘sahasraaksa’ with thousand eyes and as many of frightful forms as also being devoid of ‘anda kosha’ or the sheath of fertility; instantly that body part fell on earth and he appeared frightful with thousand wavering forms. Then Gautama cursed Arundhati: Iha varṣasahasrāṇi bahūni tvaṁ nivatsyasi/ vāyubhaksā nirāhārā tapyantī bhasmāsāyinī, adṛśyā sarvabhūtānām āśrame ’smin nivatsyasi/ yadā caitad vanaṁ ghoram rāmo daśarathātmajāḥ, āgamiṣyati durdharṣas tadā pūtā bhaviṣyasi/ tasyātithyena durvṛtte lobhamohavivarjitā, matsakāṣe mudā yuktā svaṁ vapur dhārayiṣyasi/ ‘Duraachaarini! May you become in this very ashram as a boulder / heavy stone with neither senses nor life with air as food and rain as drink, till such time after centuries, that Shri Rama would arrive at this ashram and with his sacerd ‘paada sparshana’ or the touch of His feet that you would be liberated to normalcy!’ Having cursed both Indra and Devi Ahalya thus, Maharshi Gautama retired to mountain tops for tapasya again.

Ganesha Purana, Chapters 30-34:

Brahmarshi Narada states: He visited Lord Indra at Amaravati as the former complimented Narada as a Triloka Sanchari; Narada replied that his latest was ‘mrityuloka’ and chanced to meet Rishi Gautama in his ashram along with his wife Devi Ahalya; he also said that Ahalya was supremely pretty and her exquisiteness and grace was ‘par excellence’ in the Three Lokas that he ever visited as the Apsaras and all the Swarga based feminine beauty and charm was truly negligible. After Narada’s social call was over, Indra visited Gautama’s ashram; the Maharshi was busy with his morning duties and left the ashram. Meanwhile Indra assumed the Rishi’s form and entered their bedroom. Devi Ahalya was stunned to see Maya Gautama in her bed room and exclaimed whether the Muni had not left for the duties but lying in the bed. Indra in the maya rupa said that he short circuited the puja and desired to go into bed with her as he was attacked by ‘kaama baana’, fondled her red and luscious and body parts and slept with her as she replied that there would be no other stree dharma as she ought to be a Pativrata and chirruped :Karyeshu Dasi, Karaneshu Manthri; Bhojeshu Mata, Shayaneshu Rambha, Roopeshu lakshmi, Kshamayeshu Dharitri, Shat dharmayukta, Kuladharma Patni/ and fell into the bed of Maayavi Gautama! Then Indra showed his own form and Arundhati was astonished and shocked as a stone. Even in the bed she felt a doubt that the body which she fondled was of different odour. As Indra disappeared, she was lost in thoughts. As the husband returned, she fell straight at his feet as the Maharshi out of his ‘divya drishti’/ celestial vision as what all had happened. He stated that : In respect of mantra-ayush-grihacchidra especially related to griha parivaara, rati karma-aoushadhi seva-maana sammaan as also avamaan and daama, a wise person should be discreet in adve rtising in public. Thus the Maharshi gave a ‘shaap’ to Devi Ahalya to turn into a stone since Ahalya was unable to distinguish the form- nature-and actions in comparison to a Para purusha and got mixed up with the his body parts and semen- albeit Indra was the Lord of Swarga. Then he gave a shaap to his dharma patni to instantly become a stone till such time Lord Shri Rama, in the course of vana vaasa would receive his ‘paada sparsha’. On learning about the Maharshi’s shaap, Indra got shivers like a sand storm got shattered by a mountain and instantly assumed the form of a cat and ran away from the scene. Realising that Indra fled away, the Maharshi cursed Indra to assume a swarupa as broken into thousand parts. As Indra who killed Vritraasura a Brahmana was carrying the ill- reputation of brahmana hatya, one of the Pancha Maha Paatakas of Stree hatya, Bhruna / Shishu hathya, Brahmana hatya, Go hatya and Guru hatya / Guru Bharya Gamana, realised that the shaap of Maharshi Gautama and rued deeply as to how could show up his face in Deva Sabha as he was expected to preach the principles of dharma while unable to observe and follow himself, let alone enforce it! Indra decided : Praanibhir bhujyate karma shubham vaashubham, tiryag yonim samaadaadya khapishyeghamaatmanah, nalinee kundmale tishtheheen idragopagaruupa -dhruk/ All the ‘jeeva rasis’ in srishti- from Indra to an insect-ought to reap the fruits of their past acts and as such I ought to assume tiryak yoni or the form of a ‘pashu pakshi keetaka’ and thus decide to become a worm as an Indragopa keetaka.’ As Indra hid himself as a Indragopa Keetaka, Deva Guru Brihaspati and Devas approached Maharshi Gautama with the sincere prostrations and requested him to withdraw the shaap or atleast mitigate it. The Maharshi initially reacted stating that a person of Indra's stature as he was a kapati-shatha-dushta-aviveki-and pashchaattaapa rahita paapi and his paschaattapa would be futile. Yet, as you are all urging sincerely then Indra even in the keetaka form be taught with the Shadakshara Ganesha Mantra as Ganesha was always a 'sarva karta-sarva harta-sarvapaata-kripaanidhi-Brahmavishnu Shivaatmika and Mahasiddhi pradaayaka'. The vidhivatra Shadakshara Ganesha Mantra pleased Indra and the Gautama shaapa to Indra got diluted and hence forward Indra would assume a divya deha become a sahasra netra instead of 'shasra shareera chheda'. Indra while assuming his normal swarupa- albeit with mitigated curse by Gautama, had foremost reached the Maharshi's feet and thanked him profusely. There after, Indra seated under a kadamba tree, practised Ganesha shadakshara mantra for thousand years and Ganesha gave his benign darshan and blessed him]

Shri Rama then asked Agastya Maha Muni having heard of how Meghanaada became Indrajit and of the background Indra's curse, raised a doubt whether the entire clan of kshatriyas was totally disabled to meet Ravana's ever victorious nature. Then explained Agastya as follows: Ravana in the course of his victories he entered Mahishmati Nagari where there was a powerful King named Arjuna. As Ravana reached there, Veera Arjuna of haihava raja's clan was in dominance.

[Vishleshana on the Haihava Vamsha from Devi Bhagavata Purana:

The origin of Haihayas was interesting. Once, Lord Surya's son, Revanta rode on the Celestial Horse 'Uucchaiswara' and called on Maha Vishnu; Laxmi recognised the co-born Horse at the time of churning the Ocean and was lost in thoughts, despite Vishnu's noting Her indifference. Vishnu became angry and cursed Her to become a mare as She was much captivated with the horse. Lakshmi Devi prayed to Maha Deva and Girija who sent the latter's emissary to Vishnu with the request that He too be born as a horse. Lakshmi Devi confirmed to Devi Girija that her husband had great reverence for Mahadeva as Vishnu was praying to Maha Deva Himself. Hence Vishnu obliged and took the form of a Horse. The Animal Forms of Vishnu and Lakshmi gave birth to a male human child who was left in the forest but was ordained to be picked up by King Yayati's son Turvasu (Hari Varma) who was meditating for a son for hundred years. But meanwhile a Vidyadhara named Champaka and his spouse Madanashala were flying around and found a child of profound sparkle and desired to own him, but Indra warned them that the child who gave birth to Hari and Laxmi was actually meant for Yayati's son Hari Verma who was performing severe Tapasya for a male child who was subsequently named as 'Eka Vira' (The One Only Warrior). As Ekavira grew into an ideal Youth with considerable learning and valour, King Turvasu and coronated Ekavira and retired to forests. Ekavira was popular as a worthy King. As he was roaming once on the banks of Ganges, he found a pretty girl crying. When cajoled, she (Yasovati) said she was the companion of the Princess Ekavali, the daughter of King Rabhya and Queen Rukmarekha. The couple performed a Sacrifice and were blessed as Ekavali emerged from the Homa Kunda (Firepit). When the Princess and Yasovati were bathing in a Pond in their territory, Demon Kalaketu appeared, killed King Rabhya's soldiers and made amorous advances to Ekavali. She entreated the Danava King from 'Patala' that her father desired her to be wedded to King Eka Vira of Haihayas and thus requested her to leave her. But the Danava King heeded little and forcibly took Ekavali away to Patala. On hearing about the incident, Eka Vira revealed his identity and wondered how to reach Patala to fight Kalaketu. Yasovati was distressed heavily and prayed to Devi Bhagavati who in her dream informed that by the dint of a 'Bija' (Seed) Mantra which she learnt earlier by Lord Dattatreya be meditated for a month with pure heart and on the banks of Ganges, she would meet King Eka Vira and help her to kill Kalaketu. As she knew the Triloka Thilaka Yogeswari Mantra, King Eka Vira was initiated in it as follows: Hrim Gauri Rudrayathe yogeswari hum phut swaha. He was thus able to reach Patala, destroyed Kalaketu, rescued Ekavali back and married her under the care of her parents who prayed to Bhagavati with extreme gratitude . It was in the union of Eka Vira and Ekavali that the famed Kartavirya was born in the Haihayas clan.]

Further Stanzas as followed: tam eva divasaṁ so 'tha haihayādhipatir balī, arjuno narmadām rantum gataḥ strībhiḥ saheśvaraḥ/ On the very day of Ravana's entry, maha balavaan Haihava Raja Arjuna along with his strees was enjoying 'jala kreedaas' in the river Narmada. Ravana enquired of Arjuna's ministers about the latters' whereabouts and asked them of the arrival of Ravanaasura and he had actually arrived to confront him in a battle. Having been told that Haihaya King was out of the rajadhani Ravana then decided to visit Vindhya giri. He witnessed cold water flows from the mountain tops where deva-danava-gandharva-kinnaraadis were rejoicing along with apsaraas too. Vindhyaachala was full of deep and wide caves. Flows of 'sphatika samana nirmala jala' makes Vindhya giri as 'chanchala jihva Shesha Naaga' Like in the case of Himalayas, Vindhya giri too is full of deep caves. Ravana was amazed at the grandeur of Vinhyas and the fabled River Narmada flowing towards the western ocean with whose waters innumerable animals like cattle, deers, lions, tigers, elephants, wild bears and so on besides variegated birds like chakravaakas, karandavas, hamsas, and so on. Narmada is replete with beautiful 'saritas' and is akin to a pretty youthful woman as her 'aabharanaas'.

[Vishleshana on Narmada's Origin, significant events ascribed to the River and her Mahatmya:

In the Reva Khand of Skanda Purana, Sage Suta enlightened a Congregation of Rishis about a query of Yudhishtar (of Pandavas) to Maharshi Markandeya about the origin of River Narmada. Several Holy Persons and Brahmanas approached King Pururava to let a Holy River descend from Heaven so that various religious activities aimed at Devas and Pitras by human beings were facilitated and the King performed relentless Tapasya to Parama Shiva who in turn asked Narmada Devi to descend. She desired to have a strong base to do so and Shiva asked Paryank, the son of Vindhya, to bear the brunt. As Narmada descended, there were floods of water and the Deities requested her to diminish her size and taught Pururava the details of the Rituals to perform tarpans to his ancestors which were followed by generations thereafter. But since Narmada was a virgin, she did not allow her divine touch to Deities and therefore agreed to marry King Purukutsu, who actually was Samudra Deva but was cursed by Brahma to become a human being as the King Purukutsu also learnt from Narmada about the rituals to liberate his ancestors. It was stated that Narmada 'Snaans' at various points of Her Course cutting the Vindhya Mountains and peaks every where on way were not only refreshing and cool but are Sacred and divinely and those who perform the baths, especially of early hours of a day, secure Punya of several Snaans of Ganga! The Sacred Snaans at that time are instant destroyers of sins committed in the current and previous lives. On the northern side of the River is situated Anantapur where Anantasiddhi Linga is popular and is stated to be the hub of Maharshis like Saavarni, Kaushik and Aghamarshan performing Vratas and Tapas. Sage Valmiki is also stated to have lived here for long till attainment of Moksha. Another important Tirth named Dipeswar or Vyasa Tirtha is known for Vrishabha daan (Charity of a bull) on Kartika Krishna Paksha Chaturdasi bestowing Swargavaas after life. At the Narmada-Varangana Sangam is popular to wash off physical ailments and nearby the Sangam is situated the Siva kshetra where rituals of 'Snaan and Daan' during Solar Eclipse award the same impact as at Kurukshetra; this is the abode of Narmada, Siva and Vishnu the latter being called Utpalaavarta having thousand heads! It is the belief that even flies and birds here reach Haridhaam, let alone human beings. Tripuri Kshetra is noted as a popular and powerful Tirtha where eight Swayambhu Lingas manifested on their own, where any act of Virtue would have manifold fruits of life. Sage Markandeya recalled an interesting happening about the Tripuri Kshetra: Swayambhu Manu-the first Manu-heard at Ayodhya while sleeping the remote sounds of bells and Vasishtha explained to Manu that those sounds were heard from Tripuri on the banks of Sacred Narmada, from the aeroplanes taking off from the roofs of virtuous human beings destined to celestial worlds like Kailasa, Vaikuntha and Indra loka. Swayambhu Manu immediately left for Tripuri and performed several rituals including Aswamedha Yagna and prayed to Devi Narmada who blessed the Manu that in his lineage one famous Bhagirath would be borne in Treta Yuga and would succeed bringing Pavitra Ganga to 'Aryavarta' from the Celestial Worlds! In the Tripuri Kshetra itself, Sage Bhrigu prayed to Trilochan Siva being desirous of the darshan of His Third Eye and as Shiva obliged with His appearance, the Sage asked for the boons of obtaining Siddhis, formation of Bhrigu Tirtha with His presence always, manifesting Eight Rudras in the Bhrigu Tirtha named Bhrigu, Shooli, Ved, Chandra, Mukha, Attahaas, Kaal and Karaali; and granting benevolence to visitors of Bhrigu Tirtha as a sin-destroyer. Similarly Bhagavan Soma (Chandra) prayed to Siva to set up Soma Tirtha as the Sangam of the three Rivers viz. Ganga, Jamuna and Narmada. Narmadapuri on the bank of Narmada was indeed worthy as Sage Jamadagni prayed to Maha Deva and secured a Kama Dhenu and King Kartaveeryarjuna being jealous of the prized possession, took away the Holy Cow by force after killing Jamadagni and the Sage's son Parasurama not only killed the most powerful King of the Time but also uprooted the concept of Kshatriyas and Kings by waging twenty one battles; he set up a Memorial named Devadroni (Kapila Dhenu) where Pinda daanas continued to be performed to Jamadagi and ancestors. Sage Markandeya narrated the renowned happening of a 'Nishad' (Hunter) to Yudhishtar about the formation of Trinetra Kund as the high devotee of Shiva Linga discovered that the Third Eye was missing on the Linga, cut his own eye as a replacement to it by resisting extreme pain and flow of blood and pasting it on the third eye position of the Shiva Linga; Maha Deva appeared before Nishad with blind faith, extreme sense of sacrifice and unnerving devotion and granted him 'Shiva Sayujyam' (Attainment of Oneness with Shiva). Sapta Sarasvat Tirtha came into being since a Gandharva, who was an excellent singer of hymns extolling Parama Shiva, got into the habit of drinking and Nandi cursed that the singer be born to a Chandala. The Singer became extremely repentant and entreated Nandi to show a means of reversing the curse; the Chandala had luckily retained the memory of his earlier birth as Gandharva and reached the banks of Narmada and sang hymns of Shiva at 'Shankarasthanil' or Shiva Vedi when a Siva Linga appeared by name Sapta Sarasvata and the Chandala regained the earlier life as Gandharva. Shandileswar Tirtha was formed after the famous Sage Shandilya (the Founder of the Shandilya Gotra) whose Tapasya to Maheswara in his hermitage on the banks of Narmada was exemplary; along with two other Lingas viz. Pancha Brahmeswar and Pushpeshwar, the Shandileswar was well known as among the 'Tirtha Traya' where worship of the Lingas and Pitru Tarpan / Pinda Pradaanas were performed. Markandeya narrated to Yudhishtar the story of Chakravarthi Mandhata, who performed Yagnas near Amarakashtak Mountain and prayed to Omkareswar. He was a gift of a powerful Yagna by his father, King Yavanashva, who drank by mistake the 'Mantra Jala' meant for his wife. Yuvanashva got pregnant instead and delivered a boy by the opening of his belly. Devas and Indra visited the child and wondered as to who might feed milk to the boy; Indra said: 'Esha Maa Dhata' and fed Amrit-like milk by inserting his middle finger in the baby's mouth and hence the child's name became Mandhata. As the boy grew he became a model King of virtue, valour and justice. Omkareswar appeared in response to Mandhata's prayers and gave the boon of naming the Mountain of Vaidurya as Mandhata. Jaleswar or Bana Linga was the manifestation of Shiva; Banasura, the son of Bali Chakravarti, meditated to Maha Deva for thousand divine years and obtained the boons of impregnability of his City by any body excepting Mahadeva Himself and also flying mobility along with him and to those whom he chose any where. As Shiva gave the boons, Vishnu and Brahma too bestowed the same kind of boons and Banasura thus emerged the Great Mighty King of 'Three Puras' or as the dreaded 'Tripurasura', who came to attack Deva Lokas and Bhuloka. Sages, Devas, Brahma and Vishnu were all alarmed and approached Shiva, who decided to fight the Demon by Himself and smashed him with His Aghora astra which could absorb its heat and force by Narmada only after its attack. Banasura was badly hurt and realising his foolishness prayed to Maha Deva once again. The most lenient and gracious Bhagavan granted that Banasura would not have another birth and that a Shiva Linga would be manifested as Bana Linga or Jala Linga. Another instance narrated by Markandeya to Yudhishtar related to the memorable King Indradyumna who performed Maha Yagna on the banks of Narmada, had darshan of Omkareswara Linga and visioned a radiant spectacle of an Inner Linga of Maha Deva in the central portion of the Principal Omkareswar Linga; he also had a special visualization of Bhagavan Vishnu in His full resplendent and ornamented form with four hands with Shankha, Chakra, Gada and Lotus at the top portion of Omkareswara Linga and prayed to Him; the King also invoked various Holy Rivers especially Ganga to join the Mahanadi Narmada at the bottom of the Linga; and to Narmada to manifest Seven Branches from the north to south to facilitate Daanas, Homams, Vratas, Tarpan and Pinda Pradaans to Pitras and other rituals. The King's prayers were all granted adding to the magnificence of the entire Region in which the Sacred River Narmada flowed].

puṣpakād avaruhyāṣu narmadām saritām varām, iṣṭām iva varām nārīm avagāhya daśānanaḥ/ sa tasyāḥ puline ramye nānākusumaśobhite, upopaviṣṭaḥ sacivaiḥ sārddham rākṣasapuṅgavaḥ, narmadā darśajam harṣam āptavān rākṣaseśvaraḥ/ tataḥ salīlam prahasān rāvaṇo rākṣasādhipaḥ, uvāca sacivāms tatra mārīcaśukasāraṇān/

Recalling the simile of Narmada is like a charming young woman with her ‘abharanaas’ as the ‘vriksha sampada’ on the banks, then the pushpaparaaga turns into angaanga essence like the foam of the ‘maha vega jalas’. Then Ravana felt ther Narmada was indeed loke Sakshat Ganga and entered the waters of Narmada. Then Ravana’s mantris of Shuka-Saarana- and others exclaimed that the Surya Deva having assumed his full fury of thousands rays was right at the mid day blast of unbearable heat. But at the same time the water flows are cool as if Chandra creates coolness, adding further with the fragrance of the flowers from the enormous vriksha sampada on the river beds. Then Ravana suggested to his mantris too had been for long bodily hurt and might thus cool down and refresh themselves. Later on he himself bathed, changed his clothes and performed Shiva Linga pugas woth fragrant flowers at various banks of the sacred river having created shiva linags of varied materials on the banks with yet varied sizes and performed wholesome pujas as his mantries too did likewise with gaana-natya yukta Linga Pujas with bhakti.

As Ravana along with his mantris were busy in Shiva Linga sthaapapana and pujas on the banks of the Sacred Narmada with his twenty hands , Kartaveeryaarjuna with his thousand hands who was swimming on the river with his several youthful females and enjoying. This kind of 'raasa kreeda' was so powerful that the 'pravaah vega' of Narmada was affected and got slowed down as noticed by Ravana and the Mantris. sa vegah kārtavīryeṇa sampreṣiṭa ivāmbhasaḥ, puṣpopahāram tat sarvam rāvaṇasya jahāra ha/ rāvaṇo 'rdha -samāptam tu utsṛjya niyamam tadā, narmadām paśyate kāntām pratikūlām yathā priyam/ paścimena tu tam dṛṣṭvā sāgarodgārasamṇibham, vardhantam ambhaso vegam pūrvām āsām praviśya tu/

As Ravana's abhishekha pujas of the installed Shiva Lingas were thus disabled he felt unhappy and wondered as to what could have suddenly happened and asked Shuka Saranas to ascertain flying up and find out the reason. They reported that a 'sahasra bhuja sahasra paani maha veera' of gigantic swarupa was performing with countess 'sundara yuvatis'. Ravana too reached and saw the scene and shouted at the mantris to immediately reach Kartaveerya and alert him to face Ravana in an encounter. Then the mantris advised Ravana that it might not be proper and opportune to suddenly ask Kartaveerya for a battle at once but perhaps wait for the next day. But the restless Ravana whose slogan had always been to assert 'my way and there could not be any other way' had beaten the mantris to disobey his instructions and in that furor and disturbance, Arjuna's yoddhas hurled off baana-bhalla-trishula-vajrakarshanaadi aayudhaas and hit hard the rakshasa sena and Ravana too. As Haihavaraja yoddhads had thus provoked Rakshasa mantris namely Prahasta, Suka Saranas retaliated severely. In that confusion, Kartaveerya assured his warriors not to get alarmed as he could comfortably take care of any kind of crises. Then he like a huge elephant having performed 'raasa kreedha' with his mates too to witness the fun emerged to face the fun. Then he was enraged with 'raktavarna maha rosha' and was like a pralaya kaala bhayankara swarupa lifted his mighty mace and attacked the rakshasa sena fearlessly especially on Prahasta. Madonmattha Prahasta then attacked Arjuna with a 'bhayankara musalaayudha'. Then gadaadhari Kaartaveerya had speedily revolved his mace and hurled it with all his 'sahasra hastas'. With that 'gadaaghaata' with extraordinary speed and force, Prahasta fell down as of 'vajraayudha prahara' of Indra. The frightened Maareecha, Shuka, Sarana, Mahodara, Dhumraaksha took to heels as soon as Maha Parakrami Prahasta fell down dazed. tatas tair eva rakṣāṃsi durdharaiḥ pravarāyudhaiḥ, bhittvā vidrāvayām āsa vāyur ambudharān iva/ rākṣasāṃs trāsayitvā tu kārtavīryārjunas tadā, rāvaṇam grhya nagaram praviveśa suhṛdvṛtaḥ/ sa kīryamāṇaḥ kusumākṣatokatkarair; dvijaiḥ sapauraiḥ puruhūtasam - nibhaḥ, tadārjunah sampraviveśa tām purīm; balim nigrhyaiva sahasralocanaḥ/ Soon thereafter, Ravana attacked Arjuna and thus was initiated 'Ravanaaarjuna maha samgrama'. The sahasra baahu Kartaveeryarjuna was attacked by Ravana like the 'Kaala deva samana gadaaprahara' and the 'dasha dishas' got resounded. In the further process of mutual clash, neither Ravana nor Arjuna got fatigued. Both were like fierce huge sized 'vrishabhas' hurling 'gadaa prahaaraas' at each other followed by the 'Shaktyaadudha's tosses. But Ravana was safe at that moment so far yet suddenly the tables were reversed. Varadanakritatraane saa gadaa ravanorasi, durbaleva yathaavegam dwidhaabhutaapatat kshitou/ sa tvaarjunaprayultena gadaa ghaarena Ravanah, apaasarpad dhanurmaatram nishasaada cha nishthaganan/ Ravana's 'vara daanaas' had so far kept him safe and sound, but his vakshashtaalaas were pierced through severely and he fell down to earth. Thus Arjuna's gadaa praharaas made Ravana's dhanush baanaas's were pushed back and Ravana's 'artanadas' were resounded in a manner that Garuda Deva pounced on a hissing 'vishapoorita mahasarpa'. Sa vihvalam tadaalakshya dashagreevam tatorjunah, sahsotpapartya jagraah garutmaaniva pannagam/ Satu baahushasrena balaad gruhya dashaananam, badandha balavaan rajaa Balim Naraayano yathaa/ Just like at the remote past, Bhagavan Narayana caught hold of Bali Chakravarti, Kartaveeryaarjuna tied Dashaanana tight with fierce rope, and Siddha-Charana-Devas had heartily congratulated and showered 'sugandha pushpas' on Arjuna. Then Prahasta who got recovered there since, ran after Kaarthaveerya and shouted with ferocity leave the Rakshasa King for now, and hit him musala- shula prahaaraas. But Arjuna having successfully withstood the 'aayudha prahaaraas' faced Prahasta and held him too under his severe hold. tatas tair eva rakṣāṃsi durdharaiḥ pravarāyudhaiḥ, bhittvā vidrāvayām āsa vāyur ambudharān iva/ rākṣasāṃs trāsayitvā tu kārtavīryārjunas tadā, rāvaṇam grhya nagaram praviveśa suhṛdvṛtaḥ/ sa kīryamāṇaḥ kusumākṣatot - karair; dvijaiḥ sapauraiḥ puruhūtasam - nibhaḥ, tadārjunah sampraviveśa tām purīm; balim nigrhyaiva sahasralocanaḥ/ Further, Kartaveerya frightened away the rest of the rakshasaas and along with Ravana and his mantries were all imprisoned and taken back to Mahishmati pura of Kartaveerya. Even as Ravana and the rakshasaas having been humiliated and imprisoned back, the Puravaasis were overjoyed as the viprottamas welcomed Kartaveerya with 'swasti vachanas' and 'akshata pushpa varshasas'.

SargaThirty Three

As Ravana and followers were disgraced under leash, Pulastya Brahma requested Karataveerya to free him yet Ravana still desired to pursue his further escapades with arrogance and ‘ahamkaara’.

I am proud of your ‘dhairya saahasaas’ as you were able to subdue and humiliate Dashagriva Ravanaasura. My ‘rana durjaya putra’ Ravana at whose behest samudras and maha vaayus being rid of their ‘teevrata and chanchalata’ were ever proud but kept them both on leash. But you have succeeded in controlling him I am indeed proud of your ‘yuddha kushalata and ajeaya siddhi ‘ had been negated and disproved of Ravana’s ‘samardhyata’. My earnest appeal to you now would be to please let Ravana and his followers under you custody be freed and this is not merely my appeal but my unqualified request to you. As Pulastya Brahma was directed all by himself, Arjuna could not ever negate the instruction and left the disgraced and humbled Ravana and his followers were let freed. Pitamaha Brahma having got Ravana and party then returned to Brahma Loka again'. Then Maha Muni Agastya then further addressed Shri Rama that despite such humiliation, Ravana having ignored such humiliation resumed his vijaya yatra once again.

Sarga Thirty Four

Despite his humiliation by Kaartaveerya, Ravana reached Vaali busy with Sandhya Vandanas at four oceans yet was inistent as was caught by Vaali who dragged Ravana by shoulders and shamed yet again!

Even after having been shamefully released from the clutches of Kartaveeryarjuna, Ravana resumed his escapades ever challenging the veeraas on earth. Then he landed by his pushpaka vimana in kishkindha intending to challenge King Vaali. He then faced Tara, Sushena and Angada and asserted that only Vaali should deserve to encounter him with and none else. Then the reply was: caturbhyo 'pi samudrebhyaḥ saṁdhyāṁ anvāsya rāvaṇa, imaṁ muhūrtam āyāti vālī tiṣṭha muhūrtakam/ King Vaali had left for performing his Sandhya Vandanaas in the four oceans all around and as such might have to wait for some time of a couple of ghadis. As advised, Ravana had instantly reached there and saw King Vaali and being anxious to catch him ran with speeded up footsteps. yadṛcchayonmīlayatā vālināpi sa rāvaṇaḥ, pāpābhiprāyavān dṛṣṭaś cakāra na ca sambhramam/ śaśam ālakṣya simho vā pannagam garuḍo yathā, na cintayati taṁ vālī rāvaṇam pāpaniścayam/ jighṛkṣamāṇam adyainam rāvaṇam pāpabuddhi - nam, kakṣāvalambinam kṛtvā gamiṣyāmi mahārṇavān/ drakṣyanty arim mamāṅkastham sraṁsitoru - karāmbaram, lambamāṇam daśagrīvaṁ garuḍasyeva pannagam/ By his daiva yoga, Vaali too saw Ravana running towards him with apparent 'paapapurma abhipraaya' but was the least afraid. Just as a rabbit with its vengeance would speed up running to a mṛiga raja simha, King Vaali was least perturbed. He decided to forcefully seize him by Ravana's all his hands under his armpits and drag him by his feet taking him to the rest of the maha saagaraas till such time that he would continue his 'sandhyopaa - sanaas'. Then Ravana's mid body, hands and feet and flutterings of his vastras would be my reminders that he was continuing to be dragged by his powerful tail like Garuda deva would suppress vicious sarpaas under his mihty feet. ity evam matim āsthāya vālī karṇam upāśritaḥ, jagan vai naigamān mantrāms tasthau parvatarād iva/ tāv anyonyam jighṛkṣantau harirākṣasapārthivau, prayatnavantau tat karma īhatur baladarpitau/ hastagrāhyam tu taṁ matvā pādaśabdena rāvaṇam, parāṇmukho 'pi jagrāha vālī sarpaṁ ivāṇḍajah/ Thus having decided, Maha Bali Vaali assumed his mouna vrata ad recited veda mantras like Giri Raja Maha Meru would stand looking up the sky. Vaali's 'marga teevrata' was such that even mountain shikharaas were well crossed over, and indeed could 'rakta maamsa shareera rakshasaas' ever be able to overcome that alacrity and speed! apakṣigaṇasampāto vānarendro mahājavah, kramaśaḥ sāgarān sarvān saṁdhyākālam avandata/ sabhājyamāno bhūtais tu khecaraiḥ khecaro hariḥ, paścimaṁ sāgaram vālī ājagāma sarāvaṇaḥ/ tatra saṁdhyāṁ upāsitvā snātvā japtvā ca vānaraḥ, uttaram sāgaram prāyād vhamāno

Thereafter having feigned Meghanaada's naaga paasha got out of it voluntarily, conversed with King Ravana with dharya sahasaas, and burn off the best part of Lankapuri to heaps of ashes. In the context of Yuddha parakrama, Hanuman was veerataa purna karma kriyas negating even Kaala Deva, Indra, Bhagavan Vishnu, Varunaas. Muneeswara! It indeed was that owing to Hanuman's crucial advice that I was enabled to make friendship with Vibhishana, besides of course my own 'kaya dakshata and baahubala' attained me the shatru vijaya, Lanka Rajya, Ayodhya Rajya and Sita, bandhujana prapatti along with Lakshmana. hanūmān yadi me na syād vānarādhipateḥ sakhā, pravṛttam api ko vettuṁ jānakyāḥ śaktimān bhavet/ kimarthaṁ vālī caitena sugrīvapriyakāmyayā, tadā vaire samutpanne na dagdho vīrudho yathā/ na hi veditavān manye hanūmān ātmano balam, yad dṛṣṭavān jīviteṣṭam klīṣyantam vānarādhipam/ etan me bhagavan sarvaṁ hanūmati mahāmune, vistareṇa yathātattvaṁ kathayāmarapūjita/ If I were not have met Hanuman, could I have attained Sugriva maitri and 'Sitaanveshana' ever! I guess that Hanuman was aware of his own latent energy. That was why his dear Sugriva was not saved far earlier! Deva vandya Maha Muni! Do kindly inform me more detailed information about Veera Hanuman. In the hoary past, a Maha Muni's 'shaapa mahima' was responsible to him to become aware his own magnificence. In his very childhood too he had performed such memorable acts which were unbelievable. Bhagavan Surya Deva's varadaana mahima, Hanuman's physique assumed ever golden colour, while his father Kesari was the King of Kesari Rajya near Sumeru Parvata. Kesari's wife was the well famed Devi Anjana. From her garbha was born the Anjana Putra Anjaneya. As Anjanaya was born in peak winter time he was of the pingala varna like of rice grain's agra bhaaga. One day mother Anjana moved out of their ‘ashrama’, she desired to secure an ‘anjana phala’ by ‘vihanga maarga’. That precisely was the time that baala putra of Anjana felt hungry and thirsty and was crying away ceaselessly like Kartitaya in the sarakanda vana. eṣa mātur viyogāc ca kṣudhayā ca bhṛṣārditaḥ, ruroda śiśur atyarthaṁ śiśuḥ śarabharād iva/ tatodyantaṁ vivasvantaṁ japāpuṣpotkaropamam, dadṛṣe phalalobhāc ca utpapāta raviṁ prati/ bālārkaḥhimukho bālo bālārka iva mūrtimān, grahitukāmo bālārkaṁ plavate ’mbara - madhyagaḥ/ As Anjana was away, Shishu Anjaneya then mistook Surya Deva as a luscious bright fruit and jumped off from his bed and tried all our efforts to jump up from the bed and got air floated up and up the sky. etasmīn plavamāne tu śiśubhāve hanūmati, devadānavasiddhānām vismayaḥ sumahān abhūt/ nāpy evaṁ vegavān vāyur garuḍo na manas tathā, yathāyaṁ vāyuputras tu kramate ’mbaram uttamam/ yadi tāvac chiśor asya idṛṣau gativikramau, yauvanaṁ balam āsādyā kathaṁ vego bhaviṣyati/ As the saishava Anjanaputra was flying up and up, Deva Danava Yakshas were surprised thinking that this Vayuputra was seeking to reach the high skies, was he imitating Vayu Deva or Garuda Deva! In this manner, baalaanjaneya tried to make the best of his father’s speed and strength and had almost reached Surya Deva. Surya Deva realised that Vayuputra was indeed a child and having considered as a deva karya had therefore diminished his severity of heat to the minimum and did not burn off the shishu. yam eva divasaṁ hy eṣa grahitūṁ bhāskaraṁ plutāḥ, tam eva divasaṁ rāhur jighṛkṣati divākaram/ anena ca parāmṛṣṭo rāma sūryarathopari, apakrāntas tatas trasto rāhuḥ candrārkamardanaḥ/ sa indrabhavanaṁ gatvā saroṣaḥ simhikāsutaḥ, abravīd bhrukūṭīm kṛtvā devaṁ devagaṇair vṛtam/ bubhuḥṣāpanayaṁ dattvā candrārkau mama vāsava, kim idam tat tvayā dattam anyasya balavṛtrahan/ That was the time that Rahu Deva was attempting to devour Surya. Anjaneya having noticed that Rahu Deva was trying to catch up the Surya Ratha, then Rahu the all potent devourer of Chandra and Surya had withdrawn from his abortive endeavour to devour Surya having been afraid of a third party intervention. Then Simhika Putra Rahu out of anger entered the Indra Bhavana and reprimanded Indra as to why he had allowed a third party to devour Surya instead against the established principle of the Universe! Rahu shouted at Indra: ‘Vritraasura vadha kaarana Vaasava! Why had you allowed this kind of intervention had been arrogated all by yourself! adyāhaṁ parvakāle tu jighṛkṣuḥ sūryam āgataḥ, athānyo rāhur āsādyā jagrāha sahasā raviṁ/ sa rāhor vacanaṁ śrutvā vāsavaḥ sambhramānvitaḥ, utpapātāsanam hitvā udvahan kāñcanasrajam/ tataḥ kailāsakūṭābhaṁ caturdantaṁ madasravam, śṛṅgarākārīṇaṁ prāṁśuṁ svarṇaghaṇṭāṭṭahāsinam/ indraḥ karīndram āruhya rāhuṁ kṛtvā puraḥsaram, prāyād yatrābhavat sūryaḥ sahānena hanūmatā/ To day being the Amavasya day, I felt that I should get readied to devour Surya, but you seem to have most suddenly altered the principle, but why and how! Then Indra too was concerned and even was afraid of the intervention in the conduct of natural justice having been tampered with and ascended his Iravata vahana wit Rahu Deva ahead of him and discovered ‘baalaanjaneya’ in the action. tataḥ sūryaṁ samutsṛjya rāhuṁ evam avekṣya ca, utpapāta punar vyoma grahitūṁ simhikāsutam/ utsṛjyārkam imaṁ rāma ādhāvantaṁ plavamgamam, dṛṣṭvā rāhuḥ parāvṛtya mukhaśeṣaḥ parāṇmukhaḥ/ indram āśaṁsamānas tu trātāraṁ simhikāsutaḥ, indra indreti samtrāsān muhur muhur abhāṣata/ Then Baalaanjaneya had mistaken Rahu as Surya and sought to attack Rahu instead of Surya and made a long jump forward at Rahu. Then Rahu got bewildered as strange situations were occurring that amavasya day! Don’t you get alarmed, I shall soon subdue the one attacking you. Meanwhile, baalaanjaneya saw the Iravata on whose top Indra was seated and felt that the elephant too was interesting to be devoured in and started running after Iravata on which

Indra was seated upon. Now Shachipati Indra got furious as the child was getting berserk and hurled his Vajrayudha on the Vayuputra. tato girau papātaiṣa indravajrābhitāḍitaḥ, patamānasya caitasya vāmo hanur abhājyata/ tasmims tu patite bāle vajratāḍanavihvale, cukrodhendrāya pavanaḥ prajānām aśivāya ca/ viṇmūtrāśayam āvṛtya prajāsv antargataḥ prabhuh, rurodha sarvabhūtāni yathā varṣāni vāsavaḥ/ vāyuprakopād bhūtāni nirucchvāsāni sarvataḥ, saṁdhibhir bhajyamānāni kāṣṭhabhūtāni jajñire/ As the vajrayudha was tossed at the Baala Vaanara, he fell down steeply on a parvata shikhara. Then the left HANU or the Jaw was broken and there after Anjaneya came to be called as HANUMAN! This resulted in the fury of Vayu Deva on Mahendra and having taken Anjaaa Putra into that very mountain cave had withdrawn him self thus impacting the ‘ucchvaasa-nishvaasaas’ or the normal breathing process of the common prajas. niḥsvadham nirvaṣaṭkārām niṣkriyam dharmavarjitam, vāyuprakopāt trailokyam nirayastham ivābabhau/ tataḥ prajāḥ sagandharvāḥ sadevāsuraṁ mānuṣāḥ, prajāpatiṁ samādhāvan asukhārtāḥ sukhaiṣiṇaḥ/ ūcuḥ prāñjalayo devā darodaranibhodarāḥ, tvayā sma bhagavan sṛṣṭāḥ prajānātha caturvidhāḥ/ As the normal breathing was affected the Beings in srishti and triloka pranis were of ‘chetanaa shunyata’ or of any limb movement as of dead bodies being senseless and lifeless. In trilokas, there was neither ‘veda swadhyaya’ nor ‘yagjnaacharana’. Dharma Karmas were ceased and tribhubana pranis experienced ‘naraka yaatana’. Then, gandharva, devata, asura-manushyas made frantick appealed to the Srishtikarta Brahma Deva. Meanwhile devataas got their bowels bloated with mahodara roga. They addressed Brahma: ‘Bhagavan! Then Brahma replied: yasmin vaḥ kāraṇe vāyuś cukrodha ca rurodha ca, prajāḥ śṛṇudhvaṁ tat sarvaṁ śrotavyaṁ cātmanaḥ kṣamam/ putras tasyāmareṣena indreṇādyā nipātitaḥ, rāhor vacanam ājñāya rājñā vaḥ kopito ’nilaḥ/ aśarīraḥ śarīreṣu vāyuś carati pālayan, śarīram hi vinā vāyur samatām yāti reṇubhiḥ/ vāyuh prāṇāḥ sukham vāyur vāyuh sarvaṁ idaṁ jagat, vāyunā saṁparityaktaṁ na sukham vindate jagat/ Praja loka! Vayu Deva was annoyed due to a cause and effect cyclical impact. Indra got Rahu Graha’s complaint and hit Vayuputra and Vayu Deva got annoyed and stopped performing his normal duty of keeping your lives ticking. Thus indeed without Vayu the bodies of all the Beings are left high and dried. Hence in the case of non coperation of Vayu entire jagat is stand still. tataḥ prajābhiḥ sahitaḥ prajāpatiḥ; sadevagandharva -bhujamgaguhyakah, jagāma tatrāsyati yatra mārutaḥ; sutam surendrābhihataṁ pragrhya saḥ/ tato ’rkavaiśvānarakāñcanaprabham; sutam tadotsaṅgagatam sadāgateḥ, caturmukho vīkṣya kṛpām athākarot; sadevasiddharṣibhujamgarākṣasaḥ/ Then Prajapati himself led a procession of Deva, Gandharva, Naaga, Guhyakaas and praja too reached Vayu Deva who was mourning his son’s loss of life and reached the Chaturmukha Brahma Deva who took pity on the child’s status of virtual non existence.

As this miracle happened, the 'praana swarupa Vayu Deva' was pleased and removed the obstacle of breathing of sarva pranis. There after Brahma Deva- (who is 'triyugma sampanna' or three couples of six kinds of Aishvarya viz. Opulence, Dharmaacharana, Keerti, Prosperity, Jnaana and Vairagya- Tri Murtidhara viz. of Brahma, Vishnu, Shiva Tri Dasha or three stages of life viz. Baalya, Pouganda, and Kaishora viz. three devataas of three avasthas or stages of life) addressed Indra, Agni, Varuna, Maha Deva , Kuberaadi devataas as follows: this balaka Anjaneya would bring in several karya iddhis to you all and to please Vayu deva, you may all gove your own boons. Then Indra garlanded the boy and said: matkarotsrṣṭavajreṇa hanur asya yathā kṣataḥ, nāmnaiṣa kapiśārdūlo bhavitā hanumān iti/ aham evāsyā dāsyāmi paramaṁ varam uttamam, ataḥ prabhṛti vajrasya mamāvadhyo bhaviṣyati/ Since the vajrayudha as released from my hands had affected his ‘hanu’ or jaw the boy would henceforth be famed as Hanuman. Further he should henceforth be immune from Vajraayudha. Then Surya Deva gave the boon to Hanuman that he would always be immune from the severity of heat and Surya’s fury. Surya further gave the boon that Hanuman would gain the sarva shastra jnaana and be an orator of outstanding caliber. Then Varuna Deva gave the boon to Hanuman that he would be a deerghaayu for ten lakh years and would be immunised from ‘jala paataas’ for ever. Yama Dharma Raja blessed him to be ever freed from his yama danda prahaaraas. Then ‘pingala varna ekaakshi’ Kubera Deva gave the boon that in any kind of clash in yuddhaas, he would never be discontented and none ever could face an enemy who would be left alive. Bhagavan Shankara gave the boon that no trishula be ever hurt him nor be destroyed. Deva shilpi Vishvakarma the the Baala Hanuman would be invincible from any of his ‘astra shastra nirmitaas.’ Then finally Brahma Deva blessed Veeraanjaneya: amitrāṇāṁ bhayakaro mitrāṇāṁ abhayamkaraḥ, ajeyo bhavitā te ’tra putro mārutamārutih/ Kaamarupah kaamachaaree kaamagah plavataam varah, bhavatyaaahagatih keertimaamshca bhavishyati/ rāvaṇotsādanārthāni rāmaprītikarāṇi ca, romaharṣakarāṇy eṣa kartā karmāṇi saṁyuge/ Maruta ! this famed son of yours Maaruti would be as much a ‘ simha swapna’ to his enemies as equally so helpful to his ‘mitras’ and none indeed would ever contol him ever. Thereafter, Baalaajaneya with no bounds of his own willfulness took to ‘swicchha vihaaraas’ and dauntlessly went around ‘muni maharshi ashramas’ with carefree irresponsibilities creating disorder and ‘tapo-agni karya bhanga kaaryaas’ nonchalantly. Shantachitta Muni Mahatmas witnessed their ‘yagjopaveeta paatra saamagris, agnihotra saadhanabhuta shruk-shruva, valkala vastraas torn off and uptet the muni ashramaas. tato maharṣayaḥ kruddhā bhṛgvaṅgirasa -vaṁśajāḥ, śepur enaṁ raghuśreṣṭha nātikruddhātmanyavaḥ/ bādhasa yat samāśritya balam asmān plavaṅgama, tad dīrghakālāṁ vettāsi nāsmākaṁ śāpamohitaḥ/ tatas tu hṛtatejaujā maharṣivacanaujasā, eṣo śramāṇi nātyeti mṛdubhāvagataś caran/ Then the Bhṛigu- Angeera vamsheeyaadi vamsheeya Maharshis were dazed and severly annoyed at the ‘atyaacharaas of Baalaanjaneya’. Then they shouted at Bala Hanuman: ‘ Vaanara veera! The very reason of your awareness and the memory of the innumerable blessings and boons as were showered on you by Brahma and Devaas would be forgotten and wiped out from your memory screen although could be revived only after some any other party might remind you again and again. Thereafter Anjaneya had forgotten of his own inherent abilities unless reminded and had since been sobered down thereafter. Further he drifted off and visited places while wandering and reached Riksha Rajya. The Riksha Raja had reigned for long and was blessed with two vaanara putras named Vaali-Sugrivas. Vaali was made the Vanara Raja and Sugriva the yuva raja and both the brothers were closely attached together. Eventually when Vaali Sugrivas were seperated, even then neither of them was aware - much less Hanuman himself was aware of his inner abilities. But indeed, who else could be like him with his latent qualities of paraakrama, utsaaha, buddhi, pratapa, susheelata, madhurata, neeti-aneeti viveka, gambheerata, chaturata, uttama bala, and dhairya. Hanuman is a ‘vyakaranaadhyayaayi as also of ‘sutra-vritti-maha bhagya-sangraha mahaadhyayaayi, being ‘shastra jnaana and chhandaadhyana maha vidvaan’ comparable to Deva Guru Brishaspati.’ Then Maha Muni Agastya described about other Vaanara Veeraas like Sugriva, Mainda, Dwivida, Neela, Taara, Angada, Nala, Rambhaadi maha kapeeshvaraas too who were all of devaamsha sambhutaas. And so were Gaja, Gavaaksha, Gavaya, Mainda, Sandrushthra, Prabha, Jyotimukha, Nalaadi Vaanaraas and of course Jambavan like reechha pramukhas. As Agastya explained in some detail , Shri Rama was truly enlightened of the detailed background of Hanuman ! .

As Shri Rama was woken up from night long charcha with Agastya by 'Vandee jana' with praises. Then he enters Raja Sabha with Bharata Lakshmana Shatrughna Vibhishana, Sugriva , Hanumans too.

Following his memorable Rajyabhisheka and Maha Muni Agastya samvada on the previous night, Shri Rama was woken up by the Vandeejana in Kinnara swaraas sang his glories: 'Kakutsaanada kara sowmya swarupa Raghu veera, saakshaat Vishnu samaana, Brihaspati tulya praja paalana Prajapati tulya-bhaskara samaana - samudra - vayu deva gambheera yukta Maha Raja, bahu paraakhas! Your yuddha karya kushalata is undefeatable being of the nature of 'na bhuto na bhavishyati!' After snaana- agni ahutis along with his brothers and raja purohita Vishishthaadi Muni Panditas, Shri Rama entered to Raja Sabha. There were seated Vanara Raja Sugriva along with Angada, Hanuman, Jambavan, Sushena, Tara, Neela, Nala, Mainda, Dvidida, Kumuda, Sharabha, Shatabali, Gandhamaadana, Gaja, Gavaksha, Gavaya, Dhumra, Rambha and Jyotimukha. As Shri Rama was comfortably seated in his Raja Sabha, Kings Janaka-Kaikeya Raja-Kashi Rajas arrived to congratulate him and left, while 350 kings of far and near rajyas arrived too in admiration of Rama.

Thereafter, Mithila Raja Janaka arrived and blessed his famed son- in- law and conveyed his heart felt congratulations to have killed Ravana the 'loka kanata ka' and departed. That indeed why you have kindly arrived here away from your kingship obligations. It was only owing to your blessings and best wishes that I was able to destroy the evil deeds of Ravanaasura the ‘loka maha kantaka’. Be it well known that I was only the figure head for this enormous success. It was all due to your encouragement and blessings that this could be accomplished. In fact entirety of Ravana putras, mantris, bandhu bandhavaas, and sevaka ganaas were all demolished and uprooted in the mahaa yuddha. As Janaka Raja nadini Devi Sita was forcefully kidnapped by dushtaatma Ravanaasura, Bharata might have intimated to you all. bhavantaś ca samānītā bharatena mahātmanā, śrutvā janakarājasya kānane tanayām hṛtām/ udyuktānām ca sarveṣām pāṛthivānām mahātmanām, kālō hy atītaḥ sumahān gamane rocatām matiḥ/ pratyūcus taṁ ca rājāno harṣeṇa mahatānvitāḥ, diṣṭyā tvaṁ vijayī rāma rājyam cāpi pratiṣṭhitam/ diṣṭyā pratyāhṛtā sītā diṣṭyā śatruḥ parājitaḥ, eṣa naḥ paramaḥ kāma eṣa naḥ kīrtir uttamā/ Since then and now there was a very long gap of time and it appears that your kind courtesy of calling on me now is perhaps well justified.’ As Shri Rama explained like wise, the various Kings clapped with ‘harsha ninaadaas’ and stated ‘Rama! In fact this ‘prashamshaneeya maha vijaya’ is far beyond our combined capabilities worthy of accolades’. Having earnestly admired Shri Rama thus, the groups of co admiring Kings desired to depart back with admiration and approbation.

Angada is my suputra and Hanuman my mantri; these two had been my truthful advisers and thus deserve very special gifts.’ So saying Rama removed his own abharanaas and made them wear on their respective bodies. Later on Raghunadha looked with his benign glances at Neela, Nala, Kesari, Kumuda, Gandhamaadana, Sushena, Panasa, Mainda, Dvidida, Jambavan, Gavaksha, Vinata, Dhunra, Baleemukha, Prajangha, Samnaada, Daromukha, Dadhimukha, and so on and handed over precious gifts. Apart from these, all the other Vaanara veeraas too all deserve your excellent treatment.’ Then Shri Rama gave the parting advice to King Vibhishana too: ‘Rakshasa Raja! Do please conduct your kingship duties of ‘Lankaa shaasana’ as per ‘dharma and nyaaya’ always as indeed I rate you as an ‘ideal dharmagjna’ anyway. Your ‘Lanka nagara vaasis’, rahshasa praja, and your brother Kubera too deem you as a dharmagjna. Vibhishana Raja! never ever entertain any sort of ‘adharma maanasika dourbalyata’. To whosoever of a King does strictly tread the ‘dharma nyaaya maarga’ should be a King for very long. Raja Vibhishana! You and Sugriva should always recall our mutual bonds of memories and attitudes. Both of you should continue your blissful memories and affinities for ever.’ rāmasya bhāṣitam śrutvā ṛṣkavānararākṣasāḥ, sādhu sādhu iti kākutsthaṁ praśaśamsuḥ punaḥ punaḥ/ buddhir mahābāho vīryam adbhutam eva ca, mādhyam paramam rāma svayambhor iva nityadā/ As Shri Rama expressed his heart felt feelings, the ‘bhalluka vaanara rakshasa ganaas’ were thrilled and profusely complemented Rama. They all expressed that Rama was like Brahma himself to have poured his heart out and greeted him instinctively slogging : ‘dhanya dhaanya’; they further asserted: ‘Maha Baahu Shri Rama! Your way of utterances and statements are truly like of Swayambhu Brahma Himself. Your mindset, flow of thoughts and expressions are replete with ‘parama madhurata’ and of convincing ‘vaak chaturata’. teṣāṁ evam bruvāṇānām vānarāṇām ca rakṣasām, hanūmatpraṇato bhūtvā rāghavaṁ vākyam abravīt/ sneho me paramo rājāṁ tvayi nityam pratiṣṭhitāḥ, bhaktiś ca niyatā vīra bhāvo nānyatra gacchati/ yāvad rāmakathāṁ vīra śroṣye 'ham prṥthivītale, tāvac charīre vatsyantu mama prāṇā na saṁśayaḥ/ evam bruvāṇam rājendro hanūmantam athāsanāt, utthāya ca pariṣvajya vākyam etad uvāca ha/ Then Hanuman had politely addressed Sri Rama! ‘Maha Raja! By ever recalling your ‘charitraamrita’, may my memory power be ever expressed in highest tone like megha maalaas take me away in trances’. As bhalluka-vaanara-rakshasaas departed to their respective destinations by the pushpaka vimana with contentment, Shri Rama was seated with his brothers Bharata-Lakshmana-Shatrughnas delightfully on a mid day and heard a ‘madhura vaani’ from the skies stating ‘ Shri Rama! Do kindly look at me. My Master Yaksha Raja Kubera had instructed to stating as follows: ‘ Vimaanottama! Maharma Maha Raja Shri Rama had since concluded Mahaasura Ravana’s devastation along with putra-bandhu- baandhava-sevaka ganaas ushering new era of ‘dharmodddhaarana’ and Vishva Shanti or universal peace and contentment. My instruction to you would be to serve him as his chariot. Hence Mahatma Rama Prabho! Kindly allow me to serve you. I am right at your disposal.’ Then Shri Rama replied: ‘ Vimana Raja Puskpaka! As this were so, I do welcome you, especially since Kubera’s ‘sahridayata’ had prompted him and should not be disregarded. Now for the time being you may depart and as and when I recall for you you may respond and reappear.’ Then Bharata had submitted to Shri Rama as follows: evam antarhite tasmin puṣpake vividhātmani, bharataḥ prāñjalir vākyam uvāca raghunandanam/ atyadbhūtāni dṛśyante tvayi rājyaṁ praśāsati, amānuṣāṇām sattvānām vyāhṛtāni muhur muhuḥ/ anāmayāc ca martyānām sāgro māso gato hy ayam, jīrṇānām api sattvānām mṛtyur nāyāti rāghava“ Veeravara Rama! All the ‘pura-jaanapada mahajanas’ are already feeling so contented that may suck kingship last for ever and ever. ‘As Bharata conveyed quoting the comments of Rama Rajya cities and villages, Shri Rama had displayed his expressions of satisfactions.

[Brief repeat of Agni Purana on Ramarajya: The perception, as to how a King should govern his Kingdom and the Subjects, was illustrated by Lord Rama to Laxmana. A King has to create wealth, increase it, protect it, and donate it. He should be humble-the humility arising out of victory, essentially after defeating the human senses of revenge, anger and retribution. He should be strong, magnanimous and forgiving, kind and protective. His support to the inferior and the needy is as significant as to punish and uproot the wicked and harmful. The human vices of greed, lust, dishonesty are but the reflections of a sick mind, which has no conviction or courage or helpfulness to the needy. Rama also advised considerable patience to deal with the timid, haughty and hurtful as these are indeed the traits of a villain. Once there is no ray of remorse nor trace of recovery then should arrive for the act of retribution to the culprit, indeed].

Maha baahu Shri Rama then took garbhini Devi Sita to Ashoka Vana the ‘antahpura vihaara yogya upavana’ for her ‘manollaasa’. The joyous garden place was rich with excellent trees of chandana-agaru-chuuta-thunga/ coconut-raktachandana- devadaarus. Further, champa-ashoka-punnaaga-parijaata maha vrishaaas. This upavana was also rich with priyangku- kadamba-vakula-jambu-daadim-kovidaara vrikshaas too. Devi Sita was happily elated at the ‘ramaneeya phalapushpa shobhita Ashoka Maha Vana’. The picturesque Ashoka Vana was filled up with amazing ‘prakriti soundarya’ of flora and fauna with the abundance of kokila-bhringa raaja-shuka-hamsa-saarasa- ‘nissvanaas’ ever enriching the magnificence. nandanam hi yathendrasya brāhmaṇaṁ caitrarathaṁ yathā, tathārūpam hi rāmasya kānanam tan niveśitam/ bahvāsanagrhopeṭām latāgrhasamāvṛtām, aśokavanikām sphītām praviśya raghunandanaḥ/ āsane tu śubhākāre puṣpastabakabhūṣite, kuthāstaraṇasaṁvīte rāmaḥ saṁniśasāda ha/ sītām saṁgrhya bāhubhyām madhumaireyam uttamam, pāyayām āsa kākutsthaḥ śacīm indro yathāmṛtam/ This ‘kreedaa-kaananana shobha’ of Shri Rama’s Ashoka vana was like that of Indra’s Nandana Vana or that of Brahma virachita Kuberas’s Chatra ratha vana, with numerous maha bhavanaas all around with fabled range of seating arrangements with ‘lataa mandapas’ while comfortable bed spreads and luxurious range of carpets. Just as Indra made Shachi Devi, Shri Rama made Sita too gave ‘madhu paana’. Similarly he provided excellent ‘rajochita bhogya padaardhaas’. At that time the highly skilled ‘nrithya yuvatis’ provided entertainment of ‘natya bhangimaas’. Dharmagina Shri Rama having carried on with his rajyadharma karyas on the first part of the day, the remainder ‘saayamkaala raatris’ were dedicated to mutual caressings and embracings. Devi Sita too was busy with ‘poorvaahnikaala Deva pujanaas’, seva to mothers in law, and the like of dhaarmika vidhis, and subsequently with ‘vichitra vastra bhushanas’ she was busy with her swami seva like Shachi Devi to Indra Deva. tato rāmam upāgacchad vicitrabāhubhūṣaṇā, triviṣṭape sahasrākṣam upaviṣṭam yathā śacī/ drṣṭvā tu rāghavaḥ patnīm kalyāṇena samanvitām, praharṣam atulam lebhe sādhu sādhu iti cābravīt/ apatyālābho vaidehi mamāyam samupasthitaḥ, kim icchasi hi tad brūhi kaḥ kāmah kriyatām tava/ prahasantī tu vaidehī rāmam vākyam athābravīt, tapovanāni puṇyāni draṣṭum icchāmi rāghava/ Shri Rama with his vichitra baahu bhushanaas was ever at the service of Devi Sita again recalling the example of Indra- Shachis. Meanwhile, Rama noticed his darling’s ‘garbha suchanas’ and expressed exciting enthusiasic fervour and of suppressed emotions, stating aloud to her: ‘my hearty congratulations and felicitations to you! Then Rama addressed Devakanya samana Sita: ‘Videhanandini! Soon enough you should be blessed with a son or two; varaaroohaa! Please convey to me: what all could I do for you! My wish would be to visit the divta tapovanaas on the banks of the sacred Ganga and the drishyaas of ‘Maha Muni tapasya-agni kaaryaas’ to my heart contentment! Then Rama who was fully prepared to do anything for his dearmost replied assuringly: ‘Videha nandini! Be rest assured, right tomorrow, we should be able to do so. Having assured her thus, Rama had departed to meet his friends and well wishers.

Having assured the fulfillment of garbhini Sita's wife to take accompany him to witness the 'Sacred Gangaa teera Maha Muni tapo-yajna karyas', Shri Rama departed to see and spend time with his intimate friends for exchange of pleasantries and childhood slapsticks. His baalya mitras included: Vijaya-Madhumatta- Kaashyapa-Mangala- Kula-Suraaji-Kaaliya-Bhadra-Dattavakra-and Sumaagha. These friends were hilarious with haasya vinoda purna kathaas. Raghunatha asked : 'Bhadra! Which is now the talk of Ayhodhyanaagari and jaana padaas or villages! What all is being talked of about me, Sita, Bharata, Lakshmana Shatrughnaas, especially about maataa Kaikeyi! After all there should be discussions about Rajas , ther aachaara vyavahaaraas, rishi muni ashramaas and so on especially about the pluses and minuses or of successes and failures, or positive negative aspects.' Then Bhadra with folded hands replied ro Rama! ' Maha Raja! All these days, the puravaasi charchaas have been decidedly positive, especially your parakrama and 'Dashagrivavadha sambhanddhi charchaamshaas.' Then Rama asked Bhadra: ' Tell me what precisely could be the remarks and feelings about me specifically related to the shubha-ashubha soochanas either expressed or otherwise. Be frank and fearless as I assure you to correct my self as there ought to be some feelings of the township and of villages too'. Then Bhadra replied: śṛṇu rājan yathā paurāḥ kathayanti śubhāśubham, catvarāpaṇarathyāsu vaneṣūpavaneṣu ca/ duṣkaraṁ kṛtavān rāmaḥ samudre setubandhanam, akṛtaṁ pūrvakaiḥ kaiś cid devair api sadānavaiḥ/ rāvaṇaś ca durādharṣo hataḥ sabalavāhanaḥ, vānarāś ca vaśam nītā ṛkṣāś ca saha rākṣasaīḥ/ hatvā ca rāvaṇam yuddhe sītām āhṛtya rāghavaḥ, amarṣam pr̥ṣṭhataḥ kṛtvā svaveśma punar ānayat/ Maha Raja! Then, Bhadra was rather hesitant to his friend no doubt but the Maha Raja himself, and however blurted out: ' Indeed Rama was able to have performed the dushkara kaarya of setubandhana and the gigantic pathway across the southern ocean, the like of wich was beyond the vision of Deva Daanavaas! Further he led pioneering act of leading crores of vaanara-bhalluka maha sena and killed Mahaasura Ravana and his crores of rakshassas who shook the trilokas to doom and reestablished dharma in its essence. BUT, there is one hard reality which would spring up in one's imagination. Rama had no doubt brought Sita home, yet he himself doubted her chastity. kīdr̥ṣam hṛdaye tasya

In this manner she must have been coerced in the company of rakshasi stree since what all the king of lankapuri had stressed ought to have been carried out apparently. Hence King Rama! The pura vaasis as well as village folk do expresse their own impressions and misgivings.’ Then Rama asked other friends besides Bhadra and thry too corroborated what Bhadra had indicated. That was how Shri Rama had deeply felt that in view of the ‘lokopavaadaas’, Devi Seta thyaaga might have to be very seriously need to be considered!

Having ascertained the views of his close friends about what a cross section of Ayodhya praja's were feeling, Rama asked his dwaara paalaka to call for his younger brothers of Bharata-Lakshmana-Shatrughnas to meet him. Firstly the doorman reached Lakshmana to meet Shri Rama most urgently without delay and Lakshmana started off at once by his chariot to reach Rama. Thereafter Bharata was informed likewise as he too tried to reach Rama by quick walk. Having been informed likewise the dwarapalaka of Rama reached Shatrughna too and hastened him stating that Lakshmana Bharataas would have reached Rama buy now and hence reach King Rama at once. Thus all the younger brothers had arrived at King Shri Rama's palace. te tu dṛṣṭvā mukhaṁ tasya sagrahaṁ śaśinaṁ yathā, saṁdhyāgatam ivādityaṁ prabhayā parivarjitam/ bāṣpapūrṇe ca nayane dṛṣṭvā rāmasya dhīmataḥ, hataśobhaṁ yathā padmaṁ mukhaṁ vīkṣya ca tasya te/ At that time, the brothers noticed that he was not his true self as he looked concerned and engaged in deep thoughts. His 'mukhaaravinda' was bereft of his usual enthusiastic sheen and luster. Then the brothers touched Rama's feet and desired to hear what would he like to say. Then they noticed that his eyes were wet with tears. He embraced them one by one and asked them to be seated and stated: bhavanto mama sarvasvaṁ bhavanto mama jīvitam, bhavadbhiḥ ca kṛtaṁ rājyaṁ pālayāmi nareśvarāḥ/ bhavantaḥ kṛtaśāstrārthā buddhau ca pariniṣṭhitāḥ, saṁbhūya ca madartha 'yam anveṣṭavyo nareśvarāḥ/ Raja Kmaras! 'When Rama was stating in this rather strange manner, the brothers were looking askance. Then they wondered as to what indeed that he had been driving at further!

Next morning the pale faced Lakshmana with the previous nightmares of his unprecedented responsibility entrusted by Rama called for Sumantra instructing him to accompany him as Devi Sita was desirous of visiting the Maharshi Ashramas on the banks of Pavitra Ganga. Then he approached Devi Sita and stated: Tvaya kilaisha nrupaturvaram vai yaachitah Prabhuḥ, nripena cha pratagjñaatama agjnapttascha - asharmam prati/ gaṅgātīre mayā devi munīnām āśrame śubhe, śīghram gatvopaneyāsi śāsanāt pārthivasya naḥ/ evaṃ uktā tu vaidehī lakṣmaṇena mahātmanā, praharṣam atulaṃ lebhe gamanaṃ cābhyarocayat/ Devi! It appears that you had asked Shri Rama prabhu to take you to visit Maha Muni Ashrama and as such he had directed me to accompany you. Devi! Videhanadini, I should therefore leave for the banks of the sacred Ganga for the purpose. She addressed Lakshmana: 'I am some how experiencing some aberrations of my body as I find that in my vision that the earth was swinging getting dried up. Hope all my near and far dear ones are safe - your brothers and all our in laws are sound and happy.' On hearing her comments, Lakshmaa affirmed: may there be health and peace prevail to all. Meanwhile, the chariot reached the banks of River Gomati as Devi Sita addressed Sumantra to quicken the pace of the chariot as she was anxious to sprinkle the Ganga jala too soon. Soon enough the chariot reached the banks of Ganga by the mid-day. athārdhadivasam gatvā bhāgīrathyā jalāśayam, nirīkṣya lakṣmaṇo dīnaḥ praruroda mahāsvanam/ sītā tu paramāyattā dṛṣṭvā lakṣmaṇam āturam, uvāca vākyam dharmajña kim idam rudiyate tvayā/ As 'Bhagiradhi jala tarangas' were glanced at, Lakshmana had suddenly broken down bent forward and started crying away uncontrollably! Devi Sita got puzzled and exclaimed: 'Lakshmana! What has happened to you too

There after Devi Sita and Lakshmana were settled in the boat quiet ly.

Lakshmana got curious to know further more about Durvasa Maha Muni. Then Sumatra explained. Durvasa the Atri Putra spent chaturmaasya at Vasishtha Maharshis ashram once before. One day the Purohita Vasishtha Maharshi was visited by King Dasharatha too. The King then kept the Raja Kumara Shri Rama on his lap with affection narrating veera kshatriya stories. Curiously enough Dasharatha asked Durvasa about the lasting fame of Ikshvaaku vamsha as also about the longevity of himself and that of Raja Kumara Rama too. Dasharatha further asked as to how many sons that Rama once grown up might beget. Could you kindly explain in detail about the furtherance of the Ikshvaaku Vamsha! Then Maha Muni replied to Dasharatha as follows: tac chrutvā vyāhṛtaṁ vākyam rājño daśarathasya tu, durvāsāḥ sumahātejā vyāhartum upacakrame/ ayodhyāyāḥ patī rāmo dīrghakālam bhaviṣyati, sukhinaś ca samṛddhāś ca bhaviṣyanty asya cānujāḥ/ kasmimś cit karaṇe tvām ca maithilīm ca yaśasvinīm, samtyajiṣyati dharmātmā kālena mahatā kila/ Ayodhyaa Rajya under the rule of Shri Rama would prosper for deergka kaala, yet he would have to be cursed by his wife’s absence for long too. Let me tell you now the background as to this was based on. Raja! In the hoary past, there were countless ‘Devaasura sangramaas’ in which Devas had an upper hand and the ever harassed daityas sought refuge from the wife of Bhṛigu Maharshi. There after daityas were freely moving about and Bhagavan Vishnu was enraged and tossed his chakra which killed Bhṛigu’s wife. But Bhṛigu reached Vishnu and gave a ‘shaap’ that he should be born as a human being and should suffer ‘patni viyoga’. It was due to that curse that Vishnu was reborn first as Vamana Deva and later as Shri Rama. daśavarṣasahasraṇi daśavarṣaśatāni ca, rāmo rājyam upāsitvā brahmalokaṁ gamiṣyati/ samṛddhair hayamedhaiś ca iṣṭvā parapuraṁjayah, rājyavaṁśāś ca kākutstho bahūn samsthāpayiṣyati/ sa sarvam akhilaṁ rājño vaṁśasyāsyā gatāgatam, ākhyāya sumahātejās tūṣṇīm āsīn mahādyutiḥ/ Durvasa further continued to Dasharatha as follows:

‘Notwithstanding Bhrigu’s curse, Shri Rama should be ‘dirghayu’ for eleven thousand years with ‘dhana-dhaanya-yasho samapti’ and would also perform ‘ashvamedha yajna’ two successfully. So explained Sumantra to Lakshmana.

[Vishleshana on Bhrigu Maharshi: in general and from Devi Bhagavata Purana:

Maharshi Bhrigu was one of Brahma the Manasputras like Narada, Vasishtha, Atri, Gautama and so on. He was married to Khyati (the daughter of Daksha), Puloma (daughter of Kardama) and Usana. Two sons, Dhata and Vidhata and a daughter Shri were born to Khyati. Maharshi Bhrigu is also called Prajapati (creator) as he was created by Brahma to help him in the process of creation of the universe. Chyavana was his son from Puloma, Lakshmi was his daughter who was the wife of Vishnu also named as Bhargavi. Sukracharya, the preceptor of Daityas is a son of Bhrigu born to Usana. When the battle ensued between the Devatas and the Daityas, the Devatas led by Indra had the upper hand. Daityas went to their Guru, Sukracharya and sought his help, but as he left for severe Tapasya to please Maha Shiva to accomplish ‘Mrita Sanjivini mantra siddhi’, they sought refuge in Usana, the mother of Sukracharya, assured them protection and by using her powers froze the devatas. Devatas prayed to Vishnu to protect them and get them out of the predicament. Vishnu understood that the curse on devatas could not be annulled unless Usana was killed. But Usana being a woman without violating the precepts of dharma, disguised Himself as a ferocious beast and tried to scare Usana who in turn desired to turn Vishnu and Indra to ashes. In self defence, without having to infringe the principle and under the garb of self defence, even before her attempt to convert both to ashes and well before the words of the ‘shaap’ were spelt out, Vishnu killed Bhrigu’s wife with a sharp arrow and separated her head from her body. Once Usana was killed, her powers also left and Devatas became free but Bhrigu cursed Vishnu to take birth on earth and go through the cycles of birth and death and thus suffer like all humans. He brought his wife back to life with his powers. Vishnu accepted the curse of the Maharshi gracefully.

Devi Bhagavata Purana further explains further as follows: There were on-going battles between Devas and Demons, but the most potent war fought was that of Bali with Devas in which Danavas had an upper hand. But Lord Vishnu took the incarnation of Vamana and tricked Bali by asking for just three feet of land and occupied the entire Universe and suppressed Bali’s head to the Sub-terranean world as the third foot! Similarly Prahlada’s father Hiranyakasipu was killed taking the form of half-lion and half-man to escape the effect of Brahma’s boon. Thus each time Danavas got boons from Brahma, Lord Vishnu tried to search for the escape clauses of the boons secured after rigorous Tapasya and appeared as the saviour of Devas always. Thus brooding, Sukra Acharya, the son of Sage Bhrigu and Urjasvati, consoled Danavas and assured that some other strategy would have to be followed to achieve victory over Devas. Thus Danava Guru asked for patience and restraint and meanwhile practised a life of austerity and abstinence till he found a solution to the problem from Tapasya. The Acharya then meditated Lord Siva for several years together and finally pleased him for a boon. He explained that the various Tapasyas performed by Danava Kings in the past to Brahma and the boons obtained from him proved futile since they had only temporary impact and each time Lord Vishnu was discovering loopholes in the boons received. That was the reason why Lord Siva was approached for a solution as a boon, the kind of which should not have been granted to his opponent Brihaspati, the Deva Guru. Lord Siva in turn gave a very arduous method to follow namely to perform penance for thousand years lying upside down inhaling smoke from burnt husk. Meanwhile Deva Guru disguised himself as Sukracharya and gradually misguided Danavas and taught them a licentious and wicked life quite contrary to what Sukracharya advised before his departure for Tapasya. The Danavas were provoked by the Fake Danava Guru went on war against Devas who killed several Demons as the latter were disunited, indisciplined and weak. Sukracharya’s mother, Kavya, found that Devas were drawing too near to Danavas and protected them by putting Devas to deep sleep by requesting the Goddess of ‘Nidra’ (Slumber). Indra escaped the sleep as Lord Vishnu absorbed him into His body; He also used the Sudarsana Chakra (Wheel) and cut off Kavya’s head even ignoring that she was a woman that too the wife of Sage Bhrigu. The Sage was furious on learning that Vishnu's Chakra cut Kavya's head and gave him a curse that Vishnu would be born again and again as a human being since He never cared for the killing of a woman and hence be punished by learning the misery of staying imprisoned for nine months each time before the births. Also by his mystic powers, the Sage revived his wife to come alive! Indra was afraid that Bhṛigu cursed Narayana and soon original Visvamisra would also return after securing the much desired Mantra from Lord Siva. So Indra made a plan and asked his daughter Jayanti to disguise herself as a maid and reach Visvamisra's hermitage and please his mother Kavya to start with and please the Sage in his duties subsequently which she did exceedingly well. Meanwhile Visvamisra secured a great boon from Lord Siva that he would be invincible to any force in the Universe. Lord Siva blessed the Sage with the Mantra. Also he was pleased with the services of Jayanti and desired to give boons to her. She revealed her identity as Indra's daughter and requested the Sage to marry her. Visvamisra agreed that she could be with him for ten years, that he would not attend to any outside task during the period and that she would not be visible to others. Indra's plan thus succeeded well. The fake Sukracharya (Bṛhaspati) too had a successful time. But after ten year's time Visvamisra left Jayanti and returned to Asuras and sought to expose the fake Sukracharya, but the fake Sage advised that he was real Sukracharya and the one who arrived just then was really fake! The real Sukracharya was not able to convince the foolish Danavas and having cursed them for not recognising him left in anger. Having fulfilled his mission, the fake Sukracharya or Bṛhaspati returned to Indra Loka. Danavas felt cheated and desired to convey their sincere apologies and thus approached Sukracharya with King Prahlaḍa in the lead. The Sage was furious as he felt insulted, while actually he took the trouble of severe Tapasya only for the welfare of the entire Danava community whereas they let him down badly by believing in Bṛhaspati in disguise. King Prahlaḍa pleaded with the Sage very earnestly and all the Danavas prostrated before the Guru to excuse them for their lack of gratitude and commonsense. Sukracharya understood from his intuition that the regrets expressed by Prahlaḍa and Danavas were genuine. He then narrated that Lord Brahma assured him of the King of Danava's coming to power soon and for the time being Danavas would have to lie low and await excellent times till Prahlaḍa's grandson would be born as Bali and reign the Three Worlds. What the Danava Guru told Prahlaḍa was so encouraging that he did not wait for more time and attacked the Devas; Devas lost the war. Indra was surprised at the defeat of Devas. He prayed to Devi Bhagavati at the instance of Deva Guru, Bṛhaspati. He extolled the unparalleled Glory of Devi as per 'Shakti Darsana' and described Her as the 'Tatvas' rooted to the material manifestation of Pancha Bhootas or Five Elements; the Tatvas include Maha Bindu, Nada Sakti and Misrama Bindu. She dwelt in five sheaths (Kosas) viz. Annamaya, Prana Maya Kosa, Manonmaya, Vignana Maya and Ananda Maya. She was the Vedas, Sastras, Upanishads, Mantras, Tantras and multi-routed final destination and so on. Devi Bhagavati was pleased and made Her extraordinary appearance in full form, packed with armoury and ornaments. Out of sheer panic, Danavas led by King Prahlaḍa fled away to Patala forthwith. Thus ended the unwarranted war declared by Danavas against Devatas who had other important duties to perform; thus the Devi's appearance was a warning to both Devas and Danavas that they should not waste mutual energies in frequent bickerings. Thus there was a Truce ending the War.]

On arrival back to Ayodhyapuri be the afternoon, Lakshmana was wondering as to how to face Shri Rama after getting down the chariot at the Rja Bhavana. Purusha Simha, kindly cry not since the Kaala Devata’s circumstantial pressures are irrevocable and buddhimaan maha veeras ought to reconcile gradually as time would pass on. In one’s own life time, each and every Being need to harden one’s respective physique and control emotions as per the passage of time; and in your own case surely, your capacity to suppress them is truly exrardinary. We are all aware about the pangs of viyoga baadha of stree, putra, mitras but the kaal nirnaya could only be the time healer as one’s own circumstances are truly variable. Kaakusthakula bhushana! A shreshtha purusha as you certainly are must never be blamed for weak heardness, in any case. Purushasimha! be brave for now and discard timidity; get rid of this ‘shoka buddhi’ and stop crying, while concentration on the Supreme right within your self.’ In this manner, Lakshmana sought to soothen Rama’s inner psyche. evam etan naraśreṣṭha yathā vadasi lakṣmaṇa, paritoṣaś ca me vīra mama kāryānuśāsane/ nirvṛtiś ca kṛtā saumya saṁtāpaś ca nirākṛtaḥ, bhavadvākyaiḥ sumadhurair anunīto 'smi lakṣmaṇa/ Then Rama addressed Lakshmana: ‘Narashreshtha Lakshmana! I am beholden to you for your earnest and timely counselling for my ‘manasshaanti’!

Sargas Fifty Three and Fifty Four

Having regained semi-normalcy, Rama sought to resume the regular Raja Sabha, recalling the example of King Nriga neglecting his Raja Dharma and was subjected to Vipra Shaapas to be a chameleon for yugas!

Having been pleased by the ‘saantvana vachanaas’, the recouped King Rama felt that four valuable days had passed and the daily proceedings of the Rajy Sabha had been upset there since. He then asked Lakshmana to have the convening of the normal proceedings of Rajyaanga Vyavahaasas and the cross section of the praja including stree, purohita, pandita, mantris be called atonce. As Lakshmana got the Sabha convened accordingly, Shri Rama asserted: pourakaaryaani y rajaa na karoti dine dine, samvrite narake ghore patitonaatra samshayah/ Shruyate hi puraa raajaa Nrugo naama mahaa yashaah, babhuva prithivipaalo brahmanyah satya vaak shuchih/ ‘Lakshmana! Who soever of the Kings would not attend the rajya sabhas daily, pass away ingloriously without ascertaining the ‘kashta sukhaas’ of his praja would be surely reach narakas where there would be no possibility of breathing except rarely to let him survive! In the olden ages, there was King named Nriga a maha tapasi, yashasvi, vipra bhakta, satyavaadi, and achhara-vichaata sampanna. Once he visited Pushkara Tirtha and gave away ‘mahaa pushkala daanas’ to veda pandita brahmanas of suvarnaabharanaas and as many as a crore of milch cows. Lakshmana! At that time Nriga Raja spotted a daridra-nityaagnihotra- bahu santaani brahmana from Kankala village and gave a cow and calf. Several years there after, that very brahmana had unfortunately lost the cow as apparently somebody stole the ‘go maata’. Ever seeking to locate that, the poor brahmana visited Kankhala village and tried to somehow locate the Go maata in good shape in a brahmana’s cottage. He addressed the go maata as Shabala. Atha taam naamadheyena svaknovaacha brahmanah, aagaccha shabaletyevavam saa tu shishraava gouh svaram/ Tasya tam svaramaagjyaaya khudaartasya dwijasva vai anvagaat pushthitah saa gourganccchantam paavakopamam/ Yopi paalayate viprah sopi gaamanvagaadd dryutam, gatvaacha tamushim chashte gouriti satvaram, sparshitaa raajasimhena mama datta nrigenah/ As soon as the cow was called with affection saying ‘come here, come here’, she jumped forward with quick response. The brahmana of the Kankhala and the visitor brahmana entered into an arguments as the visitor brahmana asserted that Nriga Maharaja himself gifted Shabala himself. Tato braahnanayorvaado mahaanaaseed vipaschitoh, vivandantou tatonyonyam daataaramabhijugmatuh/ Tou raajabhavana dwaari na praaptou Nrigashaasanam, ahoraatranyekaani vasantou krodhameeyatuh/ Uuchitascha mahaatmaanou taavibhou dwijasattamou, kriddhou parama samtaptou vaakyam ghoraabhisamhitam/ Then both vidwaan braahmanaas drove the cow fighting each other and reached the palace of the King. Then both of them kept on waiting for Raja darshana for several days and nights continuing their mutual bickerings. They lost their patience and with frustrated anger cursed them with extreme fury. Aarthimnaam yasmaatvam naishi darshanam, adrushtah sarva bhutaanaam krukulaaso bhavishyasi/ Bahuvarsha sahasraani bahuvarsha shataanicha, shvyabhre twam krukuleebhuto deerghakaalam nivasityasi/ They both hurled their ‘shaapaas’ shouting at the King : Raja! we have been waiting for days and nights hoping you would provide justice to us about the ownership of this cow that you had donated to us. But you had been consistently refusing to meet us for your final judgment. Now our curse to you should be that you become a girgit or chameleon being a turncoat for thousands of years. Upatsyate hi lokosmin yaduunaam keertivardhana, vaasudeva iti khyato vishnuh purusha vgrahah/ sate mokshuyataa shaapaad raajatasmaad bhavishyasi/ kritaa cha tena kaaleena nishkutatistey bhavishyasi/ Bhaaraavtaranaartham hi nara naraayanaavibhou, upastyate mahaaveeryom kalou yuga upasthite/ Only in the next dwapara yuga when Maha Vishnu would incarnate as Bhagavan Krishna then only you would be freed from this ‘shaapa’. Once again in the Kali Yuga, you should become Nara Narayana swarups.’

As Shri Rama continued to explain to about Rajarshi Nriga thus, Lakshmana explained that in those days of the yore, obviously brahmanottamas were worked up even by minor lapses and gave such long lasting ‘yugaantara maha shaapaas’ too! How did the Rajarshi react then. Rama explained: Then the Rajarshi having been notified by his dwaara paalakas, had literally ran after the brahmanottamaas and having realised that they had already left away, called for the mantris, purohitas, and purajanas and explained : ‘Sajjano! Brahmarshi Narada seated on a parvat raja came to me and informed of the details of the ‘maha viprottama shaapa’ but they seem to have left for brahma loka. Hence I have decided to make my son Vasu naamaka rajakumara as the King and asking the shilpis to get ready to dig up earth to make a platform for me lie down with ‘sugandha yukta pushpa vrikshas’ all around for me rest with cool breezes all around.’ Then the Rajarshi endeared the new King and addressed the son to follow the precepts of kshatriya dharma parayaana and explained: Praaptavyaanaayeva praaproti gantanyanyeva gacchati, labdhanyaanyeva labhate duhkhaani sukhaanicha, purve jaatyantare vatsa maa vishaadam kurupva ha/ Dear son, as as per the ‘purva janma krita sukritaas’ only any Being’s present and future ‘plalaaphalaas’ are reaped; and hence do not get too alarmed and concerned about me. Having this advised the new king and stated 'good bye' all the present maha jana had entered the pit.

Asked about Ikshvaaku Kings ever busy with Yaginas, Rama cited King Nimi versus Brahmarshi Vasishtha and their mutual curses.

Thus Shri Rama explained to Lakshmana about the requirement of King's to be ever available responding to the needs of their 'prajaas'. Then Lakshmana was surprised at such past events related to Kings in general. Then he had specifically enquired of the Kings in the lineage of Ikshvaaku Vamsha. Then Shri Rama explained that of the twelve famed sons who were all of 'dharma paalakas and yuddha nipunata' and among them was the maha yashasvi Rajarshi Nimi was the outstanding. He built a famed Nimi Nagara on the banks of the Sacred Gautami River popular as 'Vijayanta' on the lines of Indra Puri itself. Then in due course of time, Nimi Chakravarti desired to perform such a maha yajna about with not only his praja by various other co- Kings and their prajaas too should speak high about. Thus having consulted his father another Manu Putra Ikshvaaku desired to invite the Raja Purohita the Brahmarshi shiromani Vasishtha as also Maharshis Atri, Angeera, and taponidhi Bhrigu too. Tamuvaaacha Vashishthastu Nimim raajarshi sattamaam, vritoham purvamindrena anantaram pratipaalay/ Anantaram mahaa vipro Gautamah pratyapuurayat, Vsishthopi maha tejaa Indra yagjnamathaakaret/ Then having been honoured by the recognition of King Nimi's kind invitation to preside over his maha yajna, Brahmarshi Vasishtha explained that he had already been asked by Indra to preside over his maha yajna too, yet he could manage to reach at the appropriate time of King Nimi's 'maha purnaahuti' time, while the other preliminaries could be pioneered and completed by Maharshis Atri, Angeera and Bhrigus. Thus Vasishtha suggested to King Nimi. Accordingly, Nimi Rajarshi invited the brahmanottamaas apart from the ritviks. The main priests of Yajna Karyas are the Hota who recites the invocations especially of Rigveda; Atharvya is responsible for the physical and material details of the yajna and an erudite of Yajurveda; Udgaata is the chief chanter of the suktas and specialist Saama Gaana and responsible for pressing the Soma juice. Besides these are Brahmanas as Agneedhi and Prashastar, besides Purohita of course. The Maha Yajna was thus initiated and was completed after taking Nimi's deeksha for five thousand years. Meanwhile, Brahmarshi Vasishtha having completed his responsibility at the Indra Yajna arrived quickly to catch up with the Hortu karma of Nimi Yajna. But he found that that responsibility was already completed by Gautama Maharshi. On noticing the hotru karya, Brahma kumara Vasishtha got upset and furious at Rajarshi got fatigued and half asleep. He shouted at the King: Yamaat tvamanya vritavaan maamavagjnaaya paarthiva, chetanena vinaabhuto dehaste paarthivaishyati/ Bhupaala Nime! You have knowingly offended me by approaching another purohita and hence may your physical body be fallen off though not your existence otherwise being a Videha! Then King Nimi having been awoken from the half sleep realised the intent of the shaapa replied: Tasmaat tavaapi brahmarshe chetanena vinaakritah, dehaha sa suchirapraakhya bhavishtaya na samshayah/ Brahmarshi! May your body fall down senseless. This Nimi fell down without body and Vasishtha fell down senseless.

[Vishleshana a) on King Nimi and Brahmarshi Vasishtha vide Devi Bhagavata Purana and b) Nine Yogindras explain to Videha Nimi's spiritual enquiries]

a) King Nimi of Ikshvasu dynasty was highly righteous and sought to perform a Maha Yagnya in the name of Devi Bhagavati; Sage Vasishtha who was the dynasty's Raja Guru agreed to be the Head Priest. At the arrived time when all the preparations were through, the Sage informed that Indra had called him too for a Sacrifice and sent word that King Nimi's Yagna be rescheduled. King Nimi went ahead with his function as per schedule. Vasishtha returned and cursed Nimi that his mortal body would fall off. The King gave a return curse likewise. But since Nimi's Yagna was not complete, he performed it as 'Videha' or without body as Lord Yama was pleased with the Sacrifice and gave him the option of another nice birth or enter the first Jiva body of Brihaspati but the King chose the Videha option. Vasishtha had to pray to his father Brahma who arranged that he be reborn as MitraVaruna. In the past, Apsara Urvashi was infatuated by Mitra-Varuna and two issues were born, one was Agastya who became an ascetic and the other was Ikshvaku who became a King. Mitra Varuna's Jiva -body was still intact even before Brahma created original Vasishtha; the Jiva of the present Vasishtha now dropped as a return curse of King Nimi entered the duplicate body of Mitra Varuna without any loss of original Vasishtha's wisdom and Radiance!

b) Once Maharaja Nimi, son of Ikshvaku desired to perform a Sacrifice and requested Vasishtha to be the Head Priest, but Vasishtha was busy performing another Sacrifice for Indra and therefore asked Nimi to wait till he returned. But Nimi performed the Sacrifice without waiting for Vasishtha, who cursed Nimi, but Nimi too gave a curse to the Sage. As a result of the curses, both of them were dead, but as Mitra and Varuna desired Urvashi in lust and from their thoughts of lust revived Vasishtha. As regards, Nimi Maharaja, his body was preserved till the completion of the Sacrifice which was already in progress and once the Yagna was over, the Brahmanas requested Demi Gods to revive his body already preserved. Nimi did not opt for the revival of the physical body but his spiritual body continued to exist. It was that spiritual body of Nimi, known as King Videha (without physical Body) performed Soma-Yagnya and was blessed with the presence of Nine Yogindras viz. Kavi, Havir, Anthariksha, Prabuddha, Pippalayna, Havirhotra, Drumila, Chamasa and Karabhanjana.(Their lineage was: Swayambhu Manu or Priyamvata-Agnidhara-Nabhi-Rishabhadeva considered as the Plenary expansion of Lord Narayana Himself- one hundred sons, headed by Bharata of BharataVarsha fame, including the Nine Yogindras). The Nine Yogindras, who were highly learned in Spiritual Science preaching the path of attaining Absolute Truth travelling naked all over the Universe, explained the Principles of Seeking the Truth to King Nimi alias Videha and those who attended the Sacrifice.The pointed queries made to the Nine Yogindras by King Nimi (Videha) were: 1)What is the highest good? 2) What are the Principles of Dharma and the general inclinations conditioning human beings like 'Svabhava' (one's own nature or behavior), Acharya' (Tradition), Speech pattern and other lakshanas' (Traits) of Elevated human beings? 3) What is the external energy of Super Power? 4) How does one disassociate from Maya or Illusion? 5) How is a Brahmana (Devotee) identified? 6) What is 'Karma' (means of devotion) and its two major forms viz. materialistic or Spiritual (Kamuka or seeking oriented and Nishkama or Oriented to Almighty only) 7) What are the various Incarnations /Extensions of God? 8) What is the destination of a non-devotee? 9) What are the ideal forms of worship suited to the four ages (Yugas)? Yogindras explained that relentless pursuit of material desires, arising out of ignorance and leading to fear as conditioned by one's own nature and nurture, tends to sideline or marginalise the Super Energy and Its Extension Forms or Incarnations aimed at the Four Yugas and even if a human being were to perform acts of devotional services these would invariably aim at desire-fulfilling ends and not Spiritually oriented. This vicious circle of cause and effect ought to be wrecked to yield to the path of Bhagavatha Dharma or the Discipline of Faith. Increase in the duration of devotional time, gradual detachment, and enhancement of Awareness of the Super Energy are the Golden Means required.]

Brahma's varapraapti to King Nimi and Vasishta for Mitra-Varuna 's combined virility due to meeting Urvashi in a Kumbha- King Pururana of Ikshvakus-Vashishtha' new body in the eyes of Videaha Nimi.

Understandably, Lakshmana's curiosity was raised further and asked Shri Rama as to how the Brahmarshi Vasishtha and Rajarshi Nimi were able to regain their bodies with their bhoutika karmendriyas of Pancha Jnanendriyas viz. Ghrana-Rasa- Chakshu-Shrotra-Twak or smell, taste, see, hear and touch and Pancha Karmendriyas viz. nose-tongue- eyes- ears- skin respectively. Then Shri Rama explained that Maha Muni Vasishtha having lost his form was absorbed in vaayu swarupa and approached Brahma and informed of what all had informed. Swayambhu Brahma stated: Mitravarumja teja aavisha twam mahaa yashah, ayonijastvam bhavitaa tatraapi dwijasattama, dharmena nahataa yuktah punareshyasi me vasham/

Mahayashasvi dwija shreshtha, you may enter the ayonija swarupa of Mitra and Varuna and dharma yukta putra rupa and as such be eligible for the status of my son of a Prajapati. As Brahma solved the riddle of Brahmarshi like wise, Brahmarshi prostrated at the feet of Brahma Deva and having resumed the Vayu swarupa had approached the Mitra Deva and Varuna Deva where were administering at the same place as receiving the worship of Devas at the same place. That was the time when Apsara shreshtha Urvashi was visiting along with her sakhiyaas precisely at that very place most coincidentally. That was the time when sundari Urvashi was fresh after bathing on Ksheera Saagara and Varuna in his mindset he felt attracted to her. He made advances to her and she replied with folded hands that Mitra Deva had already desired for me. But Varuna was infatuated then by Manmadha Baanaas and was unable to resist his intense passion for the Apsarasa Kanya. Varunaswabhraveed vaakyam kandarpa shara peeritah, idam tejahsamuttrakshey kumbhesmin deva nirmite/ Evamusttrujya sushreni twayyaham varavarbini, kritakaamobhivishyaami yadi necchhasi sangamam/ Agonised by the Manmadha then Varunadeva was unable to resist any further told the Apsarasa that there was a deva nirmita kumbha right there and would like to deposit his 'veerya' right into it. Then Urvashi replied: Deva Varuna! Mitra Deva had already had similar 'kaama badha' and deposited his veerya too. Having so said the Apsara approached Mitra, who was terribly enraged and shouted on Urvashi: 'Duraacharini! I had already invited you but you had again tempted another one too; my shaap would therefore be that you should be a human female for years together. Durbuddhe! you may be born therefore at as the temptress of Rajarshi Pururava the Budha putra.' Then accordingly from Pururava- Urvashi samyoga then Ayu named putra was generated. After having been punished by Mitra Deva and having been wedded to Pururava on earth regained her Apsarasatva subsequently.

[Vishleshanas: on creation of Agasthya and Vasishtha as brothers by MitraVaruna from Urvashi from Matsya Purana]

Sage Narada enquired of Bhagavan Shankara about the origin of Agastya Muni and Vasishta. Maheswara explained that once Indra despatched Vayu and Agni to destroy Danavas and having successfully killed thousands of the enemies, ignored some Daityas like Taraka, Kamalaaksha, Paravasu, Kaladamshttra and Virochana as they fled away and concealed in deep Seas. The Danavas who hid themselves kept on tormenting human beings as also Devatas eventually. Indra ordered that Vayu and Agni should dry up the Sea water, especially to kill dangerous Daityas like Jambhasura, but the both the Devas argued that in the process of drying up the Seas even in a minor manner there would be serious havoc caused to crores of Jeevas. Indra was annoyed at their argument and cursed them to fall down on Earth from Swarga and both the Devas entered into a 'Jala Kumbha' or Water Pitcher as a single body. Meanwhile, Sages Nara and Narayana were in Tapasya on Gandhamadana Mountain, and Indra was concerned that they might not be a threat to his chair; he despatched a few Apsaras to the Mountain along with Kamadeva but their attempts to tempt the Maharshis failed. As the Apsaras continued to be stationed there, Narayana Rishi created a damsel of exquisite attraction from his thighs and named her Urvashi; he desired that Apsaras should realize that their beauty was nothing compared to whom they could materialise as Urvashi and they could not possibly tempt Nara Narayan Maharshis, after all! Mitra (Sun God) and Varuna (Rain God) happened to see the damsel and could not resist the fall of their combined semen of MitraVaruna which was deposited in the same Jala Kumbha (pitcher) that fell down from the Swarga and thus Agastya was born as Kumbha Sambhava. Vasishtha too was reborn from the pitcher earlier since he felt offended when King Nimi did not properly attend to him as he visited the King and hence gave a curse to Nimi to live as 'Videha' or without body, but the King too gave a return curse; both Nimi and Vasishtha approached Lord Brahma who solved the problem by retaining Nimi's life in his Eyes and Vasishtha to be reborn to MitraVaruna since the latter's semen fell in the pitcher on seeing Apsara Urvashi. Subsequently Agastya married Lopamudra, absorbed the entire Ocean in his Kamandulu to isolate the Danavas to enable Indra to kill the notorious Danavas and released it later as his urine and was thus stated to be salty!; he also razed down the ego of Vindhya Mountain by making him bend for ever thus banning the Mountain to stoop for ever till the Sage's return which never happened as he continued to stay down the Vindhyas. There was also the legend attributed to Agastya about the Daitya brothers Ilvala and Vatapi, who knew the Mrita Sanjeevani Mantra; they would assume the forms of Brahmanas and seek the passers by to tempt them to a feast of goat-meat, and after consuming the meal ask Vatapi to come out and Vapati would come out piercing through the tummy of the stranger and the brothers would enjoy his meat. But Agastya Muni was too clever to bless the good food saying ‘Vatapi! Jeerno bhava’ and Vatapi was fully digested even before Ilvala was able to recite the Mrita Sanjeevani Mantra! (Till date, devotees recite Lalita Sahasranama and Aditya Hridaya scripted by Agastya Muni. Vasishtha, the Brahmarshi was the arch-enemy of Rajarshi Viwswamitra ever since the latter claimed Nandini the Celestial Cow and fought a battle in which Viswamitra was defeated. The enmity continued till once both the Rishis cursed each other to become birds and finally Brahma had to intervene and convert them back as human beings) Agastya Muni satisfied Maheswara with ruthless penance for several years and secured boons of longevity for twenty five crores of years as long as thousand lives of Brahmas. The boon also covered that whosoever worshipped him for seven days for seven years with ‘Arghya’ or offering water addressing the Muni along with charities of a white cow and calf, silver vessel, and white clothes as follows would be blessed with good health, good Form, and contentment: Kaashapushpa prateekaasha Agni Maruta Sambhava, Mitraavarunayoha putra kumbhayoney Namostutey/ The first Arghya would provide Good Form, the second one Bhuvarkloka and the third Swarloka.]

Heartily contented about the erstwhile Ikshvaku Vamasa King Nimi, his maha yagjna, Vasishtha purohita, their mutual shaapaas, Mitra Varuna janma, and Pururava janma as the next Ikshvaku King, Lakshmana got more and more curious and asked Shri Rama who in turn explained as follows: ‘Raghushreshtha! As Mitra and Varuna Devatas combined veerya was collected in the kumbha and two maha tejasvi brahmanas emerged and both were subsequently became Rishis. From the kumbha, Bhagavan Agastya emerged first but the one who emerged later denied that Mitra that he was not his son and walked off! Mitra’s semen was set in the kumbha first, then was deposited that of Varuna and after some time elapsed Mitra Varuna’s combined veerya came out as Vasishtha Mahamuni the subsequent Ikshvaku vamsha raja purohita. Soumya Lakshmana! Even well before King Ikshvaku’s king ship, Brahmarshi Vasishtha was the Raja purohita [Brahma Purana stated that Vaivashva Manu had Ikshvaaku, Nabhaga, Dhrushta, Sharyaayi, Narishyanta, Praamshu, Arishta, Karusha and Prushajghna] But now, Brahmarshi Vasishtha having been reborn again, Nimi came to know of this new and latest development of Vasishtha’s new and renewed birth. Lakshmana! Listen of this interesting development now: Raja Nimi being ‘videha’ still alive though not physically without panchendriyas but with mind and thinking capacity with praana the vital energy approached Manishi- Rishi and having requested him took deeksha for performing an yagjna and completed it successfully. Having thus completed asked Bhrigu Maharshi who assured that he could revive his physical form once again. Nimi was excited and along with Bhrigu Maharshi, devaas too were pro-cooperative. King Nimi was excited : Evamuktah Suraaiah sarvairnimeschataabruvat, netreshu sarvabhitaanaam vaseya Surasattamaah/ Baadhamityeva vibudhaa Nimeshchatatadaabruvan, netreshu sarva bhutaanaam Vaayubhutacharishyasi/ Tvatkrite cha Nimishyanti chakshuumshi Prithiveepate, vaayubhuten charataa vishraamaartham muhurmuuh/ As devaas assured Videha Nimi at the instance of Bhrihu Maharshi, King Nimi was excited to visualize ‘samasta praanikoti’ moving about. The assurance to the videha Nimi welcomed the devaas, who on their arrival helped the Videha Deha of the King and performed ‘aarani mathana’ or churning of fire sticks with appropriate vedic mantras with force. Mathanaanmithirityaarhurjjanaajjanakodbhavat, yasmaad videhaat sambhuto Vaidehastu tatah smitah/ Evam Videha raajascha Jaakah purvakobhavat, Mithisnaam mahaateejaastenaayam Mauthilobhavat/ As in the ancient past, ‘mantrokchaarana purvakahomaa’, Nimi’s ‘putra utpatti mathana’ began as in the past and Mithi was born. Lakshmana! Thus King Nimi of our Ikshvaaku vamsha too got perpetuated from king to king.’ Thus Shri Rama explained the historic background of Ikshvaaku Raja parampara to Lakshmana as he was too curious to learn of Ikshvaaku Rajas who had in the past had rather disregarded with the ‘praja vyavahaaraas’ with their own pursuits.

Bhavishya Purana explains "After the Pralay in Treta Yuga, King Sudarshan returned from Himalaya and revived Ayodhya Puri and thanks to the and the Holy Sages. King Sudarshan ruled for thousands of years and in course of Time, his son King Dilip initiated a new generation and King Raghu heralded the Surya Vamsha or the Raghu Vamsha. King Raghu's grandson Dasharatha had the unique privilege of securing Lord Shri Rama, the 'Avatar' of Bhagavan Vishnu. Surya Vamsha dominated from Shri Ram's son Kusha downward for hundreds of generations thereafter and the Kings were by and large virtuous, engaged in Yagnas and Agni Karyas, charities and the preservation of Dharma. Padma Purana is quoted: Vaivasvata Manu had ten sons, viz. Ila, Ikshvaaku, Kushanaabha, Arishta, Dhrushta, arishyant, Karusha, Mahabali Sharyati, Prushaghna, Naabhaga and Ambarisha. By dint of relentless Tapasya, Vaivasvata secured the boon from Brahma of becoming the Supreme Administrator of Prithvi of high virtue and Fortune and thus he became the First Manu Ever! Ila also became ambitious and wandered several places and by mistake entered the 'Sharavana' Garden, little knowing that who ever entered the Sharavana would instantly turn into a woman as per the instructions of Parameswara where Shiva Deva was alone with Devi Parvati. Even outside the Sharavana, Ila as a woman was attracted to Budha, the son of Chandra (Moon). Ila's brother Ikshvaku was worried about the disappearance of Ila and having realised the fact that any male entering the Sharavana would be converted as a female and that Ila also would have been converted like wise. Ikshvaku prayed to Shiva and as directed Ikshvaku announced Ashvamedha Yagna so that Ila as a female could be identified since the brave Ila would be definitely attracted to the Ashvamedha Yagna and the challenge of holding the horse. Indeed the Plan of Ikshvaku worked well and Ila was identified as the 'wife' of Budha, the son of Chandra. The female Ila became a Kimpurush for six months and as a woman for six months as per the boon of Shiva. As a Kimpurush, Ila also known as Sudyumna gave birth to three sons Utkal, Gaya and Haritashwa and they became the Kings of Utkal (Orissa), Gaya, and Haritashwa or Kuru. Ikshvaku became the King of Madhyadesha who begot hundred sons half of whom ruled the northern side of Meru and the others the Southern side. Kakustha was the eldest son of Ikshvaku and in that lineage was born Yuvanashwa and his great grandson was the famed Kuvalashva who killed the notorious demon Dundhumara. It was in this lineage that the illustrious Mandhata who was the Chakravarti of the Universe. In his lineage were the famous Purukutsa, Muchukunda, Harischandra, Dilip, Bhagiratha who brought the Sacred Ganga to Earth, Nabhaga, Ambarisha, Raghu, Dasaratha and the Incarnation of Lord Vishnu, the Epic Hero Shri Rama who killed Ravana and his able brothers Bharata, Lakshmana and Shatrughna; the Surya Vamsha of the clan of Ikshvaku was further extended by Kusha and Lava. Brahma Purana states: Vaivaswa had nine sons viz. Ikshvaaku, Naabhaga, Dhrushta, Sharyati, Narishyanta, Praamshu, Arishta, Karusha and Prushaghna. Once Vaivaswa performed one Yagna with the objective of begetting a daughter and Maharshi Mirtaavaruna was the Chief Priest; as the Maharshi offered a powerful oblation in the Agni Kunda, there emerged a maiden whom the Manu addressed as Ila and she took the permission of Matraavaruna and went near the Manu; the Manu blessed her, named her as Sudyumna and instructed her to expand Manu vamsha. She met Budha Deva in marriage and gave birth to Puru; she gave birth further to three sons viz. Utkal (whose Kingdom was the present Orissa), Gaya (the Capital of Gaya desha) and Vinataashva. Puru's Kingdom was distributed into parts to accommodate the nine sons too. Ikshvaaku became the Ruler of Madhyadesha. Ila and Sudyumna was one and the same but alternatively as a woman and as a man for each six months. Naashyanta's son was Shaka; Nabhaaga begot Ambarisha; Dhrishta and Karusha begot sons of the same name; Pramshu was issueless; Sharyati got twin children-a boy named Anarta and a girl Sukanya who was wedded to Chyavana Maharshi. Anarta begot Raiva, and the latter's son was Raivata, also known as Kakudmi who became the King of Kushasthala. Once Raivata accompanied by his daughter Revati visited Brahma loka and the latter was at that time engrossed in 'Gandharva Gaana'/ the songs of Gandharva; after the singing session, Brahma when told of the purpose of their visit viz. to bless his daughter of a suitable match for her, Brahma smiled and stated that during his visit to Brahma loka, Yugas rolled by but blessed Revati to return to their place and that she would definitely wed a Mahatma.

On return, the father and daughter discovered a complete change of their Place in Dwapara Yuga and on making local enquiries found Balarama, the elder brother of Krishnaas a suitable life-partner for Devi Revati; thus the age-difference of Balarama and Devi Revati was a full Yuga!]

Sargas Fifty Eight and Fifty Nine

King Yayati's yagina upset as Purohita Vasishtha was late-mutual 'shaapaas' as Yayati was bodiless and Vasishtha was 'vayuvileena' - Brahma arranges that joint sperm of Mitra Varunas to revive Vasishtha.

Lakshmana having heard Shri Rama's narration of how some of the Kings ticked off as in the case of Maharshis and faced consequences, Rama clarified that there were instances as to how even Shukracharya's caliber too hurled off shapaas to Kings of virtue too and cited the example of Nahushiputra Raja Yayati too for instance as that Raja had performed great service to his prajas always but had received considerable fame. Then he narrated the incident in detail to Lakshmana. 'King Yayati was married to Devi Sharmishtha whom he liked much due to her qualities of virtue despite her daitya parentage as her father was Vrishaparva daitya. He was also wedded to Devi Devayani, the daughter of Shukracharya the daitya guru. Sharmishtha's son was Puru while Devayani's son was Yadu. As the two sons of Yayati came of age, Yadu the son of Devayani one day complained to his mother Devayani that the father Yayati was always attracted to Shramishtha who was reluctant to develop nearness to Puru. Devayani too who had been noticing the differential treatment meted to her had burst out in jealousy as contrary to the equal attention to both the queens. Reacting sharply to her son Yadu's remarks, Devayani got worked up violently ignited with extreme distrust cried out and having reached Yayati shouted at him threatening that she along with her son Yadu would jump in to 'agnijvaalas' as both were feeling that they were being maltreated. Yayati was stunned at such allegation that indeed he had been treating both the queens equitably and why this flare of terrible inferiority complex and flare up jealousy! He tried his very best to pacify Devayani but to no avail as she kept on howling. Then as she desired, Devayani's father Shuracharya appeared on the scene and asked Devayani as to what was the matter! She replied in extreme rage as her body was shivering with anger and anguish: Muni Shreshtha father! I feel like jumping into agni jwaalaas or leap into endless ocean depths and die atonce as my husband would care a speck for me as he is deeply enamored and infatuated with his co wife. You cannot even imagine as by dear son too had been feeling miserable and is seeking to accompany me in my jumps into fiery flames or deep oceans. Having heard his dear daughter's 'akrandanaas', Shukracharya had reeled off his anger: Yasmaanmaama jaanoshe Naahusha twam duraatmacaan, vayasaa jarayaa jeernah shaithilyamupayaasyasi/ Nahusha Kumara ! As you have proved your self, may your body be crumbled to 'vridhhapya' as with a tattered body!' So saying Daitya Guru Shukraacharya left in anger.

As Shukracharya gave the shaapa to his own son in law, King Yayati was stunned. Then he asked Yadu who too was with Devayani along with Yadu requested : Yadu my son! You are a dharma jnaata. Is it not possible for you to take over my 'vaardhyka dasha' for a few years and surely I would be able to repay you eventually. I am still in my middle age still fond of 'vishaya vaancchhas' as you could take over my 'vridhhapya' for now as you have a considerable life ahead. The ever cunning Yadu replied: Pita shri! You may perhaps approach your much dearer putrashri Puru. Then King Yayati approached Puru with a similar request and Puru replied most politely: 'Dhanyosmyanugruheetosmi tava sthitah/ Respected father! By performing this small and negligible duty should be carried out comfortably'. Then Yayati was truly pleased whereafter Yayati performed sahasra yagnas and ruled over the kingdom for thousand years. Thereafter one day King Yayati called Puru and said: Pratisschaasmi maha baaho shasavasya pratigrihaat, tvaam chaahamabhishekshyaami preetiya kuto naraadhipam/ Evamuktvaa sutum purum tyayaatirnahushaatmajah, Devayaaniik sutam kruddho Rajaa vaakyamuvaachah/ Rakshstvam mayaa jaatah kshatrarupo duraasadah, pratihamsi mamaagjnaam tvam prajaaarthe viphalobhava/ Maha baho

Puru ! you had literally followed my instructions for which I am extremely pleased. I am hereby performing your rajyaabhisheka!’ Then calling Yadu, Yayati shouted angrily: I had made fun of my having been turned to old age. You may now forget fulfillment of your ambition to kingship and not even your progeny. I am your father, your guru too yet you had severely made fun of me ; now you would be born as a bhayankara rakshsa and your progeny too would be ungrateful to you far worse than yourself. Thereafter, Yayati having lived for long left for swarga loka. Later Puru shifted his rajadhani to Kashirajya Pratishthanapura while Yadu wandered in krounchavana.

[Vishkeshana on Yayaati from a)Maha Bhagavata Purana and b) Devi Bhagavata Purana

a) Yayati, the son of Nahusha became the King as Nahusha was transformed into a python due to his Maharashi’s shaapaas for his arrogance. Yayāti’s elder brother, Yati, was initially given the kignship but took to sanyaasashrama and Yayayati as a king considerable public appreciation. Eventually one day, Sharmishtha, daughter of the Danava Vishwaparva, and Devayani, daughter of Daitya Guru Shukracharya were bathing in a sarovara of the kingdom. After bathing, Sharmishtha confuses Devayani’s vastras by mistake exchanged. Devayani returned and shouted while jibing at their parentships as Sharmishtha as the daughter of Shukracharya and Vrishparva as their King. With the help of her servants, Sharmishtha threw the semi naked Devayani into a well. Later Yayati, son of Nahusha, helped Devayani to climb out of it. Eventually Yayati was facinated to both Sharmishtha and Devayani and their respetive fathers agreed. In due course, Devayani gave birth to two sons Yadu and Turvasu while Sharmishtha begot three sons Druhyu, Anu and Puru. In due course mutual jealousies and quarrels got intensified.Eventually Devayani felt that that her husband more ad more of time with Sharmishtha and complains to her father. The enraged Shkracharya cursedd Yayati with premature old age in punishment for inflicting such pain upon his daughter. Eventually Yayati asked to let one of the sons to agree to swap his old age while Yadu heckled at the request while Puru assured of his filial duty and agreed heartily. Yayati enjoyed the youth and attained swarga but cursed adu and made Pura the next King.

b) Sukracharya cursed King Yayati. The Sage’s daughter Devayani married the King but objected to live with his another wife Sarmishtha but still the King did not comply. The father of Devayani Sukracharya cursed that Yayati would become old and impotent. As the King entreated for forgiveness, the Sage’s curse was diluted that if any of his sons could take the position of Yayati’s old form instead, then he could regain his youth. The youngest son of Sarmishtha, Puru who bore his father’s curse and after Yayati, he became a youthful King, the ancestor of Panadavas and Kauravas. Veda Vyasa affirmed that being an upright King, Yayati was also in a position to reverse the curse of the Danava Guru but restrained from doing so and quietly conceded to assume the old age as after all he did not commit a great sin in asking his another wife Sarmishtha to bed; equally wonderful was the preparedness of Puru to take on the curse of the Sage and sacrificed his own youth for thousand years!]

As Shri Rama explained to Lakshmana about the utmost importance of an ideal kingship by always keeping a pulse on the opinions of common 'prajaas' and cited the lapses or successes in this context with special reference to Ikshvaaku vamsha, and had since convened the regular 'praja sabha' as representing a cross section of the Kingdom. In one such a sabha, one day arrived Bhṛigu Putra Chyavana Muni. The Maha Muni entered the Raja Sabha along with over hundred tapasvi Munis too. They gifted huge pots of 'maha punya nadi jalaas' and abundant 'phala-pushpa-kandamuulas' to the King and prajas. In turn King Rama gifted vastras-shawls-and priceless aabharanas to their respective strees, vidyardhis and their ashrama vaasis in profusion. Later on after exchange of mutual pleasantries, Rama asked Maha Muni Chyavana had pleasantly enquired: kim āgamanakāryaṁ vaḥ kim karomi tapodhanāḥ, ājñāpyo 'haṁ maharṣīṇāṁ sarvakāmakaraḥ sukham/ idaṁ rājyaṁ ca sakalaṁ jīvitam ca hṛdi sthitam, sarvam etad dvijārthaṁ me satyam etad bravīmi vaḥ/ tasya tadvacanaṁ śrutvā sādhuṇvādo mahān abhūt, ṛṣīṇāṁ ugratapasāṁ yamunātīravāsinām/ Maharshis! [Vishleshana on Maharshi Chyavana a) Maha Bhagavata Purana and b) Chyavana’s encounter with Parrot Kunjal

a) Manu Vivaswanta gave birth to ten sons including Ikshvaku, Saryati, Nabhaga and Prushaghna. Saryati gave birth to Sukanya. The latter when she came of age visited a forest once along with her companions and playfully pried into a bush while amused about what she thought were glowing worms. But they were actually the eyes of a Muni named Chyavana performing Tapas with eyes wide open and in the process got blinded. The girl got confused when blood oozed out from the bush and ran away. The blinded Muni realised that a young princess did the indiscretion and gave a Shaap that the entire military force of the King should suffer with stoppage of their excretions. Meanwhile Sukanya conveyed to the King of her playful rashness and of the Muni’s shaap. King Saryati along with Sukanya approached the Muni and prostrated to him seeking unreserved pardon; the King offered the young Sukanya to wed the old Muni so that she could serve the Muni in his blindness. In course of time, Sukanya got used to family life serving the blind Muni in his daily puja and other chores. She excelled herself in her ‘Pativratya’ or undisputed devotion to her husband. One day, the two Ashvini Kumars who were the Physicians of Devas passed by the Ashram of Chyavana Muni and were highly impressed with the selfless and ideal service being performed by Sukanya as an example of Pativratiya. They cured the Muni’s blindness and the grateful Chyavana offered a boon to the Ashvini Kumars. The latter desired that they would like to have access to ‘Amrit’ which was provided to Devas but was denied to them. Chyavana Muni made a request to Indra but he refused. The Muni took up this as an insult to him and performed an elaborate Yagna in favour of Brahma Deva and the latter who was pleased by the Muni’s Yagna instructed Ashvini Kumars to accord the same status to Devas and thus have access to the drink of Amrita ever since.

b) Sage Chyavan of Bhargava Vamsha undertook an extensive ‘Tirtha Yatra’ (religious tour) visiting Sacred Places of Worship nearby the Holy Rivers Narmada, Sarasvati and Godavari. He reached Omkareshwar Tirtha and having taken bath and worship, rested under a tree on the banks of the Tirtha; he overheard the conversation of a Parrot named Kunjal with its sons viz. Ujjwal, Samujjwal, Vijjwal and Kapinjal. The Sage learnt from the conversation of Kunjal and sons that they were ardent devotees and that Kunjal was a highly enlightened bird. By the evening there was a family union of the parrots for food and rest in their nest over the tree, under which the Sage sat. As Kunjal desired to recite Stories to them, the elder son Ujjwal asked the father to explain about Gyan (Enlightenment), followed by Dhyaan (meditation), Vratas (Conducted Worships), Punya (The fruits of Good Works) and hundred names of Bhagavan. About Gyan, Kunjal explained that there was a State of Bliss called Kaivalya or Moksha which was a Unique Form of Extreme Happiness devoid of ‘Duhkha’ or Sorrow, unreachable by normal vision or feeling. The Bird said: Yatha deepo nivaasastho nischalo Vaayuvartitah, Prajjvalan-naashayet sarvamandhakaaram mahaamatye/ taddosha viheenatma bhavatyeva niraashraah/ (Such Kaivalya State of Gyaanatma which is spotless, steady and holdless is like a lustrous mass of Lamp which wipes out darkness around). That luminosity is the stable origin of Universal Existence called ‘Atma’ or the Super Soul which has no friend or enemy, no pleasure nor grief and no attachment nor greed. The Soul is devoid of senses, feelings, impulses and reactions. The awareness of that Singular Super Soul is Gyana. Now Dhyana is the meditation of that Super Soul known by countless names and epithets and is in either ‘Niraakara’ Form or ‘Akaara’ Form. ‘Nirakara Dhyana’ is possible only to Yogis who could visualise the Abstract Form through the Vision of Gyana. The ‘Saakara Rupa’ assumes Human Form with recognisable limbs; for instance Bhagavan Vishnu is easily identified with four arms with Shankhu, Chakra, Gada and Saranga with golden head gear and silk dress etc. and facilitates Dhayana. Vratas are formatted worships as per the Deity targetted, the specific day as scheduled according to Maasa- Paksha- Tithi- Vaara- Nakshatra and as configured. For instance Vratas like Jaya, Vijaya, Papanashini, Jayanti, and Manoraksha Vratas are executed on Ekadashi / Dwadashi days; there are also regular Vratas like Krishnashtami which are of repetitive nature. There are innumerable Vratas observed all over Bharat as per specified formats and each one of these has far reaching impact in diminishing the burden of sins and improving the ‘Punya’ Accounts].

Sarga Sixty One to follow:

As Shri Rama enquired of the ‘kaarya vivarana’ for which Chyavana Maha Muni had arrived with co Munis, Chyavana explained: In the Samuchi desha there had been a severe problem and explained as follows: In the Satya Yuga of the remote past, there was a buddhimaan daitya who was vipra bhaka and ‘sharanaagata vatsala’ ever engaged in ‘dharmaanushthaana’ and a renowned Shiva bhakta. Bhagavan Parama Shiva was pleased with his bhakti and gifted a ‘shakti shaali shula’ stating that he could possess with him for self defence and as long as it should not be utilised against brahmana- devataas; Bhagavan Shiva further asserted that he could destroy all his enemies and get back to him. Then the daitya sought a further request to Bhagavan that the shula be given to his putra and he consented. Subsequently the asura shreshtha named Madhu got a gigantic sundara bhavana and started living with a Mahaprabha Kumbhanasi the daughter of Vishvaivasu lineage. tasyāḥ putro mahāvīryo lavaṇo nāma dāruṇaḥ, bālyāt prabhṛti duṣṭātmā pāpāny eva samācarat/ taṁ putraṁ durvinītaṁ tu dr̥ṣṭvā duḥkhasamanvitaḥ, madhuḥ sa śokaṁ āpede na cainaṁ kiṁ cid abravīt/ sa viḥāya imaṁ lokaṁ praviṣṭo varuṇālayam, śūlaṁ niveśya lavaṇe varam tasmai nyavedayat/ Madhu’s son was Lavana a ruthless ‘bhayankara dushtatma’ unpopular as a born sinner. As Maha Munis led by Bhṛigu Putra Chyavana described about the Lavanaasura, Shri Rama asked them as to what were the ‘ahaara aachaara vyavahaaraas’, then they replied that Lavana was fond of humans especially of the raw flesh of Munis. His ‘aachara vyavaharaas’ were full of cruelty, brutallity and horror. He would normally reside in Madhuvanaas. He could daily kill thousands of simha-vyaaghra-mriga-pakshi-manuhyas. At his hungry times, he would stand ready to attack like Yama Raja and whatever would be handy.’ Then Rama assured the Muni ganaas to get concered any further and to be freed of praana bhaya any further. Then he asked his brothers as to who could kill and free from the menace of Lavanaasura forthwith. He smiled and asked Bhrata or Shatrughna! Bharata had readily replied: respected brother Shri Rama! I should most certainly kill Lavanaasura with ease and as such my share be kindly reserved. Then Shatrughna jumped up from his throne and said : ‘Already my middle brother Yashasvi Lakshmana had performed too many rakshasa samhaaraas to his massive credit. As far brother Bharata was concerned he should have been tired off all these years what with having missed Rama, the unending misery there of quite apart from the even demanding responsibility of administering the Ayodhya Maha Rajya. As such, may I be entrusted with this task of destroying the Nishachara Lavanaasura.’ Then King Shri Rama agreed to Shatrughna’s volunteering to take up the task and smilingly declared: ‘ Dear Shatrughna, my youngest dear brother! ‘Be it so as you have volunteered. Once you would get rid of this Lavanaasura, I would entrust the responsibility of Kingship of Madhu Nagara on the banks of the ever Sacred River Yamuna. I would not be interested in destroying Madhara Nagara and annex that kingdom as that kind of action would be blame worthy and immoral attracting naraka loka nivasa. On your killing Lavnaasura which you are blessed most certainly with, while then Mahatma Raja Purohita and brahmana brindaas would perform your Rajyaabhisheka straight away.

Stanzas of Sarga Sixty Three as followed:

As Shri Rama addressed Shatrughna to assure rajyabhisheka to him for killing Lavanaasura, the latter felt too shy and replied: Kakutsa Nareshwara! I am not only feeling embarassed but also feel that my words might be improper and ill justified by the norms of dharma and nyaaya. Yet I could not defy your ruling. Veera! your words would be those of veda shasanaas . Actually I should not have offered myself as elders might take my egoistic words to be of bravado. But now what all had been stated ought to be obeyed and complied with’. As Shatrughna stated thus, Rama was truly impressed and pleased. Then he asked Lakshmana to have the rajyaabhisheja saamagri assuring that he would have the Shatrughnaa’s rajaabhisheka performed . He also instructed Purohita, vaidika vidwans, and an advance alert to the pura vaasis. Then Shatrughna’s rajyaabhisheka got initiated and smasta pura vaasis were excited to participate. The scene was reminded of Devas led by Indra performed Maha Skanda’s ‘ Deva senapatitva’. Then Devis Kousalya, Sumatra and Kaikeyi were blissful. As Shatrughna’s rajyabhisheka was on progress then Yamuna teera vasis were assured that Duratma Lavaasura was already killed by Shatrughna. Following the abhisheka, Shri Rama addressed Shatrughna: ‘Soumya! I am herewith blessing you with a divya maha baana with which Lavanaasura would be destroyed with for ever. adṛśyaḥ sarva -bhūtānāṁ tenāyaṁ hi śarottamaḥ, sṛṣṭaḥ krodhābhibhūtena vināśārthaṁ durātmanoḥ, madhukaitabhayor vīra vighāte vartamānayoḥ/ sraṣṭukāmena lokāṁs trīṁs tau cānena hatau yudhi, anena śaramukhyena tato lokāṁś cakāra saḥ/ Recall that in the remote past, the ever invincible Maha Vishnu relaxing on the Kshera Sagara while none of devaas and other celestials could vision them ever as Maharnava shaayi. When Madhu Kaitabhas were killed by a single arrow in the context of Hayagriva Swarupa and thereafter sarva loka rachana was initiated.’ This indeed that very ayudha!

[Vishleshana on Madhu Kaitabhaas vide Devi BhagavataPurana :

When Maha Vishnu was in Yoga Nidra in a comfortable posture of lying on the bed of Ananta Naga, two Demon brothers named Madhu and Kaitabha were born from the wax of Maha Vishnu's ears. Their birth was a mystery and unknown as felt by the brothers themselves whose physical forms grew fast and strong day by day, even as they were playing in the ocean surroundings, killing various kinds of aquatic species for food or play. Coming of age in course of time, the Demon brothers with huge bodies and proportionate common sense too, realised that there must have been a Massive Force which alone could have given birth to them. From the air, they heard a sound 'Vagbija' the Seed Mantra (Seed 'Bija' and 'Vak' the Speech of Goddess Sarasvati). To start with fun, but later on with maturity, they kept on practising the sound for years together, little realising the impact of the Mantra's repetition. In fact, they became so obsessed with the Mantra that they neither had food nor sleep, but with full concentration and utmost sincerity. 'The Parasakti's Voice emerged from the Skies that the Danava brothers would be invincible in the entire Universe provided they were united and fight two-some. Blessed by Maha Devi, the two brothers became swollen with pride and eventually attacked Lord Brahma Himself. On realising that they were unconquerable, Brahma who was seated on the lotus-head sprouting from Maha Vishnu's navel, tried the age-old four means. He tried to use 'Sama (Counselling) 'Dana' (Gifting or bribing), 'Bheda' (put one against another) and finally 'Danda' (Punish), but neither of these media appeared feasible; he ran away to Vaikuntha for protection but Maha Vishnu was in Yoga Nidra. Brahma had thus prayed to Yoga Nidra Devi to prompt Maha Vishnu to wake up. It was actually Maha Maya's discretion which mattered as Vishnu Himself could not regain consciousness on His own. The concentrate of 'Tamo Guna' - Maha Maya - was earnestly prayed to by Brahma, as this was a prestige issue for him and the entire domain of Gods! Maha Maya left Vishnu free and He was fully woken up to face the challenge of the hour, viz. to either manipulate or massacre the brothers, Madhu and Kaitabha. Lord Vishnu invited the brothers to fight with Himself. The fight continued for five thousand years but without a tangible result. As the Demons were clashing one after another and Lord Vishnu was in duel singly, the latter asked the brothers to give a break as it was against Justice that they took alternate positions while He was alone. During the break, Vishnu prayed to Maha Sakti and complained that the fight was unfair and that they were also given by Her the boon of voluntary death or 'Svacchanda Maranam'. Maha Sakti realised the lacuna in the duel and advised Vishnu to give boons to the brothers so that a way out would automatically open up. Meanwhile, Maha Sakti agreed to be present at the fight in physical form and disturb the concentration of the Demon brothers by casting Her fake amorous looks. This encouraged Vishnu to convey the Demons that their duel with Him was of great quality and thus He was ready to give boons to them. They got into the trap as they boasted that they were prepared to give boons to Him instead of the other way around. Vishnu grabbed the opportunity and said that He be given the boon of their death by killing each other! The brothers gave an excuse that the boon could be given only provided there was no water or wetness in the Ocean. Vishnu expanded his thighs manifold so that there could be adequate space for the killings. The Demons expanded their bodies too and thus the thighs of Vishnu and the body sizes of the brothers kept on increasing horizontally and vertically proportionately. Finally, the illusion created by Vishnu proved stronger and the brothers had to yield to their own killings. Thus Maha Sakti who assumed human physique and paved the way to the killings of the Danava brothers without breaking the Rules of 'Dharma Yuddha', partly by trickery and partly by Maya or Illusion.]

When I killed Ravanaasura, I did not have to utilise this amogha baana a that could have destroyed too many enemies. Normally, as and when enemies encounter and challenge Lavana then only he would pull out his shula awarded by Maha Dva other wise he would keep it safe in puja griha.yadā tu yuddham ākāṅkṣan kaś cid enaṁ samāhvayet, tadā śūlam grhītvā tad bhasma rakṣaḥ karoti tam/ sa tvam puruṣaśārdūla tam āyudhavivarjitam, apraviṣṭa - puram pūrvam dvāri tiṣṭha dhṛtāyudhaḥ/ apraviṣṭam ca bhavanam yuddhāya puruṣarṣabha, āhvayethā

Brother Shatrughna! Even before Lavanaasura could enter the rakshasa griha, attack him by sheer surprise with this ‘amogha baana’ and assuredly you should be comfortably destroy him. Otherwise with the Shiva shula it would be simply impossible to reach the asura to yamaloka!’

As was briefed to Shatrughna as above, Shri Rama further explained that some four thousand horsemen, two thousand charioteers, hundred elephants and related shastra astra arrowsmen as well as sufficient food materials besides nartaki-vadya brindas for your vijaya yatra. The sena would be too enthusiastic as they and their families would be contented with dhana dhanya surpluses. ato hṛṣṭajanākīr -nām prasthāpya mahatīm camūm, eka eva dhanuṣpānis tad gaccha tvam madhor vanam/ yathā tvām na prajānāti gacchantāṁ yuddhakāṅkṣiṇam, lavaṇas tu madhoḥ putras tathā gaccher aśaṅkitaḥ/ na tasya mṛtyur anyo ’sti kaścid dhi puruṣarṣabha darśanam yo ’bhigaccheta sa vadhyo lavaṇena hi/ Thus the well contented and well fed and strong soldiers of sizeable magnitude would be ahead and well backed up by you and you would have only enjoy your Yuddha Yatra to gladden your heart. Shatrughna! You would have to merely utilise only a single arrow as advised by me especially the Madhu Putra Lavanaasura should not be aware of your vijaya yatra and most certainly about the surprise attack plan to be locked up all within your mind. Purushottama Shatrughna! I had already explained to you, once Lavanasura faces you with his shula, further happenings could be disastrous. Soumya! Let this ‘greeshma ritu’ be over and varshakaala arrive, that should be the appropriate season for Lavanaasura vadha kaala nirnaya! Let the Shatrugna sena reach ganga teera on the other side meanwhile, and you may make your move with your dhanush alone with quietude.’ As Shri Rama advised elaborating his brief, Shatrughna initiated his action by calling for the senapati and instructing the details, paid pranaamas to Devis Kousalya, Sumitra and Kaikeyi, made ‘pradakshina-paadaabhivandana’ to Shri Rama-Bharata-Lakshmanas, prostrations to Raja Purohita Brahmarshi Vasitha, and finally once again to Shri Ramaalingana and made his ‘shubha prasthaana’ from Ayodhyapuri to the ‘Gangaatata’ along with the sena.

Then the Maharshi explained as follows: 'Among you purvaja rajas there was one named Sudasa whose descendant was Veerasaha alias Mitrasaha an 'atyanta dharmaatma'. Once Sudasaputra Mitrasha as a youth went on a hunting spree and witnessed two rakshasas who were berserk devouring thousand and odd animals yet renamed hungry. Sudasa went wild with anger and having raised his dhanurbaanaas and killed one of the rakshasas. Then the second rakshasa shouted that Sudasa putra that at no provocation his friend was killed and hence he should certainly take revenge and having asserted thus disappeared by the 'rakshas maya vidya'. In course of time Mitrasaha became Ayodhya Raja and performed Ashwamedha Yajña as Raja Purohita Vasishtha by his tapobala had well guarded the ashvamedha from rakshas elements. That ashvamedha yajña was cotiued for thousand years. At the Yajña samaapti samana, that yuvaavastha kaala Mitrasha's killing of one rakshas's second friend then assumed the form of Vasishtha raaja purohita's maya swarupa and asked King Mitrasaha: adya yajñāvasānānte sāmīṣaṁ bhojanam mama, dīyatām iti śīghraṁ vai nātra kāryā vicāraṇā/ tac chrutvā vyāhṛtaṁ vākyam rakṣasā kāmarūpiṇā, bhakṣasaṁskārakuśalam uvāca pṛthivīpatiḥ/ haviṣyam sāmīṣaṁ svādu yathā bhavati bhojanam, tathā kuruṣva śīghraṁ vai paritūṣyed yathā guruḥ/ śāsanāt pāṛthivendrasya sūdaḥ sambhṛāntamānasah, sa ca rakṣaḥ punas tatra sūdaveṣam

King Mitrasaha along with his dharmapatni queen Madayanti kept before the real Brahmarshi Vasishtha who arrived by then. The latter realised that the havishanna was full of ‘maanava maamsa’ and went wild with uncontrollable and seething anger; he shouted : Raja! Even on the very night of Shatrughna's arrival at Maharshi Valmiki's ashrama and latter's narration of the ancient Ikshvaaku King's yagya kaaryas that Devi Sita was blessed with the birth of twin sons. At that very midnight, the elderly women of the annex to the ashram approached Maharshi Valmiki and requested him to the 'sutika pradesha' and provide 'rakshasa vinaasha raksha vyavastha'. kuśamuṣṭim upādāya lavaṁ caiva tu sa dvijaḥ, vālmīkiḥ pradadau tābhyāṁ rakṣāṁ bhūtavinaśinīm/ yas tayoh pūrvajo jātaḥ sa kuśair mantrasaṁskṛtaiḥ, nirmārjanīyas tu bhavet kuśa ity asya nāmataḥ/ yaś cāparo bhavet tābhyāṁ lavena susamāhitaḥ, nirmārjanīyo vṛddhābhir lavaś ceti sa nāmataḥ/ Then Maharshi Valmiki collected binds of kushaagra collections together for 'mantra yukta raksha vidhi upadesha' to the new arrival 'baalakas' and asked the elderly stree who facilitated the 'sukha prasava' to sprinkle the rakshodakas' on the mother Devi Sita. As that 'marjana karyakrama' had been successfully done by the elderly vridha stree as prescribed, the baby boy who emerged foremost was named by the Maharshi as Kusha, and after the marjana of the second arrival boy was named as Lava, thus the 'nama karana samskaara' was concluded by the Pitaamaha samaana Valmiki Maharshi. evaṁ kuśalavau nāmnā tāv ubhau yamajātakau, matkṛtabhyāṁ ca nāmahyāṁ khyātiyuktau bhaviṣyataḥ/ te rakṣāṁ jagṛhus tām ca munihastāt samāhitāḥ, akurvaṁś ca tato rakṣāṁ taylor vigatakalmaṣāḥ/ tathā tām kriyamāṇāṁ tu rakṣāṁ gotraṁ ca nāma ca, saṁkīrtanam ca rāmasya sītāyāḥ prasavau śubhau/ ardharātre tu śatrughnaḥ śuśrāva sumahat priyam, parṇaśālāṁ gato rātrau diṣṭyā diṣṭyeti cābravīt/ avīt/ In this manner, the Maharshi asserted the twin brothers named Kusha and Lava would be famed on 'bhumandala' for ever! Then as vridha stree were stating in high pitched voices about the names of Shri Rama and Devi Sita, their gotra, vamsha, parentage details at the 'naama karana samayocchaaranas' as stated by the Maharshi, Shatrughna was indeed thrilled. Subsequently and soon enough, Shatrughna approached Devi Sita at the parna shaala and asserted: 'Mother Sita Devi! I am indeed highly fortunate and feel ecstatic to see and meet you and the Kusha Lava Putras too as of my personal privilege. May Almighty bless you for the soonest Rama Sita samagama with the chiranjevi Kusha Lavaas too!' Thereafter Satrugna having secured from Valmiki Maharshi and the all concerned proceeded along with Chavanaadi Munis for the most desirable destruction of Lavanaasura vadha!

On the way forward with the mission to ‘Lavanaasura Vadha’ Shatrughna enquired of the fuller details of Lavanaasura and the Maha Muni Chyavana explained that the most wretched and indescribable ‘dushta charyaas’ were countless, especially in reference to your Ikshvaaku vamsha King Mandhata, the Yuvanaashvaputra, the ‘loka prakhyaata maha paraakrami’, who had brought the entire Prithivi under his single control as the singular chakravarti. He then eventually desired to seek Deva Loka Vijaya. Then Indra knowing the mind of Mandhata and expressed his insinuations to Mandhata: rājā tvaṁ mānuṣe loke na tāvat puruṣarṣabha, akṛtvā pṛthivīm vaśyāṁ devarājyaṁ ihecchasi/ yadi vīra samagrā te medinī nikhilā vaśe, devarājyaṁ kuruṣveha sabhṛtyabalavāhanah/ indram evaṁ bruvāṇaṁ tu māndhātā vākyam abravīt, kva me śakra pratihataṁ śāsanam pṛthivītale/ tam uvāca sahasrākṣo lavaṇo nāma rākṣasaḥ, madhuputro madhuvane nājñāṁ te kurute ’nagha/ ‘Maha Raja Mandhata! How is it that you feel you could even ever imagine to conquer Indra Loka as you had still not conquered even the ‘vistaara bhuloka kingdoms’ even.’ As Mandhata asked as to who else still uncontrolled on earth, Indra specified ‘Madhuvana Madhuputra Lavanaasura’. As Mandhata was put to shame, he retreated from Indra Loka this his amathya, senapati and senas and back to martyas loka and attacked Madhu putra Lavanaasura. tataḥ prahasya lavaṇaḥ śūlaṁ jagrāha pāninā, vadhāya sānubandhasya mumocāyudham uttamam/ tac chūlaṁ dīpyamānaṁ tu sabhṛtyabalavāhanam, bhasmīkṛtya nṛpaṁ bhūyo lavaṇasyāgamat karam/ evaṁ sa rājā sumahān hataḥ sabalavāhanah, śūlasya ca balaṁ vīra aprameyam anuttamam/śvaḥ prabhāte tu lavaṇaṁ vadhiṣyasi na saṁśayaḥ,agrhitāyudham kṣipraṁ dhruvo hi vijayas tava/ The asura was amused and smilingly took to his hands the ‘Parama Shiva Kataakshasamyukta Maha Shula’ which as was hurled gained ‘prachanda vaayu teevrata’ and soon enough converted Mandhata and his vishaala sena to heaps of ash. Next morning, having spent the night proceeded to Madhavanas where Lavanaasura resided assuring that Shatrughna should be blessed to kill Lavanasura by the day.

By the next morning having been well equipped with bakshya padardhas and having crossed Yamuna River reached Madhu Vana Puri Dwara by the mid day, Shatrughna with his dhanur baanaas screamed very loudly as there were resounds returned from the skies challenging Lavanasura: tato dadarśa śatrughnam sthitaṁ dvāri dhṛtāyudham, tam uvāca tato rakṣaḥ kim anena kariṣyasi/ idṛśānām sahasrāṇi sāyudhānām narādhamā, bhakṣitāni mayā roṣāt kalam ākāṅkṣase nu gatoḥyasi/ āhāraś cāpy asaṁpūrṇo mamāyam puruṣādhama, svayam praviṣṭo nu mukham katham āsādyā durmate/ Then having seen Shatrughna with astra shasstras, the rakshasa replied: 'Naraadhama! As his entire personality was radiant with the essence of 'parama veerata' swelling out and across, Shatrughna replied: Oh coward Rakshadaadharma! Would you not like to choose 'Dvandva yuddha'. Beware! I happen to be the brother of Shri Rama who had uprooted Ravana'sura and his clan of followers. My very name is Shatrughna the shatru samhaara; now I have arrived to ensure your termination. Then the Rakshasa made a 'vikattaksha haahaas' and said: yes, Ravana was my maternal aunt Shurpanakha's brother; this is another provocation for me to avenge a prateekaara further. It was shameful that my aunt was put to shame despite her being a woman. na hatās ca hi me sarve paribhūtās tṛṇam yathā, bhūtās caiva bhaviṣyās ca yūyam ca puruṣādhamāḥ/ tasya te yuddhakāmasya yuddham dāsyāmi durmate, īpsitam yādṛṣam tubhyaṃ sajjaye yāvad āyudham/ tam uvācātha śatrughnaḥ kva me jīvan gamiṣyasi, durbalo 'py āgataḥ śatrur na muktavyaḥ kṛtātmanā/ yo hi viklavayā buddhyā prasaram śatrave dadau, sa hato mandabuddhitvād yathā kāpuruṣas tathā/ Once a naraadhama of your dirty clan would dare to fight with me, how indeed that golden opportunity be lost, after all! Durmate! You wish to fight with me, is it not so. Yes, I should grant your wish, let me raise and straighten my dhanush baanaas'. Then, Shatrughna asserted : 'Durmate! Now you ought to be left right into your own death trap. No buddhimaan purusha could ever lose an opportunity to the enemy's offer to get killed soon. Rakshasa! Look all around now for just once before your non-existence of Shri Raghunadha shatru!!

Shatrughna then continued addressing Lavanaasura: ' Rakshasa! Well before you were able to destroy the Veera Maha Purushas, especially of my clan like Chakravarti Mandhaata, then Shatrughna was not born by then unfortunately. Now the force of my arrows would be such as to reach you to Yama loka too soon. Duratma! Just as Deva Gandhrava Maharshi brindas were elated and heaved long sighs when lokakantaka Ravanaasura was killed by my revered elder brother Shri Rama, now 'vidvan bramana maha munis' would be personally gracing your duraachaaraas on them with your non existence and personally see you end to their greatest relief ! tvayi madbāṇanirdagdhe patite 'dya niśācara puram janapadam cāpi kṣemam etad bhaviṣyati/ adya madbāhuniṣkrāntaḥ śaro vajranibhānanaḥ, pravekṣyate te hṛdayam padmam aṃśur ivārkaḥ/ evam ukto mahāvṛkṣam lavaṇaḥ krodhamūrchitaḥ, śatrughnorasi cikṣepa tam sūraḥ śatadhācchinat/ Nishachara! Now my severe arrows like 'agni jvaalaas' should end up with your death blows as the Nagara- Jaanapada Prajas should celebrate with elation and relief. Once my 'hastagata baanaas' pierce through your chest like Surya Kirana prerita Kamalaas then they blow it up into thousand pieces. Then as Shatrughna declared with affirmation then Lavaasura was seemingly fainted yet having pulled off maha vrikshaas attacked Shatrughna who in turn released baana varshaas. Meanwhile, Lavanaasura's rakshasa ganaas too pulled off maha vrikshas as Shatrughna had set threes and fours of baana paramparaas and smashed the vrishas. Meanwhile Lavanaasura pulled off a giant sized sky rise Vriksha on Shatrughna who too felty dizzy and simultaneously Rishi, Deva samuha, Gandharaapsaaraas too made 'haa haa kaaraas'. tam avajñāya tu hataṃ śatrughnam bhuvi pātitaṃ, rakṣo labdhāntaram api na viveśa svam ālayam/ nāpi sūlam prajagrāha tam dṛṣtvā bhuvi pātitaṃ, tato hata iti jñātvā tān bhakṣān samudāvahat/ muhūrtāl labdhasaṃjñas tu punas tasthau dhṛtāyudhaḥ, śatrughno rākṣasadvāri ṛṣibhiḥ samprapūjitaḥ/ tato divyam amogham tam jagrāha śaram uttamam, jvalantaṃ tejasā ghoram pūrayantaṃ diśo daśa/ As Shatrughna fell down, Lavanaasura felt relieved momentarily as Shatrughna might have been killed. That was how he felt that some how he should have wanted to visit his residence and pull off the Parama Shiva Shula. But most fortunately for Shatrughna, he recovered and stood up erect with his 'dhanurbaanaas' in tact. Soon enough Shatrughna commenced divya-amogha baanaas on dasha dishas on Lavanaasura and the rakshasaas surrounding right around the Mahaasura. Meanwhile, deva-gandharva-

muni-apsaraas approached Brahma deva about the on going ‘jagadavastha’ due to the Lavanaasura-Shatrughna maha ghora yuddha. teṣāṃ tad vacanam śrutvā brahmā lokapitāmanah, bhayakāraṇam ācaṣṭe devānāṃ abhayamkaraḥ/ vadhāya lavaṇasyājau śaraḥ śatrughnadhārītah, tejasā yasya sarve sma sammūdhāḥ surasattamāḥ/ eṣo hi pūrvam devasya lokakartuḥ sanātanaḥ, śaras tejomayo vatsā yena vai bhayam āgatam/ eṣa vai kaiṭabhasyārthe madhunaś ca mahāśaraḥ, sṛṣṭo mahātmanā tena vadhārtham daityayos tayoh/ Then Brahma had coolly and smilingly replied and assured that by his vision Shatrughna had just pulled off one adviteeya baana [which Shri Rama handed over to Shatrughna already] which would most certainly kill Lavanaasura. He said : ‘Dear sons! This sanaatana maha baana was in the past was released by Maha Vishnu to devastate Madhu Kaitbha Mahasuras by assuming Hayagreeva swarupa. evam etaṃ prajānīdhvaṃ viṣṇoḥ tejomayaṃ śaram, eṣa caiva tanuḥ pūrvā viṣṇoḥ tasya mahātmanah/ ito gacchatā paśyadhvaṃ vadyamānaṃ mahātmanā, rāmānujena vīreṇa lavaṇam rākṣasottamam/ tasya te devadevasya niśamya madhurām giram, ājagmur yatra yudhyete śatrughnalavaṇāv ubhau/ Only Maha Vishnu was aware of this ‘tejomaya baana mahaatmya’ as that was of the ‘yugaantara rahasya’. From the high skies Deavaadi celestials raised ‘mahotsaaha simhanaadaas’ in favor of the Shatrughna Kumara who had then assumed ‘pramakrodha swarupa’ confronting the wretched Lavanaasura. He had drawn the Divyaastra of Maha Vishnu Himself as of ‘aakarnaanta rupa’ with straightened hands hitting right at the chest of Lavanaasura. gatvā rasātalam divyaṃ śaro vibudhapūjitah, punar evāgamat tūrṇam ikṣvākukula - nandanam/ śatrughnaśaranirbhinno lavaṇaḥ sa niśācaraḥ, papāta sahasā bhūmau vajrāhata ivācalah/ Having penetrated into the very heart of the Asura the diivya baana reached rasaatala and returned back to Shatrughna’s ‘baana tuneera’. As Sharughna’s divya bana having killed the nishaachara, the divya shula of Bhagavan Parama Shiva had reached Maheshwara Himself. Thus at the behest of Shri Rama, Shatrughna had succeeded in relieving the Maha Muni Chyavanadimunis and of the praja too.

As Shatrughna had ultimately accomplished Lavanaasura Vadha, Indra- Agni-and other Devatas approached him and asked him to seek any kind of boon. Shatrughna requested that the Deva Nirmita Ramaneeya Madhupuri, which Shri Rama made him to be the King of, be ever prosperous and peaceful. Thereafter Shatrughna commenced to stay at Madhupuri from the Shravana month then till the Varsha season for about twelve years thereafter being the public had comfortable and dharmika jeevana having appointed Shurasena as the in charge of the jaanapada areas. The entire praja had then spent their lives with 'sukha suraksha suvidhas'. As blessed by Indraadi Devas, there were timely rains, plentiful dhana-dhaanya-daana-dharmas, Madhupuri picked up distinguished 'desha keerti'. The capital city was as clean with its formation of roads, streets, market places, and the quality of citizens as those of the jaanapada villages which were totally neglected in the raakshasa rajya especially in the context of safety and welfare when the pura vaasis and jaanapada vaasis were never sure of a tomorrow or the following minutes sā purī divyasamkāśā varṣe dvādaśame śubhā, niviṣṭā śūrasenānām viśayaś cākutobhayaḥ/ kṣetrāṇi sasya yuktāni kāle varṣati vāsavaḥ, arogā vīrapuruṣā śatrughnabhujapālītā/The Madhuraapuri then eventually flourished as a 'kraya-vikraaya yogya vasthus' as the place of reputed business center from the neighboring kingdoms too . The plentitude and business climate of the kingdom had indeed gladdened the heart of Shatrughna ever within a few years of time. Further the Kingdom was was blessed with timely rains and orderly seasons with health and wealth. tasya buddhiḥ samutpannā niveśya madhurām purīm, rāmapādaū nirīkṣeyaṁ varṣe dvādaśame śubhe/ Having been contented with the life for twelve long years, Shatrughna became rather nostalgic and longed for Shri Rama darshana developing a strong will to visit back Ayodhyapuri.

Accompanied by his principal mantris and senapatis, besides a partial sena having been retained for the rajya raksha, King Shatrughna moved out towards Ayodhyapuri. On the way, he visited Maharshi Valmika ashram with plentiful gifts of bhojana- samrudha phala-vastu-vastra- paaritoshikaas. Having prostrated at the feet of the Maharshi, the latter congratulated Shatrughna at Lavanaasura dushkara Vadha. The Maharshi stated that Shri Rama had to undergo insurmountable impediments at each and every step forward, to destroy Ravanaasura. But indeed, but Shatrughna was able to forward Lavanaasura to yamaloka with far less comparable ease and time though of similar objective of ‘dharma paripaalana’ anyway. Having so said soothingly, the Maharshi extended hospitality of bhojanaadi vishraanti satkaaraas sumptuously. Sa bhuktvaan narashrishtho geetamaadhuryamuttamma, shushraava Ramacharitam tasmīn kaale yathaakramam / Tantroelala samaayutam tristhaan karanaanvitam, shushraava Ramacharitam tasmīn kaake puraa kritam/ As King Shatrughna had excellent relaxation, he heard the sonorous singing along with instrumental music describing the details of Ramaayana covering Shri Rama- Devi Sita parinaya- their fourteen year ‘vana vaasa’- the cruelty of Ravanaasura- Ravana vadha- Rama’s pattabhisheka- Devi Sita’s praja ninda and Maharshi Valmiki ashrama and the arrival of Kusha-Lava Kumaras! This Ramacharitra was sung being ‘Kavya baddha- Kaavya gaana-veena laya’; it was appropriately modulated being ‘hridaya- katha-muurdha sthaanaas’ as per the ‘ucchaarana of mandra-madhyasma- taara swara bhedoccharanaas’ in ‘sanskrita bhaasha’ abiding to ‘vyakarana- chhanda-kaavya- sangeeta shastra lakshana sampanna ganochita taala baddha!’. Taanyaksharaani satyaani yathaa vrittaani purvashah, shrutvaa purusha shadulo visagjnyo baashpalochanah/ Sa muhurtam ivaasangine vinishvasya muhurmuhuh, tasmīn geete yathaavrittam vartamaanamivaashrunot/ Padagaanuscha ye raajastaam, avaangmusvaachaa deenaascha hyaascharyamiti chaabruvan/ The ‘madhuraadhi madhura gaana kushalata’ was such that the listeners hear-feel-cogitate about the ‘sanniveesaas’ or the precise context experiences of elation-or sadness-or anxiety- or relief- or suspense. Narration of that maha kavya’s every word-sentence-sequence was at once an experience of make-belief as was happening then and there. On listening to the shows of reality, Shatrughna was dazed and swooned for good time bursting away crying often, feeling relieved at times, and kept in suspense cogitating what might follow next. Indeed there were countless ‘sanniveesaas’ of tension and possible expectations. Those who accompanied the King Shatrughna kept expressing: What is this! Where are we! Why should this happen! How surprising and shocking! Could this be believable!’ As the singing session was over, the dazed Shatrughna and the party left for the night sleep, yet unable to lie down restlessly.

Next morning after ‘nithya karmaacharana’- Devi Sita’s padaabhivandana- Kusha Lava hridayaalingana- and prostrations to Maharshi Valmiki, as followed by ‘ashrama vaasi kritagjnaabhivaadanas’, King Shatrughna left for Ayodhya with his entourage. Having reached Ayodhya and made ‘padaabhivandana’ to Shri Rama stating: yad ājñaptam mahārāja sarvaṁ tat kṛtavān aham, hataḥ sa lavaṇaḥ pāpaḥ purī sā ca niveśitā/ dvādaśaṁ ca gataṁ varṣaṁ tvāṁ vinā raghunandana, notsaheyam aham vastum tvayā virahito nṛpa/ sa me prasādam kākutstha kuruṣvāmitavikrama, mātṛhīno yathā vatsas tvāṁ vinā pravāsāmy aham/ Maha Raja! No child could stay without a father figure for a pretty long period and hence you must show mercy for me now by making an alternate arrangement. Then Shri Rama smiled encouragingly: nāvasīdanti rājāno vipravāseṣu rāghava, prajāś ca paripālīyā hi kṣatradharmaṇa rāghava/ kāle kāle ca mām vīra ayodhyāṁ avalokitum, āgaccha tvam naraśreṣṭha gantāsi ca puram tava/ mamāpi tvam sudayitaḥ prāṇair api na saṁśayaḥ, avaśyam karaṇīyam ca rājyasya paripālanam/ Raghukula bhushana Shatrughna! It does not behove of Kings to reside in ‘paradeshas’ and be their Kings there. You should always remember the bounden duty of Kshatriya Kings and never ever infringe that ‘Kshaatra karvavya’. Nara shreshtha Raja! You may however keep sojourns occasionally no doubt. You must realise that you are my beloved youngest brother being as dear as my own ‘praana’. Yet at the same time ‘rajya paripaalana’ is your basic ‘kartavya’ as a King of a ‘rajya’. tasmāt tvam vasa kākutstha pañcarātram mayā saha, ūrdhvaṁ gantāsi madhurām sabhṛtyabalavāhanaḥ/ rāmasyaitad vacaḥ śrutvā dharmayuktaṁ mano’nugam, śatrughno dīnaya vācā bāḍham ity eva cābravīt/ Now therefore you may enjoy our company for a week long holiday from your Kingship responsibility and move off with your sevakaas, mantris, and sena back to Madhurapuri. As per Rama’s considered advice as per Kshatriya dharma, Shatrughna had acceded in compliance.

Vriddha brahmana brings his son’s dead body to Rama Sabha accusing the King of ‘akaala marana’ - Narada explains that an ineligible tapasvi as per Scriptures was responsible against varnaashramadharma!

As Shri Rama had thus seen off Sharughna back to his Kingdom had convened his Raja Sabha of his ‘Ayodhya Praja’. While he was fully seized of serious discussions of the Raja Karyaas, there appeared at the Sabha an old brahmanottama shouting away with huge cryings along with the dead body of a brahmana boy. The vriddha brahmana shrieked in terrible anguish stating that the dead boy was merely of thirteen years and ten months. He further cried out with anguish that he and his wife too would not be reconcile this shock of putra shoka and should possibly die themselves due to this enormous heartbreak. The vriddha brahmana further howled: Na smarayaanritam hyuktam na cha himsaam smaraamyaham, sarveshaam praaninaam paapam na smaraami kadaachana/ Kenaadya dushkritenaayam baala eva mamaatmajah, akritvaa pitrukaaryaani gato vaivastakshayam/ Nedrusham dushta purvam me shrutam vaaghoradarshanam, mrityurapraapta kaalkaanaam Raamasya vishayehyayam/ In my long dharmic life, I had never ever lied by either tongue of heart nor ever hurt a creature consciously or unconsciously. Yet my dear son had since been sent to yamaraja griha before his baalyaavastha itself. This had never happened or even heard about in the Shri Rama Rajya everbefore. This kind of ‘akaala mrityu’ had neither been heard or experienced before. .Raamasya dushkritam kinchinmahadasti na shamshayah, yathaa hi vishayasthaanaam baalaanaam mrityuraagatah/ Nahyaanya vishayasthaanaam baalaanaam mrityuto bhayam, sa raajajeevaasvainam baalam mrityuvashamgatam/ This is now evident that in this so called Rama Rajya, there must have been some dushkarmaas have come to thrive of late leading to such as this ‘akaala baala mrityu’. Even among the neighbouring Kingdoms, there had not been this type of premature deaths. Naresh Rama! Now either you should revive the life of my son or get prepared for the ‘atma hatyas’ of myself and my wife too. As far as you are concerned, Naresha! May there be be sukha shanti in your rajya with bhraatru putra poutraas ever! Then one might as well surmise that this Ikshvaaku Vamsha had now become an ‘anaadha’. Having having hoarsely cried out the vriddha vipra vara fainted down crestfallen.

Then eight Maharshis too arrived viz. Markandeya-Moudgulya-Vaamadeva-Kashyapa-Jaabaali-Gotama and Narada. They remarked to Rama: ‘ It appears a vriddha brahmana would appear to have been on a ‘dharna’ or a demonstration with his son’s dead body accompanied by his wife! śṛṇu rājan yathākāle prāpto ’yam bālasaṁkṣayaḥ, śrutvā kartavyatām vīra kuruṣva raghunandana/ purā kṛtayuge rāma brāhmaṇā vai tapasvinaḥ, abrāhmaṇas tadā rājan na tapasvī katham cana/ tasmin yuge prajvalite brahmabhūte anāvyṛte, amṛtyavas tadā sarve jajñire dīrghadarśinaḥ/ Maharshis explained in detail : Maha Raja Shri Rama! in the course of Satya Yuga Kaala, only Brahmanaas were performing tapasya to the Unknown Almighty and as a result there were maha tejasvis and their utterances were ever truthful. Those brahmanas were trikaals darshis and never had the ‘akaala mrityu dasha’ ever. tatas tretāyugam nāma mānavānām vapuṣmatām, kṣatriyā yatra jāyante pūrveṇa tapasānvitāḥ/ vīryeṇa tapasā caiva te ’dhikāḥ pūrvajanmani, mānavā ye mahātmānas tasmīns tretāyuge yuge/ brahmakṣatram tu tat sarvaṁ yat pūrvam aparaṁ ca yat, yugayor ubhayor āsīt samavīryasamanvitam/ apaśyantas tu te sarve viśeṣam adhikam tataḥ, sthāpanam cakrire tatra cāturvarṇyasya sarvataḥ/ Thereafter arrived Treta Yuga when Kshatriyas became prominent with their ‘sudhrudha shareeras’ and will power too and they too took to tapasya about the Unknown. Yet, the tretaa yuga ‘maha purushaas’ were couching away the ‘kshaatra dharma’ with the essence of tapasya. Thus there were Rajarshis apart from Maharshis and either of them ever engrossed in dharmika kaaryaas like yagjnas with mutual cooperation. Then Manu and all of dharmapravakta brahmana-kshatriyottamaas having noticed the specilalities and deficiencis of each other had set up the chaurvarna vyavastha. Thus in the Treta Yuga, the ‘varnaashrama dharma pradhaana vidhana’ gained populatity. adharmah pādama ekam tu pātayat pṛthivītale, adharmeṇa hi saṁyuktās tena mandābhavan dvijāḥ/ tataḥ prāduṣkṛtām pūrvam āyusaḥ pariniṣṭhitam, śubhāny evācaraml lokāḥ satyadharmaparāyaṇāḥ/ tretāyuge tv avartanta brāhmaṇāḥ kṣatriyāś ca ye, tapo ’tapyanta te sarve śuśrūṣām apare janāḥ/ sa dharmah paramas teṣām vaiśyaśūdrām athāgamat, pūjām ca sarvavarṇānām sūdrāś cakrur viśeṣataḥ/ Then the norms of dharmadharma became popular in the passage of time. Eventually as the subsequent stage of the ‘dwiteeya paada’ of treta yuga itself the density of adharm heralded the arrival of dwaapara yuga in the kaala maana or the passage of the Time Cycle. Purushottama! During the Dwapara Yuga - which litertally is a gateway to pure enough dharmna and the precincts of adharm - would eventually arrive .tasmin dvāparasamkhyāte tapo vaiśyān samāviśat, na sūdro labhate dharmam ugraṁ taptam naraśabha/ hīnavarṇo naraśreṣṭha tapyate sumahat tapaḥ, bhaviṣyā sūdrayonyām hi tapaścaryā kalau yuge/adharmah paramo rāma dvāpare sūdradhāritah, sa vai viśayaparyante tava rājan mahātapāḥ, sūdras tapyati durbuddhis tena bālavadho hy ayam/ yo hy adharmam akāryam vā viśaye pārthivasya hi, karoti rājaśārdūla pure vā durmatir naraḥ, kṣipram hi narakam yāti sa ca rājā na samśayaḥ/ In the dwaapara yuga therefore the eligibility of dharm karyaacharana would henceforth be accorded to Vaishyas two as ‘dwijas’ or the twice born before and after yagjnopa dharana vidhi. But despite the passage of time from the Satya- Treta-Dwaparas, the varnaashrama vyavastha denied the eligibility of dharmacharata as prescribed in the Scriptures to the heena varga. Maha Raja! therefore, decidedly only if a mind- distorted ‘heena varga manushya would infringe this established principle and take to the dharmika tapasya as per Scriptures then that low class person would deserve retribution. BUT NOT OTHERWISE. Therefore thi Vriddha Brahmana should be blessed with and his young son’s death be reversed. The Scriptures assure that a King would administer his praja on the truthful dharmika pravritti would be eligible to one sixth of his the ‘praja janita shubha karma phala’ Hence please spend a part of that punya and ensure if there were any ‘neecha jaati’ person performing the kind of ‘dhatmika tapasya’ which would be considered as a ‘dushkarma’. sa tvam puruṣaśārdūla mārgasva viśayam svakam, duṣkṛtām yatra paśyethās tatra yatnam samācara/ evam te dharmavṛddhiś ca nṛṇām cāyurvivardhanam, bhaviṣyati naraśreṣṭha bālasyāsya ca jīvitam/ Therefore Puruaha Shardula! Seek to locate in your Rama Rajya at once if a low class citizen were to be performing a ‘dharmika tapsya’ as prescribed in the Sacred Scriptures , and hence this ‘akaala marana’ as retribution of Natural Justice. Once that ineligible tapasya is stopped, then suterly this dead brahmana boy should get his life revived, by utilising the King’s one sixth portion of the totality of the Ayodhya Praja’s dharmacharana! ‘

[Vishleshana on a) Yuga Dharmas and b) Chaturvarna Vyavastha as per Manu Smriti

a) During Krita Yuga Dharma and Truth certainly run on four feet as in the case of a ‘Go Maata’, since those exceptional practitioners of Adharma neither attain prosperity nor fulfillment of Life. But the predominance of Dharma gradually gets distorted over the subsequent Yugas of Treta-Dwapara-Kali

Yugas and untruthfulness or falsity, and dominance of ‘Arishad Vargas’ of Kaama, Krodha, Lobha, Moha, Mada, Matsaras or excessive desires, anger/ego, avarice, anger, infatuation, and envy, thus affecting the proportions of two thirds, half, and quarter in the respective yugas. During the Satya Yuga, there was fulfillment all around due to excellent health, longevity, affluence, success; invariably the Life Span was of 400 human years, but in the subsequent Yugas the span had been 300, 200, and 100 years maximum; in fact the phase wise longevity dwindled from 100, 75, 50 and hardly 25 in Kali yuga’s first-second, third and fourth ‘Paadas’ as described in Puranas. As per the evolution of Yugas, human beings tend to dissipate the intensity of Dharma from the Satya-Treta-Dwapara-Kali Yugas. During Krita Yuga, ‘Tapas’ was the principal way of Life, in Treta Yuga significance is accorded to ‘Jnaana’ or Acquisition of Knowledge, in Dwapara Yuga, significance is attached to Yagjnas and Sacrifices or Austerities, but in Kali Yuga it is the aspect of ‘Daana’ or sincere charity that is emphasised; this is obviously due to the incapability of Human Beings acquiring true knowledge, nor observe ‘karma kanda’ but atleast perform charitable deeds.

b) Maha Tejasvi Prajapati of the Universe created Chatur Varnas of Brahmana-Kshatriya-Vaishyetaaras and defined their duties. As regards the functions and obligations of Brahmanas, these are enumerated as six viz. Acquisition of Knowledge, Teaching and Training, Performing Yagjnas and Teaching other Brahmanas to perform, and giving and accepting Daanaas or Charities. Kshatriyas are duty bound to provide Security to the Society and the Public, providing charity, organising yajna karyas, and conducting just and impartial administration. Vaishyas are required to promote Industry, and Trading, bestowing charities, providing loans and agriculture and allied business activities. Persons of the fourth caste of the Society were assigned the duty of service to the Society. Since it is stated that human beings who were born above the Creator’s navel were superior to other species, Swayambhu Prajapati decided to create Brahmanas from His face, as they are expected to observe and propagate Dharma by their intense knowledge and of the nuances of Virtue and Justice; they are also duty bound to despatch ‘havya-kavyas’ to Devas and Pitru Devas respectively; Devatas like Vaayu and Pitru Devatas are the recipients by way of Yajna Karyas performed essentially by ‘Mantras’ aloud by their mouths or from within by their tongues. Brahmanas are also the custodians of Dharma and Divine Knowledge as also of life long agents of Dharma. Indeed, as human race is the best of all Beings of ‘Sthaavara Jangamas’, the outstanding persons of Brahmanas are the repositories of intellect and it is only through them alone that ‘Dharma Prachaara’ is possible due to their austerities. The Chaturvidha ‘Jeevanaakaankshas’ or the four fold objectives of Life’s total fulfillment viz. ‘Dharma- Artha- Kaama- Mokshas’ are possible only the category of ‘Dwijas’ or the twice-born indeed; once having been given birth as Brahmanas, the second and equally significant second birth is that by of Devi Gayatri and of one’s own father as the Guru. On this count the twice born one’s viz. Brahmana-Kshatriya-Vaishyas too are as important becoming eligible after the ‘Upanayana Samskaara’ and of Gayatri Upadesha. Thus the Dwijas are all well qualified to observe the full range of ‘Brahmana Kartavyas’ including Brahma Yajna.

Sargas Seventy Five and Seventy Six

As per Narada’s advice, Rama by pushpaka searched for a low class tapasvi performing vedokta tapasya and found one Shambuka doing ‘devatva vaanchha tapasya’, killed him to revive vipra baalaka’s life.

As Brahmarshi Narada assured of the revival of the dead ‘vipra baalaka’, Shri Rama felt mighty relieved and happy. He asked Lakshmana to have the body of the boy duly anointed with ‘sugandha yukta taila nimajjana’ and asked for the ‘puspaka vimana’. Having touched the feet of the Maharshis who appeared in the Rama Raja Sabha assuring that the Brahmana balaka’s body would come alive provided a low caste tapasvi be located in his kingdom and reprimanded, Shri Rama ascended the pushpaka vimana, while asking Bharata Lakshmana’s to take over the duty of ‘nagara raksha.’ Then having been armed with his dhanush baanaas and ayudhas he searched foremost the pashchima disha of his Rajya and reached the utara disha which was surrounded by the mountain range of Himalayas. Having not spotted any indication of a ‘nimna jaati taapasvi’, Rama directed the Pushpaka towards the eastern disha and there too there was none engaged in deep tapasya, exceptong in the well renouned Muni Ashramas. dakṣiṇām diśaṁ ākrāmat tato rājarṣinandanāḥ, śaivalasyottare pārśve dadarśa sumahat saraḥ/ tasmin sarasi tapyantaṁ tāpasam sumahat tapaḥ, dadarśa rāghavaḥ śrīmāṁl lambamānam adho mukham/ athainaṁ samupāgamya tapyantaṁ tapa uttamam, uvāca rāghavo vākyam dhanyas tvam asi suvrata/ Then Dasharatha Nandana Raghunaadha directed his pushpaka vimana to follow the southern course of his Kingdom. There he spotted a tapsvi totally engrossed in deep tapasya with his head and chin down. He descended the pushpaka and addressed the tapasvi, having intimated as to who was he being the King of Ayodhya. Rama addressed the tapasvi: ‘Tapodhana! May you be blessed for performing such deep ‘tapasya’; if I am not too inquisitive, who are you! kasyām yonyām tapovṛddhavartase dṛḍhavigrama, kautūhalāt tvām prcchāmi rāmo dāśarathir hy aham/ manīṣitas te ko nv arthaḥ svargalābho varāśrayaḥ, yam aśritya tapas taptaṁ śrotum icchāmi tāpasa/ brāhmaṇo vāsi bhadraṁ te kṣatriyo vāsi durjayaḥ, vaiśyo vā yadi vā śūdraḥ satyam etad bravīhi me/ Of which of the ‘chatur varnaas’ do you belong to as you really perhaps not like a ‘dwija’! Indeed the severity and commitment that I find in your tapassya would appear to be unusual and even odd! Are you a vipravara, or a kshatriya, or a vanijya pramukha!’ As King Raghu Rama insisted, the ‘taapasvi’ replied hesitatingly..

My mind might be distorted but my determination is firm and unshakable. That is precisely why I am resiting to this ghora tapasya; be it well known that I am proud name is Shudra Shambuka!' As such arrogant reply was heard, Shri Rama got furious pulled out his shining sharp from his waist 'kosha' and slashed Shambuka mastaka. As Shambuka's head rolled off on earth, Deva Gandharvaadi Celstials raised 'harsha ninaadaas' while Rama requested Indra Deva as follows: 'Mahendra! As all the Devaadi celestials are overjoyed, my genuine and well justified boon by kindly gtanted to revive the life of the dead balaka lying at the door step of my Rajya Sabha!' These ornaments are worthy of personality of your standing only.' As the Maharshi endeared Rama, he said: 'Maharshi! the established convention had been that Kshatriya Kings should offer 'daanaas' to pandita brahmanas of vastu-kanakaabharanas but not the other way around! Instantly Agastya explianed: 'Raghu nandana! In the past Satya yuga, there was no concept of Kingships as the 'praja' by themselves were of supremacy and freedom. But subsequently, in the 'treta yuga' the convention changed as Indra was the first ever Tri Loka Prabhu. Then Indra asked select prajas to become Devas and thus he became Devendra. Indra distributed his kingship duties of Prithivi, Aapas, Tejas, Vayu and Akasha. As this type of distribution of duties to select Devatas, Brahma had a Kshupa or what one would call a 'Chheek' or Sneeze and then that Kshupa became the foremost King on Earth! Thus Varuna as a part of Indra's tejas looked after the physical part of the Prajas, Kubera of the dhana prapti, and Yama Raja the duty of 'danda' or retribution of deeds and misdeeds. Now, Shri Rama! These aabharanaas are of 'Indra Sambandha' and are worthy of your kind acceptance!' Shri Rama was overawed by the justification of the Maharshi Agastya offerings of the divyaabharanas, as the Maharshi further enlightened of the happenings in the on going Treta Yuga too further!

Sargas Seventy Seven and Seventy Eight

As Shri Rama accepted the divyaabharanas from Agasthya Maharshi, the latter explained how and why those aabharanas were gifted to him by a dead king as had to resort to 'shava bhakshana' was relieved.

Aagstya Maha Muni then explained to Shri Rama that in earlier part of the Treta Yuga there a 'vistruta vana' of hundred yojanas square which neither had of Pashus nor of Pakshis. Then Agastya located that mahavana whih was replete with vriksha-puspha-phala sampada and felt ideal for tapasya. He had eventually located yojana square sarovara with jala pakshis like chakravaaka- hamsaas with lotus islands. Moved by the tranquility of the place, the Maha Muni desired to locate a place for constructing an ashram and meanwhile he located an ashram already. But that ashram was totally empty. He readied himself to bathe in the sarovara but spotted a dead body! He then heard the approaching sounds of a vimana landing on the banks of the sarovara and found apsaras kanyas on thousands with glittering aabharanaas. They rested there and initiated a series of singing and dancing sessions. As the apsaras having thoroughly enjoyed their outing had since left away. There after arrived a celestial purusha descended from the high skies and performed the ‘shava bhakshana’ and having washed his hands and feet had consumed the sarovara janaas, and got readied for his departure by his pushpaka vimana. Then Agastya Muni was confounded in his thoughts and dared to ask the Vimana Purusha! ko bhavān devasaṁkāśa āhāraś ca vigarhitah, tvayāyam bhujiyate saumya kiṁ karthaṁ vaktum arhasi/ āścaryam īdṛśo bhāvo bhāsvaro devasaṁmataḥ, āhāro garhitah saumya śrotum icchāmi tattvataḥ/ Soumya! Devopama Purusha! May I venture to ascertain as to who are you indeed! How is it that you had just concluded the eating of the deadbody flesh! I am truly puzzled at seeing this strangest scene! Would it be possible to very kindly explain this strange and uncommon incident!

Sarga Seventy Eight continues:

Agastya Maha Muni continued his interesting narration to Shri Rama: ‘The celestial purusha explained to me thus- ‘Brahmanottama! Your kind question for which you are expecting me of a truthful reply would be close to my heart and its experiences of sukha dukkhaas alike : ‘My dear and respected father was the King of Vidarbha named Sudeva who was well reputed in his contemporary world. He had two wives and their sons, one happened to me as by the name of Sweta the elder and my younger brother was named Suratha. As the father passed away, I as the elder son had successfully ruled the kingdom for some thousand years there since. Then I had handed over the Kingdom to Suratha and performed tapasya and accomplished Brahma Loka. But to my dismay I was experiencing hunger and thirst very strangely. Then my physique had pangs repetitively. I approached Brahma Deva and explained my predicament. Brahma then replied to me as follows: pitāmahaś tu mām āha tavāhāraḥ sudevaḥ, svādūni svāni māṁsāni tāni bhakṣaya nityaśaḥ/ svaśarīraṁ tvayā puṣṭaṁ kurvatā tapa uttamam, anupṭaṁ rohate śveta na kadā cin mahāmate/ dattaṁ na te ’sti sūkṣmo ’pi vane sattvaniṣevite, tena svargagato vatsa bādhyase kṣutpipāsayā/ sa tvam supuṣṭaṁ āhāraiḥ svaśarīraṁ anuttamam, bhakṣayasvāmṛtarasaṁ sā te tṛptir bhaviṣyati/ Pitamaha Brahma then explained to me: ‘Sudeva nandana! You should daily visit bhuloka and satisfy your pangs of hunger and thirst and that would be your daily sustenance. While you were performing excellent tapasya for long time, you had only taken ample care of your own needs of hunger and thirst but never thought of ‘daanaas’ to the needy around you ever, even while being rich enough as a former King! Further never performed naivedyas to Devas nor ‘jalochita tarpnas’ to Pitru Devatas ever engaged in selfish and deerghakaala tapasya just for your own personal advantage ignoring the ever expecting bhuk-pyaasa janaas’. Your own body was all the same looked after by ‘naanaa vidha bhakshya bhojya paaneeyaas’ sumptuously and lavishly. Therefore you should have to satisfy with ‘shava bhakshana’ at a secluded and appointed place and the requirement of quenching the need of thirst there near. yadā tu tad vanaṁ śveta agastyah sumahān ṛṣiḥ, ākramiṣyati durdharṣas tadā kṛcchād vimokṣyase/ sa hi tārayitum saumya śaktaḥ suragaṇān api, kiṁ punas tvām mahābāho kṣutpipāsāvaśaṁ gatam/ so ’haṁ bhagavataḥ śrutvā devadevasya niścayam, āhāraṁ garhitaṁ kurmi svaśarīraṁ dvijottama/ bahūn varṣagaṇān brahman bhujiyamānam idaṁ mayā, kṣayaṁ nābhyeti brahmarṣe tṛptiś cāpi mamottamā/ Further Brahma Deva assured the King that once the durdhashya Maharshi Agastya should visit this ‘parama shanti vana’ and bless you the fulfillment of your hunger and thirst problem, then only you would be assured of true brahma loka prapiti to be qualified.’ Having explained as above, King Sudeva addressed Agastya further: idaṁ ābharaṇaṁ saumya tāraṇārthaṁ dvijottama, pratigrhṇīṣva brahmarṣe prasādaṁ kartum arhasi/ tasyāhaṁ svargiṇo vākyam śrutvā duḥkhasamanvitam, tāraṇāyopajagrāha tad ābharaṇam uttamam/ mayā pratigrhṇite tu tasminn ābharaṇe śubhe, mānuṣaḥ pūrvako deho rājarṣeḥ sa nanāśa ha/ ‘Soumya Vipravara! May you be blessed by the Almighty! You have arrived here for my sake alone to solve my several years long of Brahma Vachanas. You have liberated me and am daring to offer you as my liberator these celestial aabharanaas for your very kind acceptance. Brahmarsi! These divyaabhushanas would yield 'suvarna-dhana-vastra-bhakshya bhogyas and ananya prati aabharanaas' further. Muni shreshtha! These aabharanaas would provide 'samasta kaamnaa mano vaancchita bhogas' to their recipients.' As the King handed over the 'aabharanaas', the dead body which the King had been eating and surviving all those years had vanished as the king had retuned to brahma loka for ever.

As Agastya Maha Muni explained about 'divyaabharanas', as to how the Vidarbha Desha King who did long tapsya despite ignoring daana dharmaś had no doubt attained brahma loka yet could not overcome his hunger and thirst and had to necessarily resort to ‘shava bhakshana’ daily, Shri Rama was highly excited and requested Agastya to describe far more about that enthralling narration. Then the Maha Muni explained further: ‘ Shri Rama! This happening was of Satya Yuga when Manu Deva was administering bhu loka. There after arrived King Ikshvaku whom Manu Deva desired to establish kingship under his and progeny’s control till ‘Treta Yugantara’. Manu however cautioned with some do’s and don’t’s. prīto ’smi paramodārakartā cāsi na samśayah, daṇḍena ca prajā rakṣa mā ca daṇḍam akāraṇe/ aparādhiṣu yo daṇḍaḥ pātyate mānaveṣu vai, sa daṇḍo vidhivan muktaḥ svargaṁ nayati pārthivam/ tasmād daṇḍe mahābāho yatnavān bhava putraka, dharmo hi paramo loke kurvatas te bhaviṣyati/ Manu advised Ikshvaku: ‘No doubt you should establish the Raja Parampara of Ikshvaks but by displaying the danda should not utilise it indiscriminately. Once the danda or punishments thereof were inappropriate and not as per established principles and well defined norms, then the kings would reach naraka loka or vice versa to swarga loka. Thus Manu Deva cautioned Ikshvaku to strictly abide by the Manu Smṛiti. Manu Deva thus cautioned King Ikshvaku that danda prayoga must always weighed by a ‘tulaa bhaara’ or as of a sensitive balance. Having thus providing the do’s and don’t’s, Manu Deva disappeared for Brahma loka

[Vishleshana on Manu Smṛiti reg. Aachara-Vyavahara-Prayaschittha Khandas]

Manu Smṛiti comprises three Khaandas or Branches viz. Aachara Khaanda, Vyavahara Khaanda, and Prayaschittha Khaanda. Aachara Khaanda comprising twelve chapters describes Charurvarna Dharmas, Chaturashrama Dharmas, Ahnika Vidhis or Daily Duties, Snaatakaadi grihastha dharmas, Loukika Aapatkaala Dharmas, Vivaahaadi Dharmas, Stree and Putra Dharmas, Shraaddha / Pitru Yagnas, etc. Vyavahara Khaanda comprising eight chapters delineates Raja Dharmas, Shanti Bhadratas or Maintenance of Peace and Administration, Defence, Finance-Taxes-Budgeting, Banking, Industry and Commerce, and so on. The third and final is Prayaschittha Khaanda consisting of twelve chapters is a compendium of various types of atonements of committing sins, against the prescribed principles of ‘Dharmaacharana’ or the Golden Path of Virtue and Justice.]

Happily thereafter ever, such kind of hundred Ikshvaku putras were born as were deeply dedicated to yajna- daana-tapasya vidhi karma dharmaachara Manu Putras born. Raghu Nandana Rama! However the youngest of there hundred Manu putras turned out to be a moodha-vidyaa viheena was never engaged in ‘bhraatru seva’ and he was named as Danda. nāma tasya ca daṇḍeti pitā cakre ’lpatejasah, avaśyam daṇḍapatanam śarīre ’sya bhaviṣyati/ sa paśyamānas tam doṣam ghoram putrasya rāghava, vindhyaśaivalayor madhye rājyam prādād arimḍama/ sa daṇḍas tatra rājābhūd ramye parvatarodhasi, puram cāpratimam rāma nyaveśayad anuttamam/ purasya cākaron nāma madhumantam iti prabho, purohitam cośanasam varayām āsa suvratam/ evam sa rājā tad rājyam kārayat sapurohitah, prahṛṣṭamanujākīrṇam devarājyam yathā divi. Shri Rama! That kanishtha putra named Danda was allotted the bhayankara desha between Vindyaachaka and Shaibala parvata. There the Danda Raja had created an excellent Madhumanta Nagara where Shunyaacharya was the Raja Purohita. Indeed their Madhumanta Rajya with Danda Raja-Purohita Shukracharya was surprisingly like that of Indra- Brihaspati combination!

Maha Muni Agastya further continued his narration that for a good duration of several years King Danda was quite successful in his Rajyaanga. On a hearty and happy ‘chaitra maasarabha’, the King reached Raja Purohita Shukraachaarya's ashrama to felicitate and seek his blessings. There he saw Shuracharya's sarvaanga soundarya putri and having been stung by Manmadha banaas approached her and stated: 'Sundari! Whose kanya are you and am truly infatuated with you right now! Then the kanya replied: Raja! You must be by now realise that I am the daughter of Shukraachaaya named Araja and my respectful father is the Raja Guru and the Rajya purohita. She then requested the King not to forcefully touch her body as I am the unmarried kanya under the control of the father. Nara shreshtha! You are fully aware that my father is a maha tapasvi and if he were to get furious you would be doomed. If you are really interested in me then you ought to be self controlled for now and seek my father's permission to be your life partner. But your 'svecchhachara prayatna' to have my body should most definitely lead to disastrous consequences.' Then the madonmatta King Danda replied: 'Kindly allow me, don't you waste time as I am dying for you; never worry even if I am cursed or even killed! I am your servant! Please me merciful for now'. Having stated thus the King lost control and ravished her and left while the pitiable daughter was dazed awaiting her father's arrival.

Afer a while, having realised the most heinous and ever deplorable sinful act of the King notwithstanding his daughters's pleadings rushed back to the ashram with his disciples, Shuracharya saw his dear daughter Araja was crumbled crying away and yelled addressing his sishyas: See the state of the devastated condition that my daughter due to the 'atyaachaara' of that atrocious sinner whom one should be ashamed to call him King of this Rajya! kṣayo 'sya durmateḥ prāptaḥ sānugasya durātmanah, yaḥ pradīptām hutāśasya śikhām vai spraṣṭum icchati/ yasmāt sa kṛtavān pāpam īdṛśam ghoradarśanam, tasmāt prāpsyati durmedhāḥ phalam pāpasya karmaṇah/ saptarātreṇa rājāsau sabhṛtyabalavāhanah, pāpakarmasamācāro vadham prāpsyati durmatih/ May this 'durbuddhi duratma Raja' realise his encountering Vinaasha Kaala forthwith deserving to be thrown into 'mahaagni jwalaas'. That atrocious King had committed a maha pataka of 'guru putri sheela bhagnata'; most certainly his papa karma phala is totally ripe to be sliced off. This 'papa karmaachanana durbuddhi naresaha' be extinct within seven further nights along with putra-sena-savaari sahita for certainty. samantād yojanaśatam viṣayam cāsyā durmateḥ, dhakṣyate pāmsuvarṣeṇa mahatā pākāśāsanah/ sarvasattvāni yānīha sthāvarāṇi carāṇi ca, mahatā pāmsuvarṣeṇa nāśam yāsyanti sarvaśah/ daṇḍasya viṣayo yāvat tāvat sarvasamucchrayah, pāmsubhuta ivālakṣyah saptarātrād bhaviṣyati/ Further more his hundred 'yojana vistrita rajya' be lashed by Indra Deva with sandstorms and such heavy 'varshapaataas' making the rajya totally extinct. May the 'sthaavara jangamas' of this kingdom be drowned with the uncontrollable 'varsha paatas'. May thus the Danda Rajya disappear finlly'. As soon as the fumed up Shukracharya concluded 'maha shapaas' the ashrama vaashis and the citizens hurried uo their exit from the rajya. Then he addressed his daughter: 'you dim-witted daughter of mine ! behave now the parmeshwara dhyaana and wait near one yojana sarovara here with no fear or anxiety till your encouraging times to arrive . This place where you are staying would not be affected and would be free from anykind of anxiety or disquiet while meeting all your requirements.' As per the Maha Muni Shukraacharyas shaapa the remnants of the king and kingdom vanished.' Thus Agasthya Mahamuni had described in some detail quenching the thirst of curiosity of Shri Rama about the erstwhile stages of Ikshvaaku Maha Vasha as initiated from the Manu Mahatma and the age old King Ikshvaaku. He further explained : tataḥ prabhṛti kākutstha daṇḍakāraṇyam ucyate, tapasvinaḥ sthitā yatra janasthānam atho 'bhavat./ etat te sarvam ākhyātam yan mām prcchasi rāghava, samdhyām upāsītum vīra samayo hy ativartate/ ete maharṣayah sarve pūrṇakumbhāḥ samantataḥ, kṛtodako naravyāghra ādityam paryupāsate/ sa tair ṛṣibhir abhyastah sahitair brahmasattamaih, ravir astam gato rāma gacchodakam upasprśa/ Shri Rama! That entire pradesha between Vindhya and Shavala giri as was dvastated by the shaapa of Shukraacharya is now known as dandakaaranya. This place where Tapasvis and Munis have their ashramas is now known as Janasthaana! Rama! You got curious of the genesis and the initial geneologyof Ikshavaku Maharaja! Now I have tried to trace back Ishvaaku from Manu Deva and about the foremost sons of Ikshvaku right upto the formation of Dandakaaranya and the present 'Janasthaana' too!

As then directed by Agastya Maha Muni, Rama proceeded to the Sarovara where Apsaras often arrive by the day fall time, for the ‘saayam sandhya kaalalopaasana’ and Devi Gayatri Smarana. For the subsequent ‘saayam bhojana’ the host Agastya made elaborate bhojana to Shri Rama and his retinue with kanda-moola-jaraavastha nivaarama oushdhis and the bhaksya bhogya paaneeyaas. Then after some vishraanti Rama asked his permission from Agastya Maha Muni as the latter showered complements on Rama as follows: muhūrtam api rāma tvām ye nu paśyanti ke cana, pāvītāḥ svargabhūtās te pūjyante divi daivataiḥ/ ye ca tvām ghoracakṣurbhir īkṣante prāṇino bhuvi, hatās te yamadaṇḍena sadyo nirayagāmināḥ/ gaccha cāriṣṭam avyagraḥ panthānam akutobhayam, praśādhi rājyaṁ dharmeṇa gatiḥ jagato bhavān/ Shri Rama! If only even for a muhurtakaala, one attains a glimpse of your divya darshana, he would certainly be eligible for ‘swargaadhikaari’ with the opportunity of venetating Indraadi devatas directly! Those other praanis who would neither see you nor extol about, you might however be destined to yama loka. Ikshvaaku kula shreshtha! May you thus leave for Ayodhya with contentment with no issues on way but with auspiciousness. evam uktas tu muninā prāñjalīḥ prapagraho nṛpaḥ/ abhyavādayata prājñas tam ṛṣim puṇyaśīlinam/ abhivādya munisreṣṭhaṁ tāmś ca sarvāms tapodhanān, adhyārohat tad avyagraḥ puṣpakaṁ hemabhūṣitam/ Thus Maha Muni Agastya blessed as Rama too had sincerely did the ‘padaabhivandana’ for the enormous courtesies received and perched in the puspaka vimana..

Now I would like to take up another significant raaja dharma of performing Dharma setu Rajasuya yagjna. Both of you Bharata Lakshmaas are like my two mighty shoulders to achieve the fame of successfully performing the yaaga. Do recall that Mitra Deva the ‘samasta shatru samhaari’ performed the aahutis to Agni and attained the status of Varuna having dutifully completed Rajasuya maha yagjna. Mahabali Raghunandana! Just as the sons look up to the example of their fathers, all the co rajaas too seek to follow the thoughts and deeds of the Maha Raja. Now as you have decided on performing the Raja suya with success no other Raja could claim supremacy on the bhumandala.’ As Bharata asserted thus, Rama was extremely pleased and addressed Bharata: ‘Kaikeya nandana! I am indeed pleased with your expressions of frankness and factualities. This sankalpa of Rajasuta should result the unity and indivisibility of Prithvi and its invincibility against evil forces within and without too. When the rajasuya sankalpa sprouted in my heart, your excellent annotation about the unity and consolidation of prithi and its innumerable kingdoms was truly realistic and most practical and well appreciated indeed!*

There after Lakshmana having heartily congratulated Shri Rama to decide on dutifully performing the Rajasuya Maha Yajina, while Bharata too welcomed assuring the aspect of close togetherness of numberless rajyas under a single umbrella without mutual bickerings. Lakshmana further commended the proposal citing the example of Indra too who was smitten by brahma hatya mahaa paataka had performed Ashvamedha yajina and got purified. Then Lakshmana refreshed Shri Rama's memory. When there broke out a maha yuddha between Devatas and Asuras, there was a brahmana king named Vritrasura who stood always erect and firm with his physique of a staggering hundred yojanas width and three hundred yojanas of height. His kingdom was on typical principles of dharma and nyaaya and his praja were prosperous with 'dhana dhanya sampadas' and of arogya always. In course of time he desired to perform tapasya. He then entrusted his kingdom to his eldest son Madhureshwara and took to 'ghora tapasya.' Then Indra and Devatas were some what concerned and apprehensive that after realising various boons he might become invincible in tri lokas and they might have to be under his subjugation subjected to his whims and fancies, especially as he was a born asura. They approached Vishnu and prayed that some how Vritraasura should not become invincible and sought for a solution to the impending trouble.

Then Shri Rama asked Lakshmana to briefly narrate the story of Vritrasura Vadha and Lakshmana narrated as follows: 'As Indraadi Devas approached Vishnu then the latter replied: pūrvam sauḥṛdabaddho 'smi vṛtrasya sumahātmanah tena yuṣmat priyārtham vai nāham hanmi mahāsuram/ avaśyam karaṇīyam ca bhavatām sukham uttamam, tasmād upāyam ākhyāsyē yena vṛtram haniṣyatha/ tridhā bhūtam kariṣyē 'ham ātmānam surasattamāḥ, tena vṛtram sahasrākṣo haniṣyati na saṁśayaḥ/ eko 'mśo vāsavaḥ yātu dviṭīyo vajram eva tu, tṛtīyo bhūtalam śakras tato vṛtram haniṣyati/ Indraadi Devas! Even earlier to your arrival here and having to inform me of your justified apprehensions, I have been thinking a way to overcome the problem of Vritraasura! Yes, Vritrasura vadha appears to be inevitable. Now, the methodology of doing so appears to be three phased. Firstly, a part of my 'amsha' or the inherent 'tejas' be absorbed into the psyche or innerconsciousness of Indra, then a vajrayudha be secured, and let Indra descend down to bhutala. (Vishnu's suggestion implies bhutala raksha due the anticipated fall on the physique of a staggering hundred yojanas width and three hundred yojanas of height!). Hence the three phased formula suggested by Vishnu'. Then Indraadidevas were extremely grateful and returned back to swarga. physique of a staggering hundred yojanas width and three hundred yojanas of height. tataḥ sarve mahātmānaḥ sahasrākṣapurogamāḥ, tad arāṇyam upākrāman yatra vṛtro mahāsurah/ te 'paśyāms tejasā bhūtam tapantam asurottamam, pibantam iva lokāms trīn nirdahantam ivāmbaram/ dṛṣṭvaiva cāsuraśreṣṭham devās trāsam upāgaman, katham enam vadhiṣyāmaḥ katham na syāt parājayaḥ/ Having had Vishnu darshana and his marga darshana, Indra and Devas reached that very spot where Vritraasura was deeply engaged his ghora tapasya. The asura's mammoth physique was emitting agni jwaalaas as though trilokas would be burnt off reaching the high skies. One look at the vritraasura in that state sent shock waves down the spines of the deva samuhaas wondering as to how and whether the Mahaasura could ever be killed! teṣāṁ cintayatām tatra sahasrākṣaḥ purāṁdaraḥ, vajram pragṛhya bāhubhyām prahiṇod vṛtramūrdhani/ kālāgnineva ghoreṇa dīpteneva mahārceṣā, prataptaṁ vṛtraśirasi jagat trāsam upāgamat/ asaṁbhāvyam vadham tasya vṛtrasya vibudhādhipaḥ, cintayāno jagāmāśu lokasyāntam mahāyaśāḥ/ tam indram brahmahatyāśu gacchantam anugacchati, apatac cāsyā gātreṣu tam indram duḥkham āviśat/ Even as Devas were in disbelief thus, Mahendra lifted both his forceful hands and struck right at the mahasura's 'mastaka'; Indra Deva's vajrayudha emitted 'agni jwaalaas' ever jumping higher and higher and thumped his huge head which rolled down while the earth quaked wobbling and bhutala vaasis were shocked and swooned. Indeed 'niraparaadha Vritraasuru vadha' was certainly not justifiable especially being a 'brahmana hatya'; then instantaneously the 'lokaa loka-partyantaras' were of 'andhakaaramaya pradeshas'! As Indra made an effort to move, his physical parts fell down broken. hatārayaḥ pranaṣṭendrā devāḥ sāgnipurogamāḥ, viṣṇum tribhuvaṇaśreṣṭham muhur muhur apūjayan/ tvaṁ gatiḥ paramā deva pūrvajo jagataḥ prabhuḥ, rathārtham sarvabhūtānām viṣṇutvam upajagmivān/ As Deva shatru got killed and Indra disappeared, samasta deva ganaas were rattled and ran to reach Maha Vishnu. They sobbed and howled and performed 'stuti-pujas' to the last refuge point of vaikuntha with desperation, especially as their chief Indra was nonexistent. teṣāṁ tad vacanam śrutvā devānām viṣṇur abravīt, mām eva yajatām śakraḥ pāvayiṣyāmi vajriṇam/ punyena hayamedhena mām iṣṭvā pākaśāsanah, punar eṣyati devānām indratvam akutobhayaḥ/ evam saṁdiśya devānām tām vāṇīm amṛtopamā, jagāma viṣṇur deveśaḥ stūyamānas triviṣṭapam/ Then Vishnu took the form of Indra and suggested that let Indra perform worship to me as the Yagjna Purusha and then the vajradhaari be purified by dutifully performing Ashvamedha Yagjna. Vishnu then assured once Devendra in my very form would do as prescribed, he would be freed from the heinous brahma hatya maha pataka!

Sarga Eighty Six as explained further:

Narrating further that as Maha Vishnu suggested that the disappeared Indra in Vishnu rupa should revive himself by performing Ashvamedha yagjna, then in the presence of Devas, Brihaspati the Deva Guru initiated the Ashvamedha in the presence of Devas. devānām bhāṣitam śrutvā brahmahatyā mahātmanām, saṁnidhau sthānam anyatra varayām āsa durvasā/ ekenāmsena vatsyāmi pūrṇodāsu nadīṣu vai, dvitīyena tu vṛkṣeṣu satyam etad bravīmi vaḥ/ yo 'yam aṁśas tṛtīyo me strīṣu yauvanaśāliṣu, trirātram darpaparṇāsu vasiṣye darpaghātini/ hantāro brāhmaṇān ye tu prekṣāpūrvam adūṣakān, tāmś caturthena bhāgena saṁśrayiṣye suraśabhāḥ/ At the yagjna samaapti, then the Brahma hatya dosha asked Deva Guru as to where that could be seated. The reply was : ‘durjaya shakti swarupa Brahma hatye!’ Get divided in parts instead of being a single entity. Then that amorphous form divided itself into four divisions and demanded place in Indra’s body. It declared that for four months it would like to be of jala swarupa and reside in rivers, another portion as ‘bhushthapita’ or settled all across the earth., the third segment would be in youthful women for three nights as their menses period, and the fourth part would wish to ever remain in the form of those cruel ‘manavas’ who would be killing brahmanas. Then Deva Guru accorded his approval and the trilokas assumed normalcy. Then Lakshmana addressed Shri Rama! ‘Raghunandana! Such was the unique significance of Ashvamedha Yagjna worthy of dutiful performance, as a preamble to Rajasuya Maha Yagjna.

Lakshmana re-emphasised the ashvamedha yagjna mahatmya by yet another example of King Ila cursed by Maha Deva Himself with monthly change over of purushava and Streetva!

Sarga Eighty Seven explained:

Shri Rama was impressed and pleased as to how Indra was rid of 'brahma hatya paataka' due to the killing of Vritraasura by performing 'ashwa medha yajna' as prescribed by Deva Guru Brihaspati. Then Rama desired Lakshmana whether he was aware Raja Ila, his streetva prapti for a month-Ila and Budha samaagama and Pururavotpati- and Ila's purushatva prapti by virtue of 'Ashvamedha anushthana'! Then Rama explained of that ancient happening to Lakshmana: ' Sumitra Putra! In the ancient times Prajapati Kardama putra was Baahlika Desha Raja named Ila a truthful Dharmatma. He brought the entire prithi undre his control and became the Chakravarti. He was ever kind to Deva-Daitya-Naaga- Raakshasa-Gandharva-Yakshaas too and all of them used to venerate him respectfully. Once in the Chaitra month of Vasanta ritu went on a 'mriga pakshi vihara' on a hunting spree along this his 'sainya'. In that long period hunting he might have killed some ten thousand animals and in the process reached various kingdoms and happened to visit that particular area where Bhagavan Kartikeya was born. There at adjoining place Bhagavan-Bhagaviti Shiva and Parvati were relaxing around the waterfalls from the high mountains. In the vrishabha dhvaja ratha, Bhagavan assumed the 'Naareeshwara swarupa', and accordingly the pakshi-pashus too turned to was stree swarupas instantly! ye ca tatra vanoddeśe sattvāḥ puruṣavādināḥ, yac ca kiṁ cana tat sarvaṁ nārīsamjñam babhūva ha/ etasminn antare rājā sa ilāḥ kardamātmajāḥ, nighnan mṛgasahasrāṇi taṁ deśam upacakrame/ sa drṣṭvā strīkṛtaṁ sarvaṁ savyālamṛgapakṣiṇam, ātmānam sānugaṁ caiva strībhūtaṁ raghunandana/ All the male form animals had attained female forms the

Then the King hept on crying away as Maha Deva was not relenting. tataḥ śokena mahatā śailarājasutāṁ nṛpaḥ, praṇipaty mahādevīm sarveṇaivāntarātmanā/ īśe varāṇāṁ varade lokānām asi bhāmini, amoghadarśane devi bhaje saumye namo 'stu te/ hṛdgataṁ tasya rājarṣer vijñāya harasāmnidhau, pratyuvāca śubham vākyam devī rudrasya sammatā/ ardhasya devo varado varārdhasya tathā hy aham, tasmād ardham gṛhāṇa tvaṁ strīpūṁsor yāvad icchasi/ As Maheshwara was not agreeable, King Ila fell at the feet of Giri Rajakumari Devi Uma: ‘Sampurna vara pradaayani! Samasta Loka Maataa!’ May this divyadarshana of yours be regarded as fruitless. Do very kindly help me from this most unfortunate present predicament. Having truly appreciated the trepidation and practical predicament that indeed as a woman the King would certainly not be possible to administer as a chakravarti and preserve the high standards of ‘kshaatra dharma paripaalana’, Devi Girija suggested: Raja! I might grant you the status of ‘Ardha Naareeshwara’ and you might consider it instead of ‘sampurna streetva’ or as a fulfilled female. I should therefore suggest this ‘via-media’ proposition. I might further grant to you the option as to for how long you wish to be of ‘purushatva’ and of ‘streetva’ alternatively! The King felt relieved at the golden kind of formula that Jagajjanani Mother Parvata Raja Putri had very kindly granted. tad adbhutatamaṁ śrutvā devyā varam anuttamam, samprahṛṣṭamanā bhūtvā rājā vākyam athābravīt/ yadi devi prasannā me rūpeṇāpratimā bhuvi, māsam strītvam upāsītā māsam syām puruṣaḥ punaḥ/ ipsitaṁ tasya vijñāya devī surucirānāṁ, pratyuvāca śubham vākyam evam etad bhaviṣyati/ rājan puruṣabhūtas tvaṁ strībhāvam na smarisyasi, strībhūtaś cāparam māsam na smarisyasi pauruṣam/ evam sa rājā puruṣo māmaṁ bhūtvātha kārdamiḥ, trailokyasundarī nārī māsam ekam ilābhavat/ He then further requested: Mother of the Universe: If could mercifully grant me ‘purushatva’ for one month and ‘streetva’ for the next alternatively, I would be truly obliged! As Parvati consented, King Ila then turned as a youthful ‘parama triloka sundari!

Sarga Eighty Eight explained:

As Shri Rama narrated the ancient timed happening of King Ila turning to streetva and purushatva by Shiva Parvati’s Ardha Naareeshvarava, Lakshmana Bharatas were truly amazed and desired to learn further! Then Shri Rama was pressed by the younger brothers narrated further: ‘ In the first month King Ila turned as a Tribhuvana Sundari and was moving about freely in vriksha-pushpa vanaas with cooling water ponds as ‘hamasa gamana paada padmas’. Then she reached like a ‘vistruta parvata madhya bhaga bhramani’ or like a youthful pretty female of stunning beauty on the sprawling mid mountainous tops freely. At that time as she reached a ‘sarovara’, Soma Putra Budha was engaged in deep tapasya. sā tam jalāśayam sarvaṁ kṣobhayām āsa vismitā, saha taiḥ pūra puruṣaiḥ strībhūtai raghunandana/ budhas tu tām nirīkṣyaiva kāmabāṇābhipīḍitaḥ, nopalebhe tadātmānam cacāla ca tadāmbhasi/ ilām nirīkṣamāṇaḥ sa trailokyābhyadhikāṁ śubhām, cintām samabhyatikrāmat kā nv iyaṁ devatādhikā/ na devīṣu na nāgīṣu nāsuriṣv apsaraḥsu ca, dṛṣṭapūrvā mayā kā cid rūpeṇaitena śobhitā/ Looking at the yuva tapasvi Ila in her stree swarupa was terribly attracted and along with other strees jumped into the sarovara thinking of the tapasvi as she had never seen a male that too of youthful body features of purna chandra’s brilliance . Simultaneously Budha too having heard the ‘kolaahala’ of youthful women jumping into the sarovara noticed the outstanding charm of Ila in the stree swarupa and was instatanly hit by ‘Manmadha Baanaas’ of uncontrollable feelings of love and lust. He felt that she was surely a triloka sundari and wondered as to who was the new arrival! Is she some one who was far above the cut of ‘Devanganas’, Nagavadhus, Aprasasa Kanyas as never seen nor imagined of!’ Then having left back to his ashram, Budha enquired of the youthful strees. He asked them: ‘who indeed are you all and who is is this beauty beyond my expression!’ Then the reply was that none of us would know neither ourselves nor about her as we all had been wandering freely and carefreely!’ Then Budha stated: Atra kimpurusheerbhutvaa shailarodhasi vastyathga, aavasastu girivaavasmisheeghrameva vidheeyataam/ All of you should now become Kimpurushis (Kinnarees) and be around the slopes of thess mountains and reside there for good. You would be blessed with good ‘udyaana vanaas’ full of trees, flowers and excellent fruits. You would all be also blessed with husbands to be called as ‘Kimpurushaas’.

Shri Rama then continued this amazing background of Kinnara Kimpurushas. As the Kinnareyas had thus been despatched away, Budha approached Ila in the attractive sundari stree form and stated sweetly: ‘Sumukhi! I am the Soma Deva’s putra named Budha. Do kindly accept me as your husband and provide me swarga sukhas since I am passionately obsessed with you. Then ‘she’ replied: ‘Soumya Soma Kumara! I happen to be a free woman moving about as a truly independent woman. Yet, I do appreciate your way of innocent open heartedness. Hence I have no hesitation in accepting your offer.’ She had acquiesced yieldingly the kaamaatura Budha spent to his heart’s content for the entire vaishaakha month. Later on at the next morning the Prajapati Putra King Ila woke up from the bed while the Soma Putra Budha was already performing his tapasya on the ‘jalaashaa’. As if from a dream, Ila was surprised and asked Budha: ‘ Bhagavan! I had climbed an insurmountable mountain in this manner and wonder what happened to my ‘sena’!’ Thus Rajarshi Ila had really no memory or even a small awareness of what all had happened especially about his ‘streetva’ or womanhood. Budha by his celestial vision realised the entire backdrop of what all happened to the King Ila. He then explained : Maha Raja! due to a huge sand storm and heavy rains, your soldiers had been staying in an ashram. Now, you too may relax and enjoy phala-moola bhojana in comfort. Then the King replied that he should return back to to his rajya too soon even without his army. Then Budha suggested that he might as well wait for a month with comfort for nine months that repetitively as then by the king’s alternating streetva- purushatva month after month , Budha should secure a son to be named Pururava. Eventually, Budha putra came of ‘upanaana yogya - avastha’, eventually.

As Shri Rama narrated the extremely interesting King Ila- his streetva-Budha and Pururava, the paramodaara Budha Deva took pity on King Ila and during his alternative monthly turn of the King’s Purushatva welcomed Bhriguputra Chyavana Muni, Arishtanemi, Pramodana, Modakara and Durvasa Munis. Budha explained about King Ila , the Kardama Prajapati Putra, and that they would all be aware of what all had been happening to him between the swinging pendulum of streetva and purushava every month! As Budha Deva was explaining thus, Kardama Prajapati too arrived at the Budhaashrama. And so did Pulastya, Kratu, Vashatkaara and Omkaaraasa too. Then there was an open discussion as to how to rescue from the acute problem of King Ila. nānyam paśyāmi bhaiṣajyam antareṇa vṛṣadhvajam, nāśvamedhāt paro yajñāḥ priyaś caiva mahātmanah/ tasmād yajāmahe sarve pārthivārthe durāsadam, kardamenaivam uktās tu sarva eva dvijarṣabhāḥ, rocayanti sma taṁ yajñam rudrasyārāadhanam prati/ samvartasya tu rājarṣiḥ śiṣyaḥ parapuramjayah, marutta iti vikhyātas taṁ yajñam samupāharat/ Then Prajapati Kardama addressed: Viprottamaas! Excepting the single manner of pleasing Maha Deva Himself, the disease facing King Ila could be ever doctored and cured. This involves the King Ila himself ought to dutifully execute Ashvamedha Yajna addressing Maha Deva and pleasing Him’. As Kardama Prajapati stated, there was an unanimous decision of the Muni Maharshis and Rudraaraadhana was initiated and ‘Yagjnyaanushthaana kaaya krama’ was was launched by Rajarshi Marutha who presided

He had finally declared King Ila to lasting 'puruṣatva' as a King of lasting glory. Finally, Shri Rama addressed the mahatmya of ashvamedha yajna citing the examples of Indra to be relieved of brahma hatya pataka and King Ila from the 'streetva-puruṣatva durdasha' as the golden examples.

Having interacted with Bharata Lakshmanas about the examples of the glory of dutifully performing Ashvamedha Maha Yagjna , then Shri Rama asked Lakshmana to request the presence of ‘Brahmanaagra ganyas’ and Maharshis Visishtha, Vaamadeva, Jaabaali, Kashyapaadis as also a ‘shubha lakshana yuta - ashva’ too. As the guests arrived accordingly, he made the announcement of his decision to duly performing the maha yagjna. He was then pleased by the auspicious a’sheervachanaas’ of the brahmana-maharshis. Further, Rama asked Lakshmana to invite Vaanara Raja Sugriva and ‘prasiddha Vaanara veeras’ as also the Rakshasa Raja Vibhishana along with his mantri- rakshasa followers too, besides those brahmanas, rishis along with their strees and families of this rajya who had gone outside too . Those sangeeta- nirithya- naataka shiromanis too be invited too. As Lakshmana sent his invitations for th ashvamedha yagjna , Rama was pleased with the grand presence at the ‘vishala yagjna mandapa’ at the ‘naimishaaranya gomati nadi teera’. Then elaborate arrangements were made for ‘aahaara-shayya- kreedaa vinoda- vyaapaara-manoranjana nritya naataka vyavasthas’ for the millions of invitees of ‘baalya-koumaara- yuva- proudha-vaardhakya praja samuhas’.

As the full arrangements were made elaborately and meticulously, Shri Rama along with sena proceeded forward to Naimishaaranya having retained ‘Ritvikasahita Lakshmana’ for the suraksha of the Ashva Kaksha. Having reached there, Rama was truly amazed and got gladdened to see the ‘adbhuta-vishaala yagjna mandapa’. He was also appreciative of the fabulous arrangements of anna-paana-vastra-adi vyavasthas as organised. Bharata Shatrughnaas were charged with the responsibility of ever memorable Rajokta Swagata Atithi Satkaaraas. Sugriva sahita maha maanasī vaanaraas were looking after the ‘parama pavitra sanchatittha brahmana bhojanas’ while Vibhishana along with his select rakshasas looked after the essential needs of ‘tapasvirishi sevaa kaaryakramas’. Mahabali Nara shreshtha Shri Rama himself along with his sevakaas was dutiful to ensure the atithya vyavastha of co Rajas and was delighted to honour them with appropriate gifts. evam suvihito yajño hayamedho ’bhyavartata, lakṣmaṇenābhi - guptā ca hayacaryā pravartitā/ nānyaḥ śabdo ’bhavat tatra hayamedhe mahātmanah, chandato dehi visrabdho yāvat tuṣyanti yācakāḥ, tāvad vānararakṣobhir dattam evābhyadṛśyata/ na kaś cin malinas tatra dīno vāpy atha vā kṛśaḥ, tasmin yajñavare rājño hr̥ṣṭapuṣṭajanāvṛte/ Thus the ‘Ashvamedha Yagjna kaarya shubhaarambha’ was initiated and so did the ‘Lakshmana samrakshana yukta bhumandala bhramama’ of the Yagjnaashwa too or the intiation of the the sacrificial horse’s wanderings of the earth. Then the single watchword of the Ashvamedha was that no word be heard of disappointment from the needy prajas nor there be a word of shortfall of supplies even temporarily. Thus even as any body of the public expressed a wish, be it a food item or of a daily need, the consumer world would get fulfilled forthwith. Then among the invited praja, Shri Rama had only saw the well fed and well contented commonality and nothing else. sarvatra vānarās tasthuḥ sarvatraiva ca rākṣasāḥ, vāso dhanāni kāmibhyaḥ pūrṇahastā dadur bhṛśam/ īdṛśo rājasimhasya yajñāḥ sarvaguṇānvitāḥ, samvatsaram atho sāgram vartate na ca hīyate/ Vaanara Rakshasaas were thus ever ready standing erect with their hands with vastra-dhana-aahaaras in plentiful magnitudes. Raja simha Shri Rama thus launched the ‘maha ashvamedha yagjna’ which was to span several years thesinece!

Then he asked the well built sishyas Kusha Lava to initiate Ramayana Kaavya Gaana. He also suggested that the boys should go on singing Ramayana at 'brahmana nivasa sthaanaas', lanes and byelanes, raja margas, and 'raja jana nivasa sthaanaas'. With the assistance of this veena instrument’s ‘tantris’ when touched by your soft fingers would create sweet sounds and the ideal places are here around for your singing ‘swara yukta madhura gaanaas’ from your soft lips; you may thus enjoy your self and more certainly of your ever admiring audiences too. At the commencement of your singing itself you should straightaway sing Ramayana without introductory ‘aalaapanaas’. Your behaviour especially before the King should be highly devoted and well mannered so as to readily command the king’s affection for you . yadi prcchet sa kākutstho yuvām kasyeti dāarakau, vālmiker atha śiṣyau hi brūtām evaṁ narādhipam/ imās tantrīḥ sumadhurāḥ sthānam vā pūrvadarśitam, mūrchayitvā sumadhurām gāyetām vigatajvarau/ ādiprabhṛti geyām syān na cāvajñāya pārthivam, pitā hi sarvabhūtānām rājā bhavati dharmataḥ/ tad yuvām ḥṛṣṭamanasau śvaḥ prabhāte samādhinā, gāyetām madhurām geyām tantrīlayasamanvitam/ In case Maha Raja might enquire as to whose sons you were, you must only and politely reply that you were Maharshi Valmiki sishyas. This Veena has seven strings and from them one could listen to very sweet and heartenig ‘swaraas’. May you make the best of the opportunity by both of you singing most in perfect unison sonorously of the ever readily absorbing Ramayana Maha Kavya. Right at the beginning without introductory ‘aalaapanaas’ the Kavya gaana should be started off at once. But make sure that there should never be even a sign of complex that the king might be disliked about and hence be of humility, dutiful politeness and of modesty. Both of you with concentration and with ‘indriya nigraha’ or high self restraint should thus start off ‘laya baddha veenaa madhura gaana’ of Ramayana Maha Kavya’. As Maharshi Valmiki gave a detailed briefing, Kusha Lava Kumaaras slept off comfortably by the night.

Sarga Ninety Four to follow:

By the following morning, having duly performed ‘snaana-sandhya-samidha homa kaaryakramaas’ had initiated Ramayana Gaana. tām sa śuśrāva kākutsthaḥ pūrvacaryām tatas tataḥ, apūrvām pāṭhya jātim ca geyena samalamkṛtām/ pramāṇair bahubhir baddhām tantrīlayasamanvitām, bālābhyām rāghavaḥ śrutvā kautūhalaparo ’bhavat/ Shri Raghunadha too heard the Ramayana Kavya Gaana in the audience of Acharyas and felt that the Gaana shaili was in perfection with all the nuances of ‘swara-aalaapana-rachanaa vishesha sangeeta yukta apurva shaili.’ The madhura gaana was unique by way of ‘bahu sankhyaa pramaanaas’ such as of ‘dhvani pariccheda saadhana bhuta triaavritaas’ of ‘dyuta-madhyama-vilambitas’ being of ‘Saptavidha swara bheda siddhas’ having been well tuned being veenaa laya gaana’.

They set up tuning the strings of the Veena and sang tunefully as the entire audience was exhilarated and mesmerised. The ‘samasta sabhaa sadaas’ felt that the Kusha Lava Twin brothers were just like Shri Rama in their ‘haava-bhaavaas’ as of his own sons. By the noon time the Ramaayana Maha Madhura Gaana was completed and King Rama asked Bharata and arrange eighteen thousand swarna mudraas at once. Then Kusha Lava Kumaras were taken aback while offered by the King stating: ‘Maha Raja! We are vana vaasis as ‘phala moola jeevana nirvaahakaas’ and what indeed could we ever use these gold-silvers in the aranyas’. Then Shri Rama asked them with utmost curiosity: kimpramāṇam idaṁ kāvyam kā pratiṣṭhā mahātmanah, kartā kāvyasya mahataḥ ko vāsau munipuṁgavaḥ/ pr̥cchantam rāghavam vākyam ūcatur munidārakau, vālmīkir bhagavān kartā samprāpto yajñasaṁnidhim, yenedaṁ caritaṁ tubhyam aśeṣam sampradarśitam/ Kumaraas! As Kusha Lavaas were still continuing Ramayana Shraavya as Rishi-Raja-Vaanra pramukhas were keenly following. There then arose a common feeling whether the Kumaras were only the Shri Rama Putras themselves! Even Shri Rama suspected thus as he recalled that as to who was the father of the boys they only replied that there were the shishyas of Maharshi Valmiki. Then he sent his messengers to approach the Maharshi that he desired for meeting the Maharshi. Then Rama felt within himself: yadi śuddhasamācārā yadi vā vītakalmaṣā, karotv ihātmanah śuddhim anumānya mahāmuniṃ/ chandam munes tu vijñāya sītāyās ca manogatam, pratyayam dātukāmāyās tataḥ śamsata me laghu/ śvaḥ prabhāte tu śapatham maithilī janakātmajā, karotu pariśanmadhye śodhanārtham mameha ca/ 'If only Maharshi would certify the 'paativratya and parishuddhata' of Devi Sita, then I would seek Maharshi's approval to be present herself here and make her declare her 'pramaana of parishuddhata' to the public of Ayodhya.' Then Shri Rama despatched his intimate persons to explain of his heart felt desire. The Maharshi was elated and asserted about Devi Sita's paativrathya and was excitedly replied: May this so happen; Devi Sita would be able to abide by Rama's instruction as indeed her husband is her Pratyaksha Devata! evaṃ bhavatu bhadram vo yathā tuṣyati rāghavaḥ, tathā kariṣyate sītā daivatam hi patiḥ striyāḥ/ tathoktā muninā sarve rāmadūtā mahaujasaḥ, pratyetya rāghavam sarve munivākyam babhāṣire/ tataḥ prahr̥ṣṭaḥ kākutṣṭhaḥ śrutvā vākyam mahātmanah, ṛṣīṃs tatra sametāṃs ca rājñas caivābhyabhāṣata/ bhagavantah saśiṣyā vai sānugaś ca narādhipāḥ, paśyantu sītāśapatham yaś caivānyo 'bhikāṅkṣate/ Later on as the Maharshi's words were so soothing that Rama addressed the co rajas and maharshis and declared: 'are you all interested in Devi Sita's 'shapadha grahana' about her 'paativratya' and her purity of body and heart right on the presence of the public.'! Then the response was uproarious from maharshis, rajas and praja shreshthas; they all praised Rama that such a possibility would be possible only in ramarajya and no where else on prithvi. Then the joyous crowd departed awaiting the excitement of the following day.

Sarga Ninety Six follows:

On the following day as Shri Ramachandra reached the yajna shaala, a multitude of Maharshis were present such as Vasishtha, Vaamadeva, Jaabaali, Kaashyapa, Vishvamitra, Deerghatama, Maha Tapasvi Durvasa, Pulsatya, Shakti, Bhargava, Vaamana, deerghajeevi Markandeya, Maha Yashasvi Moudgalya, Garga, Chyavana, Dharmajna Shataananda, Tejasvi Bharadwaja, Agniputra Suprabha, Narada, Parvata, Maha yashasvi Gautama, Kaatyayana, Suyagna, and Taponidhi Agastya besides many other tapasi rishis. Then Mahabali Raakshasa Vaanaraas too surrounded with 'maha koutuhala vasha buddhi'. Naanaa desha teekshna vrata dhaaris too off chaturvarnaas too were present in the historic event. For the pratyaksh darshana and of the unmissable 'drishya' of Devi Sita's shapadha grahana, all the 'karma nishtha- jaana nishtha- yoga nishta mahatmaas' too were present as were intimated of Munivara Vaalmiki's accompanying Devi Sita. tām dr̥ṣṭvā śrīm ivāyāntīm brahmānam anugāminīm, vālmīkeḥ pr̥ṣṭhataḥ sītām sādhu kārō mahān abhūt/ tato halahalā śabdaḥ sarveṣāṃ evaṃ ābabhau, duḥkhajena viśālena śokenākulitātmanām/ sādhu sīteti ke cit tu sādhu rāmeti cāpare, ubhāv eva tu tatrānye sādhu sādhu iti cābruvan/ tato madhyam janaughānām praviśya munipuṃgavaḥ, sītāsahāyo vālmīkir iti hovāca rāghavam/ Then following the footsteps of Maharshi Valmiki, Devi Sita entered the ever mammoth Jana Maha Sabha with her head down, both her hands folded like Shrutis follow Brahma as the the maha sabha jana samuhas went berserk with cryings of ‘dhanya dhanya’! At that time samasta darshaka praja cried out loudly and some with suppressed emotions. Both Shri Rama and Devi Sita alike displayed their gratitude for their compassion and sympathy for them. Then Maharshi Valmiki stated: iyam dāśarathē sītā suvratā dharmacārīṇī, apāpā te parityaktā mamāśramasamīpataḥ/ lokāpavādabhītasya tava rāma mahāvratā, pratyayam dāsyate sītā tām anujñātum arhasi/ imau ca jānakī putrāv ubhau ca yamajātakau, sutau tavaiva durdharṣo satyam etad bravīmi te/ ‘Dasharathanandana! You are fully aware of the virtuosity of 'dharmanyaayaas' for sure. Now this had since been said about me earlier and vindicated now is understandable. Earlier too that kind of agni pareeksha in the presence of devas did happen and thus I got admission in your premises. But as there were serious public allegations and hence I was left away high and dry for which too you might excuse me too. Now I guess that since I was blessed with twin kumaraas, the public was happy and they had sought to forget and forgive. Now even Deva Samuhas headed by Brahma had arrived here to ascertain Rama nirnaya at th time of Sita's 'shapadha'. Even Adbhutha-Vasu-Rudra Deva-Marudgana-Saadhya Devas-Maharshis-Naga-Garuda-Siddha ganas too had arrived to hear Shri Rama nirnaya and the suspense therebefore. Vayu Deva too has since cooled down to mild flows with fragrant smells to enthuse the maha prajasamudaaya as collected her.' So saying, Devi Sita halted for a while, she folded her hands, and lowering her looks down, she resumed again and stated thus: yathāhaṁ rāghavād anyam manasāpi na cintaye, tathā me mādHAVī devī vivaram dātum arhati/Manasaa karmanaa vaachaa yathaa Raamam samarchaye, tathaa me Maadhavi Devi vivaram daatumarhati/Yayaitat satyamuktam me vedmi raamat param na cha,tathaame Maadhavi devi vivaram daatumarhati/ If only have had never touched endearingly any Para Purusha except Shri Raghunadha Shri Rama either mentally much less physically, may Mother Prithvi accept me in her fold. There were 'harshanaadaaas' alike by the celestials and maharshi tapasvis hailed as the prajaaneekas who were mesmerised and confounded.

[Vishleshana on Devi Sita's 'Parandhaama' and an over view of termination of Ramaavataara vide Padma Purana in Essence:

After the successful completion of Ashvamedha Yagna, Shri Rama continued his normal routine of observing celibacy and administration. Shatrughna killed Lavanaura and ruled Madhurapuri; Bharat administered both the banks of River Sindhu and controlled Gandharvas; Lakshman conquered Madra desha, installed his sons as the Kings and returned to Rama for providing service to him. Shri Rama did Ashvamedha Yagna, after installing a Golden Pratima of Sita; in fact he performed several Yagnas in the same manner. Sage Valmiki exhorted Rama about Sita's spotlessness and piety time and again and Shri Rama finally opined that indeed he was fully aware of her chastity and purity but since the allegation came from the Praja (Public), Sita should prove her innocence before the people. Sita then declared in a huge Sabha that if she performed puja to any body else excepting Shri Ram in her mind, thought, tongue or action then my mother Bhudevi might take her into her mother's fold. Immediately, there was an Earth-quake and Sita entered into a huge cleavage. (at Sitamarhi , Bihar) Bhudevi herself lifted Sita into her belly and the great Garuda, the Carrier of Lord Vishnu, lifted her from Rasatala to Vishnu loka as seated on a Golden Throne. After Sita's disappearance, Shri Rama ruled for eleven thousand years. One day, an old Tapasvi came to see Shri Ram and told him that none should enter his Chamber while he was giving an important message from Lord Brahma in secrecy. Shri Rama called Lakshmana and instructed that none should be allowed to enter as long as he was conversing with the Tapasvi and otherwise that person should be punishable with death. Lakshman himself stood at the door and ensured that none would disturb. The Tapasvi conveyed that since the death of Ravana, Kumbhakarna and other demons Rama was to live for eleven thousand years and that it was time for Rama to leave Earth and return to Vaikuntha. While this secret conversation was going on, Durvasa Maharshi arrived and wished to meet Shri Rama, but Lakshmana declined entry stating that a representative of Brahma was in an important conversation and that he could not see Shri Rama then. Durvasa grew angry and threatened Lakshmana with a severe curse if he did not permit entry. As there was no other alternative between Rama's instruction and Durvasa's threat of curse, Lakshman entered River Sarayu, taking his original Swarupa of Ananta Naga with thousand hoods. After the meeting with Kaala Deva in the form of the old Tapasvi, Rama realised that Lakshman also having gone, it was time for him also to terminate his 'Avatar'; he established Kusha in Kushavati Kingdom and Lava in Dwaravati as their Kings. Taking a hint from Shri Rama, Vibishana, Sugriva, Jambavan, Hanuman, Neela, Nala, Sushena and Nishada Raja Guha arrived. Shatrughna performed the coronation of his sons at Ayodhya. The rest of them said that they would not like to stay back on Earth in the absence of Rama even for a moment. But Rama asked Vibishana to continue in power at Lanka for long time and instructed Hanuman to continue on Earth forever to sustain the message of Shri Rama. The rest of them accompanied Shri Rama into the Sacred Sarayu River. Bharat, Shatrughna, and all the citizens of Ayodhya along with their wives, Mantris, Servants, Vedikas, Brahmanas, the nearby animals, birds, and all other Beings who accompanied Shri Rama never looked back. As Shri Rama went deep into the River, Lord Brahma, Devas, Rishis and all Celestial Beings extolled Raghunatha even as He took the Huge Form of Maha Vishnu with his four hands along with Bharata as Shankha, Shatrughna as Chakra, as also Gada with Shri Devi and Bhudevi beside Him.]

As Rishi Muni Praja Vanaras were bewildered at the Sita Parandhama, Shri Rama kept on crying away incessantly; he wept loudly that Devi Sita was no more visible except on memory screens now. ' It was for the first time that she was visible after long 'Sitanveshana' with untold and relentless efforts. On return from Ayodhya, there had been such fast twists and twirls of fate. Pujaniya Bhagavati Devi Vasundhara! Do kindly return to me my Sita! Other wise, I would have to display my anguished anger on you. Are you really aware of the consequences of my anger! Truly saying that you are my mother - in-law; King Janaka was entrusted the responsibility to upbringing her. Either you return Sita to me or let me join her in rasatala as I had been repeatedly deprived me of her companionship. Be that paatala or svarga, but I would not be able to miss her any further! As Rama was beating his chest out like wise, with anguish and frustration, Brahma Deva appeared along with Devas. Rama Rama na santaapam kartumarhasi suvrata, smara twam purvakam bhaavam mantramchaamitrakarshana/ 'Rama! Do recall your ‘purva swarupa smarana’ of Vaishnavatva. He said that Saadhvi Sita was ‘sarvathaa shuddha paraayana’ and was desirous of your nearness for some time and had since returned to her ‘parandhaama’ to amuse the Naaga loka for some time. Thereafter once again, she would return to your ‘Saaketa dhaama’. Meanwhile your ‘charitra sambandha divya kaavya Ramaayana’ would detail and be popular for ever. Eversince your birth your life had been detailed with a mix of sukha-duhkhas as of ideal mortals. Shri Rama! This Ramayana is truly depictive of your entire life. Aadikaavyamidam Rama twayi savram pratishthitam, nanyorhati kaavyaanaam yashobhaaga Raaghavaadrute/ Shri Rama! This indeed is the adi kaavya of lasting fame in which none of your activities were hidden and are ever truthful. You may yourself go through yourself with concentration. Now what would happen ahead too had been delineated in the ‘antima bhaaga’ as the Uttara Ramayana. This too may be read or heard aloud in the company of Rishis. Raghunandana! You are a sarvotkrishtta Rajarshi! One ought to hear-or read and ponder about your own life story ever foremost’. Having so detailed, Brahma Deva disappeared. Then Shri Rama looked at Maharshi Valmiki and stated that indeed it would be of interest to read the Uttara Ramayana too. There after the Maharshi returned back to the ashram along with Kusha Lavas too.

Sarga Ninety Nine continued: Next morning Shri Rama invited reputed Munis and asked his sons Kusha Lavas to initiate the ‘bhavishya jeevana sambandha utara khanda ramaayana’. At the termination of the ashvamedha yajna, Rama was truly drowned in deep distress. In the absence of Devi Sita he felt disillusioned with ‘samsaara’. Thereafter as the asvamedha yajna was concluded, Rama returned to Ayodhya. Thereafter, he initiated living with the sons and never even thought of remarriage being of ‘ekapatnivrata’. At each of the subsequent yajna karyaas, the need for a ‘saha dharmachaarini’ was then fulfilled by a golden pratima of Devi Sita. Dasha varsha sahasraani vaajimedhaanathaa karit, vaajapeyaan dadhagunaantasthaa bahusuvarnakaan/ He had thus executed ten thousand years long yajna karyaas, and ‘asankhya suvarna mudra dakshinas’. Thus the entire bhumandala rajaas were too happy to be his ‘subsidiaris’ quite beside his own prajaas were well contented under his administration. Vaanara-bhalluka-rakshasas were ever under his unique administration. Kaale varshati parjanya subhiksham vimalaa dishah, hrishtha pushtha janaakeernam puram janapadaastathaa/ In the Rama Rajya, the clouds were yielding timely rains and there were no ‘akaala mrityus’ of anysort. The praja was ever happy and joyous with aarogya always without tapatrayas of ‘Adhi Bhoudika’ or Ailments of Physical Nature; ‘Adhyatmika’ or of Mental-Psychological Nature; and ‘Adhi Daivika’ or of Natural Calamities like Earth quakes, floods, lightnings etc. beyond human control. Adhyatmika based Tapaas are either due to ‘Shaaririka’ (physical) ailments or ‘Manasika’ (psychological) imbalances. Shaaririka Tapaas include diseases related to head, digestive, heart, breathing, vision, limbs, skin, fevers and so on; related are the various physiological problems of blood-urinary-pelvic nature. Manasika Tapaas are related to Kama, Krodha, Bhaya, Dwesha, lobha, Moha, Vishada, Shoka, Asuya, Apamana, Irshya, Matsara etc. Adhi Bhoutika Tapaas are due to the difficulties attributed to animals, birds, Pishachaas, Serpents, Rakshasaas and poisonous related creatures like scorpions. The troubles on account of Adhidaivika nature are due to cold, heat, air, rains, drought, water, earthquakes, cyclones and so on. Additionally, the troubles are related to birth, childhood, youth, old age, ignorance, Avidya, loneliness, smell, lack of resources, poverty, immaturity, inexperience, lack of opportunity, fear of death, death itself and multiple kinds of experiences of Naraka.

As the Rama Rajya was settled for thousand of years, one day Kaikeyadesha Raja the maternal uncle of Bharata sent Brahmarshi Gargya and presented himself with ten thousand horses, kambalas and various vichirta vastraabharanaas as Shri Rama, Bharata Lakshmanas had heartily welcomed the Brahmarshi and conveyed the message of King Yudhajit that he was for the time camping at the Sindhu Nadi banks which was a picturesque place of pushpa-phala samriddhi and would be happy if Bharata too could visit the place for enjoying prakriti soundarya. Brahmarshi Gargya further asked to convey that on the other banks of the Sindhu River was the Gandharva Rajya ruled by Gandharva Raja named Shilusha with some three crore gandharvas who were not only yoddhas of high caliber being astra-shastra sampannas. Gargya Maharshi further conveyed to Rama of what Kng Yudhajit asked to convey to Shri Rama to subdue to the Gandharvas and take over Gandharva Nagara as that kingdom was well worth conquering. Having thus heard of what Kaikeya Raja, Shri Rama looked at Bharata and assured the Brahmarshi that Bharata and his kumaras named Taksha and Pushkala would take over the kingship of the Gandharva Desha eventually. ‘May these Kumaras headed by Bharata attack gandharvas and th Gandharva Raja and Raja kumaras be killed and convert the Gandarva Desha be bifurcated as duel kingdoms under Taksha and Pushkala’. Having declared thus Shri Rama performed the rajyabhisheka to Bharata Kumaras. Therafter, Mahashi Gargya decided on the shubha dina-mrigashira nakshatra for the vijaya yatra under the command of Bharata. On way, the Bhrata Sena took the blessings of Kaikeya Raja Yudhhajita and proceeded to the Gandharva Rajya.

Sarga Hundred one continued further: As Kaikeya Raja heard this hearty development of Shri Rama’s decisiveness, he agreed to join the Rama Bharata Sena too . Then the ‘maha sangrama’ was declared and coninued for seven days and nights. It should be appropriate for Angada to set up a ‘Nagara Rajya’ on the lines of Ayodhya the City Kingdom as that place indeed is reputed for excellent health being an ‘arogya vardhini’; that city state be named as Angadeeya. Further, Chandraketu is well known as a ‘malla yuddha vishaarada’ and the Malla Desha there could be a Chandrakanta puri with could be developed as of Swargaloka’s Amaravati Puri.’ As Bharata suggested, Rama Lashmanaas were delighted with contentment. Then Shri Rama had duly performed rajyaabhishekas. In the course of time, Sumitra kumara Lakshmana along with Bharata accompanied Angada Kumara to Angadeeya as also Chandeaketu to Chandrakanta puri and having got settled the kumaras over a year’s time returned to Ayodhya. Subsequently, Rama Rajya lasted for a thousand years under the benign Kingship of Ayodhya.

Pitamaha Brahma had commanded me to convey these words to you and you may please listen to me carefully. 'In my purvaastha, at the time of Hiranyagarbha's utpatti kaala, I was manifested by 'Maya' as the 'Sarva Samhaarakara Kaala Devata'. Lokanatha Brahma has asked me to convey to you that you Soumya! you had made the pratigjna of 'dharma raksha and loka raksha' and that had pratigjna had since been fulfilled. Kindly recall that in your purva kaala, you were resting on maha samudra and by the interaction of Maha Maya you had initiated 'Loka shrishti'. bhogavantam tato nāgam anantam udake śayam, māyayā janayitvā tvam dvau ca sattvau mahābalau/ madhum ca kaiṭabham caiva yayor asthicayair vṛtā, iyaṁ parvatasambādhā medinī cābhavan mahī/ padme divyārkaśaṁkāśe nābhyām utpādya mām api, prājāpatyaṁ tvayā karma sarvaṁ mayi niveśitam/ Then as you were relaxing on the bed of 'Ananta Sangjna Maha Naaga' and Maha Maya, two Maha Balis named Madhu Kaitabhas were created as the asthi samuhas and you entrusted me the task of giving life to them and this 'srishti rachana maha bhaara' too thereafter! As you being reptued as Pamma naabha there emerged a Suryasamaana divya kamala on which I as Brahma was seated entrusted with the maha karya of Srishti Rachana. so 'ham saṁnyastabhāro hi tvām upāse jagatpatim, rakṣāṁ vidhatsva bhūteṣu mama tejaḥ karo bhavān/ tatas tvam api durdharṣas tasmād bhāvāt sanātānāt, rakṣārthaṁ sarvabhūtānāṁ viṣṇutvam upajagmivān/ adityāṁ vīryavān putro bhrātṛṇāṁ harṣavardhanaḥ, samutpanneṣu kṛtyeṣu lokasāhyāya kalpase/ sa tvaṁ vitrāsyamānāsu prajāsu jagatāṁ vara, rāvaṇasya vadhākāṅkṣī mānuṣeṣu mano 'dadhāḥ/ As this responsibility was entrusted to me, I begged of you to manifest in me the inherent 'Jnaana Shakti and Kriya Shakti'. Then having acceded to my request, you became evident as 'Aparimeya Sanatan Purusha Swarupa Jagat paalaka Vishnu Rupa.' Then from Aditi Garbha was born Parakrami Vaanara Avataara and there since you had enhanced the Indraadi Deva Shakti for Loka Raksha and Dharma paripaalana. daśavarṣasahasrāṇi daśavarṣaśatāni ca, kṛtvā vāsasya niyatīm svayam evātmanaḥ purā/ sa tvaṁ manomayaḥ putraḥ pūrṇāyur mānuṣeṣv iha, kālo naravaraśreṣṭha samīpam upavartitum/ yadi bhūyo mahārāja prajā icchasy upāsītum, vasa vā vīra bhadraṁ te evam āha pitāmahaḥ/ atha vā vijigīṣa te suralokāya rāghava, sanāthā viṣṇunā devā bhavantu vigatajvarāḥ/ Further there had been arranged an eleven thousand years of longevity as was accorded for you in the martya loka. Nara shreṣṭha! You had by now reached that limit. As per your own sankalpa as Maha Vishnu that life limit had been reached and it would be the time for you to join us. In case you so decide or desire, then that might be on your own volition, but the time limit prescribed would be over. In case you feel like reaching Vishnu loka back again, you may attain the 'paramdhaama'. That indeed was the message of Brahma Deva, which as a truthful messenger am providing to you Shri Rama! That was how Kaala Devata concluded.' Then Shri Rama had heard the Kaala Devata's adbhuta Brahma vachana. He replied that his incarnation was for loka kalyana, and as that objective having been accomplished in the martya loka I am indeed ready to get back to my Vishnu Loka. Sarva samhara Kaala Devata! As Brahma Deva suggested I am ready to oblige right away!'

Even as Kaala Maharshi arrived for Shri Rama for a secret meet but simultaneously Durvasa too arrived and embarrassed Lakshmana had to hear possible evil forebodings, but Rama just reached Durvasa.

As Kaala Devata in the form of a Tapasvi was ushered in by Lakshmana to have a one-to-one conversation as conveyed by Brahma to Shri Rama the avatara of Maha Vishnu, Maharshi Durvasa too arrived and asked Lakshmana for admission for meeting Shri Rama on an urgent issue. Lakshmana having greeted the Maharshi requested the latter to wait just for a while as Shri Rama was already engaged with a secret one-to-one another urgent conversation with Kaala Tapasvi. Then Maharshi Durvasa got infuriated and screamed at Lakshmana as follows: asmin kṣaṇe mām saumitre rāmāya

Then Rama having concluded the meeting of Kaala Maharshi hurried up toward Durvasa Maharshi. By that time, Durvasa Maharshi got somewhat cooled down and addressed Shri Rama: adya varṣasahasrasya samāptir mama rāghava, so ’haṁ bhojanam icchāmi yathāsiddhaṁ tavānagha/’ Raghunandana! I had kept ‘upavaasa’ for a thousand year long duration and have brought the bhojana here for sharing it with you.’ Shri Rama was too pleased to share the same along with the Maharshi. Thereafter, Shri Rama recalled the details of what all the Kaala Devata conveyed were perplexing and ruminated long time introspectively.

As Ramachandra was almost closing his life like Rahugrasta Purnachandra, he was feeling about Lakshmana touching his head and body, then Lakshmana soothened his feelings saying: ‘Maha baaho! Kindly do not worry for me as I am too is destined as per ‘kaala gati’ tied up with one’s own erstwhile ‘karma phala’. Soumya Rama! I humbly bend my feet to very kindly kill me without least hesitation for which I would make a pratigjana that you would never get naraka prapri. If you truthfully possess heartfelt love and attachment for me, may your ‘dharma vriddhi’ be ever assured by doing so. As the entire mantri-brahmana- maharshi-praja mandali was shaken up with this never expectable nor imaginable request by Lakshmana to Shri Rama as the never ever inseparable brothers, Maha tejasvi Vasishtha Maharshi asserted: dṛṣṭam etan mahābāho kṣayaṁ te lomaharṣaṇam, lakṣmaṇena viyogaś ca tava rāma mahāyaśaḥ/ tyajainam balavān kālo mā pratijñām vṛthā kṛthāḥ, vinaṣṭāyām pratijñāyām dharmo hi vilayaṁ vrajet/ tato dharme vinaṣṭe tu trailokye sacarācaram, sadevarṣigaṇam sarvaṁ vinaśyeta na saṁśayaḥ/ sa tvaṁ puruṣaśārdūla trailokyasyābhipālanam, lakṣmaṇasya vadhenādyā jagat svasthaṁ kuruṣva ha/ Maha Yashasvi Shri Rama! At this very time of epic like ‘climatic catastrophe’, right along with you a countless ‘praja samuha’ are in any way facing a crisis of Rama Lakshmana maha viyoga as I have already felt by my futuristic vision. Kaala Devata is invincible and those desicions are insurmountable. I should therefore in all earnestness appeal to you to end up Lakshmana. His pratigjna should not be unfructified and untruthful. Certainly, ‘dharma lopatva’ or any shortcomings and defiance of virtue could devastate trilokas inclusive of Rishi Maharshis too. Purusha Simha! Keeping in view of tribhuvana raksha, do please sacrifice Lakshmana. This bold act of sacrifice could only keep the balance of sampurna jagat and its sustenance!!’ As Vasishtha Maharshi addressed Shri Rama, the latter told Lakshmana: ‘Sumitra nandana! I am performing your ‘parityaaga’ or totally abandoning you; it is stated universally that when ‘saadhu purushas’ discard a person that that would be as bad as killing them away!’ As Lakshmana was told so, Lakshmana had burst out crying away, left for the River Sarayu, having performed ‘aachamana’ of the punya nadi and having performed complete ‘indriya nigraha’ stopped the intake of praana vaayu, even as Indriyaadi Devaas, Rishi ganas and all the celestial beings performed pushpa varshaas. Thus the ‘chaturdha amsha’ or the one fourth of Shri Rama got obliterated for ever.

As Shri Rama was disillusioned with Lakshmana parityaga too, close on the heels of Devi Sita parityaagaa too, then purohita-mantri-majaa janaas of the Kingdom appealed to Shri Rama to duly perform Bharata pattaabhisheka soon. Then Rama desired that the rajyabhisheka saamagri be fetched too soon to let him also be free for ever. But Bharrata reacted too sharply to assert as follows: ‘Maha Raja! may I swear by my honour and truthfulness that neither the kingship or ‘swarga maha bhogaas’ are desirable for me’. Then he continued suggesting: imau kuśilavau rājann abhiṣiñca narādhipa, kosaleṣu kuśaṁ vīraṁ uttareṣu tathā lavam/ śatrughnasya tu gacchantu dūtās tvaritavikramāḥ, idaṁ gamanam asmākaṁ svargāyākhyāntu māciram/ Raghu nandana! sarvāḥ prakṛtayo rāmaṁ vacanam abruvan, gacchantam anugacchāmo yato rāma gamiṣyasi/ Then Vasishtha having been astonished all these developments addressed Shri Rama: ‘ Look at the fate of all these praja of yours; do consider the opinions of them too. Then there was ready response from them: ‘Raghunandana! Where ever you intend do or go to, we are all ready to follow behind. We all the stree purushaas follow your ‘sanmarga’ or the supreme path of righteousness and virtue. tapovanam vā durgam vā nadīm ambhonidhiṁ tathā, vayam te yadi na tyājyāḥ sarvān no naya īsvara/ sa teṣāṁ niścayam jñātvā kṛtāntam ca nirīkṣyaca, paurāṇām dṛḍhabhaktiṁ ca bādham ity eva so ’bravīt/ Swami Shri Rama! Be it to a tapovana, or maharanyas, or maha nadis or saagaraas; we all beseech you to let us blindly yet faithfully follow you; if you decide to leave us you ought to allow us to follow you to paralokaas even. Then Rama having so agreed, fulfilled his last kartavya of Kusha Kumara having made the rajyabhisheka of dakshina koshala desa and of Lava Kumara of the utara koshala desha hand despatched them to their respective kingdoms. Later on he sent a messenger to Shatrughna.

Meanwhile, Rama arranged Kushavati Nagara nirmana near the border of Vindhya parvata as well as Shrivasti naama Rajya for Lava Kumara. Then as Ayodhyapuri having been emptied both Rama and Bharata proceeded to Saaketa Puri. Then after performing the

On that fateful yet eventful day, Kamalanayana Shri Rama requested the Rajya Purohita requested him to prepare for the 'Maha Prasthana Yatra with the 'Vidhipurvaka Vaajapeya Yajna Chatraadi Karyakrama'. To Shri Rama's right side was Shri Devi and on his left side Bhu Devi; Shri Devi was holding a Kamal Pushpa and Bhu Devi the Vyaavasaayaka (Samhaara) Shakti. Then Shri Rama was holdinbg his vishala dhanush and on the other side the astra-shastras. Amid the Veda paatha parayana four maha Veda Brahmana Panditas were reciting aloud ahead of Shri Rama and the brothers and the 'prabhrutas' for the maha prasthaana. Besides the Chatur Veda pathana the following vipra panditas was reciting Devi Gayatri-OM kaara-Vashatkaaras with utmost bhakti baava. Those Rishi-Brahmanas too were seeking to reach the Brahma Dwaara ahead. Antahpura strees, baala- vriddhaasi- daaseejana- sevakaas too following towards the Pavitra Sarayu there behind the procession. Bharata Shatrughna and their respetive strees too were carrying their agnihotras from various lanes and bly lanes. Samasta Mantri-Bhrityavarga'a along wih strees-putras-pashus-bandhavaas were following Shri Rama with vijayotsava harsha dhwaanaas. They were all high spirited with cheerful feelings with harsha naadaas. tataḥ sarvāḥ prakṛtayo hṛṣṭapuṣṭa -janāvr̥tāḥ, anujagmuḥ pragacchantāṁ rāghavaṁ guṇarāṇjitāḥ/ snātaṁ pramuditaṁ sarvaṁ hṛṣṭapuṣṭam anuttamam, dṛptaṁ kilikilāśabdaiḥ sarvaṁ rāmam anuvratam/ Hrishtha pushta Manushuyas and samasta prajaa janas were recalling the sweet memories of Rama Rajya mahakaalas; thus proceeded the 'maha jana sammuhaas of stree-purusha-pashu pakshi, bandhu bandhavas; in the Maha Yatra what with fearlessness and more so of 'hridaya prasannata' and above all of a great relief of self assurance of 'sarva paapa raahityata'. So were Vanara bhalluka ganaas after snaana niyamas joined the 'maha prasthaana'. na tatra kaś cid dīno 'bhūd vr̥ḍito vāpi duḥkhitaḥ, hṛṣṭaṁ pramuditaṁ sarvaṁ babhūva paramādbhutam/ draṣṭukāmo 'tha niryāṇam rājño jānapado janaḥ, samprāptaḥ so 'pi dṛṣṭvaiva saha sarvair anuvrataḥ/ ṛkṣavānararakṣāṁsi janāś ca puravāsinaḥ, agachan parayā bhaktyā pr̥ṣṭhataḥ susamāhitāḥ/ None and none at all among the prajaaneeka following Shri Rama was of deena-duhkha or lajjita or forlorn-sorrowful or ashamed of for the Rama's Antima Divya Yatra. Those groups of onlookers who were merely seeking to those in the procession were so inspired to enthusiastically jumped right in. Thus the Bhalluka-Vaanra- Rakshas-Puravaasis were thus dutifully and truly religiously with 'Bhakti Vishvaasaas' joined the 'Shri Rama Maha Prasthaana'.

Sarga Hundred and Ten follows: From some one and half yojana away Ayodhya, Raghukulanandana Shri Rama proceeded his 'maha prasthaana' towards the western side to reach the Sacred River Sarayu. Having arrived there, an ideal spot on the Sarayu banks was selected by Rishi Brahmanas. Just at that time, Loka Pitamaha Brahma accompanied by Deva samuhaas and RishiMunis too arrived at the PARANTHAAMA with seven crores of Divya Vimanaas. The ‘akaasha mandali’ turned as ‘jyotirmaya mandala’ while down at the spot of praranthaama was replete with pavitra-sugandhita-sukha daayi vayu as if Deva Samuhas were mildly throwing ‘divya pusha raashis’ as ‘manda varsha paramparaas’. Then Brahma Pitamha from up the skies addressed Shri Rama: bhrātr̥bhiḥ saha devābhiḥ praviśasva svakām tanum, vaiṣṇavīm tām mahātejas tad ākāśam sanātanam/ tvam hi lokagatir deva na tvām ke cit prajānate, rte māyām viśālākṣa tava pūrvaparigrahām/ tvam acintyaṁ mahad bhūtam akṣayaṁ sarvasaṁgraham, yām icchasi mahātejas tām tanum praviśa svayam/ ‘Maha Baho! May you now enter with your own chosen celestial form along with your brothers Maha Tejasvi Parameshvara. You may perhaps like to Chaturbhuja Vishnu Rupa or like the ‘Akaasha maya Sanatana Avyakta Para Brahma’ being the Tri Lokamaya Nirlipta Form of the Ever Present-Ever Potent- Ever Unknown . Your puratana patni Yoga Maya- Hladini Shakti Swarupa being Devi Sita be too join you as the Maha Maya.’ As Brahma stated with ‘paravashatva’ of endless bliss Shri Rama entered the Maha Vishnu Swarupa with his brothers with his four hands along with Bharata as Shankha, Shatrughna as Chakra, as also Gada with Shri Devi and Bhu Devi beside Him. Then Indra-Agni and all the other Devas, Saadhya-Marudganaas were absorbed in Shri Rama’s Maha Vishnu Swarupa as Divya Rishi-Gandharva-Apsaraa-Garuda- Naaga-Yaksha-Daitya-Daanava- Rakshasaas extolled Bhagavan’s ‘guna gaana sammohitaas’. Then Brahma Deva made an announcement to Maha Vishnu: Bhagavan! All the dutiful followers of your form of Shri Rama would now enter the Santaanaka Loka as the Saaketa Dhaama’s anga bhaaga! Then Vaanara-bhallukas returned to their respective devaamshaas. Similarly Pashu pakshis and Sthhaavara jangama praanis which were absorbed on the Sarayu at that time too reached the Santaanaka Saaketa dhaama.

Sampurna Ramayana’s Upasamhara and Mahatmya

Shri Rama-Devi Sita’s ‘Putra Dwaya’ Kusha Lava Kumaras commended Maha Vishnu-Maha Prakriti’s incarnations as hidden in the chataachara pranis as Avayktam- Shasvatam- Anantam-Ajam- Ayvyaam - Vishnum. Tatah pratishthito Vishnuh swarga loke yathaa puraa, yena vyaaptamidam sarvam trailokyam sacharaacharam/ Bhagavan Shri Rama had thus been reinstalled as being an incarnation of Maha Vishnu. That Shri Rama Paavana Charitra is being constantly commended by Deva-Gandharva- Siddha Maharshis as Ramayana Kaavya Shravana. Idamaakhyaanamaayushyam soubhaagyam paapanaashanam, Raamaayanam Vedaasam shraddheshu shraavayed buddhaah/ paapaanyapi cha yah kuryaadhanyahani maanavah, pathatyekamapi shloka paapaat sa parimucyate/ This prabandha kaavya is a gateway to longevity and prosperity besides being sin destroyer Ravayana is as good as Vedaas as vidwan purushas need to read and hear about. Its pathana assures suputras for putra heenaas and soubhagya to ‘dhana heenaas’. If just one shloka pathana a day or even one ‘charana’ even would ensure paapa naashana to that extent. Any person who recites for others would richly deserve of vastra-go-suvarna daanaas as the suntustha vaachakaas are pleased with deva samuhas. Indeed this Ramayana Prabandha Kavya yields ayurvridhi as ‘prati dina pathana’ bestows ‘paraloka sanmaana’. He or she with seriousness and concentration could read either at ‘praatahkala, or madhyaahna or sayam kaala’ would remain ever contented. Ramayana is of Gayatri Swarupa. Yasitvadam Raghu naadhasya charitam sakalam pathet, sosukshaye Vishnu lokam gacchhatyeva na samshayah/ Chaturvargarpradam nityam charitam Raghavasyatu, tasmaad yatnavataa nityam shrotavyam paramam sdaa/ Shrunvan Ramayanam bhaktyaa yah paadam padameva vaa, sa yaati braahmanah sthaanam Brahmanaa pujiyate sadaa/ ‘Shri Raghu naadha charitra sampurma pathana-shrotra-niddhidhyaasana ought to bestow Vishnu dhaama Vaikuntha. Raghavendra Charitra is the easy passage for accomplishing ‘chaturvidha dharmarth kaamamokshas’ in one’s own iha janmaa too.

Essence of Valmiki Baala Ramayana

Sarga one: Valmiki enquires of Brahmarshi Narada to identify the Purushottama of Tretayuga - Vishleshana- Ikshvaaku Vamsha; Rules of 'Dharma Yuddha' ; Chitrakuta mountain; Agastya ; Shabari; Anjaneya: origin and illustrative stutis; Rama Rajya; Ideal kingship; Ashvamedha Yagyna Vishleshana - Explanatory Note: Ikshvaaku Vamsha- Vishleshana - Explanatory Note: Ikshvaaku Vamsha: : Bhavishya Purana explains "After the Pralay in Treta Yuga, King Sudarshan returned from Himalaya and revived Ayodhya Puri and thanks to the and the Holy Sages. King Sudarshan ruled for thousands of years and in course of Time, his son King Dilip initiated a new generation and King Raghu heralded the Surya Vamsha or the Raghu Vamsha. King Raghu's grandson Dasharatha had the unique privilege of securing Lord Shri Rama, the 'Avatar' of Bhagavan Vishnu. Surya Vamsha dominated from Shri Ram's son Kusha downward for hundreds of generations thereafter and the Kings were by and large virtuous, engaged in Yagnas and Agni Karyas, charities and the preservation of Dharma. Padma Purana is quoted: Vaivasvata Manu had ten sons, viz. Ila, Ikshvaaku, Kushanaabha, Arishta, Dhrushta, arishyant, Karusha, Mahabali Sharyati, Prushaghna, Naabhaga and Ambarisha. By dint of relentless Tapasya, Vaivasvata secured the boon from Brahma of becoming the Supreme Administrator of Prithvi of high virtue and Fortune and thus he became the First Manu Ever! Ila also became ambitious and wandered several places and by mistake entered the 'Sharavana' Garden, little knowing that who ever entered the Sharavana would instantly turn into a woman as per the instructions of Parameswara where Shiva Deva was alone with Devi Parvati. Even outside the Sharavana, Ila as a woman was attracted to Budha, the son of Chandra (Moon). Ila's brother Ikshvaku was worried about the disappearance of Ila and having realised the fact that any male entering the Sharavana would be converted as a female and that Ila also would have been converted like wise. Ikshvaku prayed to Shiva and as directed Ikshvaku announced Ashvamedha Yagna so that Ila as a female could be identified since the brave Ila would be definitely attracted to the Ashvamedha Yagna and the challenge of holding the horse. Indeed the Plan of Ikshvaku worked well and Ila was identified as the 'wife' of Budha, the son of Chandra. The female Ila became a Kimpurush for six months and as a woman for six months as per the boon of Shiva. As a Kimpurush, Ila also known as Sudyumna gave birth to three sons Utkal, Gaya and Haritashwa and they became the Kings of Utkal (Orissa), Gaya, and Haritashwa or Kuru. Ikshvaku became the King of Madhyadesha who begot hundred sons half of whom ruled the northern side of Meru and the others the Southern side. Kakustha was the eldest son of Ikshvaku and in that lineage was born Yuvanashwa and his great grandson was the famed Kunalashwa who killed the notorious demon Dundhumara. It was in this lineage that the illustrious Mandhata who was the Chakravarti of the Universe. In his lineage were the famous Purukutsa, Muchukunda, Harischandra, Dilip, Bhagiratha who brought the Sacred Ganga to Earth, Nabhaga, Ambarisha, Raghu, Dasaratha and the Incarnation of Lord Vishnu, the Epic Hero Shri Rama who killed Ravana and his able brothers Bharata, Lakshmana and Shatrughna; the Surya Vamsha of the clan of Ikshvaku was further extended by Kusha and Lava. Brahma Purana states: Vaivaswa had nine sons viz. Ikshvaaku, Naabhaga, Dhrushta, Sharyati, Narishyanta, Praamshu, Arishta, Karusha and Prushaghna. Once Vaivaswa performed one

Yagna with the objective of begetting a daughter and Maharshi Mirtaavaruna was the Chief Priest; as the Maharshi offered a powerful oblation in the Agni Kunda, there emerged a maiden whom the Manu addressed as Ila and she took the permission of Matraavaruna and went near the Manu; the Manu blessed her, named her as Sudyumna and instructed her to expand Manu vamsha. She met Budha Deva in marriage and gave birth to Puru; she gave birth further to three sons viz. Utkal (whose Kingdom was the present Orissa), Gaya (the Capital of Gaya desha) and Vinataashva. Puru's Kingdom was distributed into parts to accommodate the nine sons too. Ikshvaaku became the Ruler of Madhyadesaha. Ila and Sudyumna was one and the same but alternatively as a woman and as a man for each six months. Naashyanta's son was Shaka; Nabhaaga begot Ambarisha; Dhrishta and Karusha begot sons of the same name; Pramshu was issueless; Sharyati got twin children-a boy named Anarta and a girl Sukanya who was wedded to Chyavana Maharshi. Anarta begot Raiva, and the latter's son was Raivata, also known as Kakudmi who became the King of Kushasthala. Once Raivata accompanied by his daughter Revati visited Brahma loka and the latter was at that time engrossed in 'Gandharva Gaana'/ the songs of Gandharva; after the singing session, Brahma when told of the purpose of their visit viz. to bless his daughter of a suitable match for her, Brahma smiled and stated that during his visit to Brahma loka, Yugas rolled by but blessed Revati to return to their place and that she would definitely wed a Mahatma. On return, the father and daughter discovered a complete change of their Place in Dwapara Yuga and on making local enquiries found Balarama, the elder brother of Krishnaas a suitable life-partner for Devi Revati; thus the age-difference of Balarama and Devi Revati was a full Yuga!

Rules of 'Dharma Yuddha' or a Battle for Justice. Once a battle is decided mutually, there should be a lead time for the preliminaries,- a week's time- to offer prayers to 'Ganesha' viz. the very First God to worship and the 'Trimurthies' (Triumverate) viz. Brahma, the Creator, Vishnu the Preserver and Eswar, the Destroyer; to 'Dikpalas' (the Gods of Four Directions); 'Rudras' the Gods of Killings; the 'Nava Grahas' (Gods of Planets) as also of Stars; and Aswini Devatas and Rivers. The Army assembles at the eastern point of the Capital City before the departure and at the start off of the March should be rejoiced by Victory Slogans and reverberation of musical instruments. There would not be a recall or a faltering step once the march is flagged off. After covering a good distance of a couple of miles, there might be a brief stop over for rest/ regrouping/ prayers. The King (Chief) should not intervene in the battle directly till the very end. But, he should be behind at a distance to keep up the morale of the Army. There should be formations of an elephant each in the center, defended by four chariots of four horses each, each horse defended by four infantrymen, who should be in the forefront, defended behind by archers and horses and behind them be 'Yantramuktas' or mechanically propelled explosives. The attacking men should have the pride of place- be it in the infantry, or on horses or chariots or 'Yantramuktas' and comparatively less courageous and defensive forces should be in the rear. A person killed in a war deserves 'Veera Swarga', equivalent to performing 'Yagnas' and a soldier who runs away or shows his back or wantonly avoids confrontation would be considered not only as a criminal in the eyes of Law but as a sinner or murderer of a Brahmin in the eyes of God. At the same time, the defeated soldiers are to be let back honourably by the victorious side with grace. It would be a sin to maltreat the defeated soldiers, slay the persons unarmed, perpetrate revenge of any kind to the citizens of the defeated kingdom, especially the spectators, scribes, women and children and take advantage of any kind to the defenceless. (Agni Purana)

Now about the Yuddha Dharmas of a Kshatriya King. In the course of 'Dharma Paalana' or of the observance of virtuous authority, then in the context of a battle with a foreign invader against his own Kingdom, then irrespective of the ability or otherwise, the King has to spare no effort in the battle and fight tooth and nail till the last drop of his blood. Sangraameshvanivartitvam prajaa -naam chaiva paalanam, shushrushaa braahmananaam cha raajnaam shreyaskaram param/Aahaveshu mithonyonyam jighaansanto maheek -shitah, yudhyamaanaah param shaktyaa svargam yaantyaparaan mukhaah/ To retreat and show his back running away from the battle field has no room for 'kshaatrava dharma' and so also his service to braahmana is so imperative and binding. In an open battle, a true kshatriya desirous of securing 'veera swarga' should never resort to devious ways of killing an enemy like using secret weaponry or by using blazing or poisonous arrows to secure the kill. Also striking a eunuch, an opponent seeking mercy, a person who flees from the fight, or simply withdraws from the fight is not commendable. Equally so would be a fight against a half asleep, unguarded, disarmed, or already engaged in a different enemy, or an onlooker enemy is not worthy of commendation. Killing an enemy with wounds on his body, or with broken weaponry, one in his retreat with disgrace is also not the quality of a purposeful fight. When a kshatriya warrior is killed even as he runs away from the battle, then a part of the sin is ascribed to the King as the Commander-in-Chief. Equally so as the valiant fights but gets killed in the battle, a part of the Veera Swarga's benefit is due to the King. The chariots, horses, elephants, military equipment, grain, women, gold and properties of the defeated King automatically gets gained to the winning King, but such possessions of the win over has necessarily to be shared by the soldiers too, lest the King's name and title as the 'Chhatrapati' or the Overall Master becomes a misnomer! Further the duty of the King would be to revive the memory of the illustrious fallen heroes and provide adequate wherewithal to his families. Alabdham chaiva lipseta labdham rakshet prayatnatah, rakshitam vardhaye - chchaiva vriddham paatreshu nikshipet/ Etachchaturvidham vidyaat purushaatha prayojanam, asya nityamanushthaanam samyak kuryaadatandritah/ or Whatever is not available in one's life, efforts be made to secure it, whatever is so secured be properly retained safe, besides what ever is retained in tact, try to improve the same; these are the four kinds of Purushardhas of Dharma- Artha- Kaama- Mokshas, and these principles of human aspirations be pursued without fail. Once a particular desire is not fulfilled then that be accomplished even by 'danda' or force, once so gained do seek to maintain it, and do try to improve and so on. A King is well equipped with 'danda' and that alone which the commonality of the public could enforce an objective with. But never try the means of deceit or roundabout guile as that path would certainly dig up flaws and deviations from what is aimed at. An enemy within or from outside could sooner or later discover ways and means of the policy objective by picking holes like when a tortoise could hide its limbs and would as such fail. Hence the direct approach to strike by force as the public has no alternative but to follow and the world around is left in wonder and admiration. The enemy too can be awed by the direct approach and would have no option. A lion uses its strength while a crane pretends meditation in patience, like a wolf snatches by trickery, but like a hare makes a double retreat. Even the external enemies would not prolong the victory by the Saama-Daana- Bhedopaayas for the fear of danda! A farmer knows as to how to cut off and sweep the weeds to preserve the crop and so does a King in protecting his Kingdom by destroying the enemies. Nevertheless, there is a word of caution by the Learned; in the event of an external enemy being either more powerful or of similar strength, then the stop in steps of Saama-Daana- Bhedas need to be employed and commended. This policy is worthy of following in the external context certainly. Referring to the domestic scene, the extent of utilising 'danda' or force might boomerang only if honesty is truly proven and only to the extent of what unreasonable and evil minded critics beyond the conviction level of the honest and duty bound masses of public as a King of dharmic values could certainly gauge. Indeed the King ought to realise the cut off limits of utilising the danda as that ought to be proven as 'pro bono publico' or as of the larger interests of the general public. Even protecting the farm produce, the weeds of opposing forces be nipped as the King's prime priority is to preserve Kingship itself. Saamaadinaamupaayaanaam chaturnaamapi panditaah, saamadandau prashansanti nityam raashtraabhivridhaye/ Yathoddharati nirdaataa kaksham dhaanyam cha rakshati, tathaa rakshennripo raashtram hanyaachha paripanthinah/ or either of rashness or ignorance, no King could possibly pull down his own kingdom, along with himself, his family and his subjects by resorting to self-defeating measures which might ruin the self, as after all his own life-force is that of his entire kingdom. Just as torturing the bodies of his limbs and senses is as severe as torturing the King himself! Hence thoughtful governance of his kingdom in turn aims at prosperity of himself and vice versa.]

Chitrakut: Most significant fact is that Lord Shri Ram along with Devi Sita and brother Lakshman spent years together at this 'Tapobhumi' or Meditation Land of Sanctity- where Maharshi Atri and his illustrious follower Munis stayed too- during his forest life as per his father Dasharatha's wish. Chitrakut is some 15 km from Karvey Station is on Manikpur-Jhansi Line of Indian Railways. At Chitrakut, the parikrama or circumambulation of Kamadagiri /mountain and Shri Rama Darshan are the significant tasks. The parikrama is to take some five days of some 30 km. Starting from Raghava Prayaga 'snana' at Sitapur-Koti Tirtha, Sita Devi's Kitchen, Hanuman Dhara-Keshavaghar, Pramodavana, Janaki kund, Sirasa vana, Spkatika shila, Anasuya- Gupta Godavari snana, Kailasa Parvata darshana- and from Chabepura to Bharat kupa and Rama Shayya or Rama's bed. On way in the Parikrama occur Mukharavinda where snana is of importance followed by temples of Hanuma, Saakshi Gopala, Lakshmi Narayana, Shri Ramas sthaana, Tulasidasa nivasa, Kaikeyi and Bharata Mandirs, Charana Paduka Mandir. There are three most hallowed 'Charana Chinha' or foot prints of Lord Shri Rama viz. Charana Paduka or His footwear prints, Janaki kunda and 'Sphatika shaala'. The specific Spot where Bharata met Rama for the first time and the molten stone of Rama's footprint is visible still. Among other hallowed Places nearby Charana Paduka are Lakshman Hill and Lakshman Mandir, Janaki Kund, Anasuya-Atri Ashram, Gupta Godavari and so on. Nearby Chitra kut are Ganesha Kund, Valmiki Ashram, Viradha Kunda, Sharabhanga Ashram, Sutikshan Ashram and Rama Vana.]

[Vishlesana or delineation about Agastya- from Matsya Purana: Sage Narada enquired of Bhagavan Shankara about the origin of Agastya Muni and Vasishtha. Maheswara explained tha once Indra despatched Vayu and Agni to destroy Danavas and having successfully killed thousands of the enemies, ignored some Daityas like Taraka, Kamalaaksha, Paravasus, Kaladamshttra and Virochana as they fled away and concealed in deep Seas. The Danavas who hid themselves kept on tormenting human beings as also Devatas eventually. Indra ordered that Vayu and Agni should dry up the Sea water, especially to kill dangerous Diatyas like Jambhasura, but the both the Devas argued that in the process of drying up the Seas even in a minor manner there would be serious havoc caused to crores of Jeevas. Indra was annoyed at their argument and cursed them to fall down on Earth from Swarga and both the Devas entered into a 'Jala Kumbha' or Water Pitcher as a single body. Meanwhile, Sages Nara and Narayana were in Tapasya on Gandhamadana Mountain, and Indra was concerned that they might not be a threat to his chair; he despatched a few Apsaras to the Mountain along with Kamadeva but their attempts to tempt the Maharshis failed. As the Apsaras continued to be stationed there, Narayana Rishi created a damsel of exquisite attraction from his thighs and named her Urvashi; he desired that Apsaras should realize that their beauty was nothing compared to whom they could materialise as Urvashi and they could not possibly tempt Nara Narayan Maharshis, after all! Mitra (Sun God) and Varuna (Rain God) happened to see the damsel and could not resist the fall of their combined semen of Mitravaruna which was deposited in the same Jala Kumbha (pitcher) that fell down from the Swarga and thus Agastya was born as Kumbha Sambhava. Vasishtha too was reborn from the pitcher earlier since he felt offended when King Nimi did not properly attend to him as he visited the King and hence gave a curse to Nimi to live as 'Videha' or without body, but the King too gave a return curse; both Nimi and Vasishtha approached Lord Brahma who solved the problem by retaining Nimi's life in his Eyes and Vasishtha to be reborn to Mitravaruna since the latter's semen fell in the pitcher on seeing Apsara Urvashi. Subsequently Agastya married Lopamudra, absorbed the entire Ocean in his Kamandulu to isolate the Danavas to enable Indra to kill the notorious Danavas and released it later as his urine and was thus stated to be salty!; he also razed down the ego of Vindhya Mountain by making him bend for ever thus banning the Mountain to stoop for ever till the Sage's return which never happened as he continued to stay down the Vindhyas. There was also the legend attributed to Agastya about the Daitya brothers Ilvala and Vatapi, who knew the Mrita Sanjeevani Mantra; they would assume the forms of Brahmanas and seek the passers by to tempt them to a feast of goat-meat, and after consuming the meal ask Vatapi to come out and Vapati would come out piercing through the tummy of the stranger and the brothers would enjoy his meat. But Agastya Muni was too clever to bless the good food saying 'Vatapi! Jeerno bhava' and Vatapi was fully digested even before Ilvala was able to recite the Mrita Sanjeevani Mantra! [Till date, devotees recite Lalita Sahasranama as inspired by 'Vaagdevatas' as also the 'Aditya Hridaya' scripted by Agastya Muni. Vasishtha, the Brahmarshi was the arch-enemy of Rajarshi Vishvamitra ever since the latter claimed Nandini the Celestial Cow and fought a battle in which Visvamitra was defeated. The enmity continued till once both the Rishis cursed each other to become birds and finally Brahma had to intervene and convert them back as human beings].

Vishleshana on Shabari;

Shabari was a tribal girl curious to know what 'dharma' was all about and approached Matanga Maharshi at the foothills of Rishyamukha mountain; the Rishi accepted her as his student and ever since lived in his ashram teaching her in his service. As years passed by she became old walking with a stick and plucking berry fruits from the gardens of the ashram; meanwhile Matanga Muni achieved 'Maha Samaadhi' in 'padmaasana' posture, while assuring her to await the arrival of Shri Rama Lakshmanas. As the latter finally did arrive, she brought basketful of berry fruits and after biting and tasting the fruits only offered them to Rama and Lakshmana declaring to the world that sincere 'bhakti' would be the 'moksha maarga'; and thus the 'Shabari Ramayana' emphasizing Bhakti for Bliss. Rama gave the discourse to Shabari about the nine folded bhakti viz. 'Satsang' or affinity with followers of Truthful Virtue - 'Shravana' or hearing all about Dharma- 'Guru Seva' or Service and Following of a Guide- 'Japa' or constant repetition of the Sacred Name of Paramatma- 'Bhajana' or chorus singing in praise of the Lord as an expression in the public and selfless service to the society- and finally 'bhakti' or intense devotion without expectation recalling Bhagavad Gita's : Karmanyevaadhikaraste maa phaleshu kadaachana, maa karma heturbhuuh maate sangostva karmani/ One has only the liberty to 'do' but never demand the return fruits about which one has no control. Yet never abstain from the performance surely expected of the person. 'Karma Phala' is as per the decision of the Almighty. What ever is decided as per destiny shall doubtless be awarded to the person concerned. Never hesitate to accept by way of self desire or by the misleading advice of the public. The very feeling of disappointment creates suspicion and self repudiation. This tends to lead to frustration which is the anti-thesis of contentment and thus further leads to a string of inabilities for further successes! That situation is tantamount to 'jadatva' or total lack of initiative!]

Brief Vishleshana on Anjaneya: Origin and Illustrative Stories

Origin) Kesari the son of Gautami Rishi and Kesari's wife Anjana secured a grand son named Hanuman with the 'Amsa' (facet) of Parama Shiva and Vayu Deva too was responsible in the birth of the boy. Mistaking Surya Deva for a red-coloured fruit, the boy was tempted to fly skyward tried to hold Surya Deva, as Indra threw his Vajra on Hanuman's body and Ravana tried to hold Hanuman's tail but Hanuman never left his firm hold of Surya Deva. Ravana kept on fighting for a year in vain and tried to wriggle out of Hanuman's powerful clasp. Meanwhile Rishi Vishrava arrived at the spot and eulogised Hanuman to release Ravana the terror of the Universe. There after Hanuman resided for long time at Pampapura on the banks of Pampa River as a strong fixture and was thus acclaimed as 'Sthanu'. Also since Ravana who had dictated the World and controlled Devas was humiliated by Anjaneya, his name and fame spread as Hanuman: Nighnanta cha Suraan mukhyam Ravanam Lokaraavanam, Nihanti Mushthirbhayah sa Hanumaaniti vishrutah. (Ravana who was in the habit of badly hurting Devas and related Demi-Gods and killing Vishnu- Bhaktas without mercy had thus been restrained badly and received a jolt by Hanuman; the 'Mushtighatas' or 'Hanus' (beatings of closed hand grasps) damaged Ravana was the reason why Hanuman was named as such. Lord Brahma informed Hanuman that during the twenty eighth Tretayuga's first Part of Vaivaswa Manvantara, Bhagavan Vishnu would take the Incarnation of Shri Rama and that he would achieve Rama's unreserved devotion to Hanuman and destroy the clan of Ravana, his cruel brothers and sinful sons. (Bhavishya Purana)

Vishleshana or analysis

Rama Rajya: The perception, as to how a King should govern his Kingdom and the Subjects, was illustrated by Lord Rama to Laxmana. Agni Purana has described Rama's Percepts of an Ideal King: A King has to create wealth, increase it, protect it, and donate it. He should be humble-the humility arising out of victory, essentially after defeating the human senses of revenge, anger and retribution. He should be strong, magnanimous and forgiving, kind and protective. His support to the inferior and the needy is as significant as to punish and uproot the wicked and harmful. The human vices of greed, lust, dishonesty are but the reflections of a sick mind, which has no conviction or courage or helpfulness to the needy. Rama also advised considerable patience to deal with the timid, haughty and hurtful as these are indeed the traits of a villain. Once there is no ray of remorse and there is no trace of recovery from the pent-up senses of ego, impoliteness and audacity, then the time to end the culprit has arrived. Bhavishya Purana. Ideal Kingship: Manu Deva then describes the ways of conduct and dharmas of a King about his origin and keys to his success as a popular and famed head of a nation. On attaining kingship to a deserving and select kshatriya origin, the King is coronated by the prescribed Vedic Principles to assume the duties expected as from a Head of the Kingdom. This is so when a Leader of the Society has to establish an authoratative Institution based essentially on Dharma and Nyaya and above all to ensure safety and security as an Integrated Identity among the comity of co-kingdoms. Hence the group of Devas like Indra, Surya, Vaayu, Yama, Agni, Varuna, Chandra and Kubera confer Kingship to the most suitable Kshatriya as per Vedic Verses hence as the unique representative of the lusters and magnificences of the combinations of the representative Devas; indeed like a Sun God the King becomes too radiant to gaze and provides the great source of authority and power sourced from the respective Devas of warmth yet heat of Agni, sweep and speed of Vaayu, placidity and coolness of Chandra, sternness and demand of justice/ virtue of Yama, ample food and sustenance of Varuna, and the auspiciousness and prosperity of Kubera! Even a King as an infant is worthy of respect and awe as there is a worthy King in him and ought to be so venerated. Indeed, careless approach and casual treatment paid to an infant king, who is no doubt, backed up the strong foundations of Kingship as from Vedic Principles, as Agni could provide warmth as also burn the whole family and property as of 'lock-stock- and barrel'! A King with his 'kaarya siddhi' or the success of his purpose as per the prevalent circumstances of 'Desha Kaala Tatwa' seeks to attain 'dharma siddhi' as he assumes varied features of kshama, krodha, mitrata, or even pratikaara or revenge! A King indeed is 'sarva tejomaya' or all powerful as he could usher in Devi Lakshmi or around prosperity, or his anger might invite mrityu or death. If a King is annoyed even by default, the victim's misfortune kicks off and his indignation is certain to mritu! Tasmaad dharmam yamishteshu sa vyavasyennaraadhipah, anishtam chaapyanishteshu tam dharmam na vichaalayet/ Tasyaartho sarvabhutaanaam goptaaram dharmama -atmajam, brahmatejomayam dandam- asrijat purvameeshvarah/ or that is why the dharmas originally created by the institution of Kingship are such as never to be infringed upon and hence the age old principles are such as shaped by the conscience of any King either of mercy or of punishments. This why any of the 'sthaavara-jangamaas' or of moving-immovable nature in Srishti are driven by the impulses of their own consciences too and the interpretations of respective Kingships as per 'desha - kaala- paristhitis' or of contemporary situations need necessarily to be upheld and observed. Hence punishments truly represent the King, his Purushtva of assertion and of unquestionable Leadership ; punishment only governs, protects, and sustains vigilance even in sleep or casualness as the constant guard and caution. Sameekshya sa dhritah samyak sarvaa ranjayati prajaah, asameekshya praneetastu vinaashayati sarvatah/ Once punishment is made applicable and enforced, it uproots the evil but once gets lax then attracts further evil. In the case of a King's negligence of punishment, the defaulted person once saved perpetuates the evil as a fried fish about to be pitch-forked spared or soft cotton piece turns into an iron rod! In case a King spares a criminal from punishment, a crow would steal a pitru pinda or a dog sniff or lick a sacrificial food just as a person of illfame forcefully occupies another's lawful house in possession since dandasya hi bhayaat sarvam jagad bhogaaya kalpate/ or the entire world loses the grip of fear and becomes all kinds of illegal perversions. Once a rod is spared then even a child is spoilt; Deva, Daanava, Gandharva, Raakshasa, Pakshi, Sarpas too once spared would be victimised with evil; being devoid of 'daanda', the conduct of all the beings in Srishti gets sullied and in respect of human beings varnaashrama dharmas are severely broken irretrievably paving way for vices and engendering evil forces Yatra shyaamo lohitaaksho dandashcharati paapahaa, prajaastatra na muhyanti netaa chet saadhu pashyati/ Tasyaahuh sampranetaaram raajaanam satyavaadinam, sameekshya kaarinam praajnam dharma kaamaartha kovidam/ That exactly why the concept of Kingship or Leadership is stated as the hinge and hold of the sensitive balance of virtue and vice; where punishment is due it ought to stalk around assuming black color and of red eyes demolish blemishes and sins. Moreso it is in the context of fulfilling the four human aspirations of Dharma-Artha-Kaama-Moksha in a measured manner; indeed hence is the presence of Leadership as assumed by a King. Kingship is defined as who is aware and conscious of the are of punishing and sparing the stick ; tam raajaa pranayansamyak trivargena abhivardhate or He is the ideal King who is truthfully wedded to the principles of virtue and nyaaya, modest and ideal earnings for the Self and dependents besides spare for charity, and controlled and regulated by moderate and just desires; but certainly not to fulfill sensual pleasures, deceitful ways of flippant lives and of selfish motivations. When punishment is prescribed it may not be palatable to unrelenting minds, but when the king concerned does not proclaim it in a non commensurate manner without adequately examining or hiding facts of the case, then the King if partial in judgment is not spared too and might affect his family even. Once the King and his family is ruined, then the store of 'adharmaas' so collected might affect not only his possessions of castles, his territories and his 'praja' and their fortunes also. Contrarily a champion of Dharma and Nyaya would carve a niche not merely among the co-kings but as in respect of Maharshis and even Devas might secure a qualification for Brahmatva! A continuous series of undue punishments out of hiding facts or ignoring them and issued by an unjust King would have repercussions on the disgrace and ruin of his deputies down the line in the Vamsha and might adversely affect those concerned like Ministers, Army Commanders and so on as involved in the declarations of judgments. Further on, even the Sages would feel the guilt and the thought processes of Devas receiving 'havyas' at the Agni Karyas in the Kingdom might be disturbed! Hence: Shuchinaa satyasandhena yathaa shaastaanusaarinaa, pranetum shakyaate dandah susahaayena dheemataa/ Svaraashtre nyaaya vrittaah syaad bhrishadashcha shatrushu, suhritsvajihmah snigdheshu braahmaneshu kshamaanvitah/ The ideal most King is such sagacious, truthful and intelligent kind of unique followers of Dharma and Nyaya, ably assisted by equally professional deputies, and indeed his judgments for or against punishments or rewards are stated to be one among the countless ones of his worthy race. The fame of such rarity are like drops of oil spreading fast in running flows of water. However the ill fame of a King unworthy of his title and seat tends to act like butter on the water flows steadily till the day of doom. The idealism of Kingship upholds the dignities of the Chatur Varnas and ensures their continuity.. Such Kings of rarity are stated to possess their daily routine as follows: in the early mornings itself, they attend the congregations of the learned and the aged vidwans of Rig-Yajur-SaamaVedas and discuss the specifics of Dharmas and of Administrative Principles involved. They worship and honour such vidwans appropriately and abide by their teachings as discussed. Such exemplary Kings are never harmed but enjoy longevity and prosperity. They are modest and that modesty makes them imperishable. For want of modesty, several Kings in history had perished along with their belongings and on the other hand hermits in forests had turned to be Kings. Veno vinashtovinayaatnahushashchaiva paarthivah/Sudaah paija vanashchaiva sumukho nimireva cha/ Prithustu vinayaad raajyam praaptavaan manureva cha, Kuberashcha dhanaishvaram brahmannyam chaiva Gaadhijah/ In the historical introspective, illustrious Chakravartis or Emperors like Vena, Nahusha, Sudaasa, Yavana, Sumukha, and Nimi perished out of their questionable and evil conduct. On the other hand Prithu and Manu flourished as Chakravatis out their outstanding modesty and impeccable character and Kubera gained the position of Dhanaadyaksha and one of the Ashtapalakas of the Universe. Vishwamitra the illustrious son of Gaadhi a Kshatriya by birth attained the status of an elevated Brahmana by the dint of perseverance, tapsya and conduct. The King should perfectly understand the aspirations of the common persons of the day especially in avoiding the pitfalls of co-Kings and most unhesitatingly try to initiate steps in constructing such a Capital City and never even seek to his own personal comfort but ensure his deputies and staff as well as the public of the Kingdom to live with comfort and safety. Towards this end, he needs to construct a fortress protected by vagaries of seasons and possible eventualities of diseases or natural disasters. Such a fortress of distinction and status be suitably equipped with defence forces to ensure safety from attacks of beasts, robbers, internal forces of revolution, external foes and such elements and fortified with weapons, grains, cattle and fodder, ample water and tools, as also Vidwans, artisans, and representatives of chatur varnas, and above all Purohitaas or Priests and Ritvigs to duly perform various smarta karmas of auspicious nature besides the shroutha karmas of daily agni karyas and Sacrifices. Yajeta raajaa kratubhirvi vidhairaapta dakshinaih, dharmartham chaiva viprebhyo dadyaad bhogaan dhanaani cha/ Saanvatsarikamaaptaishcha raashtraadaahaarayad balim, syaachchaamnaayaparo loke varteta pitrivatnrishu/ The King has to be such as always engaged in Ashwamedhaadi yajnas attracting learned Brahmins to receive gifts and charities of golden ornaments, precious clothes and so on besides providing employment to workers as also the participating crowds of public with feasts. Indeed the King is stated more than a father and protector of the interests of one and all. As the citizens of the Kingdom are responsive of the noble activities of the King and the band of his officials of commitment ensuring peace and safety, the taxes are paid on time and general business climate is salutary and hence the economy is sound and attracts investments from the public and from foreign kingdoms too. Besides plugging in loopholes of business transactions, the King too motivate the officials down the line with incentives, moral persuasion and punishments against inefficiency or corruption. As Brahmana Vidyathis emerge out of Guru Kula after Vedaadhyayana are suitably gifted and trained for more and more tough assignments to preserve and promote dharmaacharana since nidhir braahmanobhi dheeyate or indeed Brahmanas are the treasures installed by the Kings that could neither be lost nor robbed; such treasures could also not be split, nor perish as they are ever-sustained by the purity and blaze of Agni itself. Samamabraahmane daanam dvigunam braahmanabrue, praadheete shatasaahasramanantam veda -paarage/ Paatrasya hi visheshena shraddadhaanatayaiva cha, alpam vaa bahu vaa pretya daanasya phalamashnute/ While charity is offered to any of Varnas then there would be good returns of 'sukrita phala', but once that daana is given to a Brahmana the returns get doubled; once that daanas are executed to a well read and knowledgeable Brahmana, the fruits get further intensified hundred thousand fold, while the recipient is a Veda Vedanga paaranga, then he demands 'anantha phala'! Even if a 'daana' were given as per one's own ability, then undoubtedly a deserving status is accomplished in the higher worlds. (Manu Smriti)

Reverting back to stanzas 94 -96: The most illustrious personality of Treta Yuga having successfully poineered over hundred Asvamedha Yagjnas having executed ten thousand crores of daanaas especially of milch cows had kept up the flag of dharma atop, reigned for 11 thousand years and then got absorbed in the time cycle.

Sarga Five: From the ongoing Vaivaswa Manvantara till King Dasharatha to Shri Rama.

Vishleshanas on Sagara Chakravarti to Bhagiratha; Ayodhya; Kingship duties

[Vishleshana of Sagara Chakravarti and Bhagiratha: Maha Bhagavata Purana is quoted: Harischandra and his wife displayed unprecedented determination and tenacity to uphold Virtue and Self-sacrifice. The Son Rohitasya was brought back to life and was made the King, while Harischandra and wife Chandramati were provided instant places in Heavens. Visvamitra helped to populate the Kingdom and set examples of Dharma and surrender to Almighty. Harischandra's lineage after his son, Rohitasya was followed by sons Haritha-Champa-Sudeva-Vijaya-Bharuka-Vakra-Bahuka and Sagara (Sa-Gara ie born with poison, as Bahuka's co-wives tried to poison the boy's mother). Emperor Sagara performed Asvamedha (Horse) Sacrifice and Indra hid the horse which was discovered by the unruly 60,000 sons of Sagara, nearby the place where Sage Kapila was practising Sankhya Yoga and when disturbed badly, the Sage burnt all of them into ashes by his power. Sagara's son by another wife, Asamanjasa or Ansuman pursued the search of the Sacrificial Horse and found the Horse where Kapila was in meditation. Ansuman begged of the Sage about the whereabouts of his cousins and was informed that the hooligans were burnt to death and could be brought back to life only when washed by the River of Ganges which could only be brought down to Earth from the Skies. The Sacrifice of Horse having been performed by Sagara, Ansuman began his devotion to Lord Siva to bring Ganges down to Earth. But neither he nor his father Dilipa could succeed in the mission. It was for Bhagiradha to pursue the operation further. If Harishandra gave an eternal memory in truthfulness and integrity, a person of the same dynasty proved as a role model in tenacity. His life's mission was to bring Ganges down to Earth from Heavens. Bhagiradha's prayers were indeed granted by Mother Ganges to the devotee but warned him that the force of the flow from the Heavens to Earth could be withstood by no less than Lord Siva Himself! Bhagiradha never stopped his grand endeavour and worshipped Lord Siva with austerity and purity who agreed, not only because of the sincerity with which the devotee desired to fulfill the long-standing family wish but also owing to the reason of Universal advantage. The Lord assumed a massive body and controlled the force of the River flowing from Lord Vishnu's feet and bore the brunt of the impact on His head in His 'Jatajut' or twisted hairs and released but a portion of the Holy River. Bhagiradha directed the fiery flow by riding a fast Chariot and brought it to the place where the ashes of his forefathers were purified and their souls liberated to Heavens. Till date, humanity continues to be grateful to him for the ever lasting memory of his gigantic efforts in our reaping the fruits of his labour in the huge land-mass covering entire 'Aryavarta' (Northern India)!!

[Vishleshana on Ayodhya:Ayodhya:Akaaro Brahmatah proktam Yakaaro Vishnuruchyate, Dhakaaro Rudra rupascha Ahodhyaanaama raajate/ Sarvopa Paatakaairyuktair rahmahatyaadi paataakai, Na yodhyaa shaktate yasmaattaam ayodhyaam tato viduh/ (Skanda Purana, Vaishnava Khanda Ayodhyaa) Ayodhyaa is defined as ' A- kaara is Brahma, Ya-kaara is Vishnu and Dha-kaara is Rudra Swarupa; thus Ayodhya is a composite form of Tri Murthis. Maha Pataakas too are demolished by naming the Name of Ayodhya!) Valmiki Ramayana in Bala kaanda exclaims: Manunaa Maanavendrena saa Puri nirmitaa swayam/ (Manu confirms that he himself constructed Ayodhya himself!) In his opening introduction of Ayodhya Kaanda of Skanda Purana, Maha Muni Suta greets Bhagavan Shri Rama saying: Namaami Parama- atmanam Ramam rajiva lochanam, Atasikusuma shyamam Ravanaantaka mavyayam / (My greetings to Lord Shri Rama the Paramatma who is lotus eyed and of blue colour the terminator of the cruel and vile Ravanaasura). Ayodhya puri is so sacrosanct that sinful beings could ever enter it, let alone reside there! From his right foot thumb emerged Ganga and Sarayu river got manifested from left foot thumb. That is why both the Rivers are Sacred and worthy of prostrations and bathing in these rivers is as effective as destroying Brahma hatya sin. Even before the Avatara of Shri Rama, Ayodhya was the Capital of Surya Vamsha Kings of Ikshvaku; the latter was the son of Vaivashwata Manu and to this dynasty belonged to the illustrious Bhagiratha, Ambarisha, Nahusha, Yayati, Nabhaga, Ajan and Dasharatha. Skanda Purana in Vaishnava Khanda, Ayodhya Mahatmya gives the account of Veda Vijnana Vishnu Sharma whose severe Tapasya attracted Maha Vishnu darshana and the Pandita's request to him him the boon of constant Vishnu darshana; in turn Maha Vishnu instructed Sudarshana Chakra to dig up Bhumi and bring up Ganga from Patala Loka and the resultant Sacred Water flow was materialised as Chakra Tirtha. Earlier, Brahma himself resided at Ayodhya even before the incarnation of Shri Rama and hence the emergence of Brahma Kund. Brahma conveyed to Devas about the significance of this Tirtha -as given in Skanda Purana- would be such as that whoever performed formal snana at the Kund and gave away daana would have been deemed as securing Ahwamedha yagna phala and blessed to fly as clad in Divya Vastras to Brahma Loka for residing there till the ensuing Pralaya. From Brahma kunda to the not too far Sarayu River is Runa Vimochana Tirtha where Muni Lomasha popularised specially among his followers who were delighted as the debts of one's very existence by way of births and deaths to parents and sons and the teacher, quite apart from the material debts of the current and past 'janmas' are cleared by snanas at the Tirtha. To the east of the Runa Vimochana Tirtha is the Paapa mochana Tirtha. Skanda Purana narrates the story of Panchala desha Brahmana was Maha Paapi who became conscious of his heaping stocks of sins and casually heard the conversation of a Group of Sadhus visiting Ayodhya. He visited Paapa Vimochana Tirtha along with them and happened to bathe on a Maagha Krishna Chaturdashi and also performed daana karyas and he realised an unusual transformation in his psyche and was surprised to vision a Viman beckoning him and flew to Vishnu dhaam. Ahead of the glorious Paapa machana Tirtha is the Sahasra dhaara Tirtha which is known for demolishing all obstacles in life and overcoming enemies by mere snaana with faith and mental discipline. This indeed was the very Tirtha where after the close of the entire Ramayana, Lord Shri Rama instructed Lakshmana to bathe and by his own Mantra Shakti assume the Form of Adi Sesha! Actually, the background was that when Shri Ram who had once had an important visitor viz. Kaal Devata about which even Lakshman was unaware and instructed Lakshman not to enter and allow any visitor to enter either. Lakshman was faithfully guarding the entry of Rama Nivas by taking sincere rounds up and down the 'dwaar'. Meanwhile Maha Tapaswi Durvasa Maharshi who is noted for his short temper arrived and affectionately asked Lakshmana to let Ram inform of his arrival for Rama darshan. Lakshman being aware of Duravas's shaapa shakti alerted Rama of the Muni's arrival. With a view to protect his own Satya Vak Paripalana of Lakshman's disobedience despite his instruction, Rama had to resort to the extreme step of asking Lakshmana to perform Prana tyaga of Lakshmana. As Lakshmana took the form of Adishesha and visited Indra Loka even as the Sahasra Manis and their luster vanished, the lest the Tirtha place on Sarayu diminish significance, Indra and Devas arrived on the Spot ensured and in fact doubled its glory and sanctity and named it Sahasra Dhaara Tirtha and Lord Shri Rama blessed the title too for the benefit of posterity and Loka Kalyan. Swarga dwaara dhaara: Skanda Purana further describes as follows: Every Tirtha darshana has one's own benefits yet Swaga dwaara Tirtha has its own: Pratah kaala snana, japa-tapa-havana-upavasa-darshana-dhyaana-adhyana- daanas have their distinct results and those beings like the Chatur varna humans, mriga-pakshi-jala chara-krimi keetakaadi pranis happen to die at this Tirtha are qualified to direct access to Swarga and Vaikuntha dhaam. Bhagavan Vishnu in his Avatara Swarupas, especially of Shri Rama with his wife and brothers are stated at this Tirtha to select beings for their respective Punya Phalas and decide their 'nirnyas' based on their own past karmas overshadowing their contributions at the Swarga dwaar snaanas and punya karma mix. And so does the presence of Kailasha Vaasi along with Devi Parvati and their followers woul oversee the process of selection of Beings for the Higher Loka Prapti, asserts the Skanda Purana. Near Swarga dwaara is the Nageshwara nath Mandir; it is stated that originally this Murti was originally made of Kusha grass but later King Vikramadiyta resurrected and re-established the Idol with Veda mantras in a move to revive several 'Praachina' or age old Mandirs in Ayodhya. Yatris perform Pinda daana at Swarga dwaar Ghat with great devotion and bhakti. Chandra Sahasra Tirtha where Chandra sahasra vrata Udyapana is performed as also Argha danas are done on every Purnima Tithis to Chandra-Rohini Devis. Swarna Tirtha where Maharshi Vishwamitra's sishya Koutsa Muni called on Raghu Rama once and said that he wished for so much of wealth which he desired to give to his Guru which Rama too might nor possess. Shri Rama thought for a while and requested the Muni to please stay back in his court of Ayodhya overnight. Then Shri Rama invited Kubera Deva to bring considerable gold and on receiving it gave it away to Koutsa Muni. Next morning, Rama gave away all the gold given by Kubera and kept up his word by redonating the same to the Muni and truly satisfied him. This Swarna Tirtha had thus attained a gold-bestowing reputation and fulfill the material desires of who ever performed worship by way of snaana- daana-Japas with utmost faith. One of Ayodhya's major Mandirs is Kanak Bhavan which is quite big and mention worthy whis was supposed to be of Shri Ram's 'antahpura' or the interior palace hall where Devi Sita resided too. (There are big sized Sita Rama Idols seated on a throne together in the Mandir as also the idols of the very past which were however smaller. From Kanaka Bhavan away is the most famed Shri Rama Janma Sthaana which was stated to have been rebuilt as Masjid Babri ; this Masjid which became the hot controversy was partially destroyed to make way for the original now albeit as a small make believe Mandir. Near to Rama Janma Sthaana are Sita Rasoyi or kitchen, Kopa bhavan or the Place where the love-fight Rama- Sita couple stayed; Ratna Simhasan or the Royal Throne made of jewels, Ananda Bhavan or the Palace of Joy, Ranga Mahal or the Hall of Music and Dance etc. The other Places worthy of visiting in Ayodhya's Sarayu River banks include Lakshman Ghat with a five feet Lakhmana Swami in the Mandir exclusively dedicated to him; Ahalya Ghat where Lord Rama is stated to have performed Yagna; Hanuman gadhi on an elevated sixty steps an Lord Hanuman in seated form; Darshaneshwar, Mani Parvat with Ashoka Stupa of broken 200 ft; Dantana Kund where Rama was stated to have had his mouth wash, where also Gautama Buddha, while in Ayodhya too rested. Dasharatha kund was the Place some few km. away on Sarayu River banks where King Dasharatha's 'Antya Dahana' was stated to have been performed. A mini- Parikrama of some 4 km around Ayodhya touches Ramaghat, Raghunadha Das gaddi, Sita kund, Agni Kund, Vidya kund, Mani Parvat, Kubera parvat, Sugriva parvat, Lakshman ghat, Swarga dwaar and back to Ram ghat. While no doubt Shri Rama Navami Celebrations on Chaitra Shukla Navami are famed for several days every year, Shravana Shukla Paksha festivities and Sarayu River snaaas are considered as sacred, especially on Kartika Purnima)]

Vishleshana on Kingship Duties : A King is expected to be an earthly version of God, responsible for creating happiness and welfare, preserving security and prosperity and punishing the evil and disobedient. He is expected to set examples, without favour or fear. He should be above suspicion or indiscipline, promote competition and justice, encourage diligence and duty. His Coronation is a multi-splendered spectacle with elaborate Rituals and Sacrifices, fun and fanfare, feasts and festivities and gifts and gratitudes to poor and unprivileged. On taking over the Kingship, he makes a series of appointments and postings of Priminister and Ministers, Top Officials and Advisers and a whole lot of Workforce at various levels. A Military General has to be a Kshatriya or Brahmin, a Treasurer has to have keen knowledge of Jewels, a Charioteer should be an expert of horses& elephants as also an outstanding ability of conducting chariots with alacrity on the battle fields, Doctors of experience and proven merit, and likewise persons of outstanding ability in each and every discipline and tested loyalty to the King and the Court. Each official of any level has to be well behaved, honest, diligent and above all types of temptations. There has to be a completely decentralised system of Governance, within a well- set and publicly announced framework of Rules and there could never be an exception unless with the approval of the King who makes the Law or its Interpretation. There has to be a strong and widespread network of espionage and surveillance to the grass root levels to protect the interests of the Kingdom, the King, Officials and law-abiding citizens. Criminals are severely punished and Loyalists are assured of peaceful existence. The course of Law is not only just and swift but also should look to be convincing, transparent and unambiguous. The fiscal and monetary policy of the Government should also be uniform, impartial and well defined. Taxes are fixed as per the Sacred Texts and the process of tax collection has to be smooth, timely and automatic. Defaulters or protesters have to get opportunities to approach the Concerned Officials. Property Rights are also to be well defined, especially in respect of the poor, women, children, orphans and disabled and regular courts of civil and criminal cases are to be dealt with within approved time frames. There are various techniques used to let the offenders make confessions, the most significant ones being, 'Sama' (persuasion), 'Dana' (Gifting), 'Bheda' (divide interests), 'Danda' (punish), 'Maya' (Decieve or create make- believe situation), 'upeksha' (ingore) and 'mayajal' (jugglery). Punishments accorded to offenders not only punitive but more than that they serve as examples to ensure that others perpetrate similar offences. For example, a thief who steals Gold or Jewellery has his hands cut. A Brahman who provides wrong or misleading witness would be banished from the Kingdom. In case anybody kills cows, horses, elephants or camels would be summarily executed. Cases of abduction of a woman, or of poisoning, arson too attract execution. Disloyalty by a woman to husband or vice versa have their facial parts cut, torn by dogs and paraded in public.(Manu Smriti)

Sarga Fourteen: Ashva medha yagjna performed gloriously

Visleshanas on: Homa kunda- bhojanas of bhakshya-bhojya-lehya- choshya- paneeyaas; Ritviks of yagjna;

Vishleshana on Ritviks: Homa Kunda [Taittireeya Aaranyaka: Construction of Homa Kunda: As the northern side altar , a knee deep pit be dug up filled with water up to the ankle as covered with lotus leaves, stalks and lotus flowers. There on flat platform be devised and Agni is placed. Then the Brahmapada notionaly raise questions: Why this Agni is stated to be ‘pranite’ or revered and ‘chiyate’ or gathered together! The replies re given: Agni is revered as placed waters; Agni is gathered as it is called ‘Ahitagni’ the one fostering auspicious -ness as also to safe guard the trilokas with celestial mobility. There is another type of ‘abhitaani’ or stationary Fire especially due to the concern of water sprinkles and also to protect ‘abhishikta’ deities. This procedure termed ‘Arunaketuka’ is stated common to yagjna varieties such as ‘Agnihotra- Darsha purnaamaasa-Pashubandhana and Chaturmasya; these applications are practised with yagjnas or more appropriately the Yagja kratus. Shandika Maharshi when raises a question as to which kind of Agni’s worship is commended; the reply obviously states that such yagjna karya as yields advantages all through the year as termed as ‘Saatvitram Agni’ apparently targetting Surya Deva and even beyond. Indeed the universe is full of water and nothing else and Prajapati emerged on a lotus leaf with a unique wish. As a thought appeared on his mental retina, that thought got converted as a speech; tad vaachaa vadati, tatkarmanakaroti or once the speech emerges, then that leads to action; then that action symbolises a Veda Mantra! Initially thus a desire led to mind. The primary thought blossomed as the flower of reality. Rig Veda vide 10.129.4 is aptly quoted: Kaamastadagre samavartataadhi manaso retah prathamam yadaaseet / sato bandhusati niravindann / hrudi prateeshyaa kavayo maneesheti/ or right at the very beginning of Virat Swarupa had the wish to manifest ‘Srishti’ and that thought like a ‘beeja srijana saamardhya’ or the ability to generate the seed was caused. Once the unique thought of a highly personified knowledge occurs then that intense thought takes the form of Reality! It is said that Sages have the impulse of mind which leads to fruition. This very Vedic Triplet of ‘hridaa-manasaa-maneesha’ is confirmed vide Rig Veda I.61.2 : Asmaaidu praya iva prayaami bharaamyangyusham baadh suvritti, Indraaya hridaa manasaa maneesahaa pratnaaya dhiyo marjayanta/ or we offer a limited ‘havishya samaana stotra’ as an ideal chant for ‘sharu vinaashana’; Rishi ganas offer sacred stotras by way of hridaya-manas-buddhi! Consequent on the desire to undertake creation, Prajapati having performed tapas, shook off his body and a small mass of flesh got generated and three Maharshis appeared viz. Aruna-Ketavah-Vaakarashana and stood up. From His long nails appeared Vaikhaanasa; from His long hairs or ‘Vaalaas’ emerged Vaalakhilyaas from whose essence water got generated. There after from the waters , kurma or tortoise crawled therein. Prajapati addressed the kurma: have you emerged from my ‘twang’ or skin and ‘maamsa’ or flesh. Kurma replied in the negative and said that even in the ancient times, that the concept of ‘Purushatvam’ or virility of the universe accomplished its existence; the tortoise then assumed thousand heads and thousand eyes; the thousand eyes flashed from the waters. Then the Creator Prajapati exclaimed : Tamabraveet / tvam vai poorvagn samabhoohu / tvamidam poorvah kurushveti / or ‘ indeed, you were born well before I came into existence; since you were the first , you created the universe well before me! Having confessed thus the Virat Purusha picked water from the primordial ocean from his hands and deposited a fistful water towards the easterly direction uttering the mantra ‘ evaa hyeva’! Tat Aditya udtishthat, saa praachee dik/

Aditya then stood uptowards the easterly direction; Arunaketu Deva then deposited water in the southern direction pronouncing the mantra : ‘evaahy vagna’ when Arunaketu Agni manifested. Then Arunaketu offered firstful of water to the western direction with the mantra ‘eaahi vaayu’ and Vayu Deva manifested upwards from the ocean. Then Arunaketu Deva offered water in the northern direction with the mantra ‘evaahi Indra’ and Indra Deva manifested. As Arunaketu offered to the ‘Antariksha’ with the mantra ‘evaahi Pushan’ and the Antariksha Devata Pushan manifested. Arunaketu further deposited water into the space stating ‘eaahi deva’ then ‘Deva manushyaa Pitarah Gandharva apsarasas’ got manifested. Further on, waterdrops were sprinkled by the Virat Prusha and the waters fell down: ‘taabhyo~suraa rakshaagmsi pishaachaashchodatishann / tasmaatte paraabhavann | viprudbhyo hi te samabhavann’ or there got manifested asuras, raakshasaas, pishachis and were defeated and destroyed subsequently. Then the waters enveloped the mighty womb and Swayambhu Manu . Rig Veda vide 10.121.7 states: Apo ha yadbrihareer vishvamaayangarbha dadhaanaa janayantiragnim, tato Devataanaam samavarta - taasurekah kasmai Devaaya havishaa vidhema/ or even before srishti, a massive form of water or the ‘Mula Kriyaasheela Tatwa’ got overshadowed; this got conceived as a ‘garbha’ and from there emerged Agni-Akaasha and there followed the primeform of Praana the Vital Energy which was worshipped with unanimity and utter sincerity! From the waters in mass or in smaller units got created and so did the Celestial Swarupa of Pajapati on his own as ‘atmaana aatmaanam’ as Self Created. Thus Prajapati the Self Generated, created the worlds, all the Beings, Directions, Intermediate Lokas, and so on. He enters within every Being, every feature and facet, within-without, inside and outside out, comprehensively and intrinsically. Indeed He is omni-present, omni potent and omni-scient! 125.1-9: Preparation of Homa Kunda: The preparation of the homakunda or the Fire Altar arranged in the northern direction as dug up knee deep and filled with water. On the top of the altar are lotus leaves spread over and the ‘Hiranya Purusha’ installed; Tapo vai pushkaraparnam satyagmrutmaha amrutam purushaha, etaavadvaa vaasti yaavadetat yaavadevasti tadavarundhe / The lotus leaf is the tapo vedi; Satya or the personification of Truth as the ‘rukma’ or the golden shine- and Amritam or Immortality; indeed the divine combination is of ‘satyam-rukma-amritam’. He next step is to instal Kurma the Sacred Tortoise which indeed is the ‘medha’ or the essence of water as stated to have been derived from Swarga; Kurma is the Supreme Purusha existent well before Prajapati the ‘karta of srishti’ or chief of Creation. Now the prayer of the Karta of the agjna: May we secure continuous flows of water by the help of ‘Tisra Paramaja’ Agni, Vayu, Bhaskara. Thereafter, let this Homa Kunda be filled in by the powers concerned. Let the powers represented by the bricks at the Homa Kunda be enhanced by the mantra of Indra ghosha vasubhih. The Yagjna karta may then prepare five compartments or sections each with Agni in ‘pancha chitayh’ or five layers decorated by special things like Yavan et.c. The worshipper then places five lotus flowers in each compartment representing ‘Panchaagnis’ viz. Aahavaniya, Gaarhapatya, Dakshina, Sabhya, and Vasatya. Now the second brick named ‘lokaprana’ or the large brick named Virat of five feet representing bhumi, antariksha, swarga; dishas or directions, and ‘paroraja’ or what is beyond swarga; the space fillings are of ‘loka praana’. ya etamagninchinute / ya uchainamevam veda / or He who worships Agni Deva illuminates like the Viraja or the Emperor !]

There were maganimous bhojanas of bhakshya-bhojya-lehya- choshya- paneeyaas [Pancha Bhakshya or fried and other savoury or sweet food items, Bhojya basic eatables like cereals, Lehya or those consumed with the use of tongue, choshya or consumed by using lips and paaneeyas or drinkables] daily in separate halls as per varnas of Brahmana-Kshatriya- Vaishya-Service classes and of respective sex. The elderly- youth-child of men and women besides of disabled or ill persons were served and ever contented. Deeyatam deyataamannam vaasaamsi vividhaanicha, iti sanchoditastra tathaa chakuraneshah/ The watch words among the invitees as pronounced loud and clear often declared by the volunteers of the kingdom's 'annashalaas' were: Take the Food and Take New Clothes! The freshly cooked food, especially the cereals were of the magnitudes of mountain heaps! All the populace as the guests of the yajna coming from far and near were of uniform voice of total contentment and happiness. There were several voluntary groups of Brahmanas performing recitations of 'vedamantras' attracted by the mesmerised audiences. In fact there were 'sadasyas' of the contingent of panditas engaged in the yajna karmas were such as not all round erudites, veda vyakarana -adi panditas, brahmacharya paalakaas and 'bahushrutas' or experts in more than one vedas, besides being 'tarka-meemaamsa pravenas'. In the formal yajna in progress, there arrived a time for tying six sturdy and standing bulls to be tied to firmly fixed wooden polesticks on earth. The strong poles be preferably made of devadar wood. These should be six some with twenty one clothings dressed up and arranged in six rows firmly. The work force needed to be well trained and the hardening of the erectness of the poles, tying the clothings and their presentable uniformity of cloth, colour and design pattern. The poles should be 504 inches height with eight angled each and the overall presentability be smoothening to the objective looks. The designed and colored clothing on the polls be scented with 'pushpa chandan' in worship and looked up in an areal manner would look awesome to the celestials above. Now, the bricks arranged on the yajnavedi were sprinkled with mantras by brahmana panditas and placed inside the 'agni kunda' by the King. The emerging 'Agni jvaalaas' gradually pick up speed and wide spread by way of convection, conduction and radiation in eighteen directions. Further, the polls as arranged are stated to bundle up with tree hundred each of pashu-pakshi-sarpas as having been under the control of various Devas and thus get subdued. Meanwhile, Patta Mahishi or the Prime Queen Devi Koushalya already seated with the King would be requested to sprinkle sacred waters on the Horses for the sacrifice as also on the three swords of length and sharpness and touch them. Then she would spend the entire night beside the sacrificial horses at the 'Ashva shaala' voluntarily in the name and glory of 'dharma'. Then Hotaardharvyustathathod graataa hastena samayojayan, mahishyaa parivritthhaaya vaavaataamparaam tathaa/ Subsequently, the priests named hota-adharvyu and Udgaataa joined their hands together on the sacrificial horse.

Vishneshana on the Ritviks of Yajna: The main priests of Yajna Karyas are the Hota who recites the invocations especially of Rigveda; Athavyu is responsible for the physical and material details of the yajna and an erudite of Yajurveda; Udgaata is the chief chanter of the suktas and specialist Saama Gaana and responsible for pressing the Soma juice. Besides these are Brahmanas as Agneedhi and Prashastar, besides Purohita of course. Thereafter, the private part of the Horse for the Sacrifice is burnt and the specified body parts of the animal are sacrificed in the flames of Agni Deva along with the recitation of the relevant chants in chorus. As per the Kalpa Sutra, the duration of Ashvamedha yajna comprises three phases; on the first day the phase comprises Chatushtoma or Agnishtoma. The second phase on the following day is called Ukthya and third phase in the final day is named Atiraatra. Jyotishthomaayusheechaiva atiraatrou cha nirmitou, abhijid vishv ajit chaivamaaptoryaamou maha kratuh/

Maha Kratus are considered as Jyotishthoma, Aayush homa, Ari raatraas twice over, Abhijit the fifth, Vishvajit the sixth, Aaptyoryaamas as the Maha Kratu as the substitutes in times thereafter the relevance of Ashvamedha Yajna. After the successful execution of the Ashvamedha Yajna, King Dasharatha donated away the eastern part of Ayodhya to the Hota, the northern portion to Udgaata, the southern part to Brahma and thus his empire. Then, the Rikvikas stated that instead of giving away the territories of the land, the King be pleased to donate them : Maniratnam suvarnam vaa gaavo yadvaa samudyatam, tat prayacchha nrip shreshtha dharanyaa na prayojanam/ Narashreshtha! You might as well donate to us Mani- Ratna-Suvasas or Cows and such precious materials and what avail could be the territories of land to us! Then Dashartha entrusted the task of distribution of ten lakh cows, crores of gold mudras and four time more of silver mudras for distribution. The totality of the Brahman hood then blessed the unique King who had successfully performed the Maha Yajna stating: Bhavishyanti sutaa raajaschatvaaraste kulodvaahah/ You should be blessed with foursome capable sons of everlasting virtue and glory!

Visleshana on Naama karana vide Dharma Sindhu:

Nama karana: On the eleventh or twelfth day of the child’s birth, Namakarana is required to be performed. Some say that although ‘Ashoucha’ continues upto the tenth day of the birth, Nama Karana might as well be performed on that day itself. To Kshatriyas this function needs to be done on the thirteenth or the sixteenth day; to Vaishyas on the sixteenth or the twentieth day and to Shudras on twenty second or the month-end. However, in the ‘Mukhya Kaala’ on the birthday of the child, it is stated that there is no deed for specially ascertaining the Punya Tithi Nakshatraas for the Nama karana if done on the ‘Mukhya Kaala’ or the day of the birth although the Gouna Kala or the time of birth would need be examined from the angle of Yoga since one should avoid the Vaidhruti-Vyateepaata Sankranti Grahanas, Amavasya etc. If not possible to perform the Namakarana in the Mukhya kaala, then the Propitious timings are on Tithis barring Chaturthi, Shashthi, Ashtami, Navami, Dwadashi, Chaturdashi and Purnima; Soma, Bhdha, Guru and Shukra Vaaraas are suitable; Ashwini, Uttara, Uttaraashaadha, Uttaraabhadra, Rohini, Mrigasirsha, Punarvasu, Pushya, Hasta, Swaati, Anuraadha, Shravana, Dhanishtha, Shatabhisha and Revati are good; Vrishabha, Simha and Vrishchika Lagnaas are good. Now there could be four kinds of names that are ascribed to a child: Devataa naamaas are as per Ishta Devas; second alternative is on the basis of Maasaas as illustrated as follows: Chaitraadi maasa naamaani Vaikunthodha Janardana Upendro Yagna Purusho Vaasudevastathaa Harih Yogishah Pundarikaakshah Krishnonantochyuta stathaa Chakreeti Dwaadashaitaani Naamaani kramaadaahurmaniishinah/ (All these names are on the basis of Chandramaana). The third criterion is as per Nakshatraas in : Ashvayuk, Aapabharana, Kartikah, Rouhinah, Margasirshah, Ardraakah, Punarvasu, Tishyah, Aasleshah, Maghah, Purvaaphalgunah, Uttaraaphagunah, Hastah, Chaitrah, Swaati, Vashaakhah, Anuraadhah, Jyaishtah, Moolakah, Purvaashaadhah, Uttaraashaadhah, Abhijitah, Shraavanah, Shravishtah, Shata bhishak, Pooravaa –Proushtha paadah, Utaraa proushtakpadah, and Raivatah/ As per Jyotisha Grandhaas the names could be on the lines of ‘chu-che-cho-la Ashwiniproktaa’ like Chelesha, Cholesha or Lakshmana starting with the name of the Nakshatra. But Shrouta Granhaas are not in agreement to this method. Shaankhaayanaas follow the method of naming the boys on the basis for Nakshatra in another way: like those born in Kritika are named as Agni Sharma. The fourth method is of Vyaavahaarika use or socialised version. For boys the name might contain ‘Samaakshara’ or of even number like of the second, fourth, six letters and for girls odd-number names. Normally the words like Sharma-Shastri are suffixed to Brahmana boys or Varmanas in the case of Kshatriyas, Guptaas in reference to Vaishyas and Daasas for Shudras. Even if the earlier Samskaaraas like Garbha dhaana, Pumsavana, Seemanta, Paada Kruccha, Artha Krucchaadi were not performed earlier, the ‘parihaara prayaschitta homas’ and ‘pratyamaanaaya daanaas’ be executed and make the Sankalpa of Namakarana vidhaana: Asya Kumaarasyaayurabhi vridhhi dwaaraa vyavahaara siddhi beeja garbha samudbhavaino nibarhana dwaaraa Shri Parameshwara preetyartham Naama karmka cha tantrena karishye/—Then the Swasti Vaachanaas would be recited: Jaata karma naama karmanoh Punyaaham bhavanto bruvantu/—Asya Kumarasya Jaata karmaney yetannaamney cha Swasti bhavanto bruvantu/ Then Brahmanas would write down on rice grains in a silver plate the Vyavahaarika Naama of the son which the father would announce to the invitees audibly and clearly followed by other formalities including Mangala Geetas, Brahmana Dakshinas and Bhojanaas.]

He was indeed like an untarnished full moon. He could ride on an elephant top with grace and self confidence or ride on a speedy horse with the same ease as an intrepid warrior. He was an ardent son following the basic principle of 'pitru vakya parapalata' or true follower of what the father's word of wish would in spirit and will. On top of all these attributes of glory, Rama was a champion of Dhanur Vidya.

Vishleshana on 'Dhanurveda' (The Science of Archery and Weaponry) and Rules of Battle:

'Dhanurveda' or the knowledge of Archery and Weaponry is an important aspect covered in Agni Purana. Mainly five categories of weaponry are stated to have been used in the days of yore, viz. 'Yantramukta' launched from Yantra (machinery/ engines), including arrows released from bows; 'Pani Mukta' or thrown by hands, like stones or spears; 'mukta sandharita' ie. flung or withdrawn by hands; the weapons like swords invariably used by hands; and 'amukta' used by brute force such as duels/wrestling. The use of bow and arrows is an art by itself: the bow ('dhanush') with a tightly fitted strong string, making an arch form and the arrow drawn back as far as possible to be released while chanting a prayer to the respective Gods like 'Agni' (Fire), 'Vayu' (Wind), 'Indra' (Chief of Devas), 'Varuna' (God of Rain), Serpent ('Naga') etc. appropriate to an occasion. The opponent would naturally retaliate and the initiator should have the knowledge to anticipate an opposite action and the fight keeps going depending the tolerance and attacking power of an archer. In addition to the set of bows and arrows, a warrior is also equipped with an arrow-hive to store the arrows to be hung behind in the back, armoury protecting the chest, neck, hands, legs, feet, groins, back and of course the head, a belt to accommodate a sword, a dagger, a noose, a mace, an iron chain, and most of all a shield. The charioteer, the horses and a strong chariot are to be suitably equipped too. The art of handling each item of defence and offence to one's own advantage is an integral part of 'Dhanurveda' training and skill management, which alone is the answer for the success of the battle discipline.

Vishleshana on Lakshmana the manifestation of Adi Shesha: Adi Shesha was the first born to Kasahyapa Maharshi and Devi Kadru, followed by Vaasuki- Airavata-Takshaka and thereafter the sarpa generation of Iravata, Mahapadma, Kambala, Ashwatara, Shankha, Karkotaka, Dhananjaya, Kaliya and so on. As most of Shesha's younger brothers were cruel bent upon harming other beings, especially the cousin brothers like Garuda, Shesha was disgusted by the cruel took to austere penances, lived on air and meditated in places including Gandhamadhana, Badrikashrama, Gokarna, Pushkara and Himalayas. His penances were so severe that his flesh, skin and muscles dried up and became skeletal. Lord Brahma was pleased and blessed as Shesha requested Brahma to let his mind under control for ever. Brahma then instructed to go beneath the unstable earth and stabilize it. Shesha agreed and went to the netherworld and stabilized earth with his hood. Shesha is also depicted with a massive form that floats coiled in space on Ksheera Saagara as the bed on which Maha Vishnu lies as of thousand hoods each ornamented with glittering precious crowns.

Sargas Nineteen-Twenty-Twenty One : Arrival of Brahmarshi Vishvamitra at Ayodhya to King Dasharatha. Vishleshana: Brahmarshi Vishvamitra: 1. Gayatri Mantra- Vishvamitra and Harischandra-Vishvamitra and Vasishta as their rivalry leads to be birds-

Vishleshana on Brahmarshi Vishvamitra:

1. Gayatri Mantra: Thrice a day dvijas are expected to perform Gayatri Mantra and during the Invocatory and Viniyogas or attributions of Gayatri / Shiro Mantras state: Tatsavituriti Vishwamitra Rishih Gayatri chaandah Savitaa Devataa Apojyotiriti Sirasah Pajapatirishi yajuschhando BrahmagniVaayu Suryaa Devataah/ Brahmarshi 'Vishva Mitra' credited as the unique reviver of Gayatri Mantra vide Rigveda's third mandala.

2. Origin of Vishvamitra: In the days of yore, Sage Bhrigu's son Maha Muni Rucheek was on 'Tirtha Yatra' and reached a Place called Bhojkat on the banks of River Kaushiki, ruled by King Gaadhi. As the Muni was at the River for taking his 'Snaan', he saw an extraordinarily pretty girl and on enquiry came to learn that she was the daughter of the King named Tribhuvan Sundari who arrived there to worship Devi Gauri in the Temple there with the desire to secure a suitable husband. Sage Rucheek approached King Gaadhi with a proposal to marry his daughter and the latter did not relish the offer since the Sage was old and none too handsome but could not directly convey the negative reply as the Sage might curse either the King or his daughter. He had indirectly suggested that he would expect 'Kanya sulkam' or dowry as per the Royal Tradition and the dowry would be seven hundred white horses with black ears which could run as fast as wind; the King felt that this kind of difficult demand would surely dissuade the Sage. On the other hand, Sage Rucheek prayed to Devatas and recited sixty four Ruchas (stanzas) in Chanda or symmetry invoking seven hundred mighty horses coloured white with black ears along with strong riders who could run like wind! That specific Ghat of Ganges was thus known as 'Ashva Tirtha'. As per the earlier understanding the King could not wriggle out and had to marry off the daughter to the Muni. Almost after the wedding, the Muni told the bride that he was going off for performing Tapasya and asked her for a boon. The bride's mother advised the daughter to ask the Sage for an excellent boy full of Brahmana's virtues for herself and for a brave Kshatriya boy for the Queen. The Sage performed 'Putreshtu Yagna' to fulfill the desires of the daughter and her mother, viz. a boy of great Brahmanik radiance and another boy with unusual Kshatriya's vivacity respectively and gave away two seedlings one for herself and another for her mother. He instructed that his wife should embrace a Pipal Tree and her mother should embrace a 'Bargad' Tree after consuming the respective seedlings. But the daughter and the mother wanted to test the Sage and thus exchanged the seedlings and the trees. The Sage discovered that exchanges of the seedlings and the trees took place and got quite angry, but the young wife sincerely begged the husband to conceive a boy with Brahmanic qualities although he might have the Kshatriya background. The Sage replied that there could not be a reversal of the situation, yet the boy born of Kshatriya origin might however be an illustrious Sage or a Rajarshi. Thus were born Vishwamitra to Tribhuvansundari and Jamadagni to the Queen. Jamadagni begot Parasurama who not only destroyed King Kartaviryarjuna for killing Sage Jamadagni but also wiped out Kshatriyas in a series of twenty one battles and uplifted the supremacy of Brahmanas as a race. On the other hand, Vishwamitra became a Rajarshi with the qualities of a Brahmana. After Gaadhi, Vishwamitra became the King. (Skanda Purana)

Thus Vishwamitra was of the Kshatriya clan as the King of Kanyakubja, a famed warrior of koushika vamsha and the son of King Gaadhi. Once King Vishwamitra on a hunting spree with his mighty entourage happened to visit Maharshi Vasishtha at his ashram and was treated him and his large army with a sumptuous lunch and discovered Kaama Dhenu the celestial cow the ashram. Vishwamitra was fascinated and wanted the cow for himself so that his 'praja' would never face shortage of food. As Vasishtha refused, the King pondered that true might never wrested with battle skills but only with austerities and relentless tapasya. Vishwamitra spent many years in the pursuit of his goal and faced many obstacles like . For instance, his meditations were once interrupted when he was seduced by Menaka.[Mahabharata describes Vishwamitra's relationship with Menaka resulting in a daughter, Shakuntala]. He returned to his meditations, but was forced to re-start again and again. Finally, he returned to Bramarshi Vasishtha and eavesdropped and heard the conversation of Vasishtha and his wife Arundhati, and learnt that Vasishtha had been always encouraging Vishwamitra all along as the King turned Maharshi was steadfast in his Tapasya despite several hurdles and material attractions and physical weaknesses throughout his journey to enlightenment. Ashamed of his anger towards Vasishtha, Vishwamitra began to hit his head against a wall. Vasishtha rushed out to stop Vasishtha and Vishwamitra fell to the ground. As his head touched the feet of Vasishtha, Vishwamitra felt a divine current course through his body. He also went into spontaneous state of 'samadhi' when he heard Gayatri Mantra which he kept on repeating for long. Vasishtha during Vishwa -mitra's Enlightenment and acquisition of Celestial Energies conferred the title of 'Brahma-rishi' to him.

2. Vishvamitra and Harischandra: King Harishchandra on a hunting expedition, he heard the cries of a woman asking for help. Armed with a bow and arrow, he went in the direction of the sound. The sound was an illusion created by Vighnaraja, the Lord of the obstacles. Vighnaraja was trying to disturb the tapasya of Vishvamitra and entered the body of Harishchandra who in turn started abusing Vishvamitra. This disturbed Vishvamitra's tapasya even as Harishchandra came to his senses and realized that the Sage was extremely angry with him, and apologized. Then commenced the 'Agni Pareeksha' Harischandra who was renowned for his outstanding Truthfulness. As though Ganesha prompted Vishvamitra by testing the tenacity of Vishvamitra and the glory of Truthfulness of the King alike, the episode of Satya Harischandra got initiated. The King promised to fulfill any of the Vishvamitra's desires to get rid of his guilt. The King requested to perform Rajasuya Yagna. There after, when Harischandra offered 'dakshina' to Vishvamitra, the latter surprised the King and demanded his entire kingdom and all his possessions excepting him, his wife Devi Chandramati and son Rohitasya and left the palace. Vishvamitra further demanded another dakshina when Harischandra sold off himself, his wife and son too. The Sage maltreated them all and Harischandra decided to leave for Kashi in utter poverty. Vishvamitra reached there too and reminded about the dues of Dakshina since a month passed meanwhile. Harischandra's wife offered that she could be sold off to pay for the Dakshina. The King fainted at her proposal and she fainted too. But since the Sage gave an ultimatum to pay off at least a part payment by that evening, the couple decided that she was sold in an open market place as a slave of any taker. A Brahmana came forward to buy her and some amount was paid to Vishvamitra, but the young son Rohit did not leave his mother and she begged the Brahmana, who already started insulting and even beating her in the presence of her husband and the Public, finally agreed to allow the son to stay along with her in his home. A few days later, Vishvamitra appeared in the form of 'Kaal' (Mrityu/ the Deity of Death) and demanded that atleast another instalment of the payment due to him at once; Harischandra had no other option to sell himself to a Chandala, even while reminiscing his past stature and the absence of his virtuous wife and the dear son. The Chandala gave him the duty of holding a stick to burn off dead bodies and be loyal to the Master and carry out his meanest errands. The Great Harischandra finally got rid of Vishvamitra even if he had to perform the most wretched and heinous duties; he lost his identity and carried on with past memories which also faded away with the passage of time and led a mechanical and handfull existence. One fateful day, a woman arrived at the burial ground with a dead body of her son, stated to have been dead as a result of a snake bite. The crying woman recognised the person with his stick with which he was used to burn off dead bodies for years now, and even as he had a dishevelled and ugly hair and beard, with depressed cheeks and hollow eyes. The former Queen- the wife of King Harischandra was herself half clad and hardly identifiable, with her dead son on her lap; she had tired eyes after incessant cries and was looking completely exhausted and hysteric. A man called Harischandra- a non-entity- vaguely felt he saw her somewhere! At last, he recognised her and their dead son and hugged her and the son's body, arranged the dead son on a huge pyre and was about to consign to flames. His wife decided to immolate herself but Harischandra felt that he was not free even to do so without his Master's permission. Finally he decided to join his wife's immolation even if he were to go to hell and the couple performed their last prayers to Almighty. Just at that nick of time several Deities headed by Dharma made their appearance; they included Sadhyaganas, Vishvadeva, Marutganas, Lokapalas, Nagamani, Siddhaganas, Gandharvas, Rudraganas, the two Ashvini Kumaras, Sage Vishvamitra and Lord Indra too. The dead Rohit was revived and presented himself in a Prince's attire. Harischandra and his wife were blessed and were invited to reach Heaven but the King hesitated as he did not secure his Master's permission; Dharmaraja declared that he himself was the Chandala and approved of the Royal Couple to fly by the Pushpak Vimana to Swarga. Lord Indra stated that all the Deities were extremely happy with the Values of Dharma, Sacrifice, Dedication and Truthfulness that were amply demonstrated by the King, his wife and their son and as such the three were fully entitled to Swarga. Indra sprinkled ‘Apamrutyu vinaashaka Amrit’/ the Ambrosia that negated death on the Pyre where the dead body of Rahul was kept and the various Deities showered fresh fragrant flowers and Indra personally invited the Threesome to Swarga; .but Harischandra hesitated and said that the Citizens of Ayodhya were highly anguished at our misfortune and hence the King and family alone could not depart to Swarga committing betrayal; the sins of Brahmahatya, Guruhatya, Gohatya, Streehatya are as deplorable as Bhaktahatya; therefore Bhagavan Indra! Kindly return to Swarga, since the pleasure of visiting that Place would not accord as much happiness of our reaching Swarga as our staying in this ‘Bhu Naraka’ along with our Bhaktas! Thus our resolve is to stay back with our own well-wishers only. Lord Indra was taken aback by the decision of Harischandra and did concur with his proposal as an unusual and exceptional occurrence! Sage Sukracharya commended the example of Harischandra and stated as follows: Harischandrasamo Raja na bhuto na Bhavishyati!

3. Vishvamitra and Vashishtha: an interesting rivalry of Vasishtha and Viswamitra and their mutual curses to become birds : After emerging from his penance under water for twelve long years, the Guru of the King Harischandra, Sage Vasishtha, came to learn that Viswamitra tormented the King and his family to such unendurable limits as taking away their Kingdom, freedom of existence, and near extinction of their lives. It was due to the enduring capacity of the King that even Deities like Indra, Dharma and Dikpalakaas complemented him and his family as was so felt by Vasishtha too.. Quite incensed by the deplorable acts of Viswamithra, he gave a Curse saying: Tasmadduraatma Brahmadvida yajvinaamavatopakah macchhapahato moodhaha sa bakatvamavaapsyati (Due to this reason, that evil-minded stupid who is a hater of Brahmanas and who seeks to spoil Yagnas being performed by them be cursed to become a stork!). But Viswamitra came to know of the curse and gave a return curse to Vasishtha to say: Twamaadi bhavasvet (You become a Partridge!). By virtue of their mutual curses, both the Sages turned out to be birds and kept on quarrelling with each other screeching and shrieking and becoming a nuisance in the surroundings. Lord Brahma himself, as accompanied by Deities sought to bring about truce to the fighting Baka (Stork) and Aaadi (Partridge) but to no effect. Finally, Lord Brahma over-ruled the mutual curses of the Sages and restored their original forms. Vasishtha and Viswamitra felt ashamed of them; Brahma explained to Vasishtha that the extreme actions taken by Sage Viswamitra against Harischandra and family were only to put them to test but not out of spite or jealousy; even Dharma Raja was an actor in the drama that was initiated by Maha Ganapati Himself! Harischandra and family as also the great illustrious Well-wisher Subjects of Ayodhya were amply rewarded at the end thus explained Lord Brahma.

Sarga Twenty four: Sarayu-Ganga confluence at Malada- Kurusha Villages where Indra hid; the reason was that Indra killed brahmana Vritraasura. Vishleshana: on Vritrasura and Indra’s Brahma hatya dosha- They enter ‘Tataka Vana’

Vishleshana on Vritrasura and Indra’s Brahma hatya dosha:

Indra kills Trisira and Vritra and his penance: Prajapati Visvakarma, the famed Architect of Devas, had a son named Trisira or the three headed Brahmana boy who used to practise ascetism with one head, drink wine with another and look around in all directions with the third. Being an ardent student of Vedas, he was always engaged in severe Tapasya, especially ‘Panchagni Sadhana’ hanging upside down a tree branch exposed to Summer Sun, winter cold and heavy rainy season without food conquering worldly desires. Being highly suspicious of the intentions of Trisira who might pose problem his own throne,

Indra despatched Apsarasas to disturb Trisira's rigorous meditation but to no avail. Indra thus killed him even when he was in meditation, even as he knew that killing a pious Brahmana in meditation was the highest possible sin. Furious with Indra's dreadful deed, Visvakarma performed an inexorable Sacrifice by 'Abhichara' process (taking revenge) reciting Atharva Veda Mantras, created a mountain like and ferocious boy with the sole objective of killing Indra. The huge boy was named Vritra or who could save his father as Vrinjina. Visvakarma equipped him with all kinds of war tactics and divine armoury including a swift and sturdy Chariot, a 'Sudarshan' like Disc, and a 'Trisula' like spear. As Vritra grew, Indra was getting nervous and approached Deva Guru to prevent any risk from the Demon. Brihaspati warned Indra that he should better be prepared for a Big Battle as the forebodings were not conducive, as after all Indra had committed a heinous crime of killing a Brahmana out of pride and fear. Meanwhile Vritra formulated his plans of attack and grouped a vengeful and desperate army of Danavas as his support. As the dooms day arrived, Indra and Devas were attacked and a furious Danava clan fought for hundred years and Indra leapt for life from Elephant 'Airavata' and ran by foot and Varuna, Vayu, Agni and all other Planetary heads and Devatas, Gandharvas, Kinnaras and so on fled too incognito. At one stage Vritra caught hold of Indra and literally devoured him. All the Deva Chiefs prayed to Deva Guru to somehow save Indra and Brihaspati managed Vritra to yawn with his mouth wide open and somehow helped Indra to manage to bale out from his mountain-cave like mouth of Vritra! As Indra and Devas fled and hid themselves from Vritra, the latter ruled Heavens for thousand years and Devas continued sporadic efforts to defeat Vritra and Danavas but to no avail. Indra and Devas approached Maha Deva for help and together along with Maha Vishnu prayed to Maha Devi and got Her blessings. Some senior Sages went in a delegation to Vritra requesting for truce with Indra and Devas. Vritra agreed that the truce be agreed provided that his death should take place neither during day or night, with a dry or liquid substance or by wood, stone, thunderbolt and similar substance. The Sages agreed to the conditions. But Vritra's father Visvakarma cautioned the son that past history was a witness to Indra's vicious acts and that he would certainly strike Vritra at an opportune time; he said that Indra was such a crook that he killed the foetus of his own mother's sister Diti by entering into her womb by Anima and other Siddhis and killing it into pieces; by taking the form of Sage Gautam and cheated the Sage's wife Ahalya into bed, and recently killed Trisira on the suspicion that he might usurp his throne and so on. In course of the function like 'Suthika Sauchak' ie one month after birth till 'Samavartan' or boy returning from 'Gurukula' after studies. Meanwhile Rahul came to realise that Varun had been demanding the Naramedha and ran away. After some time when he came to know that his father was extremely ill with dropsy as a result of Varuna's curse, Rahul wanted to return home but Lord Indra advised him against it. Sage Vasishtha the well wisher Guru of Harischandra suggested that an alternate way of performing Naramedha as approved by Scriptures was neither day nor night but the twilight time. It was wrongly deduced that it was Indra who killed Vritra, but the actual position was that Maha Bhagavati entered and energised the Sea foam and terminated Vritra. That was why Maha Bhagavati was known as 'Vritranihantri'. [Srimad Maha Bhagavatha Purana stated that Maha Vishnu advised Devas to implore Sage Dadhichi to spare his backbone which was converted into a thunderbolt by Visvakarma the Architect of Devas with which was killed Vritra by Indra.] Badly hurt by the sense of guilt that he killed a Brahmana the result of which would be that of a Great Sin of 'Brahma paataka' as this would be a second sin of killing Trisura, who was also a Brahmana, Indra felt miserable and hid himself in the stalk of a lotus in the deep ditch in Manasarovar lake. As Indra was absconding for a long time, another Indra King Nahusha was installed, and puffed up by the new position Nahusha asked for Sachi Devi to serve him, as he was the King then. Sachi asked for some time Indra befriended Vritra and when the latter was roaming on the Sea beach he took advantage of the situation and sent his thunderbolt to dip itself in the froth of the Sea waves and killed Vritra as the time time to make sure that her husband was really hiding or dead. She prayed to Devi Maha Bhagavati and explained her predicament to Her. Maha Devi asked Sachi to accompany a female messenger named Visvakama; they went by an air-borne vehicle to Manasarovar where she met Indra who was frightened with the sense of guilt hiding inside the stalk of a lotus. On narrating the happenings of the new Indra, his desire to own Sachi as his wife, her asking him for time, praying to Maha Devi and the messenger Visvakama helped locating Indra, the latter advised Sachi to allure Nahusha into a forest by a Vehicle meant for Sages. She returned to Nahusha who borrowed the 'Vimana' (air plane) of Sages who understood the deceit of Nahusha and allowed both of them to board the vehicle saying : SARPA SARPA, which had the double meaning of ' Get In and go' and also 'Serpent, Serpent'!The Great Muni was whipped by Nahusha to let the Vehicle go fast. The Vehicle dropped Nahusha in the thick of a forest who took the shape of a huge serpent and picked up the real Indra and Sachi Devi back to Heavens safe, when all the Devas were happy that original Indra returned! Nahusha secured his liberation only after the Maha Bharata was over and the Five Pandavas passed through the forest and King Dharmaraja answered the questions correctly from his serpent formation and liberated him too. By the Grace of Devi Bhagavati, Indra was reinstated and the curse of his 'Brahma Hatya Pathaka' (killing a Brahmana) was already dissolved by way of atonement and sufferance in hiding at 'Manasarovara'. Such was the Supreme Justice that Devi Maya did to every being without favour or prejudice. The powerful 'Karma' or Fate works equitably to Tri Murthis downward to a grass blade, but the norms change with the passage of Yugas from Satya to Treta to Dvapara and Kali Yuga when the percentage of Gunas would witness radical change by way of reduction to Satvik, medium to Rajas and maximum to Tamas and when the peak reaches to Tamas, it then would be time for Universal Dissolution! Sarga Twenty nine: Vishvamitra takes Rama brothers to the 'Vamana Ashrama '

Vishleshana on Bali Chakravarti and Vamana avatara

Vishleshana on Bali Chakravarti and Vaamanaavataara: Maha Puranas especially Matsyaadis described but Vamana Purana is quoted:

Chakravarti Bali of Daityas took over the reins of Trilokas from Virochana the son of Prahlada and the great Grand father of Hiranyakashipu, Devas lost power in Swarga and the mighty Mayasura and Shambara flew the Flag of Vijayanti too. Yet, the Daityas were steeply engaged in Dharmik deeds, and they were guarding the Sky providing stability all-around. There was complete absence of sinners in the Kingdom and Dharma was predominate; Dharma was established on four feet except on one; all the Deputised Kings were performing Administration ideally and all the Four Varnaas of population were observing Dharma perfectly. It was at that opportune time that the Coronation of Bali Chakravarti took place amidst the chantings of Victory by all concerned. Devi Lakshmi appeared and congratulated at Bali's Elevation to Supremacy along with her 'Amsaas' like the Devis named Hreem, Kirti, Dyuti, Prabha, Dhruti, Kshama, Bhuti, Ruddhi , Divya, Mahamati, Shruti, Smriti, Ida, Shanti, Pushti, Kriya, and also select Apsaraas. Meanwhile, Devataas were disillusioned at their discomfiture and the climax of Bali's high status especially because of Daitya King's unchallenged success owing to his Dharma Paalana and the lack of any record of Evil deeds by Daityas; they were also denied their shares of Yahna Phalaas. They approached their mother Aditi for solace and advice and in turn she reached her husband Kashyapa Muni. Kashyapa found the situation was delicate and even Brahma might find it difficult as strictly speaking the record of Daityas was above board! Brahma advised that the only way out would be that Tapasya and Aditi would perform strict Tapasya to Vishnu Deva and seek the most difficult boon of Vishnu taking birth as their son! The Couple reached the Banks of Kshira Samudra at a holy spot called Amrita, performed austere Tapasya and 'Kaamada Vrata' for thousand years by controlling their Indriyas, observing silence and Kashyapa chanted Veda Yukta Sukta called Parama Stuti as follows:

‘Deva Deva, Eka Shringa, Vrishaarchi, Sindhuvrusha, Vrishaakapi, Suravrisha, Anaadi Sambhava, Rudra, Kapila, Vishvaksena, Sarva Bhuapati, Dhruva, Dharmaadharma, Vaikuntha, Vrishaa Karta, Anadi - madhya nidhana, Dhanajaya, Shrutishrava, Prushna Teja, Nijajaya, Amriteshaya, Sanaatana, Tridhaama, Tushita, Mahaa Tatwa, Lokanaatha, Padmanaabha, Virinchi, Bahurupa, Akshaya, Akshara, Havyabhuj, Khandaparashu, Shakra, Munjikesha, Hamsa, Mahaa Dakshina, Hrishikesha, Sukshma, Mahaniyama - dhara, Viraja, Lokapratishtha, Arupa, Agraja, Dharmaja, Dharmanaabha, Gabhastunaabha, Shatakratunaabha, Chandra Ratha, Surya Teja, Aja, Sahasra shira, Sahasrapaada, Adhomukha, Maha Purusha, Purushottama, Sahasrabaahu, Sahasra Murti, Sahasrasya, Sahasra Sambhava! Four ‘Aashraavayas’ plus four ‘Astu Shroushads’ plus two ‘Yajaas’ plus five ‘Yajaamahyes’ and again two ‘Vashats’ Aditi made a commendatory appeal to Janaardana separately and said: ‘Prabho! I am grieving with unimaginable anguish which could be destroyed only by you. My Salutations to You Bhagavan who sports lotus garlands and Pushakara malaas; You are the Adi Vidhata who is an embodiment of propitiousness! You are Kamala Nayana, Padmanaabha, the Creator of Brahma, Atmajanma, Lakshmi Pati, Indriya damana, worthy of darshan only by Samayama Yogis, Sudarshana and Khadga dhaari! Only those ‘Atmagyanayuta’ Yagnakartas, Yogadhyaanis and Yoga Saadhakaas could aspire to visualise your Gunarahita Brahma Swarupa! May I pay my obeisances to you Sharanga Dhari Deva! as you occupy the whole world in a Gross Form and yet possess the tiniest Form which is invisible! Those persons who do not make efforts to visualise you do not get your Darshan any way, but those who have no other desire in life excepting you would readily witness you are blessed with your image in their hearts always for the asking! Your unbelievable Jyoti or extraordinary Radiance is all-pervading in the entire Universe in which you are present invisibly and contrarily the Universe is but an integral segment of You Parama Deva! In other words, You are all over the Universe, the Universe was created by you and in fact the Universe is of Yours! My humble greetings to you the original Prajapati! Pitara Sreshtha! Devata Swami! Shri Krishna! Here are my Pranaams again and again! You are the Supreme Objective of Pravritti and Nivritti Deeds (Ritualistic and Directly unswerving approach) and the Unique Decider of bestowing Swarga or Moksha the Eternal Bliss! My namashkaaraas to you Vishuddha Swarupa as even my taking your very name and memory would smash all my sins! You are the Avinaashi or Indestructible; Akhilaadhara or the Mighty Clutch of the Entirety; the Only Reliever of the Trap of Birth-Death Cycle! You are perceptible through Yagnaas, the Yagna Murti, the Yagna Sthita and Yagna Purusha! Vedas commend you, Vedajnaas sing your hymns, You are the ‘Vidwadjanaashraya’ or the one who is fond of the Company of Vidwadjanaas. My Most Revered Paramaatma! The whole Vishwa is your Creation, Sustenance and also the Termination thus You are the Vishva Kartha, Vishva Bharta and the Vishwa Harta! I pray to that Highest Magnificence who materialised Surya Swarupa and destroyed darkness for good. To that Sarveswara, the Ajanma, Avyaya, Srashta and Vishnu who is fully aware of the Truth about me and the transparency and earnestness of my Prayers that I am prostrating with humility craving him to grant my wish! As both Kashyapa Muni and Devi Aditi made their Soul-full Prayers, the impossible Darshan of Bhagavan Vishnu appeared and granted the wish that he would indeed assume His Incarnation with a view to reinstate Indra and Devas to Swarga and Trilokas.

As Aditi got concieved and Bhagavan Vishnu agreed to do so, Prithvi got tremored , Mountains were shaken, and Sapta Samudras were agitated with wobbles of waves and there was strangeness all-around! Bali Chakravarti felt that there were considerable changes in the Nature as mountians were trembling and high Sea tides were on new high and more so Daityas were experiencing paleness and loss of their normal instincts of courage, assertiveness and egoism. Bali approached his grand father Prahlada and asked for the causes of these omens and premonitions. Parama Bhakta Prahlada deeply meditated Bhagavan Srihari and visualised the latter in the Garbha of Devi Aditi and had fleeting scenes of Ashtaadasha Vasus, Ekadasha Rudras, Dwadasha Adityas, two Ashvini Kumaraas, Forty Nine Maruts, Sandhyas, Vishwa Devas, Gandharvas, Nagas, Rakshasaas, his Son Virochana, Bali Chakravarti, Jambha, Kujumbha, Narakasura, Baana, and several other Daityas, Pancha Bhutas, Seas, Mountains, Rivers, Satpa Dwipaas, Brahma, Shiva, Nava Grahas, Daksha and other Prajapatis, Sapta Rishis and so on. Prahlada gave a heavy exhalation and conveyed the datails what all he visioned and said that the Greatest Narayana in would soon be descending on Earth in his incarnation as Vamana Deva! Bali could not comprehend the full import of what Prahlada underlined and expressed his surprise whether Vamana Deva could be ever comparable with the Senior most Rakshasaas like Viprachitta, Shibi, Sankha, Ayamshanku, Hayashira, Ashwa Shira, Bhanga kaara, Maha Hanu, Kakkuraaksha and Durjaya. As Bali talked in such thoughtless comparisons with Paramatma and some examples of Danavas however mighty they might be, Parhlada got highly infuriated and shouted at Bali that there could not be bigger immature fool and hollow minded; he said that Bali's evil frame of mind would certainly lead the entire Vamsha of Daityas to doom. 'Bali! I have not come across a King of this kind who is evil-minded and dull-witted that could blame the Devaadhi Deva, Maha Bhaga, Sarva Vyaapi Vaasudeva; the names of the Daityas that you have taken as the so-called Mighty as also of Brahma and Devas were created by that Paramatma; indeed with just one 'Amsa' of myriad of his Amshaas, he created the whole 'Charaacharaas' and 'Samasta Vibhutis' or Manifestations including you, me, Daityas, Parvataas, Vrikshaas, Rivers, Forests, Samudraas, Sapta Dwipas, and so on and He is Sarva-Vandya, Sarva-Vyapi, and Sarva-Vidita; would there be a Vivekaheen-Murkha-Durbuddhi like you who would pass judgments on Him! What-ever are the reasons due to which you are faulting your Guru/ your father, or his father who is me or the Parama Guru who is Paramatma might be best known to you! Your talking slightly against Narayana is by far the worst since it tantamounts to cutting my head and it is to set right those feelings of pride and egotism that I am giving you a 'Shaap' / Curse that soon you would be dislocated from your Kingdom, Aishwarya, and ego. Chakravarti Bali was distraught and distressed at this most unforunate happening of Prahlada's curse and was ashamed of himself for his rash, thoughtless and sinful belittling of Bhagavan's uniqueness which had understandably stirred up the anger of a legendary Bhakta of the unparalleled stature of Prahlada. He confessed that there was a total loss of his mental faculties when he conversed at that time due to superciliousness and over-enthusiasm of having defeated Devas which propelled his traits of arrogance; indeed his remarks had correcrly hurt his grand father who was fully justified in giving him an irreparable curse but far worse than the curse, his behaviour which hurt elders, like Prahlada, who built a reputation of the family as Narayana Bhaktas, was sullied in the memory of future generations. This was humiliating to the Vamsha that he was squarely responsible! He begged of Prahlaadaa's forgiveness which he did not deserve and would feel repentant ever day and night. Prahlaada appretiated Bali's remorse and said that he was incensed up at that moment and the anger led him to obsession which lost his mentral equilibrium that caused the pronoucement of the curse, for which he felt extremly sad. But a lesson was provided to Bali and fully converted him as a Parama Bhakta of Narayana.

Mean while, Devi Aditi deliverd a lovely male child in short stature when Nature assumed a blossomed freshness that was rare, the Gagana Mandala was clean without any trace of pollution and Vayu was pleasantly soft and nicely odoured quite unfamiliar in the human world. The proud parents invited Brahma to perform Jaatakarma and Namakarana as Vamana Murti.Brahma Stuti to Vamana Deva :It was at that time when Brahma could not suppress his emotions and broke in his ecstasy into an instant

Eulogy as follows:’ Victory to you Adheesha, Ajeya, Vishwa Guru Hari, Ananta who is devoid of Birth and End; Achyuta, Ajiota, Asesha, Avyakta Sthita Bhagavan, Paramaarth Purti Nimita, Sarvajna who distinguishes Jnaana and Jneya, Asesha Jagat Saakshi, Jagat Kartaa, Jagat Guru, Jagat-Ajagat Sthita or Existent in Charaachara; Paa lana-Pralaya Swami, Akhila, Asesha, Sarva Hridaya Sthita; Adi-Madhyama-Anta Swarupa; Samasta Jnaana Murti, Uttama, Visualisable only by Mumukshaas, Mukti Sadhana by Yoga sevitaas, Nitya Prasanna and Parameshwara who is ornamented by Dama, Kshama and such other qualities; Atyanta Sukshma Swarupa, Durjeya or realisable with great difficulty; Sthula (Gross) and at the sametime AtiSukhsma (Tiniest); Indriya Sahita and Indriya Rahita; Mayaayuta yogastitha; Sesha shaayi Avinaashi; Bahurupa dhaari; Ekadamshttra Prithvyoddhaara Varaha Rupa or Varaha Rupa who lifted Earth with a single tusk; Hiranyakahipa vakshasthala vidirna Nrisimha; Maya Vaamanarupa dhara; Mayaavruta Samsaara dharana Parameswara or the Holder of Samsara surrounded by Maya; Dhyaananeeka Swarupa dhaarana karaa; Eka Vidhi Vibho! Only those who are dedicated to you and are ever-engaged with your constant ‘Araadhana’ could have a chance of pleasing you and none else. Ishwreshwara! Ishaana! Vibho! Bhavana! Vishwatma! Pruthulochana! Vishwa Prabhava or Srishti kaarana! Vishnu! May you grow from strength to strength! Victory to you Paramatma!’ As Bhagavan Hrishikesha was prayed to by Brahma, the former smiled and said that in the past Indra and Devas and Kashyapa Muni as also Devi Aditi paid their homages and recited Stotras to him and he assured that he would assume the incarnation of Vamamna Murti; he further assured that he would have Indra and Devatas reinstated as Trilokaadhipatis soon. In course of time Brahma offered Krishna Mrigacharma to Bhagavan and Brihaspati performed Upanayana and Yagnopaveeta dharana; Marichi Maharshi gifted Palaasha danda, Visishtha gave kamandalu, Angira Muni gave a Silk Vastr, Pulaha Muni gave a mat as Aasana, and various other Munis taught the Vatu the purport of Omkaara, Vedas, Shastras, Sankhya Yoga, Darshana Yuktis etc. Having been trained in all these disciplines, Vamana Deva had one fine morning left for the Yagna Shaala of Bali Chakravarti as the latter was executing a Sacred Yagna while carrying his mat, danda /stick, chhatra / umbrella and kamandulu / water vessel. Danava Guru Shukracharya was aware that Vishnu Deva in the form of Vamana Murti was arriving at the Yagna and briefed Bali Chakravarti to be extremely careful as Vishnu was a sauve and highly talented person to put words in the mouths of the opponents. The Guru reminded Chakravarti that the latter denied the age-old practice of rights to yagna’s shares to Devataas and that Vamana Murti might as well ask for the revival of the practice but those shares were now enjoying by Danava Chiefs. Bali replied to Danava Guru that in case Vishnu in the incarnation of Vamana Murti came and requested for any thing then how could a King say ‘no’ to it! Bali told the Danava Guru: *Brahman katha -maham bruyaamanyapihi yachitah, Naastiti kim Devasya Samsaarasyaaghahaarinah/ Vratopa- vaasairvividhairyah Prabhurgrunhatey Harih, Sa mey vakshyati deheeti Govindah kimato -dhikam? How could I deny any body requesting me for a favour! And if that Supreme Deva asked me for a charity, then what else would be the alternative! While Parameswara received the fruits of Vrataas, Upavaasaas, and so on from one and all, and if that Parameswara himself asked a boon from me, could there be a greater fortune to me! When even an ordinary person approached me for a favour, then too that could not be denied by a King; then when Narayana himself asked for it, could such an opportunity presented itself, this chance could never indeed be missed. Even if there are difficulties in executing a charity, the value of charity would get multiplied and ‘Veera purushaas’ would never deter from performing the deed) Having said the above, Bali asked Shukraachaarya: YatagjnaatwaaMunisreshtha!Daanavighna karenamey, Naiva Bhavyam Jagannaatheey Govidey samupastitheey! (By understanding the above, Munisreshtha! Please do not create ‘Daana Vighnaas’ or hurdles in the execution of the Charity!). As Vamana Deva arrived at the Yagna shaala, Bali welcomed him, offered ‘Arghya’, ‘Aasana’, Puja and offered him limitless gold, jewellery, elephants, horses, cows, women, clothes, bunches of villages or townships or whatever would be his wish! Vamana Deva replied smilingly: Mamagnisharanaarthaaya dehi Rajan Padatrayam, Suvarnagraamaratnaadi tadarthibhyah pradeeyataam/ (Raja! Please provide to me three feet of land to enable me to set up an Agni- Shaala). Bali said that after all three feet would be nothing as he could ask for a lakh of feet which could be given away, but Vamana Deva replied that he was indeed satisfied with that much of Bhumi and if the King were to offer more he might as well provide to the other needy! Bali Chakravarti readily agreed not understanding the implication and as the deed of Daana was being executed and Vamana Deva extended his hand to the King and expanded his Vamana Rupa gradually immediately: Sarva Devamayam rupam darshayaamaasa tatksanaat/ Chandra Suryoutu nayaney dyouh shirascharanou Kshitih, Paadaangulyah Pishaachaastu Hastaangulya –scha Gruhakaah/ Vishvedevaascha jaanusthaa janghey Saadhyaah Surottamaah, Yakshaa naksheshu sambhuta rekhaapsaraastathaa/ Drushtirruksaanya seshaani keshaah Suryamshvah Prabho, Taarakaa romakupaani romeshu cha Maharshayah/ Baahavo vidishatasya Dishaah Shrotrey Mahatmanah, Ashvinou Shravaney tasya naasaa Vayurmahaatmanah/ Prasadey Chandramaa Devo Mano Dharmah samaashritah, Satyasyaabhavad Vaani Jihvaa Devi Saraswati/ Greevaarditirdeva mataa Vidyaastadvalayastathaa, Swargadwaaramabhunmaitrah twashtaa Pushaa cha vai bhruvou/ Mukhe Vaishvaanarschaascha vrushanou tu Prajaapatih, Hridayamcha Param Brahma Pumstwam vai Kashapo Munih/ Prushthesya Vasavo Devaa Marutah Sarva saandhishu, Vakshasthaley tathaa Rudro Dharryachaasya Mahaarnavah/ Udarey chaasya Gandharvaa Marutascha Mahaabalaah, Lakshmirmedhaa Dhrutih Kaantih Sarv Vidyaascha vai Katih/ Sarvajyoteesham Yaaneeha Tapascha Paramam mahat, Tasya Devaadhi Devasya tejah prodbhutamuttamam/ Tanou Kukshishu Vedaascha jaanuni cha Mahaamakhaah, Ishtayah pashavaschaasya Dwujanaam cheshtitaanicha/ Tasya Devamayam rupam drushtaa Vishnormahaatmanah, Upasarpanti tey Daityaah patangaa iva paavaakam/ Chakshurastu Mahaa Daityaah Paadaangushtham gruheetavaan, Dantaabhyaam tasya vai greevaa mangushtheynaahana dharih/ Prathamya Sarvaansuraan Paadahastathalairvibhuh, Krutwaa Rupam Mahaakaayam Samjahaaraashu Modineem/ Tasya Vikramato Bhumim Chandraadityaou stanaantarey, Nabho Vikramamaanasya sakhidesho stitathaarvibhou/Param Vikramaanasya jaanumuley Prabhaakarou, Vishnoraastaam sthitasyaitow Devapaalana jkarmani/ Jitwaa Lokatrayam taamscha hatwaachaasura pungavaan, Purandaraaya Trailokyam dadou Vishnururukramah/ (Instantly, Vamana Murti displayed his Virat Swarupa: Chandra and Surya were his two Eyes, Shy was his head, Prithvi his feet, Pishachaas were his foot-fingers, Gruhyakaas were his hand fingers, Vishwa Deva Ganaas were in his jaanus /knees, Sadhyas were his janghaas, Yakshaas were his nails, Apsarsaas were his palm lines, Nakshatras were his Eye sight, Surya kiranass were his hairs, Stars were his body hairs, Maharshiganaas were in the hair roots, Vidishas were his hands, Dishaas were his ears, Ashwini Kumars were his faculty of hearing, Vayu was his nose, Chandra Deva was his joking faculty, Dharma Deva was his thinking capacity, Satya was his voice and Saraswati was his tongue, Deva Mata Aditi was his neck, Vidya was his valiyaas or long poles; Pushas were his eye brows, Swarga dwar was his anus, Vaishvanara his face, Prajapati his vrushanaas, Param Brahma was his heart, Kashyapa Muni was his Pumstwa, Vasu Devata was his back, Marutganaas were his Sandhis, Rudra was his Vakshasthala, Mahaarnavaa was his Dhairya, Gangharvas were in his stomach; Lakshmi, Medha, Dhruti, Kaanti and all Vidyaas were in his ‘Kati Pradesha’; the luster and radiance in the total Universe as also the Tapo teja or the power of meditation was the reflection of the magnificence of Natayana; Vedas and Scriptures and the huge Yagnaas and the Sacred Deeds of the Virtuous like Maharshis and Brahmanas were all inside in his ‘kukshi’ or belly. On viewing the Paramatma’s ‘Virat Swarupa’, the so called ‘Mahaasuraas’ referred to earlier in ignorance by Chakravarti Bali before Prahlada’s curse to him got burnt off like flies before a gigantic out break of Fire! Having thus occupied the Universe in totality including the sub-terrain Sapta Paatalaas, Vamana Deva stated that since Bali took the water in his hand and donated the THREE FEET of Land, and blessed him to be the King of the Sapta Paatalaas and granted him long life till the end of Manvantara of the on-going Vaisawata Manu. He also blessed Bali that all the ‘Homa Phalas’ at the time of Shraddhas to be performed even by Brahmanas, besides incomplete and defective Vratas, Agni

Kaaryaas without ghee, and Kusha grass roots as also the daanas without detachment would belong to Bali and his followers.

Sarga Thirty Five-Six-Seven: By boat from Shonabhadra to Ganges, Vishvamisra explains about flows of Ganges - birth of Skanda- Vishleshana on Skanda Janma : Padma-Skanda-Matsya Puranas

Vishleshana on Kartikeya: There are three versions of Skanda Deva janana in Padma Purana, Skanda Purana and Matsya Puranas; especially in regard to Skanda Kumara Janma

Padma Purana first :Tarakasura was too powerful to Devas whose soldiers were badly bruised and ran without direction. Indra and Devas approached Brahma and he replied that none excepting a seven day son of Shiva and Devi Parvati, called 'Kartikeya' could kill Tarakasura and none else in the world. At this juncture, Indra prayed to Sage Narada to advise further plan in the context of the birth of Kartikeya. The Sage designed a route-map of action, first to approach Himavanta and his wife Mena as also Parvati to prepare them to wed Mahadeva; to secure access to Mahadeva for his consent to let Parvati assist the former in his daily Pujas and approach Kama Deva and Rati Devi to stealthly despatch 'Pushpa Baanas' or Amorous Arrows of Love in favour of Parvati while she was in service to Mahadeva. But the Plan did not quite succeed as Mahadeva's eyes searched for Kama Deva and burnt him off with his third eye. As Devi Rati prayed to Maha Deva, the latter assured that Kama Deva would soon be created again as 'Ananga' or devoid of Physique. As Devi Parvati was shaken by the news of Kama Deva's turning into ashes, she decided to take to Tapasya; her father Himavan addressed the daughter to say: 'U' 'Ma' meaning 'Don't do so'! But still she left to such a Place to perform rigorous Tapasya where even Devas did not desire to visit and was so inaccessible at the heights of Himalayas. As the Plan as scripted by Narada Muni was not yet in place, Indra prayed to 'Sapta Rishis' to intervene. The Rishis tested her unambiguous decision to perform the severe Tapasya by arguing with her that she was bent on marrying Maha Deva and none else; in fact she became angry with the Rishis that she reacted sharply against them and even condemned them to suggest any other name as her spouse excepting Shiva Deva. Sapta Rishis approached Maha Deva, underlined Parvati's strong mental make up to wed only Maha Deva and emphasised the angle of 'Loka Kalyan' or the Universal Cause of destroying Tarakasura which could be accomplished only through the wedding with Parvati. For a number of years, Shiva and Parvati were in a joyful mood after their marriage and there was little news for Indras and Devas about the possible arrival of Kartikeya who alone could terminate Tatakasura. Agni Deva took the form of a parrot and entered the Palace of Shiva and Parvati who found that Parvati was enjoying a bath in a Sarovar playing with lotus flowers and Lord Shiva was resting in his bed. She found six Krittikas in the Sarovar and told them that she was desirous of seeing the water drops inside the lotus bulbs; the Kritthikas replied in fun that they would show the water drops provided they allow them also to share the joy of a child in her 'garbha'! The Krittikas further said that they should allow them too to own the child as their own as much as that of Devi Parvati and she agreed to the mutual deal; Krittikas showed the water drops inside the lotus bulb and drank them. As soon as she drank the water drops, there emerged a handsome and healthy boy from Devi Parvati's right abdomen with Sun-like luster and a powerful Physique wearing a 'Shula' and 'Ankush' in both of his hands. He was called 'Kumar' as many entities claimed parentage mainly of course by Lord Shiva and Devi Parvati but also the Kritikas and even Agni. The boy had six brilliant faces and was popularly called by several names viz. Vishakha, Shanmukha, Skanda, Shadaanana and Kartikeya. Brahma, Vishnu, Indra and various Devas gifted the Child several valuable souvenirs like Chandan, Malas, Dhup, Toys, Umbrellas, and Bhushans and instantly appointed him as the Senapati or the Commander-in-Chief of Devas. Lord Vishnu presented several 'Ayudhas' or Arms; Kubera provided ten lakh of Yaksha Sena; Agni gave his Tej (Radiance) and Vayu provided speed as his 'Vahan' (Chariot). Kumar desired to ascertain as to what he could do for them and in one voice they wanted the demon Tarakasura to be killed and Kumar assured saying: So be it! Inspired by what Skanda Deva guaranteed, Indra sent an emissary to Tarakasura saying that soon Indra and Devas would arrive to destroy the demon and his followers. Danavas wondered that an additional Shakti must have joined the Deva Sena as otherwise they would not dare send a messenger alerting them to come prepared for a battle! Tarakasura remembered Brahma's boon to him with the qualification of the risk of his death in the hands of a boy! Even Kalanemi and other Daityas had creepy feelings about the might of the stranger who joined the Deva Sena. As Tarakasura finally saw the so-called additional Shakti, he laughed away and made fun of the baby boy; he said that Devas did great injustice in projecting him ahead of them so that they could conveniently run away if need be! Kumar replied that there was no need to make fun of us since in a battle of 'Shastras', there was the brain power that was important but not the brute force; moreover, one did not require a huge serpent to kill an opponent but even a tiny snake could finish off the enemy by a small bite of poison! Bala Surya was always difficult to look at and never under-estimate a boy! Even as Kumar's reply was over, the Asura threw a musala but the reply by way of a mighty Chakra from Kumar was instantaneous. The Daitya threw a metallic Bhindipal which Kumar stopped merely by one of his hands. Kartikeya targetted a ferocious mace which made ear-blowing sound and the demon was hardly able to escape its impact. The demon then realised that this boy was not an ordinary kid and one had to be tough with him; he used a very powerful Shastra which was undone by Kartikeya instantly. Then Kartikeya came into his form and massacred thousands of demons and the so-called mighty demons like Kalanemi could hardly defend themselves and ran away to save their skins. As a last resort, Tarakasura hit Kumar's vahana of Peacock and going wild with this act, Kumara finally used the 'Nirmal Shakti' in his hands and threw it with force and speed and the Shakti dazzled the demon's vision; he tried his best but could not evade it since it flew behind wherever he went and ultimately pierced into his heart as the mountain-like Tarakasura fell making a thud, like a cloud-burst and the handful soldiers of the huge army of Danavas left behind alive ran for their lives. Devas went into a state of ecstasy with loud shouts and battle-cries of relief showering fragrant flowers all around, Gandharvas sang earsplitting songs of victory, Apsaras danced with gay abandon and the whole Universe wore a memorable look of unprecedented carnival. Vishnu and Brahma were highly satisfied that finally Dharma and Nyaya were vindicated by Kumara. Maha Deva and Devi Parvati seated on Nandi with Ganesha and Kartikeya flew across to Kailasa Mountain witnessing festivities all along the route!

Skanda Purana: Indeed the unprecedented and the Most Glorious Wedding of Siva-Parvati was the unique talk of the entire Universe. At the Wedding 'Muhurat', Himavan declared: 'I, Himavan of the Gotra and clan of Mountains have the greatest privilege of offering the hand of my daughter Devi Parvati to Parama Siva in the august presence of Brahma and Vishnu. In turn, I wish to know the Gotra and Vamsa of Bhagavan'. As Sage Narada lifted his Veena instrument, Himavan stopped Narada not to play on it as a reply about the Gotra and Vamsa of Bhagavan; Narada told Himavan that the Gotra and Vamsa of Maha Siva was 'Naad' or Sound and that was why Narada lifted the Veena as a reply! Bhagavan is 'Naadamaya' or the Embodiment of Naada and one could realise Siva only through Naada, as He has no Gotra and no Vamsa since He is above these nomenclatures and yet belongs to all Gotras and all Vamsas. He has neither beginning nor end; He is the Most Supreme Energy beyond comprehension! Then Himavan gave the 'Kanyadaan' or the offering of his daughter saying: 'Imam Kanyaam thubhyamaham dadami Parameswara! Bharyartham prathi gruhneeshva' (Parameswara! I am offering my daughter as your 'Dharma Patni'; kindly accept). After wedding, Maha Deva and Devi Parvathi moved on to Mountain Gandhamadan to a luxurious and lonely place for their honeymoon. As Bhagavan's virility was so potent that parts of humanity were getting destroyed and Vishnu asked Agni Deva to take the form of a Hermit and asked Parvati to donate it and extended his hand which was immediately consumed by Agni even before Her eyes. Parvati got angry and cursed Agni to become 'Sarva Bhakshak' or he who consumes everything. Agni could not bear the brunt of the virility of Maha Siva and begged Him to show a way to pass it on to someone; Siva advised that the same be planted into virtuous women and Sage Narada annotated that such women of high merit taking bath on an early morning in the instant month of Magha would be attracted to Agni and his hot flames and they would be the best choice for the transfer of the virility in particles. As advised by Narada, Kritthikas approached Agni seeking warmth from the cold morning and Agni transferred some drops of virility to the ladies through their skin pores. Kritthikas got pregnant and their angry husbands gave a curse to them to roam on the Sky. They became Stars in a constellation and aborted their pregnancies. The major portion of the virility got left however on top of the Himalayas which was lifted by a crane and pushed into Ganges and the drops which were radiant like fire sparks got meshed up in the river bed plants (Sarkhand) of Ganges, who carried the foetus to a secluded place in the bushes thus emerging a Six Headed Child Kartikeya! As soon as the boy of highly chiselled face and limbs was born with extraordinary splendour, there was such illumination that travelled all over the Three Worlds instantly. Siva Deva and Devi Parvati appeared at once on their Vrishaba carrier and were overwhelmed with parental love and affection. Soon Brahma, Vishnu, Indra and the entire Devaloka assembled and so did Rishis, Yakshas, Gandharvas and all Celestial Beings. Veerabhadra and Pramathaganas as also the whole entourage of Maha Deva were ecstatic with boundless rapture. Devas put their chins up with indescribable relief that it would not be far for the greatest menace of Takakasura to be devastated by the new arrival on the scene! The whole atmosphere was of liberation, festivity and celebration. The Deities commenced preparations of war to kill Tarakasura but a Celestial Voice was heard that victory would be assured only under the Leadership of Kartikeya and hence all the Devas requested Skanda to become the Chief of the Army of Devas. Meanwhile, Devasena, the daughter of Mrityu Devata, became his wife and hence Skanda was known as Deva Senapati. Kartikeya led the army of Devas of the rank of Indra, Agni, Vayu, Kubera and Yama Dharma Raja and was seated on an elephant. Tarakasura arrived with a huge army of mighty warriors who dominated and controlled the opponents initially. Indra's 'Vajra' was overpowered by Tarakasura's weapon called Shakti and wounded Indra. King Muchukunda who fought for Devas and sought to stop the domination of Daityas but Tarakasura felled him on the ground; Muchukunda wanted to use the 'Brahmaastra' but was restrained by Sage Narada as that weapon would no doubt create havoc but would be ineffective to destroy Tarakasura and hence Kartikeya would have to be warmed up gradually. Veerabhadra swung into action and slaughtered thousands of Demons; Tarakasura realised that Veerabhadra was not easy to control and thus used his 'Maya' and assumed a thousand arms. Lord Vishnu suggested that the time was ripe to kill the Big Demon before he became more powerful and asked Skanda to charge him. With his mighty weapon Shakti on hand, Kartikeya chased Tarakasura but the latter retaliated with his own 'Shakti' and even got Skanda unconscious for a while. After quickly recovering his poise, Kartikeya prayed to his parents and released the Maha Shakti which was fortified with the blessings of Bhagavan and Bhagavati and finally annihilated Tarakasura who incidentally was a Great Siva Bhakta! But Siva Himself was so pleased at the valour of the lad who was more than a match to the Greatest Demon of the times who sent shock waves across the Three Worlds! While Devas and Gandharvas were engaged in unending praises and noise of resounding musical notes, Rishis were engaged in Vedic Hymns to please Kartikeya and there was ecstasy across the Globe.

Matsya Purana: The whole Universe was charged with myriad emotions as Shiva as the groom and the party arrived at the bride's palace. At the 'Kalyana Mandapa', the Parvata Raja Himavan was in a state of dazed ecstasy since Parama Shiva himself was his son-in-law. Pranateynaachalendrena Pujitotha Chaturmukhah, Chakaara vidhinaa Sarvam Vidhimantra purah saram/ (Parvata Raja performed puja with respects to Brahma and with the full course of formal Mantras, the wedding was celebrated in tradition and dignity); Sharveya Paanigrahana maagneena saakshikamakshatam, Daataa Mahibhrutaam Natho hota Devaschaturmukhah/ Varah Pashupati Saakshaat Kanyaa Vishaaranistathaa (Then Parama Shiva wedded Parvati with Agni Saakshi or in the presence of Agni, when Daata / donor was Himavaan, Brahma as Hota (the Head Priest), Shiva as the bride groom and bride as Aranibhuta Devi Parvati.). Devas were extremely happy that the best was yet to happen; Indra gifted a golden umbrella, Gandharvas sang tuneful songs, Apsaras danced to their best, Kinnaras organised instrumental extravaganza and the whole world celebrated, but of course Daityas and Danavas who had ruled for thousand years were highly dejected quite understandably. After a few days the new couple of Shiva and Devi Parvati took permission of Parvata Raja Himavaan and moved back to Mandarachala. Years passed by and Shiva and Parvati continued to enjoy their marital bliss. Out of fun, Bhagavan Shiva teased Parvati once as follows: Shareerey mama tatwaangi sitey bhaasya sitadyutih, Bhujangee vaasita shuddhaa samslishtaa chandaney tarow/ Chandraatapena sampruktaa ruchirambaraa tathaa, Rajaneevaasitey pakshey drushti dosham dadaasimey/ (Devi Parvati! As your physical colour is rather dark and mine is fair, it looks that a dark serpent is circling a chandana tree! Also, there is a simile -comparison- of a shining Moon against the background of dark cloud on the sky!). Understandably, Parvati was not amused, and in fact, badly hurt, when Shankara made these remarks even as a joke. Instantly, she left out home and proceeded to perform 'Tapasya' to Brahma for a number of years to change her body colour. Any amount of pleading and supplication by Shiva did not change her mind. Meanwhile, the son of Andhakasura and the brother of Bakasura called 'Aadi' performed strict 'Tapas' to Brahma Deva and asked for the boon of 'Amaratwa' or immunity from death. As Brahma could not grant this advantage, Aadi amended the request that he should be able to convert his Body Form as per his wish; Brahma agreed provided that the Daitya could do so only twice. As Veerak was guarding the Entry Point of Shankara and as it was not possible to enter 'Shiva dwar', Aadi converted his Form as a snake and entered Shankara's abode through an under ground hole and slithered in; thereafter Aadi assumed the Form of Devi Parvati, approached Maha Deva and pretended that she had given up Tapasya as the severity of meditation just to change of body colour from 'Krishna Varna' to 'Gaura Varna' was not worth the strict regimen. Parama Shiva was happy initially that she changed her mind and returned back to him. But on second thoughts and knowing that Parvati would not take a flippant decision to return without achieving her objective, he suspected the fake Parvati and killed the 'Mayavi' Daitya. The original Parvati Devi's Tapasya pleased Brahma Deva and blessed her to change her body colour as she pleased either as of Gaura (white)Varna or of Shyama Varna; Parvati returned home to Maha Deva but the unwitting Veeraka, the 'Dwarapalaka' refused her entry to her own house! As any amount of convincing did not help Veeraka, Devi Gauri was tired out to reason him and finally gave a 'Shaap' that he would be born as a human and after the duration of the curse would return to her again. Parama Shiva was so excited as Gauri entered his interior bed room that a delegation of Devas headed by Indra was turned out saying that he was busy. Indra detailed Agni Deva to take the form of a parrot and peep in through a window as to what was happening inside their bed-chamber. Exactly at that time, the parrot peeped in when Shiva-Parvati were actually seen in action on their bed; Shiva noticed the parrot and recognised Agni. He scolded Agni and said now that he created 'Vighna' (obstacle) between him and Parvati and hence he might as well rectify the situation by drinking up his virility. The highly explosive drops shining like molten gold punctured Agni's belly and got spread over the Maha Sarovar nearby. Several lotus flowers which got sprouted all over in the deep waters emitted strong and fragrant scents and the intoxication affected 'Krittikas' who happened to bathe in the Sarovar; the Krittikas desired to take the lotus leaves home but Devi Parvati jocularly remarked to the Krittikas that she could take the drops of water on the lotus leaves as well. In turn Krittikas joked that they would take the water home, provided the child born of the water consumed by them should have equal right to the motherhood of the boy so born! As the deal was struck between Krittikas and Parvati, the Krittika damsels gave the lotus leaves as also the water drops to Parvati. Subsequently, Devi Parvati drank up the water around the lotuses and from her right and left 'kukshis' gave birth to two male children later united into one and the child who had the extraordinary radiance of Surya Deva; each of the Six Krittikas shaped up one head each of the child; thus the boy was named 'Kumara' by Parvati; 'Kartikeya', 'Shanmukha', 'Shadvaktra' by the Krittikas and as 'Vishakha' or the different 'Shakhas' / branches of the lotus leaves that carried the golden drops. On Chaitra Shukla Shashthi, the child was declared as the 'Deva Senapati' / the Commander-in- Chief of Devas. Vishnu gifted varieties of 'Ayudhas' / Arms and 'Astras' or Mantrik Arrows. Kubera presented him a lakh-strong of yaksha army. Vayu Deva gave him a 'Mayura Vahana' / Peacock Carrier, while Twashta Prajapati gifted a toy in the form of a Cock which could change its form as the boy wished. All the Devas presented souvenirs, prostrated before Skanda and extolled him." Our Greetings to You, Kamarupa Shanmukha! You are Kumara, the radiant son of Maha Shiva and the destroyer of Danavas; your physical form is the glow of rising sun and of the heat of Agni; you are appropriately adorned, the Army Chief of Devas; the dreadful on the battle front; Guhya Rupa, the abolisher of fear in Trilokas in the Form of a Child; gifted with broad and clear eyes; Vishaakhaa! Our reverences to you as the practitioner of Maha Vratas; you are a terror in battle fields although of pleasant visage otherwise; you have a peacock as your carrier and wear a Keyura / wrist bangles; the high flier of flags; the bestower of boons to devotees; the high profile symbol of courage and strength; you possess a Magnificent Form. This was how Indra and Devas extolled Skanda.) Even as Kumara was replying to assure Devas that very soon the desire of retrieving their lost glories would be fulfilled, an emissary of Tarakasura arrived and conveyed their Chief's message to Indra with a warning not to repeat his past mistakes of challenging a giant Daitya of the stature of that great Tarakaura who shook up the Universe and converted Devas as his servants; he also remarked that instead of playing balls and toys, the baby boy Skanda should gradually get acclimatised to battle fields and face mighty Asuras much later in life! As Tarakasura was in a jocular mood, Skanda Deva said: 'Taraka! Never under-estimate the 'Shakti' of a kid; can you not realise that a baby serpent could perform permanent damage to you and that a boy who has 'Alpaakshara Gyan' in releasing 'Astras' could reach you directly to Naraka! Even while Skanda was conversing like this, Taraka threw a 'Mudgara' (hammer) and an agile Kumara destroyed it with his 'Vajrayudha'; Taraka threw a 'Bhindapaal' which was destroyed by Kumara's own hands. Skanda materialised a Gada / Mace and despatched it against Kalanemi Daitya who became furious and rained a stream of Arrows. These arrows had little impact on Skanda. Instead, Kalanemi and his associates were thrashed by Kumara and they had to sprint from the battle lines. Takakasura then appeared center-stage and was furious in releasing a powerful arrow which hurt Kumara Swami's 'Mayura Vahana'; The infuriated Skanda and threw the most potent 'Shakti Baana' which was indeed the decisive point that sealed Tarakasura's fate and the greatest menace in the Trilokas who dominated the scene for thousands of years was finally destroyed, even as Devas sounded 'dundhubhis' (large drums) and showered rose petals which filled up the Earth, Sky and the Nether lokas with the fragrance of Parijata flowers from Swarga. Gandharvas and Kinnaras sang mellifluous praises of Kumara and his proud parents, Apsaras were ecstatic and Sapta Rishis recited Mangala Mantras. Those who read or hear about the glories of Skanda would neither have sins nor diseases but lead a contented life ahead!]

Sarga Thirty Eight/ Nine: King Sagara's tapasya for sons- queen Sumati begets 60,000 strong sons while Keshini just only Asamanjasa. Sagara planned Ashvamesha yagna, Indra stole the Sacrificial horse- Sumati's strong sons searched bhuloka-and patalas with pomp and noise-Kapila Muni curses the sons in patala to become stones- Vishleshanas: Adho lokas- Kapila Maharshi.

Vishleshana on Adho Lokas [The lokas underneath the Seas occupy as much an area as Prithvi; the span of Earth is seventy thousand yojanas, height too is as much. The expanse of Patalas too is as much; these lokas are Atala, Vitala, Nitala, Sutala, Talatala, Rasatala and Patalas and each of these lokas has an expanse of ten thousand yojanas. The colour of these lokas is black, white, yellow, red, grey and golden respectively. The inhabitants of these lokas are Daityas, Danvaas and Nagas.. These lokas enjoy extreme illumination from the 'Manis' (diamonds) on the hoods of the Nagas. The inhabitant serpents and Daityas revel in themselves with festivities and luxurious delicacies of food, wine and intoxication for long hours of time without concerns and worries. They enjoy good time by way of swims in Sarovaras, rivers and lotus-ponds and deal with all kinds of valuable possessions. Underneath these Lokas shines Bhagavan Vishnu's 'Tamoguna Rupas' as Sesha Naga named as Anantha, worshipped by Siddhas, Devatas, Devarshis and Daityas alike. Lying under the entire Universe, the mighty Sesha Deva bears the brunt of the Prithvi and the 'Charaachara Jagat. Source Brahma Purana'].

As Sagara Kumaras entered 'Rasatala', a mountain like Diggaja was as Virupaksha which supports earth was visioned on the sky. When ever this 'diggaja' seeks to rest then there are earthquakes. [Earth is stated as being protected from eight directions be celestial elephants protecting the Eight Directions viz. North, South, East and West and their spouses North East, South East, North West and South West] Sagara putras made a parikrama or circumambulation of the Diggaja while seeking entry into Rasatala. As they commenced digging up Rasatala from the western side they found the diggaja and then visioned another Diggaja named Shvetabhadrā supporting Earth again. As the Sagara Kumaras continued the digging of Rasatala for the missing Sacrificial Horse, Bhagavan Vishnu in the form of Kapila Maharshi reddened his eyes while the mighty Sagara Putras were engrossed in the unilateral task of digging again and again. They finally found the Sagara Chakravartis Yagnyaashva just near around the Maharshi. asmākaṁ tvaṁ hi turagaṁ yajñīyaṁ hṛtavān asi, durmedhas tvaṁ hi saṁprāptān viddhi naḥ sagarātmajān/ śrutvā tad vacanaṁ teṣāṁ kapilo raghunandana, roṣeṇa mahatāviṣṭo humkāraṁ akarot tadā/ tatas tenāprameyena kapilena mahātmanā, bhasmarāśīkṛtāḥ sarve kākutstha sagarātmajāḥ/ As soon as hardworking Sagara Putras cited the 'Yagnaashva' grazing in the vicinity of a Maharshi, they started shouting with anger with pent up emotions of frustrations for several days and nights stating ' you the wicked Maharshi! how dare you had hidden the Sacrificial Horse here as it had been grazing grass coolly here; now we the mighty have arrived; be it well realised that we are the mighty sons of the almighty Chakravarti Sagara himself! The Maharshi on hearing the braggings of Sagara Kumaras made a 'humkaara' in raging fury and the totality of the sixty thousand valiant force were burnt to ashes.

Vishleshana on Kapila Maharshi: Kapila Maharshi is named for Saankhya Yoga viz. Samanvaya: Understanding by Interpretation. Upanishads and Vedas too comprehend the basis of Awareness about the original cause of Existence and of the Universe. It is only by that Supreme Consciousness that the Ancient Scriptures seek to comprehend but not by a secondary Source of what is loosely designated as the Self Consciousness as Sankhya Yogas interpret; indeed, the Self as an individual is Brahman and is not a separate entity either. Brahma Purana explains how King Vena abandoned Vedas and all precepts of Dharma but the huge gathering of Sages over powered and killed the King, while Kapila advised the Sages to churn the King's thighs and recoverd Nishads or hunters even as from Vena's right hand Prithu Chakravarti was manifested! The latter saved Earth again from 'akaala' due to lack of very long rainlessness for severall yoears drought and BhuDevi came happy and green all over with crops! Brahma Purana also mentions Sage Kapila in the context of Sagara Chakravarti's thousand strong sons seeking to Pandava's Ashvamedha Yagjna's sacrificial and disturbed Kapila Maharshi -Vishnu Hmself?-in his deep sleep and when got awoken, the brilliance in his eyes burnt all the thousand strong progeny but four of Sagara's fore fathers to ashes, leaving few survivors of the family lineage.

Sargas Forty to Forty Two: Asamanjasa goes in search and conveys the result to Sagara who dies- King Asamanjasa gaveup hopes and so does his son Amshuman and the latter's son Dilip. But Bhagiradha takes up the thread and prays to Ganga from skies at Gokarna Tirtha. Vishleshanas on 1) Gokarna Tirtha and 2) on Bhagiratha from Brahma Vaivarta and Maha Bhagavata Puranas. . Among all these species who observe fasting for three nights at a stretch are stated to secure the performance of ten Ashwamedha Yajna phala and a senior member of Shiva ganas and in the case of fasting twelve nights accomplish Shiva Sayuja itself! At Gokarna , the Place of Devi Gayatri who is the most revered and the most popular Deity among the three lokas and here if ove performs fasting for three nights continuously is stated to be eligible for achieving thousand Go-danaas!) The Gokarna Kshetra-one of the Mukti Kshetras acclaimed by Parashurama- which is situated in North Karnataka near Mangalore in Western India along with Karwar coast of Arabian Sea and Western Ghats, literally meaning the Cow's ear, is the abode of Mahabaleshwar the Maha Deva of Physical strength. Lord Shiva emerged from the cow likened to Mother Earth and the shape of the Kshetra is of a ear too at the confluence of two rivers viz. Gangavali Aghanashani. Varaha Purana describes that Bhagavan Shankara assumed the form of a deer and moved around freely once; Brahma Deva, Indra and other Devas searched for Maha Deva but could not till they realised finally that Shiva assumed the swarupa of a deer. They tried to seize the horns but Shiva as the deer disappeared though the horns were caught. One horn was established at Gokarna, another at Bhagalpur, Bihar as Shringeshwara and the third at Indra Loka . Maha Bhagavata describes that Ravanaasura, the Epic Villain of Ramayana, pleased Maha Deva and secured the boon of Shiva's Atma Linga and desired to carry the Linga to his Kingdom in Lanka; Sage Narada scented about the boon given by Shiva to Ravana and got worried that the Asura would become immortal by worshipping the Atma Linga daily; he alerted Lord Vishnu who spread the net of Vishnu Maya and Ravana felt that evening was nearing for his Snaana-Sandhya Puja Vidhi; he beckoned a passer by cow herd boy to hold the Atma Linga just for a while but the boy- who actually was Lord Ganesha who was prewarned by Narada-replied that he was in a great hurry and could not wait but would call Ravana by his name thrice; even while Ganesha in disguise shouted Ravana's name thrice, the latter just returned but the Atma Linga was kept on ground and the boy disappeared. He made all his efforts to lift up the Linga but to no avail. In the process of the struggle, only the top portion of the Linga fell at Gokarna and the rest of the pieces of the Linga were thrown away at Suratkal where Sadashiva Temple was built and other pieces fell on Sajjeshwara, Guneshwara and Dhareshwara some kms. of distances away, while the cloth covering the Atma Linga fell off at Mrideshwara now called Marudeshwara at Kanduka Hill surrounded by three sides by Arabian Sea. Mahabaleshwara at Gokarna Kshetra has established great significance-even as other places like Sajjeshwara.].

Bhagīrathas tu rājarṣir dhārmiko raghunandana, anapatyo mahātejāḥ prajākāmāḥ sa cāprajāḥ/ sa tapo dīrgham ātiṣṭhad gokarṇe raghunandana, ūrdhva bāhuḥ pañcatapā māsāhāro jitendriyaḥ/ tasya varṣasahasrāṇi ghore tapasi tiṣṭhataḥ, supṛīto bhagavān brahmā prajānām patir īśvaraḥ/ Having entrusted the duties of Kingship to his Ministers, Mahrma Bhagiratha retired to deep tapasya at the popular Gokarna Tirtha with the singular determination of bringing Devi Ganga to bhuloka from the high skies. The tapasya was stated to have exceeded for thousand years as he kept his shoulders erect and atop with unbent knees while worshipping the Five Fires with unfailing limb control, while eating morsels of food on monthly basis. Brahma Deva was pleased with the rigorous tapasya and asked him for a boon. Bhagiratha replied: yadi me bhagavān prīto yady asti tapasaḥ phalam, sagarasyātmajāḥ sarve mattaḥ salilam āpnuyuh/ gaṅgāyāḥ salilaklinne bhasmany eṣām mahātmanām, svargaṁ gaccheyur atyantam sarve me prapitāmahāḥ/ deya ca saṁtator deva nāvasīdet kulam ca naḥ, ikṣvākūṇām kule deva eṣa me 'stu varaḥ paraḥ/ Brahma Deva!! As you are pleased, do bless me to enable me to bring Devi Ganga from the high skies to earth so that my ancestors get purified with her flows so that the latter could be purified and attain salvation. He further requested that his posterity of Ikshvaku Vamsha be glorious for ever. Brahma Deva replied : Bhagiratha! As you have the virtuous ambition to bless the past and future generations, I am happy to approve both of your justifiable proposals. Devi Ganga being the elder sister of Devi Parvati the splendor of Parama Shiva, my advice to you should be to pray and please Him. Moreover , Bhudevi would not be able to withstand the force and fury of Devi Ganga from the high skies, the solution should be to meditate to Trishuladhaari Maha Deva foremost.

Visleshana on Bhagiratha:

Brahma Vaivarta Purana is quoted briefly about "Ganga": Bhagirath's efforts, Puja to her and final restoration as Vishnu's wife: Of the two wives of King Sagara viz. Vaidarbhi and Shaibya, Asamanjasa was born to Shaibya while Vaidarbhi delivered a 'Maamsa pinda' (piece of meat); Vaidarbhi meditated to Bhagavan Shankara sincerely and the latter arrived in the form of a Brahmana and cut the piece of meat into thousand pieces and turned out as so many sons. As they grew of age, the thousand sons accompanied a Rajasuya Yagna's horse of King Sagara and behaved flippantly with Kapila Muni while in Tapasya and the furious Muni burnt off the thousand sons into ash. As the King approached the Muni for clemency, the latter assured that if Sacred Ganga were brought from heavens to the ashes of the sons cursed by him, their souls would attain salvation. Asamanjasa and his son Amshuman resorted to Tapasya to Devi Ganga for long time and died but the son of Amshuman named the legendary Bhagirath was fortunate to vision Shri Krishna who in turn instructed Devi Ganga who in any case was to descend to Bhuloka owing to Sarasvati's curse and the pursuant dispensation of Bhagavan Vishnu. Shri Krishna blessed Ganga not only to provide Mukti to Sagara's sons but purify the sins of the troubled human beings through out Kali Yuga who would bathe in Ganga and worship her; even by saying 'Gangey Gangey' from a distance the devotees would be relieved of their sins and if per chance any Prani died while touching Ganga, that Prani would surely attain Vaikuntha! Narada Muni enquired of Narayana Maharshi about the formal procedure of worship to Ganga desirous of reaping maximum advantages. In fact, King Bhagirath was stated to have followed the following procedure as described by the Maharshi. He performed worship to six Deities before qualifying the puja to Ganga Devi, viz. Shri Ganesha, Bhagavan Surya, Agni Deva, Vishnu, Shiva and Bhagavati Parvati. Subsequently, Bhagiratha prayed to Devi Ganga as follows: 'You are pure like the white champaka flower ready to demolish the sins of those worshipping you as you have been materialised by the Vighraha of Paramatma Shri Krishna who had given you the status of thousands of 'Sharatkaala Chandras' as you are the most propitious Narayana Priya, always peaceful and smiling with adornments of Malati Pushpa garlands, 'chandana bindus' on your broad forehead shining prominently with 'Sinduri bindu'; with pearl like teeth and profusely kind eyes; with such soft feet that put the most delicate white lotus petals to shame; surrounded by Devatas, Siddhas, Muni Ganas and Tapasvis. I greet that Maha Ganga who only knows to bestow boons, purify sinners and enhance the levels of devotees to finally reach peaks of Self-Realisation on par to Mukti. After performing Dhyana on the above lines, the devotee would carry out 'Shodshopa -chaaraas' of Asana, Paadya, Arghya, Snaana, Anulepana, Dhupa, Deepa, Naivedya, Tambula, Sheetala Jala, Vastra, Aabhushana, Maalaa, Chandana, Aachamana and Shayya. Thus dedicating his total self Bhagirath requested Ganga to follow that route which passed through where the ashes of Sagara Putras were rested as a result of Muni Kapila's curse, thus receiving the epithet of 'Bhagirathi'.

Maharshi Narayana conveyed an interesting episode to Narada about a Radha Mahotsava which was being celebrated on a Kartika Purnima at a Rasamanadali. Devi Saraswati took up her Veena and created mellifluous tunes in perfect Tala Swaras and Brahma was delighted to gift a rare 'Ratna' as a gift. Shiva gifted an invaluable 'Mani', Krishna gifted Koustubha, Devi Radha presented a wonderful Navaratna Maala and various Devatas gifted their own gifts too. Meanwhile Bhagavan Shankara rendered a fantastic Poem which was scripted with highly invigorating usage of select words that shook up the moods of the Raasleela congregation. On hearing the extraordinary piece of rendition, the entire audience was spell bound in unbelievable rapture and ecstasy and took time to gain normalcy. But the Rasamandala was in deep distress as Radha and Krishna were not traceable. There was an 'Akaasha Vani' or a Celestial Voice which directed Bhagavan Maha Deva to materialise Tantra Shastra and create Mantras and Kavachas that would be appropriate to the Tantras to be thus created. In reply, Shankara made a vow by swearing over 'Gangaajal' which was present in Shiva's 'kamandalu' (vessel) which indeed was the Sangam of Radha and Krishna who were untraceable so far in the Raasa Sabha that was spell bound hitherto pursuant to Shiva's rendition! After the effect of curses by Sarasvati to Ganga and Lakshmi to assume their own Rupas on Martya Loka, lasting for Kali Yuga's five thousand years, the respective Devis reached back to Vaikuntha and including the Rupa of Devi Tulasi got materialised as Four Wives of Shri Hari; these four wives reached their positions, representing also like Four Vedas. Indeed these formations of Sarasvati, Ganga, Tulasi and Lakshmi were of Bhagavan Shri Hari's ramifications

Maha Bhagavatha Purana quoted:: If Harishandra gave an eternal memory in truthfulness and integrity, a person of the same dynasty proved as a role model in tenacity. His life's mission was to bring Ganges down to Earth from Heavens. Bhagiradha's prayers were indeed granted by Mother Ganges to the devotee but warned him that the force of the flow from the Heavens to Earth could be withstood by no less than Lord Siva Himself! Bhagiradha never stopped his grand endeavour and worshipped Lord Siva with austerities and purity who agreed, not only because of the sincerity with which the devotee desired to fulfill the long-standing family wish but also owing to the reason of Universal advantage. The Lord assumed a massive body and controlled the force of the River flowing from Lord Vishnu's feet and bore the brunt of the impact on His head in His 'Jatajut' or twisted hairs and released but a portion of the Holy River. Bhagiradha directed the fiery flow by riding a fast Chariot and brought it to the place where the ashes of his forefathers were purified and their souls liberated to Heavens. Till date, humanity continues to be grateful to him for the ever lasting memory of his gigantic efforts in our reaping the fruits of his labour in the huge land-mass covering entire 'Aryavarta' (Northern India)!

Vishleshana on Gangotri and Haridwara

Gangotri: Several and detailed references have been made in Brihaddharma Purana, Maha Bharata Vana Parva, Padma Purana, Skanda Purana, Brahma Purana, Vishnu Purana, Devi Bhagavata, Brahma Vaivarta Purana, Agni Purana, Matsya Purana, Brahmanda Purana, Vayu Purana, Skanda Purana and so on. In fact, Skanda Purana has also provided Ganga Sahasra Naama highlighting Devi Ganga Mahatmya. Na Ganga sadrusham tirtham na Devah Keshavaatparah/ says Padma Purana. Maha Bhagavata describes as follows: Dhatuh kamandalujalam tadurukamasya paadaavanejana pavitrayaa Narendra, Swadhuirnyana -bhasi saa patati nimaarshi Lokatrayam Bhagavatovishdeva keertih/ (Bhagavati Ganga which originated from the left thumb of the Holy feet of Vishnu's three legs spread over the total universe occupying Earth-Higher and Lower Lokas got materialised to wash off the sins of all beings). From Brahma Loka to Himalayas it appeared in streams called Sita, Alaknanda, Chakshu and Bhadra flowing in four directions; the grand and gigantic flow of Alaknanda jumped down the heights of Hemakuta and other mountains towards the southern direction and finally merges into the Great Oceans. The specific Place where Ganga is originated that is Gangotri, is the ideal Place where tarpanas and upavasas are performed and by observing these duties human beings there stated to have accrued the Vajapeya Yagna phala and acquire Brahma: Gangodbhedam samaasadya triraatroposhito Narah, Vajapeyamaapnoti Brahma bhuto bhavet sadaa/ While Ganga is stated to be pure and hallowed, the three Maha Tirthas are stated to be Gangotri, Prayaga and Ganga Sagara or the exit point of merger with the Seas: Trishu snaaeshu durlabha, Gangodbabhe de Prayage Ganga Saagra sangame/ Talking about the dos and don'ts of Ganga Snana, Brahmanda Purana emphasises as follows: Achamana, Shoucha, nirmalya-mala visarjana, gatra samvahana, kreedha, pratigraha, rati, anyatirtha bhaava, anyatirtha prashamsha, samtaara or swimming, malotsarga are the twelve tasks to be avoided in Ganga. But most desirable tasks in Ganga are Pitru tarpana with tila mixed water, dahana samskara, tata nivasa or residing at the banks of Ganga Pravaha, Ganga keertana, darshana-sparsha-jala paana, mantra yukta snaana, upavaasa, Veda pathana, Purana shravana, nitya Ganga Smarana, Ganga Sahasra naama stotra, Ganga Vrataacharana, Indira nigraha, Dana prakriya, homaacharana, Sandhya Vandana, Dharmaacharana, and Bhakti bhava in general. Snaana-Tarpana-Pitru Karyaacharana on Solar and Lunar eclipse timings, janma dina worships, parva dina snaana-daana-homa kriyas are all stated to have far reaching phalas. Conducting Yajnas would fetch outstanding results.

Haridwar: Swarga dwarena tattulyam Gangadwaram na samshayah, Tartaabhishekam kurvita kotitirthe samahitah/ Labhate Pundarikamcha kulam chaiva samudbhavet, Tatraika ratri vasena gosahasraphalam labhet/ Saptagange trigange cha shakraavate cha tarpayan, Devaan pitruscha vidhivat punye lokey maheeyate/ Tatah kankhale snatwaa triratroposhito narah, Ashwamedhaapnoti Swarga lokam cha gacchati/ -Padma Purana, Adikhanda, Tirtha Yatra Parva (Haridwar is undoubtedly akin to Swarga Dwara. Those who bathe at the Ganga there are as good as taking bath at Crores of Tirthas, reaping the fruits of performing Pundarika Yajna and bringing to repute one's own Vamsha. Stayintg at Haridwar over night bestows the return of charities of Sahasra Godaana. Performing Sacred Snanas at the banks of Sapta Ganga, Tri Ganga and Shakravarta and offering Deva Pitru Tarpanas would establish themselves with name and fame in these Lokas; thereafter performing sacred baths at Kankhala and observe fasting for three successive nights shall indeed reap the benefit of Ashwamedha Yagna and after the termination of life shall take to the path of Swarga) Haridwar is also called Haradwar, Ganga Dwaar and Mayapuri. It is stated to be a combine of Five 'Puris' viz. Mayapuri, Haridwar, Kankhal, Jwalapur and Bhimgoda. It was at this Place that Brahmarshi Narada was enlightened by Sapta Rishis by way of a Maha Bhagavata Saptah in a large gathering of Munis and Vishnu Bhaktas. The most significant spot in Haridwar is Brahma Kunda or what is popularly known as 'Hari ki Pairs'. Besides Ganga Dwar or Brahma kund or Hari ki paidi are situated in Haridwar another four Tirthas viz. Kushavarta, Bilwakesara, Nila Parvata and Kankhal- Gangadware Kushavarte Bilwake Nilaparvate, Snaatwa Kankhale Tirthe punarjanma na vidyate/ (Vidhi poorvaka Snaana and Darshana of Bhagawan Vishnu would certainly qualify for no rebirth and Vaikuntha Prapti at each of these.) These Five Sacred Places represent Pauranic Significance as follows: Brahma Kunda or Hari ki Pairs or Vishnu's foot steps: Chakravarti Bhagirath had the outstanding reputation of bringing down Ganga from Vishnu's feet in Vaikuntha down to Kailasha as absorbed in the 'Jata jootas' or Maha Deva's course head-hair pleats. As Bhagirath further did Tapsya to Maha Deva, the Holy Ganga flowed down to Earth and another King Sweta prayed to Brahma Deva to let parts of the River to flow to his Kingdom and the flows came upto Brahma Kunda. Since Bhartruhari the brother of King Vikramaditya performed penances to Maha Deva on the banks of Brahma Kund and achieved Salvation, Vikramaditya constructed steps of the Kunda famed subsequently as Hari ki Paidi. This has come down as the legend of the yore. Gavu ghat: The southern side of Brahma Kund has come to acquire the popularity of redeeming Go hatyhadhi patakas by the Sacred Bathings at the Gavu ghat. Kushavarta ghat: Once Dattatreya performed severe 'Tapas' on the banks of Ganga not far from Gavu ghat as he kept his belongings viz. Kusha or the mat of Kusha grass, clothing and kamandalu or the water vessel on the banks of Ganga; one fierce wind blew away these items on the banks in circular fashions and since then the Ghat was then christened as Kushavarta. 'Pitru Karyas' and 'Pinda Danas' especially on

Mesha Samkranti days are stated to go a long way resulting in 'Punar janma naasti' or no rebirth again. It is at this Ghat there is the Mandir of Shravana nath. Vishnu Ghat, Maya Devi Mandir, Ganesh ghat, Narayani Shila, Niladhara and Nileshtar, Kalimandir, Chandi Mandir, Anjani Mandir being that of Hanuman's mother, and Gouri Shankar Mandir are all lined up there. Bilwakeshwar: Not far from 'Hari ki Paidi' the Bilwakeshwar Mandir is stated to be the erstwhile abode of Maha Ashwatara Naga of Patala who frequented it for Maha Deva darshan and 'snaanas' at this Tirtha is stated to bestow the Shiva Tulya status. Kankhal: This is the Sacred Tirtha which is the joint flow of Niladhara and Kankhal where nomad Munis used to necessarily halt and wash off all traces of 'Khal' or wickedness. Daksheshwar Maha Deva Mandir assumes outstanding significance in view of its Pouranic background of Daksha Prajapati's Brihaspati Yagna to which his daughter Sati Devi's non invitation due to his hatred to his son-in-law Parama Shiva but still she attended the Yagna and was extremely offended by her father and as such resorted to the extreme step of self immolation in 'Yogaagni' when Maha Deva went berserk with fury, totally destroyed the yagna and beheaded Daksha Prajapati. With a view to mitigate the unusual fury of Maha Deva, Vishnu had to use his Chakra and quietly sliced off Sati Devi's mortal remains and threw away into fifty one pieces which eventually came to be famed as so many Shakti Peethas signifying Devi Sati's body parts as are venerated till date with awe and wonder. As Devas prayed to Maha Deva in torrential 'Stuti', He gradually cooled down and being a known embodiment of mercy and forgiveness, relented to the Prayers of Devas and allowed the beheaded Daksha to replace the latter's head with that of the goat meant for sacrifice at the ruined yagna and revived the Prajapati back to life! That is why this Holy Place is of unusual Mahatmya and yatri to Haridwar and is stated that their yatra would be futile without worship at Daksheshwar Maha Deva! This Holy Tirtha attracts unprecedented yatri on Shiva Ratri for its legendary background! Besides the above Tirthas, Haridwar has other Tirthas too like Sati Kund, Kapila Sthan, Bhima Gouda, Sapta Dhara, Satya Narayana Mandir and Veerabhadreshwar each of which has their own background! From Haridwar to approx. forty miles is situated Shuka taal where Vyasa Maharshi's son Shuka Deva taught Maha Bhagavata Purana within a week's time to Pandava's descendant King Parikshit on the banks of Ganga. Devaband or Devivan some 8 km near Mujaffarnagar off Shaharanpur is known for Durga Mandir where Durga Saptashati was recited first as believed by 'Vidwamsas' of erudition.]

Vishleshana on Devi Ganga -Post Bhagiratha: a) Devi Bhagavata Purana details as follows: Chain reaction of Ganga -King Mahabhishta-Ashta Vasus- King Shantanu- Gangeya Bhishma: There was a virtuous King Mahabhishta of Ikshvaku Dynasty who pleased Indra with a series of 'Asvamedha' and 'Vajapeya' Sacrifices and attained Indra Loka after his death. Once he had attended the Court of Lord Brahma and along with him was seated Devi Ganga. He was immensely attracted to her and she too reciprocated with her amorous glances. Brahma got disturbed and cursed both of them to take to human lives as husband and wife. Mahabhishta opted to be the son of King Pratapa of Puru Dynasty. At the same time Ashta-Vasus (Eight Vasus) of the Celestial Region headed by Vasu Prithi and their families visited Sage Vasishtha's 'Ashram' and admired 'Kama Dhenu' the Sacred Cow whose milk bestowed diseaseless longevity and sublime happiness. The wife of one of the Vasus, Dyau was impressed with the Cow and quietly stole it and its calf. Sage Vasishtha found in his 'Diya Drishti' (Celestial Vision) that Nandini the Sacred Cow was in the custody of Vasu Dyau and cursed all the Vasus to be turned as human beings. Being highly repentant, the Vasus beseeched Vasishtha to dilute the effect of the curse and out of compassion the Sage agreed to one year's human life to seven Vasus as their involvement was indirect but Vasu Dyau should have a full life time. The Vasus, who knew about Brahma's curse to Ganga Devi, approached her to give birth to Seven Vasus of one year's human life each and one life time's existence to the last born Vasu. But this was agreed to subject to the condition that her prospective husband should agree to freedom of her action without any reservation and if he did not, she would quit as the husband. Eventually, Ganga waited on the banks of River Ganges and awaited the arrival of King Pradipa of Kuru Dynasty for meditation. The King arrived to perform 'Surya Namaskaras' on the river bed and Ganga appeared as a charming woman and sat straightaway on his right lap, indicating thereby that the place was to seat a son / daughter. The damsel identified herself as Ganga Devi and replied that she would await his son's arrival who was yet to be born. In course of time, King Pradipa got his son, Shantanu, and as he grew as a handsome youth advised him to meet Ganga Devi who would propose but cautioned that he should not ask her questions and agree to whatever she asked. Accordingly, Ganga Devi, the eternal beauty, agreed to wed Shantanu and agreed to her conditions unilaterally. She gave immense happiness to Shantanu, who became the King after his father's abdication of the throne. After a year, they were blessed with a boy, but she took the baby and submerged him in the flow of Ganga! To his great surprise, Shantanu witnessed the horror of the child's cruel drowning in the flow but dared not say one word to his wife. This happening was repeated again and again for seven times and as the eighth child was born, Shantanu protested and Ganga as per their contract left, but requested that the boy be named as Gangeya. ii) Brahma Vaivarta Purana explains about 'Mutual curses of Lakshmi, Saraswati and Ganga':

Originally Lakshmi, Saraswati and Ganga were the wives of Shri Hari in Vaikuntha. Saraswati felt that Shri Hari was getting fonder of Ganga and complained to Lakshmi but Lakshmi was neutral. Saraswati was irritated and cursed Lakshmi to become a tree as she was insensitive. Ganga felt bad that Saraswati was unnecessarily interfering and cursed Saraswati; this led Saraswati to curse Ganga. Reacting to these curses, Shri Hari gave dispensations as follows: Lakshmi would be born as a tree in the house of King Dharmadhwaja and become the wife of Asura Shankhachuda, a Vishnu devotee and later on turn out to be Shri Hari's dear wife and live for ever as Tulasi and also as a River named Padmavati in Bharata Varsha; Devi Ganga due to Saraswati's curse would become a Holy River to demolish the sins of those who take baths on her waters and eventually flow down in Bharata Varsha due to the persistent efforts of Bhagirath and be called as Bhagirathi and be the wife of Samudra who was also of Shri Hari's 'Amsha' and at the same time be at the 'Shiva Sthaan'; and Saraswati as a result of Ganga's curse would become the wife of Brahma; and finally Lakshmi who was of Satwa Tatwa without any anger or jealousy and would be Shri Hari's own wife eventually. As Shri Hari gave the dispensations as follows, all the three Devis viz. Lakshmi, Saraswati and Ganga embraced each other and felt ashamed of their indiscretions which resulted in the repercussions and prayed to Bhagavan Shrihari as to when the arrangements would terminate and the latter pacified the Devis that he would not only ratify the curses that they made to each other but also retain their positions in Vaikuntha with equal attentions and affections to all the three Devis. Saraswati would keep half 'Amsha' in Bharata Varsha and half with Brahma and the total Amsha with himself (Shri Hari); similarly in respect of Ganga, half of Vishnu's Amsha would be Bhagirathi in Bharata Varsha sanctifying the Beings and by slashing their sins there and the rest of Amsha remaining intact with himself as also have the unique privilege of remaining on Shankara's holy head; as regards Lakshmi, one Amsha would be Tulasi as also as River Padmavati for Kali Yuga's five thousand years and all the Devis would return to Vaikuntha thereafter. The occurrence of the curses among the Devis and the arrangements that were made about them by Shri Hari had some hidden meaning: even while there were several Tirthas in Bharata Varsha, there was a great need for some outstanding Rivers and Punya Kshetras where not only devotees of Shri Hari, but even hopeless sinners and 'Nastiks' (atheists) should have possibilities for self-improvement. That was the reason for the emergence of these Sacred and sin-washing Rivers for quick-if not instant- relief to them. Bhagavan Vishnu indicated that there were several persons, who thrived on cheating, making false promises, social parasites, promise breakers, 'Vishwaas ghaatis', givers of wrong and misleading evidences, occupiers of others' properties and belongings; those who discard parents and blood-relatives; swindle or forcibly bamboozle others etc. The purpose of the Sacred Tirthas like Ganga, Padma and Saraswati was thus to exonerate and correct such misled persons to reform them.

Sarga Forty five: Crossing Ganga, Rama approaching Vaishali asked about Deva Danavas Vishleshanason Kashyapa and Diti and Aditi; Masya Purana: on Kurmaavatara, 'Amrita Mathana', Kaalakuta and Devi Mohini; Maha Bhagavatga Purana: Mammoth Churning of Ocean for 'Amrit' Vishleshana on Kashyapa Maharshi and Diti and Aditi. Brahmanda Purana describes: The progeny of Kashyapa Maharshi thus represented the high-points of Virtue and Evil as though the Worlds were on balance. Kashyapa's wives truly characterised the facets of the Positive and Negative Forces as reflected in their offspring and their descendants: Aditirdharmashila tu Balasheelaa Ditistathaa, Tapahsheelaa tu Surabhirmaayaasheelaa Danustathaa/ Gandha –sheelaa Munischaiva Krodhaadhyayana shaalini/ Geetasheelahyarishtaa tu Krura sheelaa Khashaa smrutaa, Krodhasheelaa tathaa Kadru Krodhaacha Shuchi shaalini/ Vaahasheelaa tu Vinataa Taamraa vai ghatashalini, Iraanagraha sheela tu hyanaayur – bhakshaney rataa/ Matrustulyaabhijaatascha Kashyapaatmajaa Prabho! (Devi Aditi is a natural epitome of Virtue; Diti is a sign of Might and Valour; Surabhi is a Tapaswini and the mother of cows and buffalos; Danu is a Mayavati and the mother of Daanavas; Muni is a Gandha Shila; Krodha is Adhyana Sheela; Arishta is a Geeta sheela or has an aptitude for music; Khasa is a symbol of cruelty and wickedness; Kadru is the representation of anger and revenge; Krodha is a natural icon of Purity; Vinata is prone to Vahanas and thus the mother of the illustrious Garuda Deva the Vehicle of Vishnu Bhagavan and Aruna Deva the Charioteer of Surya Deva; Tamra Devi is a byword of Evil and immorality and the mother of Raakshasas; Ira is the emblem of kindness and morality; and Anayu stands for pleasure and enjoyment. These are the natural characteristics of the wives of Kashyapa Muni as truly reflected in their offspring too. Indeed, Kashyapa Vamsha stood for Dharma, Kshama, Buddhi, Satpravartana and Competence on one side and Adharma, Jealousy, Ignorance, Misbehavior, Viciousness, Cruelty, and utter depravity on the other! It produced Devas, Danavas, Rakshasas, Yakshas, Piscachaas, Gandharvas, Apsaras, Sarpas, Pashu-Mriga-Pakshi-Vriksha-Lataas. All these features are amply manifested among Manavas and are deeply immersed in the whirlpool of Samsara- at times displaying virtue and at other times demonstrating viciousness as they are always targetted with the grand mix of the Satvika-Raajasika and Tamasika Gunas; they are ostensibly motivated by the Chaturvidha Purusharthaas of Dharma-Artha-Kaama-Moksha!

Maharshi Vishvamitra then explained to Shri Rama that both Daityas and Devatas had both sought ‘Amaratva’ of Longevity for ever. But the question got raised as to who should become eligible for the ‘amaratva’. Then both Daityas and Devatas decided to execute ‘Ksheera Sagara Mathana’ or the churning of the Ocean of Milk. (Of the Sapta Samudras Lavana or Salt, Ikshurasa or Sugarcane juice, Sura or Wine, Ghrita or Classified Butter, Dahi or Curd, Ksheera or Milk and Suswada or Sweet Water , Ksheera Sagara on which Maha Vishnu himself is stated to flout as resting on Adi Shesha was decidedly the best). Thus having resolved both Devas and Daityas along with their respective characteristics of Dharma and Adharma. (Aditi, Diti, Danu, Arishta, Surasa, Khasa, Surabhi, Vinata. Tamra, Krodhavasha, Ila, Kadru and Muni.; Diti's sons were the daityas, danavas and Rakshasas). Having decided thus they mutually approached Vaasuki Sarpa to be the massive belt of Mandharaachala for the gigantic task. [Vasuki: Underneath Bhumi are the Nether Worlds viz. Atala, Vitala, Sutala, Talaatala, Rasatala, Mahatala and Patala. The soil in Atala is stated to be of black soil, of Vitala the ground was of palewhite, Sutala of blue, Talatala of yellow colour, Rasatala of gravel covered ground, Mahatala of Rocky Ground and of Patala of Gold. The Palaces of Asuras of Namuchi the enemy of Mahendra, besides of other demons like Mahananda, Kabandha, Bhima, Suladanta, Dhanjaya, Nagendra were all glittering examples of opulence and material happiness in Atala and other Lokas. In Sutala were the noted Daitya-Rakshasa-Serpent Kings like Mahajambha, Karbandha, Hayagriva, Nikumbha, Bhima, Suladanta, Dhananjaya, Nagendra, Kalia and so on. Shankha, Gomukha, Kakutpada, Asvatara, Kambala, Takshaka stayed at Vitala; Prahlada, Taraka, Puranjana etc were in Rasatala; Kalanemi, Gajakarna were in Mahatala; and among other illustrious serpents Maha Sesha and Vaasuki were stated to be in Patala. It was Vaasuki who was tied all around the Mandhara mountain as the churner and Kurma Vishnu as the balancer at the time of Amtita Mathana!] As both the parties of Devas on one side of Vasuki holding the serpent's tail with dharmic awareness and Daityas with ‘ahamkara’ or self ego holding the head of Vasuki got positioned for the churning. In the process, multitudes of Daityas perished as being burnt off by the poisonous flames emitted from the mouth of the Vasuki Snake. As the churning of the Ocean thus having progressed, there appeared on the high skies a massive poisonous fire ball called ‘halaahala’ and threatened to have brought earth into ash. Atha Devaa Mahadevam Shankaram sharanaarthiah, jagmuh Pashupati Rudram traahi traacheeti tushtuvuh/ As all the Devas collected at the tail side of Vaasuki made a desperate appeal to Pashupati Rudra, the latter responded to the prayers even as Maha Vishnu too appeared but appealed to Maha Shiva stating that as the ultimate of the univeres the latter should kindly gulp up the ‘halaahalaagni’ in upright standing posture. Then Halaahalam visham ghoram sanjagnaahaamritopamam/ Maha Deva being Mrityunjaya retained the most poisonous ‘halaahalaagni’ in his throat- lest the lokas in his stomach be not get dislocated with the poisonous flames. Maharshi Vishvamitra then addressed Raghunandana and further explained that the mammoth task of Ksheera Sagara Mathana continued. But then followed another havoc as Mandhara Mountain slipped down into Pataala under the Ocean of Milk. Devatas and Gandharvas as were participating in the task of churning made a frantic appeal to Maha Vishnu to save and pull the mountain falling down so that they might not all be crushed under the weight of the mountain. *Iti shrutvaa Hrisheekeshah kaamatham rupamaasthitah, parvatam prushthatah kritvaa shishaye trayodadhou Harih/*In response to the frantic appeals my Devas placed at the side of the tilt of the gigantic mountain, Maha Vishnu had spontaneously assumed the incarnation of Kurma the massive tortoise so that the mountain could be balanced thereon of its topped up hardness. Some thousand years of churning thereafter, then appeared Dhanvantari the personification of Ayurveda with a ‘danda’ or handstick on one hand and a Kamandalu or vessel of pure water (stated to be of Vishnu himself depicted with four hands, with one of them carrying Amrita, and the other holding shanka- chakra-and a leech!) as well as a group of Apsaras of outstanding physical beauty and charm. [Apsaras: The celestial dancers of feminine beauty and grace ‘par excellence’, skilled in dance and music, such as the ageless Rambha, Menaka, Menaka, Urvashi, Tilottama, Ghritaachi, Mishkarekshi, Vapu, Viprachitti, Purvachitti, Sahajanya, Karnika, Punjikasthala, Vishvachi and so on. Tilottama and Urvashi are believed among those Apsaras to have generated from the ‘amrita mathana’. Apsaras are stated to be closely associated with celestial singers and musicians. At the time of Amrita Mathana, Indra Deva was believed to have opted to enhance the elegance of his court. Apsaras enjoy the reputation or otherwise to have dislocated the tapsya of renowned Maharshis as Brahmarshi Vishvamitra him self was a case in point!] These Apsaras are stated to be of sixty crore strong, nay countless! But none of the Apsaras could ever be the formal wives of maharshis, deva daanavas or of terrestrial or celestial beings, except for casual sex. Then further ‘samudra mathana’ resulted in the creation of Vaarunis who were ever intoxicated by wines and hard liquor always in search of husbands but only the celestials but not of vicious daityas. In fact the term of ‘Sura’ was always used in the context of Devas and the rest of Celestials, and ‘Asuras’ were those denied of drinking wine and other intoxicants! That was the reason of Vaaruni Devataas getting readily attracted to Devas! As the churning progressed, Ucchaistava the best of horses, and Koustubha the best of priceless diamonds emerged. As the ever full pot of Amrita became visible in the hands of Dhanvantari, there was a stampede and fierce battle opened as that indeed was the ultimate and ambitious target of Samudra Mathana! Innumerable Deva Danavas perished in the open and all out war, Lord Vishnu took to the mesmerising form of Mohini Devi and the huge battle of Deve-Asuras ceased suddenly. She then brought in a truce and made them seated in groups on either side - ostensibly, with a view to orderly distributing the ‘ambrosia’ for which the all out endeavour for thousands of years got climaxed to a reality! While distributing amrita, Vishnu in the form of Mohini Devi distributed amrit to Devas totally, and from the side of Danava Daityas as the distribution was about to be ended by Devi Mohini, two of the daityas viz. Rahu and Ketu stealthily shifted over the group of Devas. The omniscient Vishnu as Mohini patronized Rahu and Ketu did receive drops of the elixir and joined the group of Nava grahas, for subtle reasons. Ther after Indra retained the seat of kingship of Svarga as Rishis and other Devatas were pleased too.

[References from Matsya Purana and Maha Bhagavata on Samudra Mathana:

Masya Purana: on Kurmaavatara, ‘Amrita Mathan’, Kaalakuta and Devi Mohini:

As Danava Guru Shukracharya secured Sanjeevani Vidya from Maha Deva after thousands of penance and meditation to enable Danavas and Daityas the restore their lives, especially after their killings in battles with Devas, there were series of victories of Danavas and all the like minded evil forces, while Injustice and Vice prevailed in suppression of Virtue, Justice and Peace. In response to a delegation of Devas led by Indra and Deva Guru, Brahma appealed against passion for battles and enmities. He also called King Bali the Head of Daityas and Danavas and to refrain from frequent quarrels with Devas and suggested a Master Plan for the mutual benefit of Devas, Gandharvas and like minded allies on the one hand and Daityas, Danavas, Rakshaas, Nagas and Yakshas on the other. The Plan proposed by Brahma was follows: Both Daityas and Devas should jointly organise the Project of ‘Kshira Sagara Mathana’; approach Vishnu under the leadership of King Bali to revive the Form of ‘Kurma’ (Tortoise) present in Palala loka; request Mandarachala or the Mountain of Mandara to be the churning rod; pray to ‘Sehsha Nag’ or the Giant Serpent who bears the weight of the entire Universe to be the long and strong rope to be used for the churning. As planned the joint delegation prayed to Bhagavan Kurma lying in Patala loka first and the latter agreed readily saying: Thrailokya dhaarineynaapi na glanir-mama jaayatay, Kimu Mandarakaat Kshudraat gutikaa samnibhaadiha/ (I have no problem in holding the Mandhara Mountain for this noble cause as this so like a pebble for me!) Later on when the delegation approached Sesha Nag, he replied: Brahmanda veshatinaanaapi Brhahmaanda mathanenavaa, Na mey glanirbhaved dehey kimu Mandara vartaney! (If I could bear the brunt of the Universe what is the problem in holding it while churning and rotating it!). At that time, Kurma Deva was right underneath the Mountain, but neither Daityas nor Devas could rotate the mountain much less churn it. The delegation reached Vaikuntha and prayed to Vishnu under the Leadership of Bali, when Vishnu was in Yoga Nidra lying on Sesha Nag on Ksheera Samudra, as follows: Namo loka trayadhaksha tejasaa jita bhaskara, Namoh Vishno Namoh Jishno Namastey Kaitabhardana/ Namah sargakriyaakartrey Jagatpaalayatey Namah, Rudrarupaaya Sharvaaya Namah Samharakaariney/ Namah Shulaayudhadhrushya Namoh Daanava-ghaatiney, Namah Traayaakranta Trailokyaaayaabhavaaya cha/ Namah Prachanda Daitreyndrakulakaala mahaanala, Namoh naabhihrudodbhuta padmagarbha Mahabala/ Padmabhuta Mahabhuta karthrey hatrey Jagatpriya, Janitaa Sarvalokeshya kriyaa kaarana kaariney/ Amaraari vinaashaaya Mahaasamara shaaliney, Lakshmi mukhaabja madhupa namah keerti nivaasiney/ Asmaakamamaratwaaya ghritayaam ghriyataa - mayam, Mandarah Sarvashailaanaamayutaatayaayuta vistrutah/ Anantabala baahu bhyamavasht abhaika paaninaa, Madhyataamamrutam Deva Swadhaa Swaadhaartha kaaminam/ (Bhagavan Vishnu, Jishnu, Trilokaadhyaksha! our sincere greetings to you; You are the famed demolisher of Kaitabha; The Creator, the Presever and also the Destroyer of the whole world with Trishula in your hands; You expanded and occupied in merely three steps of yours all the Three Lokas; You are like the Agni who put the total ‘Vamsha’ or the race of the frightful of Daitya Clan into flames and ash; You materialised Brahma from the lotus of your navel; You are the Jagatkarta, Harta and Priya; the Karya, Karana and Karta or the Deed, the Doing and the Doer; Our endeavours are due to create ‘Amrit’ for ‘Amaratwa’ or everlasting life; kindly enable with your mighty arms the ‘Manthana’ or churning of the Madarachala in the Ksheera Sagara!) As Bhagavan agreed to do so and initiated the circling of Sesha Nag around the Mountain, the Daityas and Danavas out of bravado held the head of Sesha Nag’s thousand mouths that emitted poisonous flames and many of them perished even before the process of churning; Devas on the other hand held the tail and manouvered it. As both the churning got momentum, both the Parties were extremely tired and Indra materialised cool showers to reduce the tiresomeness. Lord Brahma alerted and encouraged with cheerings and heartening remarks periodically to both the face-drawers and tail-enders of the Sesha Nag. As the churning of the ten thousand yojana wide Mountain continued, from its top fell down several groups of elephants, eight-footed Sharabha animals, wild lions, tigers, boars and bears, crores of fearful poisonous reptiles, besides heavy and tall trees, branches, fruits, leaves, medicinal herbs and plants into the Ocean. The resultant pulp of the ‘Manthan’ of the materials dropped from the Mountain produced ‘Varuni’ and its energizing smell pleased Devas and Danavas and became refreshed and mightier; the speed of churning pepped up and Bhagavan Vishnu held the sides of the Mountain by his shoulders-grip and the radiance of the jewels on the thousand hoods was reflected on the blue dazzle of Vishnu’s shoulders and hands looking like a ‘Brahma danda’ even as thousands of roars and lightnings emerged from the deafening sounds of clouds above and sky-rise sea tides below. From the tail side of the Sesha Nag, Indra, Aditya, Rudragana, Vasugana, and other Devas were getting more and more active while the Rakshasa ganas including the powerful Viprachit, Namuchi, Vritra, Shambar, Dwimurtha, Vajradamshttra and Rahu, all headed by King Bali were displaying their respective energies with arrogance and self-pride. In the process countless animals, fishes, reptiles and other varieties of Seas and the under-Sea Beings were destroyed in millions. Unfortunately however there was no indication of the much awaited ‘Amrit’ and all the Parties concerned were fully exhausted and disappointed. They all in one voice of unanimity prayed to Bhagavan Vishnu once again and the Lord assured them: Balam dadaami sarveshaam karmaitad ye samaasthitaah, Kshubhyataam kramashah Sarvair Mandarah parivartataam/ (To all the persons involved in this Manthana Venture, I am according ‘Shakti’ herewith and all concerned should perform their maximum from now on). As the action had improved manifold now, there was Purna Chandra, who emerged with the illumination of hundred Surys yet with extraordinary coolness that would readily bring about breezy freshness to the whole world. Then Devi Lakshmi was materialised with considerable grace and gorgeousness who desired to opt for Bhagavan Vishnu; she was followed by Sura Devi and Ucchaishwa and these were granted by Asuras to Indra as they were rather keen only for Amrita. Then followed the emergence of Koustubh Mani and that was gifted away to Vishnu to adorn the ornament on his broad chest. Further on, there was a Parijata Vriksha, which had bunches of flowers whose intoxicating fragrance filled up all over the gardens of Swarga. Eventually, there occurred dense and blue smoke which appeared all over the Ocean and reached the sky as well, when all the participants of the Churning were unable to increasingly bear it and had to temporarily call off the action as there were poisonous flames and fumes surrounding them, choking them all and killing several of them. Meanwhile, a highly frightful figure making terrible noises descended from the pitch dark clouds; as Daityas and Devas were frightened to the core and Bhagavan Vishnu interrogated that horrendous figure as to who that it was! The reply came to Vishnu that it was KAALAKUTA VISHA and that could devour the whole Universe instantly, that it emerged pursuant to the huge scale churning of Ksheera Samudra and that all the participants should at once take the refuge of Maha Deva. The panicky Deva-Danavas as well as Brahma and Vishnu made a bee-line to a Golden Cave on the top of Mandara Mountain which too was a Principal participant of the Manthana Drama. At the Entry Gate of ‘Shiva Nivasa’, Ganeswara took Maha Deva’s permission to let the agitated Devotees in as they all in a chorus commended Shiva (Shiva Stuti) as follows: Namah Virupaksha Namaste Divyachakshusey/ Namah Pinaaka hastaaya Vajrahastaaya dhanviney/ Namah trishula hastaaya Dandahastaaya Dhurjatey, Namastrailokya naathaaya Bhutagraama shareeriney/ Namah Suraari hantrey cha Somaagnya kaaryagnya chakshushey, Brahmaney chaiva Rudraaya Namastey Vishnu –rupeney/ Brahmaney Vedarupaaya Namastey Deva rupiney, Saamkhya yogaaya Bhutaanaam Namastey Shaambhavaaya tey/ Manmathaayaanga vinaashaaya Namah Kaalakshayankara, Ramhasey Deva Devaaya Namastey Vasuretasey/ Eka Viryaya Sarvaaya Namah Pinga kapardiney, Uma bhartrey Namastubhyam Yagna Tripura ghaatiney/ Shuddha bodha prabuddhaaya Muktakaivalya rupiney, Lokatraya vidhatrecha Varunendraagni rupiney/ Ruyasussama rupaaya Purushaayeswaraaya cha, Agraaya chaiva chograaya Vipraay Shurti chakshusey/ Rajasey chaiva Satvaaya Tamasey Timiraamaney, Anintya nityabhaavaaya namo nityacharaatmaney/ Vyaktaaya chai vyaktaaya Vyaktaavyaktaanaya vai namah, Bhaktaanaamaarti naashaaya Priyanaraayanaayacha/ Umaapriyaaya Sharvaaya Nandivaktraaschitaaya cha, Rutu manvata kalpaaya Paksha maasa dinaatmaney/ Nanaarupaaya Mundaaya Varuutha Pruthu dandiney, Namah Kapaalahastaaya Digvaasaaya Shikhandiney/ Dhaniney rathiney chaiva yatayey Brahmachaariney, Ityevamaadi charitaih stutantu tubhyam namo namah/ (Virupaaksha! As the Deva-Daanava's joint delegation prostrated before Bhagavan-which incidentally was a historical event of unique significance, Shankara agreed: Bhakshayishyaamyaham ghoram kalakutam Maha visham, Tathaanyadapi yatkruthyam kruchhasaadhyam Surasuraah, Tacchaapi saadhayishyaami tishthadhwam vigatajjwaraah/ (Deva Suraagana! I am no doubt consuming this terrible poison anyway; if you entrust me any other worse and more difficult deeds to be performed, they too would be executed; never worry!) By so saying, Bhagavan took the 'Halaahala Visha' into his left hand and consumed and retained it in his throat as Devas headed by Brahma as also Asuras led by King Bali hailed Parameshwara exclaimed: Shobhatey Deva Kathastey gaatreya kundaniprabho, Bhrungaamaalaanibham Kanthepyathraivaastu visham tawa/ (Devadeva! As your Physique is white, slender and fragrant like a jasmine flower while the blue tinge of your throat has a remarkably distinct-look with the spot on your throat; please do retain it as it is!) All the concerned parties involved in the 'Operation Amrit' returned back to their respective positions once again anxiously awaiting the materialisation of Amrit. In the final exercise of Churning the 'Ksheera Sagara', Bhagavan Dhanvantari, the Deity of 'Ayurveda' surfaced along with the most awaited Pot of Amrit; then followed the Large and Attractive Eyed Devi Madira the symbol of Intoxication; Kamadhenu the celestial cow which fulfilled the desires of any Living Being got materialised later on; the Celestial Elephant Iravata which Indra Deva claimed; Surya Deva accepted Dhanvatari as also the Uchhaishvraya horse that came up even earlier; Varuna Deva claimed the Celestial Chhatra (umbrella) and as Indra desired the Kundala Dwaya or the magnificent Ear-Rings. At this juncture, Dhanvantari declared AMRITA and then commenced an all-out scuffle between Devas and Daityas making claims and counter claims. The fight assumed larger proportions as Bhagavan Vishnu materialised Mohini Devi and the demons became victims of Maya -Illusion-as they were completely enchanted by her and allowed her to distribute the Elixir. In this confusion, Mohini let Devas seize the Eternal Pot and they drank it off one by one; one Asura viz. Rahu however managed to consume the drops of Amrit upto his throat and as Surya and Chandra shouted against Rahu, Vishnu in a swift action cut off the Demon's throat by his Sudarshana Chakra, but the damage was already done and Rahu became immortal, all though all the rest of Asuras were denied of the Divine Drink. This followed fierce battles between Devas and Danavas and there was extensive massacre and blood-bath when innumerable Danavas and Daityas suffered losses and Devas became victorious under the stewardship of Bhagavan Vishnu. The left-over Danava-Daitya Stalwarts disappeared into the Oceans to retire into Patala Loka. There after, Mandarachala was restored to its original position; so did Sesha Nag and Sudarshana Chakra too. The havoc created in the Oceans too limped back to normalcy. The Dikpalakas, Devas, Gandharvas and all the Celestial Beings got reinstated and were extremely delighted and overjoyed. Tatomrutam sunihitameva chakrirey, Suraah Paraam tudamabhigamya pushklalaam/ Dadduscha tam nidhimamrutasya rakshitam, Kiritiney Balibhirathaamaraih saha/ (Thereafter, the Devaganas were gladdened to safeguard and hand over the 'Amrita Nidhi' /The Remaining Deposit of the Elixir to the custody of Bhagavan Vishnu himself.)]

Maha Bhagavatga Purana: Mammoth Churning of Ocean for 'Amrith' (Nectar)

Proceeding with the narration to King Parikshith, Suka Mahamuni highlighted that it was in the sixth millennium of Chakshusa Manu that Lord Vishnu had incarnated as Ajita who was begotten to Vairaja and Devasambhuti; Ajita in the form of a tortoise was wandering in the Ocean of Milk carrying the Mountain Mandhara on His back and produced 'Amrit' by churning the Ocean. Parikshith became highly inquisitive about the famous story and requested the Muni to give full details. As the enmity and intense hatred between the Demi- Gods and Demons took unprecedented proportions, the Demi-Gods assembled on the top of the Sumeru Mountain to seek a solution. Lord Brahma instructed the Devas and Demons to resort to a temporary truce, till arrangements could be made to churn the Ocean of Milk to obtain Amrit, the Divine Drink to provide everlasting life. Garuda, the Vehicle of Lord Vishnu lifted the Mandhara Mountain and placed it into the Ocean as the churning rod. Vasuki the Giant Serpent coiled around the Mountain tightly; the head of the serpent was opted for by the Demons out of pride and the tail was taken by the Demi-Gods as the rope. As the Mountain was not stable and shaky, Ajita in the form of tortoise slid under the Mountain and provided the needed balance. Thus commenced the mammoth churning of the Ocean for 'Amrit'. Many Demons perished from the poisonous flames from the mouth of Vasuki. As the churning progressed, the Ocean was shaken up bringing out innumerable species underneath, black clouds emerged fast across the Sky and there was terrible turmoil around. Suddenly, the Sky looked like breaking way, emitting unprecedented poisonous flames, 'Halahal', swiftly engulfing the entire Universe. The initial churning was terminated and Demi-Gods headed by Lord Brahma as well as the Demons screamed for help to Lord Siva to save the situation. They all prayed to Him that He was the original life force, the Maha Tatva, the Eternal Truth and the Omni Potent and He only could stop the annihilation of the Universe. In response to the desperate prayers by one and all, Lord Siva swallowed the 'Halahal' and retained it in His Throat to safeguard the Worlds within His other body parts. Thus known in the Scriptures; as 'Neela Greeva'-the Blue Throated, He protected the entire Universe and saved the act of Creation itself. As the process of churning resumed further, a number of Divine Figures commenced emerging: 'Surabhi' the Cow required for unending milk and products required for Sacred Rituals as oblations to Fire God by Sages; a Divine Horse, Utthaisvarya, as desired by King Bali of the Under World; the Divine Elephant 'Airavata' and eight She Elephants, which were desired by Indra to possess; Koustubha Mani and Padmaraga Mani-the jewels decorating Lord Vishnu's chest; 'Parijata Tree' to decorate the Celestial Gardens; then emerged Apsaras, the Divine dances to entertain Demi-Gods and Indra; the Goddess of Fortune, Lakshmi whom the Demi-Gods and Demons craved alike to possess but She Herself opted for Lord Vishnu Who is the ultimate Preserver of the Universe; then appeared the dame, Varuni, with voluptuous eyes who could control drunkards, whom King Bali opted for on behalf of the Demon World. Finally, a strong, stout, blackish and young person, known as Dhanvantari, the Physician of the Universe, whom both Demons and Demi-Gods agreed to share. But, the most awaited jar of Nectar noticed by the Demons was forcibly snatched away, to the disappointment of Demi-Gods. But, Lord Vishnu created a cover of 'Maya' (Illusion) and let the Demons fight among themselves for the sips of the Nectar. In the confusion, there appeared an outstanding beauty with most sonorous voice and dazzling figure, who was Lord Himself in the form of Mohini Murthi. She had mesmerised the Demons who fell in a spell and made them request her to do justice in equitably distributing the Nectar to all by turns. She made formations as per seniority and made them wait for turns. She started with the formations of the Demons, but by means of illusion had actually commenced the distribution among the Demi-Gods. Rahu a Demon somehow got into the camp of Demi-Gods and this was noticed by Sun and Moon, who complained the fact to Mohini Murthi and immediately the Sudarsana Chakra severed Rahu's head, but since he drank the drops of Nectar already, Lord Brahma gave him the status of a Planet; but since then, Rahu became the enemy of Sun and Moon and torment them periodically by way of eclipsing them till date. At this juncture, Lord Vishnu revealed his identity and exhorted the Demons to mend their diabolic actions and take refuge in the Superior Energy instead of becoming slaves of the Eight Materialistic Vices, Viz. Kama (Desire), Krodha (Anger), Moha (Infatuation), Mada (Arrogance), Lobha (Avarice) and Matsara (Jealousy). He advised that in the ultimate analysis, only He would provide salvation which tantamounts to Eternity, which indeed the Nectar that they craved for.]

Sarga Forty Six: Having failed to secure Amrit, Diti- daitya mother- seeks to destroy Indra Vishleshana: Brahmanda Purana: Diti revengeful of Indra and 'Pumsavana' Sacrifice ; Maha Bhagavata about Marud Ganas: As Diti fell asleep unconsciously, Indra entered her Garbha with his 'Vajraayudha', saw the fully grown up boy inside ,cajoled him saying 'don't cry, don't cry' and sliced the child into seven parts and further to forty nine sub-parts.
Vishleshana on Devi Diti and Indra from Brahmanda Purana and Maha Bhagavata Purana

Brahmanda Purana: Diti revengeful of Indra and 'Pumsavana' Sacrifice : Diti felt that Indra was responsible for several killings of her progeny including Hiranyaksha and Hiranuyakasipu and thus her anger for Indra became intense. She thus requested her husband Kasyapa to bless her with a son who could kill Indra. Sage Kasyapa felt extremely sad that his wife was following a wicked route to bear her a son to kill Indra. He somehow desired that such an eventuality should never arise and planned to at least prolong time for a year and asked Diti to follow very strict regime of personal sacrifice named ‘Pumsavana’. During the year, Diti should not think ill of others, nor speak lies, nor hurt any body, nor eat flesh or fish, nor wear robes unwashed by herself, but worship Brahmanas, cows, and women with husbands and sons alive, in short follow a life of a hermit. Any discrepancy or deviation from the prescribed do’s and don’ts would not only kill Indra but would become a friend and associate. The nephew Indra knew the intention of Diti, but pretended to help her in the Daily Worship by fetching flowers and fruits to Diti and such other services. At the time of Diti’s delivery after a year, Indra who had yoga sidhis, like ‘anima’ and ‘laghima’ entered Diti’s womb and with the help of his ‘Vjara’ (the Thunderbolt) cut the embryo into seven pieces and cut each piece to another seven pieces. Each of the forty-nine pieces thus born became as many ‘Maruts’ who became demigods and thus Diti was purified of her envy and animosity of Lord Indra. Pumsavana had thus become an important ‘Vrata’ (a sacred ritualistic practice of worship) by chaste women for one year with the help and active association of their husbands. During the bright half of month of ‘Kartika’ (falling during November-December), there should be an intense worship by both the husband and wife. On the last day of Moon-rise (Purnamasi or Pournami), the climactic worship (pujas) should take place with friends and relatives participating in the event, under the guidance of Brahmanas, performing twelve oblations to Fire God with ‘Ghee’ in a ritualistic manner by chanting the Mantra: ‘Om Bhagavatey Mahapurushaya Maha Vibhutaya Swaha’. During the entire preceding year too, the couple could -or at least either of them- observe the prescribed daily worships to Goddess Lakshmi and God Narayana., by chanting the Mantra. Sincere worship on these lines ought to bless the couple and their family good health, prosperity, name around and happiness. The Vrat can be done by unmarried women to secure good husbands; those who have no husbands/ sons could perform for spiritual solace.

Maha Bhagavata about Marud Ganas:

Since there were such continuous deaths of her family lineage, Diti was terribly upset as all the gallant heroes of Daityas were destroyed successively despite the valiant acts of their intrepidity and resoluteness; she entreated Kashyapa Muni to bestow a boon to her that she must give birth to a son who could kill Indra. Kashyapa Muni too felt that the progeny of Aditi were getting too powerful enjoying Swarga while the progeny of Diti were continuously rotting in the Sub-terrain Lokas despite the fact that they were courageous and highly enterprising. Thus the Muni directed Diti to follow celibacy and fasting with concentrated Tapasya for thousand years and and worship the Supreme whereafter she should observe a ‘Vrata’. Diti sought Shukraacharya’s direction to observe the Vrata. As Diti conceived eventually, Indra somehow got the awareness of what was happening and approached Diti with feigned feelings of affection to his mother’s own sister and made her agree to supply flowers and other materials for the Vrata and stayed with her day and night to protect her from Evil Spirits. As Diti fell asleep almost unconsciously when Sun was at peak on the Sky, Indra then entered her Garbha with his ‘Vajraayudha’, saw the fully grown up boy inside and even as the child cried, Indra cajoled him saying Maaroda maaroda (don’t cry, don’t cry) and sliced the child into seven parts [Aavaha-Pravah-Samvaha-Udvaha-Vivaha-Parivaha-Paraavaha] and further cut the seven parts to total up to forty nine sub-parts; the fully awoken Diti Devi pleaded mercy and cried loudly saying: na hantavyah, na hantavyah! (not to be killed, not to be killed!). Meanwhile Indra jumped out and sought her pardon for the imprudence that he committed! The terribly distressed Diti was taken aback and got bewildered for a while and having recovered her senses said that Indra need not be afraid of her anger as she would reconcile to what had happened since after all his action was not unjustified as his position would have been at stake of the child was really born. Having said that most magnanimously she blessed each part of the killed boy as follows: Bhavantu mama Putraanaam Sapta Sthaanaani vai Divi, Vaataskandhaanimaansapta charantu mama Putrakaah/ (May my sons be borne by Vayu into seven eternal places of glory and be blessed as Marut Devas with unprecedented splendour and reputation at seven parts of the Universe!)Diti declared further: Let the first sphere be on Earth, the second in Surya Mandala, the third in Chandra Mandala, the fourth on the Sky at the Jyotisha Mandala, the fifth among the Graha Mandala or the Planetary System, the sixth in the Saptarishi Mandala and the seventh in Dhruva Loka. May my sons move about freely in all the Seven Places with magnificence and pride. Diti further blessed and ordained that the first batch of Marud Ganaas or the first 'Vaata Skantha' or Air Pocket be called 'Avaha' in the vicinity of Bhumi; the second batch of the Vayu Skandha would be reputed as 'Prahava' beyond the clouds upto the Solar Region; the third and fourth batch of Marud Ganaas moving in the Lunar Mandala and underneath the Star Constellations, the Vayu Skandha would be fabled as 'Samvaha'; the fifth bunch of Marud ganaas reaching upto Planets would be distinguished as 'Vivahava'; let the sixth in the series climbing upto Saptarshi Mandala be popularised as 'Anuvaha' and the final hike nearby Dhruva Mandala be glorified as 'Parivaha'. Oh Shakra! Let it be known all over the Universe that the names of my children on the basis of the deeds entrusted to each of the Ganas are: Shukra jyoti, Satya, Satya Jyoti, Chitra Jyoti, Jyotishmaan, Sutava, Chaitya; the second Gana would comprise Rutajit, Satyajit, Sushena, Sevajit, Sutamitra, Amitra, and Suramitra; the names of the third Ganaas would be Dhatu, Dhanada, Ugra, Bhima, Varuna, Abhiyuktaaksha, and Saahvya. The fifth Gana would have the names of Druk, Anadruk, Sirat, Druma, Vrikshaka, Mita, and Samita. The Shasthagana would have the names of Iruk, Purusha, Naanaadruk, Samachetana, Sammita, Samavrit and Prati harta. (Incidentally, Brahmanda Purana did not mention the other names). Indra assured that whatever Diti had stated would indeed be firmed up and that all the Forty Marud Ganaas would be share holders of Yagna bhaagas or the Authorised Consumers of the Sacrificial Offerings. They would also be his own brothers and the Co-Devataas!

Sarga Forty Eight and Nine : Sumati showed the way to Gautama Ashram en route Mithila.

Vishleshana: Indra assuming Gautama's form takes Ahalya to bed, the latter's wife - a supreme Pativrata Ganesha Purana.

Vishleshana on Indra assuming Maharshi Gautama's form takes to bed Devi Ahalya, the latter's wife - a supreme Pativrata Ganesha Purana, Chapters 30-34: Brahmarshi Narada states: He visited Lord Indra at Amaravati as the former complimented Narada as a Triloka Sanchari; Narada replied that his latest was 'mrityuloka' and chanced to meet Rishi Gautama in his ashram along with his wife Devi Ahalya; he also said that Ahalya was supremely pretty and her exquisiteness and grace was 'par excellence' in the Three Lokas that he ever visited as the Apsaras and all the Swarga based feminine beauty and charm was truly negligible. After Narada's social call was over, Indra visited Gautama's ashram; the Maharshi was busy with his morning duties and left the ashram. Meanwhile Indra assumed the Rishi's form and entered their bedroom. Devi Ahalya was stunned to see Maya Gautama in her bed room and exclaimed whether the Muni had not left for the duties but lying in the bed. Indra in the maya rupa said that he short circuited the puja and desired to go into bed with her as he was attacked by 'kaama baana', fondled her red and luscious and body parts and slept with her as she replied that there would be no other stree dharma as she ought to be a Pativrata and chirruped : Karyeshu Dasi, Karaneshu Manthri; Bhojeshu Mata, Shayaneshu Rambha, Roopeshu lakshmi, Kshamayeshu Dharitri, Shat dharmayukta, Kuladharma Patni/ and fell into the bed of Maayavi Gautama! Then Indra showed his own form and Arundhati was astonished and shocked as a stone. Even in the bed she felt a doubt that the body which she fondled was of different odour. As Indra disappeared, she was lost in thoughts. As the husband returned, she fell straight at his feet as the Maharshi out of his 'divya drishti'/ celestial vision as what all had happened. He stated that : In respect of mantra-ayush-grihacchidra especially related to griha parivaara, rati karma-aoushadhi seva-maana sammaan as also avamaan and daama, a wise person should be discreet in advertising in public. Thus the Maharshi gave a 'shaap' to Devi Ahalya to turn into a stone since Ahalya was unable to distinguish the form- nature-and actions in comparison to a Para purusha and got mixed up with the his body parts and semen- albeit Indra was the Lord of Swarga. Then he gave a shaap to his dharma patni to instantly become a stone till such time Lord Shri Rama, in the course of vana vaasa would receive his 'paada sparsha'. On learning about the Maharshi's shaap, Indra got shivers like a sand storm got shattered by a mountain and instantly assumed the form of a cat and ran away from the scene. Realising that Indra fled away, the Maharshi cursed Indra to assume a swarupa as broken into thousand parts. As Indra who killed Vritraasura a Brahmana was carrying the ill- reputation of brahmana hatya, one of the Pancha Maha Paatakas of Stree hatya, Bhruna / Shishu hathya, Brahmana hatya, Go hatya and Guru hatya / Guru Bharya Gamana, realised that the shaap of Maharshi Gautama and rued deeply as to how could show up his face in Deva Sabha as he was expected to preach the principles of dharma while unable to observe and follow himself, let alone enforce it! Indra decided : Praanibhir bhujyate karma shubham vaashubham, tiryag yonim samaadaadya khapishyeghamaatmanah, nalinee kundmale tishthehen idragopagaruupadhruk/All the 'jeeva rasis' in srishti- from Indra to an insect-ought to reap the fruits of their past acts and as such I ought to assume tiryak yoni or the form of a 'pashu pakshi keetaka' and thus decide to become a worm as an Indragopa keetaka.' [Reference on Pativratas: Sapta Pativratas: Ahalya, Draupadi, Sita, Tara, Mandodari, Anasuya and Sumati: An explanation of a Parivrata refers to Ahalya though she slept with Indra but she had her husband Muni Gautama was genuinely on her mind and when turned into a stone due to Gautama's Shaap Rama purified her too for her dereliction due to her ignorance; Draupadi though she married Pancha Pandavas since all the Pandavas were of the Amsha of Indra whose virility was distributed to Devi Kunti through Yama Dharmaraja to beget Yudhishtara, Vayu Deva to beget Bhima, Arjuna from his (Indra's) own and Ashwini Kumars from Devi Maadri as Nakula and Sahadeva apart from the fact that Draupadi was Indra's better half viz Sachi Devi who was originally Yagneshani the daughter of Agni as clarified in Markandeya Purana ; Devi Sita despite Ravana's pressure tactics had only Rama always; Devi Tara the wife of Vaali but the Tradition of Kishkindha allowed Sugriva to marry after Vaali's death as approved by Rama himself and Mandodari of course was a fixation on Ravana asura despite his infatuation with Sita; Anasuya the wife of Atri and the illustrious Kardama Prajapati ; Sumati who was an outstanding Pativrata who adored her husband a Leper and even prostrated before a woman whom her husband desired to sleep with.]As Indra hid himself as a Indragopa Keetaka, Deva Guru Brihaspati and Devas approached Maharshi Gautama with the sincere prostrations and requested him to withdraw the shaap or atleast mitigate it. The Maharshi initially reacted stating that a person of Indra's stature as he was a kapati-shatha-dushta-aviveki-and pashchaattaapa rahita paapi and his paschaattapa would be futile. Yet, as you are all urging sincerely then Indra even in the keetaka form be taught with the Shadakshara Ganesha Mantra as Ganesha was always a 'sarva karta-sarva harta-sarvapaata-kripaanidhi-Brahmavishnu Shivaatmika and Mahasiddhi pradaayaka'. The vidhivatra Shadakshara Ganesha Mantra pleased Indra and the Gautama shaapa to Indra got diluted and hence forward Indra would hence forward would assume a divya deha become a sahasra netra instead of 'shasra shareera chheda'. Indra while assuming his normal swarupa- albeit with mitigated curse by Gautama, had foremost reached the Maharshi's feet and thanked him profusely. There after, Indra seated under a kadamba tree, practised Ganesh's shadakshara mantra for thousand years and Ganesha gave his benign darshan and blessed him as that the place, came to be famed as Kadambara Chintaa Mani pura and eversince that the Chintamani Sarovara had become reputed as a place as the abode of Abheeshta Siddhi Chintamani Vinayaka where Indra Himself constructed a huge temple with a sphatika murti with golden frame.

Sarga Fifty Eight-Nine-Sixty: Trishanku desires to reach swarga being mortal and Vishvamitra creates a mid- sky swarga with his tapo bala; Vishleshana: Vishvamitra creates Trishanku swarga Vishleshana on Vishvamitra- Trishanku swarga: Skanda Purana's Nagara Khanda describes a modified version:

King Trishanku of Surya Vamsa made an odd request to the his Guru Sage Vasishtha that he would like to go to Swarga with his mortal body and that such a Yagna be performed enabling him to do so. Vasishtha ridiculed the idea and the King asked the Sage's sons to find a way out, lest he might abandon Vasishtha as his Guru; the infuriated sons cursed the King to turn out to be a 'chandala' of low caste. The frustrated Trishanku in the form of a chandala left the Kingdom making way for his son Harischandra as the King and wandered in forests where he met Sage Visvamitra who took up the issue as a challenge, especially because he was a traditional competitor and enemy of Vasishtha. The Sage asked that Trishanku should first get rid of the form of a chandal and desired him to perform a Holy Pilgrimage. As both of them were set on visiting Tirthas, they reached Arbudachal (Abu) to visit 'Achalaswar' and met Markandeya who advised them to take a trip to Haatakeswar and take bath in the Patala Ganga there. To their great surprise, the Snaan and worship at that place did the miracle and Trishanku got rid of the curse of his becoming a chandala. Even as Trishanku was preparing to perform a Grand Yagna, the Sage approached Lord Brahma to be the Chief Guest who refused saying that it was against the realm of possibility that a human in his form could reach Swarga. This nodoubt frustrated Trishanku as also Viswamitra but the latter never gave up the effort and did harsh Tapasya to Bhagavan Siva who out of generosity granted the boon of ability to duplicate the task of Brahma's Creation; the Sage succeeded in creating another Sun, Moon, Sky, Air, Water etc. Indeed the parallel Srishti panicked Brahma and the compromise reached was that if Brahma took Trishanku to Swarga in the latter's mortal body; Viswamitra would refrain from making a parallel creation.

The outcome of hundred years of Agnihotra Upasna on the one hand and residing and worshipping at Pushkara Tirtha on a Kartika Purnima night are Padma Purana explains the legendary background of the Pushkara Tirtha: At very beginning of 'Vishwa Srishti' of Universal Creation, there was a Rakshasa named Vajra naabha who was engaged in the most cruel and wreckless activities; Brahma meanwhile emerged from the Naabhi (Navel) of Vishnu and the latter's first wish was to perform Yagna and landed at Pushkar even with a part of the stem of the Padma / Lotus with which he killed Vajra naabha. As the lotus was discarded by him, there got a Lake manifested on the banks of which Brahma performed the first ever Yagnya. He carved out a Yagna Vedi in the vacant plot between three Holy Areas viz. Sarasvati in the west, Chandra nadi in the North and Nandana sthaan in the East and the region in between as the Yagna Vedi; he created three Pushkar Tirthas viz. Jyeshtha-Madhyama-Kanishtha. All the Maharshis who made their Ashrams and Devas arrived and Bhagavan Shankar as Kapaladhari too arrived. But Devi Savitri delayed and since the Muhurta to commence the Yagna was round the corner, Brahma created Devi Gayatri and married her as meanwhile on noticing Gayatri left in an angry huff to a nearby mountain and performed another Yagna on the mountain top. It was stated that Lord Varaaha got manifested from Brahma's nostril top. Thus, at the present Pushkar Tirtha, besides Brahma, Gayatri, Varaha Bhagavan, Kapaleshwara Shiva, Savitri on the Mountain top, and Agastya Maharshi continue to stay at Pushkar Tirtha till date.

Pushkar's cynosure is the Brahma Temple, not far from Pushkar Tirtha, and Brahma's right side is Savitri Mandir and to the left is the Gayatri Mandir; besides the Chaturmukha Brahma are the Idols of Sanakaadi Munis; in a small Mandir is Narada and in another small Mandir are the idols of Kubera seated on elephant. Another Mandir of Pushkar is dedicated to Badari Narayana, but an ancient Varaha Mandir was destroyed and since got re-built. Yet another Mandir of the Tirtha is that of Atmeshwar Maha deva, also called Kapaleshwar or Atapateshwara Maha deva. Near by Pushkar there is a Shuddha vaapi named Gaya Kund where Pitru shraddas are performed. There is a Savitri Devi Mandir on a nearby mountain top. Yet on another hill top is the famed Gayatri Mandir reckoned as one of the Shakti Peethas where Devi Sati's Manibandha or wrist ornament fell. In Pushkar Tirtha, there is also 'Yagna Parvata' where Brahma performed his illustrious Yagna; there is also the Agastya Ashram and Agastya Tirtha; it is stated that besides Pushkara Snaan, the snaana of Agastya Kunda would only complete Pushkar Yatra, since the Kunda snaan is a total wash off of one's sins. The most essential snaana of Pushkar is in any case is that of Sarasvati River which is called 'Praachi Saraswati' also addressed by five names viz. Suprabha, Kanchana, Praachi, Nanda and Vaishalika. Pushkara's bathing on Kartika Pournami is stated to be of paramount significance. Some 8 km. away from Pushkar Tirtha is the Sangama of Praachi Sarasvati and Nandaa River. Near by the Sangama, the Naga Parvat has several caves including Bhartruhari Cave and Shila named after him.]

Sarga Sixty six: Vishmamitra conveys Rama's desire to show Shiva Dhanush and Janaka gives the background of the Dhanush; King Nimi was gifted Shiva Dhanush at his son Devarata's wedding;

Vishleshana: Nimi and Daksha Yagnya.- Devi Sita as 'Ayonija' as Janaka tills bhuyagjna.

Vishleshanas on 1) King Nimi and 2) Daksha yagjna

King Nimi of Ikshwaku dynasty was extremely righteous and desired once to perform a Maha Yagjna in the name of Bhagavati. The Raja Guru Vasishtha Muni agreed to be the Head Priest and conduct the Yaga. As all the preparations were ready just on the appointed time, Vasishtha Muni sent word that Indra Deva wished to perform a Yagna and thus the homa by the King be deferred to another date. King Nimi was furious and went ahead with his Yagna as scheduled in the absence of Vasishtha Muni. On return Vasishtha saw that the Homa was in the process and cursed the King to drop dead and since the Sacrifice was not yet concluded, Nimi became a 'Videha' or bodyless to enable the King to complete the 'Purnaahuti' or the Grand Finale of the Yagna. Lord Yama Dharmaraja was pleased with the Yagna and gave him the option of entering the first Jeeva Body of Brihaspati or continuing the Videha Body and the King preferred to be 'Videha' or body-less. The King on his part gave a return curse to Vasishtha to die too and the latter prayed to Brahma Deva who was Vasishtha's Manasa Putra. Brahma blessed Vasishtha to enter Mitravaruna's Jeeva or coporal body which was kept in tact; the earlier Mitravaruna was infatuated with Apsrara Urvashi and two issues were born of whom one was Agasti who became an ascetic and the other was King Ikshvaku. Mitravaruna's corporal body was still in tact even Brahma created Vasishtha; now the jeeva body of Vasishtha since dropped dead as a result of Nimi's curse had entered the duplicate of Mitravaruna without any loss of original Vasishtha's wisdom and radiance! Such was the glory of King Nimi, who ruled Mithila for 84000 years righteously. (Source: Devi Bhagavata Purana)

Daksha Yagna:

Brahma blessed Daksha Prajapati to beget a daughter with the 'Amsha' or part-manifestation of Devi Bhagavati as Devi Sati. Already Daksha got sixty daughters, ten married to Dharma, thirteen to Kashyapa Muni, twenty seven to Chandra, two to Bhuta Ganas, two to Kushashwa, six to Garuda and so on. As Sati Devi came of age, she fixed her mind on Rudra Deva and resorted to severe Tapasya. Rudra agreed to marry her, Brahma proposed formally and the marriage took place with pomp and show. Sati and Rudra shifted from Kailasa to Himalayas where Bhagavan enlightened Sati Devi on many matters of Spiritual Significance including the nuances of Mantra-Tantra-Yantra and Yoga. But meanwhile, Daksha Prajapati got increasingly jealous of Rudra Deva. At the ill-famed Daksha Yagna, Daksha denied 'Pradhana Havis' or the prime part of the Yagna to Rudra as per the usual practice and even as Sage Dadhichi pointed out the lacuna, the caution was ignored. Sati Devi felt that there was a mistake made by her father and insisted on attending the yagna despite Shiva's warning and his subsequent approval with great reluctance as Nandi and Rudra Ganas accompanied her. Daksha ignored her entry at the Yagna and in fact talked disparagingly against Rudra Deva. She could not contain Daksha's criticism of Maha Deva and having produced Yogic Fire ended herself to unite with Bhagavan. As Nandi informed Shiva of the tragedy, the latter pulled out a few hairs from his Jatajuta or the coarse knotted head- hair against a mountain and the energy so created broke the mountain into two parts, one of which having materialised Veerabhadra and another Devi Bhadra Kaali. The enraged Rudra asked them to destroy Daksha Yagna. Veerabhadra beheaded Daksha and together with Bhadra Kaali turned the Yagna into smithereens. Devi Bhagavata Purana stated that Shiva picked up the body remains of Sati Devi and performed furious Shiva Tandava to release his pent up emotions of intense love of Sati and heightened anger for Daksha; Vishnu apprehended Pralaya and used his Sudarshana Chakra to spread out the body remains of Sati and hundred and eight Shakti Peethas came into being. Veda Vyasa affirmed that worship at these Siddha Peethas or even hearing about these would destroy sins and bestow powers to the devotees concerned. Eventually, the instant fury of Shiva was cooled down by the prayers of Brahma and Devas and the ever merciful Shiva agreed to the resuscitation of Daksha by fixing the Goat-head of the Sacrificial animal. The ever grateful Daksha begged of Shiva's clemency and re-organised Daksha Yagna once again with Maha Deva occupying the High-Seat at any Yagna ever since.

Sarga Seventy: In an open Janaka Sabha, Vasishtha narrated the glory of Ikshvaku Vamsha: Brahma Deva the Swayambhu manifested Marichi, from the latter was born Kashyapa whose son was Vivisvaan as the latter gave birth to Vaivasvata Manu. Manu was the foremost Prajapati and from Manu was born Ikshvaku the first King of Ayodhya. Then were highlighted: Pruthu-Mandhata-Sagara- Bhagiratha- Ambareesha-Nahusha-Yayati-Naabhaga- Aja-and Dasharatha. Vishleshanas on: Pruthu-Yuvanashra-Mandhata-Purukusta- Muchukunda-Nahusha- and Yayati.

King Prithu picked up speedy popularity as he proved to be an ideal and virtuous Administrator endeared by Maharshis and commoners alike. In course of time there were no problems owing to physical ailments, mental tensions and even of natural calamities in the Society. This was the first King ever who performed Rajasuya Yagna. It was this illustrious Emperor who controlled Bhumi (Earth); the latter took the Form of a Cow and sought to run away as was she was expected too much from her by various sections of the Universe. But Pruthu Chakravarti (literally he whose chariot wheels move forward swiftly without being interrupted by any opponent party) however chased and forced her to yield maximum milk to one and all in the form that they desired it. Pruthu himself milked her having converted Swayambhu Manu as the calf and made her yield food grains to all, while in regime of Vena the staple food was of flowers and fruits. Various sections of the world milke the material as they desired; for instance, Rishis converted Chandra as a calf, Brihaspati as the milkman, Tapomaya Brahma as the milk and Vedas as the container to fill up the milk; Devatas made Indra as the calf, Surya as the milkman and 'Pushtikaahara' or healthy food as milk; Pitru Devatas requested Yamadharma Raja as the calf, Antaka Deva as the milk man and 'Swadha' as the milk; Nagas selected Takshaka as the calf, Iravata Serpent as the milkmen and Visha (Poison) as the milk; Asuras appointed Mathu Daitya as the milkman, Virochana as the calf and Maya (Illusions) as the milk; Yakshas preferred Kubera as the calf, Rajananaabha Yaksha as the milkman and 'Antardhaana Vidya' or the Art of Disappearance as the milk; similarly all other species selected their own Milkmen and calves and Gandharvas opted milk in the form of fragrance; Rakshasas opted for blood, Mountains preferred 'Aoushadhis' and soon thus satisfying every one in his governance!Manu Vivaswanta gave birth to ten sons including Ikshvaku, Saryati, Nabhaga and Prushaghna. Ikshwaku's lineage included Puranjaya/ Kakustha, Yuvanashra and Mandhata. Puranjaya fought a severe battle with Daityas on behalf of Devas by riding a Great Bull who actually was Indra himself by holding the Kakutsa or the hump of the bull thus obtaining the epithet of Kakutsa or Indravahana!*King Yuvanashra performed a noted Yagna targetting Indra Deva to secure a son. During the Sacrifice days, he felt very thirsty one midnight in the Yagna Shaala and drank up the 'Mantra Jala' or the Sanctified Water kept in a vessel. The Rishis performing the Yagna were aghast to find the vessel empty next morning as the King drank up the Sacred Water. Eventually, the King got conceived instead of his Queen and a male child came out from his abdomen which had to be cut. The cried for milk and Indra put his index finger in the child's mouth and saved him! The boy thus born was Mandhata, the undisputed Emperor of the World comprising Seven Dwipas 'from where Sun rose at where it was set!' He was stated to have discovered Manasa Sarovara on Mount Kailasha as he was reputed to have performed Tapas at the banks of the Lake. It was believed that there was a Serpent Mansion where the Emperor prayed under a Jamun Tree from which its fruits (Blackberry) dropped into the Sarovar making the sounds of 'Jam' and the area underneath the Sarovara was called Jambu Dwipa! Mandhata's wife Bindumati was a pious woman and gave birth to Purukutsa and Muchukunda and fifty daughters. There was an interesting Story about the daughters. Sage Saubhari a very old and diseased person who did Tapasya under water for twelve years noticed that fishes in water were having sex and procreating; the Muni got tempted and approached Mandhata to let any of his daughters marry him. The Emperor was afraid that the Sage might give a 'Shaap' if declined and asked that anybody among the daughters was prepared to marry the Sage; none consented as the Sage was very old and disgusting physically with diseases. Mandhata had a problem but cleverly replied that his family custom was that all the daughters would have to wed the same person and none should disagree. The Sage transformed himself into a handsome youth by his mystical powers and presented himself. All the girls vied with each other to marry him and the youthful Sage built mansions and all of them enjoyed. But in course of time, the Sage realised that on account of the fishes in the water, his spiritual life was ruined and although very late in life reverted back to a more introspective life and intensified devotion to Vishnu. Purukutsa married Narmada the sister of Serpent brothers and she took him away to Rasatala the sub-terrain world under instruction from King Vasuki as approved by Bhagavan Vishnu to overpower Gandharvas who invaded Rasatala and other Patala Lokas. Nagas were afraid of Gandharvas as some six crores of the latter descended there for hunting the priceless 'Ratnas' / Jewels. Nagas sought protection and prayed to Vishnu in desperation. Indeed Purukutsa succeeded and Nagas gave a boon to Narmada that whosoever bathed in River Narmada by reciting a Shloka would be safe from Sarpa- Visha or Snake- Poison; the Shloka states: Narmadaayai Namah Praatarnamaadaayai Namonisha, Namostu Narmadey tubhyam traahimaam vishasarpatah/ (Devi Narmada! My salutations to you in the day or night; kindly safeguard me from the fear of Serpents and their poisonous bites!) This recitation while entering dark places as also while eating food would safeguard from any kind of poisons thanks to Purukutsa and Narmada!Nahusha who was also in the lineage of Pururava had the distinction of performing ninety nine Ashwamedha Yagnas and was nearly qualified to become Indra who should have executed hundred Yagnas. Meanwhile there was a temporary vacancy of Indratwa since Indra fled away since he killed Vritrasura with the help of the Vajrayudha made out of Sage Dadhichis's backbone; Vritrasura who was a Brahmana by birth and Brahma Hatya Sin chased Indra. Brahma thus appointed Nahusha as temporary Indra. Nahusha who was originally a King of Great Virtue became arrogant and power-mongering as he became Indra and claimed all the privileges belonging to Indra like Vajrayudha, Iravata the Elephant and even Indra's wife Sachi Devi. Nahusha insisted that Sachi Devi be his keep! Sachi Devi was non-plussed at this proposal. As advised by Deva Guru Brihaspati, she asked Nahusha to come to her residence but he should do so just as Indra was in the habit of arriving at her residence by a Palki (Palanquin) which actually was carried by Maharshis. Nahusha was excited to reach her Palace quickly and having got into the palanquin commanded Agastya Muni to reach him to Sachi Devi's Place at once; he said 'Sarpa Sarpa' meaning 'Quick, Quick' and in the process gave a kick to the Muni to go fast. Agastya purposely misunderstood the word and converted the arrogant Nahusha as an Ajagara (Python) and dropped the latter to the depths of Bhuloka into thick forests. As a repentant Nahusha begged of clemency, the Maharshi granted a reprieve that the 'Shaapa Vimochana' would be possible only when Pandavas reached the forest for twelve long years before their 'Ajnaata Vasa' or Unknown Destiny having lost a bet in the 'Maya Jada' or wilful game of chess. As Draupadi desired to secure a Sugandhika Flower Bheema got into a pond and the Ajagara caught him and agreed to release him only if he gave correct replies to the Serpent's queries. Yudhishtara had to arrive and release Bhima and Nahusha alike. Meanwhile Brihaspati and Agastya found that Indra was hiding in a lotus stem in Mana Sarovara Lake and brought him back and prayed to Brahma who exonerated Nahusha from the Brahma Hatya Sin on the ground that Vitra was no doubt a Brahmana but committed sins of killing several virtuous and innocents.Yayati, the son of Nahusha and his wife Viraja, was a famed Emperor who defeated all the Kings of the World and married Devayani the daughter of Asura Guru Shukracharya, besides Sharmishtha the daughter of Vishvaparva, a Rakshasa King. Indra was pleased to gift Yayati a Divine Chariot with seven powerful horses with which he traversed the world and divided his Empire into seven divisions to distribute it among five of his sons. A Maharshi gave a boon that if any of his sons could agree to exchange their youth to his old age then he could secure a fresh lease of youth. His eldest son Yadu from Devayani refused and so did others excepting Sharmishtha's son Puru who readily agreed. Yayati took over Puru's youth and enabled him travel around to unravel earthly pleasures for long. But finally returned discovering that the ephemeral joys of the world were endless like Agni in a Homa kunda assuming larger and larger proportions as long as ghee is served and no human would be satisfied with food, gold, ornaments or women. By so realising, he returned his youth to Puru and took to Vanaprastha or retirement.

Sargas Seventy Four- Five-Six: After the festivities concluded, guests were showered with precious gifts, the groom's party moved back on the return journey but a terrible sand storm was faced. Parashu Rama arrived shouting 'Rama Rama' with terrible anger as the Shiva Dhanush was broken. Dasharatha tried to pacify but with anger, handed over Vishnu Dhanush and challenging Rama to break it if at all possible. An angry Rama not only lifted the dhanush as though Vishnu did against Madhukaitabha daityas but stated that with that very dhanush he could as well demolish Parashu Rama too! An utterly humiliated Parashu Rama was then instructed to return to Mahendra Mountain for ever! Vishleshana on Madhu Kaitabha daityas; Parashu Rama- Kartavaryarjuna from Ganesha-Brahmanda Puranas .
Vishleshana on i) Madhu Kaitabha Daityas and ii) Parashu Rama:Madhu Kaitaba Daityas from Devi Bhagavata Purana:

When Maha Vishnu was in Yoga Nidra in a comfortable posture of lying on the bed of Ananta Naga, two Demon brothers named Madhu and Kaitabha were born from the wax of Maha Vishnu's ears. Their birth was a mystery and unknown as felt by the brothers themselves whose physical forms grew fast and strong day by day, even as they were playing in the ocean surroundings, killing various kinds of aquatic species for food or play. Coming of age in course of time, the Demon brothers with huge bodies and proportionate common sense too, realised that there must have been a Massive Force which alone could have given birth to them. From the air, they heard a sound 'Vagbija' the Seed Mantra (Seed 'Bija' and 'Vak' the Speech of Goddess Sarasvati). To start with fun, but later on with maturity, they kept on practising the sound for years together, little realising the impact of the Mantra's repetition. In fact, they became so obsessed with the Mantra that they neither had food nor sleep, but with full concentration and utmost sincerity. 'The Parasakti's Voice emerged from the Skies that the Danava brothers would be invincible in the entire Universe provided they were united and fight two-some. Blessed by Maha Devi, the two brothers became swollen with pride and eventually attacked Lord Brahma Himself. On realising that they were unconquerable, Brahma who was seated on the lotus-head sprouting from Maha Vishnu's navel, tried the age-old four means. He tried to use 'Sama (Counselling) 'Dana' (Gifting or bribing), 'Bheda' (put one against another) and finally 'Danda' (Punish), but neither of these media appeared feasible; he ran away to Vaikuntha for protection but Maha Vishnu was in Yoga Nidra. Brahma had thus prayed to Yoga Nidra Devi to prompt Maha Vishnu to wake up. It was actually Maha Maya's discretion which mattered as Vishnu Himself could not regain consciousness on His own. The concentrate of 'Tamo Guna' - Maha Maya - was earnestly prayed to by Brahma, as this was a prestige issue for him and the entire domain of Gods! Maha Maya left Vishnu free and He was fully woken up to face the challenge of the hour, viz. to either manipulate or massacre the brothers, Madhu and Kaitabha. Lord Vishnu invited the brothers to fight with Himself. The fight continued for five thousand years but without a tangible result. As the Demons were clashing one after another and Lord Vishnu was in duel singly, the latter asked the brothers to give a break as it was against Justice that they took alternate positions while He was alone. During the break, Vishnu prayed to Maha Sakti and complained that the fight was unfair and that they were also given by Her the boon of voluntary death or 'Svacchanda Maranam'. Maha Sakti realised the lacuna in the duel and advised Vishnu to give boons to the brothers so that a way out would automatically open up. Meanwhile, Maha Sakti agreed to be present at the fight in physical form and disturb the concentration of the Demon brothers by casting Her fake amorous looks. This encouraged Vishnu to convey the Demons that their duel with Him was of great quality and thus He was ready to give boons to them. They got into the trap as they boasted that they were prepared to give boons to Him instead of the other way around. Vishnu grabbed the opportunity and said that He be given the boon of their death by killing each other! The brothers gave an excuse that the boon could be given only provided there was no water or wetness in the Ocean. Vishnu expanded his thighs manifold so that there could be adequate space for the killings. The Demons expanded their bodies too and thus the thighs of Vishnu and the body sizes of the brothers kept on increasing horizontally and vertically proportionately. Finally, the illusion created by Vishnu proved stronger and the brothers had to yield to their own killings. Thus Maha Sakti who assumed human physique and paved the way to the killings of the Danava brothers without breaking the Rules of 'Dharma Yuddha', partly by trickery and partly by Maya or Illusion.

Ganesha Purana is quoted: Chapters 77-82: Jamadagni-Kaartaveerya- Kaama dhenu-Kartaveery kills the Muni- Parashuramaavatara:

King Shurasena approached the ashram of Maha Muni Jamadagni the famed wife Renuka Devi in Shveta Dvipa's Sahyaadri Parvata and their illustrious son Parashurama who was in Naimisharanya for Vidyadhyayana. The Muni having extolled Sankata Charurthi Ganesha Vrata said his son Parashurama had already observed the Vrata as prescribed. Thereafter, Chakravarti Kartaveerya visited the Ashram of Jamadagni couple with his countless chaturanga bala akshouhinis who were taking refreshing bath and swim. The Muni couple invited the Chakravarti and the huge army and hosted a fabulous and highly rich and lavishing lunch with pancha bhakshya bhojana. Well before this lunch invitation the Muni Couple prostrated before the Kamadhenu in the ashram's backyard and entreated her to preserve their dignity to fulfill the invitation of lunch for the Royal Guest of honour and his mammoth number of the army. The shocked Chakravarti exclaimed as how such massive bhojana was possible to an equally huge army and requested the Muni and wife to explain out of his astonishing miracle. As they revealed the truth of mother Kamadhenu's grace and help, instantly the Chakravarti raised his tone and asserted that each and every asset in his command ought to be under his command. The Muni replied: Chakravarti! I am after all a Muni eking my life with what ever 'kandamula bhakshana' is possible in forests; how do you realise that this ashram could offer 'pancha bhaksshya paramaannas' to the Royalties and 'akshouihinis' of sena is possible otherwise. You are of Vishnu swarupa and accepted my 'aatithya' as that is a great honour and trilokas could proudly state that Chakravarti Kaartaveerya was honoured by his visit along with his glorious sena which was of akshouhinis strong and the Muni served fabulous meal with pancha bhalshyas! But still the Chakravarti kept on insisting that Kamadhenu ought to be taken away even by force and left the ashram in a huff and disgust, even as the Muni kept on pleading and finally stated that the Chakravarti visited the ashram as a green parrot but finally turned as a crow! The Chakravarti who left in despair redoubled with the design of stealing kamadhenu overnight. He despatched his army men who freed the celestial cow which made reverberating noises while she became breathless and after kicking its legs flew away to skies in pitch darkness. An aweful earth tremor followed and the army ran away in fright. Noticing the havoc that had happened, Kaartaveerya appeared on the scene and so did the Ashramavasis and the Mahamuni couples. As the Chakravarti faced the Muni couple, Maha Saadhvi Renuka showered curses on Kaartaveerya and having warned the interference of the former aimed at the Muni's chest and killed him with the proverbial ekavimshati / 21 arrows and left away. The disheartened pativrata could hardly do the 'smarana' of Parashurama who was in long tapasya, even as Kartaveerya shot five arrows on her chest and the 'ashramavaasis' ran away helter skelter! Having dutifully initiated the 'dahana samskara' of the parents that followed with the assistance and blessings of Mahatma Dattatreya by 'smarana'. Soon after the 'antyeshti karma' (shava yatra- dahana-daaha yagina-udaka karma-pinda daana-sapindeekarana etc), he called on Mahatma Dattatreya with his shaven head and face narrated the details of the happenings about the Chakravarti's visit to the ashram, the enjoyment of the hospitality of the unique parents with the active help of Kamadhenu of Tri Murthi swarupini, his departure on the polite refusal to part with Kamadhenu, the nocturnal attack and of the army, the killing of Kamadhenu, his subsequent visit to the ashram to kill his unique parents and the antima smarana of his mother and cremation formalities that followed. On the fifth day of the obsequies, Parashurama got terribly agitated witnessing the matru swarupa and cried much and as the days of the karma karyas, the mrita swarupas were distorted and dimmed in their physical parts. On the final day after karma kanda, the images of the parents were radiant and blissful which demolished his fears and got kindled the fires of revenge and retribution totally replacing with child like fears and helplessness! Parashurama prostrated to the vision of Devi Renuka and asked her about the 'sarvavyapta keerti' of sahasra baahu chakravarti Kaartaveerya and his historic valour and courage and how indeed could he stand alone and face him with all the strong army behind him! Devi Renuka replied that if only Parshurama performed severe tapas to Maha Deva Shiva sincerely with devotion, he could ensure victory single handed against even the universal hero like Kartaveerya. Parashurama followed the mother's counsel and Maha Deva having been pleased with the prayers after his 'saakshaatkara' bestowed the upadesha of the shadakshara Ganesha Maha Mantra with which Parushurama recited one lakh times with unrelenting bhakti followed by dashaamsha homas and Maha Ganesha stood before him even as Parashurama broke into his rapturous praises. Ganesha was pleased and handed over a Parashu and accorded a 'parashu' with which to destroy Kaartaveerya who no doubt had been no doubt commenced his life within the precincts of dharmaacharana initially but transgressed the limits to the extent of murdering Muni dampatis and in that process killing the illustrious Go Mata the holiest cow in the Over Lords's Creation! Ganesha had implicitly instructed Parashurama to destroy the ambitious and arrogant human Kaartaveerya and also the equally cruel and sinful clan of Kshatriyas too! As a sequel to parashu daana to Jamadagi-Renuka putra Parashu Rama armed with the Parashu gifted by Ganesha as prompted by Maha Deva himself shouted thunderously at Kaartaveerya and army and killed them all in no time and in the same sweep killed the Khatriyas and the clan is as many as 21 attacks recalling as many arrows of Kaartaveerya's bow broke his father's chest!

Brahmanda Purana too is quoted': Prashu Rama Tapasya :

The illustrious Incarnation of Bhagavan Vishnu as Bhargava Rama was the son of Jamadagni Muni and the grandson of the famed Bhrigu Maharshi and Devi Khyati. As instructed by his father and grandfather, Bhargava Rama performed stringent Tapasya in an Ashram in a deep jungle and visiting Maharshis like Bhrigu, Atri, Kratu, Jaabali, Mrikunda were impressed with the high concentration of Bhargava Rama who was seeking to target Shiva in his penance. In course of time, Maha Deva was pleased with Bhargava Rama's devotion and appeared in disguise as a hunter who presented a repulsive person with dark complexion and red eyes with bow and arrows and crude sword and knives of varied sizes and sharpness. He introduced himself as Tosha Pravarsha the Master of The Forest and that no person should step in the Forest, much less raise a Hermitage. Even Indra would not be able to reside in this forest without my permission, he said. The hunter then asked Rama as to was he and for what purpose that he was staying in the Forest for such a long time. The former replied that he was performing Tapasya to Maha Deva Shambhu and that he would like please that Sarveshwara, Sarva Sharanya, Abhaya prada, Trinetra, Sarvajna, Tripuraantaka and Shankara. The Hunter heckled at Parashu Rama and said that he was wasting his time. In the course of conversation, Parashu Rama realised that the Hunter was not an ordinary human being; he knew a lot of Shiva as the so called hunter mumbled that Shiva did Brahmahatya and that he snipped Brahma's fifth head. The Hunter further told Parashu Rama that after all he was trying to absolve himself of the sin of his mother's killing! (Once Jamadagni left for Tapsaya and his wife Renuka Devi went to a river to fetch water and witnessed Prince of Mrityukavati Chitraratha was enjoying swims in the river with his women and momentarily Renuka felt envious of the women; Jamadagni noticed that his wife committed a sin and on returning back to his Ashram he asked his sons to kill her for the sin; none of his elder sons were prepared but Parashu Rama sliced her neck and killed her at once; apparently, Jamadagni was able to revive Devi Renuka by his Mantra Shakti!). Bhargava Rama then realised that the hunter must be a Siddha! The Hunter further heckled Rama that his Tapasya was futile as he left his old father and killed his mother! Bhargava Rama then asked the hunter to identify himself: Was he Indra or Agni or Surya or Chandra or Vayu or Yama! You have come here to test my sincerity of Tapasya. Mahatma! Do reveal your self, thus prostrated Bhargava Rama and as soon as he stood up, Maha Deva revealed himself and a confused Rama in an ecstatic trance praised him as follows: Namastey Nilakanthaaya Nilalohita murtaye, Namastey Bhuta nathaya Bhuta vaasaaya tey namah/ Vkyataavyakta Swarupaaya Maha Devaaya Meedhushey, Shivaaya Bahurupaaya Trinetraaya Namonamah/ Sharanam Bhava Sharva twadbhaktasya Jagatpatey, Bhuyonanyaashrayaanaam tu twameva hi paraayanam/ Yanmaya- aprakrutam Deva duruktam vaapi Shankara, Ajaanataa twaam Bhagavanmama tatkshantumarhasi/ Ananyavedya Swarupasya Sadbhaavamiha kaha pumaan, Twaamrutey tawa Sarvesha Samyak Shakreti Veditum/ Tasmaatwam Sarvabhavena praseeda mama Shankara, Naanyaast mey gatis tubhyam Namon bhuyo namonamah/ Nilakantha, Nilalohita, Bhutanaadha, Bhuta vaasa! You are Perceivable yet impossible to Perceive, Maha Deva, Shiva, Bahurupa, Trinetra, Sharva! Indeed I am your faithful devotee and you are my final refuge; I might have talked lightly about you thinking that you were a normal hunter! Do pardon my ignorance and indiscretion; who else is capable of recognising your own magnanimity excepting yourself! I have no recourse else than surrendering myself to you totally!) Shiva replied to Rama 'My Child! I am pleased with your Tapasya. I really wish I could bestow every Shakti to you although You deserve it. Yet, you are still not yet ripe enough to withstand the Rudra Shakti and the related 'Astraas'; hence you have to perform further Tapasya, resort to Sarva Tirtha Darshanaas and approach me when you consider fit. Subsequently, Bhargava Rama was engaged in Tirtha Darshanaas, fastings, Tapas, Homas, Japas, Snaanaas and other sacred deeds and moved about a lot in Bhumandala. Later, as per the instructions of Maha Deva returned to his Ashram and settled for his Shiva Puja. Meantime, there was a terrible battle between Devas and Asuras and the latter approached Maha Deva for help. Shankara then asked Mahodara to reach Parashurama to bring from his Ashram in Himalayas and the latter was instructed by Shiva to destroy the Asuras. Bhargava was bestowed with a variety of powerful Astra-Shastras and devastated Asuras in large contingents even while the remnants ran away to Rasatala. The victorious Bhargava returned to his Ashram and installed an Idol of the 'Kiraata' who confronted him in the Forest and worshipped him with flowers, Chandana, Dhupa, Dipa and Naivedyas. As Shankara made an appearance along with Marudganas and Devas, Rama fell on his feet and extolled him as follows: (Devadeva! Jagannaadha, Tripuraantaka, Sakala adhyaksha, Bhaktavatsala, Sarva Bhutesha, vrishabha -dhwaja, Sakalaadhisha, Kanukaakara, Skaklaavaasa, Sakala Devaarigana Naashaka, Shuli, Kapaali, Sarva Lokaika paala, Nitya SmashnaVaashi, Kailasavaasi, Pashayukta, Kalakuta vishaara, Sarva Vibhu, Amarvandya, Swayambhu, Shaktivaan, Sagatkarma Sakshi, Shambhu, Chandramouli, Sarpakantha haara, Shiva, Paramatma, Vibhuti sanchhanna deha, Suryachandraagninetra, Kapardi, Andhakaasura mardana, Tripura dhwamsi, Daksha Yagna Vinaashaka, Yogijana Dhyeya, Achintya Rupa, Bhakta hridayaambhoja karna madhya varti, Sakalaagama Siddhaanta Saara Rupa, Sakala Yogendra Prabhu, Shankara, Sakala Vyaapta Maha mahimna, Paramatma, Sharva, Shaanta, Jagadbrahma, Vishwarupa, Adimadhyahita, Nitya, Avyakta, Vyaktaavyakta Swarupa, Sthula Sukshmaatma, Vedanta Vedyah, Samasta Vishwa Vigjnaana Swarupa, Suraasurasangha Shreshtha puja paada, Shrikantha, Srishti karta, Lokakarta, Rajo gunaatma, Hiranyagarbha, Paratpara, Pratyagatma, Tamoguna Vikaara, Jagatsamhaara, Kalpanta Rudra Rupa, Parapara-Vida, Avikara, Nitya, Sadas adaatma, Buddhi Prabodha, and Buddhin- driya Vikara! My salutations to you as you are manifested in various Forms as Vasu-Rudra- Marud-Aditya- Saadhya and Ashwini Kumaaras! You are Avikara, Aja, Nitya, Sukshma Rupa! You are not controllable and unimaginable even by Brahma! Those who continue in ignorance about you and your three major features of Srishti-Sthiti-Samhara are engaged in the cycle of births and deaths; as even great Scholars are unaware about you, what could I realise about you! Indeed your magnificence is far beyond description and voice; thus I am unable to commend you as my Stuti properly yet I know that you are affectionate to your Bhaktas!) Maha Deva was indeed gratified with this kind of touching prayers and bestowed to him all kinds of Astra-Shastra Vidyas, their usages and withdrawing capacities; a outstanding horse; a distinctive chariot, a peerless bow and bunch of arrows, a distinctive Kavacha or body shield, Beeja Mantras whose recitation could either annihilate the worlds or shower blessings to his followers and in short provided unique Siddhis to Bhargava Rama equipping him with invincible powers enabling him to punish the Evil wherever it existed and at the same time to protect the virtuous and the noble.

King Kaartaveeryarjuna and his invincibility: The most valiant and invincible King of the times Kaartaviryarjuna of Haihava Vamsha was contemporary to Bhargava Rama halted at the Ashram of Jamadagna once along with his huge army which was tired and famished on an afternoon when Sun was hot and severe; the army did not have the strength to move forward and decided to rest. The King knew that the Ashram would not have the resource to feed the contingent but the Muni did provide excellent food to them. The King wondered as to how the Muni was able to do so and discovered that the Celestial Cow Kama -dhenu was in the Ashram and fulfilled all the requirements of the inmates of the Ashram. The King desired to take away the Kamadhenu to his kingdom but Jamadagni declined politely initially and refused flatly later. The King returned to his Kingdom but sent his Minister to manage to bring the Celestial Cow, if necessary by force. Finally force was used and both the Muni and the Kamadhenu resisted till the last but were tortured; Jamadagni Maharshi was almost killed and Kamadhenu flew to Heaven! The soldiers returned only with the calf which was a wasted exercise since without the mother the calf was no avail anyway. On return to the Ashram, Devi Renuka found her husband lying dead in a pool of blood and fainted and after recovering from the shock with some passage of time, she cried incessantly enquiring about Bhargava Rama. Rama returned from the forest to fetch wood and flowers for homa and puja and was non-plussed about what all had happened. He witnessed his mother beating her chest again and again numbering twenty one times and took a vow that not only King Kartaveeryarjuna would be butchered but would also attack Kshatriyas as a race would be slaughtered twenty one times and wipe out traces of them all; for quite some time now Kshatriyas were harassing Brahmanas and Sages on many counts, mostly out of fear that Brahmanas were gaining upper hand due to their knowledge and out of fear of an inferiority complex. Renuka decided to jump into fire along with her dead husband in the execution of the old practice of 'Sati Sahagamana' but a Celestial Voice stopped her attempt as Jamadagni's life would be revived once again. Bhrigu Maharshi came to learn of his son's death and on seeing his body stated that if he the Maharshi spent all his life as per Vedas and performed all virtuous deeds including Yagnas and Tapas, then Jamadagni his son should rise up from his death bed and sprinkled sacred water on the dying body and up came Jamadagni fully resuscitated due to the glory of Bhrigu. But Bhrigu after full recovery came to realise Bhargava Rama's vow to kill Kartaveeryarjuna and felt sad, not only because that revenge was never the principle of a Brahmana but killing a King by one of his own Subjects would tantamount to 'Rajavadha' which was as atrocious as killing one's own father! Moreso King Kartaveeryarjuna was not only an illustrious King of extraordinary prowess but also an outstanding devotee of Bhagavan Dattatreya. This created a predicament to Bhargava Rama as there was a vow to kill the King and the Kshatriya Vamsha in twenty one attacks and on the other hand there was the considered advice tantamounting to an instruction of his father not to do so. Jamadagni then advised to pray to Brahma Deva and act according to his considered advice. Brahma too was not acceptable to either of the vows taken by Bhargava and affirmed that it would not be in order that if simply one King perpetrated a sin, there would be little justification to eradicate the entire Kshatriya Vamsha in twenty one battles! Yet, he blessed Rama to recite a Krishna Kavacha titled 'Trailokya Vijaya' and visit Shiva Loka to seek his blessings in the matter. As Bhargava Rama with great difficulty managed an audience with Shiva, the latter too felt that it was not an easy task to terminate King Kartaveeryarjuna who by his mere frown a great warrior like was disarmed and had to flee! However, the ever merciful Mahadeva suggested that he like Skanda Kumara should practise not only the Trailokya Vijaya Mantra but several other powerful Mantras like Nagasatra, Paashupata, Brahmastra, Narayanastra, Agneyastra, Varanyastra, Gandharvatra, Garudastra, Jumbhanastra and many other Astras; Rama then bowed with the greatest possible happiness and fulfillment to Shiva, Devi Parvati, Ganesha, Skanda and Nandi Deva and returned to his father Jamadagni, fully overjoyed.!

ESSENCE OF VALMIKI AYODHYA RAMAYANA

Sarga Twelve: Dasharatha's remorse at Kaikeyi's undue demands even having admitted the boons and pleads with Kaikeyi not to insist but in vain - [Vishleshanas about Kings Shibiya and Alarka] [Vishleshanas about Kings Shibiya and Alarka:

King Shibiya, the most illustrious the son Ushinara, of Bhoja King was the husband of Parishthana the daughter of King Yayati. King Shibiya conquered the entire world single handed and performed several Ashvamedha Yagnas and was an outstanding personality of charity. He was famed to have willingly offered his own flesh by weighing the equal quantity of his own flesh but an innocent pigeon caught by weighing that much quantity of its raw meat from his own flesh. At the conclusion of this kind of charity never heard of in the past or for all times to come, the pigeon and the hawk revealed themselves as Agni Deva and Devendra who were testing the extent to which the King could reach in his disposition of charity. They blessed the king to reach swarga with his own mutilated body. Yet another instance of Shibiya's earlier life was that he never hesitated to kill his own son to satisfy the demand of a brahmana of great virtue as the son committed a 'maha pataka' of stealing. Dharma Raja in the form of the Brahmana who actually tempted the boy for stealing restored the boy's life once again. Yet in another context, the Chakravarti was stated to have encountered the 'Atma' of King Yayati after the latter's death and facilitated it to restore it back to swarga!

King Alarka according to Markandeya Purana was the son of King Ritudhwaj crowned him early due to old age. At the time of crowning, queen Madalasa presented him a ring and said - 'O son! This ring contains a note which will teach you on how a king should administer the kingdom.' Saying this, Madalasa blessed Alarka and left the palace with her husband Ritudhwaj to spend their lives in the forest.

After his accession to the throne, King Alarka ruled justly. In due course of time, he got many sons. He followed the dictates of Dharma, Arth and Kama while ruling his kingdom. In spite of enjoying all the luxuries, Alarka still could not experience bliss and felt as if he was missing something in his life. Very soon, Subahu came to learn about the royal luxuries of his brother Alarka and got tempted to enjoy the same luxuries. To attain his objective, Subahu took the help of the king of Kashi. The king of Kashi sent an envoy to Alarka with a message to give the kingdom to Subahu, which Alarka refused. Instead, he sent a reply that the request must be made by Subahu himself. 'I will not give him my kingdom out of fear of war,' said Alarka. But Subahu did not pay heed and with the help of the king of Kashi, launched a massive attack on his kingdom and conquered it. Now Alarka's days of sorrow had begun. He then remembered the ring presented by his mother Madalasa. He opened the ring and found a letter in it. The letter said- 'When you lose your everything, give up the company of your present advisors and join the company of learned sages.' This message made Alarka to pine for the company of the learned sages. Very soon, he went to the refuge of Dattatreya and requested him to remove his miseries. Dattatreya assured him of removing his miseries at once but before doing that, he wanted to know the reasons for his miseries. Alarka said- 'I do not long for pleasures but my elder brother wants to grab my kingdom.' Markandeya Purana further states: King Alarka approached Mahatma Dattatreya as a 'Sharanardhi' (refuge) and prayed to him to guide him and wipe out his distress. Dattatreya replied that the King was indeed truthful as he made a confession that he was suffering from anguish. He then asked Alarka to carry out an introspection as to who was he? What kind of grief did he suffer from? King Alarka tried to figure out the inter-relationship of the Soul and the three kinds of basic problems of humanity viz. Adhi-Bhoutika, Adhyatmika and Adhi Daivika, i.e. the troubles related to physical, internal and God-made categories. He reasoned that he was not a component of 'Panchabhutas'-Prithivi (Earth), 'Aapas' (Water), 'Tejas' (Fire), 'Vayu' (Wind) and 'Aakash' (Sky), but has the sensibilities related to these Entities. Even if he were not the 'Sharir' (Physique), he however had the independent feelings that led to the complexes of Inferiority or Superior feelings. Indeed, it would be essential to discard those kinds of feelings by an enlightened Gyani. After all, when a person is aware that essentially a human body is not eternal, then why should there be the feelings of happiness or otherwise; especially when there was a realisation that these feelings were made by the mind but not the inner soul which was free from such illusive fears. Alarka thus analysed the current situation arising out of the state of his mind, since he was not the body, nor the mind, and not even his superficial consciousness. Thus analysed, the King Alarka convinced himself that there was no harm done if his elder brother Subahu desired to take over Kingship, then there was no need for resisting the idea! Also, desire and attachment propelled by ego and prestige are the root causes of happiness or grief. Mahatma Dattatreya stated: Ahami tyamkurotpanno mameti skandhavaanmahaan, Gruhakshetroccha shakhaascha putradaaraadi pallavah/Dhanadhanya maha patro naikakaala pravardhitah, Punyaapunyaagra pushpascha Sukha duhkha maaphalah ('Ahamkaar' or sense of self is the seed which produces a huge tree of 'Agyaan' or Ignorance; 'Mamatva' or selfishness is the trunk of the tree; Gruha (Abode) and Kshetra (Farm lands) are the high and large branches; wife and children are the tender leaves; 'dhana dhanya' or money and foodgrains viz. wealth are the enormous leaves; 'Punyaapunya' (Fruits of noble deeds or sins) constitute the major flowers and 'Sukha Duhkkas' or delight and misery are the end results.) How could those human beings, who are tired of 'Samsar' (Life and Family matters) and seek shelter under the 'Agyan' Tree which is rooted in the lack of correct knowledge or awareness, ever consider to attain Salvation? Only those noble persons who possess a sharp axe named 'Vidya' (Knowledge) could pull down the mammoth tree of ignorance and egocentricity with the active help of the heavy rocks of 'Satsanga'! King Alarka expressed his gratitude to Mahatma Dattatreya that he gave him the solace in clearing his conscience about the eventuality of stepping down from his throne in favour of his brother Subahu. But his doubt in his mind continued to waver and was not able to detach from natural strings. He desired to learn the art of disconnecting human psyche from Paramatma, so that there would not be a recurrence of 'Punarjanma' (Rebirth). Dattatreya replied: Yogecha shaktividusham yena shreyah param bhavet, Muktiyogaatatha yogah samyakjnaa mahipathey /Sangaddoshod bhavah duhkha matatwasakta chetasamam/ (Yogis are able to distinguish 'Gyan' from 'Agyan' and that is called 'Mukti'; manifestation of Parabrahma takes place despite the natural features of the illusory world. From

Yoga emerges 'Moksha', 'Samyak Gyan' (detailed analysis) comes from Yoga, 'Duhkha' (Sorrow) springs from Gyan; 'Mamata' (Sense of Belonging) comes from 'Duhkha'. Further, Selflessness demolishes 'Mamata' and results in 'Viragya'; this is the state suitable for Yoga or configuration of the Self with the Super Force.]

Sarga Thirteen: Dasharatha's intense cryings and persistent pleadings with Kaikeyi but she argued in the name of dharma citing the tradition of truthfulness of Ikshvaku ancestors-

[Vishlesana on Yayati]

[Visleshana on Yayati:

Yayati, the son of Nahusha and his wife Viraja, was a famed Emperor who defeated all the Kings of the World and married Devayani the daughter of Asura Guru Shukracharya, besides Sharmishtha the daughter of Vishvaparva, a Rakshasa King. Indra was pleased to gift Yayati a Divine Chariot with seven powerful horses with which he traversed the world and divided his Empire into seven divisions to distribute it among five of his sons. A Maharshi gave a boon that if any of his sons could agree to exchange their youth to his old age then he could secure a fresh lease of youth. His eldest son Yadu from Devayani refused and so did others excepting Sharmishtha's son Puru who readily agreed. Yayati took over Puru's youth and enabled him travel around to unravel earthly pleasures for long. But finally returned discovering that the ephemeral joys of the world were endless like Agni in a Homa kunda assuming larger and larger proportions as long as ghee is served and no human would be satisfied with food, gold, ornaments or women. By so realising, he returned his youth to Puru and took to Vanaprastha or retirement. That was how he slipped down from the experiences of swarga but descended down into the company of 'Saadhu Pungavas' or of Groups of Virtue and Enlightenment!]

and Charioteer Sumanra asked for Rama's arrival at the King's Palace [Vishleshana on Vamanavatara was detailed in Essence of Vaalmiki Bala Ramayana but some excerpts are given for ready reference]

[Vishleshana on Vamanavatara was detailed in Essence of Vaalmiki Bala Ramayana but some excerpts are given for ready reference: Having been trained in all these disciplines of Dharma, Vamana Deva as a brahmachari had one fine morning left for the Yagna Shaala of Bali Chakravarti as the latter was executing a Sacred Yagna while carrying his mat, danda /stick, chhatra / umbrella and kamandulu / water vessel. Danava Guru Shukracharya was aware that Vishnu Deva in the form of Vamana Murti was arriving at the Yagna and briefed Bali Chakravarti to be extremely careful as Vishnu was a brave and highly talented person to put words in the mouths of the opponents. The Guru reminded Chakravarti that the latter denied the age-old practice of rights to yagna's shares to Devataas and that Vamana Murti might as well ask for the revival of the practice but those shares were now enjoying by Danava Chiefs. Bali replied to Danava Guru that in case Vishnu in the incarnation of Vamana Murti came and requested for any thing then how could a King say 'no' to it! Bali told the Danava Guru: *Brahman katha -maham bruyaamanyapihi yachitah, Naastiti kim Devasya Samsaarasyaaghahaarinah/ Vratopa-vaasairvividhairyah Prabhurgrunhatey Harih, Sa mey vakshyati deheeti Govindah kimato -dhikam? While Parameswara received the fruits of Vrataas, Upavaasaas, and so on from one and all, and if that Parameswara himself asked a boon from me, could there be a greater fortune to me! When even an ordinary person approached me for a favour, then too that could not be denied by a King; then when Narayana himself asked for it, could such an opportunity presented itself, this chance could never indeed be missed. Even if there are difficulties in executing a charity, the value of charity would get multiplied and 'Veera purushaas' would never deter from performing the deed) Having said the above, Bali asked Shukraachaarya: YatagjnaatwaaMunisreshtha!Daanavighna karenamey, Naiva Bhavyam Jagannaathe

Govidey samupastithe! (By understanding the above, Munisreshta! Please do not create ‘Daana Vighnaas’ or hurdles in the execution of the Charity!). As Vamana Deva arrived at the Yagna shaala, Bali welcomed him, offered ‘Arghya’, ‘Aasana’, Puja and offered him limitless gold, jewellery, elephants, horses, cows, women, clothes, bunches of villages or townships or whatever would be his wish! Vamana Deva replied smilingly: Mamagnisharanaarthaaya dehi Rajan Padatrayam, Suvarnagraamaratnaadi tadarthibhyah pradeeyataam/ (Raja! Please provide to me three feet of land to enable me to set up an Agni- Shaala). Bali said that after all three feet would be nothing as he could ask for a lakh of feet which could be given away, but Vamana Deva replied that he was indeed satisfied with that much of Bhumi and if the King were to offer more he might as well provide to the other needy! Bali Chakravarti readily agreed not understanding the implication and as the deed of Daana was being executed and Vamana Deva extended his hand to the King and expanded his Vamana Rupa gradually immediately: Sarva Devamayam rupam darshayaamaasa tatksanaat/ Chandra Suryoutu nayaney dyouh shirascharanou Kshitih, Paadaangulyah Pishaachaastu Hastaangulya –scha Gruhakaah/ Vishvedevaascha jaanusthaa janghey Saadhyaah Surottamaah, Yakshaa naksheshu sambhuta rekhaapsaraastathaa/ Drushtirrukshaanya seshaani keshaah Suryamshvah Prabhoh, Taaraka romakupaani romeshu cha Maharshayah/ Baahavo vidishatasya Dishaah Shrotrey Mahatmanah, Ashvinou Shravaney tasya naasaa Vayurmahaatmanah/ Prasadey Chandramaa Devo Mano Dharmah samaashritah, Satyasyaabhavad Vaani Jihvaa Devi Saraswati/ Greevaarditirdeva mataa Vidyaastadvalayastathaa, Swargadwaaramabhunmaitrah twashtaa Pushaa cha vai bhruvou/ Mukhe Vaishvaanarschaascha vrushanou tu Prajaapatih, Hridayamcha Param Brahma Pumstvam vai Kashapo Munih/ Prushthesya Vasavo Devaa Marutah Sarva saandhishu, Vakshasthaley tathaa Rudro Dharryachaasya Mahaarnavah/ Udarey chaasya Gandharvaa Marutascha Mahaabalaah, Lakshmirmedhaa Dhrutih Kaantih Sarv Vidyaascha vai Katih/ Sarvajyoteesham Yaaneeha Tapascha Paramam mahat, Tasya Devaadhi Devasya tejah prodbhutamuttamam/ Tanou Kukshishu Vedaascha jaanuni cha Mahaamakhaah, Ishtayah pashavaschaasya Dwujaanaam cheshtitaanicha/ Tasya Devamayam rupam drushtaa Vishnormahaatmanah, Upasarpanti tey Daityaah patangaa iva paavaakam/ Chakshurastu Mahaa Daityaah Paadaangushtam gruheetavaan, Dantaabhyaam tasya vai greevaa mangushtheynaahana dharih/ Prathamya Sarvaansuraan Paadahastathalairvibhuh, Krutwaa Rupam Mahaakaayam Samjahaaraashu Modineem/ Tasya Vikramato Bhumim Chandraadityaou stanaantarey, Nabho Vikramamaanasya sakhidesho stitathaarvibhou/Param Vikramaanasya jaanumuley Prabhaakarou, Vishnoraastaam sthitasyaitow Devapaalana jkarmani/ Jitwaa Lokatrayam taamscha hatwaachaasura pungavaan, Purandaraaya Trailokyam dadou Vishnururukramah/

On viewing the Paramatma’s ‘Virat Swarupa’, the so called ‘Mahaasuraas’ referred to earlier in ignorance by Chakravarti Bali before Prahlada’s curse to him got burnt off like flies before a gigantic out break of Fire! Having thus occupied the Universe in totality including the sub-terrain Sapta Paatalaas, Vamana Deva stated that since Bali took the water in his hand and donated the THREE FEET of Land, and blessed him to be the King of the Sapta Paatalaas and granted him long life till the end of Manvantara of the on-going Vaisawata Manu. He also blessed Bali that all the 'Homa Phalas' at the time of Shraddhas to be performed even by Brahmanas, besides incomplete and defective Vratas, Agni Kaaryaas without ghee, and Kusha grass roots as also the daanas without detachment would belong to Bali and his followers.]

Sarga Twenty One: Lakshmana gets agitated at the turn of the events and so did Kousalya but Rama assuages their badly hurt psyche, but Rama explains that 'pitru vaakya paripaalana' ought to be his life's motto and dharma [Vishleshanas on 1. Bhagiratha and 2. Parashu Rama]

[Vishleshanas on 1. Bhagiratha and 2. Parashu Rama . Bhagiratha: Emporer Sagara performed Asvamedha (Horse) Sacrifice and Indra hid the horse which was discovered by the unruly 60,000 sons of Sagara, nearby the place where Sage Kapila was practising Sankhaya Yoga and when disturbed badly, the Sage burnt all of them into ashes by his power. Sagar's another son Ansuman pursued the search of the Sacrificial Horse and found the Horse where Kapila was in meditation. Ansuman begged of the Sage about the whereabouts of his cousins and was informed that the hooligans were burnt to death and could be brought back to life only when washed by the River of Ganges which could only be brought down to Earth from the Skies. The Sacrifice of Horse having been performed by Sagara, Ansuman began his devotion to Lord Siva to bring Ganges down to Earth. But neither he nor his father Dilipa could succeed in the mission. It was for Bhagiradha to pursue the operation further. His life's mission was to bring Ganges down to Earth from Heavens. Bhagiradha's prayers were indeed granted by Mother Ganges to the devotee but warned him that the force of the flow from the Heavens to Earth could be withstood by no less than Lord Siva Himself! Bhagiradha never stopped his grand endeavour and worshipped Lord Siva with austerities and purity who agreed, not only because of the sincerity with which the devotee desired to fulfill the long-standing family wish but also owing to the reason of Universal advantage. The Lord assumed a massive body and controlled the force of the River flowing from Lord Vishnu's feet and bore the brunt of the impact on His head in His 'Jatajut' or twisted hairs and released but a portion of the Holy River. Bhagiradha directed the fiery flow by riding a fast Chariot and brought it to the place where the ashes of his forefathers were purified and their souls liberated to Heavens. Maha Bhagavata)

Parashu Raama was a paradigm of paternal devotion and destruction of Evil. In the lineage was born Jamadagni and his wife Renuka gave birth to their youngest son Parasu Rama or Rama with an axe. He destroyed the whole clan of contemporary Kings who were tyrants and cruel to their Subjects. Devi Renuka the mother of Parasurama reached a River for bathing and found a Gandharva King too bathing with his wives. She had a slight fascination of the Gandharva in her mind. This was noticed by Jamadagni and as she returned from the river-bed ordered her head to be chopped. Son Parasurama killed his mother with his axe instantly even as an evil-feeling of mind was felt by her. Sage Jamadagni appreciated the spontaneous action and asked for a boon to Parasurama and the latter requested that his mother be brought to life again. Such was the paternal devotion and fearlessness of Parasurama who re-established Dharma and valour. Maha Bhagavata]

Sarga Twenty Five: With great difficulty, Rama finally convinces Kousalya to let him leave for 'vana vaasa' and she relented finally [Vishleshanas: Vritrasura- Dadhiti-Indra ; Vinata - Garuda- Amrita .

[Vishleshanas: 1. on Vritrasura- Dadhiti-Indra - 2. Vinata - Garuda- Amrita: 1) Indra's Court is a masterpiece of the Universe, with Indra as a cynosure, surrounded by several semi-Gods and seated along with him by Sachi Devi. Guru Brihaspati, the Great Guide and Teacher of all the Subjects of the Court was among the Principal Advisor. In this ideal setting unfortunately, Brihaspati felt humiliated by Indra, as due respect to a Spiritual Master was not paid to him as Indra started cutting short and interrupting the Guru often. In course of time, Brihaspati stopped attending the Court. Indra no doubt apologised to the Guru, but the Guru did not relent. Lord Brahma called Indra and reprimanded him for his follies and had to look for an alternative. At the request of Demi-Gods, Brahma then appointed Visvarupa, the son of Diti's daughter Rachana and Prajapati Tvasta. In course of time, Indra got suspicious of the intentions of Visvarupa, the newly appointed Guru of Devatas; although Visvarupa was the son of Prajapati Tvastha, his mother Rachana was the daughter of Diti whose credentials were of Demons. While performing 'Homams' / 'Yagnas', he was in the habit of reciting the offerings to Fire God meant for Indra, Varuna and other Devatas loudly, but offered 'Ghee' (classified butter) secretly to demons as well. Also, Visvarupa who had three heads, used to consume 'Soma Ras' (Nectar) with one mouth, another with Wine and the third one with food. In a fit of rage, Indra killed Visvarupa, despite the knowledge that killing a Brahmin Priest would attract heavy penalty which was cleared by suitable means eventually. On learning what Indra did, Tvastha performed high-quality spiritual ceremonies with a view to avenge the death of his son. As a result, a huge, frightful figure emerged from the Fire-pit, who looked like capable of destroying the entire Universe. Tvastha named the giant demon as Vritra, as he was the product of enormous asceticism covering all the planetary systems. The entire army of Devas, headed by Indra, pulled out their collective strength pitted against the one man militia of Vritra to no avail. They had to, in fact, run in different directions in sheer self defence. Finally they made a group prayer to Lord Vishnu for a quick solution as Vritra was growing in power minute by minute. The divine response came that Sage Dadhichi could only help retrieve the ugly situation. The Sage assimilated spiritual knowledge and passed on the same to Asvini Devatas who attained the position of Jeevan Muktha (Liberation in life itself). The Mantras, including Narayana Kavacha was passed on to Prajapati Tvastha who in turn passed it on to his son Visvarupa too. The Narayana Kavacha fortified the body of Sage Dhadhichi and only the backbone of the Sage could help to put an end to Vritra. The Devas thus made a collective prayer to Dadhichi to spare his body for the noble cause of ending Vritrasura. Dadhichi consented and his back-bone was converted into a mighty Thunderbolt by the Divine Architect, Viswakarma. A ferocious battle followed then, when Satya Yuga was ending and Threta Yuga was being ushered in, as the entire force of powerful Demons headed by Vritrasura on one side and the mighty Demi Gods headed by Indra seated on 'Airavatha' - the Heavenly Elephant - fortified in his arms with the thunderbolt made out of Dhadhichi's back bone prepared by Viswakarma. Before using the Thunderbolt, Vritrasura became furious and fought Indra on one to one basis. He tormented and put Indra to shame. He taunted Indra to say that he made the heinous crime of killing a Holy Brahmin, Visvarupa and got away from the sin in a surreptitious manner. He cursed Indra and told that he was a coward and culpable. Without the Thunderbolt he would have been reprehensible. Vritrasura further said 'Almighty in His enormous Wisdom showed the way to kill me to stabilise order in the Universe and that the kind of death which has been awarded to me by Super Force Himself is my reward and not a punishment, as He is the Creator, Preserver and Destroyer and His decision is ultimate.' By so saying Vritrasura invited the Thunderbolt to attain Salvation. Thus ended the memorable story of Vritrasura into the pages of the Great Puranas. When Vritrasura attained 'Moksha', all the Celestial Planets, Demi-Gods, Gandharvas and so on praised his valour, but Indra was the single being who was remorseful as he had the Guilt Complex to have killed two Brahmins, Visvarupa and Vritrasura. Indra's sinful reaction was chased by a feeling that a Chandala woman of old age suffering from untouchable diseases, till Indra ran away to Manas Sarovar, the abode of Goddess Lakshmi. When Demi-Gods, and Sages advised Indra to attain freedom from the sin to perform the Yagna of Asvamedha or Sacrifice of Horse in Vedic Method then only Indra got absolved of the sin. 2: Vinata-Garuda-Amrita: Vinata and Kadru were among the two wives of Kashyapa Muni. Kadru hatched thousands of eggs creating snakes while Vinata hatched only two. Vinata broke one egg and found a child named Aruna but was deformed. Eventually Aruna became the charioteer of Surya Deva. In a mutual bet, Vinata and Kadru out of playfulness; the bet was as to which colour was of Uchchaishrava the celestial horse born during ksheera saagara mathana; Vinata replied that the horse was white but the bet was lost since the horse's tail was black. Vinata lost the bet and became Kadru's servant and served her as also the progeny of snakes. The second son of Vinata named Garuda too was born weak with a beak and wings like an eagle but with the features of a human. As Garuda grew up he noticed that his mother was a slave and did all the domestic work including looking after the snake children. The latter used to tauntingly address Garuda as the son of Vinata and order him to give him rides on the sky. One day, Garuda was ordered by Kadru to take all her snake children to a near by island while Vinata should carry herself. In anger and disgust Garuda carried the snake children too high on the sky and the latter were half burnt by the heat of Surya Deva. Then as the snake kids screamed and Kadru prayed to Indra who instantly saved them by rain showers. On landing back, Garuda told the serpent kids that he could keep on taking to many islands but on the condition that her mother be freed from the slavery. But Vinata disagreed and asked Garuda to strengthen his body by reaching Himalayas and lifting big tortoises and elephants to eat. Garuda did so and eventually made his body mighty and invincible. One day he found an elephant and tortoises and having lifted them, placed the preys on a strong branch of a huge tree to settle down and eat. But Vāṇihīya Sages of miniature sizes hanging down the branch realised that the massive bird could fly them down to an island near by and befriended them by calling it as 'Garuda' or the one who could lift up massive loads. He helped them and they suggested to approach swarga on the high skies to secure amrit for longevity. As Garuda was nearing Swarga, Indra got concerned about the mighty sky and ran to Brihaspati. The latter, having realised the purpose of Garuda to lift amrita drops, alerted all the Devas including Vayu- Varuna- Agni-and so on and even the vajrayudha of Indra could not stop Garuda who finally did secure a pot of amrit and desired that his mother be freed from her slavery too. On way back, Vishnu appeared and smilingly offered that he could be his 'vaahana' for ever.!

[Vishleshana 1. on Devi Savitri- Satyavan- Yama Raja- and Satyavan's Lasting relief and
2. Surya Deva and Sanjana Devi]

[Vishleshana on Devi Savitri- Satyavan- Yama Raja- and Satyavan's Lasting relief:

Sati Savitri an outstanding Pativrata who defied Yama Dharma Raja into conviction!

Matsya Purana describes that in the days of yore, there was a King named Ashwapati of Shaakala Vamsa in Madra Desha (the present Sialkot Territory) who did not secure a son. Being highly devoted to Devi Savitri (Gayatri), he intensified his worship to her and performed a daily 'havan'/ oblation to Agni with white 'Tilas' (Sesame seeds) in the presence of thousand Brahmanas for ten months and finally Devi Savitri appeared to Ashwapati on a Chaturthi day and granted an illustrious daughter to him and queen Malati; the baby was named as Savitri since she was born by the grace of Devi Savitri. The daughter grew into a charming and highly virtuous girl; a chance visit of Brahmarshi Narada to the King and the daughter indicated that her husband would die on a specified day after her wedding. They both indeed were terribly worried about Narada's prophesy but she was married in due course to the son of King Jumnatsen called Satyavan who was a charismatic prince. But unfortunately the King lost his kingdom as also the eye sight of his and of the wife. Savitri emboldened herself and faced the situation with confidence and performed unreserved and steadfast service to the parents-in-law. At the sametime, she served her husband so much that Narada's prophesy was always ringing in her ears constantly and never allowed the husband even for a while. She also worshipped her Guru and followed each and every advice of his as a word of law. Thus she was worshipping her husband, her parents-in-law and her Guru as much as never in history had performed in the past. As the specific Chaturthi that Narada warned about her husband's death within a year, she took permission of her blind parents-in-law and her Guru and entered a jungle along with Satyavan and decided to keep her husband the happiest man and spent every moment with him by showing and sharing with him the most memorable beauties of Nature, the waterfalls, the cool waters, the fragrant and colourful flowers and so on. She described that couples of hares, crows, lions, monkeys, and deers were all in a state of maddening infatuation and such wonderful experiences tended to extend lives forever! Meanwhile, Satyavan felt like cutting wood from some dry trees but Savitri cautioned that he should not be away from her. In great fun, he said that he would never ever dare to be away from her. Suddenly, Satyavan felt excruciating pain in his head and fell flat. Even while realising as to what was happening, she sensed that some thumb-long figures tied to Satyavan's soul and were ready to draw it towards the Southern direction and visioned that Yama Dharma Raja himself was present there. She screamed with astonishment and closely following Yamaraja sobbed away and said: Sacred Scriptures assured that sincere devotion to mother provided this loka, devotion to father would secure Swarga and devotion to Guru would fetch Brahma loka but of what avail was her sincerity if Scriptures made false promises? Dharma Raja replied: Do not interfere with my duty; indeed the Scriptures were right, the dead soul was a virtuous person and that she too was a real Pativrata, but there was a fixed procedure of terminating a human being as per one's life span which was pre-determined and judgment was given as per norms. Savitri counter argued that for a woman, husband was a Deity and the provider of safety; a father, brother or a son were no doubt the safeguarders but the husband was above all and if he were to be forcibly taken away then she had no other alternative but to immolate her life. Dharma Raja was indeed taken back at her firmness and smilingly said that such an incidence as this was rare and that he would be pleased to bestow any boon excepting her husband's life. As Savitri took up the opportunity, she requested him to restore the eyesight as also the Kingdom to her in-laws and Dharma Raja readily granted these boons and asked her to go back so that he could perform his duty. He also asked her not to follow further and tire out herself without any aim or useful purpose. Devi Savitri replied that she would never feel tired following great celebrities of the stature of Dharma Raja, even if they were annoyed because only such emblems of Dharma could sift persons of genuineness or other-wise; it was stated in the Scriptures that one should never be afraid of even Agni, poison, and snakes compared to evil persons where as 'Satpurushas' had an inner conscience and even if they were apparently rude and hurtfully outspoken, their basic quality would be outstanding and subject to change of stance since such 'Mahatmas' test the authenticity of other persons being faced. Even normal and impartial Kings and Administrators would tend to examine the realities of those who make requests and a Deity par excellence like Dharma Raja would like to make sure whether her supplications were pure and straight from the heart or not. That was the reason why Savitri felt untired of following Dharma Raja! Apparently, Dharma Raja was pleased with the logic of Savitri and replied that without insisting on the life of Satyavaan, she might ask for another boon. She grabbed the opportunity and requested that her parents were not blessed with a son; despite performing countless Sacred deeds and their daily homas in favour of Gayatri / Savitri they succeeded on giving birth to a daughter but not a 'Vamsoddhaaraka'. Dharma Raja conceded the second boon too and firmly admonished Savitri to pester further but should return home at once to organise the obsequies of her departed husband. Having secured the second boon from Dharmaraja, Savitri still followed the former and stated that any human being would like to fulfil three essential steps of Dharma, Artha and Kama as the corner-stones of an ideal life. She affirmed: Dharmaarjanam tathaa kaaryam purushena vijaanataa, Tallaabham Sarva laabhebhyo yadaa Daiva viseshatey/ Dharmascha arthascha kaamascha trivargo janmanah phalam, Dharma heenasya kaamaarthey vandhyaa sutasamou Prabho/ Dharmadarthastathaa kaamo Dharmaallokadwayam tathaa, Dharma ekonuyaatyenam yatra kwachanagaaminam/ Shareerena samam naasham sarvamanya -ddhi gacchati, Ekohi jaayatey jantureka eva vipadyatey/ (Deva! Any Enlightened person seeks to earn Dharma since that secures the best of gains; the objective of life is to fulfil the means of Dharma viz. Artha and Kaama; conversely, wealth and fulfilment of desires alone without Dharma would be wasting one's life. Dharma would certainly fulfil the means to achieve it and could at the same time lead to Salvation too. In the final analysis, a dying person leaves every thing behind except Dharma and a person born does not bring any possessions nor takes anything at death). Dharma Raja was pleased with what Savitri said and asked her a third boon to that outstanding Pativrata who had been fighting for her husband's life. In turn, Savitri asked the boon: Varayaami twayaa dattam putraanaam shatamourasam, Anapatyasya lokeshu gatih kila na vidyatey/ (Deva! I request you to give me the boon of securing hundred sons of my own, since without obtaining sons, there would be no 'Sadgati' to her and husband as parents). Yama Raja then granted this boon also and Savitri commended Dharma as follows: Dharmaadharma vidhaanajna Sarva Dharma Pravartaka, Twameva Jagato naathaha Prajaa samyamaney Yamah/ Karmanaaman -rupena Yasmaad Yamayasey Prajaah, Tasmaad vai proachyasey Deva Yama ityeva naamatah/ Dharmaneymaah Prajaah Sarvaa yasmaad ranjayasey Prabho, Tasmaat tey Dharma raageti naama Sadbhirnigadyatey/ Sukrutam dushkrutam chobhey Purodhaaya yadaa janaah/ Tatsavakaasham mrutaa yaanti tasmaat twam Mrutyu ruchyatey/ (Dharmaadharma Vidhaataa! You are the highest Administrator of Dharma; since you are the Chief Regulator of Dharma, you are called Yama. As you ensure that human beings do not indulge in Adharma and make them follow the Path of Truth, you are known as Dharma Raja. Since when human beings die, you confront them with a full account of their good and bad deeds, and hence you are known as Mrityu. As the dead persons are approached by you with the details of each action of theirs by each Kshana/ second, and measure of Kaala or Time, you are called as Kaala. Since you are the designated Authority to terminate the life of each and every 'charaachara' or mobile and immobile being, you are titled Antak. As you are the eldest son of Surya Deva who has the name of Viwasvaan, you carry the name of Vaiwasvata. As and when the life of any being is over, you catch him suddenly and that is why you have another name viz. Sara praanahara. Devesha! Thanks to you the Ruk-Yajur- Sama Vedas continue to popularise the Principles of Virtue and Justice eternally; you are the upkeeper of nobility and discipline the world over and I have come to the shield of safety from you; kindly give back my husband at once as my in-laws too are frantic now for his life. As Savitri concluded her desperate prayers, Dharma Raja asserted that he was giving away Satyavan's life back, that he would secure her hundred sons who would all become famous Kings, that her parents too would be blessed with hundred sons of virtue and that her brother would be popular as Malava, the King of Malva. Thus concludes the Sacred Legend of Maha Saadhvi Savitri: Tasmaad Saadhwyaha Striyah Pujaah Satatam, Taasaamtu vakyam bhavateeha midhya na jaatu lokeshu charachareshu/ Tasmaat sadaa taah pari pujaneeyaah, Kaamaan Samagraanabhi kaamayaanaih/ (Hence women of High Virtue ought to be worshipped since the Three Lokas are preserved due to their grace. The voices of Pativratas should never be ignored as they are worthy of veneration and fulfill their desires].

[Vishleshana on Surya Deva and Sangjna Devi:

Bhavishya Purana: It was on ‘Saptami’ Tithi that Bhagavan Surya made his initial manifestation to the Universe. His original Appearance inside a Holy Egg continued and from there itself, he grew and hence was called ‘Martaanda’. He was wedded to the daughter of Daksha Prajapati, called Sanjna, and begot Dharma Raja, Vaivasvata and Yamuna Devi. But since Sanjna was unable to bear the heat and dazzle of Surya Deva, created from her shadow a similar substitute, called Chhaya Devi to proxy her and left for Uttarakuru Desha to perform Tapasya in the form of as a horse. Meanwhile, Chhaya Devi gave birth to Shaneswara and Devi Tapati, but aftersome time, Chhaya Devi’s partial attitude to her own children and those of Sanjna came to be noticed; Yama Dharma pointed out to Chhaya Devi about the differential treatment and in course of the argument, Yama raised his right leg’s ankle which was objected to by Chhaya and she gave a curse to Yama that if his feet ankles were placed on Earth they would be eaten by worms! As Dharma Raja complained to Surya Deva, the father assuaged the feelings of his son, who was in fact a specimen of virtue, saying that the ‘shaap’ of Sandhya Devi was not to be too harmful since, after all, worms might take away the flesh and blood of his ankle to Bhuloka but feet would be in tact any way. Sandhya was frightened and blurted the truth to Surya Deva that Sanjna materialised her to deputise her and the latter left to her father’s place; Daksha told Surya Deva that Sanjna could not withstand his heat and had been performing Tapasya in the form of a horse at Uttarakuru. Surya requested Vishwakarma to reduce his heat and radiance and after assuming the forms of a horse approached Sanjna and by the mutual contact of the noses of Surya and Sanjana in horse forms were born Ashvini Kumars and Raivata. Since the Episode of Sanjna and Surya occurred on Sapta Tithi of Magha Shukla Paksha as above, the day is considered as most auspicious to signify the union the Couple.]

[Vishleshana on Sagara Chakravarti and his son Asamanjasa:

Sagara Chakravarti of Ayodhya in the remote past whose Dharmapatni was Keshini of Vidarbha Desha who too was a Satyavaadini. His second wife was named Sumati, the daughter of Arishtanemi Kashyapa and the sister of Garuda Deva. Sagara Chakravarti performed tapasya in the Himalaya Range along with his wives atop on the Bhriguprastavana Shikhara. After a century long tapsya, Maharshi Bhrigu blessed the Chakravarti that he would be famed in the entire universe till eternity and blessed him with several sons; he affirmed that one of the queens would beget a single son and another with sixty thousand sons. The King was overwhelmed with the boon of the Maharshi and politely enquired as to which of the Queens would beget only a single but famed ‘vamshoddhaarak’ son; in turn the Maharshi asked the spouses about their individual preferences.. Then the highly enthusiastic younger wife Sumati the brother of Garuda replied that she would prefer strong sons of collective might and fame like Garuda himself, but Devi Keshini opted for a son like her Emporer husband, an outstanding example of virtue and justice with grit to sustain the Vamsha. Sagara and wives then prostrated and returned to the capital of the Empire. After a lapse of months, Devi Keshini gave birth to ‘Asamanjasa’ and Devi Sumati gave birth to a huge pot from which emerged sixty thousand sons of strength and brightness. Right from birth, this son turned out to be evil. The word Asamanjasa means imbalanced or improper. Since the son was full of evil nature, he came to be known as Asamanjasa. As years rolled on, the Charavarty became a renowned father of an army- like sons of supremacy and command. Asamanajasa used to collect youngsters of the empire to compete in swimming and enjoy himself vicariously and the parents kept on complaining to Sagara. At first, Sagara ignored the misdeeds of his sons. He tended to dismiss them as juvenile exuberance. But Asamanjasa and his brothers continued to do as they pleased. They disrupted the performances of yajnas and oppressed religious people. They appropriated for themselves the offerings that were made to gods at sacrifices. Apsaras were abducted by these evil princes. They also stole flower from the divine parijata tree. Drinking was their favourite pastime, together with robbery and theft.

Finally Sagara Chakravarti banished Asamanjasa from the Empire. The forlorn Sagara decided to perform Ashvamedha Yagjna. But Indra and Devas began to plot so as to devise ways for bringing about the destruction of the evil sons of Sagara. There was a Sage named Kapila who was devoted to Vishnu and was so powerful that he was like the great Vishnu himself. Kapila had an ashrama in the Patala Lokas. Indra and Devas prayed to Kapila to deliver the world from Sagara's evil sons. The Sacrifice Horse was launched and released under the supervision of Maharathi Amshuman the renowned 'dhanurdhara' and the famed son of Asamanjasa. But the Sacrifice Horse disappeared suddenly as was robbed away by Mahendra Himself. Since the launched Horse was missing, the Ritviks felt that it was not a good omen and that somebody appeared to have stolen and the robber be chased fast to recover it. Then presiding over the Yagjna, the Chakravarti commanded the sixty thousand mighty Sagara Putras to chase the thief at once. He further ordered that even if they would have to go round the earth, they ought not return empty handed without the Sacrificial Horse. The Chakravarti declared that he would stay put firmly along with the Ritviks and Amshuman. The mighty sixty thousand strong Sagara Putras divided the territories of earth and left in grand groups and pierced earth with their swords and trishulas so fiercely that bhudevi looked to have wept with excruciating pain. In the process, the entire earth all over 'jambu dwipa' was dug up deep upside down as there were alarms of humans, animals and birds attracting the attention of celestials too as though there were repetitive and alarming earthquakes. The rattled celestials like Gandharvas, as also Asuras, and Maha Sarpas from the earth down under being alarmed approached Brahma Deva and complained: Bhagavan prthivī sarvā khanyate sagarātmajaiḥ, bahavaś ca mahātmāno vadhyante jalacārīṇaḥ/ ayaṁ yajñahano 'smākaṁ anenāśvo 'panīyate, iti te sarvabhūtāni nighnanti sagarātmajāḥ/ Brahma Deva! Sagara Chakravarti's sixty thousand strong sons of extraordinary physical prowess have broken down hells on earth and are digging earth deep under on the plea of searching for 'Yagnaashva' of Sagara's 'maha yagjnya' and as a result earth had been dug up deep and entered the 'paatala lokas' too in a manner that the natives of earth and the nether lokas too are being decimated mercilessly and hence we are frightened being on the fringes of death! As the Sagara Kumaras continued the digging of Rasaatala for the missing Sacrificial Horse, Bhagavan Vishnu in the form of Kapila Maharshi reddened his eyes while the mighty Sagara Putras were engrossed in the unilateral task of digging again and again. They finally found the Sagara Chakravarti's Yagnaashva just near around the Maharshi. asmākaṁ tvaṁ hi turagaṁ yajñiyaṁ hṛtavān asi, durmedhas tvaṁ hi samprāptān viddhi naḥ sagarātmajān/ śrutvā tad vacanaṁ teṣāṁ kapilo raghunandana, roṣeṇa mahatāviṣṭo humkāraṁ akarot tadā/ tatas tenāprameyena kapileṇa mahātmanā, bhasmarāśīkṛtāḥ sarve kākutstha sagarātmajāḥ/ As soon as hardworking Sagara Putras cited the 'Yagnaashva' grazing in the vicinity of a Maharshi, they started shouting with anger with pent up emotions of frustrations for several days and nights stating 'you the wicked Maharshi! how dare you had hidden the Sacrificial Horse here as it had been grazing grass coolly here; now we the mighty have arrived; be it well realised that we are the mighty sons of the almighty Chakravarti Sagara himself! The Maharshi on hearing the braggings of Sagara Kumaras made a 'humkaara' in raging fury and the totality of the sixty thousand valiant force were burnt to ashes. Meanwhile Sagara wondered as to what might have happened to the Sagara Putras and the Sacrificial Horse as it was a long time that they departed. Then Amshuman volunteered to depart and find out about the position of his uncles. Chakravarti alerted the grandson to be very vigilant as he might encounter potent and enemy elements all the way and hence should be well armed with swords and archery. He further alerted that some persons of cunningness and misleadings might also be faced and such persons would need to be killed mercilessly. Thus having accorded an auspicious farewell Amshuman entered Rasatala came across Diggaja Virupaksha and the former prostrated and the diggaja who blessingly indicated that he would return soon with the Yagjnaashva. Amshuman no doubt secured the Yagnaashva but was horrified to see the huge heaps of human ashes laid on the long stretches on land. Amshuman realised that the entire Sagara sena was no more and started crying away for long. Then he found the ‘Yagnyashva’ moving nearby. Amshuman then desired to greet the ashes and looked for any water reserves nearby and searched a lot. Looking up at the high skies, he being equipped with the ability to vision far and high, spotted the Pakshi Raja Garuda who was the uncle of Sagara Putras as Devi Vinata the wife of Kashyapa begot Garuda the Vishnu vahana and Aruna the charioteer of the eka chakra of Surya Deva. Garuda Deva flew down and consoled Amshuman not to cry much as what all had happened was all for Loka Kalyana in the times ahead. Garuda Deva further stated that Maharshi Kapila being Vishnu himself had turned Sagara Putras for a purpose and hence it was not proper to perform ‘jalaanjali’ for the departed ones. He further stated that ‘tarpanas’ to the departed ones might as well be performed with the sacred waters of Ganga; Garuda asserted to Amshuman: Gaṅgā himavato jyeṣṭhā duhitā puruṣarṣabha, bhasmarāśīkṛtān etān pāvayel lokapāvanī/ tayā klinnam idaṁ bhasma gaṅgayā lokakāntayā, śaṣṭīm putrasahasrāṇi svargalokaṁ nayiṣyati/ Narashreshtha! Himavan’s elder daughter Devi Ganga be brought down to bhuloka from her celestial abode. Garuda further advised to return back to the Kingdom along with the Sacrificial Horse for the time being. On return King Sagara heard as to what all happened from Amshuman especially about the imperative of inviting the celestial lokas down to earth and relieve the Souls of the Sagara Kumaras. King Sagara then dutifully performed the Maha Ashva medha yagjna and after ruling the kingdom for thirty thousand years passed away peacefully. Consequent upon the death of Sagara Chakravarti, the entire public of the Kingdom unanimously chose Amshuman as the King. Thereafter the illustrious Amshuman having ruled over the kingdom for ever thirty thousand years, departed for tapasya on the heights of Himalayas and thereafter reached swarja loka. Meanwhile King Amshuman’s son Dilip who subsequently became the King recalled that that Chakravarti Sagara’s famed sons who were his ancestors could not attain salvation yet due to the reason of Maha Garuda’s directive that only the flows of Sacred Ganga could redeem. King Dilip kept on wondering through out his life as to how to bring down from the skies; meanwhile he was blessed with a son as named Bhagiratha who even from childhood outstanding traits of Dharma and what was more interesting was of grit and determination. The King Dilip who too proved himself as a King of virtuosity lived for thirty thousand years having well sustained the traditional values of Kingship established by the immemorial Sagara Chakravarti himself, even as planning ambitiously as to how best to bring Devi Ganga down to earth and at the end was welcomed into Imndra Loka. As Bhagiratha assumed Kingship, it looked that all the celestials came down and witnessed the royal ceremonies. He ruled the Kingdom strictly on the basis of the well established precepts of Dharma and Nyaya for good number of years but as there was no further progeny forthcoming for long, the divine duty of bringing Ganga down to earth became intense day after day and having determined so entrusted the responsibility of Kingship to his Ministers and retired to severe tapasya at the Punya kshetra Gokarna. His life’s mission was to bring Ganges down to Earth from Heavens. Bhagiradha’s prayers were indeed granted by Mother Ganges to the devotee but warned him that the force of the flow from the Heavens to Earth could be withstood by no less than Lord Siva Himself! Bhagiradha never stopped his grand endeavour and worshipped Lord Siva with austerities and purity who agreed, not only because of the sincerity with which the devotee desired to fulfill the long-standing family wish but also owing to the reason of Universal advantage. The Lord assumed a massive body and controlled the force of the River flowing from Lord Vishnu’s feet and bore the brunt of the impact on His head in His ‘Jatajut’ or twisted hairs and released but a portion of the Holy River. Bhagiradha directed the fiery flow by riding a fast Chariot and brought it to the place where the ashes of his forefathers were purified and their souls liberated to Heavens. Till date, humanity continues to be grateful to him for the ever lasting memory of his gigantic efforts in our reaping the fruits of his labour in the huge land-mass covering entire 'Aryavarta' (Northern India)!.]

Again to the south of Meru Parvata's back side, there is Manasapurvata and the Samyamani Pura where Lord Yama the illustrious son of Surya Deva resides. To the west of Meru parvata, on the west of Manasapurvata atop Sukha Pura where Varuna Deva resides. To the north of Meru Parvata atop the Mahendra parvata, Vibhahari Pura where Chandra Deva resides. Behind the Manasotara on the four sides, the Ashta Dik Loka Paalakas are placed to protect Dharma and in the dakshinaayana period, Surya Deva oversees the activities of the Ashta Palakas during his period. Now, about the dakshinayana the travel of Surya ; in the jyotishchakra in his pradakshina, He reaches Amaravati the capital of Indra Deva by the midday on earth; that would be when it coincides with Yama Raja's rising time, in Chandra's mid night time and so on. As Surya performs pradakshina or self-circumambulation, he also does the same to nakshatras too do likewise. Precisely at the 'udaya' and 'astama' timings he does exactly the same year in and year out. At the Sun Rise he gradually increases his radiance till the afternoon and gradually reduces his tejas till the dusk time. In this way, Surya Deva performs pradakshina or circumbulation of self and so do the nakshatra mandali too. These all travel southward and at the rise and setting timings are defined as also at the poorvaahna and aparaahna or pre noon and afternoon they pass through two each of Deva puris and at the noon time, one Devapuri. Thus Surya from the rise gains momentum of radiance till afternoon and gradually lessens the severity of the kiranas thereafter till Sun set. Surya has the constant awareness of he 'udaya' and 'astamaya' at the east and west directions; while radiating the eastern side, spreading the heat and illumination on the sidewise north and south and decreasing the severity till disappearance. Meru Parvata is stated to be situated in the north of the highest of all the mountains; Lokaaloka is situated in the southern direction and since Prithvi's shadows are spread over, those Beings situated on the other side of the hemisphere are unable to Surya in the nights. Thus Surya Deva with a lakh of kiranas reaches the mid portion of 'Pushkaradwipa' by that time, despite his speed of one 'muhurta' or two ghadis at the rate of one thirty lakh and fifty thousand yojanas plus! Thus Surya Deva as he traverses southward for six months turns to uttarayana or northbound. At the time of Dakshinaayana, Surya would have reached the travel to the mid portion of Pushkara dwipa. This dwipa is as thrice as distant from Mru to Manasarovara! Now the distance on the southern course or Dakshinayana is of nine crore fifty lakh yojanas. After the dakshinayana, Surya reaches the Vishuva sthaana or the 'khagoleeya vishuvadvritta bindu' at the north of Ksheera sagara. Vishvan mandala parinama is three cores twenty one lakh yojanas. As Surya's course gets north bound or uttarayana entering 'shravana nakshatra', then his course would be towards gomoda dwipa in between the south and north parts and in between are located jaradrava - Iravata to the north and Vaishvanara to the south. Towards north is named Naaga veedhi and to the south is the Ajaveedhi.]

[Vishleshana on Tapatrayas:

Adhi Bhoudika or Ailments of Physical Nature; Adhyatmika or of Mental-Psychological Nature; and Adhi Daivika or of Natural Calamities like Earth quakes, floods, lightnings etc. beyond human control. In Vishnu Purana: Maharshi Parashara described about Tapatriayas or the Three Kinds of Difficulties that all human beings are subjected to as also the means of realising the Paramartha Swarupa. The Tapatriayas originate due to Adhyatmika, Aadhi Daavika and Adhi Bhoutika reasons. Adhyatmika based Tapaas are either due to 'Shaaririka' (physical) ailments or 'Manasika' (psychological) imbalances. Shaaririka Tapaas include diseases related to head, digestive, heart, breathing, vision, limbs, skin, fevers and so on; related are the various physiological problems of blood-urinary-pelvic nature. Manasika Tapaas are related to Kama, Krodha, Bhaya, Dwesha, lobha, Moha, Vishada, Shoka, Asuya, Apamana, Irshya, Matsara etc. Adhi Bhoutika Tapaas are due to the difficulties attributed to animals, birds, Pishachaas, Serpents, Rakshasaas and poisonous related creatures like scorpions. The troubles on account of Adhidaivika nature are due to cold, heat, air, rains, drought, water, earthquakes, cyclones and so on. Additionally, the troubles are related to birth, childhood, youth, old age, ignorance, Avidya, loneliness, smell, lack of resources, poverty, immaturity, inexperience, lack of opportunity, fear of death, death itself and multiple kinds of experiences of Naraka. Maharshi Parashara emphasized that there are problems of excessive of opulence, excellent health, excessive youth, and such other excesses and some times ignorance is bliss. More so there could be Tapaas due to discriminations of sex, age, social status, experience, opportunity, family background; origin of birth viz. religion, Varnashrama and age. Disappoint -ments in life, more specifically relating to money and fame, including their earnings, perservation and its vinasha or destruction happen to be yet source of Tapatriya.]

Sarga Fifty: Ramas arrive at Shringavera pura on the banks of Ganga- stay overnight- and Nishada Raja Guha welcomes them-[Vishleshana on Parama Shiva's 'Jataajuta' vide Sarga Forty Three of Valmiki Baala Ramayana is quoted]

[Vishleshana on Parama Shiva's 'Jataajuta' vide Sarga Forty Three of Valmiki Baala Ramayana is quoted: Maharshi Vishvamitra addressed Shri Rama that after Brahma Deva gave the boon to Bhagiratha who was literally standing with heightened foot fingers, the latter got busy as immersed in invoking Maha Deva. Subsequently Pashupati Shiva too appeared and confirmed: Prītas te 'ham naraśreṣṭha kariṣyāmi tava priyam, śirasā dhārayiṣyāmi śailarājasutām aham/ tato haimavatī jyeṣṭhā sarvalokanamaskṛtā, tadā sātimaḥ rūpam kṛtvā vegam ca duḥsaham, ākāśād apatad rāma śive śivaśirasy uta/ 'Narashreshtha! I am pleased with your inhuman determination and selfless dedication to some how usher Devi Ganga down to earth and provide salvation to your ancestors; indeed I shall be delighted to fulfil your ambition and help to hold the mighty flows of Ganga into my 'jataajuta' the twisted and coarse head hairs from 'akaasha'. Then Shri Rama! As Paramashiva sanctioned Bhagirath's life time ambition, Himalaya Deva's elder daughter and Devi Parvati's elder sister Devi Ganga readily consented but had only one reservation that as she jumps down to Shiva's jataajuta the flows might further flow down to

Patala instead of being held on earth itself! Shiva realised Devi Ganga's impertinent remark and decided that he would hide her flows right into his jatajutas. Then Devi Ganga jumped down on Shiva's mastaka and he held the flows which got instantly absorbed in the jatajutas. The flows of Ganga lost their way in the labyrinths of Shiva's jataajuta and the forceful flows could not even reach earth, let alone down to Patala as Ganga wondered. Bhagiratha who had wondered as to where the flows disappeared and once again resorted to deep meditation to Maha Shiva. The latter released one of the forceful flows of Ganga to fall down to Bindu Sarovara as they assumed seven flows of which Hladini-Paavani and Nalini turned east; while Suchakshu-Seeta and Mahanadi Sindhu flowed westward. Saptamichanvgaat taasaam Bhageeradham tadaa, Bageerayopi Raajarshi divyam syandanamaasthitah/ Praayadagne mahatejaa gangaatam chaapyanuvrajat, gaganaacchhankara shirastato dharanimaagataa/ The seventh flow of Ganga followed the chariot of Bhagiratha, he had thus accomplished the unique task of bringing Ganga from Shiva's head down to the earth following! As the flows of Ganga followed thus, the speed and ferocity of the waves attracted fishes, tortoises and various water borne species joined as earth appeared to have become far richer thereafter. This superb attraction happening on earth instantly raised the curiosity of the celestial beings as though thousand more Suryas got presented by themselves. As the flows of Ganga got stabilised with speed and thrust gradually near normalcy reached and got widened from bank to bank pushing houses and crop fields too. Gandharvas and several Devas gradually gathered themselves as the flows of Ganga rolled down from Shiva's head and his unimaginable hairs themselves and eventually crowds of angels took to heartily taking in the pure sweetness of the waters, bathing in them and swimming too thoroughly revelling in the irresistible flows. And so do humans and innumerable other species especially due to their firm and proven belief of the sacred flows and even drops of 'Ganjajala'. In this context, Brahmarshi Vishvamitra addressing Shri Rama affirmed that Deva-Rishi-Daitya-Danava, Rakshasa, Gandharva, Yaksha, Kinnara, Naaga, Sarpa, Apsaras, all the entirety of water species, besides men, women, and animals made fast inroads into the ever purifying flows of Sacred Ganga. Ta to hi yajamaanasya Jahnordbhutakarmanah, gangaa saplaavayaamaasa yagjnavaatam mahatmanah/ Tasyaavalepanam jnaatvaa kruddhho Jahnuscha Ragahva, apibat tu jalam sarvam Gangaayaah paramadbhutam/ As the flows of Ganga are fierce and roaring with nasty sounds, Rajarshi Jahnus was performing a maha yajna, and the furious flows of Ganga entered right into the yajna vedika; the Rajarshi got terribly furious at the alleged arrogance of Ganga and thus drank up the River waters totally in a manner that not even a drop of the River remained on earth. Deva Gandharva Rishis were shocked and stunned at the crisis and prayed collectively to very kindly revive Ganga once again stating that he was a father figure and Devi Ganga his daughter. The Rajarshi was pleased with the prayers and finally released Ganga through his ears and the father daughter relationship got universal recognition ever since.]

Sarga Fifty Two: Guha navigates Sita Rama Lakshmanas across Ganga- Rama bids farewell to the reluctant Sumamtra- Sita's intense prayers to the Sacred Ganga- after crossing Ganga reach Vatsa desha for night halt- [Vishleshanas: 1) on Vaanaprastha Dharma as quoted from Manu Smriti -2) on Prayaga

[Vishleshana on Vaanaprastha Dharma as quoted from Manu Smriti -Aachaara Khanda:

Every snataka Dwija pursuant to the Grihastaashrama into the Vaanaprastha stage of life should pursue the Vidhis or principles of dharma with determination and 'indriya nigraha', while aging with wrinkles and white hair as per the practice of generations after generation. He might even discard cultivation entrusting him to sons and retire into forests with his wife but retaining his duty of the daily 'agni karyas' along with the required implements being prepared for eating fruits and roots, and wearing old yet clean clothes and unshaven beards or hairs yet with bathings in mornings and evenings ensuring 'baahyaantara shuchi'. He should offer 'bali' to share his food with creatures and insects, give away charities and perform 'atithi seva' as per his ability, as also daily vedaadhyayana. Vaitaanikam cha juhuyaadagnihotram yathaavidhi, darshamaskandayan parva purnaa -maasam cha yogatah/Riksheshtyaagrayanaam chaiva chaaturmaa -syaani chaaharet, turaayanam cha kramasho dakshasyaayanameva cha/ Vaitaanikaagni is called the merger of Aahavaneeya and Dakshinaagi and thus performing the Vaitaagni as prescribed is what is expected of dwija during the vaanaprastaashrama stage of life. At the same time, he should not slip away from the duty of 'ishti karyas' of agni on darsha pourami and amavasyas. The prescribed shrota karmas of Nakshatreshhti and Aagraayaneshti be neglected nor those during Chaaturmasyas and at Uttaraayana-Dakshinaayana transition days of Surya Deva's directional changes. The Vaanaprastha Prajas are also required to perform homa karyas with the purodasa cakes and boiled karus prepared by their own hands of fresh grains of Vasanta or Sharad ritu crops and the remains after the homa kriyas be eaten by themselves as tempered with salt. They should otherwise eat the vegetables, roots and fruits as also the dried fruits and oil extracts but avoiding madya-maamsas and banned fruits like bhurina-shighruka-sleshmaankas as also honey. During the month of Ashviyuja, one should discard stored food items or old clothes. The Vaanaprastha should only consume food cooked by fire or ripened as fruits duly emaciated by teeth or pulped or digestible or of grinding tools. Naktam chaannam samashneeyaadhivaa vaaahritya shaktitah, chaturthakaaliko vaa syaat syaad vaapyashtamakaalikah/ Chaandraayanavidhaanairvaa shuklakrisnecha vartayet, pakshaantayorvaapyashneeyaad yavaagum kvathitaam sakrit/ or food be consumed as nakta bhojana that is to refrain from eating as per one's ability or take food either in the day or night, keep 'upavaasa' or fasting till the next night or the day there after till the fourth day. Chaandraayana bhojana involves reducing the fistful food intakes from prathama to amaavasya and in the reverse way from prathama to purnima during krishna paksha and shukla paksha respectively. As an alternative, the Vaanaprasthas might always subsist on flowers, fruits and roots fallen on earth. Besides performing 'trikaala snaanas' or mornings-middays and evenings, a Vaanaprastha should practise 'Panchaagni saadhana' or maintaining four fires around, besides Surya on the sky during greeshma months; the rainy season under the open skies and in the hemanta ritu or of winter season wearing wet clothes to always sustain the rigours of austerities. At the time of 'trikaala snaanas' in mornings-middays and evenings, tarpanas to Devas and Pitru Devas be executed and possibly achieve higher levels of asceticism. In the quest for harshness and severity of one's own body and psyche, the vaanaprastha might be seated in the midst of sacred fires around and within under open skies sans shelter, maintain silence and bare subsistence on meagre intakes of roots and fruits. Etaashchaanyaashcha seveta deeksha viprovane vasan, vividhaashchau panishadeer aatmasansiddhaye shruteeh/ Rishibhirbraahmanaishchaiva grihasthaireva sevitaah, vidyaatapo vivridhyartham shareerasya cha shuddhaye/ or even the aforementioned vannaprastha dharmas apart, Brahmanas who even otherwise practise accomplishment of 'tadaatmya' or union of Antaratma and Paramatma as was explained in the various Sacred Scriptures like Upanishads do constantly strive for and so do great Maharshis. Thus such exemplary Brahmanas are straight to walk in north easterly direction and always on the singular path of virtue, live on water and air, being totally self-controlled until the final body collapse but with total fulfillment with neither fear nor grief nor even attachment but of 'sat plus nyaasa' or of Interaction with Sanyasa literally at the final destination of bliss]

[Vishleshana on Prayaga: Prayaga (Allahabad): Maha Padma Purana eulogizes Prayaga in Uttara Khanda as follows: Jahnavi Ravisutaa Parameshthiputri Sinndhutrayaabharana Tirthavara Prayaga, Sarvesha maamanugrahaana nayaswa chordhwamantastamo dashavidham dalaya swadhaamna/ (Prayaga Tirtha Raja which wears the ornament of three Unique Rivers of Ganga from Vishnu paada-Yamuna the daughter of Surya-Saraswati the daughter of Brahma! Sarveswara! Be very kind to me and lift my stature and demolish the ten folded 'Avidyaandhakara' or the Darkness of Ignorance and enlighten me into knowledge of brilliance!) Vaageesha Vishnaveesha Purandaraadyaah Paapapranaashaaya Vidaam Vidopi, Bhajanti yatteeramaneeela neelam sa Tirtha raajo jayati prayagah/ (Victory to you Prayaga Tirtha Raja! You are so illustrious that Brahma-Vishnu-Shiva- Indraadi Devas as also Rishi-Maharshis vie with each other to rejoice the Pure White and Blue waters of three Maha Nadis converging together!) Kaalindajaa sangamavaapya yatra pratyagataa swargadhuni dhuneti, Adhyaatma taapatrayam janasya sa Teertharaajo jayati Prayagaha/ (Victory to you Prayaga Tirtha Raja! Manushyas on accomplishing the Sangama of Ganga- Kalindini-Yamuna witness themselves the complete destruction of ‘Tapatrayas’ viz. Adhyatmika or Issues of Psychological and Mental nature, Adhi daivika or God made problems and Adhibhoutika or of physical ailments !) Padma Purana further states: Victory to you Prayaga Tirtha! You assume bright blue colour and its varying shades which indeed do pacify human beings from the cyclical tribulations of deaths and births. Victory to you Prayaga Tirtha Raja! Brahma and all the Devatas do frequently take reprieve from their own duties only to enjoy your comforting diversion and even Yama dharma Raja too sometimes frees himself from wielding his ever whipping ‘danda’ just to refresh and rejuvenate himself with the tranquility of the Sangama Raja. Victory to you Prayaga Tirtha Raja! Those persons who dive and bathe in this Sangama of three illustrious Rivers viz. ‘Brahminaputri Tripatha-striveni’ would reap the ‘Akshata Yaga Phala’ and make way to Brahma Loka! Lokaanaam akshamanaa –naam Makhakritushu Kalou Swargakaamair japastutyaadi shtotrairvachobhih kathamamarapada prapti chintaaturaanaam/ Agnishtomaashwamedha pramukhamara phalam samyagaalocchhya saanga Brahmaadyaisteertha rajobhimatada upadishtoyameva Prayagah/ (In Kaliyuga, human beings no doubt are desirous of attaining Swarga but are unable to execute Yajna-Yaagaas but could resort to Japa-Stuti-Stotra-Paatha and the like; at same time they are desirous of achieving Ashwamedhaadi Yajna phala too; so Brahma and Devatas thought over and materialised Prayaga Tirtha Raja to achieve the similar phala by merely but sincerely observe the bathing regulations and secure Salvation). Grahaanancha yathaa Suryo Nakshatraanaa yathaa Shashi, Tirthaanaamuttamam tirtham Prayagaasyamanuttamam/ (Just as among the Grahas Surya is the outstanding and among the Stars the Moon, Prayaga indeed the the Unique among the Tirthas) Prayage tu Naro yastu Maagha snaanam karoti cha, Na tasya phala samkhyasti shrunu Devarshi sattama/ (Those who perform Maagha Snana at Prayaga, they have no measure of Phala sampatti!) To know about the further ‘mahima’ or Unique significance of Prayaga, one might refer to Matsya, Kurma, Agni Maha Puranas also! The very fact that there is a Sangam of three Maha Nadis lends the credential of Prayaga to be the King of Tirthas in Bharat. As there are three distinct river flows have their confluence, this Tirtha rightly designated as Triveni distinguishes itself as Agni Swarupa or of Yajna Vedi; the intermediate region of Ganga-Yamuna is of ‘Garhapatyagni’; where as the region beyond Ganga viz. Pratishthanpur-Jhansi is of ‘Ahavaniyaagni’ and the Region beyond Yamuna ie. Alarkapura and Araila is to be considered as ‘Dakshinaagni’. Hence those who decide to stay at Prayaga for three nights representing the Three Rivers signified as three types of Agni, would derive the benefit of three Sacred Rivers and three forms of Agni! There is a Magha month celebration at Prayaga and those visiting the Maha Tirtha are in this month are designated as Kalpa Vasis! Several such Kalpavasi Yatris residing at the Triveni Sangama make it a point to reside here during Soura Maasa Makara Samkranti upto Kumbha Sankranti and as per Chandramaana stay right up to the end of Maagha Month. Now every twelve years there is a Maha Kumbha at Prayaga when Brihaspati is in Vrishabha Raasi and Surya is in Makara Raasi; every such six years, Ardha Kumbha is observed and then again there is a srting arrival of yatris and a big Mela is organised at Prayaga. Duties at Prayaga: Yatris to Prayaga Tirtha are expected to observe Upavasa or fasting, Japa, Daana, and worship. ‘Mundan’ is a normal duty for males and widows whereas for married women, ‘Veni daana’ or cutting of long head hair edges duly tied together smeared with Mangala Dravyas like turmeric powder and scented sindura powder are to be slashed with scissors and the hair pieces so cut along with recitation of Mantras blessing long marital life with longevity of husbands; there after ‘Mangala Snanas’ or Sacred and auspicious bathings are performed again with Mantra recitals while leaving the discarded pieces of their hair edges so slashed formally to the flows of Holy Triveni Sangam. The concerned husbands who would have already bathed earlier should once again perform three dips in the flow by holding the shoulders of their wives. There after at the designated Sangama Sthala where the confluence of Ganga and Yamuna waters of brightness and blueish hues and distinct temperatures of coldness and mild warmth-with Saraswati as the under current, puja is to be performed with three dips again possibly or if travelling by boat, by sprinkling of the Sacred Sangam flows on heads. Pinda Puja/ Tarpana and Pinda daana in favour of Pitru Devas would be the next duty to be observed on banks of Prayaga Sangam. Main Devasthaanas at Prayaga: Trivenim Madhavam Somam Bharadwaajam cha Vaasukim, Vandekshaya vatam Shesham Prayagam Tirtha naamakam/ (Triveni, Bindumadhava, Someshwara, Vaasuki naaga, Akshya Vata, and Sesha Naaga or Baladeva are the principal Tirthas worthy of including in the Prayaga Yatra itinerary. Veni Madhava is a renowned Vaishnava Peetha nearby Triveni Sangama adjacent to Akshaya Vata. This Bindu Madha in water form comprises twelve Madhavas viz. Shankha Madhava, Chakra Madghava, Gada Madhava, Padma Madhava, Ananta Madhava, Bindu Madhava, Manohara Madhava, Asi Madhava, Sankashtahara Madhava, Adi Venu Mahava, Adi Madhava, Shri Veni Madhava; these Madhavas are either Murtis, or Sacred Rocks or of Jala Swarupa Sthanas. Akshaya Vata is near Patalapura Cave as a dry tree bush on Yamuna River bank where several Murtis are on display like Annapurna, Maha Lakshmi, Gauri Ganesha, Bala Mukund, Maha Deva, Saraswati, Vishnu, Nrisimha, Rama Sita Lakshmana Hanuman etc. Besides these, the other Mandirs are Mankemeshwar Mandir of Shiva and Somanatha reachable by boat, Bindu Madhava already mentioned, Naga Vasuki and Bala Deva or Shesha Mandir, Shiva Kuti or Koti Tirtha, Bharadwaja Ashrama, all on Ganga Banks. Lalitha Devi Mandira as mentioned in ‘Tantra Chudamani’ is one of the Shakti Peethas at Prayaga where Devi Sati’s right hand finger fell following her mortal body parts slicing off by Vishnu Chakra and Devi’s name is called Alop Devi. Prayag’s Antarvedi Parikrama is stated to take a couple of days commencing from Triveni sangama Snaana and Bindu Madhava worship followed by Yamuna bank’s Paapa vimochana Tirtha, Parashurama Tirtha, Govardhana Tirtha, Pischacha mochana Tirtha, Manah Kameshwara Tirtha, Kapila Tirtha, Indreshwara Shiva, Takshaka Kunda, Takshakeshwara Shiva, Kaaliya hrada, Chakra Tirtha, Sindhu Sagara Tirtha near Kakaraghaat, and on the road to Pandava Kupa, Varuna Kupa in Gadhayi Sarai, Kashyapa Tirtha, Dravyeshwara nadha Shiva, Surya Kunda and so on. There after, Hanumam darshana and Triveni Snaana would terminate the Antarvedi Parikrama. Bahir Vedi Parikrama is stated to be taken up about ten days but after this one has to undertake Antar vedi parikrama too. Kurma Purana details an account of Prayaga Mahatmya by narrating of Yudhishtara’s remorse and anguish on the conclusion of the Kurukshetra Battle where not only Kaurava cousins but even Bhishma, Karna his own elder brother, several uncles, Gurus and associates were killed; as he desired to perform ‘Prayaschitta’ or formal atonement/ expiation the Vedic way, Maharshi Markandeya suggested Prayaga Titha darshana and penance., since this Kshetra was protected against Evils by some sixty thousand bows and arrows in favour of Ganga and Sabita Deva riding seven horses protected River Yamuna, while Devi Saraswati flowing under ground has the protection of Brahma himself; Indra and Devas kept constant vigil, Vishnu is ever protective and Maha Deva resides on the Vata Vriksha / banyan tree on the banks of the Sangama. The Purana is quoted: Prayaagaam smaranaamasya sarvamaayaati sankshamam, Darshanaat tasya Tirthasya mnaamasamkirtinaadapi, Mrittikaa labhanaad vaapi Narah paapaat pramuchyate/ (The very thought of Prayaga would suffice to destroy sins; Prayaga darshana and naama samkirtana or even the touch of Prayaga sand would evaporate all sins). Along with the banks of Yamuna and Ganga are countless Tirthas each of which has a description; Kurma Purana highlights Yamuna’s southern side two Maha Nagas Kambal and Ashwatara who were great devotees of Parama Shiva stayed at that Tirtha and Snaan there would ward off ‘sarpa badha’ forever. Another Tirtha named ‘Hamsa prapatana’ near Pratishthanapura and the belief is that Apsara landed there by Hamsa/ Swan and bathing there enriches beauty of body and heart; Koti Tirtha bathing and possibly death is stated to ensure Swarga nivasa for crores of years. On Ganga's eastern side is Sarva Samudra Gahvara or Cave and stay there for three days and nights observing fast and celibacy and mental control performing meditation would fetch Ashwamedha Yagna phala. Sangama snana in Maagha month for three days ensures enormous material fulfillment and at the termination of life the assured passage to higher Lokas. Those who could perform 'karishagni seva' or tapasya within a circle of flames of dried cow dung on the banks of the Sangama Place would bestow and preserve diseaseless body and physical fitness. Yet another Tirtha on the northern side of River Yamuna ensures Runa Vimochana or freedom from indebtedness.]

Sarga Fifty Four: Ramas reach Bharadvaja ashram and the Maharshi advises them to settle at Chitrakoota mountain - Vishleshana on Chitrakoota

Vishleshana on Chitra koota: Most significant fact is that Lord Shri Ram along with Devi Sita and brother Lakshman spent years together at this 'Tapobhumi' or Meditation Land of Sanctity- where Maharshi Atri and his illustrious follower Munis stayed too- during his forest life as per his father Dasharatha's wish. Chitrakoot means the 'Hill of many wonders'. Chitrakoot falls in the northern Vindhya Mountain range. Chitrakoot Parvat Mala includes Kamad Giri, Hanumaan Dhara, Janki Kund, Lakshman pahari, and Devangana famous Religious mountains. It was in these deep forests that Shri Rama-Devi Sita and Lakshmana spent a few months of their fourteen years of exile. Renowned Sages like Atri-Anasuya- and Vaalmiki did their tapasyas. Shri Rama was stated to have performed his father's obsequies during his exile period. Valmiki speaks of Chitrakoot as an eminently holy place inhabited by the great sages, abounding in monkeys, bears and various other kinds of fauna and flora. Both the Maharshis Bharadvaja and Vaalmiki paid outstanding tributes to Chitrakoota as one of the most picturesque places of dharma and satkarma. And so did Kalidasa and Tulasi Das in later times. its this bewitching impact of this place. At Chitrakut, the parikrama or circumambulation of Kamadagiri /mountain and Shri Rama Darshan are the significant tasks. The parikrama is to take some five days of some 30 km. Starting from Raghava Prayaga 'snana' at Sitapur- Koti Tirtha, Sita Devi's Kitchen, Hanuman Dhara-Keshavaghar, Pramodavana, Janaki kund, Sirasa vana, Spkatika shila, Anasuya- Gupta Godavari snana, Kailasa Parvata darshana- and from Chabepura to Bharat kupa and Rama Shayya or Rama's bed. On way in the Parikrama occur Mukharavinda where snana is of importance followed by temples of Hanuma, Saakshi Gopala, Lakshmi Narayana, Shri Ramas sthaana, Tulasidasa nivasa, Kaikeyi and Bharata Mandirs, Charana Paduka Mandir. There are three most hallowed 'Charana Chinha' or foot prints of Lord Shri Rama viz. Charana Paduka or His footwear prints, Janaki kunda and 'Sphatika shaala'. The specific Spot where Bharata met Rama for the first time and the molten stone of Rama's footprint is visible still. Among other hallowed Places nearby Charana Paduka are Lakshman Hill and Lakshman Mandir, Janaki Kund, Anasuya-Atri Ashram, Gupta Godavari and so on. Nearby Chitra kut are Ganesha Kund, Valmiki Ashram, Viradha Kunda, Sharabhanga Ashram, Sutikshan Ashram and Rama Vana.

Sarga Fifty Six: Ramas reach Chitrakoota-Maharshi Valmiki at ashram- latter teaches Lakshmana to build 'Rama Kuteera'-Vishleshana on Vaastu Shastra : Matsya Purana

[Vishleshana on Vaastu Shastra from Matsya Purana:

Eighteen Rishis gave the Rules and Regulations of Vaastu Shastra to the posterity and these Rishis were: Bhrigu, Atri, Vasishtha, Vishwakarma, Maya, Nagnajit, Bhagavan Shankara, Indra, Kumara, Nandeswara, Shounaka, Garga, Vasudeva, Aniruddha, Shukra and Brihaspati. As regards, the knowledge of Griha Nirmaana, the results of initiating construction activity in various MONTHS are as follows: in Chaitra Month 'Vyadhi' or diseases are caused; in Vaisakha the Constructors gain cows and Ratnas; in Jeyshtha Month, death is indicated in the family; in Ashadha month construction helps gain of servants, Ratnas and 'Pashus' or domestic animals; in Shraavana Month there would be gain of servants; dangers and risks in Bhadrapada Month; construction in Aswin Month might lead to risk to wife; in Kartik Month there would be gain of Dhana- Dhanya or Money and Crops; in Margasirsha month there would be surplus of Bhojyas or Food Items; commencement of construction in the month of Pausha might lead to thefts and loss of materials; Construction in Magha Month there would be benefits but some fear or possibility of Fire and finally, activities of construction during Phalguna Month should yield gold, progeny and prosperity.

Initiating the Construction of Grihas / houses is considered the best in respect of the following NAKSHATRAS OR STARS: Ashvini, Rohini, Mula, the three Uttaraas, Mrigashira, Swati, Hasta, and Anuradha. As regards the DAYS, all the days of a week are good, except Sundays and Tuesdays. In regard to YOGAS, construction should not start on the following yogas viz. Vyaaghat, Shula, Vyatipaat, Atiganda, Vishkambha, Ganda, Parigha and Vajra. Following MUHURTAS are stated to be ideal for construction viz. Sweta, Maitra, Maahendra, Gaandhawa, Abhijit, Rohini, Vairaja, and Savitri. To decide on the SHUBHA LAGNA, the activity of construction should be commenced when the Chandra bala as also Suryabala would be equally positive. The most important activities apart, 'Stambharohana' or the hoisting of the Pillar should be taken up first; similarly the procedures should be the same as in respect of the construction of Praasaads, wells and such mini water bodies.

SOIL TEST would be the foremost activity before the actual construction is taken up. Sweta (White), Lal (Red), Peeta (yellowish) and kaala (black) may be the ideal soils for the Four 'Varnas' of Brahmana, Kshatriya, Vaisya and Shudra respectively. Taste-wise, the soil may be sweetish for Brahmanas, sour for Kshatriyas, 'tiktha' or bitter for Vaishyas and 'Kasali' / Kashaya / Pungent for Shudras. As a part of the soil quality test, saplings are to be planted and the best soil quality would yield the growth over three nights; medium growth over five nights and minimal growth over a week. The best soil obviously would give out the quickest yield.

By way of a diagram, the area meant for construction is drawn as a big square which is divided into nine squares while each square is further sub-divided into nine smaller squares, thus making a total of eighty one squares. Of these, thirty two Devatas are worshipped in as many sub-squares and thirteen Devatas from outside those sub squares, thus accounting for forty five squares. The names and the positioning of the respective Deities are: Shikhi, Parjanya, Jayant, Indra, Surya, Satya, Brusha, Antakisha, Vayu, Pusha, Vitatha, Brihatsakshatha, Yama, Gandharva, Bhiring raaja, Mriga, Pitrugana, Daivarika, Sugreeva, Pushpadanta, Jalaadhusha, Asura, Sesha, Paapa, Roga, Ahi, Mukhya, Bhallata, Soma, Sarpa, Aditi and Diti; these thirty two Deities are Baahya Devatas. These Deities are to be worshipped in the four Dik-konas like Ishaana. Now, outside the Vaastu Chakra the following four Deities are to be worshipped viz. Aapa, Savitra, Jaya, and Rudra. In the middle nine squares, on the four sides of Brahma, eight Sadyha Devatas are to be positioned and these are Aryama, Savita, Viviswaan, Vibhudha -adhipa, Mitra, Raajayakshma, Prithvidhara, and Apavatsa. Apa, Apavatsa, Parjanya, Agni and Diti-these are of five Devataa varga to be worshipped in Agneya-kona. Further, twenty Devataas are positioned in two rows: Aryama, Viwaswaan, Mitra and Pritvidhara-these four are stationed on three sides of Brahma in three, three positions each. This is the Procedure of worship to all the relevant Deities.

The methodology of construction varies from one building to another such as Chatuhshaala, Trishaala; Dwishala etc. The Chatuh shaala is open from all four sides with gates /doors on all the sides, known as Sarvatomukha and is normally ideal for a Palace or a Temple. A building which has no door to the west is called Nandyavarta; without a door on the Southern side is called Vardhamaana; without a door on the Eastern side is called Swastika; and without an opening on the Northern side is Ruchaka. A King's Palace is ideally measured the hundred and eight hand-lengths, while that of a Prince has sixty six measures; a General's abode with sixty four measures; forty eight measures to forty eight measures; and thirty two for an ordinary citizen. As regards the 'Stambhas' (Pillar) in an ordinary house, its circumference is multiplied by nine times and the result must be the depth of the pillar underground; a four angled pillar is called 'Ruchak'; eight angled pillar is 'Vajra'; sixteen angled pillar is 'Dwi Vajra', thirty two angled pillar is 'Praleenak' and a pillar whose mid-region is round is called 'Vritra'. All the residential homes should be entered from the right side 'Pravesha Dwar'. Entry from the eastern side where Indra and Jayanta exist is the best; in the southern side 'dwara', it is said that Yama and Vitatha are supposed to be ruling and is good too; on the western dwara, Varuna and Pushpadanta are prominent; Uttara dwar is governed by Bhallat and Sowmya and is quite propitious. But one should be careful of 'vedhas' or forced entries: for instance, such vedhas through side-lanes might result in 'Kulakshaya' or damage to the Vamsha; forced entry through trees might end up in mutual hatred of family members; vedha through mud would bring in sorrows; vedha through water ways would result in problems; vedha through pillars might end up through difficulties arising due to women. Entering from one house to another could end up in grief to the master of the house. A house which opens on its own might result in madness of a family member. Similarly, a house which gets closed on its own could end up in 'Kula naasha' / distress to the Kula. Entry through a very high door could lead to 'Raja bhaya' or difficulties on account of Authorities. If the door is too low, there could be 'Chora bhaya' or fear of thefts. A door just above another door could attract Yamaraja darshan. If a house with a main door of disproportionate size is built in the middle of a big road is made, the master of the house would not live for long. If the main door is smaller than the other doors of a house, that house might not have contentment and would be a constant abode of recurring predicaments. The rear portion of the house must be kept duly adorned with trees, foliage, pots and decoratives. The east of the house there should be 'Vata' vriksha; in the Southern side Udumbara tree and the western side Pippala Tree and Pluksha tree on the northern side. Nearby the house, trees with thorns and Ksheera Vrikshas or milk-yielding trees are not good. It would be propitious to grow trees like Purnnaga, Ashoka, Shami, Tilaka, Champaa, Dadimi, Peepali, Draksha, Arjuna, Jambeera, Puga, Panasa, Ketaki, Malati, Kamala Chameli, Mallika, Coconut, Kela, Kadali and Patala as these Trees are signs of Lakshmi / prosperity. Houses are better not built in the extreme vicinity of temples, Dhurtas or mischievous elements, General Administration, Four-Lane Centers, since there might be causes for irritation, fear and problems. Leaving ample space before, rear and sides of the building is a must. It would be advisable to have the southern part of the house elevated and such an abode is called a 'Sampurna' or complete from the Vaastu point of view and would thus bestow the best of advantages. To lay the 'Adhara Shila' (Foundation Stone) of a building, the Priest should determine the 'Muhurat', decorate the Stone with white cloth, lay 'Nava Ratnas' and Gold along with Nava Dhanyas or nine varieties of appropriate seeds and with the help of masons fix up the stone, and perform 'puja' to Ganapati, Vaastu Deva, Ishta Devata or the Family Deity with formal 'Mantracchaarana', also perform 'Havan' / homa to Agni Deva with milk, ghee and honey: The relevant Havan Mantra is: Vaastoshpatey Pratiijaanee -hyasmaantswaavesho anameevo bhavaa nah, yat tvemahey prati tanno jupuswa sham no bhava dwipatdey sham chatushpadey/

VAASTU YAGNA comprises: Sutrapath, Stambhaaropana or hoisting of the main Pillar, Dwara vamshocchraya, Griha Pravesha and Vaastu Shanti. Sutrapath takes place in the Ishana Disha and Stambhaaropana in Agneya kona. Vaastu Deva's 'Pada Chinhaas' or foot prints should be set up and the 'Karta' should do 'pradakshinas' (circumambulation) around the foot-prints. It is stated that water with the powder of Munga, Ratna and Suvarna should be sprinkled while designing the 'Pada-Chihnaas'. Incidentally, the signs of Vaastu should never be ash, lit up firesticks, nails, skins, horns, bones, and skull as some ill-informed persons tend to do so and such material would lead to distress, danger and difficulties. It is advisable that masons and other workers are present at the time of Griha Pravesha. Ishaaney Devataagaaram tathaa Shaanti gruham bhavet, Mahaanasam thathaagneye tatpaarswam chottarey jalam, Gruhasyopakaram sarvam Nairutye Sthaapaded Buddhah/ Bandhasthaanam bahih kuryaat snaana mandapameyvacha, Dhana Dhaanyam cha Vaayavye karmashaalaam tato bahih, Evam Vaastu viseshah syaad Ghruha bhatruh shubaavaham/ (To the Ishaana side of any house, the Devataagruha and Shantigriha must be set up; its kitchen must be in the Agneya kona; to the northern side the 'Jala sthaan' (Water reservoir); all the house materials be kept in the Nairuti

kona; the place for keeping domestic animals like cows and buffalos as well as bathing rooms are better constructed outside the house; the storage place for Dhana-dhanya should be kept in the Vayavya kona; the 'Karya shala' or the Offices should be organised outside the residential place. This pattern of living would certainly assure excellent propitiousness and happiness to the entire family. At the 'Griha Pravesh' function (House Warming Time) approaches, Peace and Prosperity is ushered in as stated: Krutwaagrato Dwijavaraanatha Purnakumbham Dhadyakshataamala pushpa phalopa shobham/ Datwaa hiranyavasanaani tadaa Dwijebhyo, Maangalya Shaanti nilayaya gruham vishekthu/ Gruhoktahoma vidhaanaa Bali karma kuryat, Praasaada Vaastu shamaney cha vidharya uktah, Santarpayed vijavaraanatha bhakshya bhojyeh, Shuklaambarah Swabhavanam pravishet sa dhupam/

(As the house is fully ready, the Head of the family should initiate the action of conducting 'Mangala Shanti' with a group of Brahmanas ahead along with a 'Kalasha'/Vessel, full of Sweet Water, Curd, Akshatas, tender mango leaves, flowers, fruits and coconuts as also scented sandal water, agarbattis/ incense sticks and oil-wick lamps nicely lit and decorated, as Brahmanas recite Veda hymns and musical instruments are played, while entering the house at the appointed 'Muhurta'. There after Griha praasaadas/ doors and other household items are purified for Vaastu Shaanti and Homa and Balidaana are performed. Brahmanas are treated with Bhojan and gifts of gold, vastras and dakshinas, where after relatives and friends are treated too with bhojan and gifts.)]

It is this Vyana of the Pancha Pranaas that demands of the body parts of deeds that require strength to perform. Chhandogya Upanishad vide VIII.vi.6 explains: Shatam chaikaa cha hridayasya naadyah taasaam murdhaanaam abhinah abhinishtraika tayordhvam ayann amritatvam eti vishvavam anya utkramane bhavanti/ In the context of the process of death, the status of the physical nerves and how Sun influences these is described: the veins of the body issuing out of the fleshy bulge called lotus shaped heart is charged with juices of varied colours akin to human desires. The heat of the Sun causes bile which when comes into contact with phlegm in the nerves assuming different colours as accentuated by wind contacts. As life departs, the Self goes upwards through the Sun rays and the praani reaches the Sun within the time that mind travels. The nerves connected to the heart are hundred and one. At the time of departure, one of the nerves-Brahma Nadi- of the blessed ones reaches the crown of the head . While the opening of that nerve enables Immortality, vyana through other exit points totalling nine indicates definite return to the cycle of rebirths. Now the reference to Udaana; this vital force moves everywhere in the body from top to toe. The Deity of Earth favours attracting the ‘apaana’ in a human being. The Antariksha as signified by Vayu Deva is ‘Samaana’ and Vyana is Air in the common parlance. The interpretation is that while Surya-Bhumi-Antariksha are stated as of the divine context, Praana-Apaana-Samaana are stated as eyes, exiting wind of human beings and common Air respectively. As regards Udaana, Tejas and common light are the divine and human forms respectively. As explained above, Udaana is the cause of death too, besides all the deeds requiring force in the normal course of life.)III.10-12) Yatchistastenaisha praanam aayaati, praanaastejasaa yuktah sahaatmaanaa yathaa samkalpitam lokam nayati// Ya evam vidvaan praanamveda na haasya prajaa heeyate, amrito bhavati, tadesha shloka: // Utpattim aayatim shtaanam vibhutvam chaiva panchadhaa, adhyaatmam chaiva praanasya vijnayaamritam ashnute, vijnayaamritam ashnute, iti//(Whatever frame of mind and thoughts occur to a human being at the time of the end of life, indeed those very thoughts and feelings along with the functioning of the organs similarly attuned do surface then. Any person of knowledge who understands of what praana as all about certainly knows that the Departed Soul or the Antaratma then merges in its own origin. In this context, there is a relevant verse: A person of knowledge of Praana would thus be sensitised with its origin, entry, place of residence and the process of exit by achieving its next destination as per one’s own actions of a mix of virtues and vices; very few attain Immortality and the majority return back to Life again; this is the Truth of Life and that indeed again is the Truth of Life!)]

The departed ‘jeevatma’ discarding life behind is accompanied by Lord Yama: Yama: Pareyivaasam pravato maheeranu, bahubhyah panthaam anupaspashaanam, Vaivasvatam sangamanam janaanaam, Yamam Rajanam havishaa duvasya/ May King Yama the son of Surya Deva/ Vivasvaan, be worshipped as he is followed by His relatives and admirers of the departed; Yama has travelled far from the heights beyond and taken to the perfect destination without disturbing any one else. May the departed one be yoked by two oxen to carry the body dear so far as the life and these oxen reach the abode of Lord Yama or alternatively to other abodes in case that It had done ‘satkarmas’ earning virtue outweighing the deeds of vice.v-viii) Pushaa tvetah chyaavayantu pra vidvaan, anashthapashuh bhuvanasya gopaah, sa tvaitebhyah pari dadat pitrubhyo, agnirdevebhyah suvidanniyebhyah/ Pushemaa aashaa anu veda sarvaah, so asmam abhiyatamena neshat, svastidaa aaghrunih sarvaveero, aprayucchan pura etu prajaanan/ Aayuh vishvaayuh pari pasati tvaa pusha, tvaa paatu prapathe purastaat, yatraaste sukruto, yatra te yayuh, tatratvaa devah Savitaa dadhaatu/ Bhuvanasya pat idam havih, agnaye rayimate svaaha/ May Pushan the omniscient escort the departed Soul to another world as His rays never fail to protect all the Beings and reach them to Pitru Loka and may Agni Deva reach the concerned Devas further on. Indeed Pushan is totally conversant with all the Lokas successively as He is aware the ways and means of leading the jeevaatma to safety free from perils. The post life of departed mortals is well realised by Pushan and hence lead them upto the halts en route. As the Souls which may have done well with the earnings of 'punya', the celestial Savitur would place them well in advance and accordingly lead these with care. Hence, Paramatma! may this offering of the body remains engulf by Agni Deva ultimately! The stanzas v-vii are repeats of Rigveda Mantras of 10.17.3-5-4 respectively.]

Samasta Devas are stated to accompany the Mrityu Devata- harim harantam; the latter is the Lord of all the worlds and thoughts of the departed. As Mrityu Devata approaches the yajamaana or the victim, the latter assumes an appropriate form. May the Devata be contented with the stanzas recited and destroy the obstacles faced in the journey post life. Mrityu! At the time of departure of the victim, do kindly spare him from severing his body parts causing pain and tolerant energy. Kindly also do not harm my progeny, much less the victim's life span as we are prepared to serve you with suitable offerings. Mrityu Deva! You are source and form of terror and panic to all the Beings with 'Praana'; all the 'ashta dishas' receive the 'aarthas naadaas' or the signals of frightening cries. May the children of the departed one be equipped to face moment of departure and spared from the distress that pursues. May the heart of Mrityu be kind and beneficial to the victim and family members. Mrityu Deva! may all paths except Devayana be blocked as that is the only path that the victim desires and surely deserves! May Mrityu be endowed with kind thoughts and actions as the victim seeks mercy and forgiveness after the departure to realise the Truth of Life!

Atharva Veda 18.3.1. The widow is then advised to get back normalcy as she would be under a shock and realise the reality that her husband was no more; indeed the person who took your hand on wedlock had left her now. After all, she would have to continue to remain in existence and recover her normalcy since she should fight back the evils of the world and fortify herself. One has to reconcile to the absence of the husband and realise that he was not there. Yet, she would have to take a vow that he was there and get readied for a lonely fight. The stanza 6.1.15 viz. Dhanurhastaat explains that since the upbringing of the progeny has to be the wife's prime need of the hour, the widow should take over the bow from the hands of the departed husband's hands and be prepared for a battle to protect the children and stay there itself and face the situations. Thus she takes the challenge of life ahead. Vyasa Maharshi explains of some features of widows: Patyaomritepi yo yoshivaidhavyam paalayet kvachit, Saapunah praapya bhartaaram svarga bhogaan sameeshnute/ Vidhavaa kabari baddhah bhartru bandhaaya chaayate, Shirasovasanam tasmaat kaaryam vidhavaatathaa, Ekaahaarah Sadaa kaaryah nadviteeyah kadaachana/ Gandhadra –vyasya sambhogonaiva kaaryastathaa kvachit, Tarpanam pratyaham kaaryam bhartuh kushatilodakaih/ Vishnostu pujanam kaaryam patibudhaana chaanyadhaa, Patimeva sadaa dhyayedvishnu rupa dharam param, Evam dharma paraanityam vidhavaap shubhaamataa/( As a husband passes away and the widow observes the regulations of widowhood, since a widow is distinguished as being one, it is preferred that her head hair is removed forever, takes a single meal a day and refrain from a second meal that day! She should not use fragrances and not utilise flowers; every day she should perform tarpana with 'tilodakas' or black Tilas with water using 'darbhas'. Those women who are widowed should consider as the diseased husband as Vishnu himself and then her remaining life would be spent peacefully without problems and even though as of a woman of auspiciousness.]

Sarga Sixty Seven: Maharshis assemble with Purohita Vasishtha to decide on the successor King - [Vishleshana on an Ideal Kingship vide Manu Smriti-Achaara Khanda]
[Vishleshana on an Ideal Kingship vide Manu Smriti-Achaara Khanda]

Ideal Kingship: Manu Deva then describes the ways of conduct and dharmas of a King about his origin and keys to his success as a popular and famed head of a nation. On attaining kingship to a deserving and select kshatriya origin, the King is coronated by the prescribed Vedic Principles to assume the duties expected as from a Head of the Kingdom. This is so when a Leader of the Society has to establish an authoratative Institution based essentially on Dharma and Nyaya and above all to ensure safety and security as an Integrated Identity among the comity of co-kingdoms. Hence the group of Devas like Indra, Surya, Vaayu, Yama, Agni, Varuna, Chandra and Kubera confer Kingship to the most suitable Kshatriya as per Vedic Verses hence as the unique representative of the lusters and magnificenes of the combinations of the representative Devas; indeed like a Sun God the King becomes too radiant to gaze and provides the great source of authority and power sourced from the respective Devas of warmth yet heat of Agni, sweep and speed of Vaayu, placidity and coolness of Chandra, sternness and demand of justice/ virtue of Yama, ample food and sustenance of Varuna, and the auspiciousness and prosperity of Kubera! Even a King as an infant is worthy of respect and awe as there is a worthy King in him and ought to be so venerated. Indeed, careless approach and casual treatment paid to an infant king, who is no doubt, backed up the strong foundations of Kingship as from Vedic Principles, as Agni could provide warmth as also burn the whole family and property as of 'lock-stock- and barrel'! A King with his 'kaarya siddhi' or the success of his purpose as per the prevalent circumstances of 'Desha Kaala Tatwa' seeks to attain 'dharma siddhi' as he assumes varied features of kshama, krodha, mitrata, or even pratikaara or revenge! A King indeed is 'sarva tejomaya' or all powerful as he could usher in Devi Lakshmi or around prosperity, or his anger might invite mrityu or death. If a King is annoyed even by default, the victim's misfortune kicks off and his indignation is certain to mritu! Tasmaad dharmam yamishteshu sa vyavasyennaraadhipah, anishtam chaapyanishteshu tam dharmam na vichaalayet/ Tasyaartho sarvabhutaanaam goptaaram dharmama -atmajam, brahmatejomayam dandam- asrijat purvameeshvarah/ or that is why the dharmas originally created by the institution of Kingship are such as never to be infringed upon and hence the age old principles are such as shaped by the conscience of any King either of mercy or of punishments. This why any of the 'sthaavara-jangamaas' or of moving-immovable nature in Srishti are driven by the impulses of their own consciences too and the interpretations of respective Kingships as per ‘desha - kaala- paristhitis’ or of contemporary situations need necessarily to be upheld and observed. Hence punishments truly represent the King, his Purushtva of assertion and of unquestionable Leadership ; punishment only governs, protects, and sustains vigilance even in sleep or casualness as the constant guard and caution. Sameekshya sa dhritah samyak sarvaa ranjayati prajaah, asameekshya praneetastu vinaashayati sarvatah/ Once punishment is made applicable and enforced, it uproots the evil but once gets lax then attracts further evil. In the case of a King’s negligence of punishment, the defaulted person once saved perpetuates the evil as a fried fish about to be pitch-forked spared or soft cotton piece turns into an iron rod! In case a King spares a criminal from punishment, a crow would steal a pitru pinda or a dog sniff or lick a sacrificial food just as a person of illfame forcefully occupies another’s lawful house in possession since dandasya hi bhayaat sarvam jagad bhogaaya kalpate/ or the entire world loses the grip of fear and becomes all kinds of illegal perversions. Once a rod is spared then even a child is spoilt; Deva, Daanava, Gandharva, Raakshasa, Pakshi, Sarpas too once spared would be victimised with evil; being devoid of ‘daanda’, the conduct of all the beings in Srishti gets sullied and in respect of human beings varnaashrama dharma are severely broken irretrievably paving way for vices and engendering evil forces Yatra shyaamo lohitaaksho dandashcharati paapahaa, prajaastatra na muhyanti netaa chet saadhu pashyati/ Tasyaahuh sampranetaaram raajaanam satyavaadinam, sameekshya kaarinam praajnam dharma kaamaartha kovidam/ That exactly why the concept of Kingship or Leadership is stated as the hinge and hold of the sensitive balance of virtue and vice; where punishment is due it ought to stalk around assuming black color and of red eyes demolish blemishes and sins. Moreso it is in the context of fulfilling the four human aspirations of Dharma-Artha-Kaama-Moksha in a measured manner; indeed hence is the presence of Leadership as assumed by a King. Kingship is defined as who is aware and conscious of the art of punishing and sparing the stick ; tam raajaa pranayansamyak trivargena abhivardhate or He is the ideal King who is truthfully wedded to the principles of virtue and nyaaya, modest and ideal earnings for the Self and dependents besides spare for charity, and controlled and regulated by moderate and just desires; but certainly not to fulfill sensual pleasures, deceitful ways of flippant lives and of selfish motivations. When punishment is prescribed it may not be palatable to unrelenting minds, but when the king concerned does not proclaim it in a non commensurate manner without adequately examining or hiding facts of the case, then the King if partial in judgment is not spared too and might affect his family even. Once the King and his family is ruined, then the store of ‘adharmaas’ so collected might affect not only his possessions of castles, his territories and his ‘praja’ and their fortunes also. Contrarily a champion of Dharma and Nyaya would carve a niche not merely among the co-kings but as in respect of Maharshis and even Devas might secure a qualification for Brahmatva! A continuous series of undue punishments out of hiding facts or ignoring them and issued by an unjust King would have repercussions on the disgrace and ruin of his deputies down the line in the Vamsha and might adversely affect those concerned like Ministers, Army Commanders and so on as involved in the declarations of judgments. Further on, even the Sages would feel the guilt and the thought processes of Devas receiving ‘havyas’ at the Agni Karyas in the Kingdom might be disturbed! Hence: Shuchinaa satyasandhena yathaa shaastaanusaarinaa, pranetum shakyate dandah susahaayena dheemataa/ Svaraashtre nyaaya vrittah syaad bhrishadashcha shatrushu, suhritsvajihmah snigdheshu braahmaneshu kshamaanvitah/ The ideal most King is such sagacious, truthful and intelligent kind of unique followers of Dharma and Nyaya, ably assisted by equally professional deputies, and indeed his judgments for or against punishments or rewards are stated to be one among the countless ones of his worthy race. The fame of such rarity are like drops of oil spreading fast in running flows of water. However the ill fame of a King unworthy of his title and seat tends to act like butter on the water flows steadily till the day of doom. The idealism of Kingship upholds the dignities of the Chatur Varnas and ensures their continuity.. Such Kings of rarity are stated to possess their daily routine as follows: in the early mornings itself, they attend the congregations of the learned and the aged vidwans of Rig-Yajur-Saama Vedas and discuss the specifics of Dharmas and of Administrative Principles involved. They worship and honour such vidwans appropriately and abide by their teachings as discussed. Such exemplary Kings are never harmed but enjoy longevity and prosperity. They are modest and that modesty makes them imperishable. For want of modesty, several Kings in history had perished along with their belongings and on the other hand hermits in forests had turned to be Kings. Veno vinashtovinayaatnahushashchaiva paarthivah/Sudaah paija vanashchaiva sumukho nimoreva cha/ Prithustu vinayaad raajyam praaptavaan manureva cha, Kuberashcha dhanaishvaram brahmannam chaiva Gaadhijah/ In the historical introspective, illustrious Chakravartis or Emperors like Vena, Nahusha, Sudaasa, Yavana, Sumukha, and Nimi perished out of their questionable and evil conduct. On the other hand Prithu and Manu flourished as Chakravatis out their outstanding modesty and impeccable character and Kubera gained the position of Dhanaadyaksha and one of the Ashtapalakas of the Universe. Vishwamitra the illustrious son of Gaadhi a Kshatriya by birth attained the status of an elevated Brahmana by the dint of perseverance, tasya and conduct. The King should perfectly understand the aspirations of the common persons of the day especially in avoiding the pitfalls of co-Kings and most unhesitatingly try to initiate steps in constructing such a Capital City and never even seek to his own personal comfort but ensure his deputies and staff as well as the public of the Kingdom to live with comfort and safety. Towards this end, he needs to construct a fortress protected by vagaries of seasons and possible eventualities of diseases or natural disasters. Such a fortress of distinction and status be suitably equipped with defence forces to ensure safety from attacks of beasts, robbers, internal forces of revolution, external foes and such elements and fortified with weapons, grains, cattle and fodder, ample water and tools, as also Vidvans, artisans, and representatives of chatur varnas, and above all Purohitas or Priests and Ritvigs to duly perform various smarta karmas of auspicious nature besides the shroutha karmas of daily agni karyas and Sacrifices. Yajeta raajaa kratubhirvi vidhairaapta dakshinaih, dharmartham chaiva viprebhyo dadyaad bhogaan dhanaani cha/ Saanvatsarikamaaptaishcha raashtraadaahaarayad balim, syaachchaamnaayaparo loke varteta pitrivatnrishu/ The King has to be such as always engaged in Ashwamedhaadi yajnas attracting learned Brahmins to receive gifts and charities of golden ornaments, precious clothes and so on besides providing employment to workers as also the participating crowds of public with feasts. Indeed the King is stated more than a father and protector of the interests of one and all. As the citizens of the Kingdom are responsive of the noble activities of the King and the band of his officials of commitment ensuring peace and safety, the taxes are paid on time and general business climate is salutary and hence the economy is sound and attracts investments from the public and from foreign kingdoms too. Besides plugging in loopholes of business transactions, the King too motivate the officials down the line with incentives, moral persuasion and punishments against inefficiency or corruption. As Brahmana Vidyathis emerge out of Guru Kula after Vedaadhyayana are suitably gifted and trained for more and more tough assignments to preserve and promote dharmaacharana since nidhir braahmanobhi dheeyate or indeed Brahmanas are the treasures installed by the Kings that could neither be lost nor robbed; such treasures could also not be split, nor perish as they are ever-sustained by the purity and blaze of Agni itself. Samamabraahmane daanam dvigunam braahmanabrue, praadheete shatasahasramanantam veda -paarage/ Paatrasya hi visheshena shraddadhaanatayaiva cha, alpam vaa bahu vaa pretya daanasya phalamashnute/ While charity is offered to any of Varnas then there would be good returns of 'sukrita phala', but once that daana is given to a Brahmana the returns get doubled; once that daanas are executed to a well read and knowledgeable Brahmana, the fruits get further intensified hundred thousand fold, while the recipient is a Veda Vedanga paaranga, then he demands 'anantha phala'! Even if a 'daana' were given as per one's own ability, then undoubtedly a deserving status is accomplished in the higher worlds.]

Vivasvaan, be worshipped as he is followed by His relatives and admirers of the departed; Yama has travelled far from the heights beyond and taken to the perfect destination without disturbing any one else. The Stanza is from Rig Veda 10-14.1.)

The departed jeeva: Idam tvaa vastram prathama nvaagan/ Apaitaduuha yadihaabibhah puraa, ishtaapurtamanusampashya dakshinaam yathaa te dattam bahudhaa vi bandhushu/ Imoau yunajmi te vahnee asuneeyaaya odhave, yaabhyaam Yamasya saadanam, sukrutaam chaapi gacchataat/ May the departed one arrive here with new ideas and forget the erstwhile impulses and memories, recalling however the erstwhile actions some of which might have satisfied the conscience such as the acts of dakshinas to brahmanas vis a vis the wealth given by the kinsmen. May the departed one be yoked by two oxen to carry the body dear so far as the life and these oxen reach the abode of Lord Yama or alternatively to other abodes in case that It had done 'satkarmas' earning virtue outweighing the deeds of vice. Pushaa tvetah chyaavayantu pra vidvaan, anashthapashuh bhuvanasya gopaah, sa tvaitebhyah pari dadat pitrubhyo, agnirdevebhyah suvidanniyebhyah/ Pushemaa aashaa anu veda sarvaah, so asmam abhiyatamena neshat, svastidaa aaghrunih sarvaveero, aprayucchan pura etu prajaanan/ Aayuh vishvaayuh pari pasati tvaa pusha, tvaa paatu prapathe purastaat, yatraaste sukruto, yatra te yayuh, tatratvaa devah Savitaa dadhaatu/ Bhuvanasya pat idam havih, agnaye rayimate svaaha/ May Pushan the omniscient escort the departed Soul to another world as His rays never fail to protect all the Beings and reach them to Pitru Loka and may Agni Deva reach the concerned Devas further on. Indeed Pushan is totally conversant with all the Lokas successively as He is aware the ways and means of leading the jeevaatma to safety free from perils. The post life of departed mortals is well realised by Pushan and hence lead them upto the halts en route. As the Souls which may have done well with the earnings of 'punya', the celestial Savitur would place them well in advance and accordingly lead these with care. Hence, Paramatma! may this offering of the body remains engulf by Agni Deva ultimately! The stanzas v-vii are repeats of Rigveda Mantras of 10.17.3-5-4 respectively.

Sayaavari / Cow to cleanse the sins of the departed: Purushasya sayaavarayapedaanim mujahhe, yadhaam no atra naaparah puraa jarasa aayaati/ Purushasya sayaavari vi te simnaam praanaam, shareerena maheemahim, svadahyehi pitrunup, prajayaasmaanivavaha/ Maivam maamstaa priyeham Devee satee pitrulokam yadaishi, Vishvavaaraa nabhasaa samvayantgee, tasyah porajaam dravinam cheha dhehi/ Sayavari is the cow which was stated dear to the departed person brought to the place of cremation as the symbol of all Devas. Thus, the Sayavari the symbol of Devas! Kindly remove the sins of the departed. As the departed one has loosened all his / her energies, may the Savavari enter the planes of the firmament and lead the way to Pitru Loka. May you also provide your milk to the departed one en route and at the destination as you have access to all the lokas.(Garuda Purana vide Chapter 30: 41-42 and 52-53 are quoted: 'Tarkshya Deva! Any Being on Earth or Pancha Bhutas or the entirety of Creation is Vishnu. Hence whosoever performs a ' karma' or action, the fruit of that action is Vishnu too; thus a person when performs an act, good or otherwise, Vishnu decides the fruit of that action. At the end of the journey of a human- as in other cases too-River Vaitarani is commended as its waters would purify the sins made by the departed one- during the 'kaumara-youvana-vaardhakya- janma janmaantara' as also during 'raatri- praatah- madhyaahna-aparaahna' and both the sandhyas too. The singular solution is hence the charity of a 'kapila gomaata' to a well deserved Brahmana. The following is the verse to be recited at the time of Godaana: Gaavo mamaagratah santu gavaam madhye vahaamyaham/ Yaa Lakshmeeh sarvabhutaanaam yaa cha Deve vyavasthita, dhenu rupenasya Devee mama paapam vyapohatu/ Cow alone is ahead of me- the departed Soul, behind me as my support, my sides too; cow is in my heart and I am on the midst of cows. May the Lakshmi Svarupa-Sarva Bhuta Svarupa-Sarva Deva Svarupa- as the symbol of a Cow, destroy my sins instantly with this Go- Mata! Guruda Purana sums up : those who are destined to go to heaven are supposed to grab the tail of a cow that appears on the banks of the river Vaitarna to be led safely across to the ethereal shores of Vaikuntha)

Tributes to Agni Deva for the final offer of the dead body : *Imamagne chamasam vaa vi jighvarah, priyo devaanaamuta soumyaanaam, esha yashchaamaso deva paanah, tasmin Devaa amritaa maadayante/ Agnervarma pari gobhirvyayasva, sam prornushva medasaa peevasaacha, net tvaa, ghrushnurharasaa jarshyashaano, dadhat vidhakkshyan, paryangyaate/ Mainamagne vi daho, maabhi shoucho maasya tvacham chikshipo maa shareeram, yadaa shrutam karavi Jaatavedo, athemainam prahinutaan pitrubhyah/ Shrutam yadaa karasi Jaatavedo athemenam pari dattaat pitrubhyah, yadaa gacchantyaasuneetimetam, athaam Devaanaam vashaneerbhavaati/ Suryam chakshurgacchatu vaatamaatmaa, dyocha gaccha prithiveem cha dharmanaa, apo vaa gaccha yaditram te hitam, oushadheeshu pratrim tishthaa shareerereh/ Ajobhaagastapasaa tam tapasva, tam te shochishpatu tam te archih, yaaste shavaastanuvo jaatavedah, taabhirvahemam sukrutaam yatram lokaah/ Ayam vai tasmaadadhi, tvametadayam vai tadasya yonirasi Vaishvaanarah, putrah pitre loka krut, Jaatavedo vahemam sukrutaam yatram lokaah/ Agni Deva! please do not hurl or shake this dead body; it is dear to Devas as well as to mortals; the former seek to enjoy the pleasure of the Soma juice and this vessel is the drink of Devas and the latter who are immortal take pleasure in the Soma; this stanza is a repeat of Rig Veda 10-16-8. The next stanza is a repeat of Rig Veda's previous stanza 10-16-7 addresses the dead body: you are enclosed with the 'kavacha' or the shield of Agni Deva who is merely turning only your body parts to ashes but not your true self which indeed is everlasting. Hence Agni is merely clearing the mess of your body! Agni Deva! you may consume the deadbody along with his heart, pancha koshas or Five Sheaths of the body called Annamaya (Physical Energy), Praanamaya (Vital Energy), Manomaya (Mental Faculty), Vigyanamaya (Buddhi or Sharpness of Discrimination) and Ananda maya (Bliss) only but thereafter kindly despatch the 'Jeevatma' - Inner Being- safely to the Loka of His forefathers the Pitru Loka. Agni Deva, when you render the jeevatma fully rid of the memories of the erstwhile life, then That becomes rendered fit with a fresh form subject to the will of Devas. Preta swarupa! Let your vision see Surya Deva, your breath to Vayu Deva! As per your destiny and the fruit of your 'sukrita phala', you may reach swarga, or back to earth or waters. In case you are destined to return as vegetation, then you shall do precisely the same swarupa once again.- Rig Veda 10-16.-3. Referring to the stanza : Suryam chakshurgacchatu vaatamaatmaa, dyocha gaccha prithiveem cha dharmanaa, apo vaa gaccha yaditram te hitam, oushadheeshu pratrim tishthaa shareerereh/ as explained , Chhandogya Upanishad 5.10.6 explains: Abhram bhutvaa meghe bhavati meghe bhutvaa pravarshti taiha veehiyavaa oshadhibvanaspatyah tila-maasha iti jaayant, ato vai khalu durnispra pataram, yo yohyannam atti yo retaah sinchati, tad bhuya eva bhavati/(In the further travel of the Soul from white clouds to thick black clouds to rains, the same is born as paddy, barley, herbs, sesmum, black pulses and so on. Now, the release of the concerned paddy or pulse is also destined as per the time of its release from the shell to kernel; similarly the cycle of food intake from an insect to a bird or to a reptile to an animal or human being is destined likewise). The next stanzas 6.1.22 -23: Ajobhaaga stapasa tam tapasva-- and Ayam vai tvamsmaadabhi/ are as addressed to Jaataveda: 'Agni Deva! having burnt off the body totally, may the physical aspects of the human being been burnt off totally, may the subtle body as the Jeevatma be carried to the wide world of the Devas of virtue; then there is hardly any difference of Vaishvanara and Jeevatma, especially after passing through the layers that the latter passes through! 6.2.1-3: On the path above after death, the jeeva is protected by three kinds of Devas besides Agni Deva; *Ya etasya patho goptaarastebhyah svaaha, ya etasya patho rakshitaarah; tebhyyarasvaahaa, ya etasya pathorakshitaarastebhyah

Goptaarah, Rashitaarah and Abhirakshitaata. May also this offering be received to Khyata who disclosed this secret as also to Apakhyaata who refrains from disclosing the information. May also this offering to Deva Abhilaalapate who commends the deeds of virtue of the Jeevatma that performed in the just concluded mortal life and what is more, may Apalaapate Deva not to divulge the deeds of vice with great refrain. Above all, this offering be made to Agni Deva Himself in case any other Deities of help have not been addressed by default. Agni Deva! you are indeed the unique help in reaching our oblations to all the concerned deities including those who have not been addressed! May the passage of the 'pretaatma' to the respective destinations be free from all types of visissitudes. Agni Deva, you have had the background of birth of the antaratma of the departed person irrespective of the dead person's pluses and minuses of concluded life. That is the supplication to you to assist the pretatma to a helpful rebirth. May the offering be received by Vaishvanara Agni in the upper worlds! The journey of the departed from Agni to the dogs of Yama to Pitru Loka to Surya: Pra ketunaam brihataa yatyaagnih, aarodasee vrishabho roraveeti, divaaschidantaam upamaam udaanat, apaamapasthek mahisho vavardha/ Idam ta ekam, para vuu ta ekam, truteeyena jyotishaa sam vishasva, samveshane tanvaschaarudhi priyo, Devaanaam parame sadhasthe/ Naake suparnamupa yat patantam, hridaa venanto abhyachakshat tvaa, hiranyapaksham varunasyadootam, yamasya yonou shakunam bhuranyanyum/ Ati drava saarameyou shvaanou, chaturakshou shabaliu, saadhunaa pathaa, athaam pitruun suvidatraam upehi, Yamena ye sadhamaadam madanti/ You te shvaanou Yama rakshitaarou, chaturakshou pathirakshee nruchakshasou taabhyaam raajan paridehi enam, svasti chaasmaa anmeevam cha dhehi/ Urunasou asutrupaa udumbalou Yamasya dootao charato janaam anu, taavasmabhyam drishaye suryaaya, punardaataam asum adyaha bhadram/ Soma aikebhyah pavate, dhrutameka upaasate yebhyo madhi pradhaavati, taan chit evaapim gacchataat/ Ye yudhyante pradhaneshu shuuraamso ye tanuutyajah, ye vaa sahasra dakshinaah, taan chit evaapim gacchataat/ Tapasaa ye anaadhrushyaah, tapasaa ye svaryayuh, tapo ye chakrire mahah, taamschadevaapi gacchataat/ Ashmanvatee Revati, sam rabhadvam, uttishthath pra tarataa sakhaayah, atraam jahaama ye asannashevaah, Shivaan vayam urtteeram abhi vaajaan/ Yadvai Devasya Savituh pavitram, sahasra -dhaaram vitatamantarikshe, yenaapunaat Indram anaatar maartyah, tenaaham maamsarvatanum punaami/ Yaa raashtraatpannaadapayanti shaakhaam abhimrutaa nrupatimicchamaanaah, dhaatustaaya sarvaah pavanena puutaah, prajamaasmaantrayyaa varchasaa saamsrujaaya/ Utvayam tamasah pari, jyotih pashyant uta taram, Devam devatraa, Suryam agamna jyotih ut tamam/ Dhataa punaatu Savitaa punaatu agnestejasaa Suryasya varchasaa / Agni Deva in the form of thick smoke flies high from bhumi to dyuloka with his flag assumed the form of a bull with roar; even as He enters the dyuloka with the assistance of Jala Deva assumes the form of lightnings This stanza is the same as Rig Veda vide 10-8-1. Rig Veda 10.56.1 denotes that this Praani is the food of Mrityu; Its basic form was of Agni, then that of Vayu the Deity of Wind and finally of Jyoti Tatva or of Atma Tatva. 'Meet this Soul and provide him 'tejasvi rupa' or of effulgence and get It divinity! The Third stanza is taken from Rigveda 10.121.6 meaning : This scene would be visible as that of a high flying bird Varuna in svarga loka and it is this bird which gets nourished in Yama Loka. But the departed Atma, if saved from Yama's dogs called Shaarameya which are four eyed and could change their appearance in multi colours, could then proceed to join the virtuous Pitru Loka. These Sharameya dogs both are actually are the dogs of intuition and are the gaurdians protecting the Atma on the way up towards the Deva Yaana the divine path with their divine vision. Thus the departed human beings are hunted or helped too by the ‘Yama dootas’; Rig Veda vide 10.14.12 the messengers of Lord Yama are broad nosed and of extraordinary physical strength and mental energy. Once satisfied by the swing of balance of the departed soul’s karma, the fierce dogs sober down and save from any evil forces on the right path. May these divine dogs guide the ‘pretaatma’ to reach the Land of Bliss and grant him relief from the sorrowful earth of ‘arishdvargas’ or the six principal evils of existence so that the Soul could look upon the Surya Deva with contentment and Joy! The seventh stanza referring to the Pitru Loka where Soma Juice flows is a repeat of Rig Veda 10.154.1; the meaning is ‘ Pretatma! Pitru Loka is the celestial place where Pitru Devas rejoice flows of Soma Juice and ‘ghritaahutis’ or the offerings of ghee while meditating on Surya Deva and that is why there is a rush for the honey of delight who are in the know and practice of Madhu Vidya. Rig Veda 1.90.6-8 explains about Madhu Vidya: Madhu vaataa rutaayate madhu ksharanti sindhavah maadhveernah snatoshadheeh/ Madhunaktamutoshaso madhumatpaarthivam rajah, madhu dyourastu nah pitaa/ Madhumaanno vanaspatirmadhumaam astu Suryah maadhveergaavo bhavantu nah/ Sham no Mitrah sham Varunah sham no bhavatvaryamaa, sham na Indro Brihaspatih, sham no Vishnu-rurukramah/ May the practitioners of Yajna Karyaas be endowed with Vaayu pravaaha rivers of sweetness as also all types of heathy herbals of pleasures. May like pitru devataas bestow divine juices of sweetness while the Maatru Varga Devatas too bless us with earthly juices of outstanding taste thus reaping the sweetness of ‘Iham and Param’ or on earth and thereafter! May all kinds of Vanaspatis grant us pleasures while Surya Deva with His ‘tejasvi kiranās’ or radiant rays shower happiness while the nights and ‘usha kaala’ ensure our joys always thus so that the herds of cows too yield sweet milk to us. May Mitra Deva, Varuna Deva, ‘Nyaaya Pradaata’ Aryama Deva, ‘Aishvaryavaan’ Indra Deva, ‘Vaani Swaami’ Brihaspati, and the Singular Universal Vishnu Bhagavan bless us all round auspiciousness!]

[Visleshana on Shraddhas: The Brahmanas to be appointed as ‘bhoktas’ are to be well versed in Veda Vedangas, well behaved, healthy with no physical disabilities, coming of good family background, infallible, and trained well in performing Parvana shraddha and /or ekoddishtha as well. Such ideal bhoktas be invited in advance by the Karta or his brother or son or disciple. The ‘nimantrana’ or invitation should be done with ‘Apasavya’ of ‘yagnopaveeta’ in respect of ‘Pitru sthaana bhokta’ and ‘savya’ position to Vaishwanara bhokta. The prescribed number of Pitru Sthana and Vaishwadeva Sthaana is three and four but as per Desha-Kaala-Parishithis or convenience and availability a minimum of one each would be a must. Vaishwa Deva Brahmanas are to be seated Purva Mukha or east facing and Pitru Deva brahmanas are Uttara mukha or facing north. The respective Brahmanas of Pitru and Vaishwadevas are not mingled nor even touch each others. Vishwedevas are stated to be ten in number: Kraturdaksho Vasuh Satyah Kaalah Kaamasthaivacha, Dhunischa Rochanaiva tathaa chaiva Pururavaah/ Ardraaascha darshete tu Vishwadavaah prakourtitaa/ (Kratu, Daksha, Vasu, Satya, Kaala, Kaama, Dhuri, Vilochana, Pururava and Ardrava are the Vaishwadevas). In the present context, two ‘Arghya patras’ or water vessel with ‘gandha-akshata-darbhas’ are placed at the seat of of the Vishwa Devas and are to be handed over with reverence to the representative Brahmanas and perform a pradakshibna around him. The arghya paatras / vessels could be of bronze or copper or palaasha leaves. Similarly at the Pitru sthaana Brahmana too has to be circumbulated but in an ‘apradikshina’ manner or the reverse manner changing the yajnopaveeta in the ‘praachhenaaveeti’ manner. All the tasks concerning the puja of the Brahmana representing Pitru Devatas need to be done including that of his puja with black tila to be ornamented on his head downward to his feet, while puja to similarly be done tp the Vaishwe deva with akshata white rice grains from head to feet. After puja to both the Viashwanara and Pitru Devata representative- Brahmanas with gandha-pushpa-dhupa- deepas, the next task would be Agnoukarana with the concurrence of the Brahmanas. This task is to make two homas after keeping Agni in the homa kunda twice reciting: Saannidhyamupaasa Somaaya pitru matey Sadhaanamah/ Agnaye kavyavaahanaaya swahaananamah/ These homa kriyas need to be performed as of Pitru yagna vidhaana homa and since Pindapitru yagna is of two fold nature of Daivikatwa and Paitrukatwa the yagopaveeta might either be in Savya or Apasavya manners as per one's own shakha manner. In any case, the remaining 'anna' needs to be disposed off in Agni itself and no remainder of it be retained. The next step is Pariveshana or purification of the cooked bhojana or bhakshya-bhojya-shaaka-soopanaadi padarthas with right hand wearing darbha followed by 'ghritaabhikarana, then holding the right hand thumbs of the Brahmanas representing the Vaishwa Deva and Pitru Devas of three generations with naama-gotras , taking care of savya-praacheenaaveti precautions, showing them around the padarhas placed in circles – in savya or apasavya manner respectively- and request them to commence the bhojana after performing 'Aaposhana' making the bhoktas feel completely comfortable discarding what ever they do not like. The karta would address the bhokas saying: Anna heenam kriyaahenam mantra heenam yadbhavet, Sarvamacchidramiyutkaa tato yatnena bhojayet/ Even as the bhojana starts, there should be Swaadhyaya: Swaadhyayam shraavayet Pitrye Dharma shastraani chaiva hi/ Anna Suktaadi Shravana is to be taken up during the Bhojana kaala. Also before the bhojana itself, the remainder of anna at Agnoukarana is to be placed as three small pindas along with ghee and tilas. After the bhojana follow the tasks of Sapindeekarana and Pinda pradana- puja karmas. As regards, 'Madhyama Pinda viniyoga Vidhana' or the matter related to be disposal of the middle pinda of the three pindas, it is customary that the wife of the Kartha if childless receives it with reverence in her hold with both palms from her husband as the Mantra is recited: Apaamtvoushashadho - naagum rasam praashayaami bhutakrutam garbham dhatswa/ As the house wife eats the Madhya Pinda, the Mantra is to be recited: Adhatta Pitro garbhamanta santaana vardhanam/ Manu states: Pativrataa dharma patnou pitrupujamnatparaa, Madhumantu tatah pindamadhyaatsamyak sutaarthinow/ Ayushmantam sutam vindet yasho medhaa samanvitam, Dhanavantam prajaavantam dhaarmikam saatwikam tathaa, iti/ In the event of wife not consuming the Madhyama Pinda, or even otherwise, the Tri Pindas be eaten by a Brahmana, or Agnihotra or cow or running water. In case a Karta cannot perform Parvana Shraddha for any reason of inability due to any reason he could perform the same as Sankalpa Shraddha .Source: Parashara Smriti]

Sarga One Hundred: Shri Rama having enquired Bharata's welfare gave elaborate lessons of Kshatra Dharmas on his own- [Vishleshanas 1) on King's administrative skill 2) on Videsha Neeti as per Manu Smriti]

[Vishleshana on King's administrative skill from Manu Smriti:

An ideal King is expected to learn of the nuances of Vyavahara Vidya. He should strain himself day-and-night and practise 'indiya nigraha' or the self control of body limbs and senses. An exemplary King requires to abstain from ten evil habits generated from kaama or worldly desire and eight from krodha or anger. Indeed all the habits end up in evil and human misery. To any King the ten vices resulting from Kaama or human obsessions would gradually diminish wealth and virtue while the eight vices springing from Krodha or excessive wrath could terminate in his doom and death! The set of ten vices from desires and pleasures are stated to be hunting, gambling, sleeping by the day, repetitive statements of other's failures and vanity, obsession of femininity, drunkenness, excessive involvement of dance and music, and purposeless travel. The eight vices are carrying and encouraging tales, uncalled for violence, droham or treachery, jealousy, dushanam or abusive language, dravya haranam or unjust seizure of material and property, condemnation and censuring and physical beating. Lobha or avarice is stated as the root cause of all the evils and broadmindedness is the spring of hope. Intoxication, betting, women, and hunting are the four shortlisted banes led by human desires subjected to excesses while the worst possible offshoots of anger are abusive language, manhandling, and seizure of materials and property. Those persons who are not only prime movers of the excesses viz. the Kings in this context but the associates of these sins either from desire or anger are duly involved in the sins of humanity. Indeed Vyasana or vice and Mrityu or death are equally tough but death is easier since Mrityu has a possibility of reaching swarga but the one dragged into vyasana is sure to end up in naraka for sure! That is the reason why an ideal King needs to appoint an ideal Minister too as the latter should have the ancestry of ideal Ministers who are well versed in Shastra- Shaastra jnaana, and of proven nobility. It might sometimes be possible to bless a Kingdom even with unproven Kingship but is unimaginable to secure a Minister of trined background , inherent ability, knowledge and wisdom, be it in the matters of revenue in cease and management, domestic governance and foreign relations. It is the Minister who has to daily interact with his deputies individually and collectively in all the matters relating punishments and rewards. This is the reason why a well read , experienced and trust worthy person- say a Brahmana with experience and wisdom, even as the King is ably assisted and motivated with the larger issues and equally about the minor ones ‘pro bono publico’! In turn, the Minister might appoint his deputies down the line of officialdom as in charge of duties. Thus when fully equipped with the task of governance, the King should take off the heavy responsibility of governance ably conducting the two horsed chariot of Virtue and Justice. The officials at the field level, be it for collection of revenues and of disbursements, or for internal security and and external relations too be appointed on the principles of integrity, incorruptibility and impartiality.]

Sarga Hundred continued: kaccid dhṛṣṭaś ca sūraś ca dhṛtimān matimāñ śuciḥ, kulīnaś cānuraktaś ca dakṣaḥ senāpatiḥ kṛtaḥ/balavantaś ca kaccit te mukhyā yuddhaviśāradaḥ, dhṛṣṭāpadānā vikrāntās tvayā satkṛtya mānitāḥ/ Bharata! I hope you have appointed a trustworthy, loyal, well contented, brave and ever courageous, Senapati of traditional background. If not yet, please do so at once. Further, you might have appointed a Prime Minister who is honest, industrious and public welfare minded who would be ready to kill himself for you! Then kaccij jānapado vidvān dakṣiṇaḥ pratibhānavān, yathoktavādī dūtas te kṛto bhārata paṇḍitaḥ/ Have you appointed ‘Raja dootaaś’ of our kingdom in other friendly kingdoms who should be well read vidvans, diplomatic, and of sharp skills of foreign affairs!

A King of idealism should appoint an Ambassador who is well versed in the art of diplomacy with a countenance of placidity and of expression backed up by proficiency in the subjects of science, commerce and international affairs. More importantly the person has to be honest, skilful and of noble family background. In the context of diplomacy, he has to be an expert in the matters of Sandhi and Vighraha, give and take, intelligent enough of moves and counter-moves, possessive of good memory, fearless and eloquent, as also action oriented with timely and vigilant moves, but essentially upright and reliable. He has to be of military tactness, treasury and financial management, recogniser of allies and opponents, and most significantly has the trust and faith of the King, his allies and the passive. In fact, he should also be able to convince the King about the realities of the Kings and Kingdoms of the countries of his posting but of what his or her King decides to convey in word or deed to the other King however harsh it may be yet couched in a polite yet firm manner. The role of an Ambassador is like a dance on a razor’s edge, yet unhurting and yet with hardness. Just as a Minister possesses the wherewithal to punish or reward, save or ruin, run the treasury to get filled up or exhausted, drive the Kingdom's Economy to prosper or take it to doom, an Ambassador too can perform similar tasks to place the Kingdom to brush it up with the colours representative worthiness of safety for foreign trade, investment, economic collaboration. Sa vidyadasya krityeshu nirgudhengita cheshtitaih, aakaaramingitam cheshtaam bhritye shu cha chikeershitam/ A successful Ambassador has to necessarily train himself with the face, gestures and actions of the counterpart King and so should his deputies too. This is in respect of the designs of the counter part King, his designs and plans of action and most importantly that might adversely affect his Kingdom.] Bharata! Referring to Secret Agencies, are you aware that there are as many as eighteen positions in the Rajyanga or Kingship viz. Mantri-Purohita- Yuva raja-Senapati-Dwaarapaala-Antahpuraadhyaksha-Karagaaraadhyaksha-Dhanadhyasha- Specialists directly appointed by the King himself- Expert Lawyers who argue for and against on behalf of the Kingship-Prosecutor and a three-tier Intelligence officials. Dear brother! Beware of Naastika Siddhantis in the kingdom and spies for outside kingdoms who seek to create unrest in the Ayodhya Kingdom; they all seek to preach our citizens and distort their thinking of the medium of Tarka or logic towards 'nastikata' or Atheism!. Brother! The Kingdom of Ayodhya has had an incredible glory with prosperity, dharma and nyaaya, chaturvarnas, vidwans and maha panditas of higher learning! Trust you are seeking to sustain and preserve its status in Bharata Desha. This Kingdom has been known for Ashvamedha and such maha yagjnas, renowned devalayas, dharma tirtha pradeshas, samaajika utsavas, periodical social meets, ever busy trading and marketing establishments, public parks, fertile and evergreen pastures, excellent agricultural yields, timely rains, and the public of men and women have been disciplined and well contented without social evils of thefts, robberies, etc.; hopefully the same prosperity and all round contentment prevails in the Kingdom. kaccit striyah saṁtvayasi kaccit tās ca surakṣitāḥ, kaccin na śraddadhāsyāsām kaccid guhyam na bhāṣase/ The contentment and safety of women folk of the kingdom invariably decides the definite mark of the fulfillment of a kingdom; Bharata! I am confident that you are making special endeavors to this end. Further make sure of excellent pashu sampada-fearlessness - dhana-dhanya-astha shastra-yantra-shilpa-vaidya disciplines.

Bharata! Make a special note of the proverbial fourteen pitfalls of Kingship:

Nastikata-Asatya bhashana-krodha-pramaada-jnaani purusha nishkramana- aalasya-panchendriya anarogya- raja nirnaya asahita-vipareeta raja nirnaya- apaarambha of nischita kaarya- gupta nirnaya dushprachara- mangalika kaarya anushtana aalasata- akasmaat shatru yudha niraacharana. Maharaja Bharata! A successful King should always beware of dasa varga-pancha varga-chatur varja-sapta varga- ashta varga- and three varga vishayas.

(Lapses of ten categories are hunting animals and birds-play of 'chadaranga'- day sleeping-criticism of others- interest and involvement of illegal sex- madya paana- dancing-singing-instrumental music-and wasteful travels. Sarga One Hundred and Three: Rama-Sita-Lakshmanas cry away at father's death-offerings of tarpana and pinda daana -[Vishleshana on Tapana Vidhaana]
Vishleshana on Tapana Vidhaana

Tarpana Vidhana: Ruk Saamaadrthvaa Vedoktaan Japya mantraan yajushim cha, Japitwaivam tatah kuryaaddevarshi pitru tarpanam/ Tava Vashishtah/ (Vashishtha Maharshi affirmed that even after studying Ruk-Saamaadharvana Vedas, it is essential to recite Pranava and perform tarpana to fructify the knowledge of Vedas. Vishnu Purana emphasized: Shuchi Vastradharah snaato Devarshi Pitru tarpanam, Teshaameva hi tirthena kurveet susamaahitah/ (Only on wearing clean clothes after bathing and poised with unperturbed conscience, Tarpana is to be undertaken thereafter). To Devas only one tarpana/ Jalaanjali each be executed, while to Rishis twice and to Pitru Devas thrice respectively for their satisfaction. Praaggeshu Suranstarpenmanushyaanchaiva madhyatah, Pitramstu dakshinaareshu chaika dwi trijalaanjaleen/ (As prescribed for example in Agni Purana: Tarpana Karya needs to be performed facing East in the Savya Yagnopaveeta position to Devas; to Rishis facing the East again with yagjnpaveeta as a garland but to Pitru Devatas the tarpana should be performed facing south with the yagnopaveeta worn as 'apa savya' or 'Praacheenaa veeti' or in the reverse position reciting 'Swadhaanama tarpayaami'. Pitru Devas would not be contented of tarpana is performed from a higher plane position into water flows nor with wet clothes. In fact, Pitru tarpana needs to be performed with dry clothes only preferably seated on spread over darbhas. Also tarpana be done with water drawn from one vessel and transferred to a smaller vessel into a lower plane but due to the apprehension that a lower plane on the ground might be sullied with hair, ash, coal particles, thorns, and even bones on the ground and hence the tarpana is preferably done on a clean place with darbhas are spread over. Alternatively, tarpana may be done in a large flat plate or container. For performing tarpana only vessels of gold, silver, copper, brass, bronze or any metal vessels may be used but not earthen pots; however neither metal vessels nor hands without darbhas be used for the tarpana. Deva tarpana and Rishi Tarpana needs to be performed along with water mixed with plain rice grains or white tilas. Pitru tarpana needs to be necessarily done with water mixed with black tilas.Deva Tarpana: This tarpana is to satiate Devas and the Devatva or the Divinity that is microcosmically present in all Beings in the Universe. Seated facing the east direction

Sarga One Hundred and Seven: Shri Rama instructs Bharata to return to Ayodhya at once once

Vishleshanas in reference to a) Gayaasura and b) Puta / Prithu Chakravarti

Gayasura:

The legend of Gaya Tirtha is recalled in Agni Purana in the Tirtha Mahatmya: Gayasura, the King of Rakshasaas did fierce Tapasya to Maha Vishnu as the latter granted him the boon of materialising a Maha Tirtha by Gayasura's name. All the human beings and Asura-Daityaadi had the darshan of Gauasura and reached Vaikuntha as who ever had his darshan did not have to visit none else to achieve Vaikuntha. Devas and Bahma Deva approached Vishnu as the latter advised to approach Gayasura to let Brahma and Devas perform yagna over Gayasura's huge head. Gaya was in deep sleep and did not respond but still Brahma and Devas were in the process of executing the Yagna and could not perform 'Purnaahuti' the grand finale of the Yagna was still pending. Meanwhile when Gayasura woke up and wished to get up but could not. The Asura became shaky and tried hard to wriggle out from the fire pit, Vishnu advised Yama dharma Raja to keep a heavy boulder on Gaya's head and occupy the Asura's entire body of some eight km. of length till the purnahuti was over. The heavy boulder itself had a background connection: Maharshi Marichi the son of Brahma Deva was once resting in sleep and instructed his wife called Dharmavata to press his legs and not disturb his sleep other wise she would turn as a boulder. Meanwhile Brahma arrived and the wife faced a dilemma whether she should obey her husband's instruction not to disturb or announce the arrival of Brahma himself. She set aside Marichi's curse even as she faced the eventuality of her turning as a boulder. She gave a return curse to Marichi to have created an awkward situation for her that Marichi would have to face Maha Deva's wrath in some another connection and entered Agni and purified herself performing tapsya for thousand years. Lord Vishnu thus took advantage of the boulder which was blessed with the foot prints of Devas and utilised for Yama Dharma Raja to place it on Gayaasura's head which eventually became famed as Deva Shila-Sarva Deva Swarupa- Sarva Tirtha mayi-and the unique Pujnya Shila. Even after the Shila was placed on his head the Asura was still breathing and hence Vishnu had to place on his 'Gada' or Mace to fully sniff him out by adding his own presence to this Gaya Tirtha. This 'Adi Gada' was the backbone of Gajasura which was eventually turned by Deva's Architect Vishwa karma. The most outstanding Pitru Tirtha in the Universe, to which the Pitru Loka keeps close attention to look forward to the sons of mankind looks forward to Shraddha karmas and Pinda daanas. These Karmas not only redeem the souls of the ancestors by their performance but equally to collect bags of fulfillment to the Shraddha Kartas as far higher proportions manifold.

Putra / Prithu :

Prajapati Anga of Atri Vamsha, a defender of Dharma (Virtue) and an erudite scholar of Shastras was married to Sunitha who also was a follower of virtue and tradition. They were blessed with a son of high virtue called Vena, who on becoming a King, came under the evil influence of an evil muni who followed a Devata called 'Arhan' followed a vicious and immoral way of life and used to preach his 'Praja' (Subjects) not to perform Homas and Yagnas, nor indulge in charities, Vratas and Tirtha Yatras. In fact, he declared that he was Vishnu, Rudra, Brahma, Indra and Devas. The Rishis and Brahmanas were highly upset and undertook a huge procession to the King saying that a King was expected to guide and enforce Dharma, Nyaya (Justice) and discipline but instead Vena was getting self-opinionated by the day. The King shouted angrily that he was Dharma, Nyaya and Punya himself and that he could destroy Earth, throw it under water and break open the skies, if need be! The Rishis and Common men of the Kingdom forced their way to the King, surrounded him, forcibly overpowered and battered him. They screamed and asked him: 'Nishida' or 'sit down' and since then called him 'Nishida!' They rubbed his left thigh with force and out emerged streams of evil Beings like Nishadas, Kirathas, Bheels, Nahalakas, Bhramars, Pulinds and Mlecchas and Rishis were relieved that the King was relieved of sinners from his body. Then they rubbed the King's right hand forcibly and initially came out profuse sweat but later on materialised a 'Maha Purush'-a Unique Personality- and the congregation of Rishis named him King Pruthu and blessed him to herald a Golden Era where the Kingdom was full of propitiousness and Virtue but devoid of 'Akals' (Famines), diseases, untimely deaths, robberies and discontentment anywhere: na durbhiksham na cha Vyadhirnakaala maranam Nrinaam, Sarvey sukhena jeevanti lokaa Dharma paraayanaah! But Chakravarti Prithu decided to redeem his father King Vena from hells. He performed the duty of a son who delivers his father from hellish conditions. The word putra means one who delivers from hell, called 'Put', a worthy son who could save from a hell which is called pum-nāma-naraka and 'tra' means trāyate, or deliver. Hence putra means pum-nāma-narakāt trāyate iti putra or that is the son is expected to deliver the forefathers from the hellish condition of life. (Padma Purana)]

Sarga One Hundred and Ten: Vasishtha traces the geneology of Ikshvaku- Vamsha and asks to uphold its fame and assume Kinghip as the eldest son of Dasharatha

[Vishleshana of Varaha: Brahmanda Purana is quoted: At the Kalpantara Pralaya or the Great Extermination of the Universe, the whole World got submerged in deep water as 'Ekarnava' or a single sheet of Water and the 'Sthaavara Jangamaas' or the Mobile and Immobile Beings were all submerged, then Para Brahma called Narayana, who was of 'Sahasraaksha, Sahasrapaat, Sahasra Shirsha' or of thousand eyes, feet and heads, was resting on the huge surface of water: Apo Naara iti proktaa Apo vai Nara Sunavah, Ayanam tasya taah proktaastena Narayanah smritah/ ('Apah' denotes 'Nara' or water; 'Naaraas' or the children or waves of 'Nara'; and Nara is a Being or Entity ; Nara plus Ayana is Narayana as he who rests on Samsara or water) . Narayana sought to locate Prithvi (Earth) deep down in water and assumed Varaahaavatara or the Incarnation of a Huge Boar like a mountain with ten yojanas of girth and hundred yojanas of height (one Yojana being 12 km), with a body of cloud-like complexion and extreme radiance of many Lightnings, Fire and Sun; making thunderous and high-pitched sounds and having broad shoulders, sharp fangs, white teeth and pointed nails. The YajnaVaraha is described as follows: Diksha Samaapteeshtim damshtriah kratu danto Juhuumukhah, Agni jihvo darbha romaa Brahma seersho Mahatapaah/ Veda skandho havirgandhirhavyakavyaadi vegavaan, Praagvamsha kaayo Dyutimaan naanaa Dikshaabhiranvitah/ Dakshinaa hridayo Yogi Shraddhaa satwa -mayo Vibhuh, Upaakarma ruchischaiva pravagyaavarta bhushanah/ Naanaachhandogati patho guhyopanishad -aasanah, Maayaapatnisahaayo vai Giri shringamivocchrayah/ Aho raatrekshana dharo Vedanga shruti bhushanah, Ajaya gandhah struvastundah Samaghosa swano Mahaan/ Satyadharma mayah Shrimaan Karma vikrama saskrutah, Prayaschitta nakho ghorah Pashujaanurmahaamakha/ Udgaadaantro Homa Lingah Phala beeja mahoushadheeh, Vaadyantaraatmasatrasya naasmikaasomashonitah/ (The Yagna Varaha took up the diksha or Initiation of the Kratu or the Sacrifice with his 'damshttras' or curved fangs and teeth holding the 'Juhu' or the crescent shaped wooden ladle with which to make the offerings of ghee; Agni was his tongue to lap up the Sacrifice; Darbha grasses were the Varaha's hairs; Brahma one of the Chief of 'Ritviks' or the Brahmanas performing the Sacrifice was comparable to Varaha Murti's Head; Vedaas were his shoulders; his body-aroma was his 'havis' or the Sacrificial Offering; the Havya and Kavya or the offerings to Devas and Pitru Devas respectively constituted his body-speed with which the Sacrificial Offerings were made; the 'Praagvamsha' or the East-bound Chamber in which the guests at the Sacrifice were seated was Varaha's kaaya or the spacious physique; He was highly radiant and capable of accepting several Dikshas like the one being performed; He was the Master of Yoga full of Shraddha and Satwa or Sincerity and Resolve; he had Upakarma or extra study of Vedas and an expert in 'Pragvargya' or the Introductory Ceremony to the long-duration Soma Sacrifice; his 'Avarta Bhushana' or the ornamental and circular curls of the boar chest; the representation of various 'Chaandas' or Poetic Meters as his pathway; Upanishads as his seat; his able assistance is Maya as his spouse; his height was that of a mountain peak; his eyes representing Sun and moon and day and night; Vedangas and Shritis were his ear-ornaments; his body smell was that of 'Ajya' or the Ghee offering; Sruva or the sacrificial ladle is like his snout or muzzle; his voice was like the high pitch of the chanting of Sama Veda hymns; 'Udgata' or the elongated Sama Veda hymn was like his entrail or intestines; homa was his Linga or Symbol; fruits and seeds are his testicles; the altar of sacrifice was his heart; He was an Epitome of Satya Dharma and Soma Rasa was his own blood.) Thus Yajna Varaha Deva, as Nasika Soma sonita, dived deep into waters and lifted up Earth, allocated waters into Oceans and Rivers on Earth, materialised Mountains to stabilise the waters thus allocated, broadly created Sapta Dwipas on Earth, materialised Bhurbhuvassuraadi Lokas and their inhabitants on the same pattern as in the previous Kalpas before the Great Pralaya.]

Sarga One hundred and Eighteen: Devis Anasuya and Sita exchange views- Anasuya gives gifts to Sita- Sita describes her 'swayamvara'

Vishleshana on Savitri and Rohini Devi Pativrataas: 1. Sati Savitri: (Refer Sarga Thirty above.)

2: Devi Rohini: As Prajapati Daksha married off all his twenty seven daughters to Soma, the latter was ignoring all the daughters, excepting Devi Rohini. The 27 daughters married to Chandra are Kṛttika, Rohini, Mrigasheersha, Aardra, Punarvasu, Purbabhadrapada, Pushya, Aslesha, Magha, Svaati, Chitra, Purvaphalguni, Hasta, Dhanishtha, Vishaakha, Anuraadha, Jyeshtha, Moola, Purvaashaadha, Uttaraashaadha, Shravana, Uttarpfalguni, Shatabhisha, Uttarabhadrapada, Revati, Ashwini, Bharani. These 27 wives of Chandra are 27 Nakshatras (the constellations) which are on the moon's orbit. The rest of them complained to their father Daksha who reprimanded Soma to behave but Soma ignored the repeated warnings of Daksha. Out of exasperation, Daksha cursed Soma to gradually decline and finally disappear. In the absence of Soma, there were far reaching adverse effects in the Universe. Devas including Vanaspati felt Soma's absence and so did human beings, trees, animals and worst of all medicinal plants, herbs and so on. The Sky was dark and the Stars too lost the shine. Chandra prayed to Lord Shiva for long at Prabhasa Tirtha and since Daksha's curse was irreversible a compromise was made that during Krishna paksha Chandra would wane and wax during Shukla Paksha. However, this formula proved defective as Chandra was sinking in the Ocean causing natural sufferings by way of non availability of herbs and so on and at the request of Devas to Shiva again, Chandra left only with one of the 'Kala', the Lord gracefully wore the Crescent Moon on His 'jataajuta mastaka' for good, enabling Chandra to wane and wax every month ever since! As Devas approached Vishnu, He advised the solution of Churning the Ocean by both Devas and Danavas and latter too agreed to the proposal for the lure of securing 'Amrit'. In the process of churning, Moon was given birth again. This had brought great relief to Devas, human beings whose 'Ekadasha Indriyas' (Eleven Body parts), 'Pancha Bhutas' (Five Elements),

Solah Kshetra Devatas, Trees and Medicines. Even Rudra's head was without Soma and so did water. Lord Brahma blessed Pournima thithi and selected the day for worship to Chandra Deva when fast is viewed propitious along with token amount of money and material as charity. That specific day 'Yava' Bhojan (Barley food) or barley made material is considered to blessed a person with Gyan (Knowledge), radiance, health, prosperity, foodgrains and salvation.]

ESSENCE OF VALMIKI ARANYA RAMAYANA

Sarga One: Shri Rama - Devi Sita-Lakshmanas felicitated in 'Muni ashramas'

[Vishleshana on Bali Vaishva Deva from 'Dharma Sindhu']

[Vishleshana on Bali Vaishva Deva: Vaishwadeva is significant as there are five major sources of 'Jeeva Himsa' called 'Panchasuna': Vaishvadevah prakartavyah Pancha Sunaapanuttaye, Khandani peshani chulli jala kumbhotha maarjani/ ('Khandani' or cutting vegetables etc by the Kitchen Cutter made of iron or sharp metals, Peshani or pounding and pasting appliances, retaining water in and cleaning of vessels; besides washing the material and sweeping and floor cleaning). Vaishwadeva is one way of reducing the impact of killing the 'Pranis' by way of the these main routine means. This Prakarana of Vaishvadeva commences from the mornings but not as in the Agni Karyaas in the evenings. Hence the Sankalpa: Pratassaayam VaishvaDeva karishye/ In fact, there are Pancha Maha Yagnas that are required to be performed on daily basis viz. Brahma Yagna, Bhuta Yagna, Pitru Yagna, and Manushya Yagna. Rigvedis consider three Yagnas viz. Deva Yagna, Bhuta Yagna and Brahma Yagna; Manushya Yagna is to provide food to Human Beings. Griha pakva havishvaannaistaila kshaaraadi varjitaih, Juhuyaatsirpashaabhyaktaih Gruhyegnou loukikey pivaa/ Yasminngnoupachedannam tasmin homo vidhiyate/ (The 'Havyanna' or the food which is cooked at home without oil, salt and spice but made of ghee in the 'Gruhaagni' or Loukigani or that as prepared at Vivaahaadi Homaas after 'Nityouposana' is indeed worthy of Vaishvadeva Karya). Since this Havishaanna is also used for Pitru Yagna and Nitya Shraaddha this is eminently worthy of consumption by Brahmanas. This Vaishvadeva is therefore a sure means of Atma Samskaara and Anna Samskaara. Therefore there would be one Vaishvadeva in a family unit of undivided brothers. If for any reason, this kind of 'Anna paaka' is unavailable, the Vaishvadevaanna might be prepared as of Ekadashi Bhojana made of cooked rice, milk, curd, ghee, fruit and water. Vaishvadeva needs to be done with 'Anna' by hand; if this had to be done by water then it has to be by 'Anjali'. But Kodravam chanakam maasham masuram cha kulutthakam, Kshaaram cha lavanam sarvam Vaishwadevevi varjitam/ (The specified pulses, spices and salt are forbidden for use in the Vaishvadeva Karya.) In case the Kartha leaves station then he should commission a Ritvik to perform the needful. Alternatively he could observe the Karya wherever he goes out of his house. Rigvedis and Taittiriyaas consider it necessary to perform Vaishvadeva both in the day time and the night; they observe it by preparing the Lokaagni Paaka or at Vivahas etc. as described above. When Vaishvadeva is done twice a day/night, then the Vaishnavites light up sixteen or five 'Deepaas' or Lights. After providing various 'Upacharaas' or Services, then they offer Naivedya to Bhagavan Vishnu with the same food meant for consumption of the family and a part of it is given as Viashvadeva. Vishnorniveditaannena yashtavyam Devataantaram, Pitrubhyaschaapi taddeyan tadaanantyaaaya kalpatay/ (The naivedya offered to Bhagavan Vishnu is what should be offered to other Devataas; in fact this 'Prasaada' or the 'Sesha Naivedya' or the left over food is apt for offering to Pitru Devataas also as that offer would secure 'Ananta Punya'. In this context, a Vaishnava is stated to have assumed the 'Diksha' or Mantrika Discipline from a Guru of the 'Upadesha' of the 'Ashtaakshara Mantra' and its Japa. Those who are in the ‘Vaishnava Parampara’ or of Vaishnava Following do strictly observe regulations of Upavasa Dharmaas on Ekadashis and many such self restraints. One might wonder that after all a person could be qualified as Vaishnava only if he observes severe procedures and conventions like the observance of ‘Pancha Raatraas’ and so on. This query is replied that it is no doubt observance of Pancha Raatraas etc. are no doubt great qualifications to become a Vaishnava, but there are Vaishnavites among Kshatriyas and Vaishyas too as they do observe Gayatrupadesha-Adhyayana-Daana-Japa-Yagna and such normal Dharmaas effortlessly and at the same perform their Varnaashrama dharmaas like those of Kshatriya’s Administration and Vaishya’s business duties. They do imbibe qualities of Shuchi, Snaana, Sutakatwa, Shraaddha vidhis etc from Vaishnava Brahmanas. Ashvalaayana Vaishvadeva Vidhi: Ashvalaayanans perform Vaishvadeva with the Sankalpa: Mamaatmaanna samskaara panchasoonaa janita dosha pariharadwaara Parmeshwara preetyartham Praataraishta devam Saayam Vaishvadevam cha sahatamtrena karishye/(I shall perform the morning and evening Vaishvadeva to gratify Paramatma to offset the blemishes arising out of Anna Samskara and Panchasoonaa vidhis. Then prepare ‘Paakaanna’ in pot by lighting up Pachaagni named Paavaka and on reciting Chatvaari Shringaa and after Prokshana with water all around the ‘Agni Kunda’ saying Vishvaaninah, mix up with ghee and curd and make three parts, offer with right hand one part for Devata Homa uttering Suryaaya swaaha, Suryaayedam namama, Prajapataye, Somaaya, Vanaspataye, Agnishomaabhyam, Indraganibhyam, Dyaavaa Prithivi -bhyam, Dhanvantaraye Indraaya, Vishvepa- Devehbyah Brahmaney; these are ten ‘Prataravaishva Devaahutis’. Like wise the ‘Saayam Vaishva -Deveeyas’ of Agnaye swaaha, Prajapataye etc. are done. Thus twenty Ahutis are offered to Agni deva and perform ‘Parisha -muhana’ around the Homa Kunda with water by way of Sparsha and ‘Paryukshana’ by way of prokshana saying Om chamey. Then the ‘Upasthyaana Karya’ or terminal task be done. This is the procedure of Deva Yagna. Bali Harana: Out of the remainder ‘Anna Bhaga’, a portion be kept on clean Bhumi around the Homa Kunda and offer to Agni uttering Suryaaya swaaha Suryaaya idam namah; in this fashion, there should be sixteen Ahutis from the portions kept on the East side with space in between and utter: Adbhya swaaha, Oshadhi vanaspatibhyah, Gruhaabhyah, Griha Devataabhyah, Vaastu Devataabhyah/ Then continue the Ahutis from the Eastern side as follows: Indraaya and to the North direction Indrapurushebyah; to Yama purushebyah towards Sky on the Southern side; Varuna Purushebyah to the Eastern side; Soma Purushebyah on northern side; and Brahmaney, Brahma Purushebyah, VishwebhyoDevehbyah Sarvebhyo Devehbyah, Divaachaa –ribhyah/Like wise Saayamkaala Vaishva Deva Bali harana too be performed. Bhuta Yagna: The third part of the Anna Bhaga is offered with ‘Praacheenaa veeti’ addressed to Yama uttering Swadhaa Pitrubhyah and on the Southern side Pitruya idam namah to Pitru Devatas. Some persons perform Bali Harana in a circular manner; Balaavanudhrutey naadyaannodhareccha Swayam Bali/ (Before the Bali daana none in the family should consume food, nor one should perform Bali by him self). Pitru Yagna: After the Bali daana, the Karta should have the homefront done up with Jala Prokshana and offer the Pitru Pindas in different directions to enable crows to eat the same: Aindra Vaaruna Vaayavyaa Yaamyai Nairrutikaaschaye, tey Kaakaah pratigruhnantu Bhumyaam pindam mayojjitham/ (May the Pindas kept on Bhumi in Indra-Yama-Nirriti-Varuna-Vayu Dishas be consumed away by crows by way of the remainders of the Pitru Yagnaanna). Further there are two ‘Shunakas’ or dogs in the abode of Lord Yama named ‘Shyama Shabalaas’ and I offer them these Pindas with the supplication to them to safeguard us in our paths! Having done this, the Karta should wash his feet, perform Achamana and having recited Shaantaa Prithivi and Vishnu Smarana and enter his house. Manushya Yagna: The Karta should apportion one ‘Atithi bhojana’ or sixteen or at least four fistfuls of

Anna reciting: Sanakaadi Manushyobhoy hanteydam na mama/ This might be given away to mendicants

Sarga Eleven: Rama Sita Lakshmanas visit Panchapsara Tirtha and Maandikarana ashrama and after visiting other Muni Ashramas too, visit the ashram of the brother of Agastya Maharshi who lauds the glory of Agastya

Vishleshanas on a) Creation of Agasthya and Vasishtha as brothers by MitraVaruna from Urvashi and b) Agastya Muni dries up the Ocean and enables to destroy the demon Kalakeya- Matsya-Padma Puranas respectively

Once Indra despatched Vayu and Agni to destroy Danavas and having successfully killed thousands of the enemies, ignored some Daityas like Taraka, Kamalaaksha, Paravasu, Kaladamshttra and Virochana as they fled away and concealed in deep Seas. The Danavas who hid themselves kept on tormenting human beings as also Devatas eventually. Indra ordered that Vayu and Agni should dry up the Sea water, especially to kill dangerous Diatyas like Jambhasura, but the both the Devas argued that in the process of drying up the Seas even in a minor manner there would be serious havoc caused to crores of Jeevas. Indra was annoyed at their argument and cursed them to fall down on Earth from Swarga and both the Devas entered into a 'Jala Kumbha' or Water Pitcher as a single body. Meanwhile, Sages Nara and Narayana were in Tapasya on Gandhamadana Mountain, and Indra was concerned that they might not be a threat to his chair; he despatched a few Apsaras to the Mountain along with Kamadeva but their attempts to tempt the Maharshis failed. As the Apsaras continued to be stationed there, Narayana Rishi created a damsel of exquisite attraction from his thighs and named her Urvashi; he desired that Apsaras should realize that their beauty was nothing compared to whom they could materialise as Urvashi and they could not possibly tempt Nara Narayan Maharshis, after all! Mitra (Sun God) and Varuna (Rain God) happened to see the damsel and could not resist the fall of their combined semen of Mitrarvaruna which was deposited in the same Jala Kumbha (pitcher) that fell down from the Swarga and thus Agastya was born as Kumbha Sambhava. Vasishtha too was reborn from the pitcher earlier since he felt offended when King Nimi did not properly attend to him as he visited the King and hence gave a curse to Nimi to live as 'Videha' or without body, but the King too gave a return curse; both Nimi and Vasishtha approached Lord Brahma who solved the problem by retaining Nimi's life in his Eyes and Vasishtha to be reborn to Mitrarvaruna since the latter's semen fell in the pitcher on seeing Apsara Urvashi. Subsequently Agastya married Lopamudra, absorbed the entire Ocean in his Kamandulu to isolate the Danavas to enable Indra to kill the notorious Danavas and released it later as his urine and was thus stated to be salty!; he also razed down the ego of Vindhya Mountain by making him bend for ever thus banning the Mountain to stoop for ever till the Sage's return which never happened as he continued to stay down the Vindhyas. There was also the legend attributed to Agastya about the Daitya brothers Ilvala and Vatapi, who knew the Mrita Sanjeevani Mantra; they would assume the forms of Brahmanas and seek the passers by to tempt them to a feast of goat-meat, and after consuming the meal ask Vatapi to come out and Vapati would come out piercing through the tummy of the stranger and the brothers would enjoy his meat. But Agastya Muni was too clever to bless the good food saying 'Vatapi! Jeerno bhava' and Vatapi was fully digested even before Ilvala was able to recite the Mrita Sanjeevani Mantra! [Till date, devotees recite 'Aditya Hridaya' scripted by Agastya Muni. Vasishtha, the Brahmarshi was the arch-enemy of Rajarshi Viwswamitra ever since the latter claimed Nandini the Celestial Cow and fought a battle in which Viswamitra was defeated. The enmity continued till once both the Rishis cursed each other to become birds and finally Brahma had to intervene and convert them back as human beings]. Agastya Muni satisfied Maheswara with ruthless penance for several years and secured boons of longevity for twenty five crores of years as long as thousand lives of Brahmas. The boon also covered that whosoever worshipped him for seven days for seven years with 'Arghya' or offering water addressing the Muni along with charities of a white cow and calf, silver vessel, and white clothes as follows would be blessed with good health, good Form, and contentment: Kaashapushpa prateekaasha Agni Maruta Sambhava, Mitraavarunayoha putra kumbhayoney

Namostutey/ The first Arghya would provide Good Form, the second one Bhuvarloka and the third Swarloka.(Matsya Purana)

Agastya Muni dries up the Ocean and enables to destroy the demon Kalakeya: In the vicinity of Pushkar Tirtha were 'Ashramas' of illustrious Maharshis like Agastya. A highly vily and valiant Danava named Kalakeya was in battle with Devas for many years and he kept another mighty Danava called Vritrasura as a shield in between him and Devas. With folded hands, Devas approached Brahma to get rid of Vritrasura as well as Kalakeya. Brahma suggested that Vritrasura was invincible due to unprecedented boons given by Parameswara and the only way out was to approach Sage Dadheechi and beg him for his back-bone which could materialize a mighty 'Vajrayudha' which alone could destroy Vritrasura. Devas prayed to Sage Dadheechi and keeping in view the holy task of killing Vritrasura, the Sage agreed to sacrifice his backbone and hence his life. Devas approached Vishvakarma to create Vajrayudha. A fierce battle between Vritrasura backed by Kalakeya on the one hand and Indra armed with Vajrayudha as well as the full force of Devas followed. Vritrasura made such frightening screams that went shivers to Earth, the 'Dishas' (Directions), the Antariksha (Sky) and the Planets. Indra utilised the newly made Vajrayudha and felled down the huge body of Vritrasura to the ground. The demoralised 'Asuras' ran helter-skelter with a phenomenon called Vritrasura and finally took shelter in the deep Ocean. Kalakeya too hid in the Ocean and over a period of time, reformulated the Danavas who resorted to nightwarfare and nocturnal killings of lakhs of human beings in sleep and once again threatened the balance of power between the Danavas and Devas. Indra and Devas approached Lord Vishnu and implored him to save them, the humanity as also the four kinds of 'Srishti' viz. 'Andajas' or those born of Eggs, 'Svedajas' or those born of body sweat, 'Jarayuja' or those born of womb, and 'Udbhuja' or born of germination. Lord Vishnu told the Devas that the most dangerous Asura Kalakeyi along with his huge numbers of Danavas who concealed themselves in the deep waters of the Ocean were gradually killing all kinds of species mentioned above in the nights and the only way of exposing the Danavas in very large numbers would be to completely dry up the Oceans by taking out the water; Vishnu further declared that the only Sage who was powerful enough to dry up the Oceans was Mahatma Agastya, the son of Mitravaruna. Devas then approached Agastya Muni and prayed to him that in the past too, the Muni was kind enough to have averted crises for saving the very existence of the Universe in highly critical situations like when Nahusha occupied the chair of Indra on highly temporary basis and created embarrassment and havoc in the worlds and punished him subsequently; and when Vindhya grew up in height compared with Meru Mountain obstructing the passage of Surya and subdued Vindhya by asking him to bend in reverence and not allowing to stand up till date. Devas made to instant request to Agastya Muni to drink up the water of the Ocean exposing Kalakeya and followers so that they were trapped and destroyed at once by Devas. The dried up Ocean was refilled by another despatch of Ganga by a repeat performance by Bhagiratha. (Padma Purana)]

Vishleshana on Devi Arundhati

[Vishleshana on Arundhati:

As per the Bhagavata Purana, Arundhati is the eighth among the nine daughters of Kardama and Devahuti. She is the grandmother of Parashara and the great-grandmother of Vyasa. Shiva Purana describes her as being Sandhya, the mind-born daughter of Brahma, in a previous birth. On instruction of Vashista, Sandhya pleased Shiva by penance in order to purify herself from passion, and Shiva asked her to jump into Medhatithi's fire. She was then born as Medhatithi's daughter and married Vashista. The Mahabharata describes Arundhati as an ascetic who used to give discourses to even the Sapta Rishis. In one of the rituals of a Hindu weddings, the groom shows the bride the double stars of Vashista and Arundhati as an ideal couple, symbolic of marital fulfilment and loyalty. The couples are asked to look up the constellation symbolizing conjugal love and affection.]

Sarga Fourteen: On the way to Panchavati, Rama-Sita-Lakshmanas meet the Great Grudhra Raja Jatayu who vividly explains the family background of Jatayu

[Vishleshana on Daksha Prajapati and Kashyapa from Puranas

a) Daksha Prajapati had the key role in the legend of Chandra Deva. Daksha and Devi Asikli had thousands of sons who were named the Shavalashvas and Haryashvas. While Shavalashvas also went off to explore Paramatma 'in cognito' never to return, Daksha and Asikli were distressed that Haryasvas were instigated by Sage Narada to disappear and proposed to kill him but for the intervention of Lord Brahma. Daksha offered prayers to Paramatma to purify his thoughts at a place known as 'Aghamarshana' near a mountain in Vindhya Range. The latter was pleased and instructed to lead a family life and carry on his normal duties. Accordingly, Daksha married Prajapati Panchajana's daughter 'Aksini' and begot ten thousand sons. As instructed by their father Daksha, the sons decided to perform austerities to beget children and reached a place named Narayanasaras, where River Sindhu joins the Sea. Sage Narada appeared there and mind-washed them about the futility of begetting progeny and getting involved with family lives and the perennial problems; he advised that the real purpose of a useful life would be to follow the path of God-consciousness instead. Narada gave the Theory of Creation and Destruction- the chain of births and deaths, and the futility of pursuing such a life. The mind-setting of Narada was so convincing that they followed the short-cut spiritual way rather than the circuitous and too familiar family route to God. Being furious at what had been done by Narada to his sons, Daksha cursed Narada that henceforth the latter would be a globe trotter and would never be settled and static, much less as a family person. Narada in turn could have given a curse to Daksha but restrained in the interest of the next generation to observe the Grihasti's life's route to salvation. (Maha Bhagavata)

b) Daksha couple gave birth to sixty eight, ten of whom were married to the Dharma Deva and thirteen Kashyapa Maharshi, twenty-seven daughters were married to Soma or Chandra. The remaining daughters were married to the Arishtanemi, Vahuputra, Angirasa and Krishashva Maharshis. The ten daughters who were married to the Dharma Deva were named Arundhati, Vasu, Yami, Lamba, Bhanu, Marutvati, Sankalpa, Muhurta, Sadhya and Vishva. Arundhati's children were the material objects of the world. Vasu's children were the eight gods known as the Vasus. Their names were Apa, Dhruva, Soma, Dhara, Salila, Anala, Pratyusha and Prabhasa. Anala's son was Kumara. Because Kumara was brought up by goddesses known as the Kritikas, he came to be called Kartikeya. Prabhasa's son was Vishvakarma. Vishvakarma was skilled in architecture and the making of jewelry. He became the architect of the gods. Sadhya's children were the gods known as Sadhyadevas and Vishva's children were the gods known as Vishvadevas. The twenty-seven daughters of Daksha who were married to Soma are known as the nakshatras (stars). Kashyapa married thirteen of Daksha's daughters. Their names were Aditi, Diti, Danu, Arishta, Surasa, Khasa, Surabhi, Vinata, Tamra, Krodhavasha, Ila, Kadru and Muni. Aditi's sons were the twelve gods known as the adityas. Their names were Vishnu, Shakra, Aryama, Dhata, Vidhata, Tvashta, Pusha, Vivasvana, Savita, MitraVaruna, Amsha and Bhaga. Diti's sons were the daityas (demons). They were named Hiranyaksha and Hiranyakashipu, and amongst their descendants were several other powerful daityas like Bali and Banasura. Diti also had a daughter named Simhika who was married to a danava named Viprachitti. Their offspring's were terrible demons like Vatapi, Namuchi, Ilvala, Maricha and the Nivatakavachas. The hundred sons of Danu came to be known as danavas. The danavas were thus cousins to the daityas and also to the adityas. In the danava line were born demons like the Poulamas and Kalakeyas. Arishta's sons were the Gandharvas (singers of heaven). Surasa gave birth to sarpas, the snakes. Khasa's children were the Yakshas (demi-gods who were the companions of Kubera, the god of Wealth) and the Rakshasas. Surabhi's descendants were cows and buffaloes. Vinata had two sons named

Aruna and Garuda. Garuda became the king of the birds. Tamra has six daughters. From these daughters were born owls, eagles, vultures, crows, water-fowl, horses, camels and donkeys. Krodhavasha had fourteen thousand children known as nagas (snakes). Ila gave birth to trees, creepers, shrubs and bushes. Kadru's sons were also known as nagas or snakes. Among the more important of Kadru's sons were Ananta, Vasuki, Takshaka and Nahusha. Muni gave birth to the Apsaras (dancers of heaven). Diti's children (daityas) and Aditi's children (Adityas) continually fought amongst themselves. On one particular occasion, Devas succeeded in killing many of the demons. Thirsting for revenge, Diti began to pray to her husband, Kashyapa that she be given birth to a son who would kill Indra, the king of the Devas. Kashyapa found it difficult to refuse his wife outright but gave a condition that she would have to bear the son in your womb for a hundred years. Diti resolved to do so but Indra came to know about Diti's resolve and was waiting for an opportunity to save himself. There was an occasion when, tired after her prayers, Diti went to sleep without first washing her feet. This was an unclean act and it gave Indra the required opportunity. He adopted a miniscule form and entered Diti's womb. With his weapon vajra, he sliced up the baby inside the womb into seven parts. The baby naturally began to cry at the pain. Indra kept on saying, 'ma ruda' that is, 'don't cry.' But the baby, or rather its seven parts, would not listen. Indra thereupon sliced up each of the seven parts into seven more sections, so that there were forty-nine sections in all. When these forty-nine sections were born, they came to be known as the Maruts, from the words - ma ruda- that Indra had addressed them. Since Diti had not been able to adhere to the conditions her husband had set, the Maruts did not kill Indra. They instead became Indra's followers or companions, and were treated as Devas. (Brahma Purana) .

c) Daksha and his wife Prasuti had 24 daughters. The names of these 24 daughters are Sraddha (faith), Srilakshmi (prosperity), Dhriti (steadiness), Tushti (resignation), Pushti (thriving), Medha (intelligence), Kriya (action, devotion), Buddhika (intellect), Lajja (modesty), Vapu (body), Santi (expiation), Siddhika (perfection), Kirtti (fame), Khyati (celebrity), Sati (truth), Sambhuti (fitness), Smriti (memory), Priti (affection), Kshama (forgiveness), Sannati (humility), Anasuya (without jealousy), Urjja (energy), Swaha (offering), and Swadha (oblation). Of these, the 13 married to Dharma are: Shraddha, Srilakshmi, Dhriti, Tushti, Pushti, Medha, Kriya, Buddhi, Lajja, Vapu, Santi, Siddhi, Kirtti. The other eleven are Khyati married to Bhrgu, Sati to Shiva, Sambhuti to Marichi, Smriti to Angiras, Priti to Pulastya, Kshama to Pulaha, Sannati to Kratu, Anasuya to Atri, Urjja to Vasishtha, Swaha to Agni, and Swadha to Pitris. Vaastu Deva's 'Pada Chinhas' or foot prints should be set up and the 'Karta' should do 'pradakshinas' (circumambulation) around the foot-prints. It is stated that water with the powder of Munga, Ratna and Suvarna should be sprinkled while designing the 'Pada-Chihnaas'. Incidentally, the signs of Vaastu should never be ash, lit up firesticks, nails, skins, horns, bones, and skull as some ill-informed persons tend to do so and such material would lead to distress, danger and difficulties. Vasanta Season is dominated by Vasu Devatasas instructed by Savitu as at the beginning of the Samvatsara and heralding colours, dresses, flowers and freshness all around and with plentiful water and Nature. The Spring season beckons relatives and friends to home with good food and gifts. In Greeshma the summer season scorches earth with heat asking for light dresses in white as Rudra and his gana devats dominate and prepares earth for Parjanya and rains ushering diseases like cold, jaundice and so on. Yet, this is when crops are abundant and fruits in variety are aplenty. All the same rains the future of food supplies for the year hence calls for ploughing, planning and hard work.]

[Vishleshana on the Sacred River Godavari and the excellence of bathings in the River:

Tato Gadaavarim praapya nitya siddha nishevitaam, Rajasuya- maapnoti Vayu Lokam cha gacchati/ (Maha Bharata extols the Mahatmya of Gautami River as the everlasting provider of Siddhis besides the maha phala of performing Raja sua Yagna and bestowing the Vayu Loka prapti). Brahma Purana explains further: Amritam Jahnavi toyam swarnamuchyate, Amritam gobhavam chaajyamamritam Soma yevacha, Gangaayaa vaarinaajyena hiranyena tathaiva cha, Sarvebhyopyaadhikam divyamaritam Goutami jala./ (It is stated that Ganges water is like gold, it is also said that pancha gavyas, Soma Yagnas are more valuable, but far more than Ganges water or gold, or even the pancha gavyas and Soma Yagnas, Godavari water is the best Amritam ever). Sapta Godavarim snaatwaa niyato niyataashanah, Maha punyamavaapnoti Devalokam cha gacchati/ (Those who bathe in and drink the waters of ‘Sapta Godavari dhaaras’- comprising Vasishtha, Kaushiki, Vriddha Goutami, Goutami, Bharadwaaji, Atreyi and Tulya- are indeed blessed with Maha Punya and attain Deva Lokas).

Details of Gautami Ganga (Godavari River) and its magnificence are detailed in Brahma Purana in a full chapter as Maharshi Gautam was indeed responsible to have meditated intensely for several years and pleased the ever merciful Maha Deva to let the flows of the celestial water come down to Earth in the form of Godavari as narrated here under: As Bali Chakravarti’s son of the Sankalpa Jala to donate the proverbial Three Feet to Vamana Deva fell on Shiva’s jataajuta, there were too recipients of that Sacred Water on Earth viz. a Maharshi called Gautama and King Bhagiratha of Surya Vamsha. Thus Ganga from Shiva Jatajuta took two manifestations, one as Ganga and another as Gautami. While Bhagirathi Ganga’s origin as was materialized by King Sagara’s descendant Bhagiratha and his tenacious efforts by meditation to Vishnu, Ganga Devi and Parameswara was well described in various Puranas, detailed account was provided in Brahma Purana about Gautami Ganga or the Dakshina Ganga. When Gautama reached atop Kailasha Mountain, he extolled Parama Shiva and the latter was pleased with the Maharshi’s Tapasya, Bhakti, Vrata and Stuti and gave Darshan to Gautama. As Mahadeva asked the Maharshi as to what was his wish, Gautama requested Bhagavan that a part of Ganga that was absorbed in Shiva jataajuta be please spared to fall on Brahmagiri so that in the interest of devotees who crave for a Sacred River, Ganga the Great Purifier should flow at least before enter the Sea and the Public would get a chance to sanitise themselves of their sins atleast at that Place. Shiva readily agreed to Gautami’s request in Public interest in that Region and affirmed that Gautami Ganga would most certainly be a very popular and Sacred River; as the prayed to Parama Paavani Ganga to descend from Maha Deva’s jataajuta, he first took her to wash Bhagavan Traimbeskeswara’s feet and requested Bhagavan to prescribe the Puja Vidhi of Bhagavan. At the outset a devotee was required to perform Nandimukha Shraddha, satisfy Brahmanas with Bhojana Dakshinas, and take holy bath in Godavari, distribute Vastras and cash to Sadhus and the Poor and practice japa- homa- Puja as prescribed and thus complete the Tirtha Yatra with the Parama Manthra OM Namassivaaya with veneration and faith. Also perform Snaana and Puja at the Confluence Points of Trishna, Bhimarathi and Tungabhadra. Maha Deva blessed the sprawling Gautami and hailed it as his personal favourite with several names such as Maheswari, Ganga, Gautami, Vaishnavi, Godavari, Nanda, Sunanda, Kamadayani, Brahma Teja Samaaneeta and Sarva Paapa Pranashini. Brahma described to Narada Muni about various Sacred Tirthas that came up on the banks of the long Gautami Ganga : Vaaraahi Tirtha at Triambaka Kshetra was the gift of Varahaavatara of Vishnu who killed a Raakhasa named Sindhusena who defeated Indra and other Devas and obstructed the performance of Yagnas-the life line of Devas, the fruits of which were discarded in Rasatala; the blood of the Daityas, Danavas and Rakshasas headed by Sindhusena was washed in the Rasatala Ganga and Maha Yagnas were conducted again where Vaaraaha Tirtha was originated. Another Tirtha called Kushaavarta came to be formed in Triambaka to enable worship to Pitra Shraarthas and Tarpanas that emerged from Nilaparvatas in the Region popularly known as Nila Ganga. Kapota Tirtha had the back- ground of a hunter who was in the habit of killing several animals and caged many birds for his food daily; once he was caught badly in severe rain and rested under a Banyan Tree when he saw a male bird on the tree recognized a female bird in the hunter’s net; as the male bird found that the hunter was shivering with cold and suffering the pangs of hunger. The female bird inside the net requested the male bird on the tree to collect figs and some fire from a distance by its beak holding a fig and thus producing a fig-lit fire to jump in and satisfy his hunger and warm up his body- shiver from the fire! The hunter was ashamed of his past killings and was taught a lesson as he prayed to Mahadeva to absolve him of his past sins and converted himself as a saint eventually. Later on as he died, Bhagavan granted the Kapota, the Kapoti and the Hunter-converted as Saint and a Sacred Titha came up as a Symbol of Sacrifice by the Kapota birds and the penance of the Hunter! The Kapota Tirtha snaan is till date known as a Provider of Ashwamedha Yagna Phala and Salvation. The origin of Dashaashwamedha Tirtha was that a King called Bhouvan desired to perform Ten Ashwamedha Yagnas simultaneously and engaged Kashyapa Muni for the purpose but there were some hurdles or other although tried many Tirthas like Prayaga and Kashyapa made an appeal to Brahma who recommended Gautami banks in Dakshina Bharata and finally succeeded performing the Ten Yagnaas side by side and after successful completion organized Anna daanaas to lakhs of poor persons and gave away Brahamana daanaas. It is stated that till date the Tirtha continued to be famed for Yagnas and Annadaanas and those who performed sacred bathings at the Tirtha would secure Yagna Phalas. The background of Paishacha Tirtha on the banks of Godavari related to Kesari the illustrious follower of Shri Rama along with other Vaanaraas of Kishkindha headed by Sugriva. Kesari had two wives viz. Anjana and Adri, both being Apsaras cursed by Indra to become a female monkey and a female cat respectively in the form of Mountains. But for their faces both the women had attractive physiques. As both the Devis approached Agastya Muni the latter blessed them and Devi Anjana gave birth to Hanuman Deva with the blessings and Amsha of Vaayu Deva and Devi Adri gave birth to a King of Piscachaas with the blessings and of Nirruti Deva. The Paishacha Tirtha thus came to name and fame and not far from it known as Hanuma Tirtha and Vrishakapi Tirtha which enjoyed considerable popularity as Hanuman had been a symbol of intrepidity, invincibility and unflinching loyalty who continued to be an Ever-living and legend in the Immortal Epic of Ramayana. Brahma affirmed that Pancha Tirtha was the Point of Confluence of his own progeny viz. Savitri, Gayatri, Shraddha, Medha and Saraswati and these were all connected to Bhagavati Ganga; snaanaas in Pancha Tirtha, followed by Pujas and Daanaas would fully relieve several problems and insurmountable difficulties are overcome as though those never existed. All along the banks of Gautami Ganga were dotted several Tirthas of renown due their association of Devas, human beings, Maharshis and of Rakshasaas, Apsaras, who were all the Great Devotees of the Almighty despite their erstwhile past or because of it. Such Tirthas included Kshudha Tirtha, Ahalya Tirtha, Ashva Tirtha, Bhanu Tirtha, Aruna-Varuna sangama, Garuda Tirtha, Govardhana Tirtha, Indra Tirtha, Rumna Vimochana Tirtha, Chakra / Dadhichi Muni Tirtha, Pancha Tirtha, Pururava Tirtha, Naga Tirtha, Maatru Tirtha, Avighna Tirtha, Sesha Tirtha, Shanaishchara Tirtha, Soma Tirtha, Dhanya Tirtha, Vidarbha Sangama and Revati Sangama Tirthas, Shri Rama Tirtha and so on. All these Tirthas provide multiple benefits of self-confidence, courage, knowledge and sin-demolishing. While the various Tirthas have been described as above in Brahma Purana, those mentioned in Maharashtra are identified include: Panchavati cluster or Rama Temples, Naroshankar Temple, Sundar Narayana Temple, Modakeshwara Temple, Gangeshwara Veda Mandir and Mukti dhaam Temple all in Nashik itself; besides Ekanatha Shrine in Paithan etc. In Andhra Pradesh, the Tirthas on the banks of Godavari are the famed Annavaram Satya Narayana Temple, Dwaraka Tirumala, Draksha Rama, Kotilinga Pushkara, exclusive Shani Temple in Konaseema, Bhadrachala Rama Mandir etc.]

Dreams of hair, fire, ash, serpents or dried up river; crooked nose, long ears, weeping left eye, a metallic face, black tongue, riding camels and donkeys bound to Southern direction, blinded eyes and deaf ears, upward eyesight, etc. are portends of early death.]

[Vishleshanaas as per Essence of Valmiki Bala Ramayana vide Sargas Twenty Nine and Seventy respectively on Bali Chakravarti and Nahusha respectively:

Bali Chakravarti:

Having been trained in all these disciplines, Vamana Deva had one fine morning left for the Yagna Shaala of Bali Chakravarti as the latter was executing a Sacred Yagna while carrying his mat, danda /stick, chhatra / umbrella and kamandulu / water vessel. Danava Guru Shukracharya was aware that Vishnu Deva in the form of Vamana Murti was arriving at the Yagna and briefed Bali Chakravarti to be extremely careful as Vishnu was a suave and highly talented person to put words in the mouths of the opponents. The Guru reminded Chakravarti that the latter denied the age-old practice of rights to yagna’s shares to Devataas and that Vamana Murti might as well ask for the revival of the practice but those shares were now enjoying by Danava Chiefs. Bali replied to Danava Guru that in case Vishnu in the incarnation of Vamana Murti came and requested for any thing then how could a King say ‘no’ to it! Bali told the Danava Guru: Brahmanaachaarya! How could I deny any body requesting me for a favour! And if that Supreme Deva asked me for a charity, then what else would be the alternative! While Parameswara received the fruits of Vrataas, Upavaasaas, and so on from one and all, and if that Parameswara himself asked a boon from me, could there be a greater fortune to me! When even an ordinary person approached me for a favour, then too that could not be denied by a King; then when Narayana himself asked for it, could such an opportunity presented itself, this chance could never indeed be missed. Even if there are difficulties in executing a charity, the value of charity would get multiplied and ‘Veera purushaas’ would never deter from performing the deed) Having said the above, Bali asked Shukraachaarya:

Yatagjnaatwaa Munisreshtha! Daanavighna karenamey, Naiva Bhavyam Jagannaatheey Govidey samupastitheey! (By understanding the above, Munisreshtha! Please do not create ‘Daana Vighnaas’ or hurdles in the execution of the Charity!). As Vamana Deva arrived at the Yagna shaala, Bali welcomed him, offered ‘Arghya’, ‘Aasana’, Puja and offered him limitless gold, jewellery, elephants, horses, cows, women, clothes, bunches of villages or townships or whatever would be his wish! Vamana Deva replied smilingly: Mamagnisharanaarthaaya dehi Rajan Padatrayam, Suvarnagraamaratnaadi tadarthibhyah pradeeyataam/ (Raja! Please provide to me three feet of land to enable me to set up an Agni- Shaala). Bali said that after all three feet would be nothing as he could ask for a lakh of feet which could be given away, but Vamana Deva replied that he was indeed satisfied with that much of Bhumi and if the King were to offer more he might as well provide to the other needy! Bali Chakravarti readily agreed not understanding the implication and as the deed of Daana was being executed and Vamana Deva extended his hand to the King and expanded his Vamana Rupa gradually immediately: Instantly, Vamana Murti displayed his Virat Swarupa: Chandra and Surya were his two Eyes, Shy was his head, Prithvi his feet, Pishachaas were his foot-fingers, Gruhyakaas were his hand fingers, Vishwa Deva Ganaas were in his jaanus /knees, Sadhyas were his janghaas, Yakshaas were his nails, Apsarsaas were his palm lines, Nakshatras were his Eye sight, Surya kiran as were his hairs, Stars were his body hairs, Maharshiganaas were in the hair roots, Vidishas were his hands, Dishas were his ears, Ashwini Kumars were his faculty of hearing, Vayu was his nose, Chandra Deva was his joking faculty, Dharma Deva was his thinking capacity, Satya was his voice and Saraswati was his tongue, Deva Mata Aditi was his neck, Vidya was his valiyaas or long poles; Pushas were his eye brows, Swarga dwar was his anus, Vaishvanara his face, Prajapati his vrushanaas, Param Brahma was his heart, Kashyapa Muni was his Pumstwa, Vasu Devata was his back, Marutganaas were his Sandhis, Rudra was his Vakshasthala, Mahaarnavaa was his Dhairya, Gangharvas were in his stomach; Lakshmi, Medha, Dhruti, Kaanti and all Vidyaas were in his 'Kati Pradesha'; the luster and radiance in the total Universe as also the Tapo teja or the power of meditation was the reflection of the magnificence of Natayana; Vedas and Scriptures and the huge Yagnaas and the Sacred Deeds of the Virtuous like Maharshis and Brahmanas were all inside in his 'kukshi' or belly. On viewing the Paramatma's 'Virat Swarupa', the so called 'Mahaasuraas' referred to earlier in ignorance by Chakravarti Bali before Prahlada's curse to him got burnt off like flies before a gigantic out break of Fire! Having thus occupied the Universe in totality including the sub-terrain Sapta Paatalaas, Vamana Deva stated that since Bali took the water in his hand and donated the THREE FEET of Land, and blessed him to be the King of the Sapta Paatalaas and granted him long life till the end of Manvantara of the on-going Vaisawata Manu. He also blessed Bali that all the 'Homa Phalas' at the time of Shraddhas to be performed even by Brahmanas, besides incomplete and defective Vratas, Agni Kaaryaas without ghee, and Kusha grass roots as also the daanas without detachment would belong to Bali and his followers.

Nahusha:

Nahusha who was also in the lineage of Pururava had the distinction of performing ninety nine Ashwamedha Yagnas and was nearly qualified to become Indra who should have executed hundred Yagnas. Meanwhile there was a temporary vacancy of Indratwa since Indra fled away since he killed Vritrasura with the help of the Vajrayudha made out of Sage Dadhichis's backbone; Vritrasura who was a Brahmana by birth and Brahma Hatya Sin chased Indra. Brahma thus appointed Nahusha as temporary Indra. Nahusha who was originally a King of Great Virtue became arrogant and power-mongering as he became Indra and claimed all the privileges belonging to Indra like Vajrayudha, Iravata the Elephant and even Indra's wife Sachi Devi. Nahusha insisted that Sachi Devi be his keep! Sachi Devi was non-plussed at this proposal. As advised by Deva Guru Brihaspati, she asked Nahusha to come to her residence but he should do so just as Indra was in the habit of arriving at her residence by a Palki (Palanquin) which actually was carried by Maharshis. Nahusha was excited to reach her Palace quickly and having got into the palanquin commanded Agastya Muni to reach him to Sachi Devi's Place at once; he said 'Sarpa Sarpa' meaning 'Quick, Quick' and in the process gave a kick to the Muni to go fast. Agastya purposively misunderstood the word and converted the arrogant Nahusha as an Ajagara (Python) and dropped the latter to the depths of Bhuloka into thick forests. As a repentant Nahusha begged of clemency, the Maharshi granted a reprieve that the 'Shaapa Vimochana' would be possible only when Pandavas reached the forest for twelve long years before their 'Ajnaata Vasa' or Unknown Destiny having lost a bet in the 'Maya Juda' or wilful game of chess. As Draupadi desired to secure a Sugandhika

Flower Bheema got into a pond and the Ajagara caught him and agreed to release him only if he gave correct replies to the Serpent's queries. Yudhishtara had to arrive and release Bhima and Nahusha alike. Meanwhile Brihaspati and Agastya found that Indra was hiding in a lotus stem in Mana Sarovara Lake and brought him back and prayed to Brahma who exonerated Nahusha from the Brahma Hatya Sin on the ground that Vitra was no doubt a Brahmana but committed sins of killing several virtuous and innocents]

[Vishleshana on Shachi Devi and Indra:

Shachi Devi was the daughter of the Asura King Pouloma who was no doubt religious but of negative abhichara mantras under the tutelage of Shukraacharya. Prajapati Visvakarma, the famed Architect of Devas, had a son named Trisira or the three headed Brahmana boy who used to practise ascetism with one head, drink wine with another and look around in all directions with the third. Being an ardent student of Vedas, he was always engaged in severe Tapasya, especially 'Panchagni Sadhana' hanging upside down a tree branch exposed to Summer Sun, winter cold and heavy rainy season without food conquering worldly desires. Being highly suspicious of the intentions of Trisira who might pose problem his own throne, Indra despatched Apsarasas to disturb Trisira's rigorous meditation but to no avail. Indra thus killed him even when he was in meditation, even as he knew that killing a pious Brahmana in meditation was the highest possible sin. Furious with Indra's dreadful deed, Visvakarma performed an inexorable Sacrifice by 'Abhichara' process (taking revenge) reciting Atharva Veda Mantras, created a mountain like and ferocious boy with the sole objective of killing Indra. The huge boy was named Vritra or who could save his father as Vrinjina. Visvakarma equipped him with all kinds of war tactics and divine armoury including a swift and sturdy Chariot, a 'Sudarshan' like Disc, and a 'Trisula' like spear. As Vritra grew, Indra was getting nervous and approached Deva Guru to prevent any risk from the Demon. Brihaspati warned Indra that he should better be prepared for a Big Battle as the forebodings were not conducive, as after all Indra had committed a heinous crime of killing a Brahmana out of pride and fear. Vritrasura was the abled commander in chief and desired to marry Shachi Devi, but Shachi did not reciprocate as she felt that he was a servant of her father. As insulted Vritraasura decided to take revenge by marrying her. Meanwhile Indra begged of Maha Muni Dadheechi to spare his backbone and with the skills of Vishvakarma made Vajrayudha the thunderbolt with which Vritrasura was killed and as an act of vengeance married Shachi Devi whom Vritraasura was madly in love with. Under such circumstances, Shachi Devi readily consented to marry as Indra's 'Patta Mahishi' or the Prime Queen. But smitten by the sin of 'brahmana hatya', Indra hid himself in a lotus stem in a pond at Manasasarovara and the title of Indratva was rewarded by King Nahusha. Nahusha claimed Shachi Devi too. Assisted by Vishvakarma as prompted by Devi Bhagavati, Shachi Devi helped recover Indra from the lotus stem and Indra got reappointed by Brahma Deva since the brahma hatya dosha was negated due to long penance in the lotus stem. Nahusha got punished due to his audacity of claiming Shachi Devi and became a brahma rakshasa till the times of Maha Bharata in dwapara yuga.]

Vishleshana on Tripuraasura Vijaya from i) Linga Purana-ii) Ganesha Purana

i) Linga Purana:

As Devas and Vishnu visioned 'Trishulapaani Shankar' relaxing with Devi Parvati and Mahatma Nandi, they saw that 'Bhuta bhavishya Swami' whose eyes were red like 'Agni kundas' and physique was shimmering with thousand Suns with a pleasant countenance ornamented with a Bala Purna Chandra. Having pleased Parama Shiva, Devas explained the gravity and seriousness of the crisis created by the Tripura Daityas who not only unseated and tormented Devas and Celestial Entities but were also sending shock-waves all over the Universe, humiliating Sages, frightening women and children, making mass-scale carnage and blood bath of humanity and uprooting Dharma and age-old Values and Principles. Parameshwara infused confidence into the demoralised Devas and asked them to construct an exceptional chariot with unique specifications: Prithvi as the Ratha / Chariot, Meru and Mandara Mountains as axles, Surya and Chandra as Chakras made of gold and silver respectively, the Four Vedas of Ruk-Yajur-Sama and Atharva acted as the horses; Shukra, Brihaspati, Budha, Mangal, and Shanaischara seated on the Ratha ready to charge; the famous serpents viz. Takshaka, Karkotaka, Dhanajaya and Padmadwaya acted as the strings which were tied to the horses; most poisonous snakes like Surasa, Devashuni, Sarama, Kadru, Vinata, Shuchi, Trusha, and Bubhuksha were used as arrows; Mrutyu, Brahmahatya, Gohatya, Balahatya and Prajaabhaya were loaded on the Chariot so that they get activated as maces; Omkara and Vashatkara were the symbols on the Ratha; Sinivali, Kuhu, Raaka and Anumati - the 'Adhishtana' / in charge Deities of Chaturdashi, Amavasya, Suddha Purnima, Pratipadika Purnima respectively were used as auxiliary strings to the horses; the dhanush made of six 'ritus' / seasons which is safeguarded by Devi Ambika herself never to be broken; the specific arrow with which to kill the Tripurasura was strengthened by Vishnu, Soma and Agni and its head propelled by Agni and Chandra by its rear and Vishnu Maya smeared all over; and the extreme poison of Nagaraja Vasuki was loaded to ensure stability and speed of the arrow; Vayu was made in charge of the high velocity of the Chariot and finally Brahma was the Charioteer and Sesha Naag was made in charge of the personal security of Brahma as also of the Chariot. Yama Raja with his buffalo, Kubera on his serpent, Indra on Iravata, Ganeswara by his Mushika Vahana, Karikeya on his Peacock, Nandeshwara with his Shula running behind and sides of the Ratha were in full preparedness. Maharshis Bhrgu, Bharadwaja, Vasishtha, Goutama, Kratu, Pulastya, Pulaha, Marichi, Atri, Angira, Parashara, and Agastya were there too at the kick-start of the Battle to recite Veda Vachanas and Shiv Stutis. The Pramatha ganas were ready to charge as the army against the opponents- all swarmed around the Rath. Meanwhile, Sage Narada reached the Tripuras and tried his best to mend his ways, give back Indrapuri to Devas and avoid the worst ever battle in which the indestructible Tripuras would be destroyed along with the Three Demons as Maha Deva himself was approaching these Places with full preparation. Instead of talking peace, the Demons alerted their vast armies, and prepared for turning their defensive positions to that of an offence. On the instruction of Shankara Deva, Indra took his enormous army and attacked Tripura. As the Deva Sena made a highly offensive assault in full force, what with the revenge and frustration experienced by them for long as they were out of power as also owing to the excellent backing of Maheswara, they seized the best part of Tripuras. While quite a few Danavas sought to escape for their lives through the exit gates of Tripuras, Pramatha ganas calculated that the enemies would try to sneak out at those points and butchered thousands of Danavas. The remaining Danavas inside the Trinagaris were utterly confused by contradictory shouts that Taraka died or Shiva was defeated. In that melee, a strong contingent of Danavas quickly regrouped their men and material to make offensive attacks under the leadership of Vidyumali and Maya. Ganeswara divided Tripuras in three regions as Nandeswara was attacking Vidyumali, while he was in position against Maya. Meanwhile, Vidyumali threw a 'Parigha' on Nandi who was hurt and the enraged three 'Parshadaganas' named Ghantaakarna, Shankukarna and Mahakaal retaliated; they assumed the Forms of Ganeswara and assailed Vidyumali by making the roars of lions. Even while the Parswaganas were about to leap on Vidyumali, the hurt Nandikeswara hurled a Rudra Shakti on the demon who fell down like a mountain. There was utter silence among Danavas who were stunned and retreated. But, the highly cunning and crafty Mayasura chased the Ganas of Ganeswara to divert attention of his own men from the fallen Vidyumali to the Ganesha ganas. Mayasura created rains of Agni, crocodiles, snakes, huge mountains, lions, tigers, trees, black deers, eight-legged 'Sharabhas' / a species of oversized deer, torrential rain and powerful sand storms. As Taraka came into the battle field, Devas too appeared in full force, including Yamaraja, Varuna, Bhaskara, Kartikeya heading a Deva Sena of a Crore, with Indra, Shanaishchara, Chandra, and Rudras. The 'Maayavi' Mayaasura created several Wells full of herbal juices for invigoration and Danavas were in high spirits as their body strength increased manifold. But Keshava took the form of 'Vrishabha' and drank up the juice along with Devas and dried up the wells and Devas occupied the Tripuras finally. Mayasura and other Daityas were forced to hide in the Sea. That was the decisive moment when there was an all-out battle on the seashores. Shankara divided the 'Tridevamaya' arrow into three parts and released it at the Pushya Yoga time when Tripuras were destroyed in one go. Devas then went ecstatic and the huge shouts of Victory to Maha Deva resounded across the Sky from where Gandharvas and Kinnaras sang hymns of praises, Apsaras danced and Maharshis recited Vedas and Shiva Stotras. Brahma praised Parama Shiva in a chorus.

ii) Ganesha Purana:

Tripurasura performs severe tapasya to Brahma Deva who directed to invoke Ganesha- The pleased Ganesha and grants ability to control three lokas, Brahma-Vishnu- Shiva Lokas too. Brahma directed Tripurasura to construct a Ganesha Temple by installing a Ganesha Pratima made of Kashmiri stones. The Asura then built Ganeshapura in the state of Assam in Bharata Desha and picked up popularity as Tripura sthaana. The Asura then invoked Ganesha with Veda Mantras, as the Lord was pleased with the unprecedented devotion of Tripurasura and granted the boon of Trailokyaadhipatya as also the control of Brahma Loka- Vaikuntha and even of Kailasa! Having instantly occupied Bhuloka with no resistance, imprisoned all the Tapasvis, spread hatred for Svaahaakara-Svadhaakaara- Vashtkaara, Vedaadhyayana and Sadaachaara; he appointed Bhimakaaya Daitya as the Governor in Bhu loka. He brought Pataladi Seven Lokas of Atala-Vitala-Sutala-Rasaatala-Talaatala-Mahatala and Patala too, bodily enjoyed Naga kanyas ; he appointed Vajradanta daitya as the Governor for local administration. Then he attacked Svarga loka and subdued Indra. Tripurasura then proceeded to Brahma Loka and even before his awareness, Brahma hid himself inside the lotus stalk that emerged from the Vishnu naabhi and having imprisoned Tapasvis. Vaikuntha was the next target where Vishnu Deva who was conveniently absent there. Tripurasura then appointed Chanda and Prachanda- his manasa putras as his chiefs in Brahma and Vishnu Lokas respectively. He proceeded to Kailasa Mountain and by the his own 'baahu bala' or the strength of his own hands shook the mountain and made it mobile! Devi Parvati embraced Lord Shiva out of awe and wonder . Shiva confronted the asura and asked as to what would he like to do. The Asura asked Shiva to donate the Kailasa Mountain so that he would be free for riding the mountain'; Maha Deva smiled and thought that after all the Asura was short lived and agreed and as such moved out of the Mountain along with Pramatha Ganas , Devi Parvati and the Temple there atop too. Then Maha Ganesha assumed the form of a Dvija named Kalaadhara and complimented Tripurasura for his magnificent accomplishments of life which never heard of in the past-present or future! The Asura enquired of the Vidvan as what was his specialisation since he called himself a vidvan. Kaladhara replied: Pareshaam sampadam drushtvaa kim syaattama Suradvisha, vinaayaatte prasannoham kalayaa te dadaami vai/ Kaancham raajatam loham Tripuram shara samdhitam, rama tatra sthirayo Daitya chirakaalam yathaa sukham/ Abhedayam devagandharvairmaanushairuragairapi, kalpitarthapradam tattai kaamagam kaamadam shubham/ Asura! Of what avail could be the wealth of Lokas and their temporary commandership. I am offering you three permanent Tri Puras made of gold-silver and steel. This should bestow permanent Lordship to the three puras for lasting sukha prapti for your total contentment. These Three Puras are indestructible by Deva-Gandharva-Manushyas and as such your life as also that of your followers ought to be a lasting sailing on the flows of bliss! So asserting and handing over the three arrows with which to attack even Parama Shiva while utilising three arrows! Tripurasura was fully submerged in Ganesha Maya thus! Then Tripurasura then gave return gifts to Kaladhara viz. ten villages, cows, high value vastras, and jewellery. As Kaladhara left for his ashram, Tripurasura still felt that the gifts given to the Brahmana notwithstanding, a more precious gift ought to be given to him for the Tripuras made of gold-silver-metal with which to attack even Paramashiva. He declared to the Brahmana: Shankaram kinkaram manye na cha devataah, aanayitvaa pradasyaami taam Murtim dvijapungava/ Brahmanaagra! I am of the strong faith and belief that Shankara is the singular Parama Deva unparalleled. And I shall soon gift you such a Chintamani Ganesha Murti which Shiva himself had been venerating! As Brahmana Kaladhara, as Ganesha himself in the form of left the fortress of Tripurasura, the Asura sent his 'chaturangani' soldiers by walk-horsebacks-elephants and warring -fit chariots to bring the idol of Chintamani Ganesha from Kailasa. There followed a severe battle of the Asura sena with Pramatha ganas of Shiva sena. As the asurasena was unable to resist the defence of Shiva ganas, Tripurasura himself reached and challenged Shiva himself. Even as the soldiers of Tripura were shattered, the asura utilised vaarunastra and Shiva retaliated by using vaayavyastra; in further retaliation the asura made the prayoga of agneyastra while Shiva utilised parjanyastra but as a result of the preceding agneyastras emerged a sky high vikruta svarupa purusha and Shiva sena fled away out of fright for life. Meanwhile Devi Parvati who was closely following the proceedings of the battle got worried and left for the solace of her father Himavanta. Kartikeya who accompanied Shiva to the battle front as well as Shiva himself were worried about the safety of Devi Parvati and thus concluded the battle. Meanwhile instead of chasing Shiva sena got wise and decided to somehow steal the Idol of Chintamani Ganesha from the Temple and retreated.

A brooding Parama Shiva looked back at the just concluded high drama and the resultant loss of Chintamani Ganesha idol which was worshipped by the self, Brahmarshi Narada appeared on the scene and Shiva gave a review of the just concluded events. Narada warmed up Maha Deva by revealing the magnificence of the former: Maha Deva! You are Sarvgjna, Sarva Vidya Swaami, Sarveshvara, Sarvakarta, Sarvamukha swarupi, Sarvaharta, Sarva niyanta, Sarva samardha, Shadaishvarya sampanna [viz. Yuddha praveenata, Sarva netra, Trupti, Adyantarahita, Aluptashakti, Swatantrata, and Ananta Shakti are the Shadaishwaryas as given in Shiva and Kurma Puranas]. Yet, You had not performed Ganesha Puja formally and hence this present defeat with Tripurasura! If only you disallow the free movement of Tripuraasura among the three cities of TRI PURA by using a single arrow unified into one single arrow, Mahishasura's extermination would be possible and you should win the battle hands down! As advised as per Narada, Maheshwara meditated Ganesha for hundred years and the latter responded with his darshan with Pancha Mukhas representing Pancha Bhutas of Bhumi-Water-Agni-Air-and Sky as also Pancha Tanmatras of Rasa-Rupa- Gandha- Sparsha-Shabdas, Pancha Jnaanendriyas and Pancha Karmendriyas besides the creation of Gandharva-Yaksha-Pitara-Manushya-Devarshi- Deva Gana- Brahma-Indra-Rudra- Vasu-Sadhya and Charaachara Jeevas, besides Trigunas of Satvika-Rajasika-Taamasika gunas and Srishti- Sthiti-Samhaara-Tirodhaanas of Kaala maana! Maha Ganesha was pleased and bestowed the Maha Mantra 'GA' to Shiva ; He assured that with this Maha Mantra, Shiva should be able to destroy the Tripuraasura!]

[Ref Essence of Valmiki Ayodhya Ramayana-Sarga Twelve: Yayati, the son of Nahusha and his wife Viraja, was a famed Emperor who defeated all the Kings of the World and married Devayani the daughter of Asura Guru Shukracharya, besides Sharmishtha the daughter of Vishvaparya, a Rakshasa King. Indra was pleased to gift Yayati a Divine Chariot with seven powerful horses with which he traversed the world and divided his Empire into seven divisions to distribute it among five of his sons. A Maharshi gave a boon that if any of his sons could agree to exchange their youth to his old age then he could secure a fresh lease of youth. His eldest son Yadu from Devayani refused and so did others excepting Sharmishtha's son Puru who readily agreed. Yayati took over Puru's youth and enabled him travel around to unravel earthly pleasures for long. But finally returned discovering that the ephemeral joys of the world were endless like Agni in a Homa kunda assuming larger and larger proportions as long as ghee is served and no human would be satisfied with food, gold, ornaments or women. By so realising, he returned his youth to Puru and took to Vanaprastha or retirement. That was how he slipped down from the experiences of swarga but descended down into the company of 'Saadhu Pungavas' or of Groups of Virtue and Enlightenment!]

Did not our dear late father's Kula Purohita Maharshi Vasishtha had lost his hundred sons in the hands of Brahmarshi Vishvamitra!

[Ref Essence of Valmiki Bala Ramayana Sargas Fifty Nine and Sixty as follows:

Shatananda Maharshi addressing Rama Lakshmanas continued that Vishvamitra took pity on the King Trishanku in the form of chandala and gave an assurance that he should most certainly reach swarga with his mortal body. Then he instructed his disciples to collect and arrange for the required material for yajna kaarya. He further asked them to invite co-brahmanas to join the yajna including Vasishtha kumaras who heckled Trishanku and cursed him to become a chandala. Vishvamitra shishyaas likewise invited all, but Vasishtha Sishyaas were reported to have stated angrily as follows: kṣatriyo yājako yasya caṇḍālasya viśeṣataḥ, katham sadasi bhoktāro havis tasya surarṣayaḥ/ brāhmaṇā vā mahātmāno bhuktvā caṇḍālabhojanam, katham svargam gamiṣyanti viśvāmitreṇa pālītāḥ/ ‘A Chandala desires to perform the yajna and a Kshatriya would be the Acharya. In such yajna, how could pure brahmanas consume the ‘havishaanna’! Be that as it may, how indeed a kshatriya turned chandala be despatched to swarga by another kshatriya turned brahmana, that too with the chandaala’s mortal body!’ Having heard this insinuating remarks of Vasishtha Kumaras, Vishvamitra fumed like fire and declared: yad dūṣayanty aduṣṭam mām tapa ugram samāsthitam, bhasmībhūtā durātmāno bhaviṣyanti na samśayaḥ/ I am right now in severe tapasya and am expected to be peaceful without anger and such mental aberrations; yet I am constrained to say that whosoever evil minded invitees to my yagna talked disparagingly about me and the yajna being proposed be surely be converted as heaps of human ash sooner or later; further in their following births, they should be born as chandalas and roam around begging with frightening forms. Having stated thus Vishvamitra could state nothing more and kept quiet!

Shatananda Muni continued his narration to Rama Lakshmanas about the subdued anger against Vasishtha Kumaras and addressed on his introductory speech to the Sages who arrived in response to his yagjnya karya with the express objective of despatching Ikshvaku Raja Trishanku to swarga with the latter’s mortal body. Then the Munis at the conference grouped together that Maharshi Vishvamitra was a known and learned Sage but a highly volatile and angry person and hence what ever he directed by dutifully executed without doubts and hesitations. Thereafter the yagna commenced and Vishvamitra was the ‘Atharvyu’ the principal initiator-conductor of the yajna. As the ‘havishaanna’ was offered to respective Devatas, none of the Devas turned up to accept. Then the fuming Vishvamitra yelled in great anger: paśya me tapaso vīryam svāṛjitasya nareśvara, eṣa tvām svaśarīreṇa nayāmi svargam ojasā/ duṣprāpaṁ svaśarīreṇa divam gaccha narādhipa, svāṛjitam kim cid apy asti mayā hi tapasaḥ phalam, rājams tvam tejasā tasya saśarīro divam vraja/ Nareshvara Trishanku! Now you must vision the mighty outcome of my life long tapasya and now get ready to leave for swarga with your mortal body! Indra got shocked and furious shouting that there would never ever be a place in swarga and kicked him down. Trishanku yelled ‘traahi traahi’ in utter desperation while rapidly slipping down the thick clouds. Vishvamitra shouted at Trishanku with hysterics and commanded him to stay pur right there. The Vishvamitra looked up at the Rishimandala on the high skies and materialised Sapta Rishis and brand new nakshatras and declared angrily: Anyamindram karishyaami loko vaayasyaadanindrakah, daivataanyami sa krodhaat srashtam samupachakrame/ I will rather create another Indra or a new swarga loka without Indra! So saying with assertion Vishmamitra manifested fresh devataas! As the Maha Muni so decided: down on earth, samasta deva-asura-rishi groups made an appeal politely: ayam rājā mahābhāga guruśāpapakṣataḥ, saśarīro divam yātum nārhaty eva tapodhana/ Maharshi Vishwamitra! King Trishanku was cursed by Guru Putras to assume ‘chandala’ and as such not qualified to attain swarga as a mortal. Vishvamitra retalliated to say that his statements and decisions should not be falsified ever! Therefore: Maha Raja Trishanku should hereafter enjoy the pleasures of swarga loka for ever; I have already manifested fresh nakshatra mandali for ever till pralaya; like wise the totality of divine material elsewhere too would exist in tact. May this parallel arrangement be in position without disturbance.!' The Munis collected at the Visvhamitra Yajina was greatly surprised at the unforgettable happenings and truly admired the outstanding ability in creating a new swarga itself on the mid skies!

Sarga Seventy Three: Rama Lakshmanas proceed towards Matanga Vana and meet Tapasvini Shabari awaiting Shri Rama Lakshmanas all along her life with indefinable devotion.

[Vishleshana on Yogini Shabari]

Vishleshana on Shabari:

Shabari was a tribal girl curious to know what 'dharma' was all about and approached Matanga Maharshi at the foothills of Rishyamukha mountain; the Rishi accepted her as his student and ever since lived in his ashram teaching her in his service. As years passed by she became old walking with a stick and plucking berry fruits from the gardens of the ashram; meanwhile Matanga Muni achieved 'Maha Samaadhi' in 'padmaasana' posture, while assuring her to await the arrival of Shri Rama Lakshmanas. As the latter finally did arrive, she brought basketful of berry fruits and after biting and tasting the fruits only offered them to Rama and Lakshmana declaring to the world that sincere 'bhakti' would be the 'moksha maarga'; and thus the 'Shabari Ramayana' emphasizing Bhakti for Bliss. Rama gave the discourse to Shabari about the nine folded bhakti viz. 'Satsang' or affinity with followers of Truthful Virtue - 'Shravana' or hearing all about Dharma- 'Guru Seva' or Service and Following of a Guide- 'Japa' or constant repetition of the Sacred Name of Paramatma- 'Bhajana' or chorus singing in praise of the Lord as an expression in the public and selfless service to the society- and finally 'bhakti' or intense devotion without expectation recalling Bhagavad Gita's : Karmanyevaadhikaaraste maa phaleshu kadaachana, maa karma heturbhuuh maate sangostva karmani/ One has only the liberty to 'do' but never demand the return fruits about which one has no control. Yet never abstain from the performance surely expected of the person. you. 'Karma Phala' is as per the decision of the Almighty. What ever is decided as per destiny shall doubtless be awarded to the person concerned. Never hesitate to accept by way of self desire or by the misleading advice of the public. The very feeling of disappointment creates suspicion and self repudiation. This tends to lead to frustration which is the anti-thesis of contentment and thus further leads to a string of inabilities for further successes! That situation is tantamount to ‘ jadatva ’ or total lack of initiative!]

ESSENCE OF VALMIKI KISHKINDHA RAMAYANA

Sarga One: On reaching Pampa Sarovara Rama was excited at its natural grandeur especially Sita’s absence, Lakashmana solaces- as they approached Rishyamooka, Vanaras and Sugriva.

[Vishleshana on Pampa Sarovara recalled from Sarga 71 of Valmiki Ramayana’s Aranya Khanda :

‘Enjoying the grand Prakriti soundarya and its bountiful nature, Rama Lakshmanas crossed one forest to another reached Pampa’s illustrious banks called Pushkarini. Pampa sarovara is situated to the east of the Matanga hill and to the west of the Rishyamukha hill and serves as a perennial source of water as the rain waters falling on these hills flow down to the sarovara. The water thus collected is free from gravel slippery slime and duck weeds. Thus, the water is crystal clear, sparkling, limpid, cool and delightful scented with lotus fragrance. The environs of the sarovara abound in forests is rich in flora and fauna includes Swans, Ducks, Kraunches, Ospreys and such other water birds. Fishes of rare variety like Vakratunda, Rohita Nalameena are found in plenty in the sarovara. Rama Lakshmanas! When you seek to catch the multi-coloured fishes, especially in the early evenings, the Sarovara gets profoundly fabulous of sweet smells of joy, coolness, healthy, and heart filling. Nara shreshthaas! The musical sounds of monkey group screeches get so pronounced as those of constant drubbings of ear drums. sāyāhne vicaran rāma viṭapī mālyadhāriṇaḥ, śītodakam ca pampāyām dṛṣtvā śokam vihāsyasi/ sumanobhiś citāms tatra tilakān naktamālakān, utpalāni ca phullāni pañkajāni ca rāghava/ Shri Rama! In such glorious evenings when you pass by the banks of Pushkarini and its truly hearty walks, you should forget the remote heart beatings of Devi Sita viyoga even for a while. It is a local belief of pronouncement that the disciples of Matanga Maharshi tend to surrender to silence and peaceful tranquility of the natural surroundings. As the Matanga shishyaas collect flowers and fruits, then they get tired out and the sweating drops of their bodies seem to instantly turn as fresh and sweet smell flowers by the miracle of the Maharshi. Having crossed such spell binding occurrences in the forth arriving Matanga ashram , one could also witness there ahead the Punya Murti Tapasvini Shabari the embodiment of ‘dharmaanushthaana’. Rama! Maha Saadhvi Shabari ought to be ever anxious for your darshana bhagya for a number of years now! Raghu nandana! Once you pass by ahead the Matanga Vana and Shabari ashram, then you would reach the foothills of Rishyamooka parvata: ṛṣyamūkas tu pampāyāḥ purastāt puspitadrumaḥ, suduḥkhārohaṇo nāma śīśunāgābhirakṣitaḥ, udāro brahmaṇā caiva pūrvakāle vinirmitaḥ/ The eastern side of Pampaa sarovara is situated the Rishyamooka Parvata foothills which around greenery of huge trees and plants forming a picturesque scene stated to have emerged by Lord Brahma’s generosity!]

Vishleshana on Anjaneya on his origin and illustrative stutis- a ready repeat reference vide Essence of Valmiki Bala Ramayana released by www. kamakoti.org-books section:

Kesari the son of Gautami Rishi and Kesari's wife Anjana secured a grand son named Hanuman with the 'Amsa' (facet) of Parama Shiva and Vayu Deva too was responsible in the birth of the boy. Mistaking Surya Deva for a red-coloured fruit, the boy was tempted to fly skyward tried to hold Surya Deva, as Indra threw his Vajra on Hanuman's body and Ravana tried to hold Hanuman's tail but Hanuman never left his firm hold of Surya Deva. Ravan kept on fighting for a year in vain and tried to wriggle out of Hanuman's powerful clasp. Meanwhile Rishi Vishrava arrived at the spot and eulogised Hanuman to release Ravana the terror of the Universe. There after Hanuman resided for long time at Pampapura on the banks of Pampa River as a strong fixture and was thus acclaimed as 'Sthanu'. Also since Ravana who had dictated the World and controlled Devas was humiliated by Anjaneya, his name and fame spread as Hanuman: Nighnanta cha Suraan mukhyam Ravanam Lokaraavanam, Nihanti Mushthirbhayah sa Hanumaaniti vishrutah. (Ravana who was in the habit of badly hurting Devas and related Demi-Gods and killing Vishnu- Bhaktas without mercy had thus been restrained badly and received a jolt by Hanuman; the 'Mushthighatas' or 'Hanus' (beatings of closed hand grasps) damaged Ravana was the reason why Hanuman was named as such. Lord Brahma informed Hanuman that during the twenty eighth Tretayuga's first Part of Vaivaswa Manvantara, Bhagavan Vishnu would take the Incarnation of Shri Rama and that he would achieve Rama's unreserved devotion to Hanuman and destroy the clan of Ravana, his cruel brothers and sinful sons. Sarga Twelve: Shri Rama’s feat of destroying Seven Taala Trees in a row- Sugriva’s challenge to Vaali but gets beaten as Sugriva runs to Rishyamooka- Sugriva vilaapa- Rama explains the problem of Vaali Sugriva identity.]

[Vishleshana on the identity of Ashvini Kumars from Surya Purana:

Vishwakarma the Shilpi’s daughter was Sangina whose celestial name is Raagini also called Surenu in dyuloka. Sangina’s shadow is Chhaaya also called Nikshubha. Sangina is not only pretty but a Pativrata too; she gave birth to Manu and Yama. But she was unable to approach the ever fiery form of Surya and after retaining her shadow left to her father Vishvakarma’s home to stay there for very thousand and odd years, despite the father advising her to return to her husband’s home as soon as possible. As the father pressurised her, she left for Utrara Kuru pradesha in the form of a horse. Chhaya Devi and Surya Deva gave birth to two sons named Shritashrava and Shrutakarma, besides a daughter named Tapati. Shritashrava’s son was Saavarni Manu and Shanaishwara was the son of Shritakarma. Just as Sangina Devi was too affectionate with her children, Chhaya Devi was not so. Chhaya had normal relation with Sangina’s elder son Manu, but had difference of opinion with Yama. As Chhaya bothered Yama too much, then the latter desired to lift her physically and held her upside down and in the process touched her feet. Chhaya then gave a ‘shaap’ or curse that Yama ‘s feet be twisted and disfigured. In this physical altercation, Surya appeared and said that every ‘shaap’ could be negated but not that of a mother and suggested that the only way could be to the flesh of Yama’s feet be kept on ‘krimis’ or vicious worms so that the flesh of the feet be eaten and got disappeared and the fleshless feet be retained. This way- out would save Yama’s feet and Chhaya Devi’s curse be carried out too. Soon after this shaap incident, Vishvakarma the father of Sangina approached Surya Deva and informed him that his daughter Sangina was in the form of a horse in Shaaka dwipa, and made Surya to assume the form of a male horse at where Sangina was grazing. Then Surya in the form of a male horse approached Sangina in the form of a female horse and tried to mate. Sangina struggled in the act of mating as she was of the feeling that Surya was a ‘para purusha’; in the process of th struggle Surya’s virility entered Sangina’s nose and she gave birth to two sons viz. Ashvini Kumars the celestial physicians, named Naasatya and Dasnna. After Surya Deva revealed his identity, then the two horses mated again and Revant was born with similar radiance like that of the father.]

[Vishleshana on Tri Agnis: a) Varaha Purana b) Brahmanda Purana]

Varaha Purana : Creation of Agni Deva, his several names and implication of worship: When Maha Vishnu created 'Panchabhutas' or Five Elements) and Loka Pitamah Brahma and commanded the latter to initiate creation, Brahma could not do so and he was extremely confused and hence angry and the rage created thousands of flames called Agni who became extremely thirsty. When Agni asked Brahma as to how his thirst could be quenched, Brahma showed three types of satisfying it viz. sharing the 'Dakshinas' received by Devas and hence Agni was known as 'Dakshinagni'; the second way of Agni's thirst was by carrying the Havans (Homas and Yajnas) performed in the Trilokas (Three Worlds) in favour of various Deities as their 'Vahan', thus becoming Agni popular as 'Havyavahan'; the third way is that since Agni is present in each 'Griha' or household, he is known as 'Garhapatyagni'. Brahma further named Agni as 'Vaisvanara' as the latter provides the means of bestowing 'Sadgati' (Salvation) to the virtuous beings performing havans and other good deeds. Agni is 'Jataveda' or protector of both Known and Unknown material; 'Naaraa Prashamsa'-'Naar' or people, especially 'Dwijas' or twice born Brahmanas, Kshatriyas and Vysyas do 'Prashamsa' or praise; Known as 'Dravinoda' as Agni provides money power. The other popular names accorded by Brahma to Agni are 'Tanunpath' (Agni protects Sharir/Asharir), 'Prapurna' (full of everything) and many other names. Agni desired to Brahma to designate a day of each Month so that all concerned would perform worship to Him. Since this was a unique request made by any Deity for the first time, Brahma confirmed Pratipada as a day of significance for Agni. Brahma blessed Agni that Pratipada be popularised among all the Lokas and worship to Agni by way of fasting (Upavas) or at the most by taking milk would qualify a devotee to acquire prosperity and Tejas (radiance) during the current birth and to secure Kingship in the next birth and certainly please the Pitru Loka.

Brahmanda Purana describes : There are three types of Agni viz. Devata related, Bhoutikaagni and Water generated Earth-related Agni called Vidyut Sambhava or Born out of Lightning or Abyoni; as the night is over the Unknown Brahma desired to visualise water and Earth in the darkness and assumed the form of a tiny 'Khadyota' (glow-worm) and viewed Agni for illumination and named it as 'Parthivaagni' or Terrestrial Fire and divided into three forms viz. 'Vaidutaagni', 'Jatharaagni' and 'Souraagni'.

Vaidyutaagni is not assuaged due to rains nor human bellies but only due to friction of wood. Jatharaagni has no illumination and is not visible. Souraagni gets terminated by the Sun Set and enters Agni and gets revived at Sun Rise. Illumination and Heat promote and increase each other. Alike in the Northern and Southern hemispheres, when Sun rises the night enters water and water gradually gains heat and radiation ; at the time of Sun Set the day enters waters and thus the latter gains transparency next morning. Thus in this order the Earth's hemispheres the Sun Rise and Sun Set or the day and night respectively enter water. Surya Deva absorbs water through his rays and hence called 'Shuchi' or of purity..This is related to Earth-related Agni and hence called Shuchi; the latter means Agni with thousand rays which absorb water from various sources like oceans, rivers, wells and all water-bodies. The rays of Agni create both cold water and hot water as also four hundred peculiar forms; those rays which could produce heavy rains are called chandana, Sadhya, Kutana, Akutana and Amrita. Besides these rays, there are three hundred other rays which produce snow. The Snow-fall creating rays are known as Drisyaas, Meghaas, Yaamyas, Hradinyaas (resounding ones) and they have limited illumination and such rays are called Chandras. Those rays which create heat are white in colour numbering three hundred are called Shuklas, Kuhakaas, and Vishvabhuts. Surya Deva distributes these rays to human beings as well as Pitru Devas equitably and satisfy them. Surya helps utilise these rays to Human beings by way of herbs and vegetation, to Pitras by way of Swadhaa-Homas and to Devatas by way of Amrita. In the Vasanta or Spring and Greeshma or Summer seasons, Surya blazes three hundred rays of Agni to heat up the World while he showers in Sharat Kaala or rainy season by four hundred Agni-Kiranas ; in Hemanta or early winter and Sishira or late winter Seasons three hundred rays are utilised.]

[Vishleshana on Bhagavan Hayagriva and Madhu Kaitabhas vide Devi Bhagavata Purana:

Devi Bhagavati blesses Vishnu as Hayagreeva: As Indra and Demi-Gods were performing a Sacrifice in the presence of Brahma and Mahesa, they had all desired Maha Vishnu to preside over the Function and called on Him. But, Lord Vishnu was in ‘Yoga Nidra’ or the Sleep of Deep Meditation and nobody would dare wake Him. More over, interruptions of somebody’s speech, the love of a couple, or waking up a person’s deep sleep are sins equivalent to ‘Brahma hatya’ or killing of a Brahmana. The Lord was seated in a ‘Padmasana’ posture squatting with His legs folded and resting His chin on the top of His Bow with an Arrow fully drawn. As the Sacrifice was to be concluded, Lord Siva advised Lord Brahma to create a White Ant, ‘Vamri’ and directed it to bite the arrow gently which should wake up the Lord to consciousness and thus make the request. The Vamri sensed the delicate situation and requested Brahma to grant it a return boon for the great risk being undertaken in disturbing the Yoga Nidra of no less a personality than Maha Vishnu Himself! Lords Brahma and Siva gave a boon to the Vamri that what ever trickles from the Sacrificial Offerings of Ghee in the Homa Kunda (Fire Pit) would spill out could be collected as its share. As commanded by Brahma, the insect bit the fore-end of the arrow and the tight string gave way at once and the entire Universe reverberated with horrifying sound as the earth quaked, mountains were shaken, Oceans rose high, Sun lost way and Devas got traumatised. Maha Vishnu’s Head was severed with His Crown and there was no trace as to where it fell! Along with Devas, Brahma and Siva cried like human beings as there was a ‘Pralaya’-like situation(Universal Dissolution). Then Deva Guru Brihaspati consoled Indra, Brahma and Siva and emboldened them to countenance the grim situation, as such eventualities did happen in the past. The only recourse that Lords Siva and Brahma, accompanied by Indra and Demi-Gods, had in one voice made an intense appeal to Maha Devi Bhagavati, the Eternal Cause of Causes, the very Original Energy, the Life Force of entire Creation, the Bindu and Pranava, the Sourcing Fountain of knowledge and above all the Embodiment of Charity and Forgiveness. Pleased by the most sincere prayers of Brahma and Siva downward, ‘Nirguna’ Maha Devi hinted that there ought to be a cause for the tragedy. In the company of Maha Lakshmi, once Maha Vishnu laughed by thinking of something. Lakshmi Devi failed to understand the possible reason as to why Vishnu was so much amused about. Was it a spot on Her face or was it due to another woman in His desire? Then as Vishnu did not clarify, Lakshmi assumed ‘Tamasic Guna’ and gave a curse to Him saying that His head should fall off. Thus happened the resultant tragedy despite Her sincere repentance. While this tragedy took place, there was a coincidental incident that a tough Davana of extraordinary cruelty, named Hayagriva or the Demon with the neck of a horse, resorted to severe 'Tapas' (Meditation) to Maha Bhagavati for thousands of years by following a strict regime of Sacrifice and unflinching devotion. Maha Devi appeared before the Rakshasa and granted him a boon that no Power in the Universe could cause death to him, except by an Extraordinary Energy in the form similar to his own viz. Hayagriva form alone could destroy him. Brahma and Siva hastened with the solution to the present gravest tragedy and instructed Devata's own Architect, Visvakarma to do the needful. The Architect killed a horse at once and fixed its neck to Vishnu's severed head and thus emerged Hayagriva. Vishnu destroys Madhu Kaitabha brothers: When Maha Vishnu was in Yoga Nidra in a comfortable posture of lying on the bed of Ananta Naga, two Demon brothers named Madhu and Kaitabha were born from the wax of Maha Vishnu's ears. Their birth was a mystery and unknown as felt by the brothers themselves whose physical forms grew fast and strong day by day, even as they were playing in the ocean surroundings, killing various kinds of aquatic species for food or play and finally stealing Vedas. Coming of age in course of time, the Demon brothers with huge bodies and proportionate common sense too, realised that there must have been a Massive Force which alone could have given birth to them. From the air, they heard a sound 'Vagbija' the Seed Mantra (Seed 'Bija' and 'Vak' the Speech of Goddess Sarasvati). To start with fun, but later on with maturity, they kept on practising the sound for years together, little realising the impact of the Mantra's repetition. In fact, they became so obsessed with the Mantra that they neither had food nor sleep, but with full concentration and utmost sincerity. 'The Parasakti's Voice emerged from the Skies that the Danava brothers would be invincible in the entire Universe provided they were united and fight two-some. Blessed by Maha Devi, the two brothers became swollen with pride and eventually attacked Lord Brahma Himself. On realising that they were unconquerable, Brahma who was seated on the lotus- head sprouting from Maha Vishnu's navel, tried the age-old four means. He tried to use 'Sama (Counselling)' 'Dana' (Gifting or bribing), 'Bheda' (put one against another) and finally 'Danda' (Punish), but neither of these media appeared feasible; he ran away to Vaikuntha for protection but Maha Vishnu was in Yoga Nidra. Brahma had thus prayed to Yoga Nidra Devi to prompt Maha Vishnu to wake up. It was actually Maha Maya's discretion which mattered as Vishnu Himself could not regain consciousness on His own. The concentrate of 'Tamo Guna' - Maha Maya - was earnestly prayed to by Brahma, as this was a prestige issue for him and the entire domain of Gods! Maha Maya left Vishnu free and He was fully woken up to face the challenge of the hour, viz. to either manipulate or massacre the brothers, Madhu and Kaitabha. Lord Vishnu invited the brothers to fight with Himself. The fight continued for five thousand years but without a tangible result. As the Demons were clashing one after another and Lord Vishnu was in duel singly, the latter asked the brothers to give a break as it was against Justice that they took alternate positions while He was alone. During the break, Vishnu prayed to Maha Shakti and complained that the fight was unfair and that they were also given by Her the boon of voluntary death or 'Svacchanda Maranam'. Maha Shakti realised the lacuna in the duel and advised Vishnu to give boons to the brothers so that a way out would automatically open up. Meanwhile, Maha Shakti agreed to be present at the fight in physical form and disturb the concentration of the Demon brothers by casting Her fake amorous looks. This encouraged Vishnu to convey the Demons that their duel with Him was of great quality and thus He was ready to give boons to them. They got into the trap as they boasted that they were prepared to give boons to Him instead of the other way around. Vishnu grabbed the opportunity and said that He be given the boon of their death by killing each other! The brothers gave an excuse that the boon could be given only provided there was no water or wetness in the Ocean. Vishnu expanded his thighs manifold so that there could be adequate space for the killings. The Demons expanded their bodies too and thus the thighs of Vishnu and the body sizes of the brothers kept on increasing horizontally and vertically proportionately. Finally, the illusion created by Vishnu proved stronger and the brothers had to yield to their own killings. Thus Maha Shakti who assumed human physique and paved the way to the killings of the Danava brothers without breaking the Rules of 'Dharma Yuddha', partly by trickery and partly by Maya or Illusion.]

[Vishleshana on Chakravarti Mandhata from Maha Bhagavata Purana:

Tracing the origin of Ikshvaku, the eldest son of Vaivasvata Manu, in the lineage to King Puranjaya (Kakustha) who fought a war between Demons and Demi-Gods on behalf of Indra on the condition that Indra would take the form of a bull. Puranjaya rode on the hump of the Great Bull and hence Puranjaya's title was 'Kakustha' (hump of the Bull) as also Indravahana or the vehicle of Indra. In the family lineage of Puranjaya was born King Yuvanashva, who performed Indra Yagna to beget a child. During the Sacrifice days one night the King felt thirsty and entered the Fire Spot area and drank the Sacred Water meant to bless his wife a child. As the Brahmanas found the water pot empty, they were aghast that the King drank the Water and eventually, he got a child from his abdomen. The boy cried for milk and that was not possible from the father; Indra put his index finger in the child's mouth and thus saved him. The Boy was Mandhata, who became eventually an undisputed Emperor of the World comprising seven islands- 'from where Sun rose to where it set'. He was a terror to Rakshasas. [He was stated to have discovered Lake Manasarovar near Mount Kailash as he was reputed to have made penance at the banks of the Lake under the mountain range was named after him. It was believed that there was a Serpent Mansion where Mandhata prayed and from a tree dropped fruits making big noises like 'Jam' and the area was known as 'Jambudweep']. Mandhata's wife Chatrarathi alias Bindumati was a pious lady who begot two sons, Purukutsa and Muchikunda and fifty daughters. Sage Saubhari an old person who lived twelve years under water in penance was tempted to marry as he found fishes having sex and procreating children. He hesitantly asked Mandhata to let him marry any of his daughters. Mandhata was reluctant as Saubhari was diseased and old, but could not disagree as the Sage might get furious; he told the Sage that his family custom was that all the daughters must marry the same person and that even one of them should not refuse the Sage. The Sage with his mystical powers transformed himself into a handsome youth and thus all the daughters agreed to marry him. The Sage made mansions for each of the girls. But, in course of time, Sage Saurabha realised that because of the fish in water, his entire Spiritual life was destroyed and although late in his life reverted back to a more introspective life eventually and intensified his devotion to Lord Vishnu.]

[Brief Vishleshana on Indras killing Vritrasura based on Devi Bhagavata and Maha Bhagavata Puranas: Prajapati Visvakarma, the famed Architect of Devas, had a son named Trisira or the three headed Brahmana boy who used to practise ascetism with one head, drink wine with another and look around in all directions with the third. Being an ardent student of Vedas, he was always engaged in severe Tapasya, especially ‘Panchagni Sadhana’ hanging upside down a tree branch exposed to Summer Sun, winter cold and heavy rainy season without food conquering worldly desires. Being highly suspicious of the intentions of Trisira who might pose problem his own throne, Indra despatched Apsarasas to disturb Trisira’s rigorous meditation but to no avail. Indra thus killed him even when he was in meditation, even as he knew that killing a pious Brahmana in meditation was the highest possible sin. Furious with Indra’s dreadful deed, Visvakarma performed an inexorable Sacrifice by ‘Abhichara’ process (taking revenge) reciting Atharva Veda Mantras, created a mountain like and ferocious boy with the sole objective of killing Indra. The huge boy was named Vritra or who could save his father as Vrinjina. Visvakarma equipped him with all kinds of war tactics and divine armoury including a swift and sturdy Chariot, a ‘Sudarshan’ like Disc, and a ‘Trisula’ like spear. As Vritra grew, Indra was getting nervous and approached Deva Guru to prevent any risk from the Demon. Brihaspati warned Indra that he should better be prepared for a Big Battle as the forebodings were not conducive. He advised that he along with Devas might request Dadhichi Maha Muni to spare his backbone which meant the Muni’s sacrificing his life to serve a deva karya; Dadhichi obliged and Devata’s architect Vishvakarma made a thunderbolt like ‘vajraayudha’ with the help of which Vrtrasura was killed]

[Vishleshana on Shat Ritus or Six Seasons from Taittiriya Arankaya

Ritus or Seasons approximately coincide with Chaitra-Vaishakha or end March to the last weeks of May when festivals like Ugadi, Shri Rama Navami, and Vaishakhi are celebrated. Greeshma Ritu or Summer during April-July during Jyeshtha-Ashadha when festivals like Ratha Yatra and Guru Purnima are observed and Dakshinayana or the Solar downtrend commences. Varsha Ritu or monsoon coincides with Shravana-Bhadrapadas or the last portions of July-September when Mangala Gauri and Vara Lakshmi Vratas, Raksha Bandhan, Krishna Ashtami, Ganesh Chaturthi and Onam are celebrated. Sharad Ritu or Autumn Season coinciding with Ashvin-Kartika months extending portions of September to November being mild weather the famed Sharannava Ratris and Depaavali are celebrated. Hemanta Ritu or pre-winter Season coinciding with Margaseersha and the last days of November-January, the festivals of Vasanta Panchami, Shiva Ratri and Holi are observed; and finally Shishira Ritu or winter coinciding with Maagha-Phalgun months during the last quarter of January to March is the time of Vasanta Panchami, Shiva Ratri and Holi. The Chandra maana procedure varies in the sense that the cycle of Seasons starts from the first day of Chaitra commencing from Ugadi.

[The following chart provides the details: Ritu/ Season- Lunar Month -Months - Weather

Vasanta or Spring during Chaitra -Vaishakha or Feb 18- April 20 with temperature of 20-30 C Greeshma or Summer of Jyeshtha- Ashadha April 21-June 21 with temperature of 30-50 C Varsha or Monsoon of Shravana-Bhadrapada or June 22-Aug 23 with hot-humid- rains Sharat or Autumn of Ashvija- Kartika or Aug 24- Oct 23 mild temperature. Hemanta or Pre-winter coinciding with Margashira- Pushya- Oct 24- Dec 21 with pleasant- cold weather Shishira or winter during Maagha-Phalgun - Dec 22-Feb 17 Moderate Cold;10C+/-

Vasanta Season is dominated by Vasu Devatas instructed by Savitu as at the beginning of the Samvatsara and heralding colours, dresses, flowers and freshness all around and with plentiful water and Nature. The Spring season beckons relatives and friends to home with good food and gifts. In Greeshma the summer season scorches earth with heat asking for light dresses in white as Rudra and his gana devats dominate and prepares earth for Parjanya and rains ushering diseases like cold, jaundice and so on. Yet, this is when crops are abundant and fruits in variety are aplenty. All the same rains the future of food supplies for the year hence calls for ploughing, planning and hard work. Sharat provides clean eyes and good vision even as divine artisans with the grace of Ribhu Devatas initiate planning, innovations, creations and caliber, aspirations and contented living. Sharat season heralds good eating, wearing god dresses and enjoyments. Marut Devas then follow creating mixed blessings; on one hand they create harsh and mighty winds seeking destruction and damages and on the other hard realities of life with obstructions in efforts yet unusual and unexpected fruits of hard work alike work never performed. Variety is the spice of Life in the Sharat Season! Hemant calls for vigilance, either initiating a struggle ahead or a caution and forewarning for preparedness and thus of introspection. Shishira Ritu arrives with lightnings, rains, smugness of Nature around besides that of individuals too. The blessing of ample rains could also call for uncertainties. As Agni Deva calls for plentiful waters to heighten living conditions of Beings, uncertainties too prevail as natural calamities thus creating a touch-and-go situation. The Mighty Marut Devas are worshipped for overcoming impediments and create opportunities for happiness]

Prayaschitta for 'Sura paana: Dwija if drunk by mistake or due to uncertain mental balance be served boiling hot liquor so that he is probably recall his bad experience be reminded of his guilt again and again. Alternatively, he is punished by drinking boiling hot cow's urine, or water or ghee or cow dung almost till he is tongue is burnt literally. Or else, the possible atonement of consuming hard liquor, one might eat only a day and rice'oil cakes for the night for a year and wear cow hair clothes carrying a flag of anti-liquor all along. Suraapaana is such as the waste of grains which is abhorable since that is the food and drink of yaksha, raakshasa, pishachas; indeed brahmanas especially ought to avoid suraapaana as being the virtuous eaters of 'havish' or the remains of the offerings of food on completion of vedic homa karyas. Even once a brahmana consumes a hard liquor gets barred from brahmanatwa and gets outcast to the meanest low class. Stealing: Gold of brahmanas once complained and the stealer confesses, striking the culprit hard with a club then the thief gets purified and the brahmana victim retains his austerity. Infact, the victim brahmana might gift the gold and retreat to perform brahma tathya pataka vrata and that ideed be the perfect manner by which the thief himself would get ashamed. Guru bharya talpagaami: This is one of the 'Pancha mahaapaatakas' that deserves the praayaschitta only by self confession and embracing the prototype of a woman of redhot iron and literally dying or alternatively cut off his own male organ and try to walk towards 'nairuti' or south west till he perhaps falls dead. Go hatya: If a cow is killed, the 'praayaschitta' would be to shave off his head and consume the drink of yavas or barley grains and hide himself from the public in a cowshed wearing the hides of the dead cow for a month. During that period of atonement he should bathe in the cow urine and eat only the havishya bhojana only for three weeks in the month; in the following two months, he should follow cows with composure and drink the water mixed with the dust raised by the cowherd and at the day eat saltless 'havishaana' and sit up in veerasanam position all through the night as the cows sleep off comfortably. In case, a sick and frightened cow of sacredness expecting or actually attacked by tigers or wild animals and fallen helpless in a ditch or mud, then no honest attempt be spared by some how tide over the rescue. In varying conditions of weather of heat, rain, cold and speedy winds, a good human being should make allout and determined endeavors even at the risk of one's existence; if a grazing cow- incidentally this is the only being in the Lord's srishti which inhales as also exhales oxygen- while its calf is enjoying milk from its udder, be it in the fields or one's own cow-yard, any attacker either by a criminal or an animal, cows ought to be rescued first and then the calf. Anena vidhinaa yastu goghno gaamanu -gachhati, sa gohatyaakritam paapam tribhirmaasairvyapohati/ Any person suffering from the sin of 'go hatya' if he rescues a dying cow would indeed be relieved of this atrocious degradation of morality within three months of such rescue. Once one's prayaschitta is concluded then the person concerned is to observe charity to a well learnt Brahmana of ten cows and a bull, or alternatively surrender what ever property that he has!]

Visleshana on Chandra Deva's inseparability of Devi Rohini vide Varaha Purana

Daksha's curse to Moon and reappearance: As Prajapati Daksha married off all his twenty seven daughters to Soma, the latter was ignoring all the daughters, excepting Devi Rohini. The 27 daughters married to Chandra are Kṛttika, Rohinī, Mrigasheersha, Aardra, Punarvasu, Purbabhadrapada, Pushya, Aslesha, Magha, Svaati, Chitra, Purvaphalguni, Hasta, Dhanishtha, Vishaakha, Anuraadha, Jyeshtha, Moola, Purvaashaadha, Uttaraashaadha, Shravana, Uttaraphalguni, Shatabhisha, Uttarabhadrapada, Revati, Ashwini, Bharani. These 27 wives of Chandra are 27 Nakshatras (the constellations) which are on the moon's orbit. The rest of them complained to their father Daksha who reprimanded Soma to behave but Soma ignored the repeated warnings of Daksha. Out of exasperation, Daksha cursed Soma to gradually decline and finally disappear. In the absence of Soma, there were far reaching adverse effects in the Universe. Devas including Vanaspati felt Soma's absence and so did human beings, trees, animals and worst of all medicinal plants, herbs and so on. The Sky was dark and the Stars too lost the shine. Chandra prayed to Lord Shiva for long at Prabhasa Tirtha and since Daksha's curse was irreversible a compromise was made that during Krishna paksha Chandra would wane and wax during Shukla Paksha. However, this formula proved defective as Chandra was sinking in the Ocean causing natural sufferings by way of non availability of herbs and so on and at the request of Devas to Shiva again, Chandra left only with one of the 'Kala', the Lord gracefully wore the Crescent Moon on His 'jataajuta mastaka' for good, enabling Chandra to wane and wax every month ever since! As Devas approached Vishnu, He advised the solution of Churning the Ocean by both Devas and Danavas and latter too agreed to the proposal for the lure of securing 'Amrit'. In the process of churning, Moon was given birth again. This had brought great relief to Devas, human beings whose 'Ekadasha Indriyas' (Eleven Body parts), 'Pancha Bhutas' (Five Elements), Solah Kshetra Devatas, Trees and Medicines. Even Rudra's head was without Soma and so did water.

Lord Brahma blessed Pournima thithi and selected the day for worship to Chandra Deva when fast is viewed propitious along with token amount of money and material as charity. That specific day ‘Yava’ Bhojan (Barley food) or barley made material is considered to blessed a person with Gyan (Knowledge), radiance, health, prosperity, foodgrains and salvation.]

Sarga Thirty Nine: As Shri Rama had sincerely thanked the efforts in mobilising an ocean like Vanara Sena to fight his battle against Ravana, the grateful Sugriva returns back for further action [Vishleshana on Anuhlada- Shachi Devi-and Indra]

[Vishleshana on Anuhlada- Shachi Devi-and Indra:

Shachi Devi the daughter of Danava Puloma was fond of Indra Deva even before their wedding, but Puloma liked another Danava youth named Anuhlaada. With the secret consent and permission of Puloma, Anuhlaada forcibly abducted Shachi Devi. Indra attacked and killed him brutally and married Shachi Devi. In further revenge Indra killed his father in law Danava Puloma too, thereafter.

Incidentally there is another Vishleshana on Shachi Devi and Indra vide Sarga Forty Eight of the Essence Of Valmiki Baala Ramayana in an another context of Vritrasura Vadha my Indra with the help of Dadhichi’s backbone turned into Vajrayudha, but Indra was punished for ‘brahma hatya pataka’, as Indra got dethroned by Nahusha as new Indra, who claimed Shachi Devi and was finally recovered as hidden in a lotus stem at Manasarovara]

Vishleshana on Sapta Dweepas from Brahma Purana

The entire Bhuloka (Earth) was divided into seven major Territories viz. Jambu, Plaksha, Shyalma, Kusha, Krouncha, Shaka and Pushkara surrounded by Sapta Samudras (Seven Seas) viz. Lavana (Salt), Ikshurasa (Sugar cane juice), Sura (wine), Ghrita (Classified Butter or Ghee), Dadhi (Curd), Dugdha (Milk) and Swadu Jala (Sweet Water). Prithvi is stated to have a lotus-like shape, each one of the angles situated with Sapta Parvatas (Seven Main Mountains) with Himavan, Hemakuta and Nishadha in South; Nila, Sweta and Shringvan in North, in the Center is Meru with a height of eighty four thousand yojanas, sixteen thousand yojanas of depth, thirty two thousand yojanas of circumference. Bharata Varsha, Kimpurasha and Hari Varshas are to the south of Meru; Ramyaka Varsha is in North; Bhadrasha in East; and Ketumala in West. In Jambu Dwipa, there is Bharata Varsha above the Sea and below the Himalaya called Bharati with a width of nine thousand yojanas; this is known as ‘Karma bhumi’ where Swarga and Moksha are accessible to those who are desirous and deserving. There are seven major Kula Parvatas / mountains in Bharat viz. Mahendra, Malaya, Sahya, Shaktiman, Ruksha, Vindhya and Pariyatra. It is in this Bharata from where attainment of Swarga becomes possible not only for human beings but even Pashu-Pakshis (animals and birds) with; ‘Sakaama Sadhana’ or Endeavors while in the materialistic world one could reach Swarga, whereas Nishkama Sadhana could even secure Moksha (Salvation). But negative results might be accrued in performing sins and would attract Narakas besides getting sucked into the whirlpool of births and deaths. There is no other place in one’s life excepting in Bharata Varsha or the Karma Bhumi where such a possibility ever exists. Spread over an area of thousand yojans long from North to South, this hallowed land is divided into Nine Regions viz. Indra dwipa, Kasetutana also known as ‘Upto Setu’, Tamravarna, Gabhastimaan, Nagadwipa, Soumya dwipa, Gandharwa dwipa, Varunadwipa and the Sea-surrounded ninth dwipa. To the east-ward of Bharata is the abode of Kiratas while the west-ward is of Yavanaas; inhabitants of the Central Region are Brahmana, Kshatriya, Vaishyas and Sudras whose professions are Yagnas, Yuddha, Vanijya and Seva (Sacrifices, Battles, Commerce and Trade and Service) respectively. In this Bharata, are of residents of Kuru, Panchala, Madhya desha, Purvadesha, Kamarupa (Assam), Poundya, Kalinga (Orissa), Magadha, Dakshina Pradesha, Aparanta, Sourashtra (Kathiyavad), Sudra, Abhira, Arbuda (Abu), Maru (Marvada), Malva, Pariyatra, Souveera, Sindhu, Shalva, Madra, Ambashtha, and Parasika. The Yugas of Satya, Treta, Dwapara and Kali are applicable only to Bharata Varsha and nowhere else. While Bharata is the Karma Bhumi practising Yagnas and Daanaas, compared to all other Countries in Jambu Dwipa are Bhoga / luxury-oriented. Bharata Varsha is the best of all the Places in Jambu Dwipa as the former is the Karma Bhumi compared to all other Deshas which are primarily pleasure-loving. It would be only after lakhs of births that one could secure a human life after storing considerable Punya; in fact, Devas sing hymns saying that those who take birth as human beings are blessed since they are born as Manavaas who had great opportunity to qualify to attain Swarga and Moksha by following a religious and disciplined life and by following Nishkaama Dharma or without strings of ‘Plalaapeksha’ or fruits of returns. Plaksha Dwipa is double the size of Jambu Dwipa’s one lakh yojanas under the Chief called Mehatidikh who had seven sons and the Kingship was surrounded by Seven major Mountains and Seven Rivers with the traits typical of Treta Yuga. Its inhabitants pray to Bhagavan Vishnu in the form of Chandra Deva. Compared to the salty taste of Sea water between Jambudwipa and Plaksha Dwipa, the taste was of Ikshu in the of intermediate region of Plaksha and Shalmala whose Chief was Vapushman and the latter’s size was double that of Plaksha. Here again there are seven mountains with mines of jewels / precious stones and seven Rivers and in this Dwipa Lord Vishnu is prayed in the form of Vayu Deva. Like in Plaksha Dwipa, the inhabitants of Salmala too, Varnashrama is followed and the colours of persons in these Varnas are Kapila, Aruna, Peeta and Krishna are for Brahmanas, Kshatriyas, Vaisyas and Sudras respectively. Sura Samudra earmarks the inter-region of Salmala and Kusha Dwipa whose size was double that of Salmala and Kusha’s King is Jyotishman and the inhabitants are human beings practicing Varanashrama as also Daityas, Danavas, Devatas, Gandharvas, Yakshas, Kinnaras and a great mix of Brahma’s creation. They all pray to the Multi Faced Janradana. Ghrita Samudra (Classified Butter) partitions the Kusha and Krouncha Dwpas; the size of the Krouncha is double that of Kusha. Rituman is the King of Krouncha where again Varnashrama is observed and the counter-part Varnas are Pushkala, Pushkara, Dhanya and Khyata corresponding to Brahmanas etc. Rudra Swarupa Janardana is the Deity revered in this Dwipa. Between Krauncha and Shaka Dwpas is the Dadhimandoda Samudra and the King of Shaka is Mahatma Bhavya, again with Seven Mountains and Seven Major Rivers as also seven Princes, where Siddhas and Gandharvas inhabit. Maga, Mahadha, Manasa and Mandaga are the corresponding Chaturvarnas. All the inhabitants of this Dwipa pray to Surya Swarupi Vishnu. From Shaka to Pushkara, the intermediate Samudra is of Ksheera and Pushkara which is double of Shaka is size is headed by Stravana and since it is a huge Dwipa, the King divided it to Mahavira Varsha and Dhataki varsha and the sons of the King awarded the two in their names after the two parts under his over-all control. These territories are mainly inhabited by human beings who have longevity of ten thousand years, devoid of illnesses and worries and of jealousies, fears, egos and crookedness; these humans as superior as Devas and Daityas and they are all devoid of Varnashrama as all the inhabitants are of equal status. The dividing line of Pushkara is surrounded by sweet water atop of which is Lokaloka Parvata, beyond which is stated to be of complete darkness; in fact, the Border of Pushkara of ten thousand yojanas, there were neither species nor life].

[Vishleshana on Manasa Sarovara

Janmoushadhi tapomantra yoga siddharetaraih, Jushtam kinnaragandharvair – apsarobhi vritam sadaa/(Only blessed persons who are Siddhas and Tapodhanas, Parama Yogis, besides Kinnara, Gandharva, Apsaras and such Celestial Beings could have their abodes at Manasarovara). Hari Vamsha which is a component of Skanda Purana makes a detailed reference to this outstanding Maha Tirtha and an unparalleled Sidhha Kshetra) Manasarovar waters are crystal clear of bluish tinge and the Lake is of the shape of an egg stated to have spread over some 15 km. This is one of the Fifty One Shakti Peethas where the right wrist bracelets of Devi Sati's 'jeerna sharir' fell as Lord Vishnu's Sudarsham Chakra sliced off the body parts at the Daksha Yagna so that Maha Deva's fury would otherwise have continued at the sight of the body. The Devi at this Shakti Peetha is known as Gayatri and Maha Bhairava is called Sarvanand. In this heavenly Lake, thousands of swans fly along and across, some of crystal white colour stated to be 'Raja Hamsas' or Royal White Complexion and the rest of off-white colour. It is believed that at times, natural pearls too are available in the sweet and none too chilled cold waters of the Celestial Lake with plenty of multi-coloured stones and prism like pebbles. There is not much of greenery on the banks and in fact not many trees and flowers up the Mount. Mount Kailas is about 12 km up the Mansarovara. Even while approaching the Kailash Dham, one can have its darshan from a distance but the Dham becomes clearer from Kungarivingari Shikhar or top of Jouhar Marg if the clouds are not obstructing the view. The people of Tibet are full of devotion to the Dham and swear to complete Parikrama of the 20 km.circumference by 'sashtangas' or prostrations and heartfelt 'namaskaras' all the way. Like Lord Shri Rama at Saketa at the Ayodhya Dham, Goloka's Vajra dhaam of Bhagavan Shri Krishna as described in great detail in Brahma Purana as also Maha Deva delineated vividly in Shiva Purana and Skanda Purana, Parama Shiva's abode is Kailasa Dham on the unique Kailasa Mount; indeed this view among the Himalaya Shikhiras is stated to be unusually distinct and unparalleled! The description of Kailasa Mount is akin to that of the Virat Shiva Linga just as the center of a Lotus with sixteen petals all around as the 'Shikhar Madhya Shringa' or the raised horn of the Mount being the centre of literally counted as fourteen Shringas. In fact the central Shringa commands spontaneous awe, vibration and arresting attentiveness subdued by ecstasy and fullness of fulfillment. As 'abhishakas' or holy baths on the 'Linga Mastaka' are led into Gauri kunda. This Maha Linga Swarupa Maha Deva is of Black Stone and its sides are all covered with layers of iced milk. This mountain alone stands out as black but all the surrounding mountains are raw brownish. Kailasa Parikrama of 20 km. is possible within three days but perhaps reaching Kailasha Shikhir of the height of 19000 ft from Sea level is worthy of endeavour by dare devil- mountaineers!]

Sarga Forty Five: While despatching the four directional Vaanara Sena, the text of Sugriva's encouraging remarks were as follows:
[Vishleshana on Agastya Maharshi and the reason for being ever residing in the Southern Bharata]

[Vishleshana on Agastya Maharshi and the reason for being ever residing in the Southern Bharata:

The mischievous Brahmarshi Narada provoked Vindhya Mountain creating misunderstanding against Meru Parvata around which Surya Deva circumambulates and the insignificance of its existence and encouraged Vindhya to keep growing exceeding Meru's height. As Vindhya kept higher and higher, there were obvious limitations of Meru facing its circumambulations around Surya Deva causing the days and nights in the two parts of the universe. Lord Indra approached Agasthya Maharshi the Preceptor of Vindhya Mountain and complained. Agastya smiled and asked his wife Lopamudra and his sons Bhringi and Achyuta to pack up as they would shift their residence southward. But since his disciple Meru blocked the passage, Agastya asked Meru to bend making way for their passage and ever since neither Meru could grow up and up, nor Agastya could cross beyond Vindhya to maintain the natural balance and the free movement of Meru around Surya as usual.]

Sarga Fifty Six: Gridhra Raja Sampati arrives and frightens Vanaras initially but on hearing about the noble deed of ‘Sitaanveshana’ makes friends - Sampati then hears of Ravana’s killing of Jatayu, his younger brother.

[Vishleshana on Sampati the elder brother of Jatayu vide Sarga 14 of Essence of Valmiki Aranya Ramayana for ready reference:

Kashyapa Prajapati had eight wives and these were Aditi-Diti-Danu-Kaalka-Taamra-Krodhavasha-Manu-and Anala. Aditi gave birth to Twelve Adityas-Twelve Vasus-Eleven Rudras and Two Ashvini Kumars, besides thirty three Devatas. Diti gave birth to Daityas and the controlled aranyas-samudras and the entire Earth! Danu gave birth to Ashvagreva while Kaalka Devi to two sons viz. Naraka and Kaalaka. Devi Tamra gave birth to five kanyas viz. Krounchi-Bhaasi-Shyeni- Dhritaraashtri and Shuki. Of these, Krounchi gave birth to owls- Bhaasi gave birth to Bhaasi birds-Shyeni to bat birds- and Dhritaraashtra to hamsas and kala hamsas or swans. Chakravaakamscha Bhadram te vijagjne saapi Bhaamini, Shukee nataam vigagjne tu Nataayaam Vinataa sutaa/ Shri Rama! Shri Rama!Mrigi’s progeny are Mrigas and Mrigamanda’s generation were Riksha-Srumara and Chamara. Bhadrada gave birth to Iravati and the latter son was the famed Iraavata Gaja Raja. Then Hari’s santaana were Hari the Lion- Tapasvi- and Golaangula or Langoor. Further Krodhavasha’s daughter was Shardulini and the latter’s son was Vyaghra. Maatangi’s progeny was Matanga or elephant while Shveta gave birth to Diggaja. Krodhavasha’s daughter Surabhi gave birth to daughters Rohini and Gandharvi. Rohini gave birth to cows and Gandharvini to horses. Surasa’s children are Nagaas while Kadru’s were Pannagaas. Now Manu yet another wife of Kashyapa were chaturvarna maanavaas of Brahmana-Kshatriya-Vaishya and the Lower class. mukhato brāhmaṇā jātā urasaḥ kṣatriyās tathā, ūrubhyām jajñire vaiśyāḥ padbhyām sūdrā iti śrutiḥ/ From the face were born brahmanas- the heart the kshatriyas- both the thighs the vaishyas and from the thighs the lower class. Anala gave birth to trees- Taamra putri viz Shukhi and the latter’s grand daughter was Vinata and Kadru was Surasa’s sister. Kadru produced thousand types of ‘naagaas’ and Vinata created two famed sons Garuda and Aruna. tasmā jātō ‘ham aruṇāt sampaṭis ca mamāgrajaḥ, jāṭayur iti mām viddhi śyenīputram arimḍama/ so ‘ham vāsasahāyas te bhaviṣyāmi yadicchasi, sītām ca tāta rakṣiṣye tvayi yāte salakṣmaṇe/ jaṭāyusaḥ tu pratipūjya rāghavo; mudā pariṣvajya ca saṁnato ‘bhavati; pitur hi śūsrāva sakṣitvam ātmavān; jaṭāyusā samkathitam punaḥ punaḥ/ Raghuveera! [Brief Vishleshana on Riksha Raja the father of Vaali-Sugrivas]

[Brief Vishleshana Riksha Raja the father of Vaali-Sugrivas: The background was that the father of Vaali Sugrivas was Riksha Raja who once bathed in a nearby pond and was surprised himself to have a female form. At the same time, Indra and Surya Deva got infatuated with her and Vaali was born of Indra and Sugriva of Surya. Vaali made rigorous tapasya to Brahma and secured the boon of invincibility.

Sugriva being very scared of Vaali made sure in course of his friendship with Rama that Vaali did of piercing through a tree from far distance in one shot but Rama broke seven such trees in a row.]

[Vishleshana on Surya Deva's bhu -pradakshina: Sources Vishnu Purana and Matsya Purana]

[Vishleshana on Surya Deva's bhu -pradakshina: Sources Vishnu Purana and Matsya Purana]

Vishnu Purana: Surya Deva's chariot occupies an area of nine thousand yojanas and twice is the area of its 'Ishaa Danda' or the area between the 'Juuva' or Yugaartha and the 'Ratha'. The chariot is drawn by Seven Chhandas or Horses viz. Gayatri, Brihati, Ushnik, Jagati, Trishthup, Anushtup and Pankti. Actually, Suryodaya and Suryastaya are mere concepts since he is constant and stable; counting from the East of Manasottara Mountain, the Kaala- Chakras on Eastward to Indra, Southward to Yamaloka, westward to Varuna loka and northward to Chandraloka and the Head quarters of Indra, Yama, Varuna and Chandra respectively are Vasvoukasaara, Samyamani, Sukhaa and Vibhavari. In other words, along with Jyotish Chakra, Bhagavan Bhanu is seen rushing Southward. By mid day, he is fully visible at Indraloka followed by the other lokas prescribed viz. Yama-Varuna and Chandra and by the next morning again repeats its course. Udayaastamaney chaiva Sarvakaalam tu Sammukhey, Vidishaasu twashyhasu tathaa Brahman dishaasucha/ Yairyatra drushyatey Bhaaswaansa tesaamudayah smrutah, Tirobhavam chayatraiti tatraivaastamanam Raveyh/ (Sunrise and Sunset thus occur at the same position, since persons at the various Dishas-Vidishaas or Directions-Sub Directions witness the constant Surya Deva as they move and vision morning- mid day-evening-night and again morning and so on in the reverse movement!). Hence Sun Rise and Sunset are regulated to East and West; actually the manner in which Sun shines in the East, he also shines in the reverse; he is stated to stay put at Brahma Sabha and in the process of revolution of Kala Chakra, Dishas and Vidishas get lit or get dark and the lighten portion of the Universe become the day and the darkened areas get the night positions. Kudaala chakra paryanto bhramannesha Divaakarah, Karostahastathaa raatrim vimunmodineem Dwija/ (Hey Dwija! Just as a potter rotates a wheel, Sun and Earth witness parts of day and nights). From the time of Chakra's start of the revolution from the lowest point of the wheel towards the North is called Uttarayana and Surya is stated to be visible in Makara Raashi, followed by Kumbha Raashi and further on to Meena Raashi. As the three Raashis are over, the duration of day and night become equivalent or in other words, Sun passes through Bhu-Madhy Rekha. Thereafter, the duration of day time starts increasing and that of nights dwindling. Subsequently, Mesha, Vrisha and Mithuna Raashis pass over; at the end of Mithuna Raashi as Karka Raashi is entered into then Surya's direction changes from North to the Southern Direction and that phase is called Dakshinaayana. Just as a person tends to speed up descent from the top to the bottom, the speed of Kala Chakra gets picked up by the velocity of Vayu /wind and thus the duration of time quickens; during Dakshinaayana, the day time is stated to take thirteen and half revolutions of Nakshtras around Surya which is normally performed within twelve Muhurtas (thirty muhurtas make a day-night); but during the night time, the speed slows down and takes eighteen Muhurtas. During Uttarayana, Surya's speed quickens in the nights and slows down during the days and vice versa. Another conclusion is that during the Sandhya timings viz. Vyushti / Prabhat of day -breaks and Usha or night falls, the Vyushti time is of Brahma Swarupa Omkara and Gayatri and who ever worships Gayatri at that time with 'jala' would destroy the Rakshasaas; if they further recite the Mantra viz. Suryo Jyotih as the first Aahuti of Agnihotra they would be awakening and enlightening Surya Deva; thereafter: Omkaaro Bhagavan Vishnustridhaamaa vachasaam patih, Tadyucchaaranatastey tu yaanti Raakshasaah/ Vaishavomshah Parah Suryo yontarjyotirasaplavam, Abhidhaayaka Omkaarastasya tatprerakah parah/ Tena Sampreritam Jyotiromkaaranaatha deeptimat, Dahaty sesha Rakshaamsi Mandehaa-khyaanyadhaani vai/ Tasmaannollinghanam Kaaryam Sandhyopaasana karmanah, Sa hanti Suryam Sandhyaayaa nopaastim kurtutey tu yah/(The mere recitation of Omkaara Vishwam-Tejo Prajna Rupam-Tridhama Yuktam-Vishnum-Vedaadhipatim would destroy Raakshasaas. The Inner Radiance of Nirvikara Vishnu is Surya: Omkara is his Vaachaka and is the instant prompter of terminating Rakshasaas. Prompted by the Omkara, that Jyoti called Vishnu gets into full action in blistering Mandeas-called Rakshasas; that is the reason why the Sandhyopaasana Karma should never ever be neglected!)Sishumara Chakra / Jyotisha Chakra: On the Sky, one could find a dolphin like formation of a Starry Design at the tail of which is Dhruva, who rotates on its own axis and also induces the rotation around Chandra, Surya, other Planets as also Nakshatras as well; in fact, all the Planets and Stars get hooked to Dhruva by the force of Vayu. Sishumara is the hinge of Sarveshwara Narayana tied on to Dhruva and further clutched to Surya. Sishumara is coiled with its head down, Ashvini Kumars at its feet,; Varuna and Aryama are at thighs, Mitra at the anus; Agni, Mahendra, Kashyapa and Dhruva at its tail; on the top of the tail is Prajapati, Sapta Rishis at the hip position; body skin pores with Nakshatras; Upper chin as Agasti, lower chin as Yama; Mars as its mouth; genitals Saturn, Guru as neck back; Surya as chest; Moon as mind; Venus as navel; heart as Narayana Himself; life air as Mercury and so on. Rahu and Ketu the Sub-Heaven Planets are right under Surya Deva. Surya attracts water from various sources for eight months in a year and facilitates rains for four months a year and rains enable crops of food and fodder for all the Beings. Surya also enables the upkeep of Chandra and the latter in turn produces 'Abhra' by interacting with Vayu further creating Dhooma (Steam) produced by Agni and Sky leading to Meghas or clouds. As per the Time schedule prescribed by Vidhaa, 'Abhra Jala' as preserved in the clouds is released pure water with the help of Vayu onto Bhumi. Surya Deva attracts water from four main sources viz. Rivers, Samudra, various water-bodies from Bhumi, and Pranis. The Akasha Ganga attracted by Surya Deva would straight away release the water by way of rains from clouds without the process of transformation to 'Abhras' afore-mentioned. Needless to say that the water by way of rains as per the above process, is like Amrit or the Principal and Unparalleled source of Life for the production of food grains, Aushadhis, Yagnas, and worships besides and countless various deeds. Thus, Aharabhutah Savitru Dhruvo Muni varotthama! Dhruvasya Shishimaarosow sopi Narayanatmakah/ (The main Adhara of Surya is Dhruva and Dhruva is dependent on Narayana and Narayana is settled in Sishumaara!)

Matsya Purana: Surya-Chandra Gati Varnana: (Some interesting facts): Both Surya and Chandra cover daily the Seven Dwipas (Jambu, Plaksha, Salmaali, Kusha, Krouncha, Shaka and Pushkala); Sapta Samudras (Lavana or Salt, Ikshurasa or Sugarcane juice, Sura or Wine, Ghrita or Classified Butter, Dahi or Curd, Ksheera or Milk and Suswada or Sweet Water); and Sapta Parvatas (Sumru, Kailas, Malaya, Himalaya, Udyachala, Agastyachala, Suvela and Gandhamadana). Normally Surya Deva covers trilokas each day. Surya Mandala as defined by Veda Vyaasa is nine thousand yojanas and the total circumference is stated to be 27000 yojanas. Prithvi's mandala is stated to be fifty crore yojanas. One half of this is spread north to Meru Parvata and by half of Meru Parvata on four sides one crore yojanas is stated to be spread over. Half of Prithvi is stated to spread nine lakh fifty thousand yojanas. Now the four sided spread of all the four directions is stated as three crore yojanas. This is what the sapta dwipaas and sapta samudras which occupies the spread of earth. The surrounding area of Prithvi known as 'brahma mandala' is thrice larger than that of Prithvi. Thus the area of Prithvi plus works out to eleven crore and thirty three lakh yojanas! Now the account of earth and the 'antariksha'. The area of the Sky as contained by that of nakshatraas is what Prithvi is occupied. In other words, what ever is the area of Prithvi is that of 'antariksha'. Now the Jyotirgana Prachaara: and Meru Parvata: To the east of Meru Parvata, atop the Manasarovara mountain, there exists Vasvaikasaara named Mahendra Nagara made of gold. Again to the south of Meru Parvata's back side, there is Manasaparbata and the Samyamani Pura where Lord Yama the illustrious son of Surya Deva resides. To the west of Meru parvata, on the west of Manasaparbata atop Sukha Pura where Varuna Deva resides. To the north of Meru Parvata atop the Mahendra parvata, Vibhavari Pura where Chandra Deva resides. Behind the Manasotara on the four sides, the Ashta Dik Loka Paalakas are placed to protect Dharma and in the dakshinayana period, Surya Deva oversees the activities of the Ashta Paalakas during his period. Now, about the dakshinayana the travel of Surya; in the jyotishchakra in his pradakshina, He reaches Amaravati the capital of Indra Deva by the midday on earth; that would be when it coincides with Yama Raja's rising time, in Chandra's mid night time and so on. As Surya performs pradakshina or self-circumambulation, he also does the same to nakshatras too do likewise. Precisely at the 'udaya' and 'astama' timings he does exactly the same year in and year out. At the Sun Rise he gradually increases his radiance till the afternoon and gradually reduces his tejas till the dusk time. In this way, Surya Deva performs pradakshina or circubambulation of self and so do the nakshatra mandali too. These all travel southward and at the rise and setting timings are defined as also at the poorvaahna and aparaahna or pre noon and afternoon they pass through two each of Deva puris and at the noon time, one Devapuri. Thus Surya from the rise gains momentum of radiance till afternoon and gradually lessens the severity of the kiranas thereafter till Sun set. Surya has the constant awareness of he 'udaya' and 'astamaya' at the east and west directions; while radiating the eastern side, spreading the heat and illumination on the sidewise north and south and decreasing the severity till disappearance. Meru Parvata is stated to be situated in the north of the highest of all the mountains; Lokaaloka is situated in the southern direction and since Prithvi's shadows are spread over, those Beings situated on the other side of the hemisphere are unable to see Surya in the nights. Thus Surya Deva with a lakh of kiranas reaches the mid portion of 'Pushkaradwipa' by that time, despite his speed of one 'muhurta' or two ghadis at the rate of one thirty lakh and fifty thousand yojanas plus! Thus Surya Deva as he traverses southward for six months turns to uttarayana or northbound. At the time of Dakshinayana, Surya would have reached the travel to the mid portion of Pushkara dwipa. This dwipa is as thrice as distant from Mru to Manasarovara! Now the distance on the southern course or Dakshinayana is of nine crore fifty lakh yojanas. After the dakshinayana, Surya reaches the Vishuva sthaana or the 'khagoleeya vishuvadvritta bindu' at the north of Ksheera sagara. Vishvan mandala parinama is three cores twenty one lakh yojanas. As Surya's course gets north bound or uttarayana entering 'shravana nakshatra', then his course would be towards gomoda dwipa in between the south and north parts and in between are located jaradrava - Iravata to the north and Vaishvanara to the south. Towards north is named Naaga veedhi and to the south is the Ajaveedhi. The nakshatras of Purvaashadha-Uttaraashadha-Mula are known as 'ajvithis' and abhijit, shravana and swaati are naagavithis. Ashvini, Bharani and Kritika are also naagavithis and so also Rohini-Ardra and Mrigashira. Pushya, Shlesha and Punarvasu are called Iravati veedhi. Purvaphalguni, Uttara phalguni and Magha are arshabhi veedhi. Purvabhadra, Uttaraabhadra and Revati are of Goveedhi, while Shravana, Dhanishtha and Shatabhisha are of jagadveedhi. Chitra and Swati are again of ajaveedhi, Jyeshtha, Vishaka and Anuraadha are of Mriga veedhi again. During Uttarayana samaya, the speed of Surya is slower and the nights are of longer duration and vice versa.

Shishumaara Chakra : On the 'akaasha mandala' or the sky line, in between the space of fourteen nakshatras, there is the shishumaarakha chakra inside which is the son of King Uttanapaada viz. the eternal Dhruva. This Dhruva Nakshatra moves around in a circular manner and along with the concerned Grahas as also Surya and Chandra. Nakshatra Ganas too move around in circular fashion behind the Dhruva Nakshatra. As Dhruva is controlled by 'Jyotirgana' and 'Vayurgana', he is free to take his 'manasika sankalpa' for performing his 'bhramana' or self-pradakshina. However, he is influenced by various considerations such as jyotirgana bheda, yoga, kaala nischaya, asta, udaya, utpaaa, Uttaraayana-Dakshinayana gamana, vishuvat rekhaapara sthiti, graha varnana and such considerations enable Dhruva's decision. Now, those clouds which afford life to Beings are called 'Jeemuta Meghas'; such jeemutas are normally impacted by 'vayus' which are distanced by a yojana or two; the resultant interaction of the jeemutas and the vayus create 'maha vrishti' or the substantial rains. It is stated that in the days of yore, quite a few huge mountains used to fly from place to place with their wings carrying dark clouds repeat with clouded waters so that Beings starved of rains on earth were satisfied with the rains at those places. But the advantage of carrying water was far outweighed by the havoc created on earth due to the flying mountains and as such Lord Indra cut off the wings. Consequently the mutilated wings of the mountains create havocs of excessive rains with thunders and pralaya situations consequently causing floods and innumerable water flows of speed and noise! Indeed Vayu is the life energy. Entire 'Brahmanda' came into place as the 'Aja' or the Self Manifested Brahma came out bursting out from the 'anda kapaala' or egg shell with the interaction of fierce wind and clouds. Brahma was also 'Jalajaataasana' or seated by the water base. Among the base material besides Vayu and Jala - naamaka- parjanya- meghas Brahma created further Iravata-Vaamana-Anjana and four Digijas.

Elephants, mountains, clouds and serpents are of the same ‘kula’ or likeness of upbringing and likewise of water, clouds, rains; just as to enable the growth of foodgrains one calls tushara or snow in hemanta ritu or winter. In any case it is undisputed that Surya is the cause of ‘vrishti’ or rains. In this world, rains, Sun shine, ice, days and nights, sandhya kalaas, Shubha and Ashubhakaryas are basically regulated by Dhruva. Dhruva regulates water which is received by Surya. It is due to water that wind or praana vayu that Sthaavara Jngamas or the mobile and immobile exist due to. Thus there is a chain reaction in which Prakriti’s mobility is sustained.]

Sarga Sixty Five: As Angada asked select Vanara yoddhas of their ability to cross and return, individual responses were heard- then Jambavan recommends Veera Hanuman for this impossible and daring act.

Vishleshana of Vamana’s Virat Swarupa from Vaamana Purana

Vishleshana of Vamana’s Virat Swarupa from Vaamana Purana:

Vamana Murti displayed his Virat Swarupa: Chandra and Surya were his two Eyes, Shy was his head, Prithvi his feet, Pishachaas were his foot-fingers, Gruhyakaas were his hand fingers, Vishwa Deva Ganaas were in his jaanus /knees, Sadhyas were his janghaas, Yakshaas were his nails, Apsarsaas were his palm lines, Nakshatras were his Eye sight, Surya kiranas were his hairs, Stars were his body hairs, Maharshiganaas were in the hair roots, Vidishas were his hands, Dishaas were his ears, Ashwini Kumars were his faculty of hearing, Vayu was his nose, Chandra Deva was his joking faculty, Dharma Deva was his thinking capacity, Satya was his voice and Saraswati was his tongue, Deva Mata Aditi was his neck, Vidya was his valiyaas or long poles; Pushas were his eye brows, Swarga dwar was his anus, Vaishvanara his face, Prajapati his vrushanaas, Param Brahma was his heart, Kashyapa Muni was his Pumstwa, Vasu Devata was his back, Marutganaas were his Sandhis, Rudra was his Vakshasthala, Mahaarnavaa was his Dhairya, Gangharvas were in his stomach; Lakshmi, Medha, Dhruvi, Kaanti and all Vidyaas were in his ‘Kati Pradesha’; the luster and radiance in the total Universe as also the Tapo teja or the power of meditation was the reflection of the magnificence of Natayana; Vedas and Scriptures and the huge Yagnaas and the Sacred Deeds of the Virtuous like Maharshis and Brahmanas were all inside in his ‘kukshi’ or belly. On viewing the Paramatma’s ‘Virat Swarupa’, the so called ‘Mahaasuraas’ referred to earlier in ignorance by Chakravarti Bali before Prahlada’s curse to him got burnt off like flies before a gigantic outbreak of Fire! Having thus occupied the Universe in totality including the sub-terrain Sapta Paatalaas, Vamana Deva stated that since Bali took the water in his hand and donated the THREE FEET of Land, and blessed him to be the King of the Sapta Paatalaas and granted him long life till the end of Manvantara of the on-going Vaisavata Manu.]

ESSENCE OF VALMIKI SUNDARA RAMAYANA

Sarga One: Veera Hanuman leaps off the Ocean towards Ravana’s Lanka, gets welcomed on way by Mainaka, encounters Surasa and subdues, kills Simhika, and enjoys the aerial view of Lanka [Vishleshanas 1) on Anjaneya’s self confidence to cross the Maha Sagara, his decisiveness as expressed by himself vide Sarga 67 of Kishkindha Ramayana 2) Vishleshana on Sagara Chakravarti: as sourced from [Vishleshana on Anjaneya’s self confidence to cross the Maha Sagara, his decisiveness as expressed by himself vide Sarga Sixty Seven of Kishkindha Ramayana as follows: ‘

Veera Hanuman stood amidst the Vaanaras and addressed them especially the elderly Vanara Vriddhas thus: ‘ I am of the strength and speed of Vaayu Deva , my originator and am possessive of endless energy. Vayu Deva is a great friend of Agni Deva! I am blessed with the might of destroying mountains to pieces. Being the step son of Vayu Deva, my single jump could cross Maha Samudras. I could perform thousand parikramas of the thousand yojana spread of Maha Meru Parvata. bāhuvegapraṇunnena sāgareṇāham utsahe, samā -plāvayitūṃ lokam saparvatanadīhram/ mamorujaṅghāvegena bhaviṣyati samutthitaḥ, saṃmūrchitamahāgrāhaḥ samudro varuṇālayaḥ/ pannagāsānam ākāśe patantaṃ pakṣisevitam, vainateyam ahaṃ śaktaḥ parigantaṃ sahasraśaḥ/ With the unimaginable might of my shoulders and hands, I could splash and pound the high waves of Maha Samudras, and create devastation and mahem of high mountains. Lord Varuna's nivasa of Sapta Sagaras [Sapta Samudras: Lavana or Salt, Ikshurasa or Sugarcane juice, Sura or Wine, Ghrita or Classified Butter, Dahi or Curd, Ksheera or Milk and Suswada or Sweet Water] could be violently shaken to distress. Vaanara vridhaas! Like Maha Veera Garuda the elder son of Vinata Devi is in the habit of 'akaasha parikrama' and my ability is such that I could comfortably perform such parikramas by thousand times. I could follow Surya Deva in his regular daily pradakshinas from Udayaagiri to the Astamaagiri! utsaheyam atikrāntuṃ sarvān ākāśagocarān, sāgaram kṣobhayiṣyāmi dārayiṣyāmi medinīm/ parvatān kampayiṣyāmi plavamānaḥ plavaṅgamāḥ, harīṣye coruvegena plavamāno mahārṇavam/ Surely I have the capacity and aptitude to cross ahead of Nava Grahas, dry up oceans, destroy mountains, and keep jumping across the universe! buddhyā cāham prapaśyāmi manasā ceṣṭā ca me tathā, ahaṃ draṁsyāmi vaidehīm pramodadhvaṃ plavaṅgamāḥ/ mārutasya samo vege garuḍasya samo jave, ayutaṃ yojanānām tu gamiṣyāmīti me matiḥ/ vāsavyasya savajrasya brahmaṇo vā svayambhuvaḥ, vikramya sahasā hastād amṛtaṃ tad ihānaye, laṅkāṃ vāpi samutkṣipyā gaccheyam iti me matiḥ/ Vaanaras! As I apply my mind and cogitate, so do the circumstances and conditions too shape up likewise. My decisiveness right now is to see Videha Kumari's immediate darshan; now, you folks! Enjoy now and rejoice with very quick and most positive results and sweet fruits. I am only comparable to Vayu Deva and Garuda Deva; my strong belief and firm conviction at present is that I could comfortably undertake a rapid run of ten thousand yojanas of distance by air! Believe me my friends, right now, my morale and enthusiasm is such that I could seize and secure 'amrit' from the hands of Vajradhaari Indra or even Svayambhu Brahma Deva himself! Of which avail is, after all, pulling and uprooting the Kingdom Ravana's Lanka!' As Veera Hanuman assured thumping success from his tour of Lanka and back, the huge mass of Vaanaras paid sky high tributes, clappings, and victory shoutings of feverish rejoicings. Then commenced 'Swasti Vachanaas' and high tributes to the hero stating: ṛṣīṇām ca prasādena kapivṛddhamatena ca, gurūṇām ca prasādena plavasva tvaṃ mahārṇavam/ sthāsyāmaś caikapādena yāvadāgamanam tava, tvadgatāni ca sarveṣām jīvitāni vanaukasām/ 'Maha Vanara Anjaneya! May you carry with you in your epic like tour by crossing the Maha Sagara with memorable success and safe return the heart felt blessings of Maharshis, Gurus, Elders and friends. We would all await your successful travel and very fruitful return; do trust us that your success would provide us all a fresh lease of our lives.' Hanuman replied: As I would now jump and cross the Samudra, be assured that in the universe none could ever imitate. My initial jump would be to the top of Mahendra Parvata which is replete with trees bearing juicy and sweet fruits.' Thus, the Maha Kapeshvara reached, selected a few luscious fruits, enjoyed them relaxingly and remembered of Lanka forthwith for the subsequent jump forward.]

Sarga Two: Description of Lankapuri's beauty, thoughts about the size in which he should enter the interiors of the city and on the description Chandrodaya.

[Vishleshanas on a) Bilwa Swarga of Maga Nagas b) Kubera

a) Renowned as Bilwa Swarga, the lokas underneath the Seas occupy as much an area as Prithvi; the span of Earth is seventy thousand yojanas, height too is as much. The expanse of Patalas too is as much; these lokas are Atala, Vitala, Nitala, Sutala, Talatala, Rasatala and Patalas and each of these lokas has an expanse of ten thousand yojanas. The colour of these lokas is black, white, yellow, red, grey and golden respectively. The inhabitants of these lokas are Daityas, Danvaas and Nagas. Having visited these lokas, Brahmarshi Narada called these Patalas as Bilwa Swarga and even better than Swarga. These lokas enjoy extreme illumination from the ‘Manis’ (diamonds) on the hoods of the Nagas; Narada said: the powerful rays of Surya Deva provide radiance but not heat during the days, while Chandra Deva gives brightness but not too much of coldness. The inhabitant serpents and Daityas revel in themselves with festivities and luxurious delicacies of food, wine and intoxication for long hours of time without concerns and worries. They enjoy good time by way of swims in Sarovaras, rivers and lotus-ponds and deal with all kinds of valuable possessions. Underneath these Lokas shines Bhagavan Vishnu’s ‘Tamoguna Rupa’ as Sesha Naga named as Anantha, worshipped by Siddhas, Devatas, Devarshis and Daityas alike. Lying under the entire Universe, the mighty Sesha Deva bears the brunt of the Prithvi and the ‘Charaachara Jagat’.

(Brahmanada Purana)

b) Kubera: Vishrava was the father of Kubera. He married Kaikesi, the stepmother of Ravana, Kumbhakarna, Vibhishana and Surpanakha. Ravana after acquiring a boon from Brahma Deva drove away Kubera and seized Pushpaka Vimana which Kubera recovered only after Ravana’s death in Shri Rama’s hands. Kubera was stated to have settled on Gandhamadana Mountain at Alkapuri, the city of Treasures and had a grove called Chaitraratha where the leaves were of jewels and the flowers and fruits were of celestial s and angels, besides a charming lake called Nalini . Kubera is stated to be the Chief of Ashta Diks or eight directions and Ashta Loka Palakas viz. Indra, Agni, Yama, Nirruti, Varuna, Vayu, Kubera and Ishana. Kubera, the King of Yakshas and Unparalleled Possessor of Gems and Jewels has two Shaktis Viriddhi and Riddhi as his spouses and his Generals Manibhadra, Purnabhadra, Maniman, Manikandhara, Manisvargi, Manibhushana and Manikar Muktheadhari. There is an interesting reference about how Ganesha had overtaken Kubera’s pride vide Ganesha Purana:

By His very name, Vinayaka is a Jnaana Swarupa or the Symbol of Wisdom and Knowledge. Yet, any third party seeking to exhibit their own supremacy - especially by Devas, He could hardly stomach the false superiority. Lord Kubera the King of Yakshas once hosted a lavish feast and among other dignitaries called on Shiva and Parvati; the noblest couple responded that due to their preoccupations, they might have to regret but would ably deputise Lord Ganesha. At the scheduled time and day, all the Devas arrived and Ganesha too. Kubera was so happy as streams of Deva ganas were arriving at Alkapuri and felt proud of himself. Ganesha too arrived and showed off condescendingly remarking to other dignitaries nearby that Parvati Parameshvaras were busy and deputed Vinayaka instead. Then the dinner commenced with great pomp, while the invitees had thoroughly enjoyed the nine course dinner. Meanwhile however Ganesha whose appetite was unending made thousands of servers kept their beelines gasping and tottering the supply lines. As the three crore strong Deva Ganas were bemused witnessing the failure of lakhs of servers and cooks alike, Kubera was put to shame and ran to Parameshvara couple to Kailasha with a fistful of cooked rice by way of his offering to the illustrious Universal Parents of Maha Deva and Maha Devi. Ganesha with dissatisfied appetite too was already present there with His parents. The benign parents found a gasping Kubera running from Alkapuri to Kailasa cowed down and demoralised while prostrating Shiva- Parvati- and above all to Ganesha too.]

Sarga Nine: In the process of ‘Devi Sitaanveshana’ in the Pushpaka Vimana in Ravana’s residence, Hanuman witnessed countless ‘strees’ of youthful charm being playful inside; why had Ravana forcefully abducted Sita, despite his reputation of never forcing a woman but willingly married! [Vishleshanas a) on Maharshi Vasishtha and Kama Dhenu Shabala- b) Panchendriyas]

[Vishleshana on Maharshi Vasishtha and Kama Dhenu Shabala:

Maharshi Vasishtha welcomed King Vishvamitra and formally offered fresh fruits and ground grown tubular vegetables and enquired of the happiness and general welfare of his subjects. Similarly the King enquired of the welfare of the Sage, and the inmates of the ashram.. Then Vasishtha smilingly stated: ātithyaṁ kartum icchāmi balasyāśya mahābala, tava caivāprameyasya yathārhaṁ saṁpratīccha me/ satkriyāṁ tu bhavān etāṁ pratīcchatu mayodyatām, rājāṁs tvam atithiśreṣṭhaḥ pūjanīyaḥ prayatnataḥ/ Maharaja! May I offer appropriate lunch to you and your several follower armymen, as my duty is to provide ‘atithya’ as behoved of a King and followers. The King responded stating that the honours as from an ashram have been more than fulfilled already; more so it was time for his departure. But as the host insisted the King replied: bādham ity eva gādheyo vasiṣṭhaṁ pratyuvāca ha, yathā priyaṁ bhagavatas tathāstu munisattama/ King Vishvamitra as per the insistence of Vasishtha Muni replied that he ought to obey the instruction of Maharshi Vasishtha. Then Vasishtha asked his ‘mind born homa dhenu’ named Shabali the celestial cow and requested that she might provide such food as would behove of a famed King and his countless followers. yasya yasya yathākāmaṁ śaḍraseṣv abhipūjitam, tat sarvaṁ kāmadhug divye abhivaśakṛte mama/ rasennānna pānena lehyacoṣyeṇa saṁyutam, annānāṁ nicayaṁ sarvaṁ sṛjasva śabale tvara/ ‘Divya Kamadhenu’! entreated Vasishtha, ‘please get ready with ‘shadrasa bhojana’ of ‘bhakshya-bhojya- lehya-choshya-paaneeya paramaannas’ at the earliest!-- As Maharshi Vasishtha thus served excellent food to the King along with his entire army and retinue of queens and others too to their complete contentment, King Vishvamitra addressed Maharshi Vasishtha! gavāṁ śatasahasreṇa dīyatām śabalā mama, ratnaṁ hi bhagavann etad ratnahārī ca pārthivaḥ, tasmān me śabalāṁ dehi mamaishā dharmato dvija/ Maharshi! Do accept the charity from my kingdom about a lakh of prize cows yielding barrels of fresh and sweet milk due to my being the overall king of my subjects. It is out of the same authority of my being the King of this kingdom again, let me exchange Shabala as per the established principle of kingship. Vasishtha replied : Just as a dharmika parayana could never be severed from his inner consciousness, I too could never be aloof from me since my ‘havya-kavya kaaryas’ in my daily routine would certainly get affected severely. My routine of agnihotra-bali-homa- swaaha- vashatkaara and all the practice of related vidyas should get adversely disturbed too in her absence. In short, my very existence is my possession of Shabala. King Vishvamitra then offered fourteen thousand elephants, eight hundred golden chariots each of which adorned with four each of mighty horses of excellent nativity, in addition to which eleven thousand horses of the best possible parts of the contemporary kingdoms too, apart from one crore cows of sweet milk bearing breed. Maharshi Vasishtha declared: King Vishamitra! I will not part with Shabala as this is my jewel, my prosperity, my life and my totality! Sargas 52 and 53 of Valmiki Bala Ramayana]

Sarga Ten: In the process of searching for Devi Sita, Hanuman was confused by seeing Devi Mandodari to Devi Sita!

[Vishleshana on Devi Mandodari]

Devi Mandodari was the daughter of Mayasura and Hema, a noted pativrata of the ranking of Ahalya, Tara, Anasuya, Sumati and Draupadi. She was reputed for faithfulness, selflessness, innocence, righteousness, besides of convincing capacity which of course failed in the case of her husband Ravana much as in the case of Tara. Her trait of carrying conviction was well proven as in the case of her own brothers named Mayavi and Dundubhi who were always at loggerheads. But her capability of gentleness, and honesty were stated to be unparalleled. Ravana was no doubt an admirable being, a glorious warrior, a reputed Shiva bhakta, excellent family background and a person of dharmic nature who never forced women to bed. But he failed in the case of Devi Sita as that faced his doom along with his followers. She pleaded her husband, who incidentally was younger to her husband, just as Devi Tara did to Vaali but failed. Indeed she had the rudimentary virtue of a proven Pativrata with the proverbial Puranic features of an ideal life partner being a servant like service, a mother like affection, an ever comforting woman of charm, beauty and kingly family origin with prosperity, besides dedication, humility, forgiveness, compassion and the patience as of Bhudevi!]

Sarga Twelve: Hanuman in his remote thoughts wondered and was even concerned of Devi Sita's very existence but quickly recovered from such apprehensions resumed 'Sitanveshana' yet again with confidence and belief!

[Vishleshana on Continued Endeavor towards success vide Bhagavad Gita]

Karmayedhikaaraste maa phaleshu kadaachana, maa karma heturbhuh maate sangosta karmani/Partha! You do only the liberty to 'do' but never demand the return fruits about which you have no control. Yet never abstain from the performance surely expected of you. 'Karma Phala' is as per the decision of the Almighty. What ever is decided as per destiny shall doubtless be awarded to you. Never hesitate to accept by way of self desire or by the misleading advice of the public. The very feeling of disappointment creates suspicion and self repudiation. This tends to lead to frustration which is the anti-thesis of contentment and thus further leads to a string of inabilities for further successes! That situation is tantamount to 'jadatva' or total lack of initiative!]

Sarga Thirteen: Despite his sincere efforts of finding Devi Sita, the indications were slimmed and might even return disappointed. Yet, Sampati assured and visited 'Ashoka Vatika'

[Vishleshana on Sampati's assurance to Vanara Sena vide Valmiki Kishkindha Ramayana Sarga]

As Maharshi Nishaakara instructed Sampati intensively to keep serving Shri Rama Karya as a singular duty of Sampati's life and very existence, the latter slowly walked out from the Maharshi's cave and slowly crawled up to the top of the Vindhya Parvata. With the passage of time, the Maharshi passed away and there ever since, Sampati had been waiting. He told the Vanara shreshthas further that he wished to sacrifice his life since his living proved to be a drag ever since, but the Maharshi's words were ringing in his years to wait till the arrival of the Vanara sena on ‘Shri Rama Karya’. Time and again Sampaaati had been chiding his son as and when he used to fetch food for him as why he had not punished ‘duraatma’ Ravanaasura and save Devi Sita some how. Like wise he was sharing his thoughts to the vaanara shreshthaas who assembled around him. Meanwhile, Sampaaati realised that his burnt off wings were slowly regenerating. He was excited to address the Vaanara veeras: niśākarasya maharṣeḥ prabhāvād amitātmanah, ādityarāśminir -dagdhau pakṣau me punar utthitau/ yauvane vartamānasya mamāsīd yaḥ parākramah, tam evādyāvagacchāmi balaṁ pauraṣam eva ca/ sarvathā kriyatām yatnaḥ sītām adhigamiṣyatha, pakṣalābho mamāyaṁ vaḥ siddhipratyaya kārakah/ ‘Kapi varaas! Thanks indeed by the blessings of Maharshi Nishaakara, my wings which were totally burnt off during my escapade with Surya Deva, have come come back sprouting. Now I should now onward be able to experience and enjoy my purusharthaas of ‘Dharmaartha Kaamaas’! Vaanara veeras! All of you now should now put in your very best to take up the challenging endeavour to attain Devi Sita mother’s darshan as soon as possible. This success is indeed round the corner, just as my wings are sprouting back.’ Unable to suppress his greatest desire to fly any longer, Sampaaati flew off in excitement as all the vaanara veeras clapped in response with the strong determination to initiate and propel the action on hand.]

Sarga Fifteen: Hanuman yet in his miniature form finally visioned Devi Sita near a ‘Chaitya Praasaada Mandira’ and identified her and felt ecstatic

[Vishleshana on Sankhya Shastra vide Brahma Sutras:

Brahma Sutras too explain this vide Chapter I on Samanvaya: Understanding by Interpretation:. Upanishads seek to imply the very purport of Vedas. These comprehend the basis of Awareness about the original cause of Existence and of the Universe. It is only by that Supreme Consciousness that the Ancient Scriptures seek to comprehend but not by a secondary Source of what is loosely designated as the Self Consciousness as Sankhya Yogas interpret; indeed, the Self as an individual is Brahman and is not a separate entity either. This is what Upanishads and Scriptures based on the ancient Scripts handed down the ages about the awareness of Brahman from whom the Universe originates, sustains, terminates and regerminates again and again; it is that Supreme Energy as the Source of Vedas, which is the uniform topic of Vedanta Scripts, who is admitted to be the Cause of the World as argued and decidedly established. Brahman is not the ‘Koshamaya’ or of Pancha Koshas or body sheaths of Annamaya-Pranamaya-Manomaya-Vijnanamaya and Anandamaya as based on Saamkhya Thought but is indeed the Supreme Self of Nirguna Niraakara or alternatively of the ‘Saakaara Saguna Swarupa’ or of Form and features viz. the Magnificent Bliss that is in turn reflected as the Antaratma or of the Individual Self of all the Beings in Srishti. It is this Blissful Brahman who is not only the Antaratma or the Individual Consciousness; this Paramatma is not only Antaratma, but also the Pancha Bhutas, Space, Light, the Praana or Vital Force, the Illumination within and without. It is that Singular Entity, The Bhokta and the Bhojya or the Cause and the Effect, the Material Cause, the one inside the ‘Daharakasha’ or the Sky within the invisible cavity of the Heart and the Sky above, the Pancha Bhutas, the Panchendriyas, Sleep and Death, above all the Cause and Effect. Indeed, Brahman is the Material Cause of the Universe. !]

Sarga Sixteen: Hanuman having finally ensured that Devi Sita was visioned, felt that as to why she, an outstanding Pativrata, why and how Ravana has been disgusting, yet sad.

[Vishleshana on Rama’s killing Kabandha as per his latter’s ‘Atma Katha’ vide Sarga Sixty Nine of Valmiki Aranya Khanda: .Kabandha narrates his ‘atma katha’ the autobiography to Rama Lakshmanas stating that in the distant past he was a Maha Rakshasa of notoriety terrifying Maharshis. As the Rakshasa assumed a huge and intolerable form, sought to terrify a Rishi named Sthulashira, the Rishi was angry and cursed him to assume that hideous form for ever: 'Rakshasa! You continue this very nasty swarupa for ever till you die. Then Kabandha was afraid of the consequent form and requested for relief and then the Rishi forevisioned to say that only when Rama Lakshmanas the epic heros should get caught by you and then finally slice off both of your shoulders, then you would attain 'mukti'. As Kabandha since became the vikrita swarupa as a result of the Maha Munis's 'shaapa', the Rakshasa was mellowed down and undertook severest possible tapasya to Brahma Deva. In turn, Brahma was pleased and granted the Rakshasa's wish for longevity. Then Kabandha having secured Brahma Deva's blessing for longevity, his demonic instinct was puffed up and attacked Lord Devendra himself. Devendra then threw away his peerless 'vajraayudha' and as a result, Maha Rakshasa Kabandha's lower body portion got upside down! Then I asked Indra: Deva Raja! You had utilised your invincible 'vajrayudha' and consequently, my very physical form changed transformed; how could I survive without food while Brahma blessed me with longevity. Then Indra Deva helped me to extend my both the arms by a yojana each so that the stretch of the hands could be conveniently extended so that the food could reach right into the mouth! Indra further fore-visioned that Rama Lakshmana's would get caught in the grip of the rakshasa but they would sever the Rakshasa's shoulders and get relieved for mukti.]

Sarga Twenty Three: Select Rakshasis of learning like Ekajata-Harijata-Vikata- and Durmikhie extoll the qualities of bravery of Ravanaasura while seeking to convincingly pressurise Devi Sita to accept the offer of Prime Queenship

[Vishleshana on Prajapatis, Adityas, Rudras, Vasus and Ashvini Kumars

Prajapatis: Mareechi-Atri-Angeera-Pulasya-Pulaha-and Kratu

Ashta Vasus: Aapa, Dhruva, Soma, Dhara, Anila, Anala, Pratyusha and Prabhasa. They once visited Vasishtha's Ashram along with their wives and desired to possess Nandini the Kamadhenu; as the Maharshi refused, Prabhasa he took lead in stealing the cow while other Vasus too abetted the plan. Vasishtha cursed the Vasus to become humans but reduced the impact of the curse to all of them to be born as humans only for a few hours except Prabhasa the ring leader. Thus Devi Ganga who was married to King Shantanu of Maha Bharata on condition that what even she did should not be questioned but she drowned the new borns one by one in the River but he could not contain himself and asked Ganga why did she do such merciless actions; Ganga left Shantanu as the eighth child was spared but deserted the King for good. The eighth child was Gangeya who was Bhishma and that was Prabhasa the Leader of Ashta Vasus who secured Vasishtha's curse that he should have a full life but without a wife since Prabhasa listened to his wife and stole the Kama Dhenu Nandini.

Ekaadasha Rudras: Mahan, Mahatma, Matimaan, Bhishana, Bhayankara, Ritudhwaja, Urthvakesha, Pingalaksha, Rucha, Shuchi and Kaalagni.

Dwaadasha Adityas: Aditya Deva assumes twelve other Murti / Forms viz. Indra, Dhata, Parjanya, Pusha, Twashta, Aryama, Bhaga, Vivishwan, Amshu, Vishnu, Varuna and Mitra. Among these twelve Murthis, Indra was Chief of Devas ruling Amaravati and destroying Daityas and Danavas from time to time. Dhata being in the Status of Prajapati took up the task of Creation; Parjanya in the Form of Sun rays rained all over the Universe; Pusha is in the form of Mantras engaged for Prajaaposhana; Twashta is present in the form of 'Vanapati' and 'Aushadhi' (Vegetable Oils and Herbal Medicines); Aryama who provides protection and relief to humanity; Bhaga is in the form of Earth and Mountains; Vivishwan in the form of Agni / Fire and is the cooking facilitator of food as also of the destroying power; the ninth name of Surya Deva is Amshu or of the form of Chandra Deva who provides coolness and pleasure of existence; Vishnu is the tenth name of Surya who constantly checks the evil forces in the World and slays

Danavaas and establishes virtue from time to time by assuming Incarnations; Varuna is the eleventh appearance present in water as the source of life and fertility staying in Oceans, Rivers and various water profiles; and finally, Mitra or form of propitiousness and help to humanity. In whatever form he might be, Surya Deva is indeed the ‘Karanam, Kaaranam and Karta’ or the Act, Action and the Supreme Actor in the drama of Life! Bhakti (Devotion), Shraddha (fortitude) and Puja (Worship) sum up the meanings of human life! The corresponding Twelve Names of Aditya are stated to identify with the Twelve Months of a Year viz. Chaitra with Vishnu, Vaishakha with Aryama, Jyeshtha with Viviswan, Ashadha with Amshuman, Shravana with Parjanya, Badrapada with Varuna, Ashwin with Indra, Kartika with Dhata, Margasirsha with Mitra, Pausha with Pusha, Magha with Bhaga and Twashta in Phalgun

Vishleshana on Ashvini Kumars from Surya Purana:

Vishwakarma the Shilpi’s daughter was Sangina whose celestial name is Raagini also called Surenu in dyuloka. Sangina’s shadow is Chhaaya also called Nikshubha. Sangina is not only pretty but a Pativrata too; she gave birth to Manu and Yama. But she was unable to approach the ever fiery form of Surya and after retaining her shadow left to her father Vishvakarma’s home to stay there for very thousand and odd years, despite the father advising her to return to her husband’s home as soon as possible. As the father pressurised her, she left for Utrara Kuru pradesha in the form of a horse. Chhaya Devi and Surya Deva gave birth to two sons named Shritashrava and Shrutakarma, besides a daughter named Tapati. Shritashrava’s son was Saavarni Manu and Shanaishwara was the son of Shritakarma. Just as Sangina Devi was too affectionate with her children, Chhaya Devi was not so. Chhaya had normal relation with Sangina’s elder son Manu, but had difference of opinion with Yama. As Chhaya bothered Yama too much, then the latter desired to lift her physically and held her upside down and in the process touched her feet. Chhaya then gave a ‘shaap’ or curse that Yama’s feet be twisted and disfigured. In this physical altercation, Surya appeared and said that every ‘shaap’ could be negated but not that of a mother and suggested that the only way could be to the flesh of Yama’s feet be kept on ‘krimis’ or vicious worms so that the flesh of the feet be eaten and got disappeared and the fleshless feet be retained. This way- out would save Yama’s feet and Chhaya Devi’s curse be carried out too. Soon after this shaap incident, Vishvakarma the father of Sangina approached Surya Deva and informed him that his daughter Sangina was in the form of a horse in Shaaka dwipa, and made Surya to assume the form of a male horse at where Sangina was grazing. Then Surya in the form of a male horse approached Sangina in the form of a female horse and tried to mate. Sangina struggled in the act of mating as she was of the feeling that Surya was a ‘para purusha’; in the process of the struggle Surya’s virility entered Sangina’s nose and she gave birth to two sons viz. Ashvini Kumars the celestial physicians, named Naasatya and Dasnna. After Surya Deva revealed his identity, then the two horses mated again and Revant was born with similar radiance like that of the father.]

Sarga Twenty Seven: Even as the cruelmost Rakshasis surrounded Devi Sita to attack, the eldest of them named Trijata screamed from her ominous dream and described tragic forebodes of ‘Lanka Vinaashana’ too soon
[Vishleshana of two birds seated on the same branch of a tree-source Mundaka Upanishad]

[Vishleshana of two birds seated on the same branch of a tree-source Mundaka Upanishad]

Dve Suparnaa Sayuja sakhaaya samaanam vriksham parishasvajaate, tayloranyam pippalam svaaddhvatti anaishnan anyobhichaakasheeti/ (An analogy of two companion birds named Suparna and Sayuja is drawn sharing the same tree as one is busy eating the fruits of the tree while the other remains watching without tasting; this is just as two persons are enjoying the taste even as the other refrains. While one regales by rejoicing the sweet results of different kinds of material happiness the other person calculates and weighs the pros and cons of the karma and the resultant reactions.)

Sargas Twenty Eight and Twenty Nine: Despite Trijata's 'dussvapna' foreboding shouts of disasters about Ravana and Lanka Rajya, Devi Sita continued to cry shell shocked; however gradually recovered due to her own forevisions of auspiciousness

[Vishleshana on Indra entering Devi Diti's garbha sourced from Maha Bhagavata Purana:

Chakravarti Bali, who was also punished by Vamana, the incarnation of Vishnu. Diti felt that Indra was responsible for several killings of her progeny including Hiranyaksha and Hiranuyakasipu and thus her anger for Indra became intense. She thus requested her husband Kasyapa to bless her with a son who could kill Indra. Sage Kasyapa felt extremely sad that his wife was following a wicked route to bear her a son to kill Indra. He somehow desired that such an eventuality should never arise and planned to at least prolong time for a year and asked Diti to follow very strict regime of personal sacrifice named 'Pumsavana'. During the year, Diti should not think ill of others, nor speak lies, nor hurt any body, nor eat flesh or fish, nor wear robes unwashed by herself, but worship Brahmanas, cows, and women with husbands and sons alive, in short follow a life of a hermit. Any discrepancy or deviation from the prescribed do's and don'ts would not only kill Indra but would become a friend and associate. The nephew Indra knew the intention of Diti, but pretended to help her in the Daily Worship by fetching flowers and fruits to Diti and such other services. At the time of Diti's delivery after a year, Indra who had yoga sidhis, like 'anima' and 'laghima' entered Diti's womb and with the help of his 'Vjara' (the Thunderbolt) cut the embryo into seven pieces and cut each piece to another seven pieces. Each of the forty-nine pieces thus born became as many 'Maruts' who became demigods and thus Diti was purified of her envy and animosity of Lord Indra.]

Sarga Thirty Five: Devi Sita finally concedes Hanuman's genuineness- then he describes Rama's 'guna ganaas', how Rama missed her, Sugriva's help repaying Rama's help by killing Vaali- Sampati's guidance to reach her.

Vishleskana on Vedas and Vedangas

Chaturvedas: Originally there was only one Unique Veda from the face of Lord Brahma but Vyasa Maharshi felt that the Single Veda covering all the aspects of Existence would be difficult to absorb by the successive generations and hence facilitated the division into Chatur Vedas viz. Rik-Yajur-Saama-Atharvana. Vedas are the beacon lights to search the ways and means to achieve the 'Purusharthas' of Dharma, Artha, Kama and Moksha. The four Vedas viz. Rig, Yajur, Saama and Atharva Vedas put together are stated to total one lakh Mantras. Rigveda contains two distinct 'Shaakhaas' or branches, viz. 'Sankhyayana' and 'Ashvala -ayana' and together contains one thousand Mantras, while Rigvediya Brahmana Bhhaga contains two thousand Mantras. Maharshis like Shri Krishna Dwaipayana took Rigveda as 'Pramana' (Standard) Veda. Yajur Veda contains nineteen thousand Mantras. Of these, the Brahmana Grandhas have one thousand Mantras and the Shaakhas have one thousand six hundred and eight Mantras. In Yajurveda the main Shaakhaas are 'Kanvi', 'Maadhyandini', 'Kathi', 'Maadhy Kathi', 'Maitraayani', 'Taittiriya' and 'Vaishampaaniya'. Saama Veda has two main Shaakhas viz. 'Kouthuma' and 'Aatharvaayani' or Raamaayaniya' and these contain 'Veda', 'Aaranyaka', 'Uktha' and 'Vuuha' 'Gaanaas' or Verses. Saama Veda has nine thousand four hundred twenty five Mantras-all stated to be related to Brahma. Atharva Veda has Rishi-oriented Shaakhaas like Sumantu, Jaajali, Shlokaayani, Shounaka, Pippalaad and Munjakesha. These contain sixteen thousand Mantras and hundred 'Upanishads'. The Shaakha differentiation of Vedas and of Itihaasaas and Puraanas was stated to have been done by Vishnu Himself and were of Vishnu Swarupa. Vyaasa preached Puranas to Lomaharshana and to Suta by way of 'Purana Pravachana'. The main 'Sishyas' of Vyasa were Sumati, Agnivarcha, Shimshapaayan, Kritavrata and Saavarni. Shimshapaayan and others were engaged in constructing 'Samhitaas'. (Source: Agni Purana)

Shat Vedangas: Siksha, Vyakarana, Kalpa Grandha, Nirukta, Chhandas, and Jyotisha. Siksha is essentially about Sangeeta or Music the Swara Shastra viz. Sapta Swaras, Gramas or scale or gamut in music, Murchanas or intonations/modulations, ten Gunas, Padas (letters); Kalpa grantha comprises kalpas of Nakshatra or Chandra-Nakshatra movement; Veda for attaining Purushardhas viz. Dharma-Artha- Kaama-Moksha; Samhita about Tatwa Darshi, Mantras Chhandas etc; Angirasa Kalpa about abhichara vidhi vidhana like procedures of magic, charms, benevolent or malevolent karma kaanda and finally Shanti Kalpa, Mantras, Procedures, to ward off dangers, and usher in good tidings from Celestial, Terrestrial, extra terrestrial sources. Griha Kalpa too is significant like Homa Prakriyas, Mudras, Mangala Snaanaas, Abhishekas, Pujas for Deva-Devis and Nava Grahas etc. Vyakarana Shastra is about grammar, vibhaktis or cases, vachanas, naama - sarvanaamas, Pratyaya, Samaasa, Karakas. Nirukta is derived and rhetoric or artificial interpretation seeking to bring out the hidden meaning of Vedas; viz. 'nir' connoting the comprehensive sense that is sought to be conveyed and 'ukta' states that which is revealed more than what is concealed. Chhandas Shastra is stated as the feet of Vedas, being 'Vaidik' and 'Loukik'; Gayatri-Brihati-Ushnik-Jagati-Trishthup- Anushtup -Pankti being the Chhando Vidhi and the various combinations of 'Ganas' varied basically with 'ya-maa-taa-raa-ja-baa-na-sa-la-ga' and poetry made there of in three letter combinations; the ruling deities of the Ganas are: Ya gana (Water), Ma gana (Prithvi), Ta gana (Sky), Ra gana (Agni/ fire), Ja gana (Surya), Bha gana (Chandra), Na gana (Ayu or Life/health) and Sa gana (Vaayu). Jyotisha Shastra is all about Siddantha Ganita, Jaataka/ hora, and Samhita. The means of Jyotisha are Panchanga Sadhana by way of Thithi-Vaara-Nakshatra-Karana-Yoga; Grahana Sadhana of Solar/ Lunar Eclipses, besides Dik-Sadhana. Jaataka Skandha is the Science of Raashi-Shad Varga, 'Maitri Bhaavaabhaavaas' and Graha-Nakshatra compatibilities. (Source: Narada Purana)

[Comprehensive Vishleshana on a) Kesari-Shambanaada-Anjana Kumari; b)-Vayu Deva and Anjana Devi-c) Glory of Anjaneya d) Hanuman and Ravanaasura

a) Kesari was the son of Gautami Rishi and Kesari's wife was Devi Anjana who secured a son named Anjaneya. Once Raakshasa Shambasaadana spied on Anjana Kumari who was playfully singing a song but a dirty hand of a Rakshasa tried to draw her close as she was bewildered with fear as was seeking her near, whispering in a heavy: My dear dove! Why are you fleeing from me! As shrieked saying 'help me, help me.' The Rakshasa said: none ever can save you; not even God. Kesari a huge Vanara saw from a tree top and jumped down and intervened. There followed a roaring fight but the Rakshasa overpowered Kesari, who in turn aimed at the rakshasa with his bow and arrows. The fight continued as the Rakshasa took the form of a huge elephant. The rain of arrows continued yet the rakshasa remained invincible since the thick skin of the elephant was in fact boomeranging back to Kesari. Then Kesari suddenly assumed a miniature form, flew on to the elephant head, tortured the weakest points of the elephant's brain cells. The Rakshasa in response dropped the miniaturized vaanara down to earth as Kesari's blood cells were cut and blood started flowing out. Meanwhile, the dazed Anjana Kumari prayed to Lord Shiva, and a whispering voice was heard: nothing could happen to the rakshasa as he is invincible, except by the rakshasa's own blood. Anjana Kumari got the hint, secretly crawled on the ground, picked up an arrow from Kesari, smeared rakshasa's own blood there on, whispered to Kesari, reached the bow and arrow to his hands and hit at Rakshasa once again. Meanwhile, Shambasaadana took the form of a huge bull with a view to gore Kesari's writhing body to trample to death by lowering the bull horns. Kesari stood up somehow and shot his arrows- as smeared by Shambasaadana's own blood- at the bull's eyes. The bull's eyes were punctured and the rakshasa's blood came out in flows and the Rakshasa collapsed down. Kumari Anjana had quickly smeared the rakshasa's own blood on to Kesari's arrows and supplied to the bow of Kesari. Thus crashed down the Rakshas's huge bull body to death. As Maharshis witnessed by their 'divya drishti' appeared and endeared both Kesari and Anjana and having taken their mutual consent blessed them as ideal couples.

b) Excerpts from Sarga 67 of Kishkindha Khanda of Valmiki Ramayana on Vayu Deva and Devi Anjana:

Veeranjaneya! Your origin and of birth are indescribable: Pujikasthala was indeed a famed Aprasa was cursed to be born as 'Kapini' or Vanara Stree famed as Anjana who was wedded to Kesari. As the Kapini had the ability to assume any form as she pleased and during the rainy season was seated on a mountain top dressed in silks, with priceless ornaments and decorated with sweet odoured flowers. Then there was a sweep of wind and Devi Anjana and Vayu Deva touched her tightly. sā tu tatraiva sambhrāntā suvṛttā vākyaṃ abravīt, ekapatnīvrataṃ idaṃ ko nāśayitum icchati/ añjanāyā vacaḥ śrutvā mārutaḥ pratyabhāṣata, na tvāṃ himsāmi suśroṇi mā bhūt te subhage bhayam/ But Devi Anjana was an ideal 'Pativrata' and in that hesitative concern, did not make further advances and was in fact terribly afraid. Then Vayu Deva smiled reassuringly and said: 'Who indeed wishes to spoil your pativrata vrata! Sushreni! Don't you be scared as your mind must be rid of misleading thoughts. manasāsmi gato yat tvāṃ pariṣvajya yaśasvini, vīryavān buddhisampannaḥ putras tava bhaviṣyati/ abhyutthitaṃ tataḥ sūryaṃ bālo dṛṣṭvā mahāvane, phalaṃ ceti jighṛkṣus tvam utplutyābhyapato divam/ Yashasvini! I would only like to embrace you mentally by way of 'maanasika sankalpa' but not physically. As a result of such 'maanasika samyoga', you would be blessed with a 'Maha Bala Paraakrama, Buddhi Sampanna Putra praapti' who could cross oceans with speed and great ease!. Subsequently, Anjana Devi gave birth in a mountain cave!

c) Glory of Anjaneya from Sarga 67 as above:

Even in childhood, you always felt that Surya Deva too was a sweet fruit on the sky. śatāni trīṇi gatvātha yojanānām mahākape, tejasā tasya nirdhūto na viśādaṃ tato gataḥ/ tāvad āpatatas tūrṇam antarikṣam mahākape, kṣiptam indreṇa te vajraṃ krodhāviṣṭena dhīmātā/ tataḥ śailāgrāsikhare vāmo hanur abhayaṭa, tato hi nāmadheyam te hanumān iti kīrtyate/ Maha Kape! Therefore you jumped up by three hundred yojanas once and felt that you could not still reach Surya. You kept on trying and finally reached Surya Deva, but Indra Deva was angry and hit you with his Vajrayudha. That was why your left side - hanu- was hurt and hence your name is 'hanuman'! On seeing the entire scene, Vayu Deva was terribly concerned and thus the Prabhajana Deva Vaayu stopped his movement in trilokas and then the Ashta Dikpalakas tried their best but finally Brahma Deva had to pacify Vayu Deva blessing Anjaneya would be immune from 'astra shastras'! vajrasya ca nipātena virujam tvāṃ samīkṣya ca, sahasranetraḥ prītātmaṃ dadau te varam uttamam/ svacchandataś ca maraṇam te bhūyād iti vai prabho, sa tvāṃ kesariṇaḥ putraḥ kṣetrajo bhīmavikramaḥ/ mārutasya aurasāḥ putras tejasā cāpi tatsamaḥ, tvāṃ hi vāyusuto vatsa plavane cāpi tatsamaḥ/ Anjaneya! Even 'vajra prahara' by Indra Deva would be futile on your body and Mrityu is in your control'. Finally, Maha Jaambavan asserted: tad vijṛmbhasva vikrāntaḥ plavatām uttamo hy asi, tvadvīryam draṣṭukāmeyam sarvā vānaravāhinī/ uttiṣṭha hariśārdūla laṅghayasva mahārṇavam, parā hi sarvabhūtānām hanuman yā gatis tava/ viśāṇṇā harayaḥ sarve hanuman kim upekṣase, vikramasva mahāvego viṣṇus trīṇ vikramān iva/ Parakrami Mahaanjaneya! Now is the time that you have to proclaim to the trilokas to heighen your stature as the Vanara Sena is longing to witness what you really indeed are. Kindly get up and cross this Maha Sagara in one jump as that indeed is a sure step for Loka Kalyana. All the Vanara Veeras are right now are on the verge of collapse. As Maha Vishnu as Vamana Deva measured the Universe with three steps, please put forth three steps ahead to sure success! As Hanuman was ready to cross the Maha Samudra with gusto, the Vanara Sena which had hitherto were drowned in incapacity, helplessness and preparedness for self sacrifices, roared in ecstasy. Samstūyamāno hanumān vyavardhata mahābalaḥ, samāvidhya ca laṅgūlam harṣāc ca balam eyivān/ Enthused by their frenzy, he gradually increased his height and the proportionate volume of his body, just as Vamana Deva did. harīṇām utthito madhyāt samprahṛṣṭatanūruhaḥ, abhivādya harīn vṛddhān hanumān idaṃ abravīt/ arujan parvatāgrāṇi hutāśanasakho 'nilaḥ, balavān aprameyaś ca vāyur ākāśagocaraḥ/ tasyāham śīghravegasya śīghragasya mahātmanaḥ, mārutasya aurasāḥ putraḥ plavane nāsti me samaḥ/ Veera

Hanuman stood amidst the Vaanaras and addressed them especially the elderly Vanara Vriddhas thus: ‘ I am of the strength and speed of Vaayu Deva , my originator and am possessive of endless energy. Vayu Deva is a great friend of Agni Deva! I am blessed with the might of destroying mountains to pieces. Being the step son of Vayu Deva, my single jump could cross Maha Samudras. I could perform thousand parikramas of the thousand yojana spread of Maha Meru Parvata. bāhuvegapraṇunnena sāgareṇāham utsahe, samā -plāvayitum lokam saparvatanadīhradam/ mamorujaṅghāvegena bhaviṣyati samutthitah, saṁmūrchitamahāgrāhaḥ samudro varuṇālayaḥ/ pannagāśanam ākāśe patantaṁ pakṣisevitam, vainateyam ahaṁ śaktaḥ parigantum sahasraśaḥ/ With the unimaginable might of my shoulders and hands, I could splash and pound the high waves of Maha Samudras, and create devastation and mahem of high mountains. Lord Varuna’s nivasa of Sapta Sagaras [Sapta Samudras: Lavana or Salt, Ikshurasa or Sugarcane juice, Sura or Wine, Ghrita or Classified Butter, Dahi or Curd, Ksheera or Milk and Suswada or Sweet Water] could be violently shaken to distress. Vaanara vriddhaas! Like Maha Veera Garuda the elder son of Vinata Devi is in the habit of ‘akaasha parikrama’ and my ability is such that I could comfortably perform such parikramas by thousand times. I could follow Surya Deva in his regular daily pradakshinas from Udayaagiri to the Astamaagiri! utsaheyam atikrāntum sarvān ākāśagocarān, sāgaram kṣobhayiṣyāmi dārayiṣyāmi medinīm/ parvatān kampayiṣyāmi plavamānaḥ plavaṅgamāḥ, hariṣye coruvegena plavamāno mahārṇavam/ Surely I have the capacity and aptitude to cross ahead of Nava Grahas, dry up oceans, destroy mountains, and keep jumping across the universe! buddhyā cāhaṁ prapaśyāmi manas ceṣṭā ca me tathā, ahaṁ drakṣyāmi vaidehīm pramodadhvaṁ plavaṅgamāḥ/ mārutasya samo vege garuḍasya samo jave, ayutaṁ yojanānām tu gamiṣyāmīti me matiḥ/ vāsavasya savajrasya brahmaṇo vā svayambhuvaḥ, vikramya sahasā hastād amṛtaṁ tad ihānaye, laṅkāṁ vāpi samutkṣipyā gaccheyam iti me matiḥ/ Vaanaras! As I apply my mind and cogitate, so do the circumstances and conditions too shape up likewise. My decisiveness right now is to see Videha Kumari’s immediate darshan; now, you folks! Enjoy now and rejoice with very quick and most positive results and sweet fruits. I am only comparable to Vayu Deva and Garuda Deva; my strong belief and firm conviction at present is that I could comfortably undertake a rapid run of ten thousand yojanas of distance by air! Believe me my friends, right now, my morale and enthusiasm is such that I could seize and secure ‘amrit’ from the hands of Vajradhaari Indra or even Svayambhu Brahma Deva himself! Of which avail is, after all, pulling and uprooting the Kingdom Ravana’s Lanka!’ As Veera Hanuman assured thumping success from his tour of Lanka and back, the huge mass of Vaanaras paid sky high tributes, clappings, and victory shoutings of feverish rejoicings. Then commenced ‘Swasti Vachanaas’ and high tributes to the hero stating: ṛṣṇām ca prasādena kapivṛddhamatena ca, gurūṇām ca prasādena plavasva tvam mahārṇavam/ sthāsyāmaś caikapādena yāvadāgamanam tava, tvadgatāni ca sarveṣām jīvītāni vanaukasām/ ‘Maha Vanara Anjaneya! May you carry with you in your epic like tour by crossing the Maha Sagara with memorable success and safe return the heart felt blessings of Maharshis, Gurus, Elders and friends. We would all await your successful travel and very fruitful return; do trust us that your success would provide us all a fresh lease of our lives.’ Hanuman replied: As I would now jump and cross the Samudra, be assured that in the universe none could ever imitate. My initial jump would be to the top of Mahendra Parvata which is replete with trees bearing juicy and sweet fruits.’ Thus, the Maha Kapeshvara reached, selected a few luscious fruits, enjoyed them relaxingly and remembered of Lanka forthwith for the subsequent jump forward.

d) Hanuman and Ravana from Bhavishya Purana:

Kesari the son of Gautami Rishi and Kesari’s wife Anjana secured a grand son named Hanuman with the ‘Amsa’ (facet) of Parama Shiva and Vayu Deva too was responsible in the birth of the boy. Mistaking Surya Deva for a red-coloured fruit, the boy was tempted to fly skyward tried to hold Surya Deva, as Indra threw his Vajra on Hanuman’s body and Ravana tried to hold Hanuman’s tail but Hanuman never left his firm hold of Surya Deva. Ravan kept on fighting for a year in vain and tried to wriggle out of Hanuman’s powerful clasp. Meanwhile Rishi Vishrava arrived at the spot and eulogised Hanuman to release Ravana the terror of the Universe. There after Hanuman resided for long time at Pampapura on the banks of PampaRiver as a strong fixture and was thus acclaimed as ‘Sthanu’. Also since Ravana who had dictated the World and controlled Devas was humiliated by Anjaneya, his name and fame spread as Hanuman: Nighnanta cha Suraan mukhyan Ravanam Lokaraavanam, Nihanti Mushtirbhayah sa Hanumaaniti vishrutah. (Ravana who was in the habit of badly hurting Devas and related Demi-Gods and killing Vishnu- Bhaktas without mercy had thus been restrained badly and received a jolt by Hanuman; the ‘Mushtighatas’ or ‘Hanus’ (beatings of closed hand grasps) damaged Ravana was the reason why Hanuman was named as such. Lord Brahma informed Hanuman that during the twenty eighth Tretayuga’s first Part of Vaivaswa Manvantara, Bhagavan Vishnu would take the Incarnation of Shri Rama and that he would achieve Rama’s unreserved devotion to Hanuman and destroy the clan of Ravana, his cruel brothers and sinful sons.]

Sarga Thirty Six: Maha Veera Hanuman bestows Shri Rama’s finger ring to Devi Sita as a memory refresher- the highly excited Devi Sita falls back to her memory screen, as Hanuman assures Rama’s arrival too soon!

Listen to me carefully: there are six ways and means of accomplishing Six ‘Neeti Chandrikas’ viz. Sandhi-Vigraha-Yaana-Aasana-Dwidhi bhaava-and samaashraya. Sandhi denotes the Principle of Truce, Tolerance and Coexistene. Vigraha refers to conflict of similar forces leading to balance of power. Yaana suggests travel or momement of forces for attack-aasana or tishtha the waiting period-dwividha of bheda bhaava or break up of friendship by similar forces of the enemies and finally ‘samashraya’ or the celebrations of victory of togetherness.’]

[Vishleshana: Refer to Vishleshana on Danava Anuhlaada-Shachi Devi- Indra vide Essence of Valmiki Kishkindha Ramayana -Sarga 39 : ‘Shachi Devi the daughter of Danava Puloma was fond of Indra, even before their wedding, but Puloma liked another danava youth named Anuhlada. With the secret consent and permission of Puloma, Anuhlada forcibly abducted Shachi Devi. Indra attacked and killed him brutally and married Shachi Devi. In further revenge, Indra killed his father in law Danava Puloma thereafter’.]

Sarga Forty: Devi Sita reiterated what Anjaneya should convey to Rama about her life’s threats while handing over hair clip to Shri Rama; Hanuman reiterates his reaching Rama’s soonest.

are of yellow colour, and of oysters are of pure white! (Source: Essence of Soundarya Lahari of kamakoti. org/books section, ref. stanza 74)

Sarga Forty Eight: Shattered with putra shoka and humiliation, Ravana finally asked Indrajit to use his brahmastra to end up the menace of Hanuman and save the Rakshasa Samrajya and his personal prestige and fame at stake!

[Vishleshana on Astra Vidya and illustrative ‘Mantrika Astras

‘Celestial missiles of danda chakra, dharma chakra, kaala chakra, vishnu chakra, and the most powerful Aindra chakra and the arts of application and throwing away of Indra’s Vajrastra, Shiva Deva’s trishula praharana, and Brahma’s granted Aishikastra and Shira -chedana astra was taught by Maharshi Vishvamitra to Rama Lakshmanas besides the magnificent vidya of ‘gadaa praharana’ or the art of battling with maces like ‘modaki’- ‘prahari’- shikhari of forcible applications of mace strokings, throwings and mace head rubbings. Then Vishvamitra taught the astras of ‘dharma paasha-kaala paasha-and varuna paasha’. Subsequently they were taught two kinds of dry and wet rounded applications of astras viz. ‘ashani- pinaka-narayanaastras’. Then Rama Lakshmanas were taught Agneyastra fond of Agni Deva resulting in fierce flames of fire renowned as Shikharastra- Vayavyastra which sweeps away the opponent with virulent sweeps away. Then the Maharshi teaches the Kakutsa nandanaas of ‘Hayashira Astra’- ‘Krounchana Astra’ and ‘Shakti Dvayastra’ or of high potent twin astras attacking the opponent with doubled up potency. The Maharshi was pleased to instruct Rama Lakshmanas the astras named ‘kankala’-the devastating ‘musala’- and the destructive ‘Kapaala’ and ‘Kinkini’ and such astras which could lift up and throw the opponents forcefully. Then in the series were taught the famed ‘Nandana Astra’ of Vidyadharas as well as the associated mace of fame. The ‘Gandharva Priya’ astras of ‘Sammohana’ for relapsing into senselessness like ‘Prastaavana- Prashamana-and Soumya’ were taught too, besides the ‘Mohanaastras’ such as for varshana-shoshana-santaapana-vilaapana-maadana which was the beloved of Kama Deva Manmadha himself, and the Gandharvapriya ‘Maanava astra’, besides the Pishacha priya ‘Mohanastra’. Brahmarshi Vishvamitra then instructed the Astras named ‘Taamasa-Soumana-Samvarta-Durjaya- Mousala-Satya-and Mayamayaastras too. Then the Maharshi imparted to Rama Lakshmanas the glorious ‘Surya prabha Astra’ which when once released as an arrow would destroy the enemies to ashes. Simultaneously, the Maharshi conferred ‘Shishira naamaka Chandraastra’, ‘Tvashta (Vishvakarma) naamaka ‘Daarunastra’, Bhaga Deva namaka ‘Bhayankaraashtra’ and ‘Sheetoshna’ naamaka Astra of Manu Deva. Sarga Fifty: Pretending as bounded by Indrajit’s Brahmaastra, though Brahma granted his immunity, Hanuman faced Ravana whose Minister asked him why he visited Lanka; he confirmed, he was Shri Rama’s messenger.

[Vishleshana on 1. Nandishwara and 2. Baanasura

1. Origin and Glory of Nandishwara:

Maharshi Shilada performed severe Tapasya for thousands of years and his body got degenerated to such an extent that it became a skeleton full of worms. Finally, Maha Deva granted his vision and Shilada’s wish: Tawa Putro bhavishyaami Nandi naamnaa twayonijah, Pitaa bhavishyaasi mama Piturvey Jagataam Muney/ (I shall grant you a son with the name of Nandi and he would be my son and would be popular like wise). Then Nandi was born at Yagna Bhumi with the features of Maha Deva himself with Trinetras, Chaturbhjas and as Jataa mukuta and Vajra-Sarpa dhaari when Devatas rained fragrant flowers, Apsaraas danced and Gandharvaas sang tuneful hymns in praise of Lord Shiva and Nandi. Vasus, Rudras and Indra prayed respectfully and Devis like Lakshmi, Jyeshtha, Diti, Aditi, Nanda, Shachi, Bhadra and others rendered 'Stutis' to Nandi. Shailada Muni commended Maha Deva as well as Nandishwara and expressed his total satisfaction and gratitude. As Nandishwara was taken into the 'Parnashala' or thatched home of Shailada, Nandi assumed a human Rupa instead of Deva Swarupa. Shailada Muni was overjoyed, performed the child's Jaata Karma and other Vedic Tasks and on the son's attaining seven years performed his Yagnopaveeta dharana and 'Upaasana' of Gayatri and tendered him to the Ashram of Maharshi Mitraavaruna. The Guru taught Veda Vidya, Shastras and other Scriptures, besides Dhanur Vidya, Ayur Veda and Mantra Vidyas, Chatushashti Kaalas, Ashrama Dharmas and so on. Mitravaruna was very proud of the student and so was Muni Shilada; the Guru then blurted at that time of Nandi's exit from Ashram that doubtless Bala Nandi displayed extra-ordinary brilliance as a fulfilled Scholar and accomplishment but was shortlived! Shilada fainted at this disclosure for long and after regaining normalcy took to extreme Tapasya again to Maha Deva; even as Shilada was engaged in Tapasya, Shiva appeared, fondled Nandi, assured him not to get disturbed from what was stated by his Guru. He said that actually he sent messengers that Nandi's life was almost over since his human birth would anyway be of Tapatrayas and hence he was terminating the Manava Janma to bestow Everlasting Life; by so saying, Maha Deva touched Nandi so that his physical body would fall down with his Jataa Mukuta etc and secure a permanent Rudra Rupa. The Place where the human form of Nandi's 'Jatajuta' fell on Earth was materialised into a Sacred River called Jatodaka and Nandi's new Form was of a 'Vrishabha'; Parama Shiva himself performed 'Abhisheka' on the new Form of Nandi and that Place came to be called Vrishadhwani, Jambunada or Panchanada and Vishwakarma gifted a Golden Mukuta or Headgear and Kundalaas or Ear Rings. Thereafter Nandishwara familiarised with his mother Devi Girija and also the 'Ganaas', whom he was empowered as their Chief. Devi Parvati endeared the son who prostrated before her with veneration. Maha Deva declared to the Tri Lokas that Nandishwara was the son of Shiva and Parvati. Devas headed by Indra, Brahma, Vishnu, Dikpalakas, Maharshis, besides Yaksha-Gandharva-Muni and Yogi ganaas were all invited to a huge event where Nandishwara's unique name was fame were known all over, where ever Maha Deva was known and indeed Maha Deva was acclaimed as the Supreme Lord of the Universe. Parama Shiva granted a boon to Nandishwara that He would be in the 'Sannithi' (Presence) of Shiva always and any kind of worship to himself would be incomplete without any Service to Nandi! Even great sins of the magnitude of Brahma hatya could be nullified by Shiva Puja, but at first, Nandeswara should be propitiated without fail; Aadaw kuryaanamaskaaram tadantey Shivataam Vrajat/ [Linga Purana]

2. Baanaasura whom was a nightmare to Devas and Indra with long life from Treta Yuga to Dwapara Yuga, was the grandson of the famed Bali Chakravarti and a parama bhakta of Parameshwara and ever worshipped a Rasa Linga gifted by Vishwakarma. As an ardent devotee of Shiva, he was stated to have thousand arms to play mridaaga at Shiva Parvati tandava nrityas. In the course of Dwapara Yuga, his daughter Usha Devi happened to see both Shiva and Parvati sitting together and being an Antaryami Devi Parvati joked with Usha that one day she would too land up in a situation like that. Usha asked Devi Parvati as to when would that day arrive! Parvati replied that she would dream of a youth on the night of Vaishakha Shukla Dwadashi. As the day arrived, Usha did get the dream and informed of the incidence to her friend Chitrlekha, the daughter of Banasura's Minister named Kushmanda. As Usha was unable to bear the feelings of love, Chitrlekha showed several drawings of eligible and handsome bachelors and after a few days, Usha succeeded finally to identify the youth. Then it was learnt that the youth was the son of Krishna. In course of time, the couple met and their romance became intense by the day. Learning of the desire of his daughter with Aniruddha, the son of Pradyumana -the erstwhile Cupid who was burnt into ashes by Lord Siva's third eye- and the grand son of Krishna (Avatar of Lord Vamana), Banasura quashed the wedding proposal and reprimanded his daughter since Krishna was his foe. Banasura prevented his daughter meeting Aniruddha and when the latter fought with him, he imprisoned Aniruddha. Yadavas in Dwaraka wondered as to what happened to Aniruddha. On learning from Narada Muni, it was learnt that Aniruddha was imprisoned in Shonitapur, the Capital of Banasura and Krishna, Balarama and Pradyumna lest by Garuda to that Place. There, they confronted Pramathaganas of Shiva and fought with Jwara the three footed Chief of the 'Parshads' named Maheswara and defeated him. This led to a full-fledged battle between Krishna and others on one side and Banasura, Shankara and Kartikeya on the other. As furious Shastra-Astraas were exchanged by both the Parties, the whole world was affected with Pralayaagni. Balarama attacked Banasura and the fight got intensified with alarming consequences. Meanwhile Krishna recalled his Sudarshana Chakra and sliced off the mighty hands of Banasura and was about to cut off the Asura's head too. It was at that climatic moment, Shankara addressed Krishna to stop. "Hey Krishna! I am aware that you are the Purushottama –Parameswara-Paramatmaa and Adyanta-Rahita! Do get cooled down. I have provided shield to Banasura my devotee and assured that I would stand guarantee at the time of his peril; please do not falsify my faith in me. He has not done any thing wrong to you but is egoistic due to my backing and therefore pardon him. Krishna replied: 'Shankara! If you so wish as you had given him a benediction, Banasura would continue to be alive. In order to respect your assurance to him, I am withdrawing Sudarshana Chakra; if you had given him protection, so do I; You should never feel that you are different from me; you should always consider me as yourself and together we are the Devas, Asuras, human beings and all the rest; all those who consider us as different from each other are shrouded in Maya or Illusion; indeed, I am pleased and am gone. There after, Krishna and all the rest headed to Aniruddha's prison, where the latter was released by 'Naga bandhana' or tight-tied by a serpent which ran away at the appearance of Garuda Deva while Banasura politely agreed for the Sacred wedding of Usha-Aniruddhaas. Sarga Fifty One: Addressing Ravana, Veera Hanuman detailed Shri Rama's 'Prabhava' and warned that if Devi Sita were in any way hurt, that would be the instant final doom of Ravana and Lanka; Ravana went mad with fury.

[Vishleshana on Ravana's disgraced encounter with Vaali:

Ravanasura once decided to challenge Vaanara King Maha Baali; the latter was born of Indra Devaamsha and got a boon that he would attain half of the strength of any of his opponents standing face to face. This power enabled Bāli to defeat all his foes and bring the countries in all directions under his sway. Ravana heard about this and decided to overpower Bāli somehow or other and approached Kiskindha. Having learnt from Baali's Minister, Taran, that Vaali got the boon, Ravana somehow decided to kill Bali. His idea was to kill Baali by capturing and killing while going behind him when Vaali would daily perform his daily prayers. Next morning Bāli went to the eastern sea-shore and began his prayer and meditation. Ravana approached Baali behind and sat close to Vaali, presuming he could hold Vaali's tail and beat him from behind without facing Vaali. Baali knew that Ravana was sitting behind him. But pretending that he knew nothing put his long tail on the body of Ravana, and passed it lengthwise and breadthwise through every part of his body and tied him like a bundle of faggots, and made a jump into the air. Within a short time Vaali visited all the usual places and reached Kishkindhā. Seeing Ravana hanging by the tail of Bali, even the women folk laughed. Thus Ravana became a laughing stock as Ravana made a confession admitting surrender as the other wise invincible Maha Vali pardoned Ravana and let him go unhurt. [Vishleshana on Ravanasura's origin, family background and accomplishments in brief:

Rananasura was born to Vishrava Maharshi and Daitya Kaikeshi. Pulastaya, one of the ten Prajapatis or mind-born sons of Brahma, was maternal grandfather. Kaikeshi, born of Sumali and Tataka had two brothers Maricha and Subahu. On the paternal side, Malyavanasura. Ravana's Prime Queen was the daughter of Mayasura and Apsara Hema and acclaimed as Maha Pativrata. Among his many other wives, the most mentionable after Mandodari were Maya, the daughter of the celestial architect, and the third one Dhanyamalini. Ravana's elder half-brother was Kubera. Vibhishana, Kumbhakarna, Khara the King of Janasthana, Dushana the Senapati of Janasthana, Ahiravan, the King of Paatala were Ravana's younger brothers. Kumbhini was Ravana's elder sister and wife of Madhu Rakshasa, and Shurpakhana the younger sister. Ravana's were Meghanaada or Indrajit, Atikaya, Akshayakumara, Devantaka, Narantaka, Trishira, Prahasta. Ravana was a great scholar of Vedic knowledge under the tutelage of Shukracharya. His perseverance in tapasya to Brahma, he offered his own head and as each time he did so, his heads sprouted again and again and Brahma appeared at his tenth head's offering and blessed him with the option to be a Dashakantha; Brahma granted him of invincibility against Aditi- Diti Putras, Sarpa, Pakshi-Pashus but ignored 'tuccha manavas.' Accordingly, Ravana killed or subdued numberless rakshasa-daitya-daanava-pakshi-mriga-jalacharaas and asserted his unique fame. He was an expert in music, dance and all the fine arts. He was an outstanding Shiva Bhakta, having composed Shiva Tandava Gita; as Maha Nandi prevented Shiva Darshana, he quaked Kaiilasha Parvata and accomplished Shiva darshana. As Parama Shiva granted the boon of Atma Linga to be carried to Lanka Samrajya, Shiva obliged but Ganesha intercepted on way in the guise of a baalaka and got it installed at Gokarna Ksheatra].

'As the ever shrewdest and the nastiest Daitya called Maya commenced his brutal Tapasya, two more Danavas of equal disrepute and desperation viz. Vidyunmali and Taraka joined him and their extreme tenacity was such that they meditated in snow valleys during high winter nights, amid 'Panchagnis' during blood blister summer days and during incessant and torrential rains standing under open skies. It looked that Earth trembled with the severity of their meditation and Brahma had to bestow the choice boons of indestructibility except by Parameswara that too by a single arrow-shot destroying their abodes together. The most noted top architect and builder that he was, Mayasura built 'Tripuras'/ three Tower Castles-each of hundred yojanas- one of indestructible iron on Earth, another on the Sky made of shining silver and the third above the second one made of glittering gold, all encased in inner- castle structures of same size of circumference but each invisible from outside in all directions. Each of the Tripuras is equipped with 'yantras'/ machines that could destroy hundreds in each shot, Chakras, Trishulas, Dhvajas on the high wall structures, and 'Shikharas' (minarets) recognisable through the mountain tops of Meru and Mandarachala. These 'Puras' were insurmountable, let alone destructible to Devas, Danavas and any other species, excepting Maha Deva! Daithyas had very contented lives inside the Tripuras. Devas and other Celestial Beings were thrown out of their abodes and all the luxuries and joys of Swarga were confiscated. In course of time, the inhabitants of Tripuras became intolerable, awfully sinful, corrupt, wicked and highly immoral. While Maya Daitya was kept busy in the deeds of beauty, living comfort and pressing into the services of Devas as their servants to cater to the happiness of the inhabitant Daityas, Vidyunmali was kept busy with matters of Internal Administration and Taraka was made commander in Chief. In course of time, there came inevitable internal dissensions, group politics, differences of living styles and class-distinctions, 'Alakshmi' (poverty), 'Asuya' (jealousy), Trishna (avarice), 'Vibhuksha' (hunger), Kali and Kalaha (quarrels) among the residents of the Tripuras. This situation of 'Alakshmi' led to 'Atyaachaaras' or transgressions on Devas, other Celestial Beings, Maharshis, the entire humanity and all other species of Lord's creation. The canker spread across the 'Tribhuvanas' and Devas sought refuge from Brahma who gave the boons to the three goons! Lord Brahma pacified the delegation of Devas and assured that the heinous and wildly vicious deeds of the Trio of Daityas reached a climax and that it was time to approach Parama Shiva who was the one and only Saviour that could destroy the abodes of the three Daityas in one go with one arrow, even if these residences were far apart from each other on Prithvi, Akaash and far beyond in the strong-hold Tripura fortresses! As Devas and Brahma reached Maha Deva, they visioned 'Trishulapaani Shankar' relaxing with Devi Parvati and Mahatma Nandi. They saw that 'Bhuta bhavishya Swami' whose eyes were red like 'Agni kundas' and physique was shimmering with thousand Suns with a pleasant countenance ornamented with a Bala Purna Chandra, even as Devas broke down into ecstasy and extolled him. Having pleased Parama Shiva thus, Devas explained the gravity and seriousness of the crisis created by the Tripura Daityas who not only unseated and tormented Devas and Celestial Entities but were also sending shock-waves all over the Universe, humiliating Sages, frightening women and children, making mass-scale carnage and blood bath of humanity and uprooting Dharma and age-old Values and Principles. Parameshwara infused confidence into the demoralised Devas and asked them to construct an exceptional chariot with unique specifications: Prithvi as the Ratha / Chariot, Meru and Mandara Mountains as axles, Surya and Chandra as Chakras made of gold and silver respectively, the Four Vedas of Ruk-Yajur-Sama and Atharva acted as the horses; Shukra, Brihaspati, Budha, Mangal, and Shanaischara seated on the Ratha ready to charge; the famous serpents viz. Takshaka, Karkotaka, Dhanajaya and Padmadwaya acted as the strings which were tied to the horses; most poisonous snakes like Surasa, Devashuni, Sarama, Kadru, Vinata, Shuchi, Trusha, and Bubhuksha were used as arrows; Mrutyu, Brahmahatya, Gohatya, Balahatya and Prajaabhaya were loaded on the Chariot so that they get activated as maces; Omkara and Vashatkara were the symbols on the Ratha; Sinivali, Kuhu, Raaka and Anumati - the 'Adhishtana' / in charge Deities of Chaturdashi, Amavasya, Suddha Purnima, Pratipadika Purnima respectively were used as auxiliary strings to the horses; the dhanush made of six 'ritus' / seasons which is safeguarded by Devi Ambika herself never to be broken; the specific arrow with which to kill the Tripurasura was strengthened by Vishnu, Soma and Agni and its head propelled by Agni and Chandra by its rear and Vishnu Maya smeared all over; and the extreme poison of Nagaraja Vasuki was loaded to ensure stability and speed of the arrow; Vayu was made in charge of the high velocity of the Chariot and finally Brahma was the Charioteer and Sesha Naag was made in charge of the personal security of Brahma as also of the Chariot. Yama Raja with his buffalo, Kubera on his serpent, Indra on Iravata, Ganeswara by his Mushika Vahana, Karikeya on his Peacock, Nandeshwara with his Shula running behind and sides of the Ratha were in full preparedness. Maharshis Bhrigu, Bharadwaja, Vasishta, Goutama, Kratu, Pulastya, Pulaha, Marichi, Atri, Angira, Parashara, and Agastya were there too at the kick-start of the Battle to recite Veda Vachanas and Shiv Stutis. The Pramatha ganas were ready to charge as the army against the opponents- all swarmed around the Rath. Meanwhile, Sage Narada reached the Tripuras and tried his best to mend his ways, give back Indrapuri to Devas and avoid the worst ever battle in which the indestructible Tripuras would be destroyed along with the Three Demons as Maha Deva himself was approaching these Places with full preparation. Instead of talking peace, the Demons alerted their vast armies, and prepared for turning their defensive positions to that of an offence. On the instruction of Shankara Deva, Indra took his enormous army and attacked Tripura. As the Deva Sena made a highly offensive assault in full force, what with the revenge and frustration experienced by them for long as they were out of power as also owing to the excellent backing of Maheswara, they seized the best part of Tripuras. While quite a few Danavas sought to escape for their lives through the exit gates of Tripuras, Pramatha ganas calculated that the enemies would try to sneak out at those points and butchered thousands of Danavas. The remaining Danavas inside the Trinagaris were utterly confused by contradictory shouts that Taraka died or Shiva was defeated. In that melee, a strong contingent of Danavas quickly regrouped their men and material to make offensive attacks under the leadership of Vidunmali and Maya. Ganeswara divided Tripuras in three regions as Nandeswara was attacking Vidyunmali, while he was in position against Maya. Meanwhile, Vidyunmali threw a 'Parigha' on Nandi who was hurt and the enraged three 'Parshadaganas' named Ghantaakarna, Shankukarna and Mahakaal retaliated; they assumed the Forms of Ganeswara and assailed Vidyunmali by making the roars of lions. Even while the Parswaganas were about to leap on Vidyunmali, the hurt Nandikeswara hurled a Rudra Shakti on the demon who fell down like a mountain. There was utter silence among Danavas who were stunned and retreated. But, the highly cunning and crafty Mayasura chased the Ganas of Ganeshwara to divert attention of his own men from the fallen Vidyunmali to the Ganesha ganas. Mayasura created rains of Agni, crocodiles, snakes, huge mountains, lions, tigers, trees, black deers, eight-legged ‘Sharabhas’/ a species of oversized deer, torrential rain and powerful sand storms. As Taraka came into the battle field, Devas too appeared in full force, including Yamaraja, Varuna, Bhaskara, Kartikeya heading a Deva Sena of a Crore, with Indra, Shanaishchara, Chandra, and Rudras. The ‘Maayavi’ Mayaasura created several Wells full of herbal juices for invigoration and Danavas were in high spirits as their body strength increased manifold. But Keshava took the form of ‘Vrishabha’ and drank up the juice along with Devas and dried up the wells and Devas occupied the Tripuras finally. Mayasura and other Daityas were forced to hide in the Sea. That was the decisive moment when there was an all-out battle on the seashores. Shankara divided the ‘Tridevamaya’ arrow into three parts and released it when Tripuras were destroyed; Shiva felt sad however that one of his own dear devotees, Mayasura too was involved. Nandi went faster than the arrow and saved Maya, well before the Tripuras were destroyed. In the end Taraka and Vidyunmali were killed and Maya was condoned with the curse of Indra that all his constructions would be burnt off eventually and Mayasura continued to hide in the Seas]

It is said that there might be thousands of rays of Sun, but the important ones are only seven, representing Seven Planets, Viz. Sun, Moon, Mars, Mercury, Jupiter, Venus, and Saturn. Moon travels faster than Sun. The distance between Sun and Moon is 100,000 yojanas (800,000 miles). In two lunar fortnights, Moon passes through a period of a Samvatsara or a year. In two and quarter days, Moon passes through a month of the Sun, or in one day, it passes through a fortnight of the Sun. Hence, the divergence of Solar and Lunar calculations and Calendars. As the Moon is waxing, it is a day for Gods and a night for Pitru Devatas. The waxing fortnight gradually diminishes the shine till the Moon-fall day (Amavasya) and the waning Moon picks up the shine day by day till Moon-rise day (Pournami). Moon is known as ‘Jeeva’ (life-provider), or ‘Manomaya’ (mind-alterer) or ‘Annamaya’ (potency provider from herbs and plants), ‘Amritamaya’ (source of life to all) and ‘ Sarvamaya’ (all pervading). From Moon to the Group of Stars, the distance is 200,000 yojanas (16 00, 000 miles). Headed by Abhijit, there are twenty eight Stars revolving on their own axis. Above the Group of Stars is the Planet of Venus (Sukra) almost of the distance from the Moon to the Group of Stars. It is a benevolent planet, especially as a provider of good rains and prosperity and moves at the same pace as Sun God. Mercury (Budha), the son of Moon is situated from Venus (16,00,000 miles) or 72,00,000 miles from Earth and this Planet too is benevolent excepting when not moving along with Sun, thus causing cyclones, excess or no rainfall and dusty storms. Equidistant from Mercury or 80,80,000 miles above Earth, is the Planet of Mars (Mangal), which is generally not considered favourable, travelling along with other planets every three fortnights and creates tensions. The Planet of Jupiter (Guru) is away from Earth by some 10,400,000 miles-again 16,00,000 miles away from the planet of Mars- is considered generally benevolent to Brahmins and Universe, unless takes a curved path in conjunction with other planets. Saturn, which is 12 million miles above Earth is also considered generally unhelpful. Normally, each planet is 16,00,000 miles apart from another planet , but the distance from Saturn to the Group of ‘Sapta Rishis’ or the Seven Sages is 8,800,000 miles from Saturn ie.20,800,000 miles from Earth. Indeed, the Seven Sages are always the great well wishers of the entire Universe.The Sapta Rishis, viz.Marichi, Angirasa, Atri, Pulsastya, Pulaha, Krathu, and Vasishtha born in Lord Brahma’s thoughts to help in the act of Creation.(Reference Maha Bharatha; Shanti Parva).The Seven Sage Constellation of the Great Bear (Ursa Major) is indeed the great well wisher of the entire Universe. The Sapta Rishis circambulate around the Pole Star, or Dhruva Tara, which is as good as the Abode of Supreme Lord Himself and is prayed to by religious mortals and Gods alike. [Vishleshana on Tarakasura Samhara by Skanda Deva:

Fully understanding the purpose of his birth which his parents had strived for after performing thousands of years of Tapasya as also to fulfill the singular ambition of his grand mother to destroy Indra and Devas, Tarakasura took a vow at a grand conference of Daityas and Danavas-the descendents of Diti and Danu- and proceeded to Paritraya Parvat (the western side of Aravali and Vindhya mountain range and observed strict Tapasya during hundred year time-slots by rotation by way of ‘Niraahaara’ (without food), Panchagni (in the midst of Five huge Fire bodies) in sizzling summers, ‘Jala madhya’ inside in chilled running water in the worst winter nights, eating only fallen dry leaves, etc. Brahma had no option but to present himself and ask for his boons. He bargained of absolute invincibility and deathlessness but finally agreed that only a seven days long boy could kill him, if at all! Not far from the day when Brahma bestowed the boons, Tarakasura redesigned and reformed his lines of Military Forces and attacked Indraloka. Having been defeated, Indra made an appeal to Vishnu and the latter realised that only Skanda, the unique son of Shiva Parvati. could kill the loka kantaka Tarakasura. Indra then made a detailed plan as an outstanding stage manager: Bringing together of the then virgin Devi Parvati- Manmatha’s pushpa baana prayoga to excite Parama Shiva who was in long tapasya -managing Himavan’s virgin daughter Parvati to engage in service to supply ‘puja dravyas’ - seeking the help of Manmatha the God of love to intensify feelings of lust in Shiva’s mind by his pushpa baanas- Shiva’s opening his third eye with anger- eventual wedding of Shiva Parvati- agni deva carrying Shiva’s virility about to be wasted on earth to six Kritikas who drank the drops - Kartikeya’s birth and the euphoria of Indra and the Trilokas.

The Deities commenced preparations of war to kill Tarakasura but a Celestial Voice was heard that victory would be assured only under the Leadership of Kartikeya and hence all the Devas requested Skanda to become the Chief of the Army of Devas. Meanwhile, Devasena, the daughter of Mrityu Devata, became his wife and hence Skanda was known as Deva Senapati. Kartikeya led the army of Devas of the rank of Indra, Agni, Vayu, Kubera and Yama Dharma Raja and was seated on an elephant. Tarakasura arrived with a huge army of mighty warriors who dominated and controlled the opponents initially. Indra’s ‘Vajra’ was overpowered by Tarakasura’s weapon called Shakti and wounded Indra. King Muchukunda who fought for Devas and sought to stop the domination of Daityas but Tarakasura resisted; Muchukunda wanted to use the ‘Brahmastra’ but was restrained by Sage Narada as that weapon would no doubt create havoc but would be ineffective to destroy Tarakasura and hence Kartikeya would have to be warmed up gradually.Veerabhadra swung into action and slaughtered thousands of Demons; Tarakasura realised that Veerabhadra was not easy to control and thus used his ‘Maya’ and assumed a thousand arms. Lord Vishnu suggested that the time was ripe to kill the Big Demon before he became more powerful and asked Skanda to charge him. With his mighty weapon Shakti on hand, Kartikeya chased Tarakasura but the latter retaliated with his own ‘Shakti’ and even got Skanda unconscious for a while. After quickly recovering his poise, Kartikeya prayed to his parents and released the Maha Shakti which was fortified with the blessings of Bhagavan and Bhagavati and finally annihilated Tarakasura who incidentally was a Great Siva Bhakta! But Siva Himself was so pleased at the valour of the lad who was more than a match to the Greatest Demon of the times who sent shock waves across the Three Worlds! While Devas and Gandharvas were engaged in unending praises and noise of resounding musical notes, Rishis were engaged in Vedic Hymns to please Kartikeya and there was ecstasy across the Globe.]

Tapatraya: Adhi Bhoudika or Ailments of Physical Nature; Adhyatmika or of Mental-Psychological Nature; and Adhi Daivika or of Natural Calamities like Earth quakes, floods, lightnings etc. beyond human control. In Vishnu Purana: Maharshi Parashara described about Tapatriayas or the Three Kinds of Difficulties that all human beings are subjected to as also the means of realising the Paramartha Swarupa. The Tapatriayas originate due to Adhyatmika, Aadhi Daavika and Adhi Bhoutika reasons. Adhyatmika based Tapaas are either due to 'Shaaririka' (physical) ailments or 'Manasika' (psychological) imbalances. Shaaririka Tapaas include diseases related to head, digestive, heart, breathing, vision, limbs, skin, fevers and so on; related are the various physiological problems of blood-urinary-pelvic nature. Manasika Tapaas are related to Kama, Krodha, Bhaya, Dwesha, lobha, Moha, Vishada, Shoka, Asuya, Apamana, Irshya, Matsara etc. Adhi Bhoutika Tapaas are due to the difficulties attributed to animals, birds, Pishachaas, Serpents, Rakshasaas and poisonous related creatures like scorpions. The troubles on account of Adhidaivika nature are due to cold, heat, air, rains, drought, water, earthquakes, cyclones and so on. Additionally, the troubles are related to birth, childhood, youth, old age, ignorance, Avidya, loneliness, smell, lack of resources, poverty, immaturity, inexperience, lack of opportunity, fear of death, death itself and multiple kinds of experiences of Naraka. Maharshi Parashara emphasized that there are problems of excessive of opulence, excellent health, excessive youth, and such other excesses and some times ignorance is bliss. More so there could be Tapaas due to discriminations of sex, age, social status, experience, opportunity, family background; origin of birth viz. religion, Varnashrama and age. Disappoint -ments in life, more specifically relating to money and fame, including their earnings, preservation and its vinasha or destruction happen to be yet source of Tapatraya]

Along with his brothers, Ravana and Vibhishana, Kumbhkarna performed a Maha Yagjna and Brahma blessed with a boon that, his tongue was tied by Sarasvati, because of which, instead of asking 'Indraasana' or the seat of Indra, he asked for 'Nidraasana' or bed for sleeping. Again Brahma granted 'Nidravastham' instead of 'Nirdevatvam' of total annihilation of Devas, thus. Kumbhakarna slept for six months a year and when awoken, he ate everything in the vicinity. Agni assumed the form of a pigeon as Indra was chasing as a hawk, the pigeon landed on Shibi’s shoulder and took it on his lap providing protection but the hawk demanded the prey’s flesh in a human voice, Shibi agreed to provide as much flesh from his own body by a sensitive balance and offered to the hawk. Sarga Twenty Two:Maha Sagara himself personified restraining Rama’s fury-advised Vanara’s ‘maha shilpi’, the method of constructing ‘Setu Bandhana’ to facilitate Ramas and the huge Vaanara Sena to cross the Maha Sagara

[Vishleshana on a Squirrel and Setu Bandhana:

Shri Rama and Sugriva’s arbuda strong Vanaraa Sena was dedicated to Rama Kaarya to attack the evil Ravanaasura in the objective of Setu Bandhana. The sena was totally engaged, as some pulled up mountain boulders, some uprooting maha vrikshas and throwing their heavy branches down to the Maha Samudra, some with collecting the dropped branches down into a floating bridge making skilled engineers and their work force, and the architects and their workers, and son literally labouring round the clock. Witnessing the full force of the Vanarasa sena, Shri Rama was so happy admiring the dedication and dynamism of the Vanara Sena,Shri Rama was overwhelmed with the ‘bhaki’. During this course of action, Rama witnessed a small brown Squirrel, going up and down the Seashore with little pebbles in its small mouth and carrying them from the seashore and dropped them into the Maha Sagara. A huge Vanara was carrying a large mountain boulder on his shoulder as the squirrel came in his way. The Maha Vanara jumped back and thundered ‘ you litt le brat of a squirrel and stepped back; hopr you are alive as you could be a casualty, what are you doing here! The little squirrel looked up at the great Vanara: I am sorry , brother Maha Varara! As the small voice: Are you not able to see that in my own way am carrying on my duty with diligence and devotion in my own humble manner of the unique Swami Rarya! I ma also helping Shri Rama to build the bridge; I wish to work hard for him. ‘ As the squirrel screamed in its own hihg pitch of voice, the Maha Vanara carrying the boulder on his shoulder, tauned addressing the fellow Maha Vanara: ‘Did you hear that!; a squirrel is building a bridge with his pebbles. I have never heard a funnier story like this’. Then there was aourig response from the co Maha Vanaras. The squirrel never felt humiliated but took its ground angrily: ‘Look, I may not carry mountains or boulders, as Almighty granted only a little strength. I can only carry pebbles. But my heart mels out as how Bhagavan Shri Rama has been sufferng Maha Pativrata Devi Sita’s viyoga and had been crying away incesantly and hence I could do so to the best of my own capability’! Then one Vanara picked up the squirrel’s tail at a mere creatuure had been hindering the massive task ahead and threw it far away as the squirrel, crying out the name of Rama, fell into his hands; he held the squirrel close to him and stated: Maha Vanara’s! Please do not make fun of the weak and the small. Your strength or what you do is certainly invaluable. Yet what matter is this little squirrel’s has love in his heart. You are brave and strong and are doing a wonderful task og bringing all these huge boulders and stones from far and dropping them in the Maha Sagara. But do you not notice that it is the tiny pebbles and stones brought by this small squirrel and some of the other smaller creatures which are filling the small gaps left between the huge stones?Further, do you not realize that the tiny grains of sand brought by this squirrel are the ones which bind the whole structure and make it strong? Yet you scold this small creature and fling him away in anger!’Hearing this, the Vanaras were ashamed, and bowed down their heads.Rama continued, ‘Always remember, however small, every task is equally important. A project can never be completed by the main people alone. They need the support of all, and however small, an effort should always be appreciated!’ Having stated thus Shri Rama then turned to the squirrel and said softly, ‘My dear squirrel, I am sorry for the hurt caused to you by my army, and thank you for the help you have rendered to me. Please go and continue your work happily.’ Saying this, he gently stroked the back of the squirrel with his fingers, and three lines appeared where Bhavagan Rama’s fingers touched it and passed his fingers gently over the little squirrel’s back. As put it him down there were three white stripes on his back. Indeed, no task and service to Sri Rama, however small, is unimportant! Every task should be looked upon as service to Rama as neither do big or small. In Bhagavad-gita 9.27 Krishna says:yat karoshi yad asnasi yaj juhoshi dadasi yat, yat tapasyasi kaunteya, tat kurushva mad-arpanam/ Whatever you do, whatever you eat, whatever you offer or give away, and whatever austerities you perform, do thatas an offering to Me’. [Vishleshana on Ashta Bhairavas:

Eight Manifestations of Maha Bhirava are Kaala Bhairava, Asitaanga Bhairava, Rudra Bhairava, Krodhha Bhairava, Kapala Bhairava, Bhishana Bhairava, Unmatta Bhairava and Samhara Bhairava. In the context of Andhakaasura Samhara, Maha Deva then decided Devas and Ganas to withdraw excepting his Nandi Vahana. He assumed a mammoth Bhairava Swarupa with the extraordinary radiance and heat of crores of Suryas, wearing Tiger Skin, Sarpa-haraas, Ten Hands and Three Burning Eyes and pierced his Trishula right into the Asura’s heart and hit his head with his mace and tossed his body up high in the air that got dropped on Earth with a thud. From all the sides of his huge body, there were streams of blood as Ashta Bhairavas were surfaced: from the Eastern direction emerged a Bhairava akin to Agni called ‘Vidya Raaj’ with his neck adorned with lotus flowers; from the Southern direction appeared ‘Kala Raaj’ Bhairava looking like a ‘Preta’ with dense black colour; from the Western direction was materialised a Bhairava named 'Kamaraj'; from the Northern direction was caused a fourth Bhairava named 'Soma Raaj'; a fifth Bhairava emerged from the wound near the demon's heart where Maha Deva pierced his Trishula and his name was 'Swacchanda Raja' with the resemblance of Indra Dhanush (Rainbow); the Sixth Bhairava was 'Lalit Raaj' who appeared from the gush of the Asura's blood on Earth; the Seventh Bhairava was 'Vighna Raaj' and including Maha Bhairava there were thus Ashta Bhairavas. [Vishleshana on a) the Saptaashvas and Surya Ratha - b) Meru Pradakshina by the Sun Chariot]

a) Description of Surya Ratha: This chariot has one wheel, 'five aragajas' or compartments, tri naabhis or three axes. Its chakra or wheel has 'nemi' or wheel's rim with golden 'patthis' or frames. The chariot wheels are run by seven horses named Gayatri, Tristhup, Jagtati, Anushthup, Pankti, Brihati, and Ushnik which are the seven 'chandas' of formal prosody and these are of the wind speed. In side the Surya Ratha, those accompanying illustrious personalities are described: These are Maharshis, Gandharvas, Apsaras, Villagers, famed Serpents and rakshasas. Sets of these groups alternate bimonthly. Dhata and Aryama Deva, Prajapatis Pulastya Rishi and Pulaha Rishi, Vaasuki and Sankirna Nagas, Tumburu and Narada Gandharva Singers, Kritasthala and Punjakashala Apsaras; Rathakrita and Rathouja as gramani, Heti and Praheti Rakshasas are those chosen ones on the Surya Ratha in Chaitra Vaisakhas. During the Greeshma Rithus of Jyeshtha Ahaadhaas, Mitra and Varunas would be Devatas, Atri- Vashishthas as Rishis, Takshaka Rambhaka Nagas, Menaka and Sahajanyas as Apsaras, Haha and Huhu Gandharvas, Rathantara and Rathakrita Graminis, Purushad and Vadha Rakshasas; in Shravana Bhadrapadas the Devas would be Indra and Vaivashwan, Angira and Bhrigu are the Rishis; Ilapatra and Shankhapaala as the Nagas, Vishvaavasu and Sushena as Gandharvas, Praatha and Ratha as the graaminas, Pralocha and Nimlochanti among the Apsaras, and Heti and Vyaghra as the Rakshasas. In Sharadriti month of two months of Ashvini and Kartika, the Devatas would be Parjanya and Pusha, Rishis Bharadwaja and Goutama, Chitrasena and Suruchi as Gandharvas, Vishvaachi and Ghritaachi as Apsaras; Iravata and Dhananjaya as the Nagas, Senajita and Sena Kayaka are the chosen graaminas; and Aapa and Vaata as Rakshasas. In the Hemanta Ritu of Maargaseersha and Pousha, the Devatas are Amshu and Bhaga, Kashyapa and Kratu as Rishis, Mahapadma and Karkotaka as the Nagas, Chitrasena and Deergaavayu as Gandharva Singers; Purvachiti and Urvashi as Apsaras, Takshaka and Arishtanemi as Sana as Senapatis Gramani and Tricidhu and Surta as Rakshasas. During the Shishira Ritu's Maagha and Phalguni, Tvashta and Vishnu are the Devatas, Jamadagni and Vishwamitra as Rishis, Kadru Putra Kambal and Ashwatara as Maha Sarpas, Dhritaraashtra and Suryavarcha as Gandharvas, Tilothama and Rambha as Apsaras, Ritajit and Satyajit as Graaminis, Brahmopeta and Yagnopaveta as Rakshasas. This was how, the 'Dwadasha Saptaka' or Deva-Rishi-Naaga-Gandharva-Aprasa- Graameena-Rakshasas are distinguished in their own positions; Devatas enhance by their own presence; Rishis excel in rendering self scripted Surya Stutis; Gandharvas and Apsaras stand out in their singing and dances; Yaksha ganas take care of the needs and desires of the Saptaashvas; Sarpas move around fast for law and order besides traffic regulation; and Rakshasas to follow the chariot for providing general backup and security. Balakhilya Rishis from morning to evening to mornings and so on cling to the Surya Radha always and for ever. Devatas lend and enhance their stock of celestial energies, tapobala, yoga bala, Dharma, Tatwa and such innate powers, transmit auspiciousness to all the Beings in the universe in the bhuta-vartamaa-bhavisya kaala maana irrespective of Twenty Manvantaras and so on. Likewise Surya Deva regulates seasons and sustains their individual characteristics, the shukla- krishna pakshas, havya-kavya karyas, swaha-swadha karmas, vrishti-poshana, anna- jala-kanti sustenances; in short the ever mobile yet stable Singular and Ever Perceivable Uniqueness!

b) To the east of Meru Parvata, atop the Manasarovara mountain, there exists Vasvaikasaara named Mahendra Nagara made of gold. Again to the south of Meru Parvata's back side, there is Manasaparvata and the Samyamani Pura where Lord Yama the illustrious son of Surya Deva resides. To the west of Meru parvata, on the west of Manasaparvata atop Sukha Purawhere Varuna Deva resides. To the north of Meru Parvata atop the Mahendra parvata, Vibhavari Pura where Chandra Deva resides. Behind the Manasotara on the four sides, the Ashta Dik Loka Paalakas are placed to protect Dharma and in the dakshinaayana period, Surya Deva oversees the activities of the Ashta Palakas during his period. Now, about the dakshinayana the travel of Surya ; in the jyotishchakra in his pradakshina, He reaches Amaravati the capital of Indra Deva by the midday on earth; that would be when it coincides with Yama Raja's rising time, in Chandra's mid night time and so on. As Surya performs pradakshina or self-circumambulation, he also does the same to nakshatras too do likewise. Precisely at the 'udaya' and 'astama' timings he does exactly the same year in and year out. At the Sun Rise he gradually increases his radiance till the afternoon and gradually reduces his tejas till the dusk time. In this way, Surya Deva performs pradakshina or circumbulation of self and so do the nakshatra mandali too. These all travel southward and at the rise and setting timings are defined as also at the poorvaahna and aparaahna or pre noon and afternoon they pass through two each of Deva puris and at the noon time, one Devapuri. Thus Surya from the rise gains momentum of radiance till afternoon and gradually lessens the severity of the kiranas thereafter till Sun set. Surya has the constant awareness of he 'udaya' and 'astamaya' at the east and west directions; while radiating the eastern side, spreading the heat and illumination on the sidewise north and south and decreasing the severity till disappearance. Meru Parvata is stated to be situated in the north of the highest of all the mountains; Lokaaloka is situated in the southern direction and since Prithvi's shadows are spread over, those Beings situated on the other side of the hemisphere are unable to see Surya in the nights. Thus Surya Deva with a lakh of kiranas reaches the mid portion of 'Pushkaradwipa' by that time, despite his speed of one 'muhurta' or two ghadis at the rate of one thirty lakh and fifty thousand yojanas plus! Thus Surya Deva as he traverses southward for six months turns to uttarayana or northbound. At the time of Dakshinaayana, Surya would have reached the travel to the mid portion of Pushkara dwipa. This dwipa is as thrice as distant from Mru to Manasarovara! Now the distance on the southern course or Dakshinayana is of nine crore fifty lakh yojanas. After the dakshinayana, Surya reaches the Vishuva sthaana or the 'khagoleeya vishuvadvritta bindu' at the north of Ksheera sagara. Vishvan mandala parinama is three cores twenty one lakh yojanas. As Surya's course gets north bound or uttarayana entering 'shravana nakshatra', then his course would be towards gomoda dwipa in between the south and north parts and in between are located jaradrava - Iravata to the north and Vaishvanara to the south. Towards north is named Naaga veedhi and to the south is the Ajaveedhi. The nakshatras of Purvaashadha-Uttaraashadha-Mula are known as 'ajvithis' and abhijit, shravana and swaati are naagavithis. Ashvini, Bharani and Kritika are also naagavithis and so also Rohini-Ardra and Mrigashira. Pushya, Shlesha and Punarvasu are called Iravati veedhi. Purvaphalguni, Uttara phalguni and Magha are arshabhi veedhi. Purvabhadra, Uttaraabhadra and Revati are of Goveedhi, while Shravana, Dhanishtha and Shatabhisha are of jagadveedhi. Chitra and Swati are again of ajaveedhi, Jyeshtha, Vishaka and Anuraadha are of Mriga veedhi again. During Uttarayana samaya, the speed of Surya is slower and the nights are of longer duration and vice versa. Source: Matsya Purana]

[Brief Vishneshana on Fourteen Maha Vidyas and Principles of Neeti Shastra][Vishleshana on the impact of Kaala maana and the weakening of yuga dharmas: Excerpts from Manu Smirti- and Markandeya, Brahmanada and Bhavishya Puranas:]

[Brief Vishneshana on Fourteen Maha Vidyas and Principles of Neeti Shastra]

Maha Vidyas: of chatur vedas, four upavedas of Artha shastra of State Craft Economic Policy, dhanur veda, gandhanrva veda of performing arts and ayurveda, besides six vedangas of shiksha of phonetics, kalpa or rituals, vyakarana or grammar, jyotisha or astronomy, nirulta or etymology and chhandas.,

Six 'Neeti Chandrikas' viz. Sandhi-Vigraha-Yaana-Aasana-Dwidhi bhaava-and samaashraya. Sandhi denotes the Principle of Truce, Tolerance and Coexistene. Vigraha refers to conflict of similar forces leading to balance of power. Yaana suggests travel or momement of forces for attaack-aasana or tishtha the waiting period-dwividha of bheda bhaava or break up of friendship by similar forces of the enemies and finally 'samashraya' or the celebrations of victory of togetherness.]

[Vishleshana on the impact of Kaala maana and the weakening of yuga dharmas: Excerpts from Manu Smirti- and Markandeya, Brahmanada and Bhavishya Puranas:

Brahma's one raatri-divas or night and day comprise of Four Yugas of Krita-Treta-Dwapara-Kali Yugas. Krita yuga is of four thousand years reckoned as 360 days for humans and one Deva day; its sandhya or the yuga's terminal period is for 400 years and Sandhyaamsha is an additional 400 years totalling 4800 divine years or 1728000 human years. On similar analysis, Tretaayuga is for 3600 divine years or 1287000 human years; Dwapara yuga is of 2400 divine years or 664000 human years and Kali Yuga divine 1200 years or 432000 human years. The total of Four Yugas is 12000 divine years or 42420000 human years. Deva's one thousand years are accounted for Brahma Deva's single day time and another thousand divine years are of Brahma's one night. Thus Brahma's 'ahoraatra' or day and night comprises of 120,00,000 of divine years or 432,00,00,000 human years. Thus ,after one thousand yugas, Brahma rests for the day and night and then resumes 'punah srishti' or revival of creation process again.(Manu Smriti Achaara Khanda)

As per Divya calculations, the total count of Four Yugas is twelve thousand years, the Satya Yuga comprising four thousand years, Treta Yuga three thousand Divya Years, Dwapara Yuga two thousand years and Kaliyuga of one Divya thousand years; the rest of two thousand years of the twelve thousand Divine Years is accounted for additional four hundred of Divine years of 'Sandhya' and an equivalent period additionaly for 'Sandhyamsha' for Satya Yuga; three hundred years each for these periods in respect of Treta Yuga; two hundred years each of Dwapar Yuga and one hundred years each of Kali Yuga. In Lord Brahma's life span of hundred Divya Years, each day comprises fourteen Manvantaras and each Manvantara consists of one thousand 'Kalpas'. At each change of Manvantara, there is a fresh stock of Indras, Devas, and Sapta Rishis etc. There are seventy one Cycles of Four Yugas in each Manvantar. Viewed from the view point of human years, one Manvantara has three crore sixty six lakh two thousand years; by Divine Years, one Manvantara has one lakh fifty two thousand years. If this Period is multiplied four times, it would then equate Brahma's one day, that is, one million nineteen lakh twenty seven thousand Divya years; or, four twenty nine crores forty lakh (429, 40, 00,000) human years! After each day-night of Brahma, there occurs a 'Naimittika' Pralaya. (Markandeya Purana)

About the Cycle of Time and Kalpas and Manvantaras: 'If Brahma's age is hundred years, a day and night of his is a Kalpa (stated to be 8.67 billion years) comprising 28 Manvantaras; each Manvantara has 71 Maha Yugas and each Maha Yuga has 4.3 million years.(Satya Yuga is stated to be of 40 percent of Maha Yuga, Treta Yuga 30 percent, Dwapara Yuga 20 percent and Kali Yuga is 10 percent) But between each Manvantara, there is stated to be a gap of four yugas called Yuga Sandhi, while the intermediate time between Kalpas is Prati Sandhi. Each Kalpa has two parts: Purvaartha and Parartha. We are now in Varaha Kalpa (there are stated to be of thirty such Kalpaas) and Vaivaswara Manvantara while Brahma's age is calculated as 51 years and the first night!As Brahma spent his thousand Yugas long first night, he found water all around and resurrected Earth again -and on the broad lines of what Varaha Swarupa indicated- materialised formally the Chatur Lokaas, Sapta Dwipas and Sapta Samudras. He revived the Srishti of Antariksha, Sun, Moon and other Planets, Pitras, Time, Yugas, Purusharthas of Dharma-Artha-

Kaama-and Mokshas. From his first face of the 'Chaturmukha', he created Gayatri, Ruks, Yagni related Agni shtoma etc; Veda Vangmaya, Veda Chhandas, and various Agni-Karyas; from his Southern Face were generated Yajur Veda, Traishthub Chhandas; Panchadasa Stomas and Brihat Stoma; from his western face emerged Saama Suktaas, Jagati Chhandas, Paptada Stoma; Atiraatra of Jyotishthoma etc; from Brahma's fourth Face emerged Atharva Veda, Anushtub and Vairaja Chhanda etc. Through out the Yuga Periods, there were countless species of Creation were materialised of 'Charaachara' or mobile and Immobile nature, defying description. (Brahmanda Purana)

Kalki Devi approached Narayana in the form of 'Vamana' who in turn enabled a Brahmana called Kama Sharma and his wife Devahuti on the banks of Yamuna River; he blessed that this couple would give birth to Bhoga Simha and Keli Simha. These two sons would stay in a Kreedavati Nagar and would carry out the wishes of Kali Yuga Devi, especially in the task of wide-spread 'Varna-sankara' or destroying the Rules of 'Varnashrama'. Over two thousand years, the established Regulations made by Lord Brahma and the successive Manus would get thinner and thinner and by the Second Paada of Kali Yuga, Kali Devata would be happy to witness that the old Vedic values would be obliterated, that the Daityamaya human beings (fully soaked in Daitya activities) would be of two-and-half feet height, that their life span would be forty years maximum (as against hundred years now) and that they would be free like birds without any 'Karmic regulations! At the end of the Kali's second half there would neither be the institutions of marriages, nor Kingships, nor any social reformer and not even a Karma Karta! The World would be full of the progeny of Bhogi Simha and Keli Simha and this kind of a situation devoid of customs and social norms would prevail for one and quarter lakh years!! In the Third Quarter of Kali Yuga, the average age of human beings would be twenty six years maximum; Bhiringha Muni along with his wife Saurabhi would create Kaulakalpa-named beings who would not hesitate to eat human beings/ kinnaras. These new species of Kaulakalpas would resort to beastly affairs with mothers, sisters and daughters! They would be too sex-blinded and produce too many children and resort to affairs with co-males and animals! In the fourth phase of Kali Yuga the maximum age of humans would not exceed twenty years and live like water-beasts and animals; hells like Tamistra and worse kinds of frightening Places of Retribution would be over-populated. As Yama Dharma Raja found that the influx of dead Beings was assuming alarming proportions, he and Chitra Gupta approached Indra Deva and later on to Brahma Deva and the latter declared that soon enough there would be an 'Avatar' (Incarnation) of Vishnu Deva as Kalki Deva; he would be fully armed with 'Kahdga' (Long sword) whose reach would be unimaginably long and widespread as also with a 'Kavacha' (Body-Cover) and 'Dhaal' or Protective Shield, mounted on a huge horse, travelling on 'Yoga Marga' for sixteen thousand years and would turn the entire 'Srishti' to ash-laden devastation! At that time, there would be a cloud burst producing the Great Annihilation of the Universe under alarming and incessant rain called 'Pralaya'! That would be the fresh 'Srishti' heralding the new cycle of Yugas ab initio!! (Bhavishya Purana)]

Andhaka was the son of Daitya Hiranyaaksha of Varaaha Avataara fame of Vishnu Deva; the latter killed the Daitya as he sought to pull down Bhu Devi to Rasatala. In his own right, Andhaka was highly ill-famed having secured the boon of invincibility from Brahma, overthrew Indra and Devas from Swarga and made them shelterless besides tormenting Sages and the Virtuous. Devas, Brahma and Vishnu had all approached Maha Deva as the atrocities of Andhaka became unbearable. Shiva was present at the battle field and asked Devas to fight but Andhaka became too powerful to Indra and Devas. Playfully, Maha Deva lifted up the Daitya and dangled and suspended him by the Trishula exposing him to the heat and high temperature of Surya Deva on the Sky. Sarga Forty Five: As Rama Lakshmanas were tied down by ‘Nagastra’ by Indrajit in hiding, Vaanara Shreashthas tried to locate him who too were the victims of Indrajit’s astras as the bewildered Maha Vanaras broke down too.

Meghanada was an expert in magical warfare, sorcery and mantratantras besides Brahmastra, Vaishnavastra and pashupatastra by the boons of Brahma, married to Sulochana, the daughter of the Shesha Naaga. During the battle between the Devas and Ravana, Lord Indra, accompanied by Devas captured Ravana. To rescue his father, Meghanada attacked Indra and his elephant Airavat, defeated all the Devas, even Indra. Meghanada tied and mounted Indra onto his celestial chariot and dragged him to Ravana in Lanka. Ravana and Meghanada decided to kill Indra. At this juncture, Brahma intervened and asked Meghanada to free Indra. Meghanada obliged and was granted a boon from Brahma. Meghanada asked for immortality, but Brahma remarked that absolute immortality is against the law of the nature. Instead, he was then granted another boon that after the completion of the Yagna of Pratyangira or the ‘Nikumbhila yagna’ and get a celestial chariot, mounting on which, he could win over any enemy in war and become invulnerable. But Brahma also cautioned him that whosoever would destroy this yagna would also kill him. Brahma was highly impressed by Meghanada's valor in this war and it was he who gave him the name Indrajit, the conqueror of Indra. It is also believed that Meghanada was granted another boon by Brahma in which it was promised to him that he would only be killed by such a human who had not slept for twelve years. Indrajit was trained under the guidance of Daanava Rakshasa Guru Shukra and obtained several divine shastra astras. Shastras are weapon like sword, lance, mace or dics. Astras include Mohana, Prahmaana, Krouncha, Varshana, Shoshana, Santaapana, Paishaacha, Naaga, Garuda, Agneya, Varuna, Vayavya, Mohini, Brahma, Brahmanda, Paashupata, Naraayanaadi.]

[Vishleshana on Samudrika Shastra: on women in general: ‘Padmini, Chatrini, Shankhini and Hastini are four kinds of women. Padmini, or Lotus-woman has a pleasing face as the full moon; her body with soft flesh, head like mustard-flower; her skin is tender and fair as the yellow lotus, never dark-coloured, though resembling, in the effervescence and purple light of her youth, the cloud about to burst. Her eyes are bright and beautiful as the orbs of the fawn, well-cut, and with reddish corners. Her bosom is hard, full and high; her neck is goodly shaped as the conch-shell, so delicate that the saliva can be seen through it; her nose is straight and lovely, and three folds of wrinkles cross her middle, about the umbilical region. Her Yoni resembles the open lotus-bud, and her Love-seed (Kama-salila, the water of life) is perfumed like the lily which has newly burst. She walks with swanlike gait, and her voice is low and musical as the note of the Kokila-bird; she delights in white raiment, in fine jewels, and in rich dresses. She eats little, sleeps lightly and, being as respectable and religious, she is clever and courteous, she is ever anxious to worship the gods, and to enjoy the conversation of Brahmans. Such, then, is the Padmini, or Lotus-woman. Samudrika Shastra further prescribes the grace of a woman’s body as raised, smooth and soft as a lotus flower, without veins showing up and with no visible hair is the sign of a Queen. Veins showing up indicates that she will have to travel a lot. Hair on feet denotes servitude and if feet are lean, bony or without flesh, it is an indication that she is sexually undesirable. Even heels denote that she is good for companionship; Stout undesirable sexually; High loose in character and Long of misery. Legs (portion below knee) Even, smooth, without hair, without veins showing up, are signs of a girl destined to enjoy life fully. Knees Round, smooth, good looking knees are lucky indications. Loose knees indicate poverty. Bony knees without flesh connote loose character. Thighs: Fleshy, round, like an elephant’s trunk or the trunk of a plantain tree, spacing between thighs being very little, without hair, denote that she is good enough to be married by a King. Waist circumference not exceeding the width of 24 fingers (approx. 15 to 16”) with well developed hips denote full happiness. Flat, long, without flesh, caved in or hairy waist forebodes widowhood and misery. Hips Raised fleshy hips (like water melon) and well spread indicate full happiness. Sexual Organ Hidden, pink coloured, curved like the back of tortoise or an elephant’s trunk and smooth is highly auspicious. If shaped like the feet or deer or furnace, with hard hair, indicates evil. If the left side is raised, she will beget more girl children while a raised right side denotes more boys. If the organ is shaped like a conch, she will be barren. Bottom of Stomach (portion below navel) is Soft, spread out and slightly raised is highly auspicious. Hairy, veins showing up and full of lines (folds or wrinkles) indicate misery. Navel Deep, with right turn is auspicious. Raised with left turn is inauspicious. Sides of Stomach Well spread indicates many sons. If sides resemble that of a frog’s, her son will become a King. Raised sides indicate childlessness. Fold/wrinkle denote slavish tendency. Long sides denote birth of a Sandow. Ribs Good luck will result if the portion covering ribs is smooth and fleshy. Chest even and without hair is lucky and auspicious. Breasts Of equal size, fleshy, round and firm but close together are lucky. Raised right breast indicates many sons; left breast, if raised, indicates more of girls. If the portion surrounding the partition is round and good looking, good luck. Pressed in or unusually small indicates bad luck. Shoulders: Even, well built and without the joints showing up are lucky signs. Armpits Soft, with small smooth hair is lucky; deep, full of perspiration and showing out veins in unlucky. Arms Fleshy, soft, round and with veins not showing is lucky. If thumbs take the shape of a lotus bud, she is fit to be married by a King. Bent or bony denotes bad luck. Palms Red, raised in the middle, fingers evenly spaced with few lines on palm is a very auspicious sign. Back of Hands Soft without hair, well-built is lucky]

Vinata and Kadru were among the two wives of Kashyapa Muni. Kadru hatched thousands of eggs creating snakes while Vinata hatched only two. Vinata broke one egg and found a child named Aruna but was deformed. Eventually Aruna became the charioteer of Surya Deva. In a mutual bet, Vinata and

Kadru out of playfulness; the bet was as to which colour was of Uchhaishrava the celestial horse born during ksheera saagara mathana; Vinata replied that the horse was white but the bet was lost since the horse's tail was black. Vinata lost the bet and became Kadru's servant and served her as also the progeny of snakes. The second son of Vinata named Garuda too was born weak with a beak and wings like an eagle but with the features of a human. As Garuda grew up he noticed that his mother was a slave and did all the domestic work including looking after the snake children. The latter used to tauntingly address *Garuda as the son of Vinata and order him to give him rides on the sky. One day, Garuda was ordered by Kadru to take all her snake children to a near by island while Vinata should carry herself. In anger and disgust Garuda carried the snake children too high on the sky and the latter were half burnt by the heat of Surya Deva. Then as the snake kids screamed and Kadru prayed to Indra who instantly saved them by rain showers. On landing back, Garuda told the serpent kids that he could keep on taking to many islands but on the condition that her mother be freed from the slavery. But Vinata disagreed and asked Garuda to strengthen his body by reaching Himalayas and lifting big tortoises and elephants to eat. Garuda did so and eventually made his body mighty and invincible. One day he found an elephant and tortoises and having lifted them, placed the preys on a strong branch of a huge tree to settle down and eat. But Vakalhilya Sages of miniature sizes hanging down the branch realised that the massive bird could fly them down to an island near by and befriended them by calling it as 'Garuda' or the one who could lift up massive loads. He helped them and they suggested to approach swarga on the high skies to secure amrit for longevity. As Garuda was nearing Swarga, Indra got concerned about the mighty sky and ran to Brihaspati. The latter, having realised the purpose of Garuda to lift amrita drops, alerted all the Devas including Vayu- Varuna- Agni-and so on and even the vajrayudha of Indra could not stop Garuda who finally did secure a pot of amrit and desired that his mother be freed from her slavery too. On way back, Vishnu appeared and smilingly offered that he could be his 'vaahana' for ever.! [Repeat of Essence of Valmiki Ayodhya Ramayana]

Sarga Sixty Nine:As Ravana felt the never dreamt of Kumbhakarna's fall ,Trishira cooled down his anguish while Ravana Putras /cousin kumaras readied yet Narakantaka too resisted much as Angada removed him dead-

[Vishleshana on a) Shambarasura and Indra and b) Narakasura and Vishnu:

a) Indra was stated to have killed Shambarashra in Trita Yuga's Ramayana and Dwapara Yuga's Indraavataara's Pradyumna the son of Shri Krishna and Devi Rukmini; the latter is as given follows: Pradyumna was born to Rukmini and Krishna and the son looked exactly like Krishna. When he was hardly ten days old, Demon Sambara kidnapped the child not knowing that he was the son of Krishna threw him in the Sea as a huge fish ate him but the child was safe in its belly. A fisherman caught hold of the big fish and presented it to the King Sambara who in turn gave it to Mayavati the head cook of the King's kitchen who cut the fish to find an attractive baby inside. At that very juncture, Brahmarshi Narada appeared in the kitchen and revealed the Story to Mayavati of Lord Rudra turning 'Manmadha' (Cupid) into ashes when he and Rati (Cupid's wife) aimed Floral Arrows. Lord Rudra gave boons that in their next birth, Cupid would be born as Lord Krishna's son Pradyumna and Mayavati as Rati.As Pradyumna grew as a youngman, Mayavati desired to marry him despite wide difference of age. Pradyumna was popularly known as 'Vyuha' as the Lord of Intelligence, along with three of His other names viz Vasudeva (Lord of Consciousness); Sankarshana (Lord of Individuality) and Aniruddha (Lord of Intelligence). Eventually Pradyumna killed Sambara, married Mayavati and stayed with Rukmini and Krishna at Dwaraka.

b) Narakasura (Bhaumika): The end of notorious Bhaumika, the son of Bhumi (Demi-Goddess of Earth), is celebrated till date on the moon fall day preceding Kartika Month of every year as 'Deepavali' (The Festival of Lights). Krishna, accompanied by Satyabhama flew by Garuda to 'Pragiyotisha', Capital City of Bhaumasura [now in Assaam] , surrounded by mountains and ramparts defended by fire, water and unmanned automatic weapons as also protected by 'Mura Pasha' - thousand miles-long deadly and sturdy wires as designed by Demon Mura . Krishna shattered the defence fortresses and blew His Panchajanya (Conch shell) with deadening reverberation as Demon Mura's frontal fortification was destroyed. When provoked, the Demon tossed his powerful club which was slashed by Krishna's Sudarsana Chakra into pieces and devastated Mura. Seven deadly sons of Mura, who had the knowledge of weapons as fully as their father, pounced in a group but Krishna's Supreme powers were no match and they too were cracked. Bhaumasura shot at his 'Shataghni'- the powerful disc with hundred blades- and later on with his mighty spear with which he defeated Indra too both of which proved futile. Finally Krishna gave His nod to Sudarsana Chakra (Wheel) to pull down the Demon and exterminate him. Thus Bhaumasura was sent to 'Naraka' and hence his ignominious title as Narakasura. [Another version is that the Demon was arrowed down by Satyabhama herself, as he secured a blessing from Lord Brahma that only his mother Goddess of Earth (Bhumi) could kill him; Satyabhama was the reincarnation of Goddess Earth. It was at Indra's distress call that received Krishna's attention was that the Asura appropriated Varuna Deva's Royalty Insignia which was an Umbrella; the Ear- Rings of Aditi- the Mother- Figure of Devas; and 'Mani Parvata' (Mandara Mountain) where Demi-Gods resided were among the abominable acts of the Demon. As a gesture of good-will, Satyabhama's desire to transfer the 'Parijata' Tree (which emerged in the churning process of Ocean) to her garden from the Heaven was obliged by Indra. Krishna on His part released sixteen thousand royal maidens of Kings defeated by Bhaumasura and consented to marry them, in addition to the eight principal wives. Goddess Prithvi sought her apology for her son's sins and reiterated her own devotion to Krishna. She said : 'I was blessed with a son (Bhaumika) and thus you gave me a son and now took him away too now! Please accept the Kundala and other possessions as he has died now but do kindly spare his progeny of any blames. Achyuta! You are the Creator-Protector and Terminator and the Unique Form of the Universe; how could I indeed acclaim and commend you; Do forgive your own son Narakasura for his misdeeds!]

There was also the legend attributed to Agastya about the Daitya brothers Ilvala and Vatapi, who knew the Mrita Sanjeevani Mantra; they would assume the forms of Brahmanas and seek the passers by to tempt them to a feast of goat-meat, and after consuming the meal ask Vatapi to come out and Vapati would come out piercing through the tummy of the stranger and the brothers would enjoy his meat. Sarga Hundred and Ninteen: Maha Deva complemented Rama and pointed out at Dasharadha's Soul from Swarga as the latter blessed Rama stating that he redeemed his soul as Ashtavakra did to his father and assured Kingship with glory.
[Vishleshana on Ashtavarka and his father Kahola].

[Vishleshana on Ashtavarka and his father Kahola: Maharshi Aruni taught Vedas as highlighted in Chaandogya Upanishad in his ashram. Kahoda was one of his students, along with Aruni's daughter Sujata. Aruni's daughter married Kahoda. She got pregnant, and during her pregnancy, the male child heard the chanting of the Vedas by his father and corrected the recitation as the father got angry and cursed him as eight deformities of the and was thus named as 'Ashtavakra. Maharshi Ashtavakra was the author of Ashtavakra Samhita underlining human nature and essence individual freedom vis a vis the Supreme Reality and their mutual interaction the Self and the Supreme. He underscored Atmajnaana as Almighty Brahman enters each and every Being from Brahma to a piece of grass as the Antaratma or the Self- Conscience. The easiest yet the most difficult question ever is Kah ayam atmaa or which is that Self worship worthy! The reply would be the Antaratma or the Inner Consciousness: the expressions such as 'Samjnaanam' or the emotive sentence being the state of consciousness, 'vigjnaanam' or worldly awareness or knowledge, 'prajjnaanam' or instant mental responsiveness, 'medha' or brain power and retention capacity, 'drishti' or discernment and perception through senses, 'mathih' or capacity to think pros and cons, 'manisha' or mastertminded skill of planning, 'juutih' or capacity of forbearance, smriti or memory power, 'sankalpa' or ability to initiate and decide, 'kratuh' or tenacity and dedication, 'asuh' or calculated sustenance, 'kaamah' or craving obsession all ending up in 'Vashah' or forceful possession; all these are rolled into one word viz. Conscience or the super imposition of the totality of senses viz. speech, vision, touch, taste and generation. It is indeed that kind of ascent of self consciousness that submerges karta-karma-kriya into Brahman, once mortals attain at least of intervals of Immortality]

Final Sarga Hundred Twenty Eight : Bharata's handing over Ayodhya Rajya- 268

Sita Rama Nagara Yatra-Rajyabhisheka- [Brief Vishleshana on Rama Rajya from Agni Purana]

[Brief Vishleshana on Rama Rajya from Agni Purana : Rama Rajya: The perception, as to how a King should govern his Kingdom and the Subjects, was illustrated by Lord Rama to Laksmana. Agni Purana has described Rama's Percepts of an Ideal King: A King has to create wealth, increase it, protect it, and donate it. He should be humble-the humility arising out of victory, essentially after defeating the human senses of revenge, anger and retribution. He should be strong, magnanimous and forgiving, kind and protective. His support to the inferior and the needy is as significant as to punish and uproot the wicked and harmful. The human vices of greed, lust, dishonesty are but the reflections of a sick mind, which has no conviction or courage or helpfulness to the needy. Rama also advised considerable patience to deal with the timid, haughty and hurtful as these are indeed the traits of a villain. Once there is no ray of remorse and there is no trace of recovery from the pent-up senses of ego, impoliteness and audacity, then the time to end the culprit has arrived.]

[Vishleshana on Madhu Kaitabhas from Devi Bhagavata Purana

Vishnu destroys Madhu Kaitabha brothers : When Maha Vishnu was in Yoga Nidra in a comfortable posture of lying on the bed of Ananta Naga, two Demon brothers named Madhu and Kaitabha were born from the wax of Maha Vishnu's ears. Their birth was a mystery and unknown as felt by the brothers themselves whose physical forms grew fast and strong day by day, even as they were playing in the ocean surroundings, killing various kinds of aquatic species for food or play. Coming of age in course of time, the Demon brothers with huge bodies and proportionate common sense too, realised that there must have been a Massive Force which alone could have given birth to them. From the air, they heard a sound 'Vagbija' the Seed Mantra (Seed 'Bija' and 'Vak' the Speech of Goddess Sarasvati). To start with fun, but later on with maturity, they kept on practising the sound for years together, little realising the impact of the Mantra's repetition. In fact, they became so obsessed with the Mantra that they neither had food nor sleep, but with full concentration and utmost sincerity. 'The Parashakti's Voice emerged from the Skies that the Danava brothers would be invincible in the entire Universe provided they were united and fight two-some. Blessed by Maha Devi, the two brothers became swollen with pride and eventually attacked Lord Brahma Himself. On realising that they were unconquerable, Brahma who was seated on the lotus-head sprouting from Maha Vishnu's navel, tried the age-old four means. He tried to use 'Sama (Counselling) 'Dana' (Gifting or bribing), 'Bheda' (put one against another) and finally 'Danda' (Punish), but neither of these media appeared feasible; he ran away to Vaikuntha for protection but Maha Vishnu was in Yoga Nidra. Brahma had thus prayed to Yoga Nidra Devi to prompt Maha Vishnu to wake up. It was actually Maha Maya's discretion which mattered as Vishnu Himself could not regain consciousness on His own. The concentrate of 'Tamo Guna' - Maha Maya - was earnestly prayed to by Brahma, as this was a prestige issue for him and the entire domain of Gods! Maha Maya left Vishnu free and He was fully woken up to face the challenge of the hour, viz. to either manipulate or massacre the brothers, Madhu and Kaitabha. Lord Vishnu invited the brothers to fight with Himself. The fight continued for five thousand years but without a tangible result. As the Demons were clashing one after another and Lord Vishnu was in duel singly, the latter asked the brothers to give a break as it was against Justice that they took alternate positions while He was alone. During the break, Vishnu prayed to Maha Shakti and complained that the fight was unfair and that they were also given by Her the boon of voluntary death or 'Svacchanda Maranam'. Maha Shakti realised the lacuna in the duel and advised Vishnu to give boons to the brothers so that a way out would automatically open up. Meanwhile, Maha Sakti agreed to be present at the fight in physical form and disturb the concentration of the Demon brothers by casting Her fake amorous looks. This encouraged Vishnu to convey the Demons that their duel with Him was of great quality and thus He was ready to give boons to them. They got into the trap as they boasted that they were prepared to give boons to Him instead of the other way around. Vishnu grabbed the opportunity and said that He be given the boon of their death by killing each other! The brothers gave an excuse that the boon could be given only provided there was no water or wetness in the Ocean. Vishnu expanded his thighs manifold so that there could be adequate space for the killings. The Demons expanded their bodies too and thus the thighs of Vishnu and the body sizes of the brothers kept on increasing horizontally and vertically proportionately. Finally, the illusion created by Vishnu proved stronger and the brothers had to yield to their own killings. Thus Maha Shakti who assumed human physique and paved the way to the killings of the Danava brothers without breaking the Rules of 'Dharma Yuddha', partly by trickery and partly by Maya or Illusion.]

Kashyapa married thirteen of Daksha's daughters. Their names were Aditi, Diti, Danu, Arishta, Surasa, Khasa, Surabhi, Vinata. Tamra, Krodhavasha, Ila, Kadru and Muni. Aditi's sons were the twelve gods known as the adityas. Their names were Vishnu, Shakra. Aryama, Dhata, Vidhata, Tvashta, Pusha, Vivasvana, Savita, MitraVaruna, Amsha and Bhaga. Diti's sons were the daityas (demons). They were named Hiranyaksha and Hiranyakashipu, and amongst their descendants were several other powerful daityas liked Bali and Banasura. Diti also had a daughter named Simhika who was married to a danava named Viprachitti. Their offspring's were terrible demons like Vatapi, Namuchi, Ilvala, Maricha and the Nivatakavachas. The hundred sons of Danu came to be known as danavas. The danavas were thus cousins to the daityas and also to the adityas. In the danava line were born demons like the Poulamas and Kalakeyas. Arishta's sons were the Gandharvas (singers of heaven). Surasa gave birth to sarpas, the snakes. Khasa's children were the Yakshas (demi-gods who were the companions of Kubera, the god of Wealth) and the Rakshasas. Surabhi's descendants were cows and buffaloes. Vinata had two sons named Aruna and Garuda. Garuda became the king of the birds. Tamra has six daughters. From these daughters were born owls, eagles, vultures, crows, water-fowl, horses, camels and donkeys. Krodhavasha had fourteen thousand children known as nagas (snakes). Ila gave birth to trees, creepers, shrubs and bushes. Kadru's sons were also known as nagas or snakes. Among the more important of Kadru's sons were Ananta, Vasuki, Takshaka and Nahusha. Muni gave birth to the Apsaras (dancers of heaven). Diti's children (daityas) and Aditi's children (Adityas) continually fought amongst themselves. On one particular occasion, Devas succeeded in killing many of the demons. Thirsting for revenge, Diti began to pray to her husband, Kashyapa that she be given birth to a son who would kill Indra, the king of the Devas. Kashyapa found it difficult to refuse his wife outright but gave a condition that she would have to bear the son in your womb for a hundred years. Diti resolved to do so but Indra came to know about Diti's resolve and was waiting for an opportunity to save himself. There was an occasion when, tired after her prayers, Diti went to sleep without first washing her feet. This was an unclean act and it gave Indra the required opportunity. He adopted a miniscule form and entered Diti's womb. With his weapon vajra, he sliced up the baby inside the womb into seven parts. The baby naturally began to cry at the pain. Indra kept on saying, 'ma ruda' that is, 'don't cry.' But the baby, or rather its seven parts, would not listen. Indra thereupon sliced up each of the seven parts into seven more sections, so that there were forty-nine sections in all. When these forty-nine sections were born, they came to be known as the Maruts, from the words - ma ruda- that Indra had addressed them. Since Diti had not been able to adhere to the conditions her husband had set, the Maruts did not kill Indra. They instead became Indra's followers or companions, and were treated as Devas.]

Sarga Sixteen - Dashagriva visited 'Sharavana Sarkandavana' as the pushpaka vimana was halted by Nandeshwara- the angry Rakshasa lifted up the mountain, delighting Mahesha, named him as Ravana and gifted a khadga!

[Vishleshana on Sarkanda Vana and Kartikeya Janma vide a) Padma and b) Skanda Puranas respectively:

a) For a number of years, Shiva and Parvati were in a joyful mood after their marriage and there was little news for Indras and Devas about the possible arrival of Kartikeya who alone could terminate Tatakasura. Agni Deva took the form of a parrot and entered the Palace of Shiva and Parvati who found that Parvati was enjoying a bath in a Sarovar playing with lotus flowers and Lord Shiva was resting in his bed. She found six Krittikas in the Sarovar and told them that she was desirous of seeing the water drops inside the lotus bulbs; the Kritthikas replied in fun that they would show the water drops provided they allow them also to share the joy of a child in her 'garbha'! The Krittikas further said that they should allow them too to own the child as their own as much as that of Devi Parvati and she agreed to the mutual deal; Krittikas showed the water drops inside the lotus bulb and drank them. As soon as she drank the water drops, there emerged a handsome and healthy boy from Devi Parvati's right abdomen with Sun-like luster and a powerful Physique wearing a 'Shula' and 'Ankush' in both of his hands. He was called 'Kumar' as many entities claimed parentage mainly of course by Lord Shiva and Devi Parvati but also the Krittikas and even Agni. The boy had six brilliant faces and was popularly called by several names viz. Vishakha, Shanmukha, Skanda, Shadaanana and Kartikeya.

b) After wedding, Maha Deva and Devi Parvathi moved on to Mountain Gandhamadan to a luxurious and lonely place for their honeymoon. As Bhagavan's virility was so potent that parts of humanity were getting destroyed and Vishnu asked Agni Deva to take the form of a Hermit and asked Parvati to donate it and extended his hand which was immediately consumed by Agni even before Her eyes. Parvati got angry and cursed Agni to become 'Sarva Bhakshak' or he who consumes everything. Agni could not bear the brunt of the virility of Maha Siva and begged Him to show a way to pass it on to someone; Shiva advised that the same be planted into virtuous women and Sage Narada annotated that such women of high merit taking bath on an early morning in the instant month of Magha would be attracted to Agni and his hot flames and they would be the best choice for the transfer of the virility in particles. As advised by Narada, Kritthikas approached Agni seeking warmth from the cold morning and Agni transferred some drops of virility to the ladies through their skin pores. Kritthikas got pregnant and their angry husbands gave a curse to them to roam on the Sky. They became Stars in a constellation and aborted their pregnancies. The major portion of the virility got left however on top of the Himalayas which was lifted by a crane and pushed into Ganges and the drops which were radiant like fire sparks got meshed up in the river bed plants (Sarkhand) of Ganges, who carried the foetus to a secluded place in the bushes thus emerging a Six Headed Child Kartikeya! As soon as the boy of highly chiselled face and limbs was born with extraordinary splendour, there was such illumination that travelled all over the Three Worlds instantly. Shiva Deva and Devi Parvati appeared at once on their Vrishaba carrier and were overwhelmed with parental love and affection.]

a) Maharshi Shilada approached Indra Deva to bless him to a highly renowned and virtuous son who would be 'Ayonijam' and 'Mrityuheenam' or unborn to a woman and deathless. Indra Deva expressed his inability and said: Na durlabho Mrityuheenastwa Putro hyayonijah, Mayaa cha Vishnunaa chaiva Brahmanaa cha Mahatmanaa/ (It is not possible for Brahma or Vishnu to grant a son who would be unborn to a woman and would not die). Maharshi Shilada then performed severe Tapasya for thousands of years and his body got degenerated to such an extent that it became a skeleton full of worms. Finally, Maha Deva granted his vision and Shilada's wish: Tawa Putro bhavishyaami Nandi naamnaa twayonijah, Pitaa bhavisyaasi mama Pitruvey Jagataam Muney/ (I shall grant you a son with the name of Nandi and he would be my son and would be popular like wise). Then Nandi was born at Yagna Bhumi with the features of Maha Deva himself with Trinetras, Chaturbhjas and as Jataa mukuta and Vajra-Sarpa dhaari when Devatas rained fragrant flowers, Apsaras danced and Gandharvas sang tuneful hymns in praise of Shiva and Nandi. Vasus, Rudras and Indra prayed respectfully and Devis like Lakshmi, Jyeshtha, Diti, Aditi, Nanda, Shachi, Bhadra and others rendered 'Stutis' to Nandi. Shilada Muni commended Maha Deva as well as Nandeswara and expressed his total satisfaction and gratitude. As Nandeswara was taken into the 'Parnashala' or thatched home of Shilada, Nandi assumed a human Rupa instead of Deva Swarupa. Shilada Muni was overjoyed, performed the child's Jaata Karma and other Vedic Tasks and on the son's attaining seven years performed his Yagnopaveeta dharana and 'Upasana' of Gayatri and tendered him to the Ashram of Maharshi Mitraavaruna. The Guru taught Veda Vidya, Shastras and other Scriptures, besides Dhanur Vidya, Ayur Veda and MantraVidyas, Chatushashti Kaalas, Ashrama Dharmas and so on. Mitraavaruna was very proud of the student and so was Muni Shilada; the Guru then blurted at that time of Nandi's exit from Ashram that doubtless Bala Nandi displayed extra-ordinary brilliance as a fulfilled Scholar and accomplishment but was shortlived! Shilada fainted at this disclosure for long and after regaining normalcy took to extreme Tapasya again to Maha Deva; even as Shilada was engaged in Tapasya, Shiva appeared, fondled Nandi, assured him not to get disturbed from what was stated by his Guru. He said that actually he sent messengers that Nandi's life was almost over since his human birth would anyway be of Tapatrayas and hence he was terminating the Manava Janma to bestow Everlasting Life; by so saying, Maha Deva touched Nandi so that his physical body would fall down with his Jataa Mukuta etc and secure a permanent Rudra Rupa. The Place where the human form of Nandi's 'Jatajuta' fell on Earth was materialised into a Sacred River called Jatodaka and Nandi's new Form was of a 'Vrishabha'; Parama Shiva himself performed 'Abhisheka' on the new Form of Nandi and that Place came to be called Vrishadhwani, Jambunada or Panchanada and Vishwakarma gifted a Golden Mukuta or Headgear and Kundalaas or Ear Rings. Thereafter Nandeswara familiarised with his mother Devi Girija and also the Ganaas, whom he was empowered as their Chief. Devi Parvati endeared the son who prostrated before her with veneration. Maha Deva declared to the Tri Lokas that Nandeswara was the son of Shiva and Parvati. Devas headed by Indra, Brahma, Vishnu, Dikpalakas, Maharshis, besides Yaksha-Gandharva-Muni and Yogi ganaas were all invited to a huge event where Nandeswara's unique name was fame were known all over, where ever Maha Deva was known and indeed Maha Deva was acclaimed as the Supreme Lord of the Universe. Parama Shiva granted a boon to Nandeswara that He would be in the 'Sannithi' (Presence) of Shiva always and any kind of worship to himself would be incomplete without any Service to Nandi ! Even great sins of the magnitude of Brahma hatya could be nullified by Shiva Puja but at first, Nande -swara should be propitiated without fail; Aadow kuryaanamaskaaram tadantey Shivataam Vrajat/

b) The Northern Peak of Mandarachal Mountain known as Munjavan is picturesque where a Nandana Garden existed with most alluring surroundings of glittering precious stones and heaven-like ambience of streams, flowers and fruits where Devas made their temporary resting places and so did Celestial Beings like Kinnaras who sang their sweetest tunes and performed their dances. Most significantly, Maha Deva used to often grace the Place in the form of 'Sthanu Parameswara'. In the subsequent Treta Yuga, a Maha Muni called Nandi carried out a rigorous Tapasya for thousand years experiencing icy cold and extreme heat and Parameswara having tested his steadfast fortitude and unnerving faith finally gave 'Sakshatkar' and asked boons to bestow; but Nandi never yielded for 'Prabhutva, Amaratva, Indratva, Brahmatva, Lokapaalatva -Royalty, Immortality, the position of Indra, Brahma, Lokapaala –but his Bhakti should be eternal, or else there should not be Bhakti at all! Very gladly, Shankara awarded the World's highest windfall that Nandi would be unique like Shiva Himself, that he would be the conduit between all Devas and Danavas, Indra and Brahma and all the Highest Powers that be as Shiva's own conscience! Thus Nandi the Head of Nandi Ganas became Trinetra, with Trishul, Danad, Pinaki, etc. like Second Shankara! In course of time, none could ever witness Shankara's physical form as He had turned Himself as a Deer in the Sleshmatak Forest, a fact not known to Nandi even! Led by Nandi, all the Deities including Indra made vigorous searches the World over but to no avail. Lord Brahma in His inner vision over Tapasya discovered Parameswara as a Deer in the Sleshmatak Forest not far from the renowned Pasupathinath Temple in Nepal. Indra, Brahma and Narayana reached the Forest and found the uni-horn Deer, chased it and nearly caught hold of the horn – Indra the top portion, Brahma the middle and Vishnu the lower portion. Unfortunately for them, the horn gave way into their hands as three parts and all the three cursed their own helplessness. A voice was then heard that the three of them were able to catch only the horn and that too in three pieces. If only the entire body were caught and installed then Dharma Dhenu (the Cow of Virtue) would have been on all four legs. Anyway, they should install their respective pieces of the horn- the upper portion as Uttar Gokarneswar, the middle portion as Dakshina Gokarneswar and the lower portion at Slesheswar. Lord Shiva further said that on the foot hills of Himalayas called Nepal, He would in any case emerge on His own with four resplendent faces in four directions which would be famous as 'Sariresh' (Pashupathinath); It is at this Illustrious Place where the Sacred Bagamati River originating from Himalayas flows that Slesheshvar Param Guha or the Sancrosant Cave had surfaced. There are any numbers of streams flowing where even a touch of the waters would destroy sins. To the South of Slesheswar is situated the 'Anashak' Tirtha which allows firm steps towards Mukti. Another Tirtha called 'Bhriгу Prapatan' destroys 'Arishat Vargas' (Six Enemies) viz. Kama (Desire) and Krodha (Anger); Groups of 'Apsaras' (Celestial Dansueses) take off by Vimans from this Place to 'Swarga'. Lord Brahma Himself established 'Brahmodabhed' Tirtha which has the reputation of abolishing 'Rajo guna' if a devotee takes bath with Indriya-Nigrah or limb control for a year to qualify him to ascend to Brahma Loka. There is also a 'Gorakshak' Tirth a visit of which would bestow the benefit of 'Sahasra-Daan' or Charity of Thousand Cows. A Climb of Gauri Shikhar provides Devi- Sayujya. Down under the Mountain a bath in Baghmati River at 'Ratna Kund' blesses attainment of Skandalok. Even a simple bath at ‘Panchanadi Tirtha’ bestows the Punya of performing ‘Agnishtoma’. To North of Slesheswar is ‘Pranthakapaniya’ Tirtha where Gandharvas were renowned to worship Shiva. To North West, a sincere bath in ‘Brahmodaya Tirtha’ along with ‘Sandhyopasana’ would assure that there would be no visit to ‘Mrityu loka’ and that there would not be any difficulties for the rest of life. The devotees who perform Pitra Tarpana and Shraddha in the Sangam Place of Bhagmati and Manivati Rivers would most certainly accomplish the best of Shiva Devas’ blessings! Lord Indra situated the top portion of the ‘Shringa’ at Swarga itself. Brahma set up the middle portion of the Deer Horn at Gokarna and Lord Vishnu set it up at Shringeshwar. But Bhagavan’s body without the Horn has infinite forms! For example, Ravanaasura secured one linga which got entrenched in Earth because of the trickstery of Ganesha and tried to pull it tight and gave up! (Gokarna in North Karnataka is a Siddha Linga at Mahabaleswar Temple; the coverings of the Atma Linga sought to have been brought by Ravana fell at Dharieswar, Gunavantheswar, Murudeswar and Sajjeswar Temples, as popularly believed).

Tamil Purana Tiruvallada mentions another story in which Nandi took the form of a whale as Devi Parvati lost her concentration while Shiva was explaining the meaning of Vedas to her. Parvati incarnated as a fisherwoman for the atone. To unite his master and his beloved wife, Nandi took the form of a whale and started to trouble the people. Fisherwoman Parvati’s father told that anyone who killed the whale would marry his daughter. Later Lord Shiva took the form of a fisherman, killed the whale and got Parvati in her previous form.]

Sarga Seventeen - Ravana sights Vedavati, a partial form of Maha Lakshmi, performing tapasya for Vishnu- he gets attracted to the tapasvini as she resorted to agnijwalas and curses to take revenge as Sita in next birth

In the lineage of Manu Daksha Savarni were born Brahma Savarni-Dharma Savarni-Rudra Savarni-Deva Savarni and Indra Savarni who were all Parama Bhaktas of Bhagavan Vishnu.The son of Indra Savarni viz. King Vrishabhadhwaja was a great devotee of Parama Shiva and the latter considered the King even more important than his own sons Ganesha and Kumara. Somehow the King never followed the Vaishnava Dharma and even discouraged Vishnu Puja and Lakshmi Puja. An infuriated Surya Deva cursed the King that his Rajya Lakshmi would abandon him. Shiva in turn lifted his Trishul and ran behind Surya Deva and the latter sought refuge from his father Kashyapa Muni and Brahma. The three some of Surya, Kasyapa and Brahma sought protection from Vishnu Deva. Shiva too reached there and told Vishnu that Vrishabhadhwaja was his personal Bhakta and Surya cursed the King. Vishnu replied that by the time Shiva reached Vaikuntha, lot of time elapsed and not only Vrishabhadhwaja lost his Empire and died but also his son Rathadwaja passed away and the latter's sons Dharmadwaja and Kushadwaja became intense Bhaktas of Vishnu and were performing Tapasya to Lakshmi Devi; Vishnu further said that an 'Amsha' of Maha Lakshmi would be soon born to Malavati, the blessed wife of Kushadwaja. As soon as the baby was born, she recited Vedas and was thus named Vedavati. In course of time, Vedavati took to severe Tapasya. There was an Akaasha Vani (Celestial Voice) which pronounced that Vedavati in her next birth would be Vishnu's wife. On hearing this, Vedavati left for Gandhamadana Mountain and intensified her Tapasya further. The demon Ravana spotted Vedavati in Tapasya and made advances to her; she cursed Ravana at his misbehaviour, declared that she would sacrifice her life by jumping into Agni Kunda and in her next birth would become responsible for his death as Devi Sita, the wife of a human Avatara of Vishnu to be called Shri Rama. Devi Sita was wedded to Shri Rama in the next birth. To keep up the word of his father Dasharatha, Rama along with Sita and Lakshmana moved on to the forests and Agni Deva approached Rama as a Brahmana and conveyed that since the time for Sita's abduction by Ravana was imminent, he (Agni) should replace Devi Sita with Maya Sita and after the episode of Ravana's killing was over, he would replace real Sita with the shadow Sita after the 'Agni Pariksha' time. Vedavati alias Chhaya Sita proceeded to perform Tapasya at Pushkara Kshetra and in Dwapara Yuga became Draupadi as the daughter of Drupada Raja and further as the wife of Pandavas. Thus Vedavati was blessed as a Trihaayani born in Satya, Treta and Dwapara yogas].

Sarga Twenty - Kalahapriya Narada diverted Ravana's tour to swarga loka to Yamaloka and followed himself to watch the proceedings

[Vishleshana on Narada in brief: Brahmarshi Narada is replete with references in Hindu Mythology; he is described in various Puranas as an agent provocateur in a dharmic way to mislead purposively the evil doer towards a rosy path and at the end either teach, correct and reform or totally destroy the evil at its termination. Thus Narada is a legendary bridge between excessive arrogance and selfishness on the one hand and a virtuous way of exemplary life on the other! In the normal parlour, the image of Narada reminds one of a singing bard carrying a musical string instrument named 'veena' in his arms, decorated with jasmine flowers on his wrists, neck, shoulders and head hairs, while jay walking on clouds as a 'trailoka sanchari' in the sky from one part of the Universe to another as a globe trotter. He is the Sage who anticipates with his uncanny foresight and seeks to avert impending dangers and more often than nought prevent even by creating and hastening critical situations to teach lessons to the wrong doers, thus save embarrassments and negative situations to the hapless; he does not spare any body, -be it human beings or even Gods - barring the Adi Deva Narayana, whose name is at the tip of his tongue every moment and by each and every utterance by his breath! Indeed he is the Celestial Messenger of Peace and Universal Togetherness. No wonder Narada is a synonym of Kalaha priya or mischief monger but he is a unique fund of knowledge, robust commonsense and uncanny wit and wisdom that shapes destinies of Beings in the Supreme Lord's Creation! In Hindu Mythology, Brahmarshi Narada occupies a pride of place. In Puranas one could find innumerable references about his multi-magnificent personality for his knowledge, tact, wit, profound common sense and timely interventions where ever tough situations arise and ready solutions, sometimes even unpalatable, are offered. But all kinds of puzzles are untied by him most eminently in the glorious frame-work of Dharma and Nyaya. The finesse of Narada's way out even in tough situations is attracted by the most ruthless evil practitioners of very high intensity. Could a Ravana but yield to the temptation of bringing Maha Deva's Atma Linga home in his Puja Mandir! Would Kamsa the unquestionable tyrant of Mathura be made to believe years ahead with a warning signal that a child even yet to be born as Krishna would ensure his death! Should a gullible boy Dhruva be emboldened to leave a Kingdom to forests in search of Narayana! Might a Devi Savitri have the courage to run after Yama Raja on a firm prophesy of untimely death of her husband and made Yama's own position compromising! Was Devi Satyabhama the zealous and beloved spouse of Lord Krishna as smitten by jealousy of Devi Rukmini was able to hatch a plan to weigh Krishna's body weight against the Kingdom's gold and jewellery in a sensitive balance and turn Krishna as Narada's slave, but for Devi Rukmini's intervention to place a Tulasi Leaf against the gold reserves! Was indeed Devi Satyabhama who longed for Parijata Tree from Swarga in her backyard helped Indra to terminate Narakasura in Krishna's company and be responsible for entire Bharata to observe 'Deepavali' year after year till date! Such intelligent quotient coupled with eloquent knowledge is but a rudimentary component of Narada's renown! He defied no less than a Brahma whose instruction was to become a house holder to procreate progeny while he stood his ground firmly being ready for punishment to become a house holder again and again. This was backed up by his faith, devotion and total surrender to Narayana!]

Sarga Twenty One - As provoked by Narada, Ravana visited Yamaloka, released select pretaatmaas, Yama Dootas attacked the pushpaka vimana damaging it, and Ravana by his paashupataasra destroyed Yama dootaas!

[Vishleshana on Narakas and possibility of retribution from a) Brahma Purana and b) Parashara Smriti]

a) Narakas are: Rourava, Shoukara, Rodha, Taana, Vishasana, Mahajjwaala, Tapta kumbha, Mahalobha, Vimohana, Rutiraandha, Vasaatapta, Kurmeesha, Krumibhojana, Asipatravana, Laalaabhaksdhya, Puyavbaha, Vahnijjwala, Adhahshira, Samdamsha, Krishna sutra, tama, Swabhajana, Apratishta, Avichi and so on. All these are under the control of Yama Dharna Raja and these hells are highly frightening as they administer sharp weapons, fire and poison and send shivers in the veins of the targeted sinners. Providing false evidences, speaking with partiality and blatant lies are liable to reach Rourava Naraka. Bhruna Hatya (killing an unborn child while in Garbha), Guru Hatya (killing one's own Preacher), killing a cow and terminating a person by obstructing breathing would attract 'Ghora Rourava Naraka'; drunkards, Brahma hatya, stealing gold, and keeping company of such sinners are consigned to Shoukara Naraka. Murdering Kshatriyas and Vyashyas, and killing Rajaduta or Messenger of royalty would attract Tapta kumbha Naraka; selling contraband like hot drinks and intoxicants and deserting ones' own followers would consign the sinners to Saptaloha Naraka. A person who insults or uses harsh language the Guru or Gurujana, insulting and criticizing Vedas, or selling Vedas and Scriptures, enticing and taking advantage of destitutes, the helpless or the mentally unsound are banished to Shabala Naraka; thieves and those who perform character-assassination of others are destined to Vimoha Naraka; those who display dislike to Devas, Brahmanas and parents are directed to Kumbhibhakshya Naraka; Persons who consume food even before Naivedya to Devas, Pitras and Guests are shunted to Lalabhakshya; those who manufacture arrows and devices to kill are destined to Vedha Naraka, while who produce Khadgas and Ayudhas (swords and weaponry) are sent away to Vishaana; Brahmanas who accept daanaas in connection with evil-oriented tasks, say to appease 'Kshudra Devatas' or those who encourage ineligible persons to perform and those who make a profession of misleading astrology to cheat gullible persons go straight to Adhomukha Naraka. Brahmanas by birth practice dealing in the trade of meat, lac, 'til' or black sesame seed, salt and intoxicants are sent to Krumipuya; also those Brahmanas in the trade of cats, chicken, goats, dogs, birds and pigs are banished to the same Krumipuya naraka. Such Brahmanas who are in the profession of theater / acting / drama / dance; boating; eat the food of fallen women; carriers of contraband material, accept bribes; maintain cows, buffalos and similar animals to eke livelihood; go to bed with wives especially on Sacred days; put other's houses on fire and involve in the murders of friends are all diverted to Rudhirandha Naraka. Those human beings who resort to the murder of brothers are thrown into Vaitarini River.

b) In case, prayaschittas are not already executed in one's life time in lieu of Maha Patakas and Upa patakas perpetrated on earth in the previous birth, the accumulated sins of dreadful nature would entail much more severe penalties and retributions. The retributions are on account of non-performance of 'Vihita Karmas' or prescribed duties and perpetrating 'nishiddha karmas' or prohibited acts. For example, avoiding Garahana Snanas involves attacks of leprosy for seven births. Committing 'Brahma hatya paataka' and such grave sins and not resorting to prayaschitta would definitely lead to payback reprisal like being pushed down from mountains of high altitudes or being consigned to engulfing poisonous flames mercilessly. Persons who are normally susceptible to continuous attacks by 'Arishad Vargas' viz. Kama-Krodha-Lobha-Moha- Mada-Matsaras viz. Deep desires, terrible anger, passionate possessiveness, excessive attachments, incorrigible arrogance and unpardonable jealousy; one's misdoings of serious nature are therefore sure to lead them to Ati Pataka, Maha Pataka, Anupataka Upa, Paataka, Upa pataka, Jaati bhramsha types of retributions as also Sankarikarana, Apaatri karana, Malaavaha, and so on. Matru - Putrika-Swashru-Sunsha gamana are considered as Atipatakas and Brahma Hatya-Suraapaaa-Brahmana Dhana harana- steya or stealing-guru bharya gamana are Maha patakas. Rajaswala-Garbhini-Asphuta baala gamana and Sharanaagata Shatru vadha are as dreadful as Brahma hatya; providing wrong or misleading evidences and murder of friends are as heinous as Suraa Paana; Para daaraa gamana especially with closely related women is stated to be as appalling as Guru Bharya gamana; 'Sharanaagata stree gamana' is stated as Anupataka or as deplorable as Maha Pataka. Go Vadha, Para Stree vikraya, Matru/Pitru dushana and bahishkarana, Brahmana Vidhi parityajana, Vrata parityaga, Kanya dushana and nastikyata are of the rank of Upapaata dosha. Para ninda, Madyaadi vikraya, Neecha sahavaasa and such other traits demand Jaati bhramsha. Pashu samhara and Heena vritti demand sankarikarana. Asatya sambhaashana, nishkarana nindaaropana, kriki keeta pakshi jalachara vadha are considered as Malaa vaha; heena jaati seva, nindita dhanaarjana and such acts of depravity including Urbandhana maranas or forced deaths and anti-social activities are called prakeerna-avikeerna paapas. Among the Atipatakas are listed Matru-Putrika-Sahodari gamana or with such other blood relations both knowingly or ignorantly, the Prayaschitta is Shishna-chedana and three Kruccha prayaschitta and three chandrayana vratas. Para stree gamana demands a series of Chandrayana Vratas like Rishi Chandrayana-eating three fistful havishaanna a day for a month]

Sarga Twenty Three - Ravana visits Rasatala Loka, forges friendship with Nivatakavacha- destroys Kalakeya Daitya who killed Shurpanakha's husband-and attacks Varuna Putras, as Varuna visited Brahma Loka for a 'Sangita Sabha'!

[Vishlesanas on Urthva Lokas and Atho Lokas from Brahmanda Purana

Urthwa Lokas: As a part of the Cosmic Egg beyond the Lokaloka, Suta Muni described as follows:(All the Lokas which possess illumination are within the ambit of knowledge and the rest are all unknown and full of darkness; that portion which is circumscribed all around by water was within the Golden Egg and is stated to contain the Bhur-Bhuvar- Swar-Mahar-Jana-Satya-Tapo Lokas. Knowledge of those Lokas is not clear. One could only guess that these Lokas were lit up by Chandra at the beginning of Shukla Paksha in the West in the shape of a Pot just as Brahmanda was also surmised as an Egg.)

The Brahmanda was stated to have surrounded by solidified water called 'Ghanodadhi' which was held by 'Vanoda' or a mass of solidified water and was encircled by Illumination all round in the shape of a Fiery Iron Ball, and Akasha or Ether grasps the Ganodadhi. The Bhutaadi or The Cosmic Egg or Maha Ahamkara or simply stated as Ghana Vaata or Solidified Air supported by Akaashaa was called the Infinite Principle or Mahaan; it was that Ayvakta or Unknown, Ananta or Endless, Aghora or Uncontaminated, Niraadhara or Unsupported, Avikara (Featureless), Sukshma (Subtle) and Avikarana (Unchanged and Undistorted).

Adholokas: As Bhu Devi the Divine Goddess is the Mother of all Living Beings, ‘Aapas’ or water is stated to be endless and so are Vayu, Agni and Akasha. Underneath Bhumi are the Nether Worlds viz. Atala, Vitala, Sutala, Talaatala, Rasatala, Mahatala and Patala. The soil in Atala is stated to be of black soil, of Vitala the ground was of palewhite, Sutala of blue, Talatala of yellow colour, Rasatala of gravel covered ground, Mahatala of Rocky Ground and of Patala of Gold. The Palaces of Asuras of Namuchi the enemy of Mahendra, besides of other demons like Mahananda, Kabandha, Bhima, Suladanta, Dhanjaya, Nagendra were all glittering examples of opulence and material happiness in Atala and other Lokas. In Sutala were the noted Daitya-Rakshasa-Serpent Kings like Mahajambha, Karbandha, Hayagriva, Nikumbha, Bhima, Suladanta, Dhananjaya, Nagendra, Kalia and so on. Shankha, Gomukha, Kakutpada, Asvatara, Kambala, Takshaka stayed at Vitala; Prahlada, Taraka, Puranjana etc were in Rasatala; Kalanemi, Gajakarna were in Mahatala; and among other illustrious serpents Maha Sesha was in Patala. Sesha Deva with his mighty and huge physique with thousand hoods ornamented with outstanding diamonds emitting unprecedented effulgence is stated to bear the brunt of the Entire Universe from Urthva Lokas, Bhumi and the Nether worlds and worshipped by Devas, Danavas, Siddhas and all other celestial beings alike! The Adholokas are called Bilwa Swarga which provided unparalleled physical and material happiness unavailable in Swarga even. The invaluable ‘Manis’ (diamonds) like those worn on the hoods of the huge serpents provided such illumination to all Nether Lokas. The population of these Lokas are stated to lead such unbelievable luxuries and joy that Maharshi Narada who visited these Lokas were totally impressed. He stated that the most powerful Surya Deva bestowed only radiance and not his heat while Chandra gave only brightness but not chilliness. The inhabitants of Bilwa Swarga always revelled in delicacies of food and wine with sophistication and style of living as they were least concerned of day-to-day difficulties; they spent long spells of time in bathing swimming in scented Sarovaras and Ponds and Narada stated that Vishnu’s Tamoguna was in full display at the Bilwa Swarga!]

Sarga Thirty - Brahma relieved Indra by imprisonment which was a retribution of Indra’s misconduct with Ahalya

[Refreshed Vishleshana on Indra’s misconduct with Ahalya an exemplary Paivrata vide Sarga Forty Eight of Valmiki Baala Ramayana- and Ganesha Purana.

In the city of Mithila, there was an ‘ashram ‘ about which Maharshi Vishvamitra explained to Rama Lakshmanas; the ashram was of Maharshi Gautama and his wife Devi Ahalya a famed Parivrata in the days of yore. It was at this Ashram that Gautama cursed Indra as the latter masqueraded as Gautama; the Maya Gautama in the absence of real Gautama stated to Ahalya Devi: Ritukālam pratīkṣante nārthinaḥ susamāhite, saṁgamaṁ tv aham icchāmi tvayā saha sumadhyame/ ‘Normally, males approach their wives to bed till their menses period is over, but today, I would like you to lie with me’. But Ahalya sensed the presence of Indra in the form of Gautama but still yeilded and asked Indra to disappear at once. Maharshi Vishvamitra continued to Rama Lakshmanas: Having sensed what had just happened between Maya Gautama and Ahalya, Gautama appeared at the ashram by his mystic powers and intercepted Indra at once at the ashram with ‘samidhaas and tirtha’ viz. wooden chips and water for igniting fire and sprinkling water readied for announcing a ‘shaapa’. Deva Raja Indra got shaken up with fright at the anger of the Maharshi as the latter announced: Mama rūpaṁ samāsthāya kṛtavān asi durmate, akartavyam idaṁ yasmād viphalas tvam bhaviṣyati/ gautamenaivam uktasya saroṣeṇa mahātmanā, petatur vṛṣaṇau bhūmau sahasrākṣasya tatkaṣṇāt/ Durmati! You have had the audacity of assuming my form and lured my wife to bed; therefore you would be as being ‘sahasraaksa’ with thousand eyes and as many of frightful forms as also beinbg devoid of ‘anda kosha’ or the sheath of fertility; instantly that body part fell on earth and he appeared frightful with thousand wavering forms. Then Gautama cursed Arundhati: Iha varṣasahasrāṇi bahūni tvam nivatsyasi/ vāyubhakṣā nirāhārā tapyantī bhasmaśyini, adṛśyā sarvabhūtānām āśrame ’smin nivatsyasi/ yadā caitad vanam ghoram rāmo daśarathātmanajā, āgamiṣyati durdharṣas tadā pūtā bhaviṣyasi/ tasyātithyena durvṛtte lobhamohavivarjitā, matsakāṣe mudā yuktā svam vapur dhārayiṣyasi/ ‘ Duraachaarini! May you become in this very ashram as a boulder / heavy stone with neither senses nor life with air as food and rain as drink, till such time after centuries, that Shri Rama would arrive at this ashram and with his sacerd ‘paada sparshana’ or the touch of His feet that you would be liberated to normalcy!’ Having cursed both Indra and Devi Ahalya thus, Maharshi Gautama retired to mountain tops for tapasya again.

Ganesha Purana, Chapters 30-34:

Brahmarshi Narada states: He visited Lord Indra at Amaravati as the former complimented Narada as a Triloka Sanchari; Narada replied that his latest was ‘mrityuloka’ and chanced to meet Rishi Gautama in his ashram along with his wife Devi Ahalya; he also said that Ahalya was supremely pretty and her exquisiteness and grace was ‘par excellence’ in the Three Lokas that he ever visited as the Apsaras and all the Swarga based feminine beauty and charm was truly negligible. After Narada’s social call was over, Indra visited Gautama’s ashram; the Maharshi was busy with his morning duties and left the ashram. Meanwhile Indra assumed the Rishi’s form and entered their bedroom. Devi Ahalya was stunned to see Maya Gautama in her bed room and exclaimed whether the Muni had not left for the duties but lying in the bed. Indra in the maya rupa said that he short circuited the puja and desired to go into bed with her as he was attacked by ‘kaama baana’, fondled her red and luscious and body parts and slept with her as she replied that there would be no other stree dharma as she ought to be a Pativrata and chirruped :Karyeshu Dasi, Karaneshu Manthri; Bhojeshu Mata, Shayaneshu Rambha, Roopeshu lakshmi, Kshamayeshu Dharitri, Shat dharmayukta, Kuladharma Patni/ and fell into the bed of Maayavi Gautama! Then Indra showed his own form and Arundhati was astonished and shocked as a stone. Even in the bed she felt a doubt that the body which she fondled was of different odour. As Indra disappeared, she was lost in thoughts. As the husband returned, she fell straight at his feet as the Maharshi out of his ‘divya drishti’/ celestial vision as what all had happened. He stated that : In respect of mantra-ayush-grihacchidra especially related to griha parivaara, rati karma-aoushadhi seva-maana sammaan as also avamaan and daama, a wise person should be discreet in adve rtising in public. Thus the Maharshi gave a ‘shaap’ to Devi Ahalya to turn into a stone since Ahalya was unable to distinguish the form- nature-and actions in comparison to a Para purusha and got mixed up with the his body parts and semen- albeit Indra was the Lord of Swarga. Then he gave a shaap to his dharma patni to instantly become a stone till such time Lord Shri Rama, in the course of vana vaasa would receive his ‘paada sparsha’. On learning about the Maharshi’s shaap, Indra got shivers like a sand storm got shattered by a mountain and instantly assumed the form of a cat and ran away from the scene. Realising that Indra fled away, the Maharshi cursed Indra to assume a swarupa as broken into thousand parts. As Indra who killed Vritraasura a Brahmana was carrying the ill- reputation of brahmana hatya, one of the Pancha Maha Paatakas of Stree hatya, Bhruna / Shishu hathya, Brahmana hatya, Go hatya and Guru hatya / Guru Bharya Gamana, realised that the shaap of Maharshi Gautama and rued deeply as to how could show up his face in Deva Sabha as he was expected to preach the principles of dharma while unable to observe and follow himself, let alone enforce it! Indra decided : Praanibhir bhujyate karma shubham vaashubham, tiryag yonim samaadaadya khapishyeghamaatmanah, naline kundmale tishtheheen idragopagaruupa -dhruk/ All the ‘jeeva rasis’ in srishti- from Indra to an insect-ought to reap the fruits of their past acts and as such I ought to assume tiryak yoni or the form of a ‘pashu pakshi keetaka’ and thus decide to become a worm as an Indragopa keetaka.’ As Indra hid himself as a Indragopa Keetaka, Deva Guru Brihaspati and Devas approached Maharshi Gautama with the sincere prostrations and requested him to withdraw the shaap or atleast mitigate it. The Maharshi initially reacted stating that a person of Indra’s stature as he was a kapati-shathadushta-aviveki-and pashchaattaapa rahita paapi and his paschaattapa would be futile. Yet, as you are all urging sincerely then Indra even in the keetaka form be taught with the Shadakshara Ganesha Mantra as Ganesha was always a ‘sarva karta-sarva harta-sarvapaata-kripanidhi-Brahmavishnu Shivaatmika and Mahasiddhi pradaayaka’. The vidhivatra Shadakshara Ganesha Mantra pleased Indra and the Gautama shaapa to Indra got diluted and hence forward Indra would assume a divya deha become a sahasra netra instead of 'shasra shareera chheda'. Indra while assuming his normal swarupa- albeit with mitigated curse by Gautama, had foremost reached the Maharshi's feet and thanked him profusely. There after, Indra seated under a kadamba tree, practised Ganesha shadakshara mantra for thousand years and Ganesha gave his benign darshan and blessed him]

Sarga Thirty One - Ravanasura along with his mantris and rakashasa sena landed in Kartaveeryaaruna Samrajya for a battle but the latter was out of station, and thus enjoyed Narmada River snanas- Shiva Linga pujas at the banks.

[Vishleshana on the Haihava Vamsha from Devi Bhagavata Purana:

The origin of Haihayas was interesting. Once, Lord Surya's son, Revanta rode on the Celestial Horse 'Uucchaiswara' and called on Maha Vishnu; Laxmi recognised the co-born Horse at the time of churning the Ocean and was lost in thoughts, despite Vishnu's noting Her indifference. Vishnu became angry and cursed Her to become a mare as She was much captivated with the horse. Lakshmi Devi prayed to Maha Deva and Girija who sent the latter's emissary to Vishnu with the request that He too be born as a horse. Lakshmi Devi confirmed to Devi Girija that her husband had great reverence for Mahadeva as Vishnu was praying to Maha Deva Himself. Hence Vishnu obliged and took the form of a Horse. The Animal Forms of Vishnu and Lakshmi gave birth to a male human child who was left in the forest but was ordained to be picked up by King Yayati's son Turvasu (Hari Varma) who was meditating for a son for hundred years. But meanwhile a Vidyadhara named Champaka and his spouse Madanashala were flying around and found a child of profound sparkle and desired to own him, but Indra warned them that the child who gave birth to Hari and Laxmi was actually meant for Yayati's son Hari Verma who was performing severe Tapasya for a male child who was subsequently named as 'Eka Vira' (The One Only Warrior). As Ekavira grew into an ideal Youth with considerable learning and valour, King Turvasu and coronated Ekavira and retired to forests. Ekavira was popular as a worthy King. As he was roaming once on the banks of Ganges, he found a pretty girl crying. When cajoled, she (Yasovati) said she was the companion of the Princess Ekavali, the daughter of King Rabhya and Queen Rukmarekha. The couple performed a Sacrifice and were blessed as Ekavali emerged from the Homa Kunda (Firepit). When the Princess and Yasovati were bathing in a Pond in their territory, Demon Kalaketu appeared, killed King Rabhya's soldiers and made amorous advances to Ekavali. She entreated the Danava King from 'Patala' that her father desired her to be wedded to King Eka Vira of Haihayas and thus requested her to leave her. But the Danava King heeded little and forcibly took Ekavali away to Patala. On hearing about the incident, Eka Vira revealed his identity and wondered how to reach Patala to fight Kalaketu. Yasovati was distressed heavily and prayed to Devi Bhagavati who in her dream informed that by the dint of a 'Bija' (Seed) Mantra which she learnt earlier by Lord Dattatreya be meditated for a month with pure heart and on the banks of Ganges, she would meet King Eka Vira and help her to kill Kalaketu. As she knew the Triloka Thilaka Yogeswari Mantra, King Eka Vira was initiated in it as follows: Hrim Gauri Rudrayathey yogeswari hum phut swaha. He was thus able to reach Patala, destroyed Kalaketu, rescued Ekavali back and married her under the care of her parents who prayed to Bhagavati with extreme gratitude . It was in the union of Eka Vira and Ekavali that the famed Kartavirya was born in the Haihayas clan.]

In the Reva Khand of Skanda Purana, Sage Suta enlightened a Congregation of Rishis about a query of Yudhishtar (of Pandavas) to Maharshi Markandeya about the origin of River Narmada. Several Holy Persons and Brahmanas approached King Pururava to let a Holy River descend from Heaven so that various religious activities aimed at Devas and Pitras by human beings were facilitated and the King performed relentless Tapasya to Parama Shiva who in turn asked Narmada Devi to descend. She desired to have a strong base to do so and Shiva asked Paryank, the son of Vindhya, to bear the brunt. As Narmada descended, there were floods of water and the Deities requested her to diminish her size and taught Pururava the details of the Rituals to perform tarpans to his ancestors which were followed by generations thereafter. But since Narmada was a virgin, she did not allow her divine touch to Deities and therefore agreed to marry King Purukutsu, who actually was Samudra Deva but was cursed by Brahma to become a human being as the King Purukutsu also learnt from Narmada about the rituals to liberate his ancestors. It was stated that Narmada 'Snaans' at various points of Her Course cutting the Vindhya Mountains and peaks every where on way were not only refreshing and cool but are Sacred and divinely and those who perform the baths, especially of early hours of a day, secure Punya of several Snaans of Ganga! The Sacred Snaans at that time are instant destroyers of sins committed in the current and previous lives. On the northern side of the River is situated Anantapur where Anantasiddhi Linga is popular and is stated to be the hub of Maharshis like Saavarni, Kaushik and Aghamarshan performing Vratas and Tapas. Sage Valmiki is also stated to have lived here for long till attainment of Moksha. Another important Tirth named Dipeswar or Vyasa Tirtha is known for Vrishabha daan (Charity of a bull) on Kartika Krishna Paksha Chaturdasi bestowing Swargavaas after life. At the Narmada-Varangana Sangam is popular to wash off physical ailments and nearby the Sangam is situated the Siva kshetra where rituals of 'Snaan and Daan' during Solar Eclipse award the same impact as at Kurukshetra; this is the abode of Narmada, Siva and Vishnu the latter being called Utpalaavarta having thousand heads! It is the belief that even flies and birds here reach Haridhaam, let alone human beings. Tripuri Kshetra is noted as a popular and powerful Tirtha where eight Swayambhu Lingas manifested on their own, where any act of Virtue would have manifold fruits of life. Sage Markandeya recalled an interesting happening about the Tripuri Kshetra: Swayambhu Manu-the first Manu-heard at Ayodhya while sleeping the remote sounds of bells and Vasishtha explained to Manu that those sounds were heard from Tripuri on the banks of Sacred Narmada, from the aeroplanes taking off from the roofs of virtuous human beings destined to celestial worlds like Kailasa, Vaikuntha and Indra loka. Swayambhu Manu immediately left for Tripuri and performed several rituals including Aswamedha Yagna and prayed to Devi Narmada who blessed the Manu that in his lineage one famous Bhagirath would be borne in Treta Yuga and would succeed bringing Pavitra Ganga to 'Aryavarta' from the Celestial Worlds! In the Tripuri Kshetra itself, Sage Bhrigu prayed to Trilochan Siva being desirous of the darshan of His Third Eye and as Shiva obliged with His appearance, the Sage asked for the boons of obtaining Siddhis, formation of Bhrigu Tirtha with His presence always, manifesting Eight Rudras in the Bhrigu Tirtha named Bhrigu, Shooli, Ved, Chandra, Mukha, Attahaas, Kaal and Karaali; and granting benevolence to visitors of Bhrigu Tirtha as a sin-destroyer. Similarly Bhagavan Soma (Chandra) prayed to Siva to set up Soma Tirtha as the Sangam of the three Rivers viz. Ganga, Jamuna and Narmada. Narmadapuri on the bank of Narmada was indeed worthy as Sage Jamadagni prayed to Maha Deva and secured a Kama Dhenu and King Kartaveeryarjuna being jealous of the prized possession, took away the Holy Cow by force after killing Jamadagni and the Sage's son Parasurama not only killed the most powerful King of the Time but also uprooted the concept of Kshatriyas and Kings by waging twenty one battles; he set up a Memorial named Devadroni (Kapila Dhenu) where Pinda daanas continued to be performed to Jamadagni and ancestors. Sage Markandeya narrated the renowned happening of a 'Nishad' (Hunter) to Yudhishtar about the formation of Trinetra Kund as the high devotee of Shiva Linga discovered that the Third Eye was missing on the Linga, cut his own eye as a replacement to it by resisting extreme pain and flow of blood and pasting it on the third eye position of the Shiva Linga; Maha Deva appeared before Nishad with blind faith, extreme sense of sacrifice and unnerving devotion and granted him 'Shiva Sayujyam' (Attainment of Oneness with Shiva). Sapta Sarasvat Tirtha came into being since a Gandharva, who was an excellent singer of hymns extolling Parama Shiva, got into the habit of drinking and Nandi cursed that the singer be born to a Chandala. The Singer became extremely repentant and entreated Nandi to show a means of reversing the curse; the Chandala had luckily retained the memory of his earlier birth as Gandharva and reached the banks of Narmada and sang hymns of Shiva at 'Shankarasthanil' or Shiva Veda when a Siva Linga appeared by name Sapta Sarasvata and the Chandala regained the earlier life as Gandharva. Shandileswar Tirtha was formed after the famous Sage Shandilya (the Founder of the Shandilya Gotra) whose Tapasya to Maheswara in his hermitage on the banks of Narmada was exemplary; along with two other Lingas viz. Pancha Brahmeswar and Pushpeshwar, the Shandileswar was well known as among the 'Tirtha Traya' where worship of the Lingas and Pitru Tarpan / Pinda Pradaanas were performed. Markandeya narrated to Yudhishtar the story of Chakravarthi Mandhata, who performed Yagnas near Amarakashtak Mountain and prayed to Omkareswar. He was a gift of a powerful Yagna by his father, King Yavanashva, who drank by mistake the 'Mantra Jala' meant for his wife. Yuvanashva got pregnant instead and delivered a boy by the opening of his belly. Devas and Indra visited the child and wondered as to who might feed milk to the boy; Indra said: 'Esha Maa Dhata' and fed Amrit-like milk by inserting his middle finger in the baby's mouth and hence the child's name became Mandhata. As the boy grew he became a model King of virtue, valour and justice. Omkareswar appeared in response to Mandhata's prayers and gave the boon of naming the Mountain of Vaidurya as Mandhata. Jaleswar or Bana Linga was the manifestation of Shiva; Banasura, the son of Bali Chakravarti, meditated to Maha Deva for thousand divine years and obtained the boons of impregnability of his City by any body excepting Mahadeva Himself and also flying mobility along with him and to those whom he chose any where. As Shiva gave the boons, Vishnu and Brahma too bestowed the same kind of boons and Banasura thus emerged the Great Mighty King of 'Three Puras' or as the dreaded 'Tripurasura', who came to attack Deva Lokas and Bhuloka. Sages, Devas, Brahma and Vishnu were all alarmed and approached Shiva, who decided to fight the Demon by Himself and smashed him with His Aghora astra which could absorb its heat and force by Narmada only after its attack. Banasura was badly hurt and realising his foolishness prayed to Maha Deva once again. The most lenient and gracious Bhagavan granted that Banasura would not have another birth and that a Shiva Linga would be manifested as Bana Linga or Jala Linga. Another instance narrated by Markandeya to Yudhishtar related to the memorable King Indradyumna who performed Maha Yagna on the banks of Narmada, had darshan of Omkareswara Linga and visioned a radiant spectacle of an Inner Linga of Maha Deva in the central portion of the Principal Omkareswar Linga; he also had a special visualization of Bhagavan Vishnu in His full resplendent and ornamented form with four hands with Shankha, Chakra, Gada and Lotus at the top portion of Omkareswara Linga and prayed to Him; the King also invoked various Holy Rivers especially Ganga to join the Mahanadi Narmada at the bottom of the Linga; and to Narmada to manifest Seven Branches from the north to south to facilitate Daanas, Homams, Vratas, Tarpan and Pinda Pradaans to Pitras and other rituals. The King's prayers were all granted adding to the magnificence of the entire Region in which the Sacred River Narmada flowed].

Sarga Forty Nine - As informed by muni kumaras, Maharshi with his 'diya drishti' reached the banks of Ganga and brought the forlorn Devi Sita brought to his ashram respectfully entrusting ashrama streets to ensure her comfort

[Vishleshana on Bhriгу Maharshi: in general and from Devi Bhagavata Purana:

Maharshi Bhriгу was one of Brahma the Manasputras like Narada, Vasishtha, Atri, Gautama and so on. He was married to Khyati (the daughter of Daksha), Puloma (daughter of Kardama) and Usana. Two sons, Dhata and Vidhata and a daughter Shri were born to Khyati. Maharshi Bhrigu is also called Prajapati (creator) as he was created by Brahma to help him in the process of creation of the universe. Chyavana was his son from Puloma, Lakshmi was his daughter who was the wife of Vishnu also named as Bhargavi. Sukracharya, the preceptor of Daityas is a son of Bhrigu born to Usana. When the battle ensued between the Devatas and the Daityas, the Devatas led by Indra had the upper hand. Daityas went to their Guru, Sukracharya and sought his help, but as he left for severe Tapasya to please Maha Shiva to accomplish 'Mrita Sanjivini mantra siddhi', they sought refuge in Usana, the mother of Sukracharya, assured them protection and by using her powers froze the devatas. Devatas prayed to Vishnu to protect them and get them out of the predicament. Vishnu understood that the curse on devatas could not be annulled unless Usana was killed. But Usana being a woman without violating the precepts of dharma, disguised Himself as a ferocious beast and tried to scare Usana who in turn desired to turn Vishnu and Indra to ashes. In self defence, without having to infringe the principle and under the garb of self defence, even before her attempt to convert both to ashes and well before the words of the 'shaap' were spelt out, Vishnu killed Bhrigu's wife with a sharp arrow and separated her head from her body. Once Usana was killed, her powers also left and Devatas became free but Bhrigu cursed Vishnu to take birth on earth and go through the cycles of birth and death and thus suffer like all humans. He brought his wife back to life with his powers. Vishnu accepted the curse of the Maharshi gracefully.

Devi Bhagavata Purana further explains further as follows: There were on-going battles between Devas and Demons, but the most potent war fought was that of Bali with Devas in which Danavas had an upper hand. But Lord Vishnu took the incarnation of Vamana and tricked Bali by asking for just three feet of land and occupied the entire Universe and suppressed Bali's head to the Sub-terrestrial world as the third foot! Similarly Prahlada's father Hiranyakasipu was killed taking the form of half-lion and half-man to escape the effect of Brahma's boon. Thus each time Danavas got boons from Brahma, Lord Vishnu tried to search for the escape clauses of the boons secured after rigorous Tapasya and appeared as the saviour of Devas always. Thus brooding, Sukra Acharya, the son of Sage Bhrigu and Urjasvati, consoled Danavas and assured that some other strategy would have to be followed to achieve victory over Devas. Thus Danava Guru asked for patience and restraint and meanwhile practised a life of austerity and abstinence till he found a solution to the problem from Tapasya. The Acharya then meditated Lord Siva for several years together and finally pleased him for a boon. He explained that the various Tapasyas performed by Danava Kings in the past to Brahma and the boons obtained from him proved futile since they had only temporary impact and each time Lord Vishnu was discovering loopholes in the boons received. That was the reason why Lord Siva was approached for a solution as a boon, the kind of which should not have been granted to his opponent Brihaspati, the Deva Guru. Lord Siva in turn gave a very arduous method to follow namely to perform penance for thousand years lying upside down inhaling smoke from burnt husk. Meanwhile Deva Guru disguised himself as Sukracharya and gradually misguided Danavas and taught them a licentious and wicked life quite contrary to what Sukracharya advised before his departure for Tapasya. The Danavas were provoked by the Fake Danava Guru went on war against Devas who killed several Demons as the latter were disunited, indisciplined and weak. Sukracharya's mother, Kavya, found that Devas were drawing too near to Danavas and protected them by putting Devas to deep sleep by requesting the Goddess of 'Nidra' (Slumber). Indra escaped the sleep as Lord Vishnu absorbed him into His body; He also used the Sudarsana Chakra (Wheel) and cut off Kavya's head even ignoring that she was a woman that too the wife of Sage Bhrigu. The Sage was furious on learning that Vishnu's Chakra cut Kavya's head and gave him a curse that Vishnu would be born again and again as a human being since He never cared for the killing of a woman and hence be punished by learning the misery of staying imprisoned for nine months each time before the births. Also by his mystic powers, the Sage revived his wife to come alive! Indra was afraid that Bhrigu cursed Narayana and soon original Visvamitra would also return after securing the much desired Mantra from Lord Siva. So Indra made a plan and asked his daughter Jayanti to disguise herself as a maid and reach Visvamitra's hermitage and please his mother Kavya to start with and please the Sage in his duties subsequently which she did exceedingly well. Meanwhile Visvamitra secured a great boon from Lord Siva that he would be invincible to any force in the Universe. Lord Siva blessed the Sage with the Mantra. Also he was pleased with the services of Jayanti and desired to give boons to her. She revealed her identity as Indra's daughter and requested the Sage to marry her. Visvamitra agreed that she could be with him for ten years, that he would not attend to any outside task during the period and that she would not be visible to others. Indra's plan thus succeeded well. The fake Sukracharya (Brihaspati) too had a successful time. But after ten year's time Visvamitra left Jayanti and returned to Asuras and sought to expose the fake Sukracharya, but the fake Sage advised that he was real Sukracharya and the one who arrived just then was really fake! The real Sukracharya was not able to convince the foolish Danavas and having cursed them for not recognising him left in anger. Having fulfilled his mission, the fake Sukracharya or Brihaspati returned to Indra Loka. Danavas felt cheated and desired to convey their sincere apologies and thus approached Sukracharya with King Pahlada in the lead. The Sage was furious as he felt insulted, while actually he took the trouble of severe Tapasya only for the welfare of the entire Danava community whereas they let him down badly by believing in Brihaspati in disguise. King Pahlada pleaded with the Sage very earnestly and all the Danavas prostrated before the Guru to excuse them for their lack of gratitude and commonsense. Sukracharya understood from his intuition that the regrets expressed by Pahlada and Danavas were genuine. He then narrated that Lord Brahma assured him of the King of Danava's coming to power soon and for the time being Danavas would have to lie low and await excellent times till Pahlada's grandson would be born as Bali and reign the Three Worlds. What the Danava Guru told Pahlada was so encouraging that he did not wait for more time and attacked the Devas; Devas lost the war. Indra was surprised at the defeat of Devas. He prayed to Devi Bhagavati at the instance of Deva Guru, Brihaspati. He extolled the unparalleled Glory of Devi as per 'Shakti Darsana' and described Her as the 'Tatvas' rooted to the material manifestation of Pancha Bhootas or Five Elements; the Tatvas include Maha Bindu, Nada Sakti and Misrama Bindu. She dwelt in five sheaths (Kosas) viz. Annamaya, Prana Maya Kosa, Manonmaya, Vignana Maya and Ananda Maya. She was the Vedas, Sastras, Upanishads, Mantras, Tantras and multi-rooted final destination and so on. Devi Bhagavati was pleased and made Her extraordinary appearance in full form, packed with armoury and ornaments. Out of sheer panic, Danavas led by King Pahlada fled away to Patala forthwith. Thus ended the unwarranted war declared by Danavas against Devatas who had other important duties to perform; thus the Devi's appearance was a warning to both Devas and Danavas that they should not waste mutual energies in frequent bickerings. Thus there was a Truce ending the War.]

Sarga Fifty Five - Asked about Ikshvaaku Kings ever busy with Yagjnas, Rama cited King Nimi versus Brahmarshi Vasishtha and their mutual curses.

[Vishleshana a) on King Nimi and Brahmarshi Vasishtha vide Devi Bhagavata Purana and b) Nine Yogindras explain to Videha Nimi's spiritual enquiries

a) King Nimiof Ikshvasu dynasty was highly righteous and sought to perform a Maha Yagnya in the name of Devi Bhagavati; Sage Vasishtha who was the dynasty's Raja Guru agreed to be the Head Priest. At the arrived time when all the preparations were through, the Sage informed that Indra had called him too for a Sacrifice and sent word that King Nimi's Yagna be rescheduled. King Nimi went ahead with his function as per schedule. Vasishtha returned and cursed Nimi that his mortal body would fall off. The King gave a return curse likewise. But since Nimi's Yagna was not complete, he performed it as 'Videha' or without body as Lord Yama was pleased with the Sacrifice and gave him the option of another nice birth or enter the first Jiva body of Brihaspati but the King chose the Videha option. Vasishtha had to pray to his father Brahma who arranged that he be reborn as MitraVaruna. In the past, Apsara Urvasi was infatuated by Mitra-Varuna and two issues were born, one was Agastya who became an ascetic and the other was Ikshvaku who became a King. Mitra Varuna's Jiva -body was still intact even before Brahma created original Vasishtha; the Jiva of the present Vasishtha now dropped as a return curse of King Nimi entered the duplicate body of Mitra Varuna without any loss of original Vasishtha's wisdom and Radiance!

b) Once Maharaja Nimi, son of Ikshvaku desired to perform a Sacrifice and requested Vasishtha to be the Head Priest, but Vasishtha was busy performing another Sacrifice for Indra and therefore asked Nimi to wait till he returned. But Nimi performed the Sacrifice without waiting for Vasishtha, who cursed Nimi, but Nimi too gave a curse to the Sage. As a result of the curses, both of them were dead, but as Mitra and Varuna desired Urvashi in lust and from their thoughts of lust revived Vasishtha. As regards, Nimi Maharaja, his body was preserved till the completion of the Sacrifice which was already in progress and once the Yagna was over, the Brahmanas requested Demi Gods to revive his body already preserved. Nimi did not opt for the revival of the physical body but his spiritual body continued to exist. It was that spiritual body of Nimi, known as King Videha (without physical Body) performed Soma-Yagnya and was blessed with the presence of Nine Yogindras viz. Kavi, Havir, Anthariksha, Prabuddha, Pippalayna, Havirhotra, Drumila, Chamasa and Karabhanjana.(Their lineage was: Swayambhu Manu or Priyamvrata-Agnidhara-Nabhi-Rishabhadeva considered as the Plenary expansion of Lord Narayana Himself- one hundred sons, headed by Bharata of BharataVarsha fame, including the Nine Yogindras). The Nine Yogindras, who were highly learned in Spiritual Science preaching the path of attaining Absolute Truth travelling naked all over the Universe, explained the Principles of Seeking the Truth to King Nimi alias Videha and those who attended the Sacrifice. The pointed queries made to the Nine Yogindras by King Nimi (Videha) were: 1)What is the highest good? 2) What are the Principles of Dharma and the general inclinations conditioning human beings like ‘Svabhava’ (one’s own nature or behavior), Acharya’ (Tradition), Speech pattern and other lakshanas’ (Traits) of Elevated human beings? 3) What is the external energy of Super Power? 4) How does one disassociate from Maya or Illusion? 5) How is a Brahmana (Devotee) identified? 6) What is ‘Karma’ (means of devotion) and its two major forms viz. materialistic or Spiritual (Kamuka or seeking oriented and Nishkama or Oriented to Almighty only) 7) What are the various Incarnations /Extensions of God? 8) What is the destination of a non-devotee? 9) What are the ideal forms of worship suited to the four ages (Yugas)? Yogindras explained that relentless pursuit of material desires, arising out of ignorance and leading to fear as conditioned by one’s own nature and nurture, tends to sideline or marginalise the Super Energy and Its Extension Forms or Incarnations aimed at the Four Yugas and even if a human being were to perform acts of devotional services these would invariably aim at desire-fulfilling ends and not Spiritually oriented. This vicious circle of cause and effect ought to be wrecked to yield to the path of Bhagavatha Dharma or the Discipline of Faith. Increase in the duration of devotional time, gradual detachment, and enhancement of Awareness of the Super Energy are the Golden Means required.]

Sarga Fifty Six and Fifty Seven - Brahma’s varapraapti to King Nimi and Vasishtha for Mitra-Varuna ‘s combined virility due to meeting Urvashi in a Kumbha- King Pururana of Ikshvakus-Vashishtha’ new body in the eyes of Videha Nimi.

[Vishleshanas: on creation of Agasthya and Vasishtha as brothers by MitraVaruna from Urvashi from Matsya Purana

Sage Narada enquired of Bhagavan Shankara about the origin of Agastya Muni and Vasishtha. Maheswara explained that once Indra despatched Vayu and Agni to destroy Danavas and having successfully killed thousands of the enemies, ignored some Daityas like Taraka, Kamalaaksha, Paravasu, Kaladamshttra and Virochana as they fled away and concealed in deep Seas. The Danavas who hid themselves kept on tormenting human beings as also Devatas eventually. Indra ordered that Vayu and Agni should dry up the Sea water, especially to kill dangerous Diatyas like Jambhasura, but the both the Devas argued that in the process of drying up the Seas even in a minor manner there would be serious havoc caused to crores of Jeevas. Indra was annoyed at their argument and cursed them to fall down on Earth from Swarga and both the Devas entered into a ‘Jala Kumbha’ or Water Pitcher as a single body. Meanwhile, Sages Nara and Narayana were in Tapasya on Gandhamadana Mountain, and Indra was concerned that they might not be a threat to his chair; he despatched a few Apsaras to the Mountain along with Kamadeva but their attempts to tempt the Maharshis failed. As the Apsaras continued to be stationed there, Narayana Rishi created a damsel of exquisite attraction from his thighs and named her Urvashi; he desired that Apsaras should realize that their beauty was nothing compared to whom they could materialise as Urvashi and they could not possibly tempt Nara Narayan Maharshis, after all! Mitra (Sun God) and Varuna (Rain God) happened to see the damsel and could not resist the fall of their combined semen of Mitravaruna which was deposited in the same Jala Kumbha (pitcher) that fell down from the Swarga and thus Agastya was born as Kumbha Sambhava. Vasishtha too was reborn from the pitcher earlier since he felt offended when King Nimi did not properly attend to him as he visited the King and hence gave a curse to Nimi to live as 'Videha' or without body, but the King too gave a return curse; both Nimi and Vasishtha approached Lord Brahma who solved the problem by retaining Nimi's life in his Eyes and Vasishtha to be reborn to Mitravaruna since the latter's semen fell in the pitcher on seeing Apsara Urvashi. Subsequently Agastya married Lopamudra, absorbed the entire Ocean in his Kamandulu to isolate the Danavas to enable Indra to kill the notorious Danavas and released it later as his urine and was thus stated to be salty!; he also razed down the ego of Vindhya Mountain by making him bend for ever thus banning the Mountain to stoop for ever till the Sage's return which never happened as he continued to stay down the Vindhya. There was also the legend attributed to Agastya about the Daitya brothers Ilvala and Vatapi, who knew the Mrita Sanjeevani Mantra; they would assume the forms of Brahmanas and seek the passers by to tempt them to a feast of goat-meat, and after consuming the meal ask Vatapi to come out and Vatapi would come out piercing through the tummy of the stranger and the brothers would enjoy his meat. But Agastya Muni was too clever to bless the good food saying 'Vatapi! Jeerno bhava' and Vatapi was fully digested even before Ilvala was able to recite the Mrita Sanjeevani Mantra! (Till date, devotees recite Lalita Sahasranama and Aditya Hridaya scripted by Agastya Muni. Vasishtha, the Brahmarshi was the arch-enemy of Rajarshi Viśwamitra ever since the latter claimed Nandini the Celestial Cow and fought a battle in which Viśwamitra was defeated. The enmity continued till once both the Rishis cursed each other to become birds and finally Brahma had to intervene and convert them back as human beings) Agastya Muni satisfied Maheswara with ruthless penance for several years and secured boons of longevity for twenty five crores of years as long as thousand lives of Brahmas. The boon also covered that whosoever worshipped him for seven days for seven years with 'Arghya' or offering water addressing the Muni along with charities of a white cow and calf, silver vessel, and white clothes as follows would be blessed with good health, good Form, and contentment: Kaashapushpa prateekaasha Agni Maruta Sambhava, Mitraavarunayoha putra kumbhayoney Namostutey/ The first Arghya would provide Good Form, the second one Bhuvārloka and the third Swarloka.]

Bhavishya Purana explains "After the Pralay in Treta Yuga, King Sudarshan returned from Himalaya and revived Ayodhya Puri and thanks to the and the Holy Sages. King Sudarshan ruled for thousands of years and in course of Time, his son King Dilip initiated a new generation and King Raghu heralded the Surya Vamsha or the Raghu Vamsha. King Raghu's grandson Dasharatha had the unique privilege of securing Lord Shri Rama, the 'Avatar' of Bhagavan Vishnu. Surya Vamsha dominated from Shri Ram's son Kusha downward for hundreds of generations thereafter and the Kings were by and large virtuous, engaged in Yagnas and Agni Karyas, charities and the preservation of Dharma. Padma Purana is quoted: Vaiwasvata Manu had ten sons, viz. Ila, Ikshvaaku, Kushanaabha, Arishta, Dhrushta, arishyant, Karusha, Mahabali Sharyati, Prushaghna, Naabhaga and Ambarisha. By dint of relentless Tapasya, Vaivasvata secured the boon from Brahma of becoming the Supreme Administrator of Prithvi of high virtue and Fortune and thus he became the First Manu Ever! Ila also became ambitious and wandered several places and by mistake entered the 'Sharavana' Garden, little knowing that who ever entered the Sharavana would instantly turn into a woman as per the instructions of Parameswara where Shiva Deva was alone with Devi Parvati.

Even outside the Sharavana, Ila as a woman was attracted to Budha, the son of Chandra (Moon). Ila's brother Ikshvaku was worried about the disappearance of Ila and having realised the fact that any male entering the Sharavana would be converted as a female and that Ila also would have been converted like wise. Ikshvaku prayed to Shiva and as directed Ikshvaku announced Ashvamedha Yagna so that Ila as a female could be identified since the brave Ila would be definitely attracted to the Ashvamedha Yagna and the challenge of holding the horse. Indeed the Plan of Ikshvaku worked well and Ila was identified as the 'wife' of Budha, the son of Chandra. The female Ila became a Kimpurush for six months and as a woman for six months as per the boon of Shiva. As a Kimpurush, Ila also known as Sudyumna gave birth to three sons Utkal, Gaya and Haritashwa and they became the Kings of Utkal (Orissa), Gaya, and Haritashwa or Kuru. Ikshvaku became the King of Madhyadesha who begot hundred sons half of whom ruled the northern side of Meru and the others the Southern side. Kakustha was the eldest son of Ikshvaku and in that lineage was born Yuvanashwa and his great grandson was the famed Kunalashva who killed the notorious demon Dundhumara. It was in this lineage that the illustrious Mandhata who was the Chakravarti of the Universe. In his lineage were the famous Purukutsa, Muchukunda, Harischandra, Dilip, Bhagiratha who brought the Sacred Ganga to Earth, Nabhaga, Ambarisha, Raghu, Dasaratha and the Incarnation of Lord Vishnu, the Epic Hero Shri Rama who killed Ravana and his able brothers Bharata, Lakshmana and Shatrughna; the Surya Vamsha of the clan of Ikshvaku was further extended by Kusha and Lava. Brahma Purana states: Vaivaswa had nine sons viz. Ikshvaku, Naabhaga, Dhruvata, Sharyati, Narishyanta, Praamshu, Arishta, Karusha and Prushaghna. Once Vaivaswa performed one Yagna with the objective of begetting a daughter and Maharshi Mirtaavaruna was the Chief Priest; as the Maharshi offered a powerful oblation in the Agni Kunda, there emerged a maiden whom the Manu addressed as Ila and she took the permission of Mirtaavaruna and went near the Manu; the Manu blessed her, named her as Sudyumna and instructed her to expand Manu vamsha. She met Budha Deva in marriage and gave birth to Puru; she gave birth further to three sons viz. Utkal (whose Kingdom was the present Orissa), Gaya (the Capital of Gaya desha) and Vinataashva. Puru's Kingdom was distributed into parts to accommodate the nine sons too. Ikshvaku became the Ruler of Madhyadesha. Ila and Sudyumna was one and the same but alternatively as a woman and as a man for each six months. Naashyanta's son was Shaka; Nabhaga begot Ambarisha; Dhruvata and Karusha begot sons of the same name; Praamshu was issueless; Sharyati got twin children-a boy named Anarta and a girl Sukanya who was wedded to Chyavana Maharshi. Anarta begot Raiva, and the latter's son was Raivata, also known as Kakudmi who became the King of Kushasthala. Once Raivata accompanied by his daughter Revati visited Brahma loka and the latter was at that time engrossed in 'Gandharva Gaana'/ the songs of Gandharva; after the singing session, Brahma when told of the purpose of their visit viz. to bless his daughter of a suitable match for her, Brahma smiled and stated that during his visit to Brahma loka, Yugas rolled by but blessed Revati to return to their place and that she would definitely wed a Mahatma. On return, the father and daughter discovered a complete change of their Place in Dwapara Yuga and on making local enquiries found Balarama, the elder brother of Krishna as a suitable life-partner for Devi Revati; thus the age-difference of Balarama and Devi Revati was a full Yuga!

Sargas Fifty Eight and Fifty Nine - King Yayati's yajna upset as Purohita Vasishta was late-mutual 'shaapaas' as Yayati was bodyless and Vasishta was 'vayuvileena'- Brahma arranges that joint sperm of Mitra Varunas to revive Vasishta.

[Vishkeshana on Yayaati from a)Maha Bhagavata Purana and b) Devi Bhagavata Purana]

a) Yayati, the son of Nahusha became the King as Nahusha was transformed into a python due to his Maharshi's shaapaas for his arrogance. Yayati's elder brother, Yati, was initially given the kingship but took to sanyaasashrama and Yayati as a king considerable public appreciation. Eventually one day, Sharmishtha, daughter of the Danava Vishwaparva, and Devayani, daughter of Daitya Guru Shukracharya were bathing in a sarovara of the kingdom. After bathing, Sharmishtha confuses Devayani's vastras by mistake exchanged. Devayani returned and shouted while jibing at their parentships as Sharmishtha as the daughter of Shukracharya and Vishparva as their King. With the help of her servants, Sharmishtha threw the semi naked Devayani into a well. Later Yayati, son of Nahusha, helped Devayani to climb out of it. Eventually Yayati was fascinated to both Sharmishtha and Devayani and their respective fathers agreed. In due course, Devayani gave birth to two sons Yadu and Turvasu while Sharmishtha begot three sons Druhyu, Anu and Puru. In due course mutual jealousies and quarrels got intensified. Eventually Devayani felt that that her husband more and more of time with Sharmishtha and complains to her father. The enraged Shukracharya cursed Yayati with premature old age in punishment for inflicting such pain upon his daughter. Eventually Yayati asked to let one of the sons to agree to swap his old age while Yadu heckled at the request while Puru assured of his filial duty and agreed heartily. Yayati enjoyed the youth and attained swarga but cursed adu and made Pura the next King.

b) Sukracharya cursed King Yayati. The Sage's daughter Devayani married the King but objected to live with his another wife Sarmishtha but still the King did not comply. The father of Devayani Sukracharya cursed that Yayati would become old and impotent. As the King entreated for forgiveness, the Sage's curse was diluted that if any of his sons could take the position of Yayati's old form instead, then he could regain his youth. The youngest son of Sarmishtha, Puru who bore his father's curse and after Yayati, he became a youthful King, the ancestor of Panadavas and Kauravas. Veda Vyasa affirmed that being an upright King, Yayati was also in a position to reverse the curse of the Danava Guru but restrained from doing so and quietly conceded to assume the old age as after all he did not commit a great sin in asking his another wife Sarmishtha to bed; equally wonderful was the preparedness of Puru to take on the curse of the Sage and sacrificed his own youth for thousand years!]

a) Manu Vivaswanta gave birth to ten sons including Ikshvaku, Saryati, Nabhaga and Prushaghna. Saryati gave birth to Sukanya. The latter when she came of age visited a forest once along with her companions and playfully pried into a bush while amused about what she thought were glowing worms. But they were actually the eyes of a Muni named Chyavana performing Tapas with eyes wide open and in the process got blinded. The girl got confused when blood oozed out from the bush and ran away. The blinded Muni realised that a young princess did the indiscretion and gave a Shaap that the entire military force of the King should suffer with stoppage of their excretions. Meanwhile Sukanya conveyed to the King of her playful rashness and of the Muni's shaap. King Saryati along with Sukanya approached the Muni and prostrated to him seeking unreserved pardon; the King offered the young Sukanya to wed the old Muni so that she could serve the Muni in his blindness. In course of time, Sukanya got used to family life serving the blind Muni in his daily puja and other chores. She excelled herself in her 'Pativratya' or undisputed devotion to her husband. One day, the two Ashvini Kumars who were the Physicians of Devas passed by the Ashram of Chyavana Muni and were highly impressed with the selfless and ideal service being performed by Sukanya as an example of Pativratiya. They cured the Muni's blindness and the grateful Chyavana offered a boon to the Ashvini Kumars. The latter desired that they would like to have access to ‘Amrit’ which was provided to Devas but was denied to them. Chyavana Muni made a request to Indra but he refused. The Muni took up this as an insult to him and performed an elaborate Yagna in favour of Brahma Deva and the latter who was pleased by the Muni’s Yagna instructed Ashvini Kumars to accord the same status to Devas and thus have access to the drink of Amrita ever since.

b) Sage Chyavan of Bhargava Vamsha undertook an extensive ‘Tirtha Yatra’ (religious tour) visiting Sacred Places of Worship nearby the Holy Rivers Narmada, Sarasvati and Godavari. He reached Omkareshwar Tirtha and having taken bath and worship, rested under a tree on the banks of the Tirtha; he overheard the conversation of a Parrot named Kunjal with its sons viz. Ujjwal, Samujjwal, Vijjwal and Kapinjal. The Sage learnt from the conversation of Kunjal and sons that they were ardent devotees and that Kunjal was a highly enlightened bird. By the evening there was a family union of the parrots for food and rest in their nest over the tree, under which the Sage sat. As Kunjal desired to recite Stories to them, the elder son Ujjwal asked the father to explain about Gyan (Enlightenment), followed by Dhyaan (meditation), Vratas (Conducted Worships), Punya (The fruits of Good Works) and hundred names of Bhagavan. About Gyan, Kunjal explained that there was a State of Bliss called Kaivalya or Moksha which was a Unique Form of Extreme Happiness devoid of ‘Duhkha’ or Sorrow, unreachable by normal vision or feeling. The Bird said: Yatha deepo nivaasastho nischalo Vaayuvarjitah, Prajjvalan-naashayet sarvamanthakaaram mahaamatye/ taddosha viheenatma bhavatyeva niraashraah/ (Such Kaivalya State of Gyaanatma which is spotless, steady and holdless is like a lustrous mass of Lamp which wipes out darkness around). That luminosity is the stable origin of Universal Existence called ‘Atma’ or the Super Soul which has no friend or enemy, no pleasure nor grief and no attachment nor greed. The Soul is devoid of senses, feelings, impulses and reactions. The awareness of that Singular Super Soul is Gyana. Now Dhyana is the meditation of that Super Soul known by countless names and epithets and is in either ‘Niraakara’ Form or ‘Akaara’ Form. ‘Nirakara Dhyana’ is possible only to Yogis who could visualise the Abstract Form through the Vision of Gyana. The ‘Saakara Rupa’ assumes Human Form with recognisable limbs; for instance Bhagavan Vishnu is easily identified with four arms with Shankhu, Chakra, Gada and Saranga with golden head gear and silk dress etc. and facilitates Dhyana. Vratas are formatted worships as per the Deity targetted, the specific day as scheduled according to Maasa- Paksha- Tithi- Vaara- Nakshatra and as configured. For instance Vratas like Jaya, Vijaya, Papanashini, Jayanti, and Manoraksha Vratas are executed on Ekadashi / Dwadashi days; there are also regular Vratas like Krishnashtami which are of repetitive nature. There are innumerable Vratas observed all over Bharat as per specified formats and each one of these has far reaching impact in diminishing the burden of sins and improving the ‘Punya’ Accounts].

When Maha Vishnu was in Yoga Nidra in a comfortable posture of lying on the bed of Ananta Naga, two Demon brothers named Madhu and Kaitabha were born from the wax of Maha Vishnu’s ears. Their birth was a mystery and unknown as felt by the brothers themselves whose physical forms grew fast and strong day by day, even as they were playing in the ocean surroundings, killing various kinds of aquatic species for food or play. Coming of age in course of time, the Demon brothers with huge bodies and proportionate common sense too, realised that there must have been a Massive Force which alone could have given birth to them. From the air, they heard a sound ‘Vagbija’ the Seed Mantra (Seed ‘Bija’ and ‘Vak’ the Speech of Goddess Sarasvati). To start with fun, but later on with maturity, they kept on practising the sound for years together, little realising the impact of the Mantra’s repetition. In fact, they became so obsessed with the Mantra that they neither had food nor sleep, but with full concentration and utmost sincerity. ‘The Parasakti’s Voice emerged from the Skies that the Danava brothers would be invincible in the entire Universe provided they were united and fight two-some. Blessed by Maha Devi, the two brothers became swollen with pride and eventually attacked Lord Brahma Himself. On realising that they were unconquerable, Brahma who was seated on the lotus- head sprouting from Maha Vishnu’s navel, tried the age-old four means. He tried to use ‘Sama (Counselling) ‘Dana’ (Gifting or bribing), ‘Bheda’ (put one against another) and finally ‘Danda’(Punish), but neither of these media appeared feasible; he ran away to Vaikuntha for protection but Maha Vishnu was in Yoga Nidra. Brahma had thus prayed to Yoga Nidra Devi to prompt Maha Vishnu to wake up. It was actually Maha Maya’s discretion which mattered as Vishnu Himself could not regain consciousness on His own. The concentrate of ‘Tamo Guna’ - Maha Maya - was earnestly prayed to by Brahma, as this was a prestige issue for him and the entire domain of Gods! Maha Maya left Vishnu free and He was fully woken up to face the challenge of the hour, viz. to either manipulate or massacre the brothers, Madhu and Kaitabha. Lord Vishnu invited the brothers to fight with Himself. The fight continued for five thousand years but without a tangible result. As the Demons were clashing one after another and Lord Vishnu was in duel singly, the latter asked the brothers to give a break as it was against Justice that they took alternate positions while He was alone. During the break, Vishnu prayed to Maha Sakti and complained that the fight was unfair and that they were also given by Her the boon of voluntary death or ‘Svacchanda Maranam’. Maha Sakti realised the lacuna in the duel and advised Vishnu to give boons to the brothers so that a way out would automatically open up. Meanwhile, Maha Sakti agreed to be present at the fight in physical form and disturb the concentration of the Demon brothers by casting Her fake amorous looks. This encouraged Vishnu to convey the Demons that their duel with Him was of great quality and thus He was ready to give boons to them. They got into the trap as they boasted that they were prepared to give boons to Him instead of the other way around. Vishnu grabbed the opportunity and said that He be given the boon of their death by killing each other! The brothers gave an excuse that the boon could be given only provided there was no water or wetness in the Ocean. Vishnu expanded his thighs manifold so that there could be adequate space for the killings. The Demons expanded their bodies too and thus the thighs of Vishnu and the body sizes of the brothers kept on increasing horizontally and vertically proportionately. Finally, the illusion created by Vishnu proved stronger and the brothers had to yield to their own killings. Thus Maha Sakti who assumed human physique and paved the way to the killings of the Danava brothers without breaking the Rules of ‘Dharma Yuddha’, partly by trickery and partly by Maya or Illusion.]

Sargas Seventy Three and Four - Vriddha brahmana brings his son’s dead body to Rama Sabha accusing the King of ‘akaala marana’- Narada explains that an ineligible tapasvi as per Scriptures was responsible against varnaashramadharma!

[Vishleshana on a) Yuga Dharmas and b) Chaturvarna Vyavastha as per Manu Smriti

a) During Krita Yuga Dharma and Truth certainly run on four feet as in the case of a ‘Go Maata’, since those exceptional practitioners of Adharma neither attain prosperity nor fulfillment of Life. But the predominance of Dharma gradually gets distorted over the subsequent Yugas of Treta-Dwapara-Kali Yugas and untruthfulness or falsity, and dominance of ‘Arishad Vargas’ of Kaama, Krodha, Lobha, Moha, Mada, Matsaras or excessive desires, anger/ego, avarice, anger, infatuation, and envy, thus affecting the proportions of two thirds, half, and quarter in the respective yugas. During the Satya Yuga, there was fulfillment all around due to excellent health, longevity, affluence, success; invariably the Life Span was of 400 human years, but in the subsequent Yugas the span had been 300, 200, and 100 years maximum; in fact the phase wise longevity dwindled from 100, 75, 50 and hardly 25 in Kali yuga’s first-second, third and fourth ‘Paadas’ as described in Puranas. As per the evolution of Yugas, human beings tend to dissipate the intensity of Dharma from the Satya-Treta-Dwapara-Kali Yugas. During Krita Yuga, 'Tapas' was the principal way of Life, in Treta Yuga significance is accorded to 'Jnaana' or Acquisition of Knowledge, in Dwapara Yuga, significance is attached to Yagjnas and Sacrifices or Austerities, but in Kali Yuga it is the aspect of 'Daana' or sincere charity that is emphasised; this is obviously due to the incapability of Human Beings acquiring true knowledge, nor observe 'karma kanda' but atleast perform charitable deeds.

b)Maha Tejasvi Prajapati of the Universe created Chatur Varnas of Brahmana-Kshatriya-Vaishyetaaras and defined their duties. As regards the functions and obligations of Brahmanas, these are enumerated as six viz. Acquisition of Knowledge, Teaching and Training, Performing Yagjnas and Teaching other Brahmanas to perform, and giving and accepting Daanaas or Charities. Kshatriyas are duty bound to provide Security to the Society and the Public, providing charity, organising yajna karyas, and conducting just and impartial administration. Vaishyas are required to promote Industry, and Trading, bestowing charities, providing loans and agriculture and allied business activities. Persons of the fourth caste of the Society were assigned the duty of service to the Society. Since it is stated that human beings who were born above the Creator's navel were superior to other species, Swayambhu Prajapati decided to create Brahmanas from His face, as they are expected to observe and propagate Dharma by their intense knowledge and of the nuances of Virtue and Justice; they are also duty bound to despatch 'havya-kavyas' to Devas and Pitru Devas respectively; Devatas like Vaayu and Pitru Devatas are the recipients by way of Yajna Karyas performed essentially by 'Mantras' aloud by their mouths or from within by their tongues. Brahmanas are also the custodians of Dharma and Divine Knowledge as also of life long agents of Dharma. Indeed, as human race is the best of all Beings of 'Sthaavara Jangamas', the outstanding persons of Brahmanas are the repositories of intellect and it is only through them alone that 'Dharma Prachaara' is possible due to their austerities. The Chaturvidha 'Jeevanaakaankshas' or the four fold objectives of Life's total fulfillment viz. 'Dharma- Artha- Kaama- Mokshas' are possible only the category of 'Dwijas' or the twice-born indeed; once having been given birth as Brahmanas, the second and equally significant second birth is that by of Devi Gayatri and of one's own father as the Guru. On this count the twice born one's viz. Brahmana-Kshatriya-Vaishyas too are as important becoming eligible after the 'Upanayana Samskaara' and of Gayatri Upadesha. Thus the Dwijas are all well qualified to observe the full range of 'Brahmana Kartavyas' including Brahma Yajna.

Shatrughna killed Lavanaura and ruled Madhurapuri; Bharat administered both the banks of River Sindhu and controlled Gandharvas; Lakshman conquered Madra desha, installed his sons as the Kings and returned to Rama for providing service to him. Shri Rama did Ashvamedha Yanga, after installing a Golden Pratima of Sita; in fact he performed several Yagnas in the same manner. Sage Valmiki exhorted Rama about Sita's spotlessness and piousness time and again and Shri Rama finally opined that indeed he was fully aware of her chastity and purity but since the allegation came from the Praja (Public), Sita should prove her innocence before the people. Sita then declared in a huge Sabha that if she performed puja to any body else excepting Shri Ram in her mind, thought, tongue or action then my mother Bhu Devi might take her into her mother's fold. Immediately, there was an Earth-quake and Sita entered into a huge cleavage. (at Sitamarhi , Bihar) Bhu Devi herself lifted Sita into her belly and the great Garuda, the Carrier of Lord Vishnu, lifted her from Rasatala to Vishnu loka as seated on a Golden Throne. After Sita's disappearance, Shri Rama ruled for eleven thousand years. One day, an old Tapasvi came to see Shri Ram and told him that none should enter his Chamber while he was giving an important message from Lord Brahma in secrecy. Shri Rama called Lakshmana and instructed that none should be allowed to enter as long as he was conversing with the Tapasvi and otherwise that person should be punishable with death. Lakshman himself stood at the door and ensured that none would disturb. The Tapasvi conveyed that since the death of Ravana, Kumbhakarna and other demons Rama was to live for eleven thousand years and that it was time for Rama to leave Earth and return to Vaikuntha. While this secret conversation was going on, Durvasa Maharshi arrived and wished to meet Shri Rama, but Lakshmana declined entry stating that a representative of Brahma was in an important conversation and that he could not see Shri Rama then. Durvasa grew angry and threatened Lakshmana with a severe curse if he did not permit entry. As there was no other alternative between Rama's instruction and Durvasa's threat of curse, Lakshman entered River Sarayu, taking his original Swarupa of Ananta Naga with thousand hoods. After the meeting with Kaala Deva in the form of the old Tapasvi, Rama realised that Lakshman also having gone, it was time for him also to terminate his 'Avatar'; he established Kusha in Kushavati Kingdom and Lava in Dwaravati as their Kings. Taking a hint from Shri Rama, Vibishana, Sugriva, Jambavan, Hanuman, Neela, Nala, Sushena and Nishada Raja Guha arrived. Shatrughna performed the coronation of his sons at Ayodhya. The rest of them said that they would not like to stay back on Earth in the absence of Rama even for a moment. But Rama asked Vibishana to continue in power at Lanka for long time and instructed Hanuman to continue on Earth forever to sustain the message of Shi Rama. The rest of them accompanied Shri Rama into the Sacred Sarayu River. Bharat, Shatrughna, and all the citizens of Ayodhya along with their wives, Mantris, Servants, Vedikas, Brahmanas, the nearby animals, birds, and all other Beings who accompanied Shri Rama never looked back. As Shri Rama went deep into the River, Lord Brahma, Devas, Rishis and all Celestial Beings extolled Raghunatha even as He took the Huge Form of Maha Vishnu with his four hands along with Bharata as Shankha, Shatrughna as Chakra, as also Gada with Shri Devi and Bhu Devi beside Him/
